SUNDAY: Strictly for the terminally stupid, The Adventures of Mark and Brian has two wacky radio DJ's performing wacky stunts and doing otherwise wacky things. Sounds pretty wacky to me. Much better is what follows: Eerie, Indiana. 'Eerie' is what TV Guide calls "The Wonder Years meets Twin Peaks." Very strange and strangely funny, you'll either love it or hate it. James Garner is back as a Man of the People. He plays a con artist (Yes, another con artist) who fills his late wife's city-council seat. Also back from playing the Phantom of the Opera on the L.A. stage is Robert Guillame (Benson) in Pacific Station. He plays a cop who is mismatched with a cop just back from psychiatric leave. A sort of Barney Miller for the '90's. Fox has two new shows; one is very good, and the other, well, let's say it makes The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn. The good one is Roc, starring Charles Dutton as a garbage man who interacts with a funny family played by an excellent supporting cast. Unfortunately, Herman's Head has nothing in it. Herman, a young magazine researcher, goes through life with a group of emotions in his head: Genius, Wimp, Angel, and Animal, all played by equally annoying actors.

And that's just what's on the networks. Don't forget syndicates, cable, etc. There are plenty of mismatched couples, a hoard of con artists, bickering families, and nostalgic journeys in this fall television season. Even if you're one of those people who claim not to watch TV, at least you could take bets on how many will make it through Christmas.

AMHERST CINEMA
Now Playing
FREDDY'S DEAD
THE FINAL NIGHTMARE
Showtimes:
Fri. - Sun.
Two shows at 7pm & 9pm
Mon-Thurs.
One show at 7:30pm
Adults $4.00
Student w/valid I.D. $3.00

amc THEATRES
$3.50 TWILITE SHOW
MT. FARMS 4 584-9153
THE FISHER KING
DEAD AGAIN
HAMPSHIRE 6 584-7550
DECEIVED
THELMA &LOUISE
ROBIN HOOD PRINCE OF THIEVES
101 DALMATIANS

MENTOR
Intensive Individual Instruction
• ENGLISH
• MATH
• GRE & LSAT PREPARATION
(413) 253-3337

Pick up your FREE copy of the COLLEGIAN in AMHERST at Classe Cafe
Amherst Newsroom
A.J. Hastings
Taco Villa
Joe's Paradise
Buffalo Bills
Russells Liquors
Time Out
Barsle's
Delano's
Amherst Deli
The Sub
Charlie's
The Pub
Dairymart
Baybanks
Cumberland Farms
Watroba's
Mike's Westview
Grampy's

KATINA'S
OCT. 9th & EVERY WEDS.! REGGAE ONE LOVE – LIVE! OCT 9!
SELECTROCUTION The Area's THURSDAY HOT SPOT! High-Tech Flirtation 18+ SEPT 26
MAX CREEK FRIDAY NITE W/LEGENDARY ROCK HEROES!! (GET HERE EARLY!!) 18+ SEPT 27
SELECTROCUTION MEET PEOPLE WHO LIKE TO HAVE FUN! 18+ SEPT 28
PLASTIC X WONDERLAND PUTRID DECAY Ferocious Triple Play! All Ages SEPT 29
UPCOMING
FRI., 10/4 THE FOOLS
SUN., 10/6 ROCK"A"MANIA
FRI., 10/11 BACK IN BLACK
SUN., 10/13 LACHRYMATOR
ADVANCE TIX: Katina's, Plasterpus, Strawberries & Music Outlet
ROUTE 9, HADLEY • 586-4463

LONDON
ROUND TRIP FROM $350
From NEW YORK round trips starting at
LONDON $350
LENINGRAD $610
CARACAS $410
GUTEMALA C. $390
BANGKOK $939
LOS ANGELES-AUCKLAND $699
Taxes & surcharges not included. Fares subject to change.
Council Travel
79 So. Pleasent Street, Amherst, MA 01002
(413)256-1261

Magic Slim to play the Horse

By JIM POWERS
Collegian Correspondent

Singer and guitarist Magic Slim is one of those "behind the scenes legends", on the same par as Willie Dixon or Steve Cropper, of the "Memphis Sound" fame.

Slim (nee Morris Holt) has been around since the mid-fifties when he was the bass player in Magic Sam's band. A few years later he joined Mr. Pitiful and the Teardrops with Robert Perkins on lead guitar. That band soon dissolved when Robert Perkins left. After that, jobs were few and far between, so he formed his own band with two of his brothers.

Later, in 1965, he augmented his band with a few more

CONTINUED ON PAGE 8

Fredrock

A rockin' time was had by all on Sunday afternoon, outside in the Baker/Chadbourne/Greenough Quad as the band Fred's Anonymous played for the Chadbourne House Council's barbecue. Over 100 people were there listening, and many more were watching from the windows.

Fred's Anonymous' four members — singer Fred Feliciano, guitarist John Petrow, bassist Brian Monahan, and drummer Brett Duggan gave — the crowd 90 minutes of great rock-n-roll to digest along with their food. They played ripping covers from Jane's Addiction, Living Colour, Police, and old classics like the Stones' "Sympathy for the Devil".

They also played a couple originals. Their "UMass Blues" which tell the story of UMass from a student's point of view, got everyone singing "... I've got those red tape, man I gotta escape, UMass blues." Their tune "Standing Alone" was hard, hot and raw. Their rendition of The Who's "Behind Blue Eyes" got people slam-dancing and Feliciano was more than ready to join in, freshly ripped shirt and all.

Feliciano said that the band really enjoyed themselves and they hope to keep on playing in the area. "We've got a lot more originals than what we played today and now that we're practicing more, we want to play!" said Feliciano. Well, I hope they get the chance to play because they saved my Sunday — and that's a hard thing to do.

--LARRY LOCKWOOD

ACADEMY OF MUSIC NORTHAMPTON Opera House 584-8435
ONLY AREA SHOWING STARTS THIS FRIDAY
Curtain Daily at 7:00 & 9:00
Having a ball...wish you were here!
★★★★★!
Top volume screaming, high pitched attitude and an incredible cast."
"OUTRAGEOUS!
One of the best films I've seen this year!"
"AMAZING...
Beautiful, lively and intelligent!"
★★★★★!
PARIS IS burning
AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE

South Hadley's TOWER THEATRES
THE VILLAGE COMMONS • SOUTH HADLEY 533-2663
TOUCHING, FUNNY & WONDERFUL, "EATING" IS A PROVOCATIVE TRIBUTE TO WOMEN – THE IDEAL MOVIE FOR FRIENDS, OF WHATEVER SEX, TO SHARE!
EATING A Very Serious Comedy About Women & Food
weekdays at 9 p.m.
Friday Sat and Sun at 5 and 9 p.m.
WILLIAM HURT THE DOCTOR
weekdays at 3, 6:45 and 9:05
Friday at 4:20, 6:45 and 9:05
Sat. and Sun. at 2, 4:20, 6:45 and 9:05
TRULY, MADLY, DEEPLY
weekdays at 3 and 7 p.m.
Friday, Sat. and Sun. at 3 and 7 p.m.
ROCKY HORROR PICTURE SHOW
Midnight Friday
AKIRA
11:30 Friday

■ Latina

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 6

"You can't speak to certain things in English — the music is gone," she said.

McCracken said that most of the popular Latina writers, such as Nicholasa Mohr, Judith Ortiz Cofer, and Sandra Cisneros write their novels in English but include many Spanish words.

While this creates a problem for the writers when the publishers instruct them to interpret these words because the books will have difficulty entering the New York mainstream, Latina writers argue that Spanish words lose much of their meaning in the translation.

Next week's Women's Studies Brown Bag Lunch will feature a reading from Sweet Dark Places by local author Lesles Newman.

The lectures are free and open to the public, men and women, and take place every Wednesday, 12:15-1:30 in the Campus Center 804-808.

■ Magic

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 7

musicians, and revived for them the name "Teardrops". They played mostly around the Chicago area, and cut numerous sides for small record labels.

Come 1974, and Magic Slim found himself being offered a spot in Hound Dog Taylor's band, yet instead of taking the bigger fame and money, he decided to stay with the Teardrops.

Since then, the band has been touring the United States and Europe, as well as recording regular albums. Magic Slim is not only a living legend of blues and African-American music, but he is still one of the best today, after a career of over 40 years.

Magic Slim will be in performance at the Iron Horse in Northampton on Monday, Sept. 30. The show starts at 7 p.m. Call 584-0610 for information and tickets.

95.3 WRSI
THE IRON HORSE IN ASSOCIATION WITH THE UMASS FINE ARTS CENTER PRESENTS A DOUBLE BILL
CROWDED HOUSE
WOODFACE TOUR
special guest
RICHARD THOMPSON
SUN. SEPT.29
UMASS FINE ARTS CENTER 8:30PM
TICKETS 18.50,16.00&14.00.TICKETS AVAILABLE AT THE NORTHAMPTON BOX OFFICE & TICKETPHONE: 586-8686. OUTSIDE 413 AREA CODE: 1-800-THE-TICK. TICKETS ALSO AVAILABLE AT F.A.C.BOX OFFICE.

Study Europe in COPENHAGEN
– in English –
DIS Denmark's International Study Program
Affiliated with the University of Copenhagen
One of the Best Study Abroad Programs in Europe
"Overall, it's such a great experience. I talked to my mom last night, and she said 'Just tell me you're having a wonderful time,' and I said 'I am having the most incredible time ever, because I am learning so many things, I am doing so many things.' It is definitely worth it!"
Jo Anna Hershkowitz, University of Virginia, DIS student Spring 1991
Humanities & Social Sciences • International Business
Architecture & Design
Taught in English by Danish Faculty
Fall, Spring, Summer and Academic Year
Danish Family Stay
See your Study Abroad Office on Campus for more information, or call 1-800-247-3477 for a copy of the DIS Study Guide, which contains complete information on all aspects of the program

CRYSTAL SPRINGS
PIZZERIA AND LOUNGE
Home of the Buy One Pizza and Get One FREE!!!
Tuesday nights are
All You Can Eat
pizza night for just $3.95
"OPEN MIC"
NIGHT
Wednesday nights starting the week of October 1st.
Located: CRYSTAL SPRINGS PLAZA • Belchertown • 323-9636

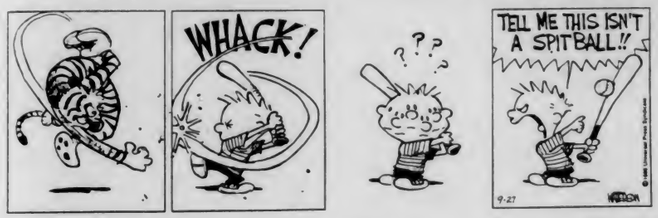
THE FAR SIDE
By GARY LARSON

"Boy, that's good. But it's interesting, Bob. . . . Do you think everybody's mother makes a different kind of potato bug salad?"

DOONESBURY
By GARRY TRUDEAU

WELL? DO WE HAVE A DATE OR NOT?
YOU CAN'T ASK ME HERE. I DON'T KNOW YOU YET. YOU HAVE TO CALL ME ON THE PHONE.
CALL YOU ON THE PHONE? BOOPSIE, THAT'S THE MOST INANE...
HAVE A NICE DRIVE BACK TO YOUR MOTEL.
I DON'T BELIEVE THIS! I DO NOT...
A GIRL LIKES TO BE CALLED BY A BOY ON THE PHONE.
OKAY, HOW ABOUT IT?
HOW ABOUT WHAT? WHO IS THIS?

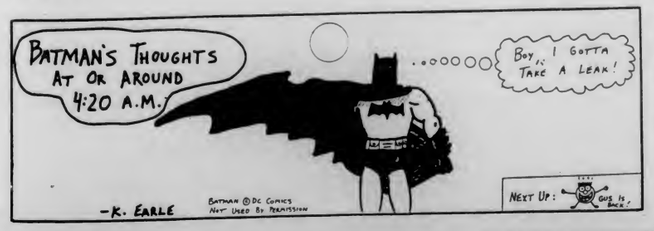
CALVIN AND HOBBES
By BILL WATTERSON



TANGELO PIE
By TIM SNIFFEN

PRESIDENT
Click
ATTENTION SHOPPERS! Today has just been declared 'Lambada Day' at Stop n' Shop! The music begins shortly, and if you can make it to the register without missing a beat, your groceries are FREE! Happy Dancing!
Lord, I think I've found my calling.

UNDER 21
By KRIS K. EARLE



CAST OF THOUSANDS
By BARRY DEUTSCH

Quote of the Day

"Adults are obsolete children, and to hell with them."

--Dr. Seuss, (1904- 1991)

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHAEL JAFFE

ACROSS
1 Suits me!
5 Cartograph
8 Jabber
14 Classify
15 In the past
16 Like some dispensers
17 Chocolate confections
19 Guarantee
20 Saint-Saëns hero
21 Oak or elm
23 Ever, to a poet
24 Ponce —
26 City of can. Czechoslovakia
27 Stroll
31 Pasadena neighbor
33 Slate
34 — Tin Tin
35 Cringed
38 Suede
40 Hybrid citrus
41 Moved slowly
42 Demure
43 Green land
44 Ugandan capital
46 Strength
47 Sprawl
49 Sirlestepped
51 'Au revoir, mon —'
52 Bridge
53 Canine movie star
58 Decline
60 Red Cross worker
62 Whole
63 Feedbag morsel
64 Author-film critic
65 Pioneering physician
66 Whiskey
67 Boulder Dam's lake

DOWN
1 Peepers?
2 Arctic Sea
3 Spack
4 Evergreen shrubs
5 Pine Tree State
6 Ripen
7 Back door
8 Illustrator Kate
9 First class
10 Librarian's dog
11 Swift serpents
12 Sophia
13 Winter month, in Madrid
18 Swelling
22 Mythological bird
25 Den
26 Toots
27 Hun king
28 Carriage
29 Censures in a way
30 Deadly
32 Hubbub
34 Cayenne
36 Nobelist Wiesel
37 '— look back...'
39 Haw's partner
40 Frog's cousin
42 Racket
45 Gardner
46 '— at the Races'
47 Jacket part
48 Muscat citizen
50 Thrill
52 Unerring
54 Bridge coup
55 Wise one
56 Concept
57 Ogled
59 Roost
61 Charles

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

A	T	N	L	P		A	S	H		S	P	R	A	G
L	E	O	N	A		S	I	E		E	L	U	D	E
R	E	A	T	S		H	E	N		C	A	M	A	L
I	D	A		A	T	H	E	R		S	E	R	I	F
			E	A	R			S	E	S
U	P	H	E	A	V	E		S	T	I	F	L	E	S
P	I	O		M	E	D	A	L		S	M	E	W
O	N	C	E			A	L	I	F	E	T	I	M	E
L	O	U	R			M		L	A	N		M	O	D
U	S	E	A	F	I			A	N	E	M	O	N	E
		S	E	D	G	E		O	R	E
F	A	B	U	L	O	U	S	L	Y	V	A	L	I	D
L	I	R		M	A	N		A	D	A	G	E
A	R	I	E	N		R	U	G		T	O	N	O	F
P	A	S	S	E		O	S	E		E	W	A	R	T

Quote of the Day

"I meant what I said and I said what I meant; an elephant's faithful 100 percent."

--Horton Hatches the Egg, Dr. Seuss

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES(March 21-April 19): Be prudent with funds, no matter what temptations you encounter. Familiar surroundings help you keep your feet on the ground. Beware of romance on the rebound! Not everyone shares your sense of commitment.

TAURUS(April 20-May 20): Do not provoke a test of strength today unless you are absolutely sure of your ground. Privacy, repose and meditation are favored. A loved one shares a delicious secret!

GEMINI(May 21-June 20): Be an information hound today. Trips, dialogues, and letters invite you to make more money. A close relative or friend could point the way. A thoughtful gift will make up for an oversight.

CANCER(June 21-July 22): Working on your own will help you make the grade today. Behind closed doors, you can pull strings and make a sterling impression. Still, there could be snags; stay alert. Keep your schedule flexible.

LEO(July 23-Aug. 22): Take the time to quietly go over the details and fine print in a contract. Discussing important matters privately will help you decide the right thing to do. A loving heart works miracles.

VIRGO(Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Friends who expect nothing from you but your companionship are the ones who deserve your loyalty. Discourage hangers-on who try to foist their financial burdens onto your shoulders.

LIBRA(Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be extra cautious when discussing your plans. You may not have all the facts you need. Tonight could feature some telling changes on the homefront. A close relationship needs revamping.

SCORPIO(Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Intelligence, charm and wit -all of them are working for you today! Dress up and step out. What you do not say can be as important as what you do say today. Be discreet.

SAGITTARIUS(Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Continue to work on programs for the future, particularly those involving education or religion. Many people support your efforts. Reaffirm your decision-making ability. Love is sublime!

CAPRICORN(Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Pleasant surprises are part of the picture! A shopping trip turns out wonderfully well. Visits in person or by phone break exciting new ground. Seek the company of stimulating people.

AQUARIUS(Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Good health and a steady occupation are precious assets. Do nothing to jeopardize your standing at work. Friends can be your greatest allies during an emotional crisis.

PISCES(Feb. 19-March 20): Your career prospects and prestige are linked to the soundness of your financial management. Get your mate or partner to follow your lead in holding down spending. Get together with good friends.

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Marc Elliott
Copy Editor.....Jason George
PhotoTechnician.....Matt Kahn
Production Supervisor.....Seth Kaye
Production.....Jason Torla, Oliver Raskin, Terry Starmer

Cross country teams heading for hills of Hanover

• Women face tough test at Dartmouth

By CHRIS CUDDY
Collegian Correspondent

With two tough losses already behind them, the University of Massachusetts women's cross country team's road ahead isn't looking much brighter, as the Minutewomen head to Hanover, NH for the Dartmouth Classic on Saturday.

Along with host Dartmouth and the University of Vermont, the Minutewomen will be running against teams from Georgetown, Michigan, Wake Forest, and William and Mary, all of whom are ranked in the top 15 in Division I.

"We're going to be seeing a lot of new faces and a lot of good runners — unfortunately we're not bringing the team up there that I'd like to," coach Julie LaFreniere said.

The Minutewomen continue to be decimated by injury, although there are no new injuries this week. UMass will still be without the services of Cheryl Lyons and Maureen Meldrim, and it appears that the anticipated return of Kelly Liljeblad will not be forthcoming.

"Kelly ran twice this week, and it appears she may not make it back. As for Maureen, she has mono and most likely is out for the season. However, we will be getting Cheryl back in a few weeks, she's just got real severe shin splints and is taking a week or so off from heavy running," LaFreniere said.

With three of their top seven runners on the shelf, UMass will be hard pressed to challenge any of the big four, at a race aptly nicknamed "The race of champions", but should "Run with Dartmourth and be able to beat Vermont," according to Lafreniere.

Instead, the Minutewomen will look to Becky Johnson, Kelly Liljeblad, Michelle St. Laurent, and Tricia Mathiesen to fill in the holes left by injury.

"We're just going to have to get along without them. Becky, Michelle, Tricia, and Kim should all run strong races, and I'm looking for a good race from Cate (Dean)," Lafreniere said. "It's equally important that the freshmen (Kerry Aker and Lee Ann Ambrose) pick up some of the slack, and that Julie (Moreau) continue to get better with each meet.

"We'll just use the people we have and make the best of it."

• Men face four top 20 teams

By KEITH BENNETT
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts men's cross country team faces its toughest task of this young season Saturday as UMass competes against several nationally ranked teams at the Dartmouth Classic.

Other teams making the trip to Hanover, New Hampshire this weekend are Wake Forest, currently ranked 7th in th NCAA poll, Michigan (12th), William and Mary (16th), Georgetown (19th), Iona (39th), Vermont and Fairleigh Dickinson. The host Big Green are currently ranked 27th.

"A meet of this caliber, I would say, could possibly be the best cross country meet in the United States on this weekend," UMass coach Ken O'Brien said.

O'Brien sees this meet as a chance for his team to run aggressively in a meet in which the Minutemen will not have the pressure of being expected to contend for the top spot.

"I don't see us as having a realistic shot of knocking out those teams that are in the top 40," he said. "I'm looking at it as a chance for us to be a little bit more aggressive than we have been and to take a chance on running in a way that will be a little different than we have in the first two meets.

"There's no real sense in getting to play a 'game' against a team in the top 20 in the country, in which you have everything to win and nothing to lose, and approaching it conservatively. I want the kids to look at this as an opportunity to give themselves a real good effort against some top 20 teams and see where we stand."

While he holds no illusions about defeating the nationally ranked teams in the meet, O'Brien does expect UMass to compete successfully against Vermont and Fairleigh Dickinson.

"I think we've got to beat Vermont and Fairleigh Dickinson," O'Brien said. "I see those two teams as being equivalent to us. We've got to beat them. We've got to start making steps to get ourselves operating in the same frame of mind in a meet that we will need later on in the championship season. Mentally, we've got to start taking some steps a little different than the ones we took in the first couple of weeks.

"We're in a situation now where we've made some progress and I think its time we look at ourselves as a different team than when we showed up on campus. Hopefully we'll run a lot differently than we did in our first meet."

Rugby an intense, grueling game, gaining popularity

By DAVID SCOTT
Collegian Staff

While sports such as golf use pretty words like "birdie" and "eagle," the lingo used in rugby including "rucking" and "mauling," gives a fair indication of the intensity and athleticism required to play the fast-paced, hard-hitting sport.

First developed in 1823 by English schoolboy, William Webb Ellis, rugby is now gaining popularity throughout the country and especially here on the UMass campus where the Rugby Club has close to 80 players divided among five sides.

"There's more kids turning out each semester," says co-captain Paul MacLelland, a senior from Dennis, MA.

An ancestor to the American game of football, rugby is played on a field measuring 120 yards by 75 yards with a fatter, rounder, and less pointed ball than a football. There are 15 players per side, eight forwards and seven backs, and the game is divided into running time-40 minute halves.

As in football, the object is to advance the ball over the opponent's "try" line (goal line) for four points. After a "try" is made, there is then an attempt to placekick the ball through the uprights for an additional two points. There are also penalty kicks and the opportunity for a player to drop kick the ball for three points during play.

These similarities aside, Ruggers, including UMass co-captain Tim Joyce, claim that their sport is one of "the most demanding sports physically." There are no pads worn, no substitutions unless there is an injury, only one referee and the action is constantly moving.

Unlike football, there are no forward passes in rugby, and the backwards lateral must be made while players run forward, all the while trying to avoid being tackled.

The sport incorporates soccer and football skills, while requiring players to be in top physical condition in order to endure the grueling length of each match.

Joyce played hockey in high school for perennial powerhouse Catholic Memorial, yet still comments on the tremendous amount of conditioning involved in preparing to play rugby. Add to that the notion that virtually every game is a must-win for the UMass club, and its clearly evident that there is little room for slacking off.

"If we lose one game, we dig ourselves a big hole," says Joyce, a forward on the team, prior to the team's 9-3 loss to Amherst College this past Saturday.

The division in which UMass plays includes Amherst College, Dartmouth, Williams, Norwich University and the University of Vermont. The top two teams in the division advance to a tournament at the end of the season.

While rugby may require skills from other sports, many of the qualities needed are unique.

"We try to teach the players to tackle low (to avoid injury)," says Francis Buttle, one of three Rugby Club coaches. "We want them to tackle with their heads behind the legs of the oncoming player. A lot of people who have played for us, we have had to try and 'unlearn' football skills."

Buttle, 42, a lecturer in the school of Hotel, Restaurant and Travel Administration, grew up in England playing rugby from the age of 10. At 26, Buttle moved to New Zealand and played rugby there for five years before coming to Amherst in 1987.

Buttle says that rugby in England and Europe as a whole, is a much more controlled game.

"The American game is much more physical, more frantic," observes Buttle, who notes that the dominant countries in the sport today are from New Zealand, Australia and England. "It's such a physical game (either way) and there's such potential for damage or injury."

Buttle says that rugby has a place for all sizes of players, with forwards usually being the bigger players and backs usually the smaller, quicker players. At this level of competition, where many players are seeing rugby for their first time, Buttle says that the main emphasis is on the basic skills.

"We don't want to play too elaborate of a game," says Buttle.

Fundamentals including line-out work, when the ball goes out of bounds, and scrummaging, facing-off for possession of the ball, are major focuses of the coaches' teaching process, according to Buttle.

Reasons for playing or coaching the game of rugby, differ for every person, but a recurring theme seems to be the challenge which the game offers and the camradarie that is established through relying on one another on each play.

"Rugby is much more physically demanding than soccer," says MacLelland, who played soccer in high school. "Soccer is more offense/defense, with rugby, everyone is offense and defense."

"It's a great bunch of guys," adds MacLelland, a fullback for the team.

Buttle enjoys the release that coaching offers him after a day of teaching in the classroom.

"It's great therapy particularly after teaching for a period of time," says Buttle. "I get out, run around and clear my head."

Rugby is widely played as an amateur sport known as the "Rugby Union," but some professional teams do exist and are formed under the "Rugby League," where the rules differ slightly.

In 1871, 21 amateur clubs established the Union and chartered the recorded the original laws of the game. According to Buttle, the game remains very much of a gentlemen's sport as is indicated by the use of only one referee to oversee 30 players.

The UMass Rugby Club next plays tomorrow against Norwich University, a team that soundly defeated UMass last year, at noon on the lower Boyden field.

■ NFL

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 12

Bears to only try and improve their field position for the game winning kick. But coach Mike Ditka caught the Jets sleeping by calling for a pass play to tight end James Thornton for the winning touchdown.

Or was it? After both teams had cleared the field, the referees decided to look at the play again on instant replay, which showed that Thornton's knee had touched down on the 6" line. Both teams had to be retrieved from their locker rooms. On the next play, the Bears easily scored on a quarterback sneak. That too was reviewed, but to no avail.

Mark this day in history as the only time I will pick the Pats to cover, except of course when they play the Colts. Don't be fooled by their victory over the Oilers last week. Dream on if you must, but the Patriots are not going to the Super Bowl.

While the Cardinals gave the Pats a beating, during the preseason (46-0), history shows that teams often return the favor during the regular season.

Last week the Cowboys ran all over Phoenix for 181 yards and Leonard Russell should have a big day. Something tells me that Warren Moon is just a wee-bit better than Cardinal Quarterback Tom Tupa so if the Pats keep things up, they shouldn't have too many troubles stopping the pass.

This match-up of two running teams should keep the score low and relatively close. Home field advantage gives this one to the Cards but 7 points is too much, take the Pats.

The cry baby antics of Giant linebacker Lawrence Taylor have gone too far. Each week he has whined about being held by opposing linemen to compensate for his declining talents as a player and referees have catered to him by granting him bogus calls since the second week. But last week's game against the Browns went too far.

Recall that the Giants won by only three points and that three critical blunders by officials granted New York a victory.

1. Taylor was obviously offsides on his sack of Bernie Kosar. He was in the backfield before the ball was even snapped.

2. Giant quarterback Jeff Hostetler clearly grounded the ball while being sacked by Michael Dean Perry, yet only the fans and announcers seemed to notice. The call of an incomplete pass negated both the sack and the penalty which would have taken the Giants out of field goal range. Instead it enabled them to get a short first down on the next play and to eventually kick a field goal.

3. How was it that not one official saw the Browns receiver get raped, mugged and tackled on the 50-yard line before the ball was thrown? It landed not 10 feet from him and he was in the center of the field. This happened with only eight seconds remaining. Had the penalty been called, Cleveland would have plenty of time to throw a 15-yard pass and get out of bounds in order to attempt a tying field goal.

Fear not, for the Cowboys will get my revenge when they wipe the field clean with the Giants this week in Dallas. Look for Emmit Smith to have yet another big day against the Giant's soft run defense.

This week's picks in CAPS: (H) : Home team

(H)PATS(+7) VS Phoenix, CHICAGO(+7 1/2) VS (H)Buffalo, (H)DETROIT(-6) VS Tampa Bay, CHIEFS(-4) VS San Diego, (H)RAMS(-4 1/2) VS Packers, (H)JETS(+2 1/2) VS Miami, (H)MINNESOTA(-5) VS Denver, (H)DALLAS(+2 1/2) VS Giants, SAINTS(-1 1/2) VS(H)Atlanta, 49ERS(2 1/2) VS(H)Raiders, COLTS(+8) VS (H)Seattle, (H)WASHINGTON(-6) VS Eagles

Last week : 6-8
This season : 16-12

■ water polo

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 12

smaller than average pool, Iona coach Lloyd Robinson says the Minutemen should have the advantage.

"We'll have to adapt to a narrower pool," he said. "There's a fairly big difference between six and eight meters. Our passing game has to improve if we want to beat UMass again."

On stopping UMass he says, "You always have to pay attention to Alex Yelensky, a very, very good offensive player. We'll have some sort of double team pressure on him. And we can't let Scott Reed get his defense and quickness going."

UMass' third and final game of the weekend is against Queens College. Queens is down a bit this season, but is coached by Shelly Rothman, a man Yarworth says is "one of the best coaches in the country. He taught me a lot of what I know. He'll come up with some sort of game plan that'll be a pain to deal with."

The Challenge calls for Boston College and MIT to play the same teams UMass plays. In addition, the UMass 'B' team will play Amherst Saturday at 12:45 p.m. The game will allow the guys who don't play as much to show their stuff in a game situation.

Yarworth praises our neighbor down the street saying, "It's refreshing in this day of budget cuts for the continuing generosity of the Amherst athletic administration into letting us use their fine facility."

The pool at Boyden has a shallow end, preventing regular season games to be played there.

The hope is that between a sizeable home crowd and a familiar pool the team can sweep its three game slate this weekend. A win against any team is great, but sport fans know that there is nothing quite like beating your top rival in front of familiar faces, according to Yarworth.

Brittany Manor
(413) 256 - 8534
Two Bedroom Apartments
AVAILABLE
LIMITED TIME ONLY
Two Bedroom Apartments
AVAILABLE NOW!
$399 PER MONTH
Rent includes heat and hot water
NO EXPENSIVE HEATING BILLS
HURRY!
NO SECURITY OR FINAL MONTH RENT
REQUIRED AT THIS TIME
Fully Equipped Kitchen Including Disposal • On The Five College Bus Route • Oversized Bathrooms • Large Dinning Area • Storm Windows • Wall To Wall Carpeting • Large Livingroom w/ Ceiling To Floor Windows • Dead-bolt Security Locks • Cable Television Available
ACT NOW
$100.00 REWARD
If you know of a friend who is apartment hunting, send them to us with this form. If they qualify and rent our apartment you will receive.....
$100.00 REWARD
My name _____ I recomend _____
Address _____ Name _____
Tel # _____ Address _____
Tel # _____

30 MINUTE GUARANTEED DELIVERY OR $3.00 OFF
WE REDEEM COMPETITOR'S COUPONS SO YOU DON'T HAVE TO EAT THEIR QUALITY....
Buy any Large Pizza, Get 2nd Pizza for only $1.99 DELIVERED IN 30 MINUTES OR LESS NOT GOOD WITH ANY OTHER OFFER OFFER EXPIRES 12/30/91
Buy any Pan Pizza, Get 2nd Pizza for only $1.99 DELIVERED IN 30 MINUTES OR LESS NOT GOOD WITH ANY OTHER OFFER OFFER EXPIRES 12/30/91
UMASS • 256-8911 MT. HOLYOKE • 535-1111
VISA/MASTERCARD

Classifieds

COME TO THE COLLEGIAN OFFICE 113 CAMPUS CENTER • THURSDAY 8:30-3:30 FRIDAY 8:30-2:30 • DEADLINE IS TWO DAYS PRIOR TO PUBLICATION • 20¢/WORD/DAY FOR STUDENTS • CASH IN ADVANCE

ACTIVITIES

DINOSAUR JR.
Saturday, Oct 5 8pm in the SUB
$8-UMass $10-Others Buy tix now!
at Tix, For the Records, Main St. Records

OPEN RUSH
Sigma Kappa Sorority
9-28 12pm
9-30 6:30
10-2 6:30
19 Allen St. 256-6887
All university women welcome

TRI-SIGMA OPEN RUSH
9-30 & 10-2 7-8 PM
10/1 & 10-3 5-6 PM
387 N Pleasant St
549-3811

UMASS TAE KWON DO
Come train with us
Self-degense keep in shape
for more info call Marty 546-7003
Marianne 546-6443

ANNOUNCEMENTS

3rd BASE uNikke D + KMD
Tues Oct 1 at 8(doors open 7:30)
Tix $10-UMass $15-others
On sale now at Tix, For the Record, Main St. Records

ATTENTION NON-US RESIDENTS AA-1 immigration lottery is your chance. Apply on friends behalf for efficient strategies call 542-4220

Bed and Breakfast. Downtown Amherst 549-0733

First Republican Club general meeting with distinguished internationally known guest speaker will be tonight at 7:00pm in room 163C CC

HEY, ARE THERE any Uechiryu karate practitioners left out there? Call Mike at 253-9660

"OPEN RUSH"
Alpha Chi Omega!!!
Come to dinner with us, find out what we're all about! 3 nights, Sept. 30- Oct.2
Come at 5:15-
ALPHA CHI OMEGA!
38 Nutting Ave.
549-8459

Tarkovsky film festival any interest? S- d wants, thoughts, and a SASE to: Tarkovsk,, Box 395 Northampton 01061-0395

WE'RE OPEN!!
Sweets N More in Field House
Subs, ice cream, soda and much more
Open nightly seven to midnight

AUTO FOR SALE

78 BUICK REGAL 130K New exhaust Reliable $400 B.O. 665-4185

'92 MERCURY CAPRI New brakes, muffler, battery, shocks good condition $1000 256-3020

1983 CHEVETTE 4D-HB
88K Excellent condition $725 549-7129

1983 SUBARU GL Wagon 85.000 mi., auto. good condition, little rust 634-5678 $1200

84 FORD ESCORT New brakes, muffler very reliable. $1000 665-4602-evenings

COLLEGE PIZZA

COLLEGE PIZZA
Fall Special
Small cheese $3.50
Large cheese $5.99
Free soda with the purchase of a large sub, salad, or spaghetti
549-6098 549-6073
Must mention this ad

EDITING & TUTORING

Editing, English language tutoring. wordprocessing offered by retired teacher to international students and non-English majors. Quick service, modest fees. 253-3354.

ENTERTAINMENT

RACK-A-DISC! $175.00 DJs, VJs, Karaoke for house/ Formal parties, Call 586-9900

FOR RENT

1 BR. APT in center of Amherst - next to bars, bus, food $500 includes heat & hot water 253-0688/545-3146

2 LARGE ROOMED apt. center of Amherst Heat included 256-1124

EXECUTIVE RENTAL RENT or rent with option to buy 4 bedroom luxuries house in Amherst woods Call 253-7879

FRIDGE RENTALS 253-9742 Free delivery

ROOM COOKING LAUNDRY heat $300 256-8921

TOWNHOUSE - 2 bedroom 1 1/2 bath apartment on bus route North Amherst 1-567-1352

FOR SALE

CENTURIAN IRONMAN EXPERT Excellent condition, low mileage. Bought new for $600. Selling for $350/RO, Call Chris 253-3608

COMICS!- McFarland Spideys. X-Titles, Justice League. Many more! VF-Near mint 546-3403

COMPUTER FOR SALE
$600 Call Cliff
549-1762

DEAD TRADE- Have Saturday need Thursday 256-1183

FAT CHANCE! 21", Like new. Frameset $450, complete $775. 253-4040, message.

FREE CAP WHEN you buy my Ford F150 4x4 Call Steve 253-7922

FUTONS!
Lowest prices and quick delivery!
Call Metawampe 585-1233
Free brochure available

Jerry&Sara, Wild Boys, Pig Tangent 63 KFOG Call Jeff 549-7686

LACROSSE EQUIPMENT
Sport helmet, worn 10 times, $70
Brine arm pads, worn 2 times, $20
Brine shoulder pads, worn 2 times, $25
Everything for $100 Call 546-4149

MACCLASSIC 40/2 MINT w/software $1100 B.O. 665-3736

Pr. Infinity RS3000 spkrs. Two way w/ Polycell twtr. Mint cond. Pd. $380 will sell $225/bo Call John 546-1671

Smith Corona laptop word processor. Separate printer, battery, carrying case, disks, spreadsheet program 400 or B.O. 542-3194

FUNDRAISERS

RAISE $500...$1000...$1500
FOOLPROOF
FUNDRAISING
For your fraternity, sorority, team or other campus organization. Act now for the chance to win a Caribbean cruise and fabulous prizes!
Call: 1-800-950-8472, ext 50

HELP WANTED

FAST FUNDRAISER $1000/WK
Greeks, Clubs, Anyone.
(800) 748-6817.

"Know before you go," Where to work, live and ski free in Colorado's resorts. "Current guide to Aspen, Vail, Brecken-ridge and more! $16.95. Call 1-800-786-6174

TRAVEL SALES MANAGERS
Vacation outlet Flame's Basement needs go-getters to hire and manage campus rep's for spring break '92. Make $5K+ in 5 mos. (PT) Some travel- must have car and phone wans. machine.
Call J.T at 817-262-3734 9to5

TRAVEL SALES REPRESENTATIVE
STS, the leader in collegiate travel needs motivated individuals and groups to promote winter/spring break trips. For information call Student Travel Services, Ithaca NY at 1-800-648-4849

WANT A GREAT JOB WITH RECYCLING?
Hard work and lots of fun. 15 hrs/week -4.55/hr. Must have a drivers license. Call the Residential Recycling Program at 545-1153.

INSTRUCTION

GUITAR LESSONS at Hilton Music. All styles. Call Jeff at 665-1178

* LEGAL HELP ****

Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about sublet-ting/assigning leases? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact the Legal Services Center, 922 Campus Ctr. 545-1995

LOST

FEMALE CAT
White w/tortoise markings 9/18-Main St / S.East St area We miss her!! Call 256-8410 or 546-6464 (message)

HEIRLOOM ANTIQUE CAMEO RING was greatgrandmother's Veronica de Vos. 546-6214 leave message.!

LOST- CAMO nylon jacket-US Cavalry made Great personal value -Lost 9/25 between Lot 25 and Harter -Call Rob at 6-4719 Leave message

MUSICIANS

KEYBOARDIST SOUGHT
Active local band.
Originals Funk Rock Blues
Gigs at Twistars Pearl St etc
Chris Dave Jason 549-5543
No Hackers!!!

PERSONALS

Hi Bunny- I'll miss you . but you'll be back and I'll be waiting. Love, BunnyX

GJC
Here's your secret personal! I hope your birthday is great, because you deserve whatever you want. - Just ask!
Love, Chipmunk

Thanks Nicole for that bonding session with Lazy and Kathleen for giving my shirt that pink tint. -Rick

GARRON J CARVALHO:
Happy 21st Birthday! I hope you do well on your exams this week, so we can eventually celebrate!
-You Know Who

ACE OF HEARTS:
My eyes have been wide since you gave me that bite. Seems more than a month since the squishy-apple night.
LLIKE, The woman from Mars

ATTENTION PLEDGES!!!
Congratulations to all!!
An extra special congratulations to Tri-Sigma's pledges
Elene, Katrina, Lauren, Lynn & Renee
Love, The Sisters of Tri-Sigma

RESUME SERVICE

Cutting Edge Resumes. Completa resume service. Writing, laser printing, letters, advice. 549-0367

ROOMMATE WANTED

- MALE NON-SMOKER to share great apartment on bus route, prefer jnr. snr or grad, $175/mo. Call Doug and Val at 256-8723, lve. mes

SERVICES

BICYCLE BROKEN?
Call Pat
546-0119

FREE pregnancy testing; confidential and caring support. BIRTHRIGHT 233 No. Pleasant Street Amherst 549-1906

Pregnant?
Need a pregnancy test, information or support? Call for free and confidential services. ALTERNATIVES 245 Main Street Northampton 586-3000 or Greenfield 774-6019.

SENIORS
Time to think about resumes
Get professional resumes at college prices.
Call Andy at A Expert Resumes
549-4002

TRAVEL

BAHAMA CRUISE $99 per person
5 day/4 night hotel
Plan now for your break.
Very limited offer.
Call now 1-800-621-0572

MONTREAL WEEKENDS 69 includes R.T. Motorcoach 3days 2nights Hotel downtown FREE admission Club Metropolis DJs pub Call Reliable Tours 365Broadway Rt 1 Lynnfield 01940 617 598-9930 Depart every weekend

SAVE $40 ON Northwest Air! $40 off $190 travel voucher Call 15833359 evenings

TRAVEL FREE! Campus representatives wanted to earn intersession and spring break trips. 256-8254

TYPIST

PRO-TYPE
Complete secretarial services
Reasonable rates
10% discount for students
323-6212

Sports

Amherst College hosts water polo tourney

BY KEVIN HERLIHY
Collegian Correspondent

It's hard to believe that in its fifth year as a varsity sport the University of Massachusetts water polo team will play its first "home" tournament this weekend. The catch is that "home" is at Amherst College's Pratt Pool.

The Lord Jeffs are hosting the New England vs. Mid-Atlantic Challenge, and it comes as a relief to head coach Russ Yarworth and his troops that a grueling bus ride is not needed. The hope is that the 16th ranked Minutemen can draw a partisan crowd to give them a boost, especially in their Saturday night match-up with 15th ranked archrival Iona.

Remembering the carnival-like atmosphere at the Naval Academy last weekend, senior Adam Feldman said, "I'm anticipating our crowd will be like that, with our friends and peers going. It's sometimes frustrating to see other team's home advantage go against us."

Saturday morning's game is a 10:15 start against Fordham, and while no team should be overlooked, Iona is on tap Saturday at 7 p.m. The Gaels have beaten UMass four straight times, including twice this year.

"I've got to get a game plan to beat Iona," Yarworth said. "I think it's time to turn the tables a bit. We've got a better goalie, and we've fixed a few things in our offense and defense. If we can get a home crowd, maybe that will push us over the edge. It'll be good for people to see a new sport then go out and have fun."

Noting that UMass has been practicing at Amherst's

CONTINUED ON PAGE 10

Collegian photo by Carrie Wyeth

The water polo team will be in action all weekend long as they play in their home away from home, Amherst College.

Tornatore to start for Minutemen against BU Terriers

By TAMIR LIPTON
Collegian Staff

How wacky are things in the University of Massachusetts football office these days? Well, when asked who was the starting quarterback against Boston University this weekend, coach Jim Reid scratched his head and said, "Good question."

He then left the office, brought back offensive coordinator Doug Berry and said, "Coach Berry, by the way, who's starting at quarterback?"

The answer is Paul Tornatore, and even though Reid was joking, the point is that the quarterback situation, which resembles a bad pitching rotation, has become a mockery.

Tony Williams, who was slated to relieve Tornatore against Holy Cross, has dropped to third if not fourth on the QB depth-chart, behind Tom Fasano, week one's starter, and possibly even behind Dave McGovern.

"We've got to get him [Williams] on the field, it's getting ridiculous," Reid said. "We either have to play Tony Williams at quarterback or move him to where he can play."

Don't expect to see Williams at quarterback any time soon because the coaching staff is afraid of what might happen, whether it be good or bad. Instead, Williams could possibly move back to cornerback, his natural position.

While the coaching staff continues to dispute this perplexing quarterback problem, the Minutemen have a football game Saturday night (7 p.m.) at Nickerson Field in Boston against Boston University.

The Terriers (1-2) are coming off a 27-23 loss to Holy Cross, a game in which they led 17-7 at the half (sounds familiar). Their only win of the season came against the infamous Towson State, 10-8.

This is BU's first Yankee Conference game of the season and while it may not be a must-win game, they play at Villanova (2-0 in the conference) next week and host Delaware (2-0 in the YanCon) the week after.

Last year the Minutemen managed 570 yards of total offense, 34 first downs and scored on seven of eight possessions, as they beat BU 47-16. John Johnson ran for 128 yards on 20 carries and Don Caparotti had a pair of interceptions, one that he returned 85 yards for a touchdown.

Johnson may not get the ball 20 times this week as he has assumed a backup role, but teammate Jerome Bledsoe will.

Bledsoe, who received the Golden Helmet Award earlier this week for his 214-yard effort against Maine last weekend, is running pain-free. He has convincingly wiped out any doubts that he would not be able to return from last year's season ending broken ankle which he suffered against Holy Cross in the opener. He has rushed for 375 yards in three games.

As for BU quarterback Stan Greene, last year's Co-Offensive Player of the Year in the Yankee Conference, is gone. His replacement Greg Moore threw for 262 yards last week, completing 28-of-47 passes out of Dan Allen's Run-and-Shoot offense.

Since the Run-and-Shoot was installed in 1988 by former coach Chris Palmer, Terrier quarterbacks have thrown for over 200 yards in 32 of their last 36 games and over 300 yards nine times.

Moore's favorite receiver Brian Straughter caught 10 passes last week becoming only the fourth receiver in BU history to catch over 100 passes in a career.

"I'm concerned about stopping their offense which is similar to Holy Cross'," Reid said. "It was a different game last week. . . Here they spread you out with their four receivers and they have Jay Hillman who jams the ball down your throat.

Hillman has rushed for 2,055 yards in his illustrious career. However, he has yet to rush for over 100 yards this season, something he did four times last year.

Reid said he was concerned about the fact that UMass had not practiced on artificial turf this season and that for the first time, they were going to Boston on the day of the game.

Bill Durkin and Mario Perry will not play for the Minutemen.

Roy's picks for the NFL week five

ACK(ACK) Anyone recognize that sound? That was the sound of the New York Jets choking Monday night against the Chicago Bears. For the second week in a row, the Jets have allowed opposing teams to pull off fourth quarter comebacks.

No one seemed to care that Pat Leahy, one of the most consistent kickers inside the 40, shanked a 37-yard field goal. That was, until Jets running back Blair Thomas fumbled the ball inside Jets territory with less than a minute remaining in the game.

Roy Alexander

Quarterback Jim Harbaugh led the Chicago Bears all the way down to the Jets 6-yard line. Down 13-6 with two seconds remaining, it seemed impossible for the Bears to pull it off. But don't tell running back Neil Anderson that. For the second week in a row Anderson pulled one out of nowhere by making a falling shoestring catch just inside the end zone to send the game into overtime.

The Jets won the coin toss and marched all the way down to the Chicago nine for first and goal. Rather than trying to punch the ball into the end zone, Jets coach Bruce Coslet elected for the field goal. After all, what are the chances of Leahy missing two chip shots in one game? But his kick hooked left and gave Chicago yet another opportunity.

Chicago marched deep into Jet territory. Once they got into field goal range, everyone expected the

CONTINUED ON PAGE 10

Eynard scores with women's soccer

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

You must score to win.

This year the University of Massachusetts women's soccer team has been doing both, and one reason is the scoring of junior Kim Eynard.

"Kim is definitely an attacker, a scorer," UMass coach Jim Rudy said. "When I was recruiting her, I went to see her play and she just tore it up. I knew that this girl was gonna score some goals in college. Not as many as in high school but she could definitely finish [the play]."

There was little doubt that Eynard knew how to score after she broke the national high school scoring record her senior year at Endicott Union High School in Endicott, N.Y. Eynard was also named to the New York Division I All-State team all four years of high school.

"The only reason I can think of why she didn't make All-American was that her coach didn't pay his dues," Rudy joked.

Even without the All-American title, Eynard was heavily recruited by numerous schools including North Carolina State, New Hampshire and Massachusetts.

"The main reason that I chose UMass was coach Rudy," Eynard said. "I felt at ease with him from the first time I met him. He is a very knowledgable man, both about the game of soccer and how to deal with his players. Location was also important to me — I am not too far away from my family."

Eynard, who is one of seven siblings, feels her family is the most important thing in her life.

"My family is very supportive, extremely supportive, there is a lot of love going around," Eynard said. "My goal has been to make my family proud of me in every way possible. That is my first priority in life."

On the soccer field though Eynard's first priority is to put the ball in the net, something she has done three times already this season. Her freshman year she tallied eight goals and last year her production dropped to five.

"She has been playing well for us this season after a down year in '90," Rudy said. "Of course our whole team was sort of down last year, but this year she is finishing the play. She has matured a lot this year. During high school she was so good she had her way with opponents. That doesn't happen any more but she's adjusted well.

"Kim has a lot of speed and she is strong at dribbling at top speed. When she gets some room she can really go. She is also pretty good at heading the ball too. She scored one that way last week [vs. Central Florida]," Rudy added.

"Speed is probably the strength of my game," Eynard said. "Also communication and ball skills, I have to improve at moving away from the ball and I just have to keep working on putting the ball in the net, that is what I am here for."

Rudy hopes to see more balls in the net from Eynard this season as the eighth-ranked Minutewomen (4-1) move on towards a possible NCAA Tournament bid. Massachusetts travels to George Mason (4-2) this weekend to face the No. 20 Lady Patriots and unranked Saint Mary's (3-3).

"Kim knows how to score and we need that right now. She is a very important part of our team," Rudy said. "If in the off-season she adds some strength from weight training she can go from being a really good player to an All-American."

For Eynard the goals are more team-related. She refers to her teammates as her family away from home and would like nothing better than to see success as a group.

"We are a very good team right now, we are a team with a lot of personality and a lot of heart for one another," Eynard said. "I guess every team would like to make the Final Four and we may be able to do that, but we play for the game that's next on the schedule and don't think about the [post-season]."

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THE LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND

VOLUME CI ISSUE 4 MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 30, 1991

Testimony about racism heard

By A.R. SANTIAGO
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts has a long way to go in resolving the problem of the racism on its campus, said a group of students, faculty and administrators from UMass and Smith College Friday.

Speaking to an audience of 80 people in the Campus Center, they testified to a panel of the Massachusetts Advisory Committee. Their testimony will be part of a report by the advisory committee to the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights in its quest to quell racist and anti-Semitic incidents on college campuses across the state.

Afro-American Studies Prof. Esther Terry said, "Bigotry does not spring from the breast once one is admitted to the University," but racial and anti-Semitic conflicts on the UMass campus, in particular, seem to be proving otherwise.

The panel discussed their impressions of why racial and religious harassments continue on college campuses and what still remains to be done by administrators to, at the very least, alleviate the problem.

Sally J. Greenberg, a lawyer for the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, said more attention has been paid recently on what is happening on college campuses because "they are a microcosm of society."

She said in 1990, 1,685 incidents of violence and harassment were reported, up 18 percent from the previous year. Out of 57 institutions reporting, 95 incidents were from college campuses. Over the past three years, the percentage of reported incidents of harassment has jumped 72 percent.

Photo by Josh Reynolds

CIVIL RIGHTS HEARINGS — Sally Greenberg discusses a notice posted on UMass campus which caused tensions between the Jewish, Black and the Third World communities. Left to right are Raymond McKearney, Greenberg, Sondra Moody.

Referring to a flyer circulated around the UMass campus early this semester, Greenberg said, "Incidents like this create a lot of tension and fear" in both communities and do nothing to resolve the problem.

The flyer warned Hillel and Jewish students they would be "held accountable" by Third World and Black students for "any harm inflicted upon Dr. Leonard Jeffries, Jr.", the outspoken chair of the Black Studies Department at the City College of the City University of New York.

Jeffries' comments triggered controversy when, in a speech at a Black cultural festival in Albany in July, he made remarks that were attacked by politicians and critics as anti-Semitic.

There was a consensus among the panel of students, in particular, that the efforts already undertaken by administrators to stop or prevent racism have not resulted in any real changes.

Alexander Nguyen, speaking on behalf of the United Asian Cultural Center, lambasted administrators for "consistently acting as a means for social control," by driving a wedge among minority groups and "finding a million excuses not to do anything" despite the meetings and programs they sponsor in response to problems that arise.

As a consequence of the racially-motivated brawl in Southwest after the 1986 World Series, some programs were implemented to educate UMass students about social and cultural diversity. However, Deirdre Almeida, acting chair of the Massachusetts Advisory Committee, said, "This did not put an end to the conflict, but it did change the way we think about it."

James Arthur Jemison, of the Black Mass Communications Project said, "When Black or minority students graduate from UMass, they should receive two degrees — one for surviving the subtle and overt racism in the University] and another for still being able to complete their rigorous course work."

He said racial harassment occurs "not out of malice but ignorance." He also said multiculturalism as an idea is sound, but it simply cannot work if an "awful lot of talk" is not matched by action on the part of administrators.

A stepped-up effort in recruiting minorities as students and faculty and in keeping those who are already at the University was a frequent suggestion as one of many viable solutions to campus racism.

Grant Ingle, director of the Office of Human Relations at UMass, expressed grave concern about the marginal influence of such meetings, but he said it is essential to continue this tradition of open and frank discussion if only to acknowledge that problems as well as solutions do exist.

Older people returning to complete education

By ARI VAIS
Collegian Staff

Do you have that person in one of your classes who could pass for your father? Or your grandmother? Or... do you feel like you spend your days surrounded by kids? If so, then you are witnessing, directly or indirectly, the growing number of older students returning to college full-time.

With some exceptions, this trend has been growing for the past five years in the United States, with some older students returning to complete a degree once started and others getting their first taste of college life.

But why are these men and women, aged 22 and up, coming back now?

"A lot of people have a career they're bored with or one with no room for advancement," said Kay Althoff, the director of older student enrollment at Mount Holyoke College. "If those people are financially secure enough to stop working, they'll want to come back and complete their education, and finish their career in a field they want.

"We have definitely felt [the rise of older students]. For at least the past five years, there has been a 10 percent increase per year," Althoff said. "Most of them start out doing some work at community colleges before coming to us."

The case is similar at Smith College. The Ada Comstock Scholars program, for returning older students, has stopped heavy recruiting and has actually grown much more selective.

Marjorie Southworth, who runs the program, points to the nation's limp economy as the main reason for this trend.

"A lot of people have been laid off," Southworth said. "And those who haven't been are coming back now because they need the degree to help them compete in today's job market."

Southworth also noted the increased awareness among women of the necessity of receiving a full education. In the late 60s and early 70s, women were expected to only attend college for one or two years before getting married, while today there is no stigma attached to a woman seeking a college degree, she said.

"Now that the stigma is shrinking, those same women are ridding themselves of the care-giver role, and returning to school," Southworth said.

The older students at Smith are between the ages 22-71, with 39 percent in their 30s. Smith has enough housing to accomodate all of these students and do live on campus.

"The Ada Comstock Scholars Program has grown so competitive," Southworth said. "That our applications have become very selective."

Southworth noted preference is given to candidates with at least one year or thirty two semester credits of prior college work. Out of 2,609 Smith students, 334 are returning, older students.

In the Pioneer Valley, the national trend is broken by the remaining colleges. Hampshire and Amherst College do not have a specific program to attract older students, hence enrollment has stayed about the same over time.

At the University of Massachusetts, however, programs for older students have suffered and enrollment is down.

Registrar of Continuing Education Elizabeth Brinkerhoff said she has "read that it's true" that the national average for enrollment of older students has increased, but claims that due to the woeful Massachusetts economy and its effects on the University, there has been no steady increase or upward trend.

The University Without Walls, designed to attract older students, has especially suffered. The director of UWW, Victoria Jacoby, has also read about the national trend but admits that the program being hurt by lack of resources.

"There is a larger dropout rate for our students now, because of increased fees," Jacoby said "which is probably the case for all university students."

CONTINUED ON PAGE 6

Inside:

Page 3:
A look inside of Amhest's volunteer fire fighters as they keep the town smoke-free.
Page 5:
Darienne Hosley looks back to the great childen's author, Dr. Suess.
Page 7:
The Black Affairs page looks into problems of being a New Student at the University for students of color.
Weather
Here comes the sun — well, it never really left. Sunny and in the 60s for today and tomorrow — so go out and watch those leaves turn.

State budget forces cuts to graduates

By DAVID MASSEY
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts has reduced the number of jobs for teaching graduate students this fall by 143 to deal with the current states budget slashes, according to the dean of the graduate school.

Last fall, 1,476 graduate students were teaching, said Dean Samuel Conti at a Faculty Senate meeting last Thursday. That number has been reduced to 1,344 for this semester, he said.

Marc Kenan, the president of the Graduate Student Senate, believes the reduction will worsen an already tough situation.

"We're not surprised. Graduate students are suffering tremendously. It's getting more difficult to continue our education at the University," Kenan said. "We're getting hit harder."

Leaders of the Graduate Employee Organization feel this recent announcement emphasizes their need for their first union contract. The GEO, which represents 2,200 graduate employees such as teaching and research assistants, is the largest union on campus.

"It underscores our need for protection under a new contract," said Emily Isaacs, co-speaker of the GEO. "This is horrible, horrible news."

Isaacs said this 17 percent cut is "grossly disproportionate" with the recent 3 percent decline in undergraduate enrollment.

Still, Isaacs fears similar reductions for the coming years. "Our sources in the administration project that similar cuts are projected for next year," Isaacs said.

Job security is one of the four major demands that negotiating teams from both the administration and the GEO will be discussing tomorrow in an all-day meeting to finalize the GEO's first union contract.

Leaders of the GEO have threatened to take "decisive action" if their demands are not met.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THE LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is a Registered Student Organization of the University of Massachusetts, published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000.

113 CAMPUS CENTER AMHERST, MA 01003
Phone (413) 545-3500 FAX (413) 545-1592

STAFF

Editor in Chief....Gayle Long
Managing Editor....Marc Elliott
Editorial Editor....Greg Sukiennik
News Editor....Preston P. Forman
Sports Editor....Tamir Lipton
Arts Editor....Paul DeGeorges
Photography Editor....Carrie Wyeth
Black Affairs Editor....Sondra Sutton
Women's Issues Editor....Jessame Hannus
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor....Trystan Skeigh
Multicultural Affairs Editor....Alexander Nguyen
Third World Affairs Editor....Madanmohan Rao
Jewish Affairs Editors....Felice Cohen, Debra Kriegsman
Business Manager....Randee Pastel
Advertising Manager....Dena Haselkorn
Finance Manager....Jeff Weiner
Circulation Manager....Jim Winterbottom
Subscriptions Manager....Stacy Rogers
Promotions Manager....Scott Macey
Production Manager....Terry Starmer
Day Graphics Manager....Jenn Burns

PROFESSIONAL STAFF

Business....Brian Harrington, Lori Black, Maureen Majerowski
Graphics....Blake Phillips

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements that run on a space-available basis for campus and local non-profit organizations. Because of space constraints, the Collegian cannot print all FYIs submitted and no announcements can be repeated.

To submit an FYI, please send a TYPED news release with all pertinent information to 113 Campus Center c/o News Editor. FYIs cannot be taken over the phone.

Monday, September 30

Lecture—A lecture by the former Under Secretary of the Air Force on "Beyond Desert Storm: U.S. Foreign Policy in the 1990's" will be given by Antonia Chayes. It will be held at 8:00 p.m. in Converse Hall at Amherst College. Free.

Tuesday, October 1

Blood Drive—Donate blood in Campus Center Room 165 from 11:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m.

Music—A faculty recital by David Sporny, Trombone, will be held at 8:00 p.m. in UMass Benzanson Recital Hall. Admission is $5.00 & $2.50.

Exhibit—Steaming Across Massachusetts: Massachusetts railroads as reflected in the holdings of Special Collections and Archives will be on display on the 25th floor of the University Library from 10:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. through to January 15, 1992.

Wednesday, October 2

Lecture—School of Nursing Academic Rounds Lecture: Urinary Incontinence in Elderly as a Clinical Problem: the Practice-Research-Education Spiral will be held in UMass Campus Center room 162-175 from 4:00 to 6:00 p.m.

Theater—Outer Limits Series-Rajeckas and Intraub Movement Theater will be held in Hamden Theater (Southwest) at 8:00 p.m.

GOOD-BYE OSHUN.....

RAY CHARLES
1/2 Price
5 College Students

The Raelett's
and the Ray Charles Orchestra

Thursday, Oct. 3, 8:00pm
Call 545-2511

THE FINE ARTS CENTER
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST

FREE!! FREE!! FREE!!
NO CHARGE TO PROCESS
CONTINENTAL/AMERICAN EXPRESS
COUPONS
FREE!! FREE!! FREE!! FREE!!
INQUIRE ABOUT OUR
10% STUDENT DISCOUNT
CAMPUS TRAVEL
CAMPUS CENTER
UMASS
545-0500
CENTRAL TRAVEL
OF AMHERST
800 MAIN ST. STE. 2
256-6704

Study Europe in COPENHAGEN
– in English –

DIS Denmark's International Study Program — Affiliated with the University of Copenhagen
One of the Best Study Abroad Programs in Europe

"Overall, it's such a great experience. I talked to my mom last night, and she said 'Just tell me you're having a wonderful time,' and I said 'I am having the most incredible time ever, because I am learning so many things, I am doing so many things.' It is definitely worth it!"
Jo Anna Hershkowitz, University of Virginia, DIS student Spring 1991

Humanities & Social Sciences • International Business
Architecture & Design

Taught in English by Danish Faculty
Fall, Spring, Summer and Academic Year
Danish Family Stay

See your Study Abroad Office on Campus for more information, or call 1-800-247-3477 for a copy of the DIS Study Guide, which contains complete information on all aspects of the program

The United Christian Foundation
cordially invites you to attend a reception for new chaplins
DAVID CROSBY
KENT HIGGINS
TONY AHLSTROM
Monday October 7th from 4 O'Clock to 6 O'Clock in the afternoon
At the Faculty Club
University of Massachusetts

Local

Collegian photo by Matt Kahn

Jackie Swist, Joanne Palmer, Ellen Lana, Don Healey and Dawn Melchionan take the tot from the toddler center at the Human Development Lab. School on a watch through the Hatch.

Nation of Tibet suffering from Chinese takeover

By MICHELLE ROBBINS
Collegian Correspondent

Tibet has gone "through Hell" since the Chinese's takeover of Tibet in the early 60s which has left 1.5 million Tibetans dead so far, said a Tibetan student of education at UMass.

Nawang Phuntsog said the U.S.-Tibetan Resettlement Project in Amherst needs sponsors and job offers for the 50 Tibetans coming to Amherst.

"The Tibetans live in the worst conditions [due to the Chinese] and they are such pious and peaceful people", said Phuntsog Friday night at the Jewish Community of Amherst.

Since Jewish people were subject to cultural genocide during World War II, many Tibetans are interested in how the Jewish people preserved their culture from generation to generation without any loss, said Phuntsog.

No one knows for sure the exact origin of the Tibetans, but Phuntsog said the Tibetans are definitely not Chinese descendants.

Buddhists are "not wimpy", he said. He went on to explain when a Buddhist friend punched a non-Buddhist, the non-Buddhist said, "You're not suppose to punch me, you're a Buddhist."

Buddhism is not only a religion for the Tibetans, it is also central to all social and political aspects of Tibetan life, he said.

Even though Buddhists are "loving and friendly, they are still prone to the same social diseases of other cultures", said Phuntsog. It takes thousands of good people to deal with one wicked person, said Phuntsog.

"My earliest contact with Buddhism was when I was conceived. Karma taught me to be tolerant of other cultures. I know nasty people are nasty for their own ignorance and I ignore them", said Phuntsog.

A Buddhist believes that if they are tolerant they will be reborn as a beautiful person, said Phuntsog.

"Tibetans will go to any extreme for the welfare of their family. It is how they [Tibetans] stay together," said Phuntsog.

"It is more important [to the Tibetans] to benefit others first. Maybe this resulted in our loss [of Tibet]", said Phuntsog. Tibet is not an individualized society, said Phuntsog.

"Since the loss of our country [Tibet], polygamy has ceased to be of importance. It [polygamy] used to maintain [family] bonding", said Phuntsog.

"The only way to attain peace is to first disarm ourselves of ignorance, hatred and isolation from the world", said Phuntsog.

"I am confident we [Tibetans] will regain freedom. There is no way the Chinese can stay [in Tibet] forever", said Phuntsog.

The democratic movement is moving across Europe and Asia and "the next one [country to fall] is going to be China", said Phuntsog.

"When Tibet is free, come and visit us", he said.

Math anxiety workshops counsel, reduce stress

Test-taking part of students' fears

By MICHELLE ROBBINS
Collegian Correspondent

Sixty-five percent of the majors at UMass require or recommend math courses in order to satisfy the major. Many people have an anxiety about math.

While many people have anxiety about math, more than half the majors they choose at the University of Massachusetts will require or recommend them to take a math course.

This is the reason math professor Doris Stockton and counseling psychologist Donald Banks said they "saw a need" for providing Math Anxiety Reduction Workshops at the beginning of every semester.

The next workshop is scheduled for September 30, from 4:30 to 6:00 p.m., in room 1634 Lederle Graduate Research Tower. It will focus on test anxiety, said Banks.

Banks said the students all wished to remain anonymous.

People attend these workshops for many different reasons. One student said, "My anxiety started in sixth grade with fractions. Fractions freak me out."

Another student who had already attended a workshop said, "I was feeling anxious again because I was not keeping up [with the class]."

One engineering student from Korea said, "I like math, but I had to focus on English when I moved here five years ago. Now I have a hard time solving problems."

The workshop features a film titled "Math Anxiety: We Beat It, So Can You", created by Jean Smith, a former colleague of Stockton.

The film focuses on students who overcame their fear of math and how it changed their lives.

One student said, "Great film. [There is] so much focus on 'this is where life is [career wise]'. I'm going to change my own way of thinking [about math]."

Another student said, "I identified with the film a lot. I was a retail buyer and I know not learning any math can interfere with your life."

Laurel Mayhew, a teaching assistant, stressed that "Students have to try. Come to office hours and don't be afraid that you're not going to get it [the math problems]."

Stockton and Banks have held the programs for high school and junior high school students, inner city students and their teachers, as well as UMass students.

Stockton, who received her doctorate from Brown University, said, "One year a girl from a prep school came to the workshop in a limousine."

Stockton said, "We've been doing the workshops for 10 years and have had many happy endings. Quite often many people are just placed in the wrong level."

Caller ID sparks debate in states

By JONATHAN YENKIN
Associated Press

BOSTON — The phone company calls it a "peephole" that would give customers an idea who might be calling them.

The technology, known as Caller ID, has sparked debate in several states and could soon become available in Massachusetts.

New England Telephone Co. promotes the service as a weapon against harrassing calls while giving people the option of protecting their phone numbers from public view. But some consumer advocates say the company's safefuards for privacy are too inconvenient.

"Why should consumers have to go the extra mile to protect their privacy?" said Rachel Sagan, consumer program director for the Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group.

The state Department of Public Utilities is expected to decide in a couple of weeks whether New England Telephone can sell Caller ID and several other services to customers.

The "peephole" reflects a wave of new technology that has swept into phone systems as telephone companies seek more revenue while facing increased

CONTINUED ON PAGE 6

Collegian photo by Matt Kahn

Amherst volunteer fireman using a deck cannon

Student Force fighting fires

By MARK PRESTON
Collegian staff

The risk of fire is an ever-present danger, but students at the University of Massachusetts can take solace in the fact UMass has the only Student Force fire department in the Northeast, and one of the few in the United States.

The Student Force is a dedicated group of 14 men and one woman who risk their lives every day to keep the town of Amherst and its surrounding communities free from the perils of fire.

Engine Company No. 3, otherwise known as the Student Force, works in cooperation with the Amherst Fire Department to achieve this goal.

The program, which was started in the early 50s, was initially affiliated with UMass. In 1960 the town of Amherst took control of it and incorporated it into its own firefighting program.

The Student Force responds to an average of 70 calls a semester, which range form brush fires to house fires.

Lt. Patrick O'Brien said students often misunderstand the role of the force.

"There is a big misconception on campus that the Student Force is nothing more than a cleanup crew for the Amherst Fire Department," O'Brien said. "But in fact we fight the fires alongside the permanent and call force."

All members of the Student Force are volunteers. They receive no compensation for their time or efforts. The only benefit they receive is that eight of them are allowed to live at the North Fire House.

Approximately one-third of the Student Force will go on to firefighting careers after they graduate. In fact, Student Force Captain Paul Rhude will become a member of the permanent Amherst firefighting force in January.

However, most will venture off into different fields when they graduate.

"Their is no set reason why we all decided to join the Student Force — everybody had different reasons," said pump operator Mickey Ross.

Every night while school is in session a

Enjoy a delicious meal ... and take advantage of a special offer!

COUPON

Order one lunch at the regular price and receive the second luncheon entree at half-price.

OFFERS EXPIRES 10/18/91
COUPON NOT VALID WITH ANY OTHER DISCOUNT

Lunch served Monday through Friday,
11:30 am-2:00 pm
Telephone: 545-3216
Major Credit Cards Accepted
Validated Parking in Attached Garage
Casual Dress

Top of the Campus Restaurant & Lounge

11th FLOOR • LINCOLN CAMPUS CENTER
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST

Brittany Manor

(413) 256 - 8534
Two Bedroom Apartments
AVAILABLE

LIMITED TIME ONLY
Two Bedroom Apartments
AVAILABLE NOW!

$399 PER MONTH
Rent includes heat and hot water
NO EXPENSIVE HEATING BILLS
HURRY!

NO SECURITY OR FINAL MONTH RENT REQUIRED AT THIS TIME

Fully Equipped Kitchen Including Disposal • On The Five College Bus Route • Oversized Bathrooms • Large Dinning Area • Storm Windows • Wall To Wall Carpeting • Large Livingroom w/ Ceiling To Floor Windows • Dead-bolt Security Locks • Cable Television Available

ACT NOW
$100.00 REWARD
If you know of a friend who is apartment hunting, send them to us with this form. If they qualify and rent our apartment you will receive.....
$100.00 REWARD

My name _____ I recomend _____
Address _____ Name _____
Tel # _____ Address _____
Tel # _____

UNIVERSITY STORE
CAMPUS CENTER FOOD SERVICE
CAMPUS CENTER BOARD OF GOVERNORS

Presents

FREE FOOD
AND BEVERAGES!
"TEST DRIVE" IBM
PERSONAL COMPUTERS!
PRODUCT
DEMONSTRATIONS,
FREE SAMPLES,
GAMES,
ENTERTAINMENT!

CAMPUS FEST

DATE: October 1 & 2
TIME: 10 AM - 4 PM
PLACE: Student Union South Lawn

FEATURING: ■ IBM ■ CAMAY ■ SUNSHINE BISCUITS ■ AMERICAN EXPRESS ■ INTROSPECT ■ OBSESSION ■ NEWSWEEK ■ OLD SPICE ■ COLUMBIA HOUSE ■ PRINGLES ■ CAMPUS CONNECTION ■ SCHICK ■ MCI ■ STANLEY H. KAPLAN ■ JOSTENS

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions on this page are those of the individual writer or cartoonist, and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian or the University unless otherwise noted.

Conviction and a loud voice cannot stand by themselves

Gayle Long

You really have to wonder about happy people.

I mean, who exactly in this messed-up world is happy? And was IS happy?

I mean, everyone is a pessimist. Did you see the guy outside the Student Union last week? He was standing there holding a cross (like the one Christ was crucified on in miniature form).

Behind him was a woman, blonde, plain, wearing a kerchief on her head. She was holding a sign which read something to the effect that everyone was already condemned and straight on their way to eternal damnation.

All the while the man screamed at the students walking by —

You think you're cool, he said. You love to get drunk, smoke pot, have sex, etc. etc.

He continued — You think you know everything, you have a degree and will get a job and make money and be greedy and superficial.

WOW.

Who is this man? I was sincerely afraid to approach him and ask him some questions. There are some things I really want to know.

One — If this man is Christian, he knows the adage — take the plank out of your own eye before removing the speck from your brother's.

Now, obviously, this man must not have a single sin on his soul — except for bringing false witness (the eighth commandment) against the 19,000 or so neighbors which he (I don't think) knows from a hole in the wall.

How does he know we are all a bunch of horny, drunk, gluttonous, irresponsible people? He doesn't.

Talk about jumping to conclusions.

Two — Whatever happened to God is the judge of His people and no man can judge who is right and who is wrong?

I mean, maybe God thinks this bonehead screaming at everyone is wrong and we, the "experimenting" knowledge-seekers are right. How can he know if he is right?

What ever happened to being humble and knowing in your own heart and mind you are serving God in your own way?

Well, whatever the case, it seems this man is pretty judgemental and I don't think it's fair that others have to listen to him.

Of course, there's this stupid little thing called the First Amendment (one of us journalist's favorite things) which lets him say these things, wherever and whenever he wants.

He wasn't inciting riot and he wasn't threatening anyone — he was just telling them "how it is." But, in case he's forgotten, the people listening have the ability to walk away. Ignore him. Think he's a crazed lunatic.

So, for the man who thinks he's sending out a message to the students of the University of Massachusetts, I have one thing to say:

You get more flies with honey than vinegar. Pissing people off means the only God's creatures hearing you are the ducks on the pond and the sea gulls overhead. And they're not interested.

Gayle Long is a Collegian columnist

Hunting needed to limit deer population

We the undersigned dispute the column written by Shawn McDonnell in the Sept. 25 editorial section ("Guns don't kill, the dismembered animal fairy does). We suggest that before Mr. McDonnell writes any additional columns, naively insulting other members of this community, he takes time to gather some factual evidence on the subject on which he is writing.

Contrary to his claim that New England does not have any cases of wildlife overpopulation, many areas have overwhelming evidence of this situation, particularly in the case of area deer herds. A quick trip to the Quabbin Reservoir will reveal extensive damage from deer overbrowsing. In some areas every edible green thing within reachof the deer is absent. These conditions cause severe damage to the health of the forest ecosystem which in turn has a negative effect on other wildlife species.

The species which ultimately suffer the most are the deer themselves. In conditions where suitable habitat is decreasing and natural predators are absent, deer populations will grow until their numbers far exceed the available amount of food resources. This leads to starvation, disease, and ultimately death for the deer. That is why carefully regulated hunting seasons are so important, not only as a source of recreation but as the primary economically and ecologically sound method of wildlife management.

The insensitive "killers" and "drunken gunsmen" Mr. McDonnell describes refer to the minute percentage of hunters who choose to abuse their privileges. In reality, the majority of hunters are responsible sportsmen with a great respect for nature.

Mr. McDonnell, to have an ethical objection to hunting is understandable. Convincing others of your position by use of emotional sensationalism and stereotypical statements is hard to take seriously.

Peggy Shea Hadley

Note: 45 UMass students signed this letter

Magic of childrens' stories lives on even when writers' leave our world

Darienne Hosley

Childhood heroes aren't supposed to die.

People who understand and remember that there is magic in the world are supposed to live forever. In the land of make-believe, there is no such thing as a bad ending. Things don't end, but, if they must, everything is always happy ever after.

My first Dr. Seuss story was And to Think That I Saw It on Mulberry Street. I loved that book - what kid couldn't? It rambled on, an old man and a cart growing, thanks to a zany imagination, into a stupendous parade of the weird and unusual. I knew the little boy's secret - many of the stories I told grew in a similar fashion.

When I heard of Theodor Seuss Geisel's death Wednesday night, I didn't quite believe it. I put my old Dr. Seuss record on the turntable ("Bartholomew and the Oobleck," "Green Eggs and Ham," and other classics) and didn't really think about it. It wasn't until the weekend that it hit me - the people who wrote the stories and the songs and the movies and the cartoons of my childhood are getting old. Some are dying.

The death of Jim Henson a year and a half ago was hard to take - it hurt like a fist to the stomach. These childhood heroes are more than mere men and women - they're the makers of dream lands. The loss of Jim Henson meant the risk of losing Kermit and Ernie and Sesame Street and the Muppets and the Fraggles. Whole worlds were endangered.

Dr. Seuss' world was ridiculous. Unbelievable. Loony. It was also a cleverly disguised lesson in human nature. When I was very young, his stories were simply hilarious entertainment. As I grew older, I began to recognize the darker, serious, scarier side of Dr. Seuss' fables.

The Lorax, at first the tale of a magical land threatened by an evil invader, became a lesson on man's selfish destruction of the environment he depends on.

The Sneetches was a silly story about silly creatures doing silly things with stars on their stomachs. It became a frightening example of the dangers of the "who's better than who" game.

People like Dr. Seuss were more successful than most schoolteachers because they snuck the lesson in amidst whirling, giddy lunacy. Caught up in Seuss' tongue twisters and mind benders, few kids are aware that a lesson is subtly working on their minds.

I always look through the children's literature at the bookstore. There are many new names, new stories on the shelves to delight children. I flip through them, but it's the classic books that make me laugh the most. Each book - be it A.A. Milne, Maurice Sendak, Eric Carle, Shel Silverstein, or Dr. Seuss - brings back my earliest and most colorful memories.

Holding one of those books in my hands, I'm sitting in a giant armchair as my mother reads to me the adventures of Pooh Bear. I'm sprawled on my bed as Max returns from the land of the wild things to a hot meal left by his mom. I'm in a school auditorium as a famous author draws a picture of the very hungry caterpillar, just for me. I'm romping through a strange land of funny-shaped buildings, truffula trees, grinches, egg-hatching elephants, and sock-wearing foxes.

I haven't seen any replacements for these childhood heroes yet. There are new children's books every day, but none of them have the same kind of magic for me. I wish I could just say that no one knows how to write a good children's story anymore, but I'm afraid there's a more frightening explanation: I'm turning into a grown-up.

When the realities of the adult world press in on me, I pull out my favorite books. As Dr. Seuss wrote in his last book, Oh, the Places You'll Go!, "All Alone! Whether you like it or not, Alone is something you'll be quite a lot." Yet when I return to the worlds I escaped to years ago, the creatures and dreams are still there to remind me that there is magic in the world - you just have to look for it. There is such a thing as immortality.

Darienne Hosley is a Collegian columnist

GEO has reason to be angry over health fee increases

On Wednesday, Sept. 25, a rally about the health the health care issue at UMass, sponsored by the Graduate Employee Organization (GEO), was held at the top of the ramp leading into Whitmore. Our protest was well-attended despite the crappy weather, and hopefully the sound of our voices as we marched through Whitmore yelling, "Don't get sick unless you're rich," will echo long and loud in the ears and little brains of the Whitmore Administration in the days and weeks to come. What's more important is that the display of anger and frustration at Wednesday's rally raucously rumble and revebrate right into the university and statehouse treasuries.

The primary issue GEO is fighting for right now, along with workplace fairness and official recognition as a union (currently the administration sees us a bunch of sniveling youngsters, not a real union of genuinely pissed-off union workers), is the little matter of health-fee waiver for all grad employees. It's a legitimate demand. Why?

In 1981, when a single student at this most splendid campus paid $221 in health fees. In 1991 the same fee for a student at UMass, shot up to $880. That's an increase of 400 percent! God knows my wages haven't seen a parallel expansion. The data for families is much worse. It now costs a family over $2,000 per year to maintain barely adequate health insurance at UMass, and with the introduction of new co-payments due to administrative "restructuring" of the UMass health system, it's pretty clear that quality health care is only a flush of the toilet away from vanishing for good. What happens if you're a grad student, trying to subsist on a stipend of $6,000 and you have a child? You either have money from some other source, or it's debt-trap city at the financial aid office.

And we all know what it means when the higher-ups start talking about "restructuring." Details of these new co-payments are in the September 23 and 26 issues of the Collegian. Decide for yourself how "fair" they are and whether I can still be angry in spite of the UHS director's confession that "he regrets" the increase. Yes, I regret it too, but I don't feel I'm helpless to change the situation (one difference between him and me). That, after all, is what a union is for: to make change that benefits workers, and to use the strike weapon if need be. That's also why the administrators here, regardless of their liberal "we'll-do-all-we-can-you-poor-starving-student" attitude, are just a bit nervous.

With that said, it's also true that health care is not an issue confined only to GEO and to all union workers on this campus, bastion of truth and justice. It's a nationwide problem. All across the country employers are trying to shift health care costs onto the backs of workers by reducing benefits, increasing co-payments, and/or taking money out of wage increases. Indeed, according to the AFL-CIO, 80 percent of all strikes last year broke out precisely because of health-care gouging employers. Sound familiar? This is exactly - no ifs, ands, or buts - what's happening to GEO members right now, on this campus. Administrative insensitivity, buck-passing, and anti-democratic actions intended to increase our fees without our say-so all combine to produce a group of people with a damn good reason to be angry. You say the University and the Commonwealth "don't have the money?" I have one reply: neither do I.

To all students and workers on campus who aren't GEO members: please support us in our struggle to keep UMass a decent place to work, study, and even get sick! To all present GEO members and grad student employees who should be members: come to the GEO membership meeting on Tuesday, October 1, at 6 p.m., Campus Center Auditorium. Be there! Exercise your right to make your voice heard, and be a part of winning back some control over your work lives and your dignity. After all, in unity there IS strength.

Roger Long
Amherst

If you're a Collegian columnist or you'd very much like to be one, and you're reading this before 3:30 this afternoon, there's something you should know about. It's the Collegian columnist meeting, to be held in our very own office at 113 Campus Center at 3:30 p.m. today. Stop on down and be a part of it all.

■ phones

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

competition from other providers.

Aside from Caller ID, New England Telephone hopes to offer three other services:

— Repeat dialing, which automatically checks and re-dials a busy number for up to 30 minutes.

— Call return, which allows a customer to return the last incoming call, whether it was answered or not.

— Call trace, enabling a customer to initiate a trace of an annoying call more easily than under the current system.

The monthly rates for the proposed services will range from $4.95 to $1.50. They would be offered in 32 communities, mostly in eastern Massachusetts, but would eventually spread across the state.

Caller ID, which displays the number of the person placing the call, has attracted wide scrutiny.

The Federal Communications Commission last week proposed that customers have limited ability to block the service. In Pennsylvania, a court ruled last year that Caller ID violates the state's wiretap law.

■ returning students

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

Still, at UMass, older students are a visible minority. Herman Hampton of Northampton has just enrolled as a member of the class of 1995 at the age of thirty-nine. Hampton has been going to UMass part-time since 1972, but now, with the help of a full scholarship, he is a University Without Walls student.

"My lifestyle, I believe, has prompted this decision," Hampton, who describes himself as a semi-professional musician, said.

"It was much easier for me to let go of whatever I was doing and dedicate all my time to school. I mean, some older students still have to work full time, which makes it so difficult," Hampton said.

Hampton's activities between the time he graduated from high school until now have been ample: he had been a music coordinator at summer camps in Northampton, started a music program at the Hampshire County House Of Correction, was a head-teacher at an after-school program in Amherst, and taught at a Puerto Rican cultural center in Hartford.

He said he feels especially lucky because University Without Walls awards credits for life experience outside of academia, for which he's received a semester's worth.

While our economy has hindered some adults from returning to college, Herman Hampton could think of no better time.

"I would still be teaching and playing music if I wasn't here. . . that's exactly what I'm doing at UMass," he said. "But now that the direction I want to go in is more refined, this degree will help me to get the better paying, more secure jobs."

■ fire fighters

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

beeping sound and see a classmate dash for the door. More than likely that person is a member of the Student Force and is responding to a call.

Although they have not been put in the situation of having to save a life, they are all extensively trained to do so.

The Student force consists of 14 males who attend UMass and 1 female who attends Hampshire College. Each member must maintain a G.P.A. of 2.5 to remain on the Force.

Every spring, the force holds a recruitment drive. The Student Force reviews applicants by evaluating their physical condition, ability to handle school and other activities, leadership ability, and interest in firefighting and emergency services.

"People are inquisitive about the beepers that each Student Force member carries at all times," O'Brien said. "It is hard to explain to them that you are a fire fighter, so instead we usually lie and make up a story."

Although parents and relatives are constantly anxious about the fate of their loved ones, each member of the Student

Student Specials(Sept.-Dec.)

Nautilus (Aerobics included) $119
Racquetball
(Court time included) $119
Tennis (Plus court time) $119
All Club (All of the Above) $189

Social lounge, Big Screen TV, Ping-Pong Available To All!

• Pro-Shop
• Snack-Bar with Liquor License

WINNER'S ATHLETIC CLUB

549-4545

Route 116, Sunderland Across From Bubs BBQ

FINANCIAL AID
FOR
COLLEGE FRESHMEN AND SOPHMORES

There is approximately $4,000,000,000 in financial assistance available to students annually and much of it goes unused because students don't know it's there.

We're FINANCIAL FINDERS. We've researched thousands of sources of financial aid, and compiled the results into a vast data bank.

When you complete a detailed FINANCIAL FINDERS STUDENT DATA FORM, our computers go to work matching your background and interests with the most compatible sources of financial assistance available.

FINANCIAL FINDERS will find you 6 to 25 sources of financial aid other than state or federal sources. But if we cannot, your processing fee will be refunded, along with any sources we did find for you.

The processing fee is $69, but we are so confident you will not be disappointed that if you do not receive at least this much in financial aid in one year, your fee will be refunded.

Write today for a FINANCIAL FINDERS STUDENT DATA FORM

FINANCIAL FINDERS
25 EDGEHILL PLACE
AMHERST, MA 01002

AIM HIGH

Clinical Psychologists Dieticians

Plan a future that soars.

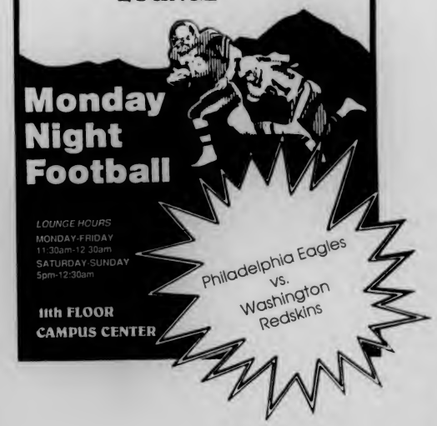
Take your science-related degree into the Air Force, and become an officer in the Biomedical Sciences Corps. You'll learn more, you'll grow faster–you'll work with other dedicated professionals in a quality environment where your contributions are needed.

In short, you'll gain more of everything that matters most to you. You and the Air Force. Launch now–call

USAF HEALTH PROFESSIONS
TOLL FREE
1-800-423-USAF

AIR FORCE

TOP of the CAMPUS LOUNGE



THE FIVE COLLEGE PROGRAM
IN PEACE & WORLD SECURITY STUDIES
presents

PAWSS

BEYOND DESERT STORM:
U.S. FOREIGN POLICY IN THE 1990's

A Lecture by:
ANTONIA CHAYES, Endispute, Inc.

Monday, September 30th, 8:00pm
Converse Hall, Amherst

This event is free, open to the public, and wheelchair accessible.
For more information call PAWSS at 549-4600, ext. 519.

STEINBECK
COLLISION REPAIR
&
AUTOBODY
53 S. Prospect St. Amherst Center

Imports & other unibody vehicles are our specialty

Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass replacement

REMEMBER

It s your car and your choice of repair facilities
256-8157 256-1385
Shop Reg #RS1212

Black Affairs

Just a Warning

The violence that erupted in Brooklyn New York a few weeks ago is just a preview of what could happen if a change doesn't occur in this nation soon.

The riots were more than just a result of anger at this kind of situation, African-Americans are used to being wronged and disrespected in this country.

The primary reason for these riots was for the fact that African- Americans are fed up with the accumulation of such incidents. Yusef Hawkins, Rodney King, Tawana Brawleys, and every incident across this nation, which was sparked by the hatred against the African-American race.

African-Americans are also fed up with a president who finds it amusing to play games with our history, by putting a man such as Clarence Thomas before up for nomination for the supreme court.

African-Americans are also fed up with a president who is willing to to give billions of dollars to Russia, while refusing to acknowledge the homeless here in America.

No, the riots were not African-Americans acting "Niggerish", as the media would like you to believe. It was African-Americans sending a warning to let European Americans know that we are not going to peacefully allow this nation to continue the constant physical, and mental abuse they have brought on our people.

Douglas Greer

One way or another, this nation is going to deal with the racism, despair, and hoplessness that the system has given birth to.

Do not be fooled, we are no longer living in the 60s, the riots of today are not the riots of yesterday. If another riot occurs because of injustices to African-Americans, there might not be any force on this whole "white" earth to stop it.

Yo What's Up

Tuesday October 1

The Black Mass Communications Project will be holding their general body meeting at 7:00 p.m.. For information call 545-2426.

Wednesday October 2

"Reports in Color" with James A. Jemison, at 6:00 p.m.

Friday October 4

The play Malcolm X "A play about our hero" by Titus Walker performed by Ujamaa Black Theater, 7:30 p.m. Springfield College Fuller Arts Center. Tickets $3 for senior citizens, children,$5 for general admission.

Saturday October 5

"Camp Logan", a play by Celeste Bedford Walker will be performed at 8:00 p.m. in the Bowker Auditorium. Tickets are $3 for students and senior citizens, and $5 for the general public.

Black and Jewish Tensions

Several weeks ago, student groups debated more than five hours whether African-American activist Kwame Ture, known previously as Stokely Carmicheal, should be invited to speak at the University of Colorado.

Ture's statements critical of Israel were characterized as "anti-Semitic" by Jewish students and advisors,who insisted that he should not receive University funds. But the debate between Black and Jewish students was symbolic of the tensions which now divide both groups across the country.

Earlier this summer, a controversy was sparked by Professor Leonard Jeffries, chairperson of the African-American studies department at New Yorks City College. In a public address at the Empire State Black Arts and Cultural Festival in Albany, Jefferies asserted that Blacks were the victims of a conspiracy "planned and plotted" by people called "Greenberg and Weisberb and Trigliani."

Public officials and educators condemed Jefferies's remarks as anti-Semitic, and New York Senator Daniel P. Moynihan called for his resignation. Conversely, many blacks rallied behind Jefferies, and argued that attacks against him were racially motivated.

The next firestorm erupted in Brooklyn's Crown Heights neighborhood, where Blacks and Hasidic Jews lived in uneasy coexistence. One one August evening, Yosef Lifsh, an Hasidic Jew, lost control of his automobile and smashed into several Black children on the sidewalk, killing one seven-year-old youth. Witnesses reported to police that Lifsh had run a red light and was speeding. Others spread the rumor that he appeared to have been drinking.

Outraged, hundreds of young Blacks took to the streets, hurling rocks and bottles at police and Jewish residents. Apparently in retaliation, a visiting Jewish scholar from Australia was killed.

For many African -Americans, both deaths were seen as homicides. For the Jewish community and most Whites, the deaths were perceived as being entirely different, the first a regrettable accident and the second deliberate murder.

Many Black activist were troubled when attorney Barry Slotnick, who had previously represented subway murderer Bernard H. Goetz, stepped forward as a spokesperson for Lifsh. When Brooklyn District Attorney Charles Hynes announced that no charges of criminally-negligent homicide would be filed against Lifsh, the grief and resentment of thousands of Blacks turned into deep outrage.

Dr. Manning Marble

Instead of understanding the origins of Black anger and violence,linked to poverty and a sense of powerlessness, many whites leaped to the conclusion that anti-Semitism and pro-violence sentiments had acquired a mass base of support among the majority of Blacks. Few White commentators were more vehement on this erroneous theme than New York Times columnist A.M. Rosenthal. Blaming the recent upsurgence of racial violence on "the Black political marauders who goad mobs into the streets against Jews," Rosenthal asserted that their "strategy is to blow up all political and emotional bridges between Blacks and non-Blacks."

Rosenthal linked the Crown Heights incident with the earlier Jefferies controversy, which was characterized as "weirdo speeches of a Jew-baiting professor on the public payroll and by bigotry's apologist, supporters and conveyor belts in the Black press and radio."

Rosenthal offered his own self-fulfilling prophesy and warning to New York mayor David Dinkins and other Black elected officials, wondering aloud whether "any Black will be chosen for mayor for a long time", because "so many non-Blacks have been antagonized."

Nowhere in Rosenthal's emotional diatribe was the recognition that many Black politicians, and especially Dinkins, had taken a principled, public stance against anti-semitism throughout their careers, and to blame them for the actions of a mall minority was in effect, a concession to the worst form of racist bigotry. nowhere in this not to subtle linkage to Dinkins with Jefferies was the point made that Jewish political behavior in recent years has grown more conservative ideologically, and specifically opposed to Blacks interests on such issues as affirmative action.

The real roots of Black-Jewish tensions cannot be attributed to Louis Farrakhan, Jefferies, the Crown Heights incident, or the much publicized "anti-semitism" in the Black community. The bridges of dialogue between the two groups were torched by other more influential events. For example, there has been a gradual shift in political sympathies from Israel to the Palestinians among most of Black America's leaders and activist.

Geographically, many middle-to-upper class Jewish-Americans have moved from central cities to the affluent suburbs in the past 30 years, and in the process removed themselves from the problems and plight of urban minorities. Politically, although Jews are still far more "Liberal" in their electoral behavior than most Whites, there has been a racial polarization in this group as well.

Blacks like Dinkins or Chicago's late mayor Harold Washington, who consistently supported Jewish policy interest, didn't receive a majority of Jewish votes at election time.

Finally, the Jewish leadership's vehement opposition to Jesse Jackson's presidential candidacies alienated Blacks.

In this post-Cold war era, a Black-Jewish dialogue is more crucial now than ever before. As conservatives and racial reactionaries "lose" their traditional enemy, Communism, they will increasingly fall back to attacks against their historical "scapegoats"— racial and ethnic minorities.

Blacks and Jews have a pressing self-interest to address the legitimate differences which have separated them, and initiate a dialogue which can build genuine understanding.

Dr. Manning Marble is a Professor at the University of Colorado in Boulder

A Sobb Story

First let start off by sending a stupid shout out to all new and veteran students alike. I hope everyone had an enjoyable summer and that you are back in one piece and ready to get down to the matter at hand.

Now I am going to get to the real reason for this editorial. This is directed at some Brother, and Sisters (mostly freshman) at the University of Massachusetts

The topic is "Attitude". Why is it that some students of color, think that they are all that? Walking around with their noses in the air thinking that their shit doesn't stink.

There is not one person on this campus who gets that much "Dap".

It is understandable that some of the freshman and new students do not know too many people, and they have entered the University with a "Urban Mentality", and you all know which attitude I am referring to, the "I don't know you and you don't know me and don't say shit to me, that's how I'm livin" attitude.

So much for the sobb story. Well let me tell you that your style of livin is "Booty".

The population of students of color on this campus is not that diesel and ultimately you will need someone's help.

Jeff Lawrence

You will learn from the way in which the University handles it's racial problems that you will need help, and need it soon.

So when you see another Sister, or Brother on this campus, you do not have to stop and have a meaningful conversation, however a simple "Wat up" or "How are you doing " would be fine.

Upperclassmen and women should already know this. We should know from past events that the University does not particularly care about us. It is our job to look out for the new students, and show them the ropes, so they won't get lost. Hell, we already have enough lost people on this campus. United we stand divided it's over.

I know many of you will not like what I have just stated, "Oh well it sounds like a personal problem to me, and you'll get over it."

Peace to the "Gods" and all the other groups on this campus.

Brother respect your Sister, and Sisters, respect yourselves.

And all you people with "Jungle Fever" take a Tylenol.

Support The New Africa House, New Africa House support you students of color. Love peace and Hair Grease. 5000 G, Jeff Lawrence.

Jeff Lawrence is a UMass student

Write For Black Affairs

COME DOWN TO 113 CAMPUS CENTER AND SPEAK WITH SONDRA SUTTON

Good- Bye to the late, great Miles Davis

Arts & Living

Israeli poet gives powerful reading of his works

By THOMAS BALES
Collegian Correspondent

Last Thursday, in front of a crowd of about 100 people, Israeli poet Yehuda Amichai read selections from his various works at Smith College in Northampton.

Mr. Amichai, one of Israel's most powerful voices and one of the world's major poets, is currently touring the United States with his family before his son joins the Israeli Army."

Yehuda Amichai was born in Wurzburg, Germany in 1924. At the age of eleven, he emigrated to Palestine with his parents and then later settled in Jerusalem. Amichai served in the British Army in World War II and in the Israeli army during the War of Independence and the Sinai Campaign.

Amichai has published seven books, one of short stories, and two novels. He has also received every major literary award that is given in Israel.

Focusing on his poetry, Amichai discussed the pain of war, the passion of love, as well as his own love for the Israeli people.

Focusing on war, Amichai read from his poem "What Did I Learn in the Wars."

". . .to dig into pillows/featherbeds/the body of a beloved woman/and to yell 'Mama'/when she cannot hear/and to yell 'G-d'/when I don't believe in Him."

Reading from one of his poems on love, he said, "ash dropped on the King David Hotel/the fathers pain stood before us/and an ancient weeping/allowed us to lie together."

In a poem about the Israeli people he read, "Redemption will come when the tourguide says/over there by that arch/ to the left/ to the left and down a little/there is a man who has provided food for his family."

The audience was mesmerized by Amichai's deep, disturbing voice, as it filled the room with an ambience of warmth and closeness. As Amichai exposed his deepest thoughts and feelings through the powerful images of his poetry, there was a mood of quiet respect for his reflection on life and love.

The audience as well as the organizers were very satisfied with what they heard. Rachel Kotok, a student at Smith, was especially appreciative of Amichai. "[Amichai] has a way of being very honest and very clear."

"It's the best reading I've been to in a long time," said Amy Dryansky, also from Smith. Amichai also received praise from one of the event's organizers, Liza Deman, of the Smith College Hillel. She described it as being a very good turnout and was glad to see so many students and non-students, Jews and non-Jews.

In his poem, "What Kind of Person," Amichai describes himself as "mashing good and bad together/for a little taste/ and a little fragrance."

Rabbi Yechiael Lander, the Smith College Hillel Rabbi and School Chaplain said, "I learn from his poetry and from the man. It's really a celebration when he comes."

Latins Anonymous presents skits with wit

By LISA CURTIS
Collegian Staff

This California-based Latino comedy troupe was vibrantly hilarious in their black yuppy-ish blazers as they tried to come to deal with their ethnicity in the fictional self-help group, Latins Anonymous.

This satirical comedy revue, a string of short skits trashing Latin stereotypes brought the packed, racially-mixed crowd to roar with laughter, Thursday Sept. 26 in Bowker Auditorium.

After a six month sell-out run at the Los Angeles Theater Center, Latins Anonymous came to UMass. It was written by the four performers: Luisa Leschin, who grew up in Guatemala as daughter of a president; Armando Molina, who grew up in New York City as the son of Columbian immigrants; Rick Najera, who was raised in an all American, Mexican American home; and Diane Rodriguez, who was at the heart of the Chicano movement.

Najera states in the performance, "the first time I realized I was Mexican was when I asked my mother if I could play with the Mexican kid down the block and she told me if I wanted to play with a Mexican kid,I could stay home and play with myself." He had to stop, he joked, because he was afraid he would go blind.

The New World Theater, founded in 1979, is a program of the Fine Arts Center Office of Third World Programs at the University of Massachusetts. It's goal is to celebrate the unique character and achievements of Blacks, Latinos, Asians, and Native Americans, by bringing these types of shows to campus, as well as producing plays featured by the New World Ensemble, consisting of college students and community members in the Five College community.

When one actor was humorously analyzing White and Latin stereotypes and why these Latin men were drawn to blondes he exclaimed, "What is it with you Aryan cheerleaders?"

During another skit, the actors stood across the stage, in the dark and flicked their individual flashlights on their faces when it was time to speak in a Laugh-In style. One of the men hinted he got more dates with women when he said he was related to Julio Iglesias.

Many stereotypes got their chance to be shot down from Whites to Jews to Blacks to Puerto Ricans to Mexicans to Columbians.

The message: stereotyping is wrong, and the best medicine is laughter.

Diane said on stage she felt being a Chicano was a lot of work because though she was fighting for their cause her authenticity was criticized for she couldn't speak Spanish. (But she could fake it really well.)

The show brought up issues like Latin-Americans who felt they have to hide their identity because they are ashamed and there is dissent and discrimination amongst the different nationalities within the Latin group.

The funny foursome also had good tips. For example, if you'd like to yell out a proper Spanish, "Ay, ay, ay, ay!" just put your hand in the car door and slam it."

Whites were addressed at this meeting as "our Anglo co-dependents."

Some humor between the sexes emerged during the Hermana Petra talk show segment. When a male caller asked her how he could figure out women she replied, "Women get excited about nothing...then they marry him."

During the "Machos of Omaha" where each of the two men tries to out-do the other on the Machismo scale one man struts "I went to a cock fight and didn't bring my rooster. . .Feel that bird."

During the Lolana Aerobics segment, the plump fuschia- and orange-clad aerobics instructor romped out and satirized women's fascination with snagging men. She consoled her audience by saying," If God meant us to be skinny, he would have made us gringas."

Even advertising was a victim to their cutting wit, as they spoofed Obsession by acting out, "Calvino de Kline's Obnoxious," the advertisement. The heroine had "laughter like broken butterflies" and the product was available only at KMart.

Photo Courtesy UMass Fine Arts Center

Latins Anonymous

As it says in the fall newsletter of the of the New World Theater the creators of Latins Anonymous are hoping to become, 'A Latin Monty Python. . .a writing/performing machine. The challenge is to present ourselves like we are, Latins without accents, without stereotypes, and with humor."

The wrap-up scenes nicely tied up the show. Slightly wounded egos were picked up off the floor. This show may have been a sort of shock treatment for those socially narrow-minded folks trapped in the audience. The similarities and contrasts written by Najera, described the differences this way, "When Mexicans hang out with Mexicans, it's a gang. When Americans hang out with Americans, it's a Massachusetts fraternity."

The signs of a Latina becoming too white are blue contact lenses, slim fast and Wonder Bread because "A Mayan is a terrible thing to waste."

The players were rewarded with well deserved standing ovations (and t-shirts) and the audience was rewarded with a trite but true statement, "Just be who you are."

Art Steele and improvisational friends rock the Hatch

By KLAUS GAUGER
Collegian Correspondent

The crowd was small last Wednesday at The Hatch when blues singer and guitarist Art Steele and his accompanists stepped onto the stage, opening a so-called "Blues Improvisation Nite", where, in the middle set, they gave young students a chance to show their talent as guest musicians.

Unfortunately, most students seem to prefer blowing their brains out listening to commercial hard rock music in their overcrowded dorms to giving an ear to a blues band and to some fellow students trying to prove their abilities.

The musicians did not care too much about the empty hall and from the very first moment The Art Steele Blues Band proved to be a professional group by playing in correct tempo, without any shakings; generating a round, heavy, steaming and powerful sound.

Their song selection was a mixture of traditional and more modern blues styles, with audible influences including Grover Washington, Spyro Gyra, The Commodores and the older maestros like B.B. King, Muddy Waters, Elmore James and John Lee Hooker.

Main soloist and tenor saxophonist Greg Lent delighted the audience with his big, swinging tone and a slightly harsh, growling approach typical of the followers of the Coleman Hawkins school — like Dexter Gordon and Sonny Rollins. He has an ability to build up solos with suspense. He created extended, floating, circulating lines combined with down-to-earth blues licks which converged in rhythmically repeated, frantic high notes.

Lent's playing incorporated the best traditions of the classical R and B and swing styles. On baritone saxophone he provided the band with a sturdy rhythmical and harmonical support.

Second soloist and pianist Shelton Laster demonstrated quick fingerings and lines and aptly mastered all chord changes. However, he let himself be carried away much too often by the technical possibilities of his synthesizer — boasting sound orgies he would have been wise to avoid.

Evidence of a very different musical disposition was given by the two other members of the rhythm group. Drummer Neil Zagorin is an extremely straight-forward player, hitting on the beat with the accuracy of a metronome.

Bass player Bob Wrizinski on the other hand is more on the understating side. He made little use of ostentatious, funky slap licks and mainly limited himself to providing the band with solid bass lines and a pulsating background. However, the two or three solos he played were full of beautiful, well considered phrases.

Last, but not least, lead singer and guitarist, Art Steele must be mentioned: his voice is clear, agreeable and has a youthful, somewhat boyish sound. His guitar sound is blues-oriented — basic, but very warm and vibrant.

Steele is clearly at his best in slow blues ballads, where personality and the will to express one's self is more important than mere technical capacities.

The five musicians all together formed a close unit and geared into full steam after the first thirty minutes. It was particularly the jumping rock-n-roll beats which fitted best with the band's keen, enthusiastic and unintellectual character. Less convincing were the songs using Latino beats, which came out somewhat clumsy, without swing, and sounded especially tinny and hollow when Laster used the steel-drum voice of his synthesizer.

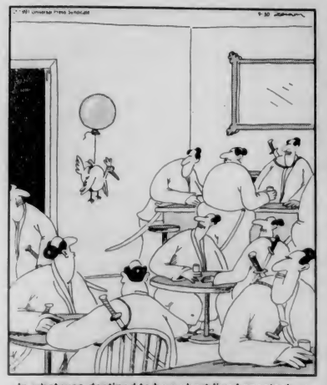
The guest musicians were, of course, anticipated with some suspense. You never know what kind of people will show up. Anything is possible — from near-genius down to the ridiculous.

This time it was a group of only four or five people who dared to step onto the stage, and they were all exceedingly good players on guitar and drums, as well as harmonica.

It would have been hard to determine which of the musicians were the regular band members and who were the guest musicians.

The only thing left to be said is this reviewer is looking forward to some undergraduates turning off their hard rock strained stereos and stopping in at some of the coming blues concerts at The Hatch.

THE FAR SIDE
By GARY LARSON

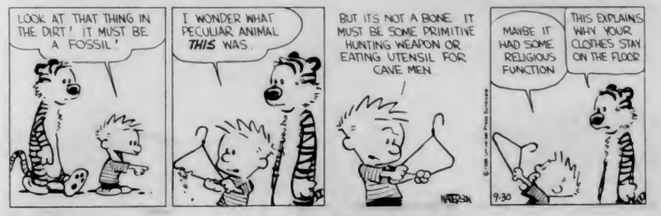


In what was destined to be a short-lived spectacle, a chicken, suspended by a balloon, floated through the Samurai bar's doorway.

DOONESBURY
By GARRY TRUDEAU

...AND SEND ME ANOTHER CASE OF CHIVAS...
HONEY!
GOOD NEWS! BUSH IS BACK IN THE SADDLE! THE JETS ARE IN THE AIR! HAPPY DAYS ARE HERE AGAIN!
HOLD ON, AHMAD...
WITHIN WEEKS, THIS PLACE IS GOING TO BE A MOB SCENE! PILOTS! RANGERS! GROUND CREWS! G-2's! LOBHEADS! RELIEF WORKERS! REFUGEES! BURN VICTIMS!
I WANT THIS CLUB PUT ON A WARTIME FOOTING!
BETTER MAKE THAT TEN CASES...

CALVIN AND HOBBES
By BILL WATTERSON



LOOK AT THAT THING IN THE DIRT! IT MUST BE A FOSSIL!
I WONDER WHAT PECULIAR ANIMAL THIS WAS.
BUT IT'S NOT A BONE. IT MUST BE SOME PRIMITIVE HUNTING WEAPON OR EATING UTENSIL FOR CAVE MEN.
MAYBE IT HAD SOME RELIGIOUS FUNCTION
THIS EXPLAINS WHY YOUR CLOTHES STAY ON THE FLOOR

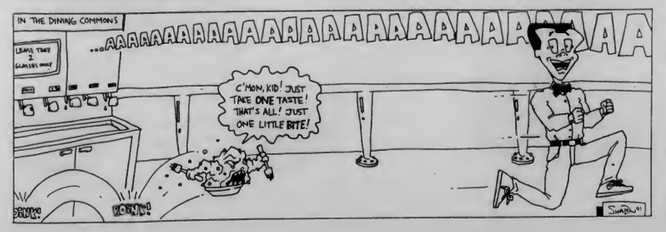
TANGELO PIE
By TIM SNIFFEN

Gabriel? Our son who hasn't called for two years?
It's me, Mom!
I wanted to give you the update! My academic floundering is over, and I'm now the President of a large Supermarket!
For money?
For large amounts of money, in fact.
Norman, come kick me in the head! Our son's successful!
Im serious, Mom really.

CAST OF THOUSANDS
By BARRY DEUTSCH

A DAY IN THE LIFE OF A BUSY R.A...
I MEAN, I HAD ONLY UNPACKED MY ACT-UP POSTER, AND HE BEGAN SCREAMING ABOUT MY "HOMOSEXUAL PARAPHANALIA."
STEPHEN ALREADY KNEW THAT YOU'RE GAY?
YEP. WHAT'S STRANGE IS, HE DIDN'T SAY A WORD WHEN I UNPACKED THE DILDOS AND CODKRINGS.
UM...WELL, I CAN SEE HOW ALL THAT STUFF MIGHT MAKE-
NOT TO MENTION MY LIFE-SIZED MODEL OF JOEY STEFANO'S PENIS AND "STICKY," MY PET GERBIL (RECLAIMED, OF COURSE)
SANDY, YOU'RE-
...YOU'RE PUTTING ME ON
OF COURSE I AM. STILL, I REALLY THINK YOU OUGHT TO TALK TO HIM.

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED
By SHADOW



Quote of the Day

He was an altar boy because he was so fond of the wine
—Overheard

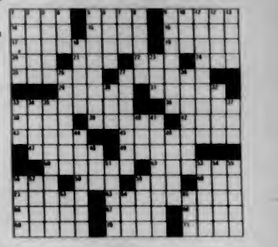
DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHAEL JAFFE

ACROSS
1 Dub
5 Key letter
9 Copied Bossie
14 Author Ludwig
15 Of hearing
16 Sarcasm
17 Tireless one
19 Hamlicar — father of Hannibal
20 Due plus uno
21 Hawaiian liquor
22 Reine's mate
24 Howard or Kercheval
25 Proper
27 "Marriage is not — roses," Stevenson
29 Ducks
31 R2D2 for one
33 Confuse
36 Caravansary
38 Ox of Celebes
39 Nap
42 Highlander
43 Bridge seat
45 Most in need of a bath
47 Danish toast
49 Of — understanguished
50 Instructs
52 Trip on the briny
56 New Guinean port
58 Ballerina's perch
59 Chit
60 — de lete
61 Boredom
63 Craftman's need
66 Maxims
67 Salinger girl
68 Actor Baldwin
69 Pate
70 Artery
71 Torn

DOWN
1 Salamanders
2 Love, Italian style
3 Stuck
4 Wapiti
5 Library items
6 To be, in the Bois
7 La followers
8 Sour
9 Biological drives
10 — pro nobis
11 Staff
12 Confer or defer ending
13 Acting Cannon
18 "Grand — " the ramparts
26 Flyer
27 — a beet
28 Dieter's worry
30 — Avv
32 D. H. Lawrence lived there
33 Prohibit
34 A son of Seth
35 See 63 Across
37 Big Board initials
40 Berlin bar need
41 Inflamed
44 Port au Prince native
46 Schubert's "— Quintet"
48 August baby
51 Not as many
53 Saunter
54 Greek physician
55 Pick
56 Helen of Troy's mother
57 Blackbirds
59 "La Dolce"
62 Soprano Verzing
64 Barcelona bear
65 Benin's river

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

D	U	A	Y		M	A	P		G	A	B	B	L	E
R	A	T	E		A	G	O		N	D	L	L	I	N
B	R	O	W	N	I	E	S		E	N	S	U	R	E
S	A	M	S	O	N		T	R	E		E	E	R	D
				D	E	I	E	D		W	R	R	O
A	M	B	L	E		A	R	C	A	D	I	A
T	I	L	E		H	R	N		W	I	N	C	E	D
L	E	A	T	H	E	R		T	A	N	G	E	L	O
A	M	E		C	H	E	D		O	T	E	R	I	N
		K	A	M	P	A	L	A		A	S	S	E	T
L	O	L		E	V	A	D	E	D
A	M	I	S		S	P	A	N		I	A	S	I	D
P	A	S	S	U	P		G	R	A	T	L	A	D	Y
E	N	T	I	R	E		O	A	T		A	G	E	D
L	I	S	T	E	R		R	Y	E		M	E	A	D



YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Positive forces continue to operate. You see eye-to-eye with those closest to your heart. Big financial news will land on your doorstep. Keep pace with today's interesting developments.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Confidential matters will come into clearer focus today. Use your verbal skills to reap a generous reward. Initiate new projects. Your enthusiasm is contagious!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A partnership could be today's hot topic. A candid discussion of thoughts and desires could foster a new agreement. The choices you make are made for the right reasons. Harmony prevails.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your ability to work diligently is your saving grace now. Although there are upsets, upheavals and uproars, your role is that of the builder. Romance soars to new heights.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Use dipolmancy when negotiating with an employer or influential people. You may notice a new note in a love song. Deeper rapport is likely if you do more listening than talking. Be attentive.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A day full of promises lies ahead! Good luck will affect your finances as well as your love life. Join the laughter brigade. A sense of humor makes you popular with your co-workers.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your communication skills empower you today. Work behind the scenes and trust your ESP. Lunching with influential people proves enlightening. Keep your own counsel.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Candid chats with friends of groups could result in a wish coming true. Replace chancy techniques with more conservative methods in business. Romance may have to take a back seat to your goals.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov.22-Dec.21): Imaginative money ideas will benefit from your detail-oriented approach. Your keen powers of analysis impress those in the know. Be carful not to break the back trying to impress a romantic partner.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Speak from the heart to touch a tender chord with your loved ones. Romance flourishes when secrecy is cast aside. Entertaining at home suits your conversational style. Get in touch with a parent.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You are eager to make improvements today, especially where your home and finances are concerned. Handling domestic matters privately proves most effective. Be more aggressive about promoting a pet project.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): By working the communication lines today, you can discover bargains or a new source of funds. Do not sit home and vegetate—it pays to circulate. Romance looks awesome! Be affectionate.

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Gayle Long
Copy Editor.....Tamir Lipton
PhotoTechnician.....Jeff Egan
Production Supervisor.....Camille Pansewicz
Production.....Susan Tomaski, Brad Hutchison

Women harriers finish sixth at Dartmouth

By CHRIS CUDDY
Collegian Correspondent

If bad things happen in threes, then the University of Massachusetts women's cross country teams' luck is about to change.

Already without Kelly Liljeblad and Maureen Meldrim, the Minutewomen's injury woes continued as Becky Johnson fell victim to a sprained ankle this weekend in Dartmouth as UMass finished sixth in a seven team field at the Dartmouth Classic.

Johnson, one of UMass' top runners, fell on the hilly Hanover course, spraining her ankle and dropping her to a 39th place finish. The fall momentarily knocked Johnson from the race, although she was able to continue in a display that was "A superhero effort," coach Julie LaFreniere said.

The race was dominated by the team from Georgetown who took eight of the first 10 spots, winning easily with 22 points. Michigan placed second with 55 points, followed by William and Mary with 91, Dartmouth with 122, Wake Forest with 145, UMass with 169, and the University of Vermont with 192.

"I think overall we ran well. We faced a couple of really strong teams that we usually wouldn't run against," LaFreniere said "The course itself gave us some problems. It was longer than we're used to, (3.2 miles as opposed to 3.1) and it was very hilly.

The Minutewomen's first runner was captain Michelle St. Laurent, who finished the course in 20:32, good for 25th place. Tricia Mathiesen finished in 20:36, followed by Kim Liljeblad in 21:06, Johnson in 21:24, and Julie Moreau in 21:56.

"I think if we had a healthy team, we would've run closer to Dartmouth, but Becky went down, as did Julie Moreau," LaFreniere said. "All in all the women ran well. We've got next week off and we're just going to work really hard and hopefully this bad luck streak is over."

■ Williams

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 12

Enough for a first down? Bring out the chains. First Down.

End of first quarter. Tony Williams has arrived.

For those three plays, I was probably more nervous than Williams. All year I've been boasting about the young quarterback to everyone. When I call home I talk about Tony Williams. I've been watching him in practice progressively take control of the Minuteman offense. Could I be wrong about Williams' talent?

Beginning of the second quarter, Williams continued the drive. He and Bledsoe alternated two yard carries. Third and six. Possible passing situation. Can he throw?

"Williams drops back, flushed right and passes..." I wanted to close my eyes. Before I could, UMass' Eric Thimas had the ball 14 yards down field. Williams' first collegiate pass - a first down for 14 yards.

I began to relax, and so did Williams. Handoff to Bledsoe for two and then Mike George for 11 more. Williams rolled left for three and Bledsoe for three more.

He looked cool in there. Looked like a quarterback. Moving the team well. Now on BU's 36. Third down and four. But wait, the Terriers are showing blitz. Will Williams see it. Time out, he calls. Beautiful, he didn't like what he was seeing on the other side of the line. It takes most QB's 10 years to do that.

How did he see that defensive formation? Williams is a redshirt freshman and a converted cornerback. The only time Williams had played quarterback before was in his last seven games in high school. He was recruited as a cornerback.

Duncan Macrae scrambles for seven yards.

"First down and ten, Umass with the ball on BU's 26-yard line..." Williams takes the snap and rolls right. He has Bledsoe following him in the backfield. The option. Williams keeps the defense on guard, they pursue him, at the last second he dishes to Bledsoe who sprints for six yards. Perfectly executed option. I couldn't be happier and neither could coach Reid.

Third down and two after a Bledsoe two yard rush. Williams takes the snap, but fumbles. I didn't know what to say. Is that what Reid was talking about? Maybe he does have the tendency to make the big play, for the other team. He recovers himself, alright, no harm done.

That would end Williams' first drive. That would begin Minuteman football A.T. - After Tony arrived.

CORRECTION

The price of Samuel Adams Wheat Beer in the Spirit Haus advertisement of the Friday, September 27th edition of the Collegian was incorrect due to a typographical error. The Collegian assumes responsibility and regrets any inconvenience this may have caused customers of the Spirit Haus.

SAMUEL ADAMS WHEAT BEER
$4.99 a six pack
Spirit Haus
Liquor Store
338 College St., one mile east of Amherst center on Route 9
Open 9 am - 11 pm Rain or Shine Always Open
VISA & MASTER CARD ACCEPTED

This Offer Could Be The Highlight Of Your Week.

Get a free highlighter with purchase of a large Pizza Hut pizza. For free delivery, call 253-3443.
Limited delivery area. Offer valid while supply lasts and on delivery orders only.
Pizza Hut DELIVERY
©1991 Pizza Hut, Inc.

Steven H. St. Clair
Attorney at Law
• Personal Injury CLAIMS, ACCIDENTS
• Defense vs. Criminal, Drug and Alcohol Related Charges
• Other legal problems
BY APPOINTMENT
816 North Pleasant
Amherst
549-1681
ADMITTED TO PRACTICE...1970
MEMBER MASS. AND CT. BARS

EARN $7.00/HR
FIGHT POLLUTION
Work for political change with Clean Water Action: environmental campaign staff. On bus lines. Paid training. P/T or career opportunity. Call 584-9830

AMHERST CINEMA
Now Playing
FREDDY'S DEAD
THE FINAL NIGHTMARE
Showtimes:
Fri. - Sun
Two shows at 7pm & 9pm
Mon-Thurs.
One show at 7:30pm
Adults $4.00
Student w/valid I.D. $3.00

Auto Glass Center
American & Foreign
• Same Day Service
• Billed Directly To Insurance Company
• Windshields Replaced
North Amherst Motors
78 Old Sunderland Rd
North Amherst, MA
549-2880
Major Credit Cards Accepted
A CARSTAR Collision Repair Center

MICHAEL'S
BILLIARD ROOM AND SPORTS BAR
NEW
$2.99 ONE TIME THRU BUFFET
THURSDAY - MONDAY
5:00 - 8:00
7 CHAMPIONSHIP TABLES
FREE POOL
(HOUR ALLOTMENTS)
3 CHALLENGE TABLES
THURS 8-BALL CASH TOURNY
PONIE EXPRESS
3 SEVEN OZ BOTTLES
$3.25
5
SUN 9-BALL CASH TOURNY
LARGE SCREEN TV'S
SUNDAY-MONDAY FOOTBALL SPECAILS
RT. 9 AMHERST (NEXT TO HUNAN GARDEN)

■ football

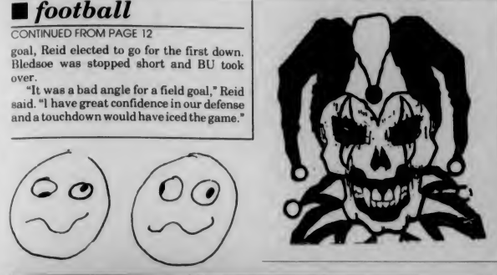
CONTINUED FROM PAGE 12

goal, Reid elected to go for the first down. Bledsoe was stopped short and BU took over.

"It was a bad angle for a field goal," Reid said. "I have great confidence in our defense and a touchdown would have iced the game."



Styles By Deborah
549-5610
$4.00 OFF With Cheryl Only
Professional Consultation and Style, Cut & Dry
Reg. $16.00 to $18.00
First time customers only • Exp.10/31/91
$5.00 OFF
Any Perm, Facial or Highlighting
First time customers only • Exp.10/31/91

家酒園南湖 Hunan Garden Restaurant
MANDARIN/SZECHUEN CUISINE
The Best Chinese Buffet
MANDARIN/SZECHUAN CUISINE
WE DELIVER IN AMHERST 5-9:30
EVERYDAY
NEW Minimum $15 plus $2 delivery charge
BUFFET & SUNDAY BRUNCH
Buffet served 5-8 p.m. Sun.-Thurs.
Brunch served Sunday 11:30 a.m.-3 p.m.
ALL YOU CAN EAT $5.99
Children under 10 - $3.00

STAIRMASTER
AEROBICS
Low Impact
Step
Hi/Low
Nautilus
Free Weights
Cybex
Lifecycle
Biocycles
Treadmill
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
256-0080

30 MINUTE GUARANTEED DELIVERY OR $3.00 OFF
WE REDEEM COMPETITOR'S COUPONS SO YOU DON'T HAVE TO EAT THEIR QUALITY....
Buy any Large Pizza, Get 2nd Pizza for only $1.99
DELIVERED IN 30 MINUTES OR LESS NOT GOOD WITH ANY OTHER OFFER
OFFER EXPIRES 12/30/91
Buy any Pan Pizza, Get 2nd Pizza for only $1.99
DELIVERED IN 30 MINUTES OR LESS NOT GOOD WITH ANY OTHER OFFER
OFFER EXPIRES 12/30/91
UMASS • 256-8911 MT. HOLYOKE • 535-1111
VISA/MASTERCARD

Classifieds

COME TO THE COLLEGIAN OFFICE 113 CAMPUS CENTER • THURSDAY 8:30-3:30 FRIDAY 8:30-2:30 • DEADLINE IS TWO DAYS PRIOR TO PUBLICATION • 20¢/WORD/DAY FOR STUDENTS • CASH IN ADVANCE

ACTIVITIES

DINOSAUR JR.
Saturday, Oct 5 8pm in the SUB
$8 UMass $10-Others Buy tix now!
at Tix, For the Records, Main St. Records

OPEN RUSH
Sigma Kappa Sorority
9/28 12pm
9/30 6:30
10/2 3 6:30
19 Allen St. 256-6887
All university women welcome

TRI-SIGMA OPEN RUSH
9/30 & 10/2 7-8 PM
10/1 & 10/3 5-6 PM
387 N Pleasant St
549-3811

UMASS TAE KWON DO
Come train with us
Self-defense keep in shape
for more info call Marty 546-7003
Marianne 546-6443

ANNOUNCEMENTS

3rd BASE uNikka D + KMO
Tues Oct 1 at Bdoors open 7:30)
Tix $10-UMass $15-others
On sale now at Tix, For the Record, Main St. Records

ATTENTION NON-US RESIDENTS AA-1 immigration lottery is your chance. Apply on friends behalf for efficient strategies call 542-4220

Bed and Breakfast. Downtown Amherst 549-0733

CAMPUS CRUSADE for Christ welcomes you to Swo. investigative study concerning Christ's claims Tues nights 7:30pm CC room# posted

First Republican Club general meeting with distinguished internationally known guest speaker will be tonight at 7:00pm in room 163C CC

HEY, ARE THERE any Uechiryu karate practitioners left out there? Call Mike at 253-9660

"OPEN RUSH"
Alpha Chi Omega!!!
Come to dinner with us, find out what we're all about! 3 nights, Sept. 30- Oct.2
Come at 5:15-
ALPHA CHI OMEGA!
38 Nutting Ave.
549-8459

Tarkovsky film festival any interest? Send wants, thoughts, and a SASE to: Tarkovsky, Box 395 Northampton 01061-0395

UNITED ABIA CULTURAL CENTER
Student Council
Meeting on Monday September 30, 6:30pm at the U.A.C.C.; Knowlton Basement
All welcome to attend!

WE'RE OPEN!!!
Sweets N More in Field House
Subs, ice cream, soda and much more
Open nightly seven to midnight

AUTO FOR SALE

76 DODGE MONACO V8 360 CU in 93K miles Auto PS PB AC AM/FM Cas Hitch No rust Runs exc $750 Firm 256-0753 eves

78 BUICK REGAL 130K New exhaust Reliable $400 B.O. 665-4185

'82 MERCURY CAPRI New brakes, muffler, battery, shocks good condition $1000 256-3020

1983 CHEVETTE 4D-HB
86K Excellent condition $725 549-7129

1983 SUBARU GL Wagon-85,000 mi., auto., good condition, little rust 834-5678 $1200

84 FORD ESCORT New brakes, muffler very reliable. $1000 665-4602-evenings

COLLEGE PIZZA

COLLEGE PIZZA
Fall Special
Small cheese $3.50
Large cheese $5.99
Free sods with the purchase of a large sub, salad, or spaghetti
549-6098 549-6073
Must mention this ad

EDITING & TUTORING

Editing, English language tutoring, wordprocessing offered by retired teacher to international students and non-English majors. Quick service, modest fees. 253-3354

ENTERTAINMENT

RACK-A-DISC! $175.00 DJs, VJs, Karaoke for house/ Formal parties, Call 586-9900

FOR RENT

1 BR. APT in center of Amherst - next to bars, bus, food. $500 includes heat & hot water. 253-0688/545-3146

2 LARGE ROOMED apt. center of Amherst Heat included 256-1124

EXECUTIVE RENTAL RENT or rent with option to buy 4 bedroom luxuries house in Amherst woods Call 253-7879

FRIDGE RENTALS 253-9742 Free delivery

TOWNHOUSE - 2 bedroom 1 1/2 bath apartment on bus route North Amherst 1-587-1352

FOR SALE

CENTURIAN IRONMAN E"PERT Excellent condition, low mileage. Bought new for $600. Selling for $350/BO, Call Chris 253-3608

COMICS!!- McFarland Spideys, X-Titles, Justice League Many more! VF-Near mint 546-3403

COMPUTER FOR SALE
$600 Call Cliff
549-1762

DEAD TRADE- Have Saturday need Thursday 256-1183

FAT CHANCE! 21", Like new Frameset $450, complete $775. 253-4040, message

FREE CAP WHEN you buy my Ford F150 4x4 Cal Steve 253-7922

FUTONS!
Lowest prices and quick delivery!
Call Metawampe 585-1233
Free brochure available

Jerry&Sara, Wild Boys, Pig Tangent 63 KFOG Call Jeff 549-7686

LACROSSE EQUIPMENT
Sport helmet, worn 10 times, $70
Brine arm pads, worn 2 times, $20
Brine shoulder pads, worn 2 times, $25
Everything for $100 Call 546-4149

MACCLASSIC 40/2 MINT w/software $1100 B.O. 665-3738

PLANE TICKET
Hartford to Baltimore/Washington
Columbus Day weekend
Only $100, roud trip
Call 546-7329

PI, Infinity RS3000 spkrs. Two way w/ Polycell twtr. Mint cond. Pd. $380 will sell $225/bo Call John 546-1671

Smith Corona laptop word processor. Separate printer, battery, carrying case, disks, spreadsheet program. 400 or B.O. 542-3194

FUNDRAISERS

RAISE $500...$1000...$1500
FOOLPROOF
FUNDRAISING
For your fraternity, sorority, team or other campus organization. Act now for the chance to win a Caribbean cruise and fabulous prizes!
Call 1-800-950-8472, ext 50

HELP WANTED

FAST FUNDRAISER $1000/WK
Greeks, Clubs, Anyone.
(800) 748-0617.

FREE SPRING BREAK trip + cash! Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas! Sell trips on campus and earn free trip + bonus cash! Four Seasons 1-800-331-3136

"Know before you go," Where to work, live and ski free in Colorado's resorts. Current guide to Aspen, Vail, Breckenridge and more! $16.95. Call 1-800-788-6174

TRAVEL SALES MANAGERS
Vacation outlet Filene's Basement needs go-getters to hire and manage campus rep's for spring break '92. Make $5K+ in 5 mos. (PT) Some travel- must have car and phone w/ans. machine.
Call J.T. at 617-262-3734 9to5

TRAVEL SALES REPRESENTATIVE
STS, the leader in collegiate travel needs motivated individuals and groups to promote winter/spring break trips. For information call Student Travel Services, Ithaca NY at 1-800-648-4849

WANT A GREAT JOB WITH RECYCLING?
Hard work and lots of fun, 15 hrs/week -4.55/hr. Must have a drivers license. Call the Residential Recycling Program at 545-1153

INSTRUCTION

GUITAR LESSONS at Hilton Music. All styles. Call Jeff at 665-1178

KNOW YOUR RIGHTS

Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact The Legal Services Center, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

 LEGAL HELP **

Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning leases? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact the Legal Services Center, 922 Campus Ctr. 545-1995

LOST

FEMALE CAT
White w/tortoise markings 9/18 Main St / S.East St area We miss her!! Call 256-8410 or 546-6464 (message)

HEIRLOOM ANTIQUE CAMEO RING was great-grandmother's Veronica de Vos: 546-6214 leave message.!

LOST-CAMO nylon jacket-US Cavalry made Great personal value -Lost 9/25 between Lot 25 and Herter -Call Rob at 6-4719 Leave message

LOST WEDDING BAND Gold with diamond chips -Reward -Recycling Office 5-0618

MA. LICENSE If found please return to McNamara Cluster Office - Kim Bellveau Thanx!

MUSICIANS

KEYBOARDIST SOUGHT
Active local band
Originals Funk Rock Blues
Gigs at Twisters Peanl'S/ etc
Chris Dave Jason 549-5543
No Hackers!!!

PERSONALS

SPOTTY
You have my heart and all my love forever. Feelings I never thought I could have. I've had because of you. Things I never thought I could do, I've done because of you. You are my love, inspiration, and security. Thank you. Happy Anniversary! Sorry it's late!
I Love You
-Foxy

THANK YOU TO:
#9 and #14 Gilreath for helping return Cougar!!!

Hi Bunny- I'll miss you...but you'll be back and I'll be waiting. Love, BunnyX

GJC
Here's your secret personal! I hope your birthday is great, because you deserve whatever you want. - Just ask!
Love, Chipmunk

Thanks Nicole for that bonding session with Lazy and Kathleen for giving my shirt that pink tint. -Rick

GARRON J CARVALHO:
Happy 21st Birthday! I hope you do well on your exams this week, so we can eventually celebrate!
-You Know Who

ACE OF HEARTS:
My eyes have been wide since you gave me that bite. Seems more than a month since the squishy-apple night.
LUKE, The woman from Mars

ATTENTION PLEDGES!!
Congratulations to all!
An extra special congratulations to Tri-Sigma's pledges
Elene, Karina, Lauren, Lynn & Renee
Love, The Sisters of Tri-Sigma

PRINCESS KELLY

Happy Birthday May all your wishes come true. 143 Chris

RESUME SERVICE

Cutting Edge Resumes. Complete resume service. Writing, laser printing, letters, advice. 549-0367

ROOMMATE WANTED

• MALE NON-SMOKER to share great apartment on bus route, prefer jnr, snr or grad, $175/mo. Call Doug and Val at 256-8723, lve. mes

SERVICES

BICYCLE BROKEN?
Call Pat
546-0119

FREE pregnancy testing; confidential and caring support. BIRTHRIGHT 233 No. Pleasant Street Amherst 549-1906

Pregnant?
Need a pregnancy test, information or support? Call for free and confidential services. ALTERNATIVES 245 Main Street Northampton 586-3000 or Greenfield 774-8019

SENIORS
Time to think about resumes
Get professional resumes at college prices.
Call Andy at A Expert Resumes
549-4002

TRAVEL

BAHAMA CRUISE $99 per person
5 days/4 night hotel
Plan now for your break.
Very limited offer
Call now 1-800-621-0572

MONTREAL WEEKENDS $9 includes R.T. Motorcoach 3days 2nights Hotel downtown FREE admission Club Metropolis DJs pub Call Reliable Tours 365Broadway Rt 1 Lynnfield 01940 617 598-9930 Depart every weekend

SAVE $40 ON Northwest Air! $40 off $190 travel voucher. Call 15833359 evenings

TRAVEL FREE! Campus representatives wanted to earn intersession and spring break trips. 256-8254

TYPIST

PRO-TYPE
Complete secretarial services
Reasonable rates
10% discount for students
323-6212

Sports

Water polo wins three, wins tourney

By Kevin Herlihy
Collegian Staff

UMass water polo coach Russ Yarworth predicted before Saturday night's game against archrival Iona that no one individual would dominate the action. "It will take a total team effort," he said.

He was right.

Buoyed by an outstanding team defense, a late second quarter scoring burst, and a fired up crowd the 16th ranked Minutemen beat 15th ranked Iona 15-10 in the New England vs. Mid-Atlantic Challenge at Amherst College's Pratt Pool.

It was nearly game time and the highly-touted "home" pool had few home fans. Then members of the men's swim team walked in with half-red, half-white faces, and U-M-A-S-S painted on their chests. This display was followed by a steady stream of fans whose cries and screams echoed through the near-capacity pool.

The already fired-up UMass team was charged even more by the fans, and may have been a bit too excited. Tsan Engin whistled a shot off the top bar, one of several near-miss bullets by UMass in the early going.

Engin scored the first UMass goal to even the score at 1-1 halfway through the first period, but by the end of the period Iona led 3-1.

The second period saw Iona use the same aggressive, physical style they used to beat UMass twice earlier this season. The Minutemen held strong, peppering the Gael's goalie with several shots. Then, Adolfo Oliete, Luke Harlan, and Adam Feldman all scored goals over the last two minutes of the period, pushing UMass to a 6-4 lead.

Alex Yelensky and Scott Reed scored to start the third quarter, but Iona countered with one of their own. Engin scored with 2:30 left in the period, forcing Iona coach Lloyd Robinson to call a timeout, hoping to quell the impending rally.

It was UMass who benefited, as Engin, Dan McOsker and Javier Gonzalez all scored with under two minutes left. Goalie Todd Larson also rose to the occasion, knocking away three shots, including two booming drives from close range.

Iona came within 11-7 early in the forth quarter, but UMass scored four goals in two-and-a-half minutes, creating a 15-8 lead that put the game away. The Gaels scored twice near the two minute mark, but UMass took control of the ball and kept firing away.

"The crowd was terrific," Larson said. "They created an atmosphere like the basketball games. There were times when I was yelling directions for our defense, but they couldn't hear me."

Engin agreed, saying, "I know they pumped me up. Especially the swimmers."

"We followed our game plan, which we haven't done yet this year," Yarworth said. "The thing that really helped us was that I brought in my freshman lefty [Harlan] and that broke open their zone. We had consistent intensity throughout the game."

Robinson said the crowd didn't effect his team at all, but their impact on UMass was immense. "UMass outhustled us all the way. They were pumped up and we were flat."

While the defense backboned the win, there was also a balanced scoring assault. Engin, Yelansky, and Reed all scored three goals each, and Adam Feldman had two. Harlan, McOsker, Oliete, and Tom Quinn each scored once.

The Iona game was only one of three the Minutemen played over the weekend. Saturday morning they blew away a thoroughly outmatched Fordham squad, 19-4. Gonzalez and Dan McAuliffe each scored three times.

Yesterday a pesky Queens University team put up an early fight before bowing 15-7. Harlan scored five times in that contest.

The win over Iona is the team's biggest win of the season thus far. Their record stands at 7-3, and although rankings won't be available until Tuesday, their national ranking should go up one or two places. Iona, after losing to UMass Saturday, was shocked by Boston College yesterday, losing on a penalty shot in sudden death, and they could find themselves down a few spots.

Minutemen rush past BU, 15-7

By TAMIR LIPTON
Collegian Staff

BOSTON, Mass. — Only time will tell, but for now, the University of Massachusetts has a new star, a new leader, a new quarterback; someone who can bring the excitement back to UMass football and revive the team's hopes of repeating as Yankee Conference Champions.

He is exciting, flashy, fast (oh man is he fast), he runs the option, he throws and he's only a freshman.

For the past three weeks, the UMass coaching staff has wanted to put Tony Williams in at quarterback, and for three weeks, they let him sit and sit and sit, until Saturday's 15-7 win over Boston University when he was thrust into the game with 1:22 left in the first quarter.

"I thought he showed great poise for a redshirt freshman," said coach Jim Reid. "He played with a lot of heart."

Trailing 7-0, Williams marched the Minutemen (2-2, 2-1 in the YanCon) 61 yards in 6:23 only to see Jim Maguire misfire on a 36-yard field goal.

After Williams' insertion, the whole team seemed revived. The defense clamped down and looked like the defense of old (the one which finished the 1990 season as the second ranked defense in division I-AA.

They refused to allow Jay Hillman any room to run, holding him to just 41 yards and the team to just 29. They sacked quarterback Greg Moore four times, pressured him on many other occasions and forced him to scramble several times.

Moore (21 of 38, 293 yards, and two interceptions) managed only one touchdown pass early in the game when he hit Darren Soucy on the right flat for a 29-yard score that gave the Terriers (1-3, 0-1 in the Yankee Conference) a 7-0 lead.

Then, two series' later, it happened. Williams replaced Paul Tornatore, who was unable to move the team.

"At first I didn't believe that I was going in, I was in shock," Williams said.

The score remained 7-0 until the third quarter when the Minutemen caught a big break. On the initial kick off, the Terriers tried a squib kick which bounced right into the chest of Steve Dembowski at the BU 49-yard line.

"It was supposed to go down to about the 20- or 30-yard line," said BU coach Dan Allen.

Williams (25 rushes for 105 yards) and Jerome Bledsoe (21 rushes for 104 yards) each carried the ball four times and Williams hit Lamar Newsome on a 16-yard pass that set up Bledsoe's game-tying six yard touchdown run.

BU fumbled on their next possession and Matt Tulley recovered for the Minutemen on the BU 25-yard line.

Four plays later, Williams scampered six yards into the end zone giving the Minutemen a 13-7 lead which they never relinquished.

The Minutemen opted to go for the two point conversion — lining up the center, holder and kicker at the right side of the line and everybody else to their left. The snap was scooped to fullback Mike George on the left, who ran two yards for the conversion.

Reid was so happy that the "muddled huddle" worked, he ran up-and-down the field, jumping and pumping his fist.

On BU's next possession, facing a fourth and nine play from the UMass 28-yard line, safety Lance Neveling intercepted his second pass of the season in the end zone.

Less than a minute into the fourth quarter, the Minutemen faced a fourth and two situation on the BU 4-yard line. Rather than kick what would have been a 21-yard field

CONTINUED ON PAGE 11

Here's Tony

"Tony Williams in as UMass' quarterback..." Wait a second, did he say Tony Williams? I can't believe it. I squinted to the area around the 20-yard line to see his number. Number 32, that is Tony. Wait, let me check my lineup sheet: Massachusetts offense... #32...Tony Williams...QB. It is Tony.

(A sigh of relief) It's about time.

Brett Morris

I checked the game clock, 1:22 left in the first quarter. Let's see I've been waiting three hours, 13 minutes and 38 seconds so far this year for this moment. The moment many people have been waiting for.

"UMass first and 10, Jerome Bledsoe in the backfield, Tony Williams to take the snap...Bledsoe up the middle for five."

He did it," I said to myself. Flawless. Even though it was only a handoff it was his first collegiate play.

"Second and five...Williams keeps it himself and carries for two more yards."

Looking good, I thought. He almost had an opening.

But, now, third and three. Big play here. Biggest play of Williams' life. What will happen if he doesn't produce here? Will he sit back down? Will Tornatore return?

"He drops back, keeps it to himself and scampers left for a few yards..."

CONTINUED ON PAGE 10

Men's soccer blanks Northeastern, 2-0

Collegian photo by Jeff Egan

Darrin Stone and the Minutemen continued the unbelievable season with a 2-0 win over Northeastern yesterday.

By TED KOTTLER
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts men's soccer team (4-1-2) boosted its offensive efforts and played tough defense en route to a 2-0 victory over Northeastern University (1-7) yesterday afternoon at Lower Boyden Field.

The decisive goal came with just 6:31 remaining in the match, when midfielder Brett Anthony scored past NU goalie Arrin Barmak. Barmak dove to save a shot by Steve Scott, but he could not hold onto it. Instead, Anthony fielded the ball before Barmak could get up, and easily put it by the helpless goalie to make it 1-0.

The Huskies then had to concentrate solely on scoring the tying goal. Coach Salvatore Lonero elected to put most of his players in forward slots, hoping to create more scoring chances. This strategy may work on paper, but it did not in practice for Northeastern.

As the Huskies were trying to set up a shot, UMass halfback Darrin Stone intercepted a ball and passed it ahead to teammate Randy Jacobs. No one but Barmak stood between Jacobs and the net, as all the Huskies were deep in UMass territory. Jacobs sped downfield and with just 1:02 left in the game, his shot rolled past Barmak for a 2-0 UMass lead that insured the victory.

The tempo of the match was somewhat different than it was in UMass' last contest, a 1-1 tie with the University of Vermont, as UMass maintained a strong offensive advantage, outshooting NU 23-6 (against Vermont, UMass was outshot, 28-13).

Though it took most of the game before one of the Minutemen's shots found its way into the net, they never let the Huskies have many chances of their own, giving UMass goalie Jon Gruber a well-deserved rest following his remarkable 11 save performance against Vermont (Gruber needed to make only one save yesterday).

Lonero credited UMass' hustle in the match, especially in the closing minutes.

"[UMass] played extremely well. [They] beat us to every ball," Lonero said. "Basically, [they] were a little bit hungrier at the end than we were."

Northeastern is a struggling team for understandable reasons. Lonero noted that several of his players have suffered from injuries throughout the season. He added that it has been difficult to incorporate the freshmen into the team program, as they do not arrive at Northeastern until mid-September. But, he feels that he "has finally got this team together."

UMass coach Sam Koch also recognized his team's extra effort towards the end of the game.

"The last 20 minutes or so was all us," Koch said. "It was just a matter of time before we put it away."

Despite Northeastern's weaknesses, Koch said that the Huskies gave UMass a real tough game.

The next game for the Minutemen is Wednesday, October 2, against Brown University at 3 p.m. at Lower Boyden Field.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THE LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND

VOLUME CI ISSUE 20 TUESDAY, OCTOBER 1, 1991

Two severed cables leave campus dark

By MICHAEL LEVY
Collegian Staff

Power was accidentally cut from most of campus yesterday when construction workers at the new Mullins Center severed two power cables.

At 10:45 a.m., construction workers for the Suffolk Construction company of Roxbury using a hydraulically operated power shovel cut a duct bank, severing two of four cables, according to the director of Physical Plant engineering, Hermine Randall.

Each cable carries 13,800 volts of power, one of them running directly into campus, she said.

"They dug where they should not have dug," Randall said.

While the Southwest Residential Area had power restored within 20 to 30 minutes, much of campus was still in the dark at 2 p.m. Power was restored to all buildings by 3:43 p.m., Randall said.

Academic buildings without power at that time included Thompson, Goessmann, Hasbrouck Lab, Agricultural Engineering, Holdsworth, Flint, Dickinson, Engineering Lab and Stockbridge Hall.

No classes were officially canceled, according to the University News Office. Classes may have been canceled by individual teachers.

Others affected were Memorial Hall, Old Chapel, Physical Plant and South College.

Power was diverted through a power station on the east side of campus. The severed lines are not operational and are not expected to be functioning in the near future.

The activities in some buildings were disrupted. In Memorial Hall, those who process donations for the Development Office lost access to computers, and were sent home early. Some employees from Physical Plant and Goodell were also released, News Office officials said.

The University carries 16,000 to 18,000 kilowatts on the average day, depending on the time of year, Randall said.

"We were very fortunate that nobody was killed," said Randall, reflecting on the amount of power involved.

In her 10 years here she said nothing of this magnitude has happened.

Collegian Photo by Carrie Wyeth

I HOPE THIS CRAP COMES OFF — Jamie Denitto, sophomore pre-med major ardently attempts to remove the results of an exciting weekend.

Negotiations stalled

GEO demands remain unmet

By DAVID MASSEY
Collegian Staff

Contract negotiations stalled yesterday between the Graduate Employee Organization and the University of Massachusetts administration as technicalities cut short the all-day meeting.

The GEO are trying to get four major demands onto their first union contract. The GEO, the largest union on campus representing teaching and research assistants, will hold a membership meeting today to vote on a strike.

Emily Isaacs, co-speaker for GEO, will present the situation to the membership at the meeting but could not specify on details concerning negotiations. Isaacs did say negotiations with the administration may continue.

"They refused to recognize us as a union. We're gonna' strike," shouted Jim Delle, an anthropology teaching assistant and GEO member at a coordinating committee meeting of the GEO last night to discuss their next move after the gridlocked negotiations.

"Some times it takes radical action to guarantee life's basic necessities," Delle said. "I believe now is such a time."

The four major demands of the GEO are a health fee waiver, job security, binding arbitration and an agency fee.

Susan Pearson, chief negotiator for the administration, declined comment due to an agreement between the GEO and the University not to talk openly with the media concerning negotiation details.

Frederick Byron, a member of the five-person negotiating team, could not specifically comment on negotiations.

"We're kind of in a delicate state right now and I don't feel like saying anything," Byron said.

Negotiator Seymour Berger said there was a positive atmosphere at the negotiations. "They were friendly. We are trying to be helpful and understanding," Berger said. "We hope that (further negotiations) proceed amiably."

GEO members at the coordinating committee meeting appeared frustrated and angry. Phil Cox, a part-time worker for the United Auto Workers Union, which oversees the GEO, said both sides left yesterday's negotiations "dissapointed."

Leaflets have been plastered around the University by an unknown source, exclaiming "Strikes happen," apparently warning the University of an imminent strike.

Arms reductions drastic

By JASON GEORGE
Collegian Staff

President Bush's dramatic announcement of unilateral nuclear arms cuts last Friday "radically altered" the way disarmament issues may be handled in the future, according to a former high Pentagon official.

Antonia Chayes, former under secretary of the Air Force, spoke last night at Amherst College on the defense cuts announced last week by the Bush administration. The lecture was sponsored by the Five College Peace and World Securities Studies program.

Chayes noted that Bush's action represents the most radical response to recent events in the Soviet Union, particularly the failed coup against Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev in late August.

"The administration has responded in a dramatic unilateral move in what is still a bilateral sphere of international relations," Chayes said.

Chayes said the recent moves are a "departure from the conventional wisdom that the disarmament process had to be bilateral."

Previously, U.S. leaders wouldn't proceed to move toward disarmament without reciprocal assurances from the Soviet Union for fear that the Senate wouldn't ratify treaties or because the various branches of the Armed Services would be unhappy with the cuts, she said.

Bush's plan, which begins with withdrawal of short-range nuclear weapons from Europe and abandonment of support for new intercontinental weapons systems, must be "cemented by a treaty," Chayes

CONTINUED ON PAGE 3

Inside:

Page 3:
Weeping willow planted in memorial of deceased UMass student.

Page 5:
Elizabeth Stringer explains why it's O.K. to be home sick in college.

Page 8:
Greg Sukiennik muses over University sports and money matters.

Weather:
Leave the sunglasses and heavy coats at home today, because it's going to be cloudy and sorta warm in the low 70s

Slap on wrist for commission

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Commission on Civil Rights received a slap on the wrist and a potential budget cut from the House on Monday.

Even supporters offered faint praise and considerable criticism of the agency's conduct as the House approved a bill extending its life for two more years.

That is less than the 10-year extension asked for by the Bush administration.

The bill authorizes a budget of $6 million a year — $1 million less than it is spending this year, and far short of the $10 million a year the Bush administration wants.

"We did examine the work of the Civil Rights Commission with great care, and were disappointed with the record of the past two years," said Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., chairman of the Judiciary subcommittee on civil and constitutional rights.

Others complained that the rights panel held no hearings during the past two years and issued only one report.

"The commission seemed to be expending its energy more on divisive rhetoric than on fulfilling its mandate to investigate and report," said Judiciary Chairman Jack Brooks, D-Texas.

The commission was in Amherst Friday and heard testimony about racism on college campuses in the University of Massachusetts Campus Center.

Both Brooks and Edwards supported the smaller reauthorization measure. Both said the commission has shown some signs of improvement since the appointment of Arthur A. Fletcher as its chairman.

But Republican Rep. James Sensenbrenner of Wisconsin urged it be abolished, calling the panel "an agency that has been mismanaged, hasn't done anything and is roundly criticized even by its supporters."

"It's time to put this commission out of its misery," Sensenbrenner said. "Fourteen million dollars for one report and no hearings ... in my opinion is mismanagement of the highest order."

The bill was approved on a voice vote and sent to the Senate.

Fletcher, Bush's appointee as chairman, said his commission's staff was "totally undermanned," and suffering from budget cuts during the 1980s that reduced the staff from nearly 300 to 77.

—Collegian Staff contributed to this article

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THE LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is a Registered Student Organization of the University of Massachusetts, published Tuesdays through Saturdays during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000.

113 CAMPUS CENTER AMHERST, MA 01003
Phone (413) 545-3500 FAX (413) 545-1592

STAFF

Editor in Chief ..... Gayle Long
Managing Editor ..... Marc Elliott
Editorial Editor ..... Greg Sukiennik
News Editor ..... Preston P. Forman
Sports Editor ..... Tamir Lipton
Arts Editor ..... Paul DeGeorges
Photography Editor ..... Carrie Wyeth
Black Affairs Editor ..... Sondra Sutton
Women's Issues Editor ..... Jessame Hannus
Jewish Affairs Editor ..... Felice Cohen, Debra Kriegsman
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Alexander Nguyen
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Madanmohan Rao
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Trystan Skeigh
Business Manager ..... Randee Pastel
Advertising Manager ..... Dena Haselkorn
Finance Manager ..... Jeff Weiner
Circulation Manager ..... Jim Winterbottom
Subscriptions Manager ..... Stacy Rogers
Promotions Manager ..... Scott Macey
Production Manager ..... Terry Starmer
Day Graphics Manager ..... Jenny Burns

PROFESSIONAL STAFF

Business ..... Brian Harrington, Lori Black, Maureen Majerowski
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

LOW, LOW PRICE
YANKEE
DISCOUNT OIL
NORTHAMPTON HOLYOKE
584-4112 • 535-1888

MANDATORY
GOLDEN KEY
Honor Society Meeting
All Members !!!
Wednesday, October 2nd
7:00 pm
Campus Center Room 165-169
For More Information Call...
Dean of Students Office
Gladys Rodriguez 545-2684

Women's Forum

Tuesday, Oct. 1:

Alexander Sanger, president of Planned Parenthood, New York City, will be presenting "The Incredible Shrinking Woman's Right to Choose" at 8 p.m. in the Neilson Library Browsing Room at Smith College.

The Rape Survivors Support Group will meet on Tuesdays from 6 p.m.- 8 p.m. Confidentiality is assured, and the there is no fee to participate. For more information call 772-0871.

Wednesday, Oct. 2:

A talk concerning women resisting U.S. military policy in Palau will take place at 7:30 p.m. in Stirn Auditorium, Amherst College.

Thursday, Oct. 3:

Smith College will be celebrating Otelia Cromwell Day in honor of Smith's first African-American graduate. For more details see the Women's Issues Page in Thursday's Collegian or stop by the Women's Issues desk at the Collegian.

STAIRMASTER
AEROBICS
Low Impact
Step
Hi/Low
Nautilus
Free Weights
Cybex
Lifecycle
Biocycles
Treadmill
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
256-0080

OOPS!
Now's the time to call...
North Amherst Motors
79 Old Sunderland Rd., No. Amherst
549-2880
Expert Repairs and Reconditioning
Most Major Credit Cards Accepted

ROLL UPS
SANDWICH SHOP
331 Russell St., Rt. 9 Hadley
(next to Dunkin Donuts)
586-8255
COUPON
FREE! SANDWICH FREE!
Buy One Sandwich, Get One FREE
(Lower Priced Sandwich Is Free)
Not Valid In Conjunction With Other Offers
CALL AHEAD FOR FAST SERVICE
One Coupon Per Person Per Order Please. Expires 10/31/91

Why is recycling important?

If you recycle on campus you can help save Housing Services and the University money.

Do you want to start paying for a trash disposal fee on your housing bill?

RECYCLE NOW!

AMHERST CINEMA
Now Playing
FREDDY'S DEAD
THE FINAL NIGHTMARE
Showtimes:
Fri. - Sun.
Two shows at 7pm & 9pm
Mon-Thurs.
One show at 7:30pm
Adults $4.00
Student w/valid I.D. $3.00

COMPLETE OPTOMETRY EXAMS
AT THE UNIVERSITY HEALTH SERVICES
We offer...
...quality, comprehensive vision care at a reasonable cost.
...courteous, friendly, professional staff.
...reduced rates on eye glasses at participating opticians with a complete optometric examination at the University Health Services for Student Plan members.
...a comprehensive contact lens service.
uhs
EYE CARE PROGRAM
Convenient hours and on campus location.
For questions or an appointment call: 549-2671

START YOUR FIRST DAY WITH YEARS OF EXPERIENCE BEHIND YOU.

Bring your BSN to the Army and we'll assign a preceptor to help put you at ease.

Your preceptor will be an experienced Army Nurse who will smooth your transition from school to practice. With advice, counsel on Army nursing procedure, or just by being a friend.

With your preceptor's help, you'll meet your new challenges and rapidly move into a leadership role of your own.

If you're a BSN candidate...or you are an RN with a BSN...you'll find the rewards and responsibility you're looking for in Army Nursing. Contact your local Army Nurse Corps Recruiter.

518-449-4691 • 518-561-8797
413-557-2920

ARMY NURSE CORPS.
BE ALL YOU CAN BE.

haircuts always $10!
Bucci
a hair space
25 N PLEASANT ST AMHERST 256 0733

WANTED:
USED MAC's
WE BUY YOUR USED MAC EQUIPMENT FOR TOP DOLLAR. CASH! WE SELL REFURBISHED MAC's AT DISCOUNT! CALL FOR QUOTE.
RENTEX INC. (800) 545-2313. (617) 423-5567

Eating Disorder Programs
Fall 1991 Sponsored by University Health Services.

Eating Disorder Self-Help Groups
Led by trained students recovered from an eating disorder. Open to anyone. Confidentiality Assured. Call 549-2671, Clinic IV, for more information.

Eating Disorder Treatment Program
For individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner.
Mondays or Tuesdays - beginning September 17, University Health Services. Confidentiality Assured. Call 549-2671, Clinic IV.

Food and Feelings Workshop
Led by Peer Health Educators to schedule for your Residence Hall - call 549-2671, ext. 181.

Local

Aycox remembered

Tree planted in memory of late student

By SARAH J. BOLFING
Collegian Correspondent

As the sun went down by the Campus Pond Sunday, friends and family gathered around a tree planted in memory of Laurin Aycox.

Aycox, who would have been a sophomore this fall at UMass, died in mid-August from injuries suffered in a car accident.

The memorial included the reading of The Giving Tree by Shel Silverstein and the planting of a weeping willow, both of which were Laurin's favorites.

Laurin's father, Skip Aycox, said the tree is symbolic of his daughter because the tree represents life, which is what Laurin gave when she died. Laurin was an organ donor and many lives have been saved through her donation, he said.

"The tree is for her and us because it gives us all a new life," Skip Aycox said.

The tree was planted on the east side of the pond near the Fine Arts Center, appropriately reflecting Laurin's love of the theater.

Laurin's mother, Gail Smith, said, "She passionately loved the theater. She loved UMass." Education was important to her, Smith said. Her daughter, "knew what was right and wrong, there were no gray areas. She gave everyone and everything a chance," she added.

Her mother noted that Laurin had worked on a local radio station program about bi-racial children.

With respect to the placement of the tree, Aycox's friend Chris Taylor, who organized the memorial, said, "She loved it here, it's a good place for it." He also said it represents "her love of life."

Last May at UMass, Laurin performed in the play "Black Women's Survival Kit" in which she portrayed the Yoruba goddess Oshun.

Aycox was a member of both Greenpeace and Amnesty International.

Laurin's high school in Schnectady, N.Y. has established a drama scholarship in her name.

As the evening came to a close, a friend added, "It was a good thing that we could say goodbye and let go, and now we have a place to come back and remember her by."

Campaign funds subject of Pro-Democracy skit

By MICHAEL LEVY
Collegian Staff

The Pioneer Valley Pro-Democracy Campaign staged a skit about campaign funding, followed by a short rally yesterday beside the Student Union, facing the Campus Pond.

The main theme of the event centered around the idea of public funding of political campaigns, said Campaign officials.

"The principle of 'one person, one vote' has been subverted by a system dominated by powerful monied interests," said member James Karis. "The name of the game today is 'one dollar, one vote' and the real loser is the American public."

Group members carried signs displaying their concerns which read, "We demand: Separation of wealth and state," "The US needs a pro-democracy movement too," and "There are no free elections in the U.S. ... they're for sale!!"

The skit centered around fictional Senator Snort, a "Demican" — rather than "Republicrat" — and his attempts to gather campaign funds. Four wealthy industries were represented by the "fat cats," group members with stuffed bellies, cat ears and tails.

The industries represented were medicine, oil and gas, weapons and banking. As the fat cats took turns bidding to "buy" the senator with millions of dollars, a man in a wheelchair with a $5 contribution was ignored.

When the comedic skit ended, members of the pro-democracy group spoke to the crowd of about 60 unsuspecting lunch-eaters, explaining the seriousness of the subject.

"We want every person to have an equal opportunity to run for office," said one member.

Co-founder Dennis Kelly told the audience about the group's agenda, which includes "replacing [the current system] with a system of citizen funding," and "equal broadcast media time" for political candidates.

The group will hold a meeting at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at Bangs Community Center in Amherst.

The Pioneer Valley Pro-Democracy Campaign was born when Kelly and three others noticed a lack of progress with their efforts in the environmental movement, Kelly said after the rally.

"Something needed to change here; we need a level playing field where people of ordinary means have the same opportunity as a millionaire," Kelly said.

The organization is best known for its involvement in last year's gubernatorial campaign when they influenced about 3,000 voters to vote "none of the above" in response to a lack of interest in the two candidates.

SGA to hold elections today

By JASON GEORGE
Collegian Staff

The Student Government Association will be holding elections today in that body's first campaign since the turbulent spring semester that saw the UMass administration attempt to restructure the SGA.

"This would be the best year to get involved — the administration has started to get involved," said Aronson, SGA co-election coordinator. "We have a chance for a fresh start, and for people to be there from the beginning would be a good thing."

Chancellor O'Brien issued a letter earlier this month asking the SGA to clarify its relationship to the administration and to address its reputed ineffectiveness.

Specifically, the letter asks that the SGA "work with representatives of the adminstration to draft a Relationship Statement," to be submitted to the Chancellor for approval by March 1, 1992.

The letter also requests that the SGA "undertake the necessary steps to develop a constitution to be submitted to the Chancellor by the end of this academic year."

Aronson said the SGA moved the deadline for nominations from Sept. 24 to Sept. 27 to accommodate people wanting to run for senate seats due to the low number of nomination papers that were taken out.

Aronson and Senate Speaker Bob Monaghan said while a lot of people take out papers and don't return them, many people also have friends write them in on the ballots.

Aronson said that there are many open positions in the Senate that no one is running for.

"If the administration is willing to work with us, I would hope that there are students out there that want to work also," Aronson said.

Aronson said he thought "budget cuts seem to be the main issue," for the SGA this year "and I would think everyone would want to get involved" in fighting cuts to the University.

Ballot boxes will be open today from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. Voting will be held in the Dining Commons for on-campus residents, in the Newman Center for the Greek Area and in the Hatch for commuters.

Teens fed LSD: Suspect surrenders, police investigate

Compiled by MARK PRESTON
Collegian Staff

An Amherst man turned himself over to Northampton authorities yesterday morning after a warrant had been issued by Town of Amherst Police last week for his arrest on a matter concerning LSD. Steven D. Woodbury Jr., 18, who gave his address as 641 West St., Amherst, was arrested on a warrant issued Thursday by the Town Amherst Police. He was charged with assault and battery with a dangerous weapon, possession with intent to distribute or dispense a class C substance, LSD, and violation of a restraining order.

Woodbury was charged later Monday afternoon with another count of assault and battery with a dangerous weapon and one count of possession with intent to distribute or dispense a class C substance.

He allegedly force-fed two 13-year-old girls LSD last Monday at the 641 West St. apartment, where police said he was staying. One of the girls was from Amherst and the other was from the neighboring town of Belchertown. LSD is an hallucinogenic.

One of the girls was admitted to Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton to be released later this week.

Police said the matter is still under investigtion.

■ arms

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

said.

"We need to verify how weapons will be destroyed and [that they won't be] sold to some Third World nation," Chayes said.

Despite the cuts in short-range nuclear weapons, the administration has stated its continued support for the B-2 bomber and for increased deployment of anti-ballistic missiles in the United States.

Chayes characterized the continued deployment of anti-ballistic missiles as "part of a wish list of anyone who has a particular interest" in maintaining costly, technologically advanced weapons, including defense contractors and the most conservative wings of the Republican Party.

Correction

The fireman shown in the photo accompanying the story entitled: "Student Force fighting fires," was not identified. He is Tom Walsh.

Also, due to a Collegian error, part of the story was inadvertently lost.

The Collegian regrets the error.

Styles By Deborah
549-5610
65 University Drive Amherst
$4.00 OFF With Cheryl Only
Professional Consultation and Style, Cut & Dry
Reg. $16.00 to $18.00
First time customers only • Exp.10/31/91
$5.00 OFF
Any Perm, Facial or Highlighting
First time customers only • Exp.10/31/91

5-87-32

EARN $7.00/HR FIGHT POLLUTION
Work for political change with Clean Water Action: environmental campaign staff. On bus lines. Paid training. P/T or career opportunity. Call 584-9830

DELANO'S
Proper Identification A Must 57 NORTH PLEASANT ST • 253-5141
Tuesday is TACO TUESDAY
FREE TACO BAR 9 - ???
Wednesday is WEDNESDAY WINGS
FREE WINGS 9 - ???
Also Miller Games Night FREE Giveaways
EVERY SUNDAY Settie and the Acoustic Wave
Drink of the Week Capt. Morgan & Coke $1.75
Shot of the Week Delano's Original Pain Aid $2.25
Beer of the Month Rolling Rock & Golden Anniversary $1.25

STAIRMASTER
AEROBICS
Low Impact
Step
Hi/Low
Nautilus
Free Weights
Cybex
Lifecycle
Biocycles
Treadmill
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
256-0080

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions on this page are those of the individual writer or cartoonist, and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian or the University unless otherwise noted.

Look out — it's notes from the Campus Center basement

Rejoice! Rejoice! I got an entry for graffitti of the week and it comes all the way from California, the state of sun, fun and natural disasters. "Lester Lov" (I seriously doubt that's his real name, even if he is from California) sent me a quote from Mae West that's apparently gracing the walls of some building somewhere: "I feel like a million tonight ... but one at a time."

Why do the dining commons serve scrod? It even sounds like a disease that makes your skin flake.

I remember way back when I was younger, drinking water was free. You didn't have to depend on Poland Springs to avoid dehydration. You could just serve yourself a glass right from the tap. Ah, childhood memories ...

Michael Jordan was on Saturday Night Live this week. You know you're popular when they name a shoe after you. I don't think we'll ever see the "Nixon Boat Shoe." But there could possibly be a "Reagan Loafer" in the works.

People ask me all the time: "Marc, what sort of difficulties do you encounter when you write your columns?" (no, they don't really ask me that, but it's a peachy-keen segue into this next topic) Well, there's just one restriction that I've had to deal with that's actually turned into a big help. I'm not allowed to swear. If I try to say [expletive], [expletive], or even just [expletive] the powers that be will replace the offensive word with a [expletive]-ing "expletive" in brackets, the [expletive] [expletives]. While at first I was a tad upset at this and shouted words like: "[expletive], [expletive], [expletive]" at them, I like it now. This "expletive" stuff makes swearing easier. Instead of having to come up with a clever combination of words involving people's mothers, barnyard animals and the size of their genitals, I can just write: [expletive], [expletive], [expletive]. And if they don't like it, they can just [expletive] off. Pretty cool eh?

Marc Elliot

Is it just me, or does everything that even drives through UMass get it's budget cut?

I got an invitation the other day to join the Golden Key Honor Society (no, I'm not bragging, read on! Read on!). Now I'm sure this organization is a very nice organization and all, being based on academic success and all that [expletive]. And I'm sure that the only reason I was included was because they ended up with the mailing list for Boneheads Unite by mistake, but I can't feel too honorable about the invitation for one little reason: in the letter was a sentence that said "send $45.00 for the lifetime membership by October 20." I just know I'm going to get a response to this.

Do Pulitzer Prize winners have to pay a fee for their little plaques? It's a good scam though, I'll give them that. Anyone who wants to join the Marc Elliott Honor Society send me a dollar. Everyone who joins gets a free cocktail napkin.

CIA director is the only job I know of that requires that you not know stuff. I wonder if they'd consider me for the illustrious position?

Suggestted headline for the Baghdad News (no I don't know if it really exists): "44 UN inspectors have huge tailgate party in nuclear weapons plant parking lot."

To get to the other side. (you already know the joke so I thought I'd just bore you with the punchline).

Am I just paranoid, or are those guys in the physical plant trucks following me?

So, that's all this week. So if you like my column, want to make a submission, have a bone to pick, or think that I'm a big burritto with limbs write in and tell me. Address the envelop to "Bonehead, Collegian, Campus Center, UMass." Until next time I'm going to ruin your whole week by forcing you to remember this single fact: Dr. Suess is dead.

Marc Elliot is an [expletive] Collegian columnist

A matter of adjustment

It's that dull ache you get in the bottom of your feet when you accidentally step, barefoot, into a puddle of cold, dank water in the bathroom. It's that stereo down the hall playing a song that makes you cringe thinking of the one you left behind. It's looking at the cracked, peeling paint and the big, foreboding water drips on the ceiling of the shower.

Elizabeth Stringer

Yeah, you've felt it. Waking up in the middle of the night and seeing the thing scuttle up the wall. It's ... homesickness. There, I said it.

O.K., I know that we're in college now, and that's sort of a taboo subject. You aren't supposed to miss your mom. You aren't supposed to miss your bed, or your dog. You're an adult now. You're supposed to be focused, to assimilate yourself into a new group of friends in a snap.

Let's get down to the nitty-gritty. Let's be really honest. No, let's be blunt. College is not the circus. It's not the carnival. It's not the fun house. It's not even the teacups. It's hard. It stinks. You'll at least hate something about it whether you let on or not. You'll want to go home, and this feeling will pass over you shortly after eating your first full meal at any of your local dining commons (I had to throw that in. What kind of column would this be without busting on the D.C. once or twice?).

You're a little insecure, so you are really careful around your new friends and your roommate. Excuse my French, but the only true icebreaker comes when someone expels gas. When you can toot your own horn and laugh about it, instead of pretending it wasn't you that just blew the cahoons, you've gotten somewhere. Yes, this is progress.

But be patient, for this milestone may not come for a long while. In fact, it could be weeks. Remember, good things take time.

O.K., so this is college. It's not exactly what you expected. Maybe it's more. Maybe it's less. But you're here. You're stuck and you can't go home, no matter how much you miss good ol' Spot.

Take it from one who knows. I lived the college homesickness nightmare last semester. I missed my mom. I missed my daddy. I missed my dog Ben and even my sister, whom I had fought with daily since the beginning of time.

I missed the little things about home too, like heat and clean laundry that I didn't have to pay for. I missed my friends and it got ugly around phone bill time. I won't even mention how much I missed my bathroom.

I have a message. I really do. It got easier. I felt it and I lived through it. That's the most important part. I'm still here. Imagine that. The girl who stood on the concourse, tears streaming down her face, red shoes on, heels tapping together, moaning, "There's no place like home, there's no place like home..."

Eventually, you'll find wonderful friends that you'll have a good time with. You'll miss them over breaks. You might even get used to the food here. Well, I take that one back. But you will get used to other things. Pretty soon, you might start to consider this your home away from home. You might want to live here year round. The dull ache will go away.

I'll admit that I will never get used to the bathrooms here. Yes, even I, the big junior, still miss my parents a little. Don't worry, it's natural. Everyone feels it.

I'll clue you in on something, because I like you. I think you have potential. Sometimes, when I have a bad day, you can still spot me out there on the concourse. Look for me. I'll be the one with the glittery red shoes on.

Elizabeth Stringer is a UMass student

In defense of multiculturalism

In response to some of the uneducated comments proposed by two uneducated men (i.e. Professors Paul Hollander and Arnold Silver in the September forum "Multiculturalism: Foe or Ally"), I chose to present my views on what multiculturalism stands for.

Multiculturalism is a learning process that is intended to expand knowledge that has previously been acquired from schooling or individual experiences. It does not censor other cultures nor does it necessarily condemn them. It is also a growth process that flourishes upon meeting people of Caucasian, Indian, Syrian, Kenyan, or Costa Rican descent, among many others.

Multiculturalism preaches, if you will, geocentrism as opposed to ethnocentrism. Multiculturalism has one crucial requirement and that is that there is a curiosity to learn and appreciate (not necessarily accept) cultures other than your own native one. Human nature and human trends throughout history are similar and this point is reinforced upon studying ethnically diverse people. Power, for example, is easily corrupted by people ranging from Corazon Aquino in the Philippines to Mabuto in Zaire to George Bush in the United States. The benefits given to the individual by learning and experiencing other people's history, art, music, and language can be intellectually rewarding, emotionally moving, and spiritually fulfilling.

These benefits are recycled and renewed and never truly die when they are translated and experienced across cultures. This occurs, one hopes, to the simultaneous interaction of the growth process and the learning process in the individual.

I speak from my own multicultural background which is, granted, an unusual case in point. I have no single culture - I was born in the Netherlands, spent my childhood in Chile, Mexico, and Nicaragua and my secondary studies were in Switzerland, the United States, and Swaziland. I have also traveled in India, Turkey, Europe, and Israel/Palestine.

My ego has been humbled due to the vast array of fascinating people I have met. I also wish to make clear that to live or travel in a country other than one's own does not necessarily qualify one as being "multicultural." This is why I believe the philosophy of multiculturalism begins internally but can only be aided externally through an expanded university curriculum.

Veronica de Vos
Northeast

Fraternity responds to "Cast of Thousands" comic

I applaud Barry Deutsch and his comic strip, "A Cast of Thousands" (Wednesday, September 25). His strip this time pointed, in a clever way, at the only group on campus that can be made fun of without causing an uproar. Those hideous fraternities.

It is about time these pig-headed men get what they deserve. It's a well-known fact that they perpetrate all the sexism and homophobia on this campus and should thus be abolished. Without these enclaves of testosterone we wouldn't have to worry about harassment of any kind. Just look at schools like Boston College and Yale University. These are schools where the massive number of gays, lesbians, and bisexuals enrolled is by itself evidence of the nonexistence of sexism and homophobia. That absence has of course been achieved through the abolition of fraternities on those campuses.

The only thing that amazes me is how these "men" manage to perpetrate so much harassment. Only about 600 strong, the Greek men on campus somehow manage to instigate thousands of "bashing" incidents a year. At first I believed it was due to the fact that these men never attended classes and thus had more time to drink beer and harass more minorities. However, I found that Greek men have a higher average GPA and graduation rate than the rest of campus. Thus, Greeks must make good use of their spare time. So, in between philanthropies (like the Delta Upsilon chariot race and Rosemary's Place fund drives), intramural sports (almost every fraternity fields a team in every sport), extra-curricular activities (ranging from debate to band to the Board of Governors), as well as Intrafraternity Conference meetings, social events, and fundraisers, they manage to harass every woman and homosexual on campus (not to mention every African-American, Asian, Hispanic, and Cape Verdean student). What a busy 600 people. I guess the only consolation we have is that upon graduation these brutes don't amount to anything. After all, Kevin Costner, Michael Eisner, Martin Luther King, over eighty percent of Congress, and all but two presidents since 1825 were in fraternities and it didn't get them anywhere.

Mr. Deutsch, don't let the fact that there are homosexual Greeks, including the chairman of the Fraternity Presidents Association, keep you from writing about them. After all, they make up well less than five percent of the student population so how much hell can they raise?

Matthew Keeling
President, Delta Chi Fraternity

CALDOR

Building Our Future.

At Caldor, Inc., our future begins with you. To those who display executive qualities - initiative, creativity, resolve, flexibility, and leadership, we offer our Executive Training Program. Designed for those who want to excel in business, this program provides a smooth transition from campus life to our dynamic organization.

Join us and learn more about how you can start building an exciting future with a retailing leader.

Please drop your resume off at the School of Management, Room 214, by October 1, 1991.

Caldor is an equal opportunity employer

Dinosaur jr.
with
GOBBLEHOOF
Sat., Oct. 5th, 1991
8pm (doors open at 7:30)

TIX ON SALE NOW
at TIX (UMass), For the Record (Amherst) & Main St. Records (Noho)
$8 UMass $10 All Others

DINOSAUR jr.

UNIVERSITY STORE
CAMPUS CENTER FOOD SERVICE
CAMPUS CENTER BOARD OF GOVERNORS

Presents

FREE FOOD AND BEVERAGES!

"TEST DRIVE" IBM PERSONAL COMPUTERS!

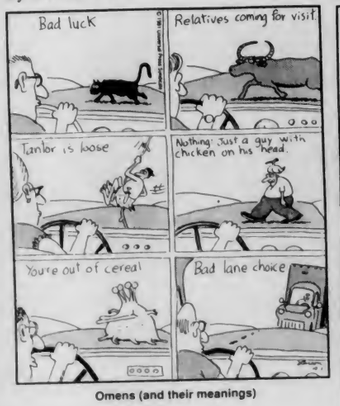
PRODUCT DEMONSTRATIONS, FREE SAMPLES, GAMES, ENTERTAINMENT!

CAMPUS FEST

DATE: October 1 & 2
TIME: 10 AM - 4 PM
PLACE: Student Union South Lawn

FEATURING: ■ IBM ■ CAMAY ■ SUNSHINE BISCUITS ■ AMERICAN EXPRESS ■ INTROSPECT ■ OBSESSION ■ NEWSWEEK ■ OLD SPICE ■ COLUMBIA HOUSE ■ PRINGLES ■ CAMPUS CONNECTION ■ SCHICK ■ MCI ■ STANLEY H. KAPLAN ■ JOSTENS

THE FAR SIDE
By GARY LARSON



Bad luck
Relatives coming for visit
Tanlor is loose
Nothing! Just a guy with chicken on his head.
You're out of cereal
Bad lane choice

Omens (and their meanings)

DOONESBURY
By GARRY TRUDEAU

HURRY UP WITH THOSE KEGS, HONEY! WE GOT A MILLION THINGS TO DO BEFORE THE NEW GROUND FORCES HIT TOWN!
NEW GROUND FORCES, SIR?
GOTTA PREPARE FOR THE WORST-CASE SCENARIO, HONEY! HAVE YOU NAILED THE FIRE DOORS SHUT YET?
THE FIRE DOORS, SIR?
TO KEEP THE LOCALS FROM STIFFING US ON THE COVER CHARGE! AND WHAT ABOUT THE MEN'S ROOM?
THE MEN'S ROOM, SIR?
HAVE YOU SWEPT IT FOR BOMBS? I WANT PEOPLE TO FEEL THEY CAN UNWIND HERE!

CALVIN AND HOBBES
By BILL WATTERSON

MAKING A SIGN?
I'M DECLARING THE CREEK BACK IN THE WOODS "CALVIN'S CREEK"
WHEN YOU DISCOVER SOMETHING, YOU'RE ALLOWED TO NAME IT AND PUT UP A SIGN
CALVIN'S CREEK
BUT SUPPOSE YOU DIDN'T DISCOVER THAT CREEK.
OF COURSE I DID! NOBODY ELSE HAS A SIGN THERE, RIGHT?
Hobs Crk

TANGELO PIE
By TIM SNIFFEN

You called for me, Sir?
Ah, yes! You're the officer that follows every student around the store at night to see if they're shoplifting!
Well, I think it's time for a new policy. I want you to start letting all those kids take whatever they want. "Specially the Yogurt-covered pretzels.
You're saying Let them shoplift, Sir?
Right. Hey, now can even help the lads get the heavier stuff into their car!
With due respect, Sir... Have you gone completely nutso?
Now, Now, soldier... Don't make me confine you to "Seafood"...

CAST OF THOUSANDS
By BARRY DEUTSCH

EVEN WORSE THAN "THE ACTS-17 POSTER, WE INTRODUCED ME TO HIS... WIFE...
WE CALLED HIM HIS— O, I CANNOT SAY IT!
SAY WHAT?
"LOVER"
CONSIDERING THE SITUATION, MY REACTION WOULDN'T BE REGARDED AS HOMOPHOBIC, WOULD IT?
LET ME BEAT UP MY PILLOW A BIT BEFORE ANSWERING THAT, STEPHEN...

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED
By SHADOW

CRUNCH! THERE'S NOTHING LIKE A HOT BOWL OF ALPHABET SOUP AT THE END OF A LONG DAY!
JOSEPH...
HEY ROONIE! DID YOU SAY SOMETHING TO ME?
NO, NOW @%$! OFF
I MUST BE LOSING MY MIND... I KNOW SOMEONE SPOKE TO ME.
IT'S ME. DANE. IN "H" SOUP!
WHAT THE SAM HILL?! DAVID LEE ROTH HAS APPEARED IN MY SOUP!
I'M THE ONE!

Quote of the Day

"If I had known, I would have been a locksmith."

--Einstein

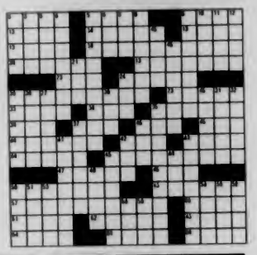
DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHAEL JAFFE

ACROSS
1 Secular
5 Expensive
9 Loony
13 Counterlenor
14 Crested heron
16 Hodgepodge
17 Per —
18 Ranking officer at West Point
20 Do a slow boil
22 Make believe
23 Salem's state: Abbr.
24 Allen or Martin
25 Sends
29 Sultan's decree
33 Cincinnati —
34 Summer on the Riviera
35 Canopy
36 Sentence connector
37 Quips companion
38 Shoe widths
39 Decade
40 Croquet player's need
42 Long-eared critter
43 Forefather
44 Nasty look
45 Miles, yards etc.
47 — Abdel Nasser
49 Bustling excitement
50 Mora courageous
53 Legendary wizard
57 Emulate John Chancellor
60 London gallery
61 Busy as —
62 Evil spirit
63 Level
64 Lairs
65 Fender bender
66 Challenge

DOWN
1 Youths
2 Hawaiian chief
3 Article
4 Campus meeting area
5 Gradual decrease of quantity
6 Sell
7 Upper limb
8 Sends money
9 World Series winners: 1988
10 Kirgiz mountain range
11 Huckleberry —
12 Carry
15 Domesticate
19 Armadas
21 Hesitant sounds
24 Fr. holy woman
25 Streetcars, in Britain
26 19th cen. French historian Ernest
27 Confuse
28 "— Never Too Late"
30 Garret
31 Plow inventor John —
32 Sea eagles
35 Holy scripture
37 Make effervescent
38 Double curve
41 Peas and beans
42 Feel rocky
43 Expressed disdain
45 Fitted about
46 Lemon additive
48 Repair
50 Horde
51 "Oh, — in England ...": Browning
52 Augury
54 Fluid rock
55 Roman highway
56 Hawaiian goose
58 Sout: Fr.
59 Heavy weight

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

N	A	M	E	D	E	I	T	A	F	L	O	W
E	M	I	L	I	O	T	T	I	C	I	R	O
W	O	R	K	H	O	R	S	E	P	A	N	A
T	R	E	■	O	K	E	■	R	O	I	S	K	E	M
S	E	D	A	T	E	■	A	E	D	O	F
■	■	■	V	E	N	I	S	■	R	O	B	O	T
D	E	W	I	L	D	E	R	■	S	E	A	L
A	N	O	A	■	S	L	E	E	P	■	S	C	O	T
N	O	R	T	H	■	D	A	K	O	T	A
■	S	K	I	A	L	■	S	P	I	T	■
B	R	I	E	F	S	■	V	O	Y	A	G	E
L	A	E	■	T	O	E	■	I	O	U	■	M	A	L
E	N	N	U	I	■	W	O	R	T	H	A	B	L	E
D	I	C	T	A	■	E	G	N	■	L	E	G
A	S	H	E	N	■	R	O	A	R	■	R	E	N	T



Menu

LUNCH
Clam Roll
Monte Cristo Sandwich

BASICS LUNCH
Clam Roll
Roman Rice and Beans

DINNER
Italian Night

BASICS DINNER
Italian Night

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES(March 21-April 19): Secret ambitions are beginning to stir; nurture them. Enrolling in high-tech courses may boost your income. Handle routine household matters with a positive attitude.

TAURUS(April 20-May 20): Favors are granted by someone who has the funds you need. Keep trying to break free of certain restrictions. Someone's unpredictable behavior could make you feel insecure.

GEMINI(May 21-June 20): Keep a low profile today. Other people may not take kindly to your suggestions. Learn from someone else's experiences. Romantic partner may insist on having things a certain way. Try to compromise.

CANCER(June 21-July 22): Your gentle personality is working in your favor. Collect any money owed to you by your friends. Those in artistic professions are on a creative high. Romance is a source of delight.

LEO(July 23-Aug. 22): Make the most of this day by making it a festive occasion. If your home feels empty, fill it with fun-loving people. Donate lime as well as money to a favorite charity.

VIRGO(Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Tender conversations and letters make all things seem bright and beautiful now. A romantic relationship may be puzzling. Socializing will create a harmonious environment for your friends and family.

LIBRA(Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A project will get off the ground with a flourish. Your domestic ideas meet with new approval. Take command via timely correspondence. Others are eager to hear what you have to say.

SCORPIO(Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A career or domestic battle commands your attention today. Arm yourself with facts and you will march to victory. Romance is uplifting. Wear your heart on your sleeve if sure of your feelings.

SAGITTARIUS(Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Find a constructive outlet for all that physical energy! Offer your help to those in need. By tackling a difficult problem head-on, you will emerge triumphant. Romance brings out your tender side.

CAPRICORN(Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Self-confidence comes from trying something new and succeeding. Play the role of peacemaker in a difficult situation. An older person does you a big favor. Show you gratitude in tangible ways.

AQUARIUS(Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be reticent when it comes to discussing your finances and private affairs with your neighbors or relatives. Cooperation rather than a showdown will preserve harmony on the home front.

PISCES(Feb. 19-March 20): Add to your resources instead of making unnecessary withdrawals. Convince your mate and other loved ones to adopt a policy of thrift. Do not press your luck by changing investments.

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Marc Elliott
Copy Editor.....Joanne Quimby
PhotoTechnician.....Carrie Wyeth
Production Supervisor.....Terry Starmer
Production.....Beth Butts, Traci-Ann DiSalvatore

3rd BASS

with special guests
Nikki D & KMD

Tues., Oct. 1, 1991
8pm (doors at 7:30)
in the UMass
Student Union
Ballroom

TIX ON SALE NOW
At Tix (UMass), For the Record
(Amherst) & Main St. Records (Noho)

$10 UMass
$15 All Others

30 MINUTE GUARANTEED DELIVERY OR $3.00 OFF

WE REDEEM COMPETITOR'S COUPONS SO YOU DON'T HAVE TO EAT THEIR QUALITY....

Buy any Large Pizza, Get 2nd Pizza for only $1.99
DELIVERED IN 30 MINUTES OR LESS
NOT GOOD WITH ANY OTHER OFFER
OFFER EXPIRES 12/30/91

Buy any Pan Pizza, Get 2nd Pizza for only $1.99
DELIVERED IN 30 MINUTES OR LESS
NOT GOOD WITH ANY OTHER OFFER
OFFER EXPIRES 12/30/91

UMASS • 256-8911 MT. HOLYOKE • 535-1111
VISA/MASTERCARD

Classifieds

COME TO THE COLLEGIAN OFFICE 113 CAMPUS CENTER • THURSDAY 8:30-3:30 FRIDAY 8:30-2:30 • DEADLINE IS TWO DAYS PRIOR TO PUBLICATION • 20¢/WORD/DAY FOR STUDENTS • CASH IN ADVANCE

ACTIVITIES

DINOSAUR Jr.
Saturday, Oct 5 8pm in the SUB
$8-UMass $10-others buy tix now!
at Tix, For the Records, Main St Records

TRI-SIGMA OPEN RUSH
9/30 & 10/2 7-8 PM
10/1 & 10/3 5-6 PM
387 N Pleasant St
549-3811

ANNOUNCEMENTS

3rd BASE uNikki D + KMI.
Tues Oct1 at 8(doors open 7:30)
Tix $10-UMass $15-others
On sale now at Tix, For the Record, Main St Records

Bed and Breakfast. Downtown Amherst 549-0733

CAMPUS CRUSADE FOR Christ welcomes you to a 5wk. investigative study concerning Christ's claims Tues Nights 7:30pm CC mtg posted

"FRAUD AND THE SUPERNATURAL" By Dan Korem CC Auditorium Oct 10 8 PM Sponsored by Campus Crusade For Christ

NONVIOLENCE INTERNATIONAL wants you! We are a non-profit, non-partisan organization which educates and trains groups in nonviolent action. We seek motivated students to organiza local chaptars. Write Ni, Box 39127, Friendship Station, Washington, DC 20016

"OPEN RUSH"
Alpha Chi Omega!!!
Come to dinner with us, find out what we're all about! 3 nights, Sept. 30- Oct.2 Come at 5:15-
ALPHA CHI OMEGA!
38 Nutting Ave.
549-8459

STUDENT LOCKERS AVAILABLE in Student Union. For storage of books and other personal belongings. Register at OCHO 426 Student Union

AUTO FOR SALE

92 MERCURY CAPRI New brakes, muffler, battery, shocks good condition $1000 256-3020

84 FORD ESCORT New brakes, muffler very reliable $1000 665-4602-evenings

89 VW 2 door hatchback Excellent condition Owner moved 665-3759

AWESOME 1976 BUICK CENTURY Trouble Free! Sunroof $400 writ bargain 253-3908

CLASSIC 1965 VW convertible model 1300 $3000 5460057

SEIZED CARS, trucks, boats, 4wheelers, motorhomes by FBI, IRS, DEA. Available your area now Call 805-682-7555 Ext C-1675.

VW RABBIT '82 Diesel Runs well 40miles per gallon call 802-254-5803

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

REPOSSESSED AND IRS foreclosed homes available at below market value. Fantastic savings! You repair. Also S and L bailout properties. Call 805-682-7555 Ext H-2009

DO YOU PLAY KEYBOARDS?

The band SPANISH FLY is seaking kayboardist- Rush, Boston, etc -Call 5466404

ENTERTAINMENT

RACK-A-DISC! $175.00 DJs, VJs, Karaoke for house/ Formal parties, Call 586-9900

FOR RENT

1 BR. APT in center of Amherst - next to bars, bus, food. $500 includes heat & hot water. 253-0688/545-3149

EXECUTIVE RENTAL RENT or rent with option to buy 4 bedroom luxuries house in Amherst woods Call 253-7879

FRIDGE RENTALS 253-9742 Free delivery

TOWNHOUSE 2 bedroom 1 1/2 bath apartment on bus route North Amherst 1-567-1352

FOR SALE

BONDWELL-B310-PLUS Laptop -LCD Backlit
Superfast 16MHZ 286-40MEG Hard disk 3 batteries + Charger-1MEG RAM
1.44 M Floppy-B Chargar + $3000 Worth of programs Weighs only 7lbs! Asking for $999.- Call Said @ 546-3932

CENTURIAN IRONMAN EXPERT Excellent condition, low mileage, Bought new for $600, Selling for $350/BO, Call Chris 253-3608

COMICS!- McFarland Spideys, X-Titles, Justice League. Many more! VF-Near mint 546-3403

DEAD TRADE- Have Saturday need Thursday 256-1183

FAT CHANCE! 21", Like new. Framasat $450, complete $775. 253-4040, massage

FAST FUNDRAISER $1000/WK
Greeks, Clubs, Anyone
(800) 748-6817

FREE SPRING BREAK trip + cash! Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas! Sell trips on campus and earn free trip + bonus cash! Four Seasons 1-800-331-3136

FREE TRAVEL- Air couriers and cruiseships. Students also needed! Christmas, spring and summer for amusement park employment Call 805-682-7555 Ext F-1426

FIREWOOD
Semi-dry, cut, split + delivered $90.00 per cord (128 ft.) 1/2 cord min Call Leon 549-6231 Leave message

FREE CAP WHEN you buy my Ford F150 4x4 Call Steve 253-7922

FUTONS!
Lowest prices and quick delivery!
Call Metawampe 585-1233
Free brochure available

GUNS 'N' ROSES tix $100 for pair for 9/28 586-2856

Jerry & Sara, Wild Boys. Pig Tangent 63 KFOG Call Jeff 549-7686

MACCLASSIC 40/2 MINT w/software $1100 B.O. 665-3738

Pr. Infinity RS3000 Spkrs. Two way w/ Polycell twtr. Mint cond. Pd. $380 will sell $225/bo Call John 546-1671

SMITH CORONA LAPTOP word processor. Separate printer, battery, carrying case, disks, spreadsheet program 400 or B.O. 542-3194

SUPER MT. BIKE PACKAGE
Babied 1991
KHS Montana Summit LX
Allen car bike rack
Kryptonite U-lock
KHS water bottle and cage
$450 or B.O.
Mike 253-0611

THREE FOOT! Acoustic speakers perfect only $200 electronic typewriter! $100 253-3908

TYPEWRITERS- 2 SC electric excellant condition 549-0058

FOUND

FOUND- Gold bracelet-between Hartar and FAC on 9/25 Call 6-7292

HELP WANTED

BE ON T.V. Many needed for commercials now hiring all ages. For casting info Call (615) 779-7111 Ext. T-227

EARLY RISERS- Earn great $. Deliver newspapers on campus. 548-9688. 9 to 5.

EARN $6/HOUR
Spanish/English bilinguals needed for reading study -Jeanetta 585-6749

"Know before you go," Where to work, live and ski free in Colorado's resorts. "Current guide to Aspen, Vail, Breckenridge and more! $16.95. Call 1-800-786-6174

PEACE AND JUSTICE organization seeks workstudy, 10 hour administrative assistant position. $4.50-5.50 per hour. Call Carolyn at 256-8306

POSTAL JOBS AVAILABLE! Many positions Great benefits Call 805-682-7555 Ext P-3306

WANT A GREAT JOB WITH RECYCLING? Hard work and lots of fun. 15 hrs/week. 4.55 hr. Must have a drivers license Call the Residential Recycling Program at 545-1153

KNOW YOUR RIGHTS

Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact The Legal Services Center. 922 Campus Center. 545-1995

 LEGAL HELP **

Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning leases? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact the Legal Services Center, 922 Campus Ctr. 545-1995

LOST

HEIRLOOM ANTIQUE CAMEO RING was great grandmother's Varonica da Vos. 546-6214 leave message

HELP! I lost my keys- Mickey Mouse/ Backbone keyring. Lost Thursday AM batwaen Machmer and Harter. Call Chris 549-1244

LOST- Camo nylon jacket-US Cavalry made Great personal value -Lost 9/25 between Lot 25 & Herter -Call Rob at 6-4719 Leave message

LOST -REWARD BEAT-UP Brown leather jacket left in Mahar after Wednesday night class !! found contact Jay at 548-9915

PERSONALS

WATCH OUT ME!! Shana Tolkan is 20 today! Happy birthday Shana!!! Luv, Amy

JEREMY,
Nine months since we first star gazed
I love you!
Your Amerasian Princess

KERRI A. Call me in Sunderland Anne K

DIANE DAVIS IS 21 today, but she promised she wouldn't drink today or tonight Here's to an incredible six months. Quggle Quggle. Love, Me

Congratulations to all the Sigma Kappa's who made deans list last semester! Ann Marie, Micky, Denise, Linda, KristinD, Dana, Kelly, Donna, Amy, Cheryl, Cari, Kristin! you guys are the best! Love your scholarship chair

Thanks 4th floor Lewis for letting us into your hearts and home! R&M

ASTRO-
You're the greatest!
-Christine, Nicole and Kathleen

RESUME SERVICE

Cutting Edge Resumes. Complete resume service. Writing, laser printing, letters, advice. 549-0367

ROOMMATE NEEDED

FEMALE ROOMMATE NEEDED, Brandywine apt 549-7675

-MALE NON-SMOKER to share great apartment on bus route, prefer jnr. or sr. grad $175/mo. Call Doug and Val at 256-8723 live mes

SERVICES

FREE pregnancy testing; confidential and caring support. BIRTHRIGHT 233 No. Pleasant Street Amherst 549-1906

SENIORS
Time to think about resumes Get professional resumes at college prices. Call Andy at A Expert Resumes 549-4002

TRAVEL

MONTREAL BAR CRAWL Weekends College weekend Nov 9th-11th From $89 .. Group leaders travel free and earn $$$ -Call today 617-444-1111

RUSSIA AND THE UKRAINE! Jan 6-20, 1992 Moscow, Leningrad, Kiev, plus Helsinki, Finland. $2045 complete from New York. Call Prof. Jones, 253-7827, evenings after 7:00

SAVE $40 ON Northwest Air! $40 off $190 travel voucher Call 15833359

TRAVEL FREE! Campus representatives wanted to earn intersession and spring break trips. 256-8254

Sports

In the dark shadow of Mullins Arena

It was quite a contrast.

There on Lower Boyden field, the University of Massachusetts men's soccer team was taking the field for a match against Northeastern.

In the distance rose the steel and concrete monstrosity that will soon be the Mullins Arena, future home of UMass basketball, a hockey team and maybe my graduation. 40 million dollars of concrete, steel, planning and labor.

In the shadow of the construction site a soccer team stretched out and ran sprints. By all rights they weren't even supposed to be there. Men's soccer had been cut from the University budget last spring and only last minute fund-raising and negotiations kept the Minutemen afloat. Were that not enough, a new head coach had to be found as well.

What murderous irony. A 40 million dollar white elephant, already bought and paid for, in the same field of view as an athletic team the University couldn't afford.

I will be the first to agree that UMass needs Mullins Arena, should have Mullins Arena, should've had it years ago. I also know that the money has been spent for it already, and there's no reason why it shouldn't be built.

Greg Sukiennik

Still, there's a double standard here. While it may be true that Mullins is both needed and paid for, when you can afford a hockey rink for a non-existent hockey team but you can't put a long-established soccer team on the field, something is wrong with the way you spend money.

Then again, big money and soccer have never gone hand in hand in America. Oh, they've tried, and they're trying again with the 1994 World Cup. But soccer just hasn't become popular in the United States because it doesn't conform to the rule of television, and that's a real shame.

Every sport on television either lends itself to commercial breaks or, in the case of basketball, creates them. Soccer has no such breaks, therefore making it a hard sell for commercials.

This isn't a big deal anywhere but in America. Other nations love the game so much that making big money off of it comes second. Money rules the United States, however, and without capital backing a high-calibre, world-class professional league is at best difficult, if not impossible.

Look at pro soccer's history in the United States and you'll see what I mean. Remember the North American Soccer League? It might have survived had it garnered decent T.V. ratings and not over-expanded its team membership. The NASL met neither of these challenges and hence went the way of the WHA, the ABA, the USFL and Team Tennis — answers to obscure trivia questions. "I'll take the Tampa Bay Rowdies for $500, Alex."

However, soccer's illegitimate cousin, indoor soccer, has managed to survive. The corporate Frankensteins created a game that moved faster and made money, but compared to the intricacies of real "football," it's not quite the same. What it amounts to is a lot of gimmicks. Loud music? Light shows? An orange ball? Please.

People say that soccer is boring. I say you think it's boring because you haven't seen it or don't understand it. If you know even the most fundamental concepts of the game — good passing, good spacing between positions and conditioning — a soccer match is fun to watch. Occasionally tempers flare up, or referees make bad calls, and that makes for some interesting theatre besides the tension of the game.

There is potential for soccer in this country. Enough people are interested in the sport that it could become a viable money-maker. Think back to this summer, when a United States-Ireland match drew a near-capacity crowd at Foxboro Stadium.

If not for any other reason, the coming of the World Cup to American stadiums is reason enough for the University to continue funding men's soccer. The fact that college soccer is just about as high as you can go with the sport in this country, unless you make the national team, is another.

Two women's sports, lacrosse and volleyball, have already been axed completely from the University's athletic program. Spring tennis is but a spring memory. Part of the explanation for letting these programs die was that they didn't make money — just like professional soccer didn't make money.

Some things are more important than money. Like playing a sport for the love of it.

Greg Sukiennik is a Collegian staff member

Women's soccer rolling on

They eek out two 1-0 victories at George Mason

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts women's soccer team continued to roll as it defeated both George Mason and Saint Mary's (CA) by a score of 1-0 this weekend at George Mason.

The Minutewomen (6-1) extended their winning streak to four and may move up from No. 8 in the national rankings this week.

"We played good this weekend, we did what it took to win," said coach Jim Rudy. "It was pleasing to see my team respond to these teams. They are difficult teams to play, each had an odd style [of play]."

On Saturday, Massachusetts carried the play to 20th ranked George Mason. With 10 minutes remaining Kim Eynard broke the scoreless tie on a penalty shot. Eynard placed the shot into the left corner, eluding the dive of goaltender Jen Brennan.

The penalty shot was set up as UMass' Michele Woodside collected the ball at midfield, beat Tammi Pearman and drove down the right flank. As Woodside entered the penalty area, Pearman tried to catch her and ended up tripping her from behind, causing the penalty.

"It was a Michele Woodside, pattented flank run, she carried the ball about 50-yards," Rudy said. "Pearman just made a freshman mistake and it cost them. We normally use Paula Wilkens on penalty shots but Brennan had seen Paula a lot in club action so we went with our number two, and Kim came through."

Briana Scurry held on for the shutout, facing 19 shots and making seven saves, although none were spectacular.

"Bri didn't have a lot of difficult stuff to handle, she made one good save with five minutes left but everything else was routine," Rudy said. "Our defense kept them out, everyone did a nice job from our front people keeping their backs out of play to our midfielders who intercepted a lot of passes. It was an all around effort."

It was more of the same on Sunday as UMass dropped St. Mary's 1-0. It was Scurry's fourth straight (fifth on the season) shutout in a row.

Massachusetts dominated play throughout the game but were continually shutdown by St. Mary's net minder Nat Swanson, who had 17 saves.

"Swanson was spectacular," Rudy said. "She was everywhere, she had to be, we just killed them in the first half. It was the best attacking half of the entire season for us."

UMass kept the ball in the St. Mary's end for almost the entire half, forcing nine corners and Swanson to make 10 saves.

Swanson made two touch saves on Amy Cockley and Amy Trunk both times batting shots over the crossbar.

"They were playing a man-to-man on the corners, we hadn't seen that yet this year and Wilkens wasn't placing her serves well so we got nothing on the corners," Rudy said. "At half we set up a play putting Eynard and [Barbara] Verdoliva on the goal line and that opened the front of the net for us."

The plan worked as in the 70th minute on UMass' 10th corner of the day Wilkens served the ball out front and Holly Helmuth headed it by Swanson. It was Helmuth's fifth tally of the season, four of those have come on corners.

"Wilkens put in a good ball and Holly headed it in," Rudy said. "We finally got the result on the 10th shot. After that we just ran out the game.

"This was a good weekend for us, we know we aren't a great goal scoring team but we've been working on it. We have been doing what we need to do to get it done."

Next up for the Minutewomen is undefeated New Hampshire, next Saturday in Pepperill, Mass.

Collegian file photo

The women's soccer team won two games this past weekend improving their record to 6-1.

UMass men's XC places eighth

By KEITH BENNETT
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts men's cross country team placed eight out of nine teams at the Dartmouth Cross Country Meet of Champions Saturday. As expected, the meet was dominated by the six nationally ranked teams in the meet.

The NCAA poll should have a new look next week as no. 12 Michigan took the team title, edging no. 7 Wake Forest 66 to 67 and Dartmouth (no. 27) finished third with 75, just ahead of William and Mary (no. 16), who scored 77. Iona (no. 39) edged Georgetown (no. 19) for fifth 102 to 104. Fairleigh Dickinson was seventh (199), UMass eighth (239) and Vermont ninth (252).

"You could run this meet over tomorrow and come up with a different order of the top four teams, and there would still only be 10 points separating first from fourth," UMass coach Ken O'Brien said of the meet's closeness. "I wouldn't have wanted to predict the outcome of this meet beforehand."

Iona's Packie Mulvaney was the individual winner in the race, covering the five mile course in 24:25.

Matt Simon was the top finisher for the Minutemen. He placed 40th in a time of 25:40.

Joining Simon in the top five for UMass were Keith Willis (48th in 25:52), Mike Davis (63rd, 26:32), Pat Reed (66th, 26:40) and Craig Cormier (67th, 26:42).

O'Brien said he was pleased with the way Simon and Willis ran.

"Matt Simon and Keith Willis ran very well," he said. "They both went out hard and finished strong. It's the third week in a row that those two have run well against tough teams."

Although O'Brien was not happy with the final results of the meet, he believes his runners gained some valuable experience by competing against a number of nationally ranked teams.

"I was pleased with the way the kids prepared themselves, mentally, for the meet," O'Brien said. "We were just a little bit over our heads. Hopefully, we can use this experience in the future."

The Minutemen are idle this weekend and will use the extra time to prepare for the Oct. 11 meet with Providence and Connecticut, currently ranked 11th and 20th, respectively, in the NCAA poll.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THE LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND

VOLUME CI ISSUE 21 WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 2, 1991

GEO rejects contract; negotiations continue

By DAVID MASSEY
Collegian Staff

The Graduate Employee Organization's membership unanimously voted yesterday to reject the University of Massachusetts administration's contract proposal and to send the union's negotiating team back to the table.

In addition, members cast their votes in a secret ballot — about which details were not disclosed — that will continue through the week.

The administration did not move at closed-door negotiations on Monday on the four major demands that GEO wants on their first union contract.

Jill Havens, a member of the GEO negotiating team, said if further negotiations fail, "depending on the results of this secret ballot, further action will follow, possibly."

At the two-hour meeting, members of the GEO coordinating team presented to the membership details concerning which issues the administration has agreed to accept. The meeting, which was punctuated with loud shouts of approval from the packed auditorium, had an "angry and rowdy" atmosphere, Havens said.

According to an anonymous source, the administration has offered to GEO binding arbitration, one of their four demands, but has not agreed to the remaining three issues: health fee waivers, job security, and agency fee. As a result, members unanimously refused to ratify the current proposal as offered by the administration.

Emily Isaacs, the co-speaker of the GEO, said, "I think people are very concerned about the issues, very angry about what they perceive as a lack of progress and very clear as to their power as an organized group of employees."

Isaacs said she hopes the administration will grant GEO their demands during further negotiations with the five-member administration negotiating team. "The administration has been known to change its mind," she said. "We've seen the administration move before, we expect to see them move again."

The GEO, which represents over 2000 graduate employees on campus such as teaching and research assistants, is the largest union on campus. The GEO has been negotiating with the University since January 1991.

The organization has threatened to take "decisive action" if their demands remain unrealized.

Jeanine Maland, a teaching assistant in the women's studies department, is writing her master's thesis on the history of the health-care structure at the University, which she feels is the primary issue in this contract conflict.

"The health fee is pricing people out of this University," Maland said. She quoted Health Services figures that show a graduate employee pays close to $1000 per year for health care and one with a family pays just over $2000, which is 30 percent of the average teaching assistant's salary.

Maland also said many graduate employees hold extra jobs to raise supplementary income or simply go without health care. "That's totally unacceptable," Maland said.

Collegian photo by Carrie Wyeth

WE'RE NOT COMING OUT UNTIL OUR DEMANDS ARE MET — UMass students Dan Mosley and John Kenney make the best of being stuck in a John Adams Residence Hall elevator.

Decision on Herndon's eligibility due today

By TAMIR LIPTON
Collegian Staff

1. By signing this Letter I understand that if I enroll in another institution participating in the National Letter of Intent Program prior to the completion of one academic year, I may not represent that institution in intercollegiate athletic competition until I have been in residence in that institution for two calendar years and in no case will I be eligible for more than two seasons of intercollegiate competition in any sport, unless the provisions of Paragraph 11 are fulfilled.

11. A release procedure shall be provided in the event the student-athlete and the institution mutually agree to release each other from any obligations of the Letter. A student-athlete receiving a formal release shall not be eligible for competition at the second institution during the first academic year of residence and shall lose one season of competition. The form must be signed by the student-athlete, his parent or legal guardian, and the Director of Athletes at the institution which he signed. A copy of the release must be filed with the conference which processes the Letters of the signing institution.

— The 1988 National Letter of Intent

This is what is causing all the confusion. These two clauses in this one letter — a National Letter of Intent, a document that William Herndon, UMass' 6-foot-3 forward, signed with the University of Richmond during his senior year in high school, back in 1988.

All the questions and speculation regarding Herndon's eligibility for the upcoming basketball season may all be over today, when a decision is due in Chicago.

"I'm definitely nervous," Herndon said. "I just want to go to Chicago, answer any questions the committee asks me and hope for a good outcome."

Herndon, along with assistant coach James "Bruiser" Flint, Athletic Director Frank McInerney and Assistant Athletic Director Elaine Sortino are headed to the Windy City this morning to present arguments in front of the National Letter of Intent Steering Committee.

The five-man committee is made up of five conference commissioners: Fred Jacoby, of the Southwest Conference, David Price, of the Pacific-10, Clayton Chapman, of the Eastern College Athletic Conference, Karl Benson, of the Mid-American Conference, and James Haney of the Big West.

The conflict is this: the NCAA has a rule which states that if a player transfers schools, he must sit out one academic year, which Herndon did.

The National Letter of Intent Committee, an organization separate from, but recognized by the NCAA, has its own rule which states that if a player transfers between semesters (which Herndon did), he must sit out an additional year. Unless, (and this is where paragraph 11 above comes in) the school which he transferred from, Richmond, grants his release, which it apparently did not do.

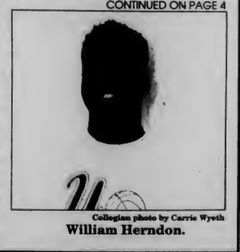
Chris Moore, director of Sports Information at Richmond, speaking for Athletic Director Charles Boone, declined to comment.

"Mr. Boone has no feeling on it one way or another," he said.

The bottom line is, that because Herndon transferred before the completion of his first full season and Richmond did not consent to the transfer, he must sit out an additional year.

"If the institution is not gonna grant your release, then you have to sit out a second year," said Mike Tranghese, the

CONTINUED ON PAGE 4



Collegian photo by Carrie Wyeth

William Herndon.

SGA election turnout low

By JASON GEORGE
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Student Government Association held elections last night, in a campaign marked by few contested elections and a low turnout of student voters.

Senior Stephen McAfee, the chair of the SGA Governmental Affairs committee that oversees the elections, noted that "turnout was below average." In Orchard Hill and Central, for example, there was only one contested election.

Junior Jen Wood, elected as Commuter Area Government President last night, said the low turnout could be attributed to student's uncertainty about the role of the SGA.

"I think you can explain [the lack of turnout] by a lot of people who were around last year thinking there was no Senate [this year]," Wood said. "People weren't apt to vote."

The administration attempted to take over the SGA last spring and replace it with a new structure based on a referendum proposed by the Commission on Student Governance. The referendum, however, failed early last May.

The most competitive race in last night's election was for vice president of Central Area Government, with Kristin Johnson beating Heather Long 109 votes to 68. Tony Ong was elected president of Central with 132 votes.

Residence Halls with relatively high turnouts included Baker (Central), where Johnson and Steven Mahoney were elected to the Senate and Kennedy (Southwest), with Nathan Guerrero and Jason Wisuri winning uncontested.

McAfee noted that results were unofficial until senators could be contacted to confirm their interest in accepting a senate seat.

The Commuter Area elected 30 new senators, including Wood and top vote-getter Ken Parker, who received 31 votes.

The SGA elections occur under a framework where one senator is elected per 250 students.

Despite the low turnout, Wood and McAfee are optimistic about the coming year.

"I see this as being a much better year [than last]," Wood said. "We're not going to be working for the administration or for the faculty, but for each other."

Wood also said people who weren't elected to the SGA could still get involved through joining SGA and University-Wide Committees.

Anti-affirmative action writer to speak tonight

Author Dinesh D'Souza, well-known opponent of affirmative action, will be speaking tonight at 8pm at Amherst College.

D'Souza's controversial book, Illiberal Education: The Politics of Race and Sex on Campus, has brought the topic of preferential treatment for minorities in the academic world out into the forum for examination and discussion.

The book analyzes political correctness at well-known universities such as Berkeley, Stanford, Howard, Duke, Harvard and Michigan. D'Souza questions admissions policies, arguing that for minorities, the criteria has become not academic merit, but ethnic representation.

Illiberal Education also asserts that universities who are centered around multiculturalism curriculums have faculty assembled not by intellectual standards, but by race and gender categories. The book

CONTINUED ON PAGE 4

Inside:

Page 3:
Fiscal hard times make the Newman Center's annual Phon-A-Thon especially important.
Page 5:
Columnist Saad Hopkins talks about survival in the age of AIDS.
Page 7:
Alex Nguyen examines the issue of multiculturalism at UMass from a new perspective.
Page 12:
Women's tennis sweeps weekend schedule with two wins.

Weather

Cloudy morning frowns give way to sunny afternoon smiles. Highs in the 70s.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THE LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is a Registered Student Organization of the University of Massachusetts, published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000.

113 CAMPUS CENTER AMHERST, MA 01003
Phone (413) 545-3500 FAX (413) 545-1592

STAFF

Editor in Chief ..... Gayle Long
Managing Editor ..... Marc Elliott
Editorial Editor ..... Greg Sukiennik
News Editor ..... Preston P. Forman
Sports Editor ..... Tamir Lipton
Arts Editor ..... Paul DeGeorges
Photography Editor ..... Carrie Wyeth
Black Affairs Editor ..... Sondra Sutton
Women's Issues Editor ..... Jessame Hannus
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Trystan Skeigh
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Alexander Nguyen
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Madannohan Rao
Jewish Affairs Editors ..... Felice Cohen, Debra Kriegsman
Business Manager ..... Randee Pastel
Advertising Manager ..... Dena Haselkorn
Finance Manager ..... Jeff Weiner
Circulation Manager ..... Jim Winterbottom
Subscriptions Manager ..... Stacy Rogers
Promotions Manager ..... Scott Macey
Production Manager ..... Terry Starmer
Day Graphics Manager ..... Jenn Burns

PROFESSIONAL STAFF

Business ..... Brian Harrington, Lori Black, Maureen Majerowski
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements that run on a space-available basis for campus and local non-profit organizations. Because of space constraints, the Collegian cannot print all FYIs submitted and no announcements can be repeated.

To submit an FYI, please send a TYPED press release with all pertinent information to 113 Campus Center c/o News Editor. FYIs cannot be taken over the phone.

Wednesday, October 2

Campus Fest — The "Campus Fest" will be held on the Library Lawn from 10 a.m.-4 p.m..

Lecture— The Distinguished Visitors Program is presenting Doors drummer John Densmore whose lecture entitled, "Riding on the Storm - The Doors, The 60s and Now," will begin at 8 p.m. in the Bowker Auditorium. Admission is free for UMass students and $2 for the general public.

Meeting — SGA ops. is sponsoring a Senate Meeting from 7 p.m.-1 a.m. in the Student Union Ballroom.

Lecture — The Slavic Dept. will host a talk by Daniel St. Johns on "Russians Among Us: The Evangelical Christians" at 7 p.m. in Herter Hall 601.

Meeting — Spectrum Magazine is having a general meeting at 6 p.m. in Campus Center room 917.

Thursday, October 3

Lecture — Hillel is sponsoring a lecture by Grace Paley from 7:30 p.m.-10:30 p.m. at the Student Union Ballroom. Admission is $2.00 for Hillel members and $3.00 for the general public.

Meeting — The Latin American Studies Program is holding its annual Fall information meeting and reception from 4 p.m.-5 p.m. in the 6th Floor Lounge of Thompson Hall.

Film — The GEO is sponsoring the film "Matewan" at 7 p.m. in the outer courtyard of the graduate lounge.

Film — The film "Longtime Companion" will be shown at 7 p.m. in the Campus Center room 803.

Lecture — The Asian Languages and Literature Dept. will be sponsoring a lecture by Janet Gyatso on "Dancing Moons: No-self Self in the Autobiography of a Tibetan Visionary" at 7:30 p.m. in Thompson Hall room 100.

Meeting — The Five College European Club will be holding a meeting at 7:30 p.m. in the Jordan House Living Room at Smith College.

Friday, October 4

LBGA — The LBGA will be sponsoring a Coffee Social from 3 p.m.-6:30 p.m. in the Campus Center room 903.

STAIRMASTER
AEROBICS
Low Impact
Step
Hi/Low
Nautilus
Free Weights
Cybex
Lifecycle
Biocycles
Treadmill
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
256-0080

AMHERST CINEMA
Now Playing
FREDDY'S DEAD
THE FINAL NIGHTMARE
Showtimes:
Fri. - Sun
Two shows at 7pm & 9pm
Mon-Thurs
One show at 7:30pm
Adults $4.00
Student w/valid I.D. $3.00

家酒園南湖 Hunan Garden Restaurant
MANDARIN/SZECHUEN CUISINE
The Best Chinese Buffet
MANDARIN/SZECHUAN CUISINE
10 Belchertown Rd. • Route 9 Amherst • 256-0251/0252
WE DELIVER IN AMHERST 5-9:30 EVERYDAY
NEW Minimum $15 plus $2 delivery charge
BUFFET & SUNDAY BRUNCH
Buffet served 5-8 p.m. Sun.-Thurs.
Brunch served Sunday 11:30 a.m.-3 p.m.
ALL YOU CAN EAT $5.99
Children under 10 - $3.00

EARN $7.00/HR
FIGHT POLLUTION
Work for political change with Clean Water Action: environmental campaign staff. On bus lines. Paid training. P/T or career opportunity. Call 584-9830

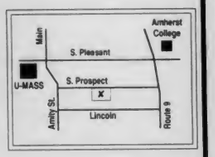
Some of the biggest, some of the best presents come in the smallest boxes!
silverscape designs

STEINBECK COLLISION REPAIR & AUTOBODY
53 So. Prospect -Amherst Center
256-8157 • 256-1385



- Imports & other unibody vehicles are our specialty.
- State of the art equipment for precision frame and unibody straightening (+or-1/2 mm)
- Over 90 years staff experience.
- Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass replacement.
- Advanced European Technology Painting and Refinishing Systems.

Remember it's your car and your choice of repair facilities.

Shop Registration # RS1212

UMass Hillel
&
the Center for Judaic Studies present
GRACE PALEY
Thursday, October 3, 1991
7:30 pm
Student Union Ballroom
Free-Students
$3.00-General Public

"Grace Paley is that rare kind of writer, a natural with a voice like no one else's: funny, sad, lean, modest, energetic, acute."
--SUSAN SONTAG

MIKE'S WESTVIEW CAFE

DRINK SPECIAL
Milwaukees Best
$3.95
Pitcher

GUEST BARTENDER NIGHT
Wednesday Night is At Mike's
Free t-shirts & Prizes
This week's guest bartender is: Leila Shlosser
Come have fun with Leila and put your name in for the drawing. Next week could be you!
Prizes:
*$25.00 Gift Certificate to Mike's
*Mike's Original T-Shirt
*2-Week membership to THE GYM
*Large Cheese Pizza from Pinocchio's
Your Picture will be Enshrined on the Walls of MIKE'SWESTVIEW
Drawing is Wednesday Night
Must be present at drawing to win but put your name in at any time! Be here for next week's selection!!

DRINK SPECIAL
Mike's Pink's
$1.50

Always something for everyone!

DRINK SPECIAL
Busch
$4.50 Pitcher

Local

Budget woes make phone-a-thon vital

By MICHAEL R. LINSKEY
Collegian Staff

In these times of economic difficulty, budget cuts and layoffs, everyone from students to professors to campus organizations are being asked to do more with less. Money is tight everywhere.

Many students, for instance, were financially unable to return to campus this fall. Courses have been cut, teachers fired.

The problem for campus organizations like the Newman Center, the Roman Catholic ministry on campus, is rising costs and decreasing enrollment. With little funding available, many have had to sponsor fundraisers to survive.

The Newman Center is certainly no different. On Sunday night, the Center began its annual three-week phon-a-thon. The Center's objective: to raise $150,000 through parent and alumni contributions in order to cover one-third of its operating costs.

"The phon-a-thon is the result of the contemporary scene in which we live economically," said the Rev. J. Joseph Quigley, the Newman Center's director. "It really provides money to help cover our two biggest expenses: capital repairs and operating costs."

The operating costs, which Quigley says total about $400,000 annually, are partly offset by leasing space to businesses. Quigley said the center earns about $70,000 a year from the basement food services, and about $20,000 from Automatic Teller Machine companies. Yet, even if this is added to the annual $80,000 worth of offertory collections and the expected goal of $150,000 from the phon-a-thon, expenses still aren't fully met.

"We still have to get subsidized by the diocese of Springfield, to the tune of $50-80 thousand dollars," said Quigley. "We never know what they're going to come up with. We tell them what we need, and we tell them what we think we'll take in. Once you project what you think your needs are, you're locked in. If you made a good decision, great; if you made a few bum decisions, you're dead."

One of the best decisions the Newman Center made, Quigley said, was to enlist the aid of University officials over the years. He claims that by asking students to voluntarily indicate their religious preferences on admissions applications, the University has helped compile a considerable list of Catholic alumni—all potential donors.

"They'd give us a list of people, and as the University grew, the lists grew," said Quigley, a priest at Newman for 32 years. "When we got a computer 10 years ago, we put the names in and worked with the alumni office. They said, 'if you can prove so-and-so was a Catholic when he was here, we'll give you an updated address.'"

Enter Judy Smith, whom Quigley credits with organizing and supervising the phon-a-thon from its inception six years ago. Since then, 30 watts lines have been installed in Newman's front lounge for the first three weeks of October. During that time, Quigley and Smith said, calls are made to about 15,000 Catholic alumni and about 5,000 parents of current Catholic students.

The problem, then, is not with the donors, but with the paucity of students stepping forward to help make the calls.

"We have 30 phones, and we call for 15 nights," said Smith. "Thus, we need a total of about 450 volunteers to answer the phones, plus secretary help. So, we really need about 500."

The evening begins at 5:45, when volunteers are served dinner. Then, after a short training session, calls are made from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. on Sunday through Thursday nights. Smith said that some may not be comfortable with the requirements of the job, but urges them to help anyway.

"It's hard; volunteers don't like to call and ask for money," she said. "But kids don't have to work the whole three hours. Even if they drop in for an hour, it helps."

Smith emphasized that all students can help, regardless of their religious denominations. In fact, with incentives like $250 awarded to the fraternity or sorority raising the most money, $100 to the team raising the most money, and $50 each to the people raising the most money, obtaining the most pledges, and giving the most time, volunteers should be amply motivated to participate.

Smith said that $15,385 was raised on Sunday night, and the Center has already received nearly $30,000 from people who have mailed in contributions. She said that she hopes that money will keep steadily coming in, so that the goal of $150,000 can be met.

"We made $33,000 the first year, so we've come a long way in six years," Smith said. "We've continued to gain a little with each phon-a-thon, but it's very hard with this tough economy."

Collegian photo by Josh Reynolds

HOT ENOUGH FOR YOU? — Terry Gilbertson, deputy building inspector for the City of New Haven Ct., compares heat test results at a demonstration given by the New England Concrete Masonry Association.

Window damage found

Compiled by DAVID MASSEY
Collegian Staff

A man reported to University police a hole in his room window in Patterson Residence Hall Sunday afternoon. Police say a BB pellet may be responsible for the damage.

ARRESTS:

• Raymond Joseph Sebag, 18, of Worcester, was arrested in Lot 13 on Sunday night and charged with stealing gas from a parked car.

• Christopher Joyce, 20, of Centerville, was arrested in a traffic stop on Monday night on University Drive and charged with not stopping for a stop sign and driving without a license.

LARCENY:

• A man reported to University police that 40 compact discs were stolen from his John Adams room on Sunday evening while he left his room unattended for a brief period. The stolen compact discs are valued at $500.

• A Sport bicycle valued at $300 was stolen from Crampton Monday afternoon. A bicycle valued at $50 was stolen early Monday morning from a motorcycle rack in Lot 44.

Town of Amherst Police:

Compiled By KAREN FURIA
Collegian Correspondent

• Ronald J. Baron, 45, of Warwick, was arrested on Tuesday morning for driving while intoxicated after officers observed his vehicle weaving on Shumway Street.

• Jay C. Patel, 22, was arrested early Tuesday morning at 36 Mill Hollow Apartments for an outstanding Amherst Police warrant. The warrant was issued for violation of probation following a DWI arrest.

Rowe nuclear plant shut down

Facility closes voluntarily, cites 'safety concerns'

By JOHN DIAMOND
Associated Press

WASHINGTON—Officials of the Yankee Nuclear Power Station, the nation's oldest operating nuclear plant, announced yesterday that they would voluntarily shut down the facility.

The company said it would still fight to reopen the plant in Rowe, Mass., but decided to close it following a recommendation a few hours earlier by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission staff that the little 185-megawatt reactor be shut down because of safety concerns.

"Yankee Rowe disagrees with the staff recommendation, but we have nonetheless voluntarily decided to shut down the plant today," said William McGee, spokesman for the Yankee Atomic Electric Co. plant.

He said plant officials have asked for a meeting with the NRC commissioners and were requesting a review of the staff's recommendation with an eye towards restarting the plant before a scheduled refueling shutdown in March.

In an unusual reversal of its earlier recommendations, the commission staff said new testing has "substantially reduced the staff's confidence" about the odds of a reactor containment failure at the 31-year-old plant on the Vermont state line.

An NRC spokesman noted that other plants have been shut down but corrected their problems so they could restart.

"There's no reason to think that this would be a permanent shutdown," said Frank Ingram, an NRC spokesman.

The four-member commission has scheduled a meeting on Yankee Rowe for Wednesday and may vote on the recommendation, according to NRC spokesman John Kopeck. The commission had asked its staff to examine questions raised about the plant's steel reactor containment vessel, a 30-foot-tall pressurized drum that surrounds the reactor core.

Critics of Yankee Rowe, including the Union of Concerned Scientists, urged the NRC to shut down the plant arguing that the steel vessel had become brittle with age and might crack in a nuclear emergency. That could lead to the release of radiation and a possible meltdown.

Yankee Rowe managers said that modification in a pumping system would greatly reduce the chance of a reactor vessel failure.

AP photo

Yankee Rowe atomic power plant, the oldest nuclear power plant in the United States, was recommended for immediate shutdown by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission on Tuesday.

Voter registration drive to be held on campus today

By JASON GEORGE
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts students who have relocated or haven't registered to vote will have the opportunity to clarify their voting status today.

A voter registration drive will be held today from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the Cape Cod Lounge, sponsored by MassPIRG, the UMass Student Government Association, the Republican Club, the UMass Alumni Association and the University Democrats.

Organizers of the drive said they were displeased that the Town of Amherst provided fewer registrars for the drive than they originally requested.

SGA Public Policy Chairperson Ken Parker and Jen Wood, a candidate for Commuter Area Government President, said they had asked the town to provide six registrars for three days, while the town only agreed to provide the registrars for four hours over one day.

"We hope that [the number of registrars] will prove inadequate," Parker said. "We hope there'll be the need for another drive soon."

Wood added that organizers of the drive had asked the town to deputize students to become assistant registrars.

"I asked the Town Clerk to deputize students and she wouldn't do it," Wood said.

Assistant Town Clerk Margaret Nartowicz said that while the Clerk's office wanted assistant registrars from the University, they feared students might lose the affadavits which establish that someone is a registered voter.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 4

■ Herndon

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

Big East commissioner. "If they do grant a release, then there is no controversy and he [Herndon] is definitely playing this season."

Fred Jacoby, the chairman of the NLI Steering Committee said "There is no point in having a National Letter of Intent without having the player agree to play for a full year. The purpose in having a National Letter of Intent is to reduce recruiting pressure on the athlete and save the schools money on recruiting."

Putting the National Letter Intent aside for a moment, this entire conflict could have been avoided had the University of Richmond granted Herndon's release. But, for some reason, they did not and now apparently would like to see Herndon penalized for his decision to transfer to UMass before he completed his freshman year.

Herndon said yesterday he had no comment as to why Richmond did not grant his release.

Richmond basketball coach Dick Tarrant could not be reached for comment.

The appeal to be presented on Herndon's behalf claims that he did not understand that by transferring before the completion of his first year, he would have to sit out two years instead of one.

Assistant UMass basketball coach Bill Bayno said, "I think it's a bad rule. I don't see how the rule helps the athletes. Most kids who leave have a pretty valid reason for transferring."

"I needed to get out of there, my grades were bad because I wasn't happy," Herndon said.

Testimony is expected to be heard at 3:30 p.m., and a decision should be made around 5 p.m., according to Jacoby.

If the Steering Committee rules Herndon ineligible, then under the guidance of McInerney and Sortino, UMass will file an appeal which will be heard the following day by all the conference commissioners, from the schools that belong to the National Letter of Intent.

■ D'Souza

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

also states it is these universities which suffer the worst ethnic tensions and racially charged incidents.

D'Souza has appeared on "Nightline", "Face the Nation", "Firing Line" and "Good Morning America", and has written for the New York Times, the Washington Post and the Wall Street Journal. A Phi Beta Kappa graduate from Dartmouth, Mr. D'Souza was a White House domestic policy analyst during the Reagan years.

The lecture, titled "Affirmative Action and its Consequences," is being sponsored by the Calvin Coolidge Lecture Program of the Amherst College Republicans and will be held in the Johnson Chapel. A question and answer session will follow.

—BROOKE C. WHEELER

■ registration drive

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

"What we wanted were faculty and administrators who were permanently settled," Nartowicz said. "We didn't want the affadavits lost, for example by students going from class to class."

Wood and Nartowicz said many students didn't answer "drop" notices sent out this summer which serve as a way of verifying a voter's residence.

Students who have changed their addresses and haven't notified the Town Clerk's office are now on a "suspended" list, and can still vote in town elections if they are able to prove Amherst residency, Wood said. Students on the suspended list will be dropped from the voting lists in December if they don't take any further action.

It's not just another way for you to spend your money.

It's a way to help you save it.

Now, get the Card and get Student Privileges. Special savings created just for you. Only from American Express.

If you think the American Express® Card is simply another way to buy things, we'd like to share some valuable news with you. Since you're a student, the Card can actually help you save.

Become a Student Cardmember today, and you'll automatically get American Express® Student Privileges,® our newly expanded package of outstanding savings and special offers. All designed just for you—with more of what you need, for more value from the money you spend.

3 ROUNDTRIPS ON CONTINENTAL AIRLINES—AT A PRICE THAT REALLY MAKES FLYING AFFORDABLE

Only Student Cardmembers can enjoy this great deal on Continental Airlines: three roundtrip flights for just $129 or $189 each—depending on where you're going.* What's more, these certificates are good anywhere Continental Airlines flies in the 48 contiguous states.

Use your certificates to visit friends at other schools, see your family back home or enjoy yourself during a vacation. And the best part: Each certificate could save you as much as $250 over regular Continental Airlines fares on a coast-to-coast trip.

OUR NEWEST ADVANTAGE: UP TO 30 MINUTES OF FREE MCI LONG-DISTANCE CALLING EVERY MONTH FOR A YEAR

Talk about value. Now the Card can also help you save on your long distance calls. In total, you could save more than $44 when you enroll and use the American Express Card as a calling card. And you don't even have to change your current long-distance company.

PLUS, SAVINGS ON CLOTHES, FOOD, MUSIC . . . AND MORE

Student Privileges Value Certificates give you the savings you need on the things you want—a sure way to make the most of a college budget. This year alone, Student Cardmembers have saved at Pizzeria Uno, Eddie Bauer, MTV and ArtCarved class rings, among others.

You'll find your certificates in each issue of our exclusive student magazine, American Express® Card CONNECTIONS—where you'll also find valuable ideas and information about college life today.

A GOOD INVESTMENT, A GREAT VALUE

For just $55 a year, the Card gives you all these savings, as well as all the traditional benefits of Cardmembership—like the personal attention you can get 24 hours a day from our Customer Service representatives.

And because you settle your account in full each month, you won't pay any finance charges—which can save you even more.

All of which goes to show that the American Express Card is an exceptional value. Because while there are many ways for you to spend your money, there are few that help you save it. Apply today.

TRAVEL RELATED SERVICES

An American Express Company

STUDENT PRIVILEGES

*To be eligible, you must be approved by December 31, 1991.

A credit of up to $3.70 for calls will appear on each billing statement for 12 months after enrollment. $3.70 is equal to the charges for a domestic 30 minute night/weekend MCI Card Compatibility call and appropriate surcharges. You must enroll for this service by December 31, 1991.

© 1991 American Express Travel Related Services Company, Inc.

Get the Card today. Call 1-800-942-AMEX.

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions on this page are those of the individual writer or cartoonist, and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian or the University unless otherwise noted.

If you're sexually active, you had better read this column

I have a confession to make.

As I roamed this campus last semester there was something a lot of people didn't know: I thought I was HIV positive. One morning (as a matter of fact five days before my 23rd birthday) I received this letter in the mail reading "We must talk to you about an urgent personal health issue. Call immediately!" Of course I freaked out. I thought, "Oh my God! This is it!" I called them, and true enough, they told me that I tested positive for the HIV antibodies.

However, God (or something/one) was on my side. I began to arm myself with information vital to saving my life. I had always read tales of woe and destruction, describing how AIDS was a "fatal" disease, but I never considered the possibilities of survival. And then somehow, a book fell in my lap, "Surviving AIDS" by Michael Callen. A book that radically changed my life.

Do you know what it's like to live with that? To laugh with your friends on the outside, but to dread having to tell them something they won't, or not be able to, accept, lingering on the inside, to think about the prospect of death hanging over your head? That's what I had to deal with. What would your friends think? What would your family think?

Saad Hopkins

It took me a long time to start to tell people. I had a lover at the time (whom I still love dearly!), and the thought of him casting me out of his life was devastating. But eventually I started to come out as a PLWA (Person Living With AIDS). Furthermore, not only did I come out, but I was proud and relieved that I did. That took some serious balls!

The support I had from friends and family was unbelievable. My father didn't lose it on me (although on the other hand my mother cried every time she picked up the phone), he and I had the same approach to the issue: not the "this is it" stance, but more like "what do we do now?" On the whole, there were many people who believed what I believed: survival.

I didn't understand how I got it at first. I had never had anal sex, was never keen on fellatio, and in general, believed in safe sex. But then something happened. I engaged in a particular sexual act that was unsafe, and the result was chlmydiaa. At the hospital, they did an HIV test and in December, the result came back positive.

"Why?" I thought, "Why me? When I became sexually active, AIDS was hanging over my head. I've always been careful." But I guess it just happens. It just took that one time. Think about it, ONE TIME! And then the virus lives inside your system.

Yet I became optimistic. People have been battling this thing for years. They are surviving and thriving with full blown AIDS, and refuse to "die on cue."

I write this article because not only did this affect me personally, but because this has touched one person too many. The AIDS epidemic is not over; in fact, it's exploded. I cried at nights not because of my own personal health, but because the government hasn't done jack about this. Failed experiments, toxic drugs such as AZT which is the most horrible conceivable "treatment" that only a government such as ours could invent, innocent people dying, the dead, and further cases of suffering. To think that I could have been a victim of this obviously affected everything I did. I literally lived a dual life.

In the end, my friend suggested that I get a re-test. I did, two of them as a matter of fact. And it turned out that my first test was a false positive. Naturally I was relieved, but my worries are still there, worries for others who are positive, have lost hope and are dying.

In short, please have safe sex. Don't go through what I did, despite the "happy" ending. Don't get drunk enough where you forget that condoms are essential to potentially saving your own life.

Finally, fuck the government! I've lost five wonderful, and lovable people to this disease, and they aren't doing a damn thing about it. I'm angry, not depressed. And if the government isn't going to do anything about this, despite the "billions" of dollars into research, then we have to take matters in our own hands!

Saad Hopkins is a Collegian columnist

Letters to the Editor

Select board chair notes keg bylaws

Your columnist, Todd Kane, who describes in great detail what it is like to turn the keg tap "to earn my own cover charge" at an off-campus keg party is evidently blissfully unaware that such parties are against the law. It is illegal in Massachusetts to sell alcohol without a license; it is also illegal to provide alcohol to people under the age of 21.

Mr. Kane does not reveal where this party took place, however he and your readers should know that the Amherst Town Meeting has passed a local by-law that will require anyone in town who wants to have a keg of beer to get a license first. There is currently a committee, which includes several students and representatives of the campus community, developing guidelines for implementing that by-law. We expect to begin enforcing that by-law soon.

It is important for students to realize that this by-law was passed as a direct result of the type of party Mr. Kane describes. Students living in houses have neighbors who do not appreciate and do not have to put up with the loud drunken brawls next door. When Town Meeting was debating the keg by-law last spring, some of the students who are members of Town Meeting claimed that some students don't realize they have neighbors. You do! We should all be treating each other with the respect and consideration we hope to receive in return.

Elisa Campbell
Chair, Amherst Select Board

Find the flaws in Mullins before they find us

I propose a friendly competition. Thanks to the Collegian expose last April, we know the tower library was designed to be horizontal but contractors mistakenly read the blueprint sideways (April 1, 1991). The Fine Arts Center was obviously supposed to be buried like a subway station. Now a new sports arena is going up and odds are something is wrong with it.

I am proposing that every department play find-that-flaw. Sure, it's easy to look back and scoff at reversed steam couplings. But where was the physics department when the weight of books was being forgotten in the library design.? With countless air-tight buildings on campus, anthropologists and even historians might have noted that many peoples have traditionally prefered breathing to its alternative. Wind generation, brick precipitation, sprinklers, materials toxcitity, crowd control, snow - there is plenty for all departments to consider.

So let's find the sports arena's flaws before they are set in (substandard?) concrete. Is the foundation on firm ground? Are the girders radioactive? Is the arena designed for the right sport? Will Coca-Cola dissolve the bleachers?

The only flaw I have noticed is that while we will have a nice sports arena, we may have no university. Much as I like sports, I think a university needs teachers and books first. Besides, the NCAA might revoke eligibility if our school teams have no school. And while academia fights with athletics, dare we question why the budgets of both might buy a hubcap for a B-2 bomber? Find the flaw and win the contest. The winning department gets to keep its budget for another year. How about it?

David Keith Sunderland

An analogy for the fight against oppression

There is a common enemy to all people, and that enemy is oppression. He continues to destroy the world in which we live. Like a white raven he brings news of death to those who listen in ignorance. Yet his cries are futile, for justice will rise up like a strong wind and topple his nest from its position of privilege.

For those of us who live under the shadow of his wing, there is no need to identify the enemy. His nest is above society where he plots against the human race and none can reach him. He will only associate with other white ravens in his private flock. Yet he will use you to build his nest before he disposes of you like debris.

This proud bird flutters his white feathers in your face, believing prosperity to be seductive. When he has found his mate, he will hold her captive in his nest and peck at her with his bloody beak. And if she fights back, he will kill her.

But the wind is shifting, and a new multicolored flock is uniting to combat the tyranny of the white raven. They will use feathers to create a storm sending the white raven from his nest.

The enemy, aware of this movement, employs tactics to prevent a coup d'etat. He schemes to create dissention among the different colored birds so, losing sight of the common enemy, they fight among themselves. He promotes his masochistic behavior so that there is division between males and females within the movement. When he sees a flurry about to erupt, he will scatter poisonous birdseed to confuse some birds and keep them from squawking.

We need to outsmart the enemy if we are to be free. We have to put aside our grievances against all people and join forces. Then, we have to fight. And once we attain a piece of the nest for ourselves, we must not, like the white raven, ignore the needs of others who are still fighting, but shelter them under our wings.

J. Brittany Ham
Amherst

Get out and register to vote

Cuts, cuts, and more cuts! Our university has been bleeding to death from cut after cut in state funding. Allow us to provide you with a little history. At the height of the "Massachusetts Miracle" in fiscal year 1988, the state funding for UMass-Amherst was $167 million. Now in fiscal year 1992 our state funding is only $112 million.

To make up for lost revenue, the state has been kind enough to allow the administration to retain the tuition raised here on campus. The administration has in turn been kind enough to almost exclusively allow us, the students, and our parents to replace those funds through increases in tuition and fees. This now amounts to $16.5 million which we contribute to help the administration retain faculty and TAs. So our tuition and fees have doubled since FY '88, when the total year-long bill for an on-campus undergraduate would have been $4,500.

What have we, the tuition and fee-paying students, done about this in the past four years? There have been rallies, protests, letter and phone call campaigns to legislators, bus rides to Boston, and a strike. A few years ago we had Cutback City, a group of cardboard shelters built on the lawn by the Student Union to represent the state of public higher education. But where has all this activity gotten us? Nowhere. Students are still being walked on by legislators, university administrators, and town officials. So if rallies and protests have little impact what is there for us to do to save our education here at UMass-Amherst?

The answer is one simple, yet powerful, word: VOTE! It is something that people all over the world have been struggling for, although her in the U.S. we take it for granted. Many people don't bother to exercise their right to vote. Imagine if every student who thought that would just vote. We could win some real political clout for ourselves. We would no longer be dependant upon the goodwill of the administration to fight for OUR interests. Everyone here rhetorically supports quality education. It is now our responsibility to ask them to put their money where their mouths are so that everyone can obtain a quality education.

So if you're fed up with add/drop, increased tuition and fees, and letters like this one, do something about it: Register on October 2, 10 a.m.-2 p.m., in the Cape Cod Lounge and vote!

Rob Witherell
Southwest
Jennifer Wood
Amherst

CONSUMER CONFIDENCE TOOK ANOTHER DROP IN SEPTEMBER.
UNLESS CONSUMERS START SPENDING, THE RECOVERY IS IN DANGER.
OKAY, OKAY, I'LL GO BUY SOMETHING!
AMERICANS' SAVINGS RATES ARE ABYSMALLY LOW, IMPERILING THE NATION'S ECONOMIC HEALTH...
HELP.

Arts & Living

Bromberg performs witty, folksy guitar music

By SARAH LEVESQUE
Collegian Correspondent

David Bromberg performed at Buckley Recital Hall at Amherst College Sunday night. Bromberg is well-known in folk music circles, among musicians and listeners, for his high-energy, make-you-laugh, and witty sing-a-long antics. Jaime Morton opened for Bromberg and added greatly to this evening of down-to-earth folk music.

Morton's beautiful, bluesy voice matched her songs, all of which she wrote. Her song about her bike (a purple sparkled bike with a matching banana seat) and her childhood was very visual and took on a Tracy Chapman-like deepness.

Morton showed real versatility and a great stage presence with her "frap-folk music rap" number. Mixing classic folk songs with Public Enemy grit, (well o.k., more like M.C. Hammer grooves) she created great lines like;

"If I had a hammer huh!/ I'd hammer in the morning/ I'd hammer in the evening/ I'd hammer in your face!".

Morton's set was all in all, rather excellent.

David Bromberg started right off with a rocking song. He played the acoustic guitar with violinist Phil Block and bassist Butch Amiot. The audience began clapping along during Block's solo which he repeated at the urging of Bromberg. Bromberg's own guitar licks were sharp and got progressively raunchier as the evening grooved on.

The best number of the evening, besides the final song, was Bromberg's "I'll Take You Back", during which he really got down and funky in true Bromberg style: lots of howling, throaty laughing, and James Brown screaching.

"Sure baby, I'd take you back/ when money grows on trees/ and murder ain't a crime/ yeah baby no problem/ I forgive for cheating night and day."

Towards the last half of the show, Bromberg and band were joined by backup singers Melissa Hamilton and Pat Thorney, making the rest of the show even more enjoyable and upbeat. In between songs, the audience got another treat, Bromberg conversation.

"People keep asking me when am I going to do a Christmas album? I don't mean to shock anybody, but I'm Jewish."

Bromberg did a Christmas song anyway, as only he could, confessing before he began, that he actually likes Christmas songs, "Especially church or gospel ones. But who would buy it [the album] anyway?"

As the two female backup singers wailed the chorus, "Santa Claus wants some loving," Bromberg sang of how Santa was lonely and needed his share of goodies too. The crowd seemed to get in the spirit with this song. Maybe a Christmas album wouldn't be such a risky venture after all.

The finale of the show came as an enjoyable surprise when Bromberg, after two encores, sat on the edge of the stage with his whole band, singing "Roll On John." Bromberg requested that all the overhead lights be turned off before he started to play. Block played the ukelele along with Bromberg's sweet licks. The mix was gentle, yet contained a certain bluesy edge, while Hamilton, Thorney and Amiot sang along with beautiful clarity. On this friendly personal note, the concert came to a close with much cheering and clapping.

New Blues Traveler album lacks no energy

By E. DOUGLAS BANKS
Collegian Correspondent

The foursome known as Blues Traveler is back with their latest release, Travellers and Thieves, on A&M records. Produced by Jim Gaines (who produced Stevie Ray Vaughn) this album has all the potential of a good blues and metal combination, with some scattered jazz and reggae influences, yet never reaches solid ground.

There is no doubt that as individuals, this group has talent. Singer/songwriter John Popper can blast a harmonica, play a 12 string acoustic guitar, the calymba, bark, squeal, growl and whistle. Drummer Brendan Hill proves his stuff on the final track, "Mountain Cry," which features vocals from Gregg Allman.

Also, this group has no lack of energy. They drift back and forth between searing guitar licks and down-to-home harmonica play at will. However, it is this eclectic tendency which weakens them as well as strengthens. The vocals often seemed rushed, like someone who has a lot to say, but is more interested in the sound of their own voice rather than in what is actually being said. Since the lyrics themselves aren't bad, it's Popper's voice that needs to be toned down at times. When they let the instruments sing for themselves, we are more than ready to listen.

For instance, the first track "Onslaught", is very inspired musically, but overbearing vocals supress its inherent beauty. The strength of the song doesn't emerge until the last three lines which are slow and melodic:

"I really couldn't say for sure/ Like everyone else I know/ I'm just looking for the cure."

The one song to which Gregg Allman contributes, "Mountain Cry," is the gem of this album. It's got a bluesy back-alley rhythm, that familiar Allman voice, and some spicy guitar riffs to boot. This piece shows the potential that Blues Traveler has as a group to create their own sound using different musical styles.

"Support Your Local Emperor" takes after this idea, with a strong reggae influence that reminds you of Stevie Ray Vaughn covering a Ziggy Marley tune. Only this distinctive voice of John Popper and the ubiquitous harmonica jams bring you back to Blues Traveler.

In concert, it's not uncommon for this foursome to play for up to four hours. However, I think this may be because the group is still in its developmental stages. It takes them a long time to warm up and get the feeling they seem to be groping for. Although their songwriting and musical ability show real promise (and occaisonally hit home), Travellers and Thieves gets too congested at times. The sampling and mixing present throughout the whole first side of the album clogs the true identity of this group. Only on the second side, after a long wait, does the studio work help the music to become clear. And it does heat up. But will people have the patience to sit through the mediocre to get to the goods? For those who are willing, Travellers and Thieves has some real quality moments. It's too bad that you may have to dig to find them.

Riding on the storm with Doors drummer tonight

By MARK PRESTON
Collegian Staff

John Densmore, a founding member of and the drummer for the legendary rock n' roll band the Doors, will be speaking at Bowker Auditorium tonight at 8 p.m.. Densmore will be speaking about his new book Riders On The Storm.

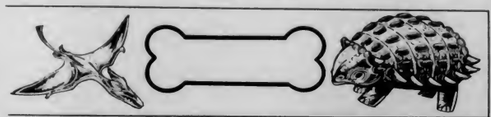
His book deals with the time he spent with the band between 1965 and 1971. He tackles such issues as Jim Morrison and the Doors and his overnight success as a professional drummer.

Parke Puterbaugh, a book reviewer for Rolling Stone magazine, said of Densmore's book, "Riders On The Storm is laced with real life anecdotes and painstakingly recollected conversations that humanize this seemingly otherwordly band."

Densmore presents his lecture by sitting on a drum stool and explaining to the audience how the sixties transformed his views and how he has made peace with himself after growing up in such a turbulent time.

Tickets can be picked up at The Fine Arts Center. They are 2 dollars for the general public and free for UMass students.

Proceeds from this lecture will benefit the minority student scholarship and The Institute For Positive Education.



OPEN 'TIL
2 A.M.
7 DAYS
A WEEK
BUFFALO BILLS
FAMOUS
ROAST BEEF
&
CHICKEN WINGS

AP photo

HAVE LAWSUIT, WILL TRAVEL — Victor DeCosta of Scituate, R.I., who claimed the character he invented was stolen and used in the television western "Have Gun Will Travel," was awarded $3.5 million dollars in damages from Viacom International.

Multicultural Affairs

Manufacturing Multiculturalism

Administration and faculty act as agents of oppression

Alexander Nguyen

Examining the so-called changes the University has made, one can easily see their utter superficiality. The administration and the faculty have propagated the illusion of an increasingly peaceful, tolerant campus environment. For the administration, this means reduced racial conflicts and the ensuing bad publicity. The faculty enjoys a veil behind which to hide its unreformed Eurocentrist academics. Happily, for their friends, the Reagan generation conservative students, multiculturalism provides point-blank, naked targets for equally thinly veiled campus race baiting. For the politically correct, pseudo-liberals, multiculturalism is another source of self-satisfying confirmation that they are actually fighting the system "with" people of color. What an advanced case of self-delusion! And as for people of color, multiculturalism may actually succeed in deceiving us that the University is accepting us on our own terms. The real questions to ask are, what can multiculturalism ever mean, and who would be the beneficiaries?

Rummaging through the trash can of UMass multiculturalism reveals an unchanged and rotten institution. The population remains unreformed. The number of administrators, faculty and students of color are extremely low. The magic number has remained around ten percent. As this empty statistic nudges forward to eleven or twelve one and all rave about making progress, wallowing in PR heaven. In spite of the growing population of people of color in Massachusetts, the University is actually, by maintaining the magic ten percent ceiling, actively holding back those groups' legitimate representation on campus. It ought to be shocking, but its just par for the course.

"In its racist arrogance, the University has not found it necessary to designate cultural diversity classes focusing on white American culture which reflect on its inherent racism."

The core curriculum of the University remains largely intact and unredeemed. Cultural diversity classes are on the academic fringe. History, literature, philosophy, sociology, economics, political science, math, physical sciences and so on, still in effect constitute a "white studies" curriculum. Cultural diversity classes, which ought to study, explore and appreciate different cultures, remain racist and oppressive in their methodology. With very few exceptions, these classes objectify oppressed peoples. They look at our cultures from a Eurocentric, superior perspective, which takes two distinct but equally pernicious forms.

On the Left hand, we have the whiny, bleating Liberals, who appropriate the cultures that they are supposed to teach, for a narrow, internal American political agenda of little value to non-Whites anywhere. Indeed, they are often witting or unwitting agents of the subtlest kind of imperialism, that of the missionary or "Peace Corps". On the Right hand, of course, the only reason to study non-European culture is to prove its essential barbarism and unworthiness, to prepare young minds for an active life of racial domination and colonial adventure. Many professors, following national figures, would teach the Holy Quran and the Bahavd-Gita to justify imperialism, rather than impart the wisdom of Hinduism or Islam.

In its racist arrogance, the University has not found it necessary to designate cultural diversity classes focusing on white American culture which reflect on its inherent racism. Furthermore, the core curriculum remains unreformed because issues of race, culture, gender, ability and class are insufficiently addressed.

Predictably, it is in the social arena where the University has been most successful in manufacturing multiculturalism. With the advent of cultural centers and civility activities, the campus is blossoming in culture. Music and dance and food and film abound which makes people feel good. People have choices of which culture they want to get in touch with and be a part of, on any given evening. The cultural centers and civility activities have seduced students of color into exerting all their extracurricular time and energy towards educating the campus community. This has been one of the "successes" of multiculturalism, keeping students of color occupied parading themselves for the entertainment of the campus.

One other important aspect of the social assault is the use of resource allocation as a method of the old "divide and conquer" tactic. As the administration encourages cultural activities, it creates a situation where different minority groups fight over centrally-controlled funding. To promote multiculturalism, each group is forced to scrounge for the same crumbs tossed down from an administration that sits back and enjoys the treachery, backstabbing and deception. Rather than challenge them, we are made to confront each other. In time, one group will beat the others in the game of befriending the boss. Thus, trust between people of color is irrecoverably destroyed. The divisions become permanent and a united front will not be possible.

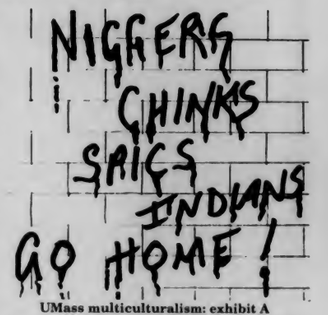
Not surprisingly, the social agenda does not confront, reflect upon or evaluate white racism. Once again, the activities only objectify people of color and reinforce stereotypes. This superficial social environment is highly detrimental to people of color. Those who believe in these absurdly optimistic social programs will be dismayed to find no such thing represented in the classroom. These activities should, ideally, reinforce concepts stressed in academics. However, the academic base is not there and the activities merely serve to veil this scandalous reality.

"The administration and the faculty have manufactured a multiculturalism which is racist and oppressive to minorities. . ."

The administration claims to be leading the University towards multicultural education and is receiving intellectual support from the faculty. The new chancellor and his cohorts have demonstrated a shrewd ability to impose a leader-follower relationship onto the faculty, of which a mere ten and a half percent are persons of color. According to last year's UMass Affirmative Action and Equal Opportunity Report, there are many departments with NO professors of color, such as the Honors Program, Art History, Classics, Comparative Literature, Journalism, Philosophy, Theatre, Women's Studies, Legal Studies, Psychology, Chemistry, Civil Engineering, School of Nursing and the School of Physical Education. Most other departments may claim at most one or two faculty of color.

Many professors of color remain invisible to students. They teach their class load, do their research and publish. This is the acceptable mode of behavior for faculty of color — self-censorship. Then there are those few, exceptional, committed faculty of color who risk their cushioned positions by reaching out to students. There are also those rare and bizzare white faculty who stick their necks out to support students of color. These few become the magnets of social change around which most students of color congregate. This imposes a heavy burden on them when the administration and other faculty threaten their positions. They in turn have to waste time playing cat and mouse with the bureaucracy in order to educate and support their students.

The administration and the faculty have manufactured a multiculturalism which is racist and oppressive to minorities, thus serving the interests of the white majority. UMass multiculturalism does not reflect upon white culture and racism. It continues to objectify and marginalize people of color. Multiculturalism makes evermore appropriate the term "minority." All the media hype about the Federal Census Bureau's report that minorities will represent fifty-two percent of the U.S. population within fifteen years, and that one out of three public school students will be of color, is very misleading. Under this demographic change, multiculturalism is being used as a method of containing this minority growth by supposedly understanding and appreciating cultural differences. Unfortunately, as the minority population grows, the proportional share of power will increase for whites, leaving minorities even more marginalized. This indeed is a recipe for disaster. Eventually, minorities will see through the smoke and there will be a backlash of racial intolerance. The situation will boil over and erupt inot campus-wide race riots. And once again, the University will confront the situation through dragged out sessions of intellectual masturbation yielding lists of recommendations which yield zero results.z



UMass multiculturalism: exhibit A

Minority students need to shield themselves from the assault of multiculturalism. Unfortunately, many fail to recognize the inherent racism that pervades this institution. The powers that be, such as the administration and faculty, deftly manipulate and control the so-called multicultural discourse to fit smoothly into their political agenda. It is sad to say that many of the multicultural events staged by the University, and participated in by students of color, are mere window dressing and designed to insulate UMass from criticism like this. Don't fall for it again. A prime example of this obsurantism was the panel discussion on "civil rights" held on campus last week. No one who is aware of the history of race relations at UMass could fail to realize that the entire affair was an exercize in media relations and empty rhetoric.

"There can not be multiculturalism in the United States of America, at least not in an institutional setting. . . Deep down we all know that the deck is permanently stacked against us."

Let's be clear about this — if you allow yourself to be conned into getting involved in the campus multicultural cottage industry, you will find yourself wasting away hundreds of valuable hours in pointless and useless committee meetings, workshops and various other absurd forums. But rest assured, nothing will ever be accomplished.

Sadly, many members of minorities fail even to try to redeem such nonsensical talk shops, and prefer to wallow in food and dance in the aforementioned cultural events. Either way, we are turned into exhibits of amusement, entertainment or astonishment, a kind of cultural/political freak show. We create the very multiculturalism that oppresses us. It has got to stop.

Students need to restrain themselves from being seduced by such things as organizing circus events such as Awareness days, weeks and months (whatever they are) and other cultural activities and ego-boosting media exposure.

There cannot be multiculturalism in the United States of America, at least not in an institutional setting. Clearly, minorities here can only hope to affirm their cultural identity by eschewing cooperation with authorities, including those on campuses, and working together in small, flexible units to effect such change. Deep down we all know that the deck is permanently stacked against us. Operate like cultural guerilla warriors, striking quickly, withdrawing, and regrouping, only to lash out again, when the time is right, and on our own terms. That means, no cooperation, no tolerance, no sellout!!!

Alexander Nguyen is Collegian staff. The opinions of this article are not necessarily those of the Collegian.

UMass multiculturalism: exhibit B

Collegian Drivers Needed Immediately

• must have mornings free from 9-11:15 a.m.
•must be dependable with reliable auto

$10/hr.

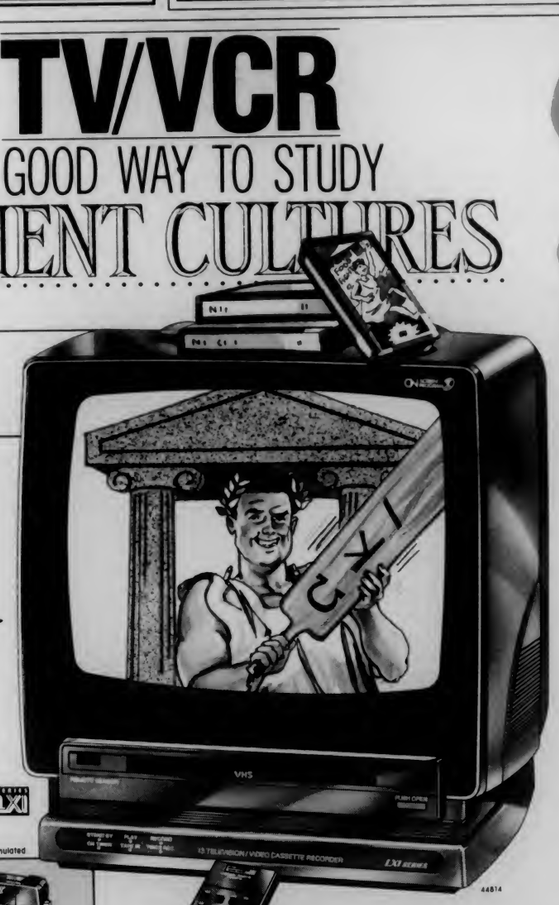
Fill out an application at the Collegian, Room 113 Campus Center or call 545-3500 for details

The Collegian is an equal opportunity employer

AP Photo

A SINGING WHAT? — Inventor Kenneth Brown poses with his latest creation, a musical toothbrush for children which plays "It's a Small World" while tots brush their teeth.

TV/VCR
A GOOD WAY TO STUDY ANCIENT CULTURES



A COMBINATION THAT FITS TODAY'S STUDENT

- ALL-IN-ONE! No wires to hook up
- 13-IN. SCREEN! Fits in small areas
- 25-function unified remote controls both the TV and VCR
- On-screen programming by remote plus one touch recording
- 110 channels including cable
- Audio/video input and output jacks for additional hook-ups

ONLY $15 PER MONTH▲ ON SEARSCHARGE

499.99

*Sales tax, delivery, or installation not included in minimum monthly payment shown. Your actual monthly payment can vary depending on your account balance

TV size measured diagonally. Picture simulated

9089J (Mfr #CMS-X300CD)

SHARP TABLETOP STEREO, 5 DISC CD CAROUSEL Remote, dual cassette, 3 band equalizer 349.99

22692 (Mfr #M-330)

SONY MICROCASSETTE PORTABLE RECORDER Auto recording level, one touch record. 29.99

SEARS Brand Central

HOLYOKE MALL RT. 91 WHITNEY ROAD
(413) 538-9270

Each of these advertised items are readily available for sale as advertised.

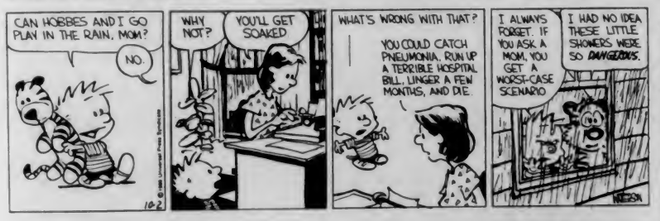
THE FAR SIDE
By GARY LARSON

Where the deer and the antelope work

DOONESBURY
By GARRY TRUDEAU

HEAR THAT, HONEY? THOSE ARE SCREAMIN' EAGLES, TOOLIN' UP NORTH AT MACH 2.5!
A FEW MONTHS AGO, PEOPLE HAD GIVEN UP ON THIS PART OF THE WORLD. EVERYONE TOLD ME I WAS CRAZY TO INVEST IN KUWAIT'S POST-WAR ECONOMY!
BUT I KNEW!! I KNEW THE DOGS OF WAR, ONCE UNLEASHED, WOULD RETURN AGAIN AND AGAIN TO THIS BLIGHTED REGION!
AHEAD OF THE CURVE AS ALWAYS, SIR.
OF COURSE, MY ACCOUNTANT LAUGHED! LAUGHED!
HE'S A SUIT, SIR. YOU'RE A VISIONARY.

CALVIN AND HOBBES
By BILL WATTERSON



CAN HOBBES AND I GO PLAY IN THE RAIN, MOM?
NO.
WHY NOT?
YOU'LL GET SOAKED
WHAT'S WRONG WITH THAT?
YOU COULD CATCH PNEUMONIA, RUN UP A TERRIBLE HOSPITAL BILL, LINGER A FEW MONTHS, AND DIE.
I ALWAYS FORGET. IF YOU ASK A MOM, YOU GET A WORST-CASE SCENARIO
I HAD NO IDEA THESE LITTLE SHOWERS WERE SO DANGEROUS.

CAST OF THOUSANDS
By BARRY DEUTSCH

STEPHEN, YOU'VE GOT TO REALIZE THA—
YOU DARE ASK ME WHERE THE BATHROOM IS YOU!!!
OH DEAR, SOUNDS LIKE CASS IS DEPRESSED AGAIN.
YOU FAILED SEXUALLY TRREEVAN ME!!!
WHO?
A JUNIOR. PERIODICALLY SHE TERRORIZES SOME FRESHPERSON, THEN HIDES IN HER ROOM AND WON'T COME OUT TILL SOMEONE PROMISES HER SHE HAS FREE WILL.
HOWEVER, YOUR ANCES SURVIVE NATURAL ELECTION??
AND THIS IS PERMITTED?
WELL, IT'S NOT LIKE WE'RE RUNNING OUT OF FRESHPERSONS YET.

TANGELO PIE
By TIM SNIFFEN

Attention Shoppers and Stop N' Shop Employees! This is President Gabriel, announcing that I'll be going on Sabbatical for awhile...
—But not to worry! My newly-appointed Vice President, Bob, will be taking over in my place!
—I think it's best for all of us! Why, just the other day, Bob was saying 'Gabe, if you don't take a break, you'll end up...
...Exposed as a UMASS student with a .07 GPA.'
...Burned out from all this work?! Farewell, All!

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED
By SHADOW

WHAT? DAVID LEE ROTH IS IN YOUR SOUP, JOE?
YES!!
BEATLES
I WAS SITTING HERE ENJOYING MY DINNER WHEN DAVID LEE ROTH SPONTANEOUSLY MATERIALIZED IN MY SOUP AND STARTED TALKING TO ME! SAY "HI" TO MY ROOMMATE, FLESH, DAVE!
UH-HMM. GOTTA GO. I'VE GOT MY SEANCE WITH MR. ED, NOW!
BUT HE WAS RIGHT HERE!
SCOUT'S HONOR!

Quote of the Day

"Pop goes the weasel
'cuz the weasel goes pop!"
- 3RD BASS

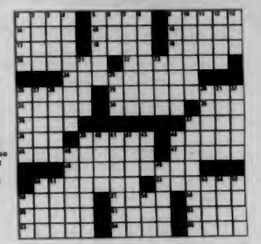
DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

ACROSS
1 Time gone by
5 Palm or starch
9 Air passages
14 "The — Love Belongs..."
15 Churchill's successor
16 Major artery
17 Welsh part
18 One kind of rich
19 Apartment
20 Stopwatches
22 One —: singly
24 On occasion
26 Commemorative marker
29 Useful gadget
33 Pretend
34 Concerning
35 Woodward's Oscar-winning role
36 Discharge
37 Triplet
38 Pollution watchdog agcy.
39 Lots
44 Colored
45 "...to be born, and a —: Eccles
47 "— man with seven..."
48 Requires patience
50 Deceive, in a way
52 Detroit action
56 Mountain retreat
57 Exchange premium
59 Stratas specialty
60 Fishhook line
61 Change course
62 Take time out
63 Sweetheart
64 Certain votes
65 Fixed time

DOWN
1 Part of P.M.
2 Con
3 Appear
4 Appointment book feature
5 Earthquake
6 Append
7 Aspic ingredient
8 Former
9 Most speedy
10 — May Alcott
11 — and Thummim
12 Major addition
13 Frat letters
21 Horse of a certain color
23 — corner
25 Airline abbr
26 Wintry weather
27 Conductor's concerns
28 Besides, to Brutus
30 Author Jules
31 Remove forcibly
32 Oscar de la —
37 Workshirt requirement
39 Majestic
40 Norse god of mischief
41 Plant swelling
42 Smart aleck
43 Malish part
44 It heals all wounds
46 French star
49 Academy Award winner Jeremy
50 — 'clock scholar
51 English architect
53 Vicinity
54 Inventory
55 Behind time
56 Bat wood
58 Dander

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

L	A	I	C		D	E	A	R		D	A	F	T
A	L	T	O		E	G	R	E	T		D	I	L	O
D	I	E	M		C	O	M	M	A	N	D	A	N	T
E	M	M	E	R		I	M	A	G	E
			D	E		E	Y	E
T	R	A	N	S	M	I	T	T	E	R	A	D	E
R	E	D		E		S		T		S	T	E	N
A	N	D	R	E	W	S		S	T	E	R	N
M	A	L	L	E	T		A	R	S		S	I	R	E
S	N	E	E	R		D	I	S	T	A	N	C	E
			S	A	M	A		A	D	O
S	T	O	U	T	E	R		M	E	R	L	I	N
C	O	M	M	E	N	T	A	T	E		T	A	L	E
A	B	L	E		D	E	M	O	N		T	Y	E	N
D	E	N	S		D	E	N	I	T		D	A	R	E



Menu

LUNCH
Chicken Pucks
Hot Pastrami on Rye
BASICS LUNCH
Chicken Pucks
Squash Bake

DINNER
Chinese Beef & Peppers
N.E. Style Scrod
BASICS DINNER
Spinach Noodle Casserole
N.E. Style Scrod

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES(March 21-April 19): Once you assess the economic factors involved, you will realize the need for teamwork. Check all accounts for possible discrepancies. Romance may be high on your agenda tonight.

TAURUS(April 20-May 20): Accept the generosity or backing of wealthy sponsors so long as it is for a worthy cause. Good career news is headed your way. Influential people will open important doors for you.

GEMINI(May 21-June 20): A friendly approach will get you further than taking a lofty attitude. Pay close attention to the costs of business entertainment. Keep in touch with the folks at home when traveling.

CANCER(June 21-July 22): People and circumstances may prevent you from enjoying the privacy you seek. Do not be influenced by conflicting reports. Family disagreements can be resolved through tender loving care.

LEO(July 23-Aug. 22): People at the top are willing to go so far but no further; be very tactful. Hold off on making changes until more information is available. Conduct your own research in private.

VIRGO(Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The atmosphere at work could get somewhat stormy today. Set a sunny tone and tend to your routine. By late afternoon, you will be in the driver's seat. Expand your social calendar.

LIBRA(Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your life is changing at a deeper level; let go of the past. Seek out different kinds of friends. Short-term investments can work if you use your head. Build savings first.

SCORPIO(Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Try not to fret if those in authority are uncooperative or give you a rough time. Grin and bear it. By late afternoon, you will see some refreshing changes! Better days lie ahead.

SAGITTARIUS(Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Big things are in the works. They probably will not take place on center stage but in a private setting. Be open-minded. Your generosity of spirit will be richly rewarded.

CAPRICORN(Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Home would make a good base of operations today. Catch up on your reading or phone calls. Your love boat enters an exotic port of call tonight. Do not come on too strong.

AQUARIUS(Jan. 20-Feb 18): Good news abounds! You finally hear the right words regarding your domestic life or a love affair. Keep your credit cards under lock and key to avoid complications.

PISCES(Feb. 19-March 20): Expect the red carpet treatment today. Travel, telephone calls and meetings give you greater financial control. Dodge emotional tidal waves by stressing serenity.

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Greg Sukiennik
Copy Editor.....Beth Butts
PhotoTechnician.....Carrie Wyeth
Production Supervisor.....Mike Carvalho
Production.....Joanne Quimby, Terry Starmer

RENT ONE OF OURS
· Cars
· Trucks
· Cargo Vans
Rent by the Day, Week or Month
Special Weekly and Weekend Rates
North Amherst Auto Rental
Rt. 63, 40 Montague Rd.
Northh Amherst, MA
549-RENT
(549-7368)
On Bus Route

Men's tennis drops fourth in a row

By BRETT MORRIS
Collegian Staff

Against all odds.

The underfunded, undermanned University of Massachusetts men's tennis team hosted their second straight opponent yesterday at Upper Boyden courts, dropping a 6-0 decision to Providence College, ranked 12th in the East.

The Minutemen entered the contest looking for direction after losing three straight. However, everyone stood in their way, including two Big East Champions, Mother Nature and their season long opponent, the UMass Athletic Administration.

The experienced Friar squad, all seniors, proved to be too tough for UMass in the windy conditions. Jeff Morneau, 1991's Big East Champion at number one singles dominated UMass' number one player Lloyd Teitelbaum in straight sets, 6-1,6-1.

In a battle at number two, UMass' leader in singles victories with three, Tim Lipsky, dropped a hard fought match to the Friar's Mike Gagliardi, 4-6, 5-7. UMass' number five singles player Keith Murray was looking to tie Lipsky for the team lead in singles victories after taking a 5-1 lead in the first set, but fell to Providence's other Big East Champion Steve Sullivan, 5-7, 3-6. At number three singles, UMass' Paul Audet was defeated by Rich Lowther 6-2,6-3.

Minutemen Leonard Levine, number four singles, and Steve Davis, number six, were unsuccessful in seeking their first wins of the season, combining for only a handful of wins against their respective opponents, Steve Galley and Paul Manseville.

The doubles contests weren't played due to their insignificance in the overall match.

"Their one to six players were solid," UMass' coach David Rivera said. "There's not much difference between their positioning."

"We're not matching up with the guys we should," Levine said after explaining that UMass lost some players from last year to injury and transfer. "No one likes to make excuses, but it's frustrating. We're finding ourselves just looking for ways to win."

"Just a couple of years ago, these guys were just as competitive as anyone on our schedule," said Franklin Pierce's coach Carl LaBranche. "But, with the budget cuts, it's tough for these guys to get motivated. But, they're all still playing their hearts out."

COLLEGE SPECIAL
3 Games of Bowling and Shoe Rental
$5.00
with College I.D.
TUESDAY NIGHT SPECIAL
DOMINO PIZZA AND BOWL
Three Games Plus
Slice of Pizza and Coke
$5.00 Plus Shoes
8:30 pm to Close
Every Thurs. Night 9:00pm-12:00am
Northampton Bowl
Live D.J. in the Ally Oops Lounge
Cover $2.00
Call 584-4830 for reservations

D.P. Dough
256–1616
Delivers Calzones
$1.00 OFF ANY 2 CALZONES
exp. 1/25/92 - one coupon per 2 Calzones - Delivery Only
$1.00 OFF ANY 2 CALZONES
exp 1/25/92 one coupon per 2 Calzones Delivers Only

"Dedicated to Treating the Cause, Not the Symptom"
AMHERST CHIROPRACTIC
Family Health Center
DR. VIRGINIA D. HARPER
Chiropractic Physician
549-0335
OFFICE HOURS BY APPOINTMENT

30 MINUTE GUARANTEED DELIVERY OR $3.00 OFF
WE REDEEM COMPETITOR'S COUPONS SO YOU DON'T HAVE TO EAT THEIR QUALITY....
Buy any Large Pizza, Get 2nd Pizza for only
$1.99
DELIVERED IN 30 MINUTES OR LESS
NOT GOOD WITH ANY OTHER OFFER
OFFER EXPIRES 12/30/91
Buy any Pan Pizza, Get 2nd Pizza for only
$1.99
DELIVERED IN 30 MINUTES OR LESS
NOT GOOD WITH ANY OTHER OFFER
OFFER EXPIRES 12/30/91
UMASS • 256-8911
MT. HOLYOKE • 535-1111
VISA/MASTERCARD

MANDATORY
GOLDEN KEY
Honor Society Meeting

All Members!!!

Wednesday, October 2nd
7:00pm
Campus Center Room 165-169

For More Information Call...
Dean of Students Office
Gladys Rodriguez · 545-2684

sports junk

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 12

has always told me that life isn't fair.

—ESPN's Chris Berman is the best sportscaster in the business today. Listen to him say FUUMble, and you're guaranteed to be saying it for the rest of the night. Nickname of the month was Mike "Onion" Pagel.

—It would be nice to see Atlanta win the NL West so we could be spared the stories on Tommy Lasorda.

—It will be nice to see Evander Holyfield knock some sense into Mike Tyson, then knock it out, and back in, and out...

—Boston Mayor Ray Flynn said this past weekend that plans are moving along for a new Boston Garden. Yeah, right and Governor Weld is driving the bulldozer.

—Phil Plantier will lead the majors in home runs given a full season with the Sox. He had a shot in Milwaukee on Monday night that just landed outside of Boyden.

—Foxboro Stadium should be hopping this Sunday as the Pats even their record at 3-3. Look for me at the game, I'll be the disheveled one sitting in the endzone still cheering for Mosi Tatupu.

—I guess the US won the Ryder Cup, but I changed the channel each time the results came on to avoid any sudden heart palpatations.

—If the Sox are out of the race by the weekend, give the ball to Steve Lyons for a few innings. Psycho could be the answer to all the Sox' pitching problems (i.e. Matt Young).

—It's early yet, but I'll pick the Celtics to win it all this year, providing the Chief doesn't get hurt and if Larry can contribute on a regular basis.

—Seeing Notre Dame on NBC every week is a bit repulsive unless they're losing.

—Michael Jordan hosted Saturday Night Live last Saturday. You would have been hard-pressed to find Larry Bird doing such self-promotion in his golden years.

—This could be Mike Greenwell's last week as a member of the Red Sox, ditto for Dennis Lamp.

—Pittsburgh will win it all...unless they face the Sox.

women's tennis

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 12

Kamisnki fought off Karyn Dietrich in a first set tiebreaker to win her match 7-6 (8-6), 6-3. Kelly Grim defeated Ann Suchocki 6-1, 6-2.

"We played really well in singles and the winning became contagious," Gentzler said.

Apparently not contagious enough as UMass lost all three doubles matches against Fairfield. Sarah Nadolny and Watts defeated McNeil and Leann Nathan in the second set, but lost the match 6-4, 3-6, 7-2.

Dietrich and White had a difficult time against Scheckner and Amy Finn, but finally won the match in a second set tiebreaker 6-4, 7-5 (7-5). Reardon and Suchocki defeated Bethan Thompson and Mary Edwards by the dominant score of 6-0, 6-0.

"All the hard work we've been putting in at practice really showed in these matches," Gentzler said. "I haven't seen this team play this well in the all the years I've coached them."

DIVERSITY, VARIETY, CHALLENGE
"An unchallenging 8-to-5 job? I couldn't do that."
I came to Woodward-Clyde to work on a diversity of water resource projects – water quality, hydrology, fisheries – I haven't been disappointed yet. Diversity in a career, at least to me, is crucial.

At Woodward-Clyde you can find variety, diversity, challenge. More importantly, they encourage it, they make it worth it. I can't imagine working any other way.
Eric Strecker, Senior Project Scientist
Woodward-Clyde is People!
Woodward-Clyde
Consulting Engineers • Geologists • Environmental Scientists
We will be on campus Tuesday, October 15.
Please see your career services office to arrange an interview.

The Collegian wishes to congratulate all staff who made Dean's list

Dena Haselkorn	Jay McGill
Stacy Roger	Rose Mendonca
Karen Willworth	Jon Ettman
Brett Morris	Julie Goldstein
Gayle Long	Pat Robblee
Marc Elliott	Joanne Quimby
Jim Winterbottom	Beth Clark

STAIRMASTER
AEROBICS
Low Impact
Step
Hi/Low
Nautilus
Free Weights
Cybex
Lifecycle
Biocycles
Treadmill
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
256-0080

Classifieds

COME TO THE COLLEGIAN OFFICE 113 CAMPUS CENTER • THURSDAY 8:30-3:30 FRIDAY 8:30-2:30 • DEADLINE IS TWO DAYS PRIOR TO PUBLICATION • 20¢/WORD/DAY FOR STUDENTS • CASH IN ADVANCE

ACTIVITIES

Anyone interested in participating for an international performance and cooking, for a UMass event on October 25th. Contact Elisa 256-6418

Rush Alpha Phi Omega
National CO-ED Service Fraternity
For more ito call 546-2068
Or stop by our office
415A STUDENT UNION

STUDENT TRIP TO ISRAEL Meeting October 2 Hillel House 7:15pm info 549-1710

TRI-SIGMA OPEN RUSH
9/30 & 10/2 7-8 PM
10/1 & 10/3 5-6 PM
387 N Pleasant St
549-3811

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Bed and Breakfast, Downtown Amherst 549-0733

BOOK SIGNING by John Densmore
Riding on the Storm; The Doors The Sixties and Now
Oct 2 Campus Concourse

CONGRATULATIONS TO THE amazing new Delta Zeta pledges: Brenda, Stacey, Courtney, Panni, Liza, Rachel, Susan, Stephana, Elissa, and Shari!

"OPEN RUSH"
Alpha Chi Omega!!!
Come to dinner with us, find out what we're all about! 3 nights, Sept. 30- Oct.2
Coma at 5:15-
ALPHA CHI OMEGA!
38 Nutting Ave.
549-8459

SPECTRUM MAGAZINE
General Meeting
Tonight at 6:00
Campus Center Room 917
For new and returning members!

STUDENT LOCKERS AVAILABLE in Student Union. For storage of books and other personal belongings. Register at OCHO 426 Student Union

UNION VIDEO CENTER
General meeting tomorrow night 7PM in our studio behind The Hatch
New members welcome! Be there.

AUTO FOR SALE

'82 MERCURY CAPRI New brakes, muffler, battery, shocks good condition $1000 256-3020

83 RENAULT LeCAR 64K runs good 350/ bo no major problems 5466946

1984 MERC LYNX Good condition $1100 or/BO 549-5111

84 FORD ESCORT New brakes, muffler very reliable. $1000 665-4602-evenings

89 VW 2 door hatchback Excellent condition Owner moved 665-3759

AWESOME 1976 BUICK CENTURY Trouble -Free! Sunroof $400 will bargain 253-3908

VW RABBIT '82 Diesel Runs well 40miles per gallon call 802-254-5803

ENTERTAINMENT

RACK-A-DISC! $175.00 DJs, VJs, Karaoke for house/ Formal parties. Call 586-9900

FOR RENT

1 BR. APT in center of Amherst - next to bars, bus, food. $500 includes heat & hot water. 253-0688/545-3146

EXECUTIVE RENTAL RENT or rent with option to buy 4 bedroom luxuries house in Amherst woods Call 253-7879

FRIDGE RENTALS 253-9742 Free delivery

TOWNHOUSE - 2 bedroom 1 1/2 bath apartment on bus route North Amherst 1-567-1352

FOR SALE

BONDWELL-B310-PLUS Laptop -LCD Backlit
Superfast 16MMZ 286-40MEG Hard disk 3 batteries + Charger-1MEG RAM
1 44 M Floppy-B Charger - $3000 Worth of programs - Weighs only 7lbs!
Asking for $999,- Call Said @ 546-3932

CENTURIAN IRONMAN EXPERT Excellent condition, low mileage. Bought new for $600, Selling for $350/BO, Call Chris 253-3608

CHEAP 81 VW Diesel Runs great, body in bad shape $300 or BO Pat 6-4002

FAT CHANCE! 21", Lika new. Frameset $450, complete $775. 253-4040, massage.

FIREWOOD
Semi-dry, cut, split + delivered $90.00 per cord (128 ft.) 1/2 cord min Call Leon 549-6231 Leave message

FOR SALE HONDA CB360 4700mi. With extras call 253-0951 $400

FREE CAR WHEN you buy my Ford F150 4x4 Call Steve 253-7922

FUTONS!
Lowest prices and quick delivery!
Call Metalworks 585-1233
Free brochure available

GEORGE MICHAEL TICKETS. Worcester Centrum, October 28. Good seats. 546-0635

Jerry&Sars. Wild Boys. Pig Tangent 63 KFOG Call Jeff 549-7686

MACCLASSIC 40/2 MINT w/software $1100 B.O. 665-3736

R/T PLANE TICKET to D.C. over Thanksgiving Kim 6-0107

THREE FOOT! Acoustic speakers perfect only $200 electronic typewriter! $100 253-3908

FOUND

FOUND- Gold bracelet-between Herter and FAC. on 9/25 Call 6-7292

FUNDRAISERS

RAISE $500...$1000...$1500
FOOLPROOF
FUNDRAISING
For your fraternity, sorority, team or other campus organization. Act now for the chance to win a Caribbean cruise and fabulous prizes!
Call 1-800-950-8472, ext 50

HELP WANTED

EARLY RISERS- Earn great $. Deliver newspapers on campus. 548-9688. 9 to 5

EXTRA CASH:
FREE monthly Avon catalog or become a representative
Write: Toni OBrien 86 Camden St. Milford CT 06460

"Know before you go," Where to work, live and ski free In Colorado's resorts. "Current guide to Aspen, Vail, Breckenridge and more! $18.95. Call 1-800-766-6174

KUWAIT, SAUDI WORKERS NEEDED $35.00 +up per hour. Tax Free. Both skilled & unskilled For Info call 615-779-5505 Ext K-858

PEACE AND JUSTICE organization seeks work/study, 10 hour administrative assistant position. $4.50-5.50 per hour. Call Carolyn at 256-8306

Travel Sales Representative
STS, the leader in collegiate travel needs motivated individuals and groups to promote winter/spring break trips. For information call Student Travel Services, Ithaca NY at 1-800-648-4849

HEY CB@!

YOUR FIRST PERSONAL of Autumn!
I love you and I don't care who knows it!
Love, CJ

 INTERNS WANTED ***

SPRING 1992 INTERNSHIPS with the Legal Services Center: get hands on experience in the legal field--work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary--training provided. Contact Legal Services today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center

LOST

3 keys on a ring.
Call Erica
546-6240
"REWARD"

HELP! I lost my keys- Mickey Mouse/Backbone keyring. Lost Thursday AM between Machmer and Herter. Call Chris 549-1244

LOST -REWARD BEAT-UP Brown leather jacket left in Maher after Wednesday night class if found contact Jay at 548-9915

LOST!!!!
Watch Timex black leather strap with snaps Lost Wed Sept. 25 in or around Herter Hall Sentimental value !! found please call Rose at 6-1565

SOMEONE SWAPPED THEIR leather jacket for mine at Puffton party 9/28 Sat. If you have info please call 546-0592

PERSONALS

KERRI A. Call me in Sunderland - Anne K.

HEY UMASS
Get ready for the best wings ever.
Because Mama is coming soon

A TRI-SIGMA Happy Birthday to our September baby
We love you Deb!
Love your sistas!!

SHARON:
Happy four years & many more

MUSHROOM AND MOUTH-
It's been nothing but magic this past month...
I don't even feel like a straight-haired misfit!
-Your Mother

JEFF
UMass isn't the same without you.
Good thing we don't mind enormous phone bills!

GRAHAM,
When you wake up we'll take one bottle of Vodka, a bottle of beer, Kahlua, 2 cases of beer, Bacardi, Malibu... Oh yeah and happy birthday!
Love, Kara, Christina, Cheryl, Mike, +Christina
P.S. Giggle, giggle, snort, snort, chuckle, chuckle, laugh, laugh

To Nelly the Peach whose glasses I broke on friday. I thought I was doing good- I was wrong. I don't think at all. I lost your trust in proving I was worth it. Bad tracle on my part. I won't be stupid again...Happy Annniversary(?) I hope. -Merc.

ANOTHER BAD CREATION! Congratulations to the new pledges of IGU. We're gonna have a good time. Always! Stefanie, Katie, Josephine, Jessica, Hillary, Tracey, Sharon, Carrie, Tara, Kristen, Kate, Kristy, Janet, Wendy, and Loretta. It's gonna be a great semester

DEB R.
Let's get back to the way we were. I'll love you always and forever.
Love Wally

ELANA DAVIS
Happy birthday from your invisible roommate and her other roommate

HEY PUTZBURGER! 23 more days and then you can take ME out!? Just kidding, have a wonderful 21st... "this for brains"

BRUCE
From seniors in high school to seniors in college, the past 4 years have been the best and it's all because of you! You make me so happy, I love you so much!
Happy Anniversary!
Love Always & Forever,
SHARON

Cooooookachoo, Mrs Robinsons:
I NEVER had so much fun as we did this weekend. B-Your moon shona bright and S-Why is there a bum hole in Bs bedspread? Luv, the Ladies of Christophers

HEY BABE! What's a 21st birthday without a candlelit game of strip Otherlo? This time, winner takes all! I'll see you tonight... the Vixen.

RIDE WANTED

TO/FROM SYRACUSE long weekend, Oct 11-14. Will split costs. Jeanne 6-1993

RESUME SERVICE

Cutting Edge Resumes. Complete resume service. Writing, laser printing, letters, advice. 549-0367

ROOMMATE NEEDED

Interested in moving to Southwest coed townhse? I need a roommate. Call Lynn 8-0525

SERVICES

FREE pregnancy testing; confidential and caring support. BIRTHRIGHT 233 No. Pleasant Street Amherst 549-1906

TRAVEL

RUSSIA AND THE UKRAINE! Jan. 6-20, 1992: Moscow, Leningrad, Kiev, plus Helsinki, Finland. $2045 complete from New York. Call Prof. Jones, 253-7827, evenings after 7:00

TRAVEL FREE! Campus representatives wanted to earn intersession and spring break trips. 256-8254

TYPING

PAPERS TYPED: $1.50/typed page Quick, Accurate Service. Call Brian 546-3563

WANTED

WANTED- To buy classical guitar Call Gita - 546/4185

Sports

Soccer hosts Brown

Gruber and Co. seek fifth win

By TED KOTTLER
Collegian Correspondent

This afternoon (3 p.m.) on Lower Boyden Field, the University of Massachusetts men's soccer team will attempt to improve its 4-1-2 record against Brown University.

The Minutemen enter the contest following a 2-0 victory over Northeastern last Sunday and UMass head coach Sam Koch knows the Bears are "an experienced group of improved, hard-working players," who will no doubt give the Minutemen a battle.

Brown is ranked 8th in New England Division I, right behind UMass.

"We also need to continue to work on ball movement in the midfield," Koch said, which he also said was a concern prior to the last contest, though it did not prove to be a problem.

An essential key to UMass' success this season has been the performance of senior goalie, co-captain Jon Gruber. Gruber's experience, leadership on the field, support of his teammates, and remarkable goalkeeping skills have all led him to become one of the finest keepers in New England men's soccer.

The next time you are at a match, the most common chant you will hear is "Gruber! Gruber!" in praise of his outstanding play.

Gruber credits his success to several factors. For one, he has been playing in net since he was eight years old and he began then because he was bigger than most of the other kids and he couldn't run really well. And coaches tend to stick the biggest kid in net.

"My experience has definitely helped me," he said.

While Gruber embarked on a goaltending career since he lacked some of the other necessities of being a soccer player, in the years he has been a goalie he has acquired the skills crucial to the trade and has refined them to near perfection.

"Sometimes people say a goalie doesn't have to be as fit as the other players, but that's not true. [A goalie] has to be in good shape both physically and mentally," Gruber said.

Gruber considers it a privilege to be an assistant at a goalie camp run by Joe Machnik, the goalkeeping coach for the United States National Team. He believes this experience has truly helped him improve his own skills.

Gruber is a Sports Management major, and following graduation, he would "like to get into sports marketing."

As far as his post-graduation soccer plans, Gruber would like to participate in the Maccabia Games, which will be held in 1993. These are competitions held in Israel that feature Jewish athletes from various countries.

Collegian photo by Jeff Egan

The Minutemen celebrate a goal. They are in action this afternoon (at 3 p.m.) on lower Boyden Field against Brown.

Unloading tidbits of sports junk

Now, the moment you've all been waiting for, or at least my roommate and my dog, the unveiling of "Scott's Shots," a monthly potpourri of sport's news and views.

—Keep an eye on the UMass women's soccer team, it could be a cold day in November before goalie Briana Scurry let's one get past her, with a goals against average somewhere near .3.

—Speaking of my dog (Bo's his name), it looks like he's in line for a title fight with the neighborhood bully, Rock. Rock looks like Spuds MacKenzie on steroids and growth hormone and holds at least a 30 pound advantage on my 50 pound shephard/retriever. Don King's promoting, Jim Lampley and Sugar Ray Leonard on commentary.

David Scott

—If only Joe Morgan could handle his bullpen as well as he dishes the quotes of note. This month's best came after a squeeze bunt which scored a run. "The old squeezeroni looked pretty good didn't it?" I've always enjoyed my pizza with extra squeezeroni.

—Midnight Madness is less than two weeks away. Wonder what the "Rage in the Cage" will look like when it moves to the Mullins Memorial Center in 1993, give or take a year or two?

—The Patriots are still on their way to the Super Bowl despite a minor setback in the heat of Phoenix. Look for Jon "He was here, but now he's gone" Vaughn to repeat his 99 yard kick return at least once this season.

—Vaughn's alma mater, Michigan, is home to the Heisman Trophy winner for this year, a speedster by the name of Desmond Howard. That is if Jerome Bledsoe doesn't elip in.

—Kevin Stevens is going to be wearing the wrong black and gold in Pittsburgh — wouldn't he look good with a big B on his chest? He was the Stanley Cup for Boston, now it'll just be another winning season and disappointing playoff loss.

—Watch a rugby game for a while and tell me those guys aren't a little bit sick in the head.

—Bill Laimbeer is thinking of suing the NBA and the Olympic Selection Committee for his omission from the 1992 Olympic hoops team. Johnny Most says it best, "He's a BIG baby."

—I still believe in the Red Sox... I believe that they have broken my heart for the 21st consecutive year, I believe that Matt Young should be shot and I believe that if it wasn't for Roger, the only people still watching the Sox would be Sean McDonough and Bob Montgomery.

—Steve Young is a back-up quarterback. Hugh Millen is the Pats starting quarterback. My mother

CONTINUED ON PAGE 11

Field hockey at Northeastern

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

As even the best hot rod cars occasionally need tune-ups, the University of Massachusetts field hockey team gets one last tune-up against Northeastern today in Brookline (3:30 p.m.) before Saturday's big one versus Old Dominion.

The NCAA field hockey poll came out Tuesday, and nothing has changed as far as the top slots. Old Dominion remains number one in the nation, with the Minutewomen nipping at their heels in the number two spot. Both teams are unbeaten this year, at 8-0, with the difficult part of their schedules coming up.

Although looking ahead is always discouraged in sports, the game Saturday between the two top teams in the nation will probably occupy the minds of UMass this week.

Fortunately, the Minutewomen have been very successful in taking their schedule one game at a time, according to coach Pam Hixon, and today should be no different.

If the Minutewomen think they can overlook the Huskies, they are mistaken. Northeastern is no pushover, although they are 3-4 this year.

The Huskies lost by one goal to four tough teams this year: Maryland, Northwestern, Iowa, and North Carolina. Their three wins came against Harvard, Duke and Vermont.

The Huskies offense has come from three players. Co-captain Debra Sweeney leads the team in points, with four goals and seven assists. Kelly Wilk has five goals, which leads the team, and Kelly West has netted four.

Goalie Brenda Mitchell has been a stronghold in the net this season. The junior has allowed eight goals and has a 1.12 goals against average.

The Huskies defense, in general, has kept the opposition's offense down this year. They have only allowed 3 goals once and they have two shutouts.

Traveling to Brookline will seem familiar to UMass, as they opened their season on Northeastern's Parsons Field against Northwestern, a game they won 1-0 in OT.

UMass played a team last Sunday on the Huskies level, beating the Yale Bulldogs 4-0. The team took a 2-0 lead early in the first half on goals by Jenn Salisbury and Kathy Phelan.

The Minutewomen put things away early in the second half when Tara Jelley and Dawn Trumbauer each scored. Philippa Scott and Tina Rusiecki combined on UMass' fourth straight shutout. The game was only the Minutewomen's second on the road this year.

Women's tennis wins two

By LILLIAN K. LEGGIO
Collegian Correspondent

Saturday, the University of Massachusetts women's tennis team faced the unenviable challenge of playing back-to-back matches against La Salle and Fairfield University. UMass rose to the occasion and met the challenge by defeating Lasalle 9-0 and Fairfield 6-3.

"We had the psychological edge," said UMass coach Edwin Gentzler. "And that just seemed to increase after the outcome of each match."

In the match against La Salle(1-6), Coach Gentzler rested his No. 1 player Shizuko Yamasakin and shuffled the rest of the UMass lineup as a strategy to save some of his players for the then 4-2 Fairfield squad.

Kerri Kamiski, normally the No. 5 player, played in place of Yamasaki and Amy Ryan moved up a notch to the No. 3 spot, replacing Kerensa Eddy. Coach Gentzler also played freshman Lesley Watts in her first non-exhibition match.

Apparently these strategies didn't hinder Gentzler and the Minutewomen as they defeated La Salle 9-0. Kamiski lost the first set 5-7, but rallied in the second and third sets to beat Elaine LaFlamme 5-7, 6-3, 6-4.

UMass' No. 2 player Gail Girasella defeated Jeanne Montana 6-3, 6-4. Amy Ryan won both her sets by the same score, defeating Jenny Creneti 6-2, 6-2.

Playing No. 4 for UMass, Leslie Watts won her first non-exhibition match by a score of 6-1, 6-1.

Other singles matches saw Kelly Grim defeat Magan Lyall 6-1, 6-0 and Stacy Scheckner win her match against Ryoka Yamada 6-4, 6-2.

In doubles play, Eddy and Girasella defeated LaFlamme and Montana 6-3, 6-2. Yamasaki and Ryan beat Creneti and Yamada 6-3, 6-1 and Scheckner and Pam Levine defeated Memic Myers and Kristen Thirschanaly.

"Playing this many matches, I tried to set up lineups that would be competitive," Gentzler said. "Luckily for us, we had a little more depth than both La Salle and Fairfield."

In the last of the singles matches, Ryan, playing in the number 4 slot, defeated Samantha Gambino 6-1, 6-1.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 11

SPORTS NOTICE

MIDNIGHT MADNESS

Midnight Madness will be Monday, October 14, at 10:00 pm to 12:30 am. There will be a three-on-three tournament for UMass students, and a foul shooting contest for both men and women. Students can sign up at the Campus Concourse all week from 9:00 am - 3:00 pm. In order to participate, they must sign up.

The elimination rounds will be held on October 9, at 7:00 pm at Curry Hicks Cage. The field will be narrowed to two men and two women. The final will be held after the three-on-three tournament during Midnight Madness.

There will be prizes and drawings to area restaurants. Grand prize is two round trip US Air tickets to Florida with Hotel accomidations.

Donations of canned food items will benefit the Western Mass Food Bank.

INTRAMURALS

Intramural Ice Hockey teams are still being accepted - bring your completed forms to the Intramural Office, room 215 Boyden or call 545-2693/0022 for further details.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THE LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND

VOLUME CI ISSUE 22 THURSDAY, OCTOBER 3, 1991

Photo by Josh Reynolds

A TOTAL AUDIO EXPERIENCE — Gordy Broon blows some cool sax in front of the Campus Center as part of a promotion for Peter Pan Bus Lines.

Bush vows to veto unemployment bill

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush on Wednesday reiterated his intent to veto a bill that would extend unemployment benefits, saying he wouldn't allow Democratic presidential candidates to "set the agenda for this country."

Bush denounced the $6.4 billion relief measure to give the unemployed up to 20 extra weeks of benefits as "a budget-busting bill" that would "further burden a burdened economy."

"I was elected to try to protect the taxpayer as well as those who are unemployed," said Bush, reiterating his support for a less costly Republican alternative.

Bush, smarting from Democrats' jibes at his recent flurry of efforts to promote Republican domestic proposals, said he wasn't "going to let a handful of Democratic candidates. . . set the agenda for this country."

"They weren't elected to do something. I was, and I'm going to keep on trying to do it," said Bush.

Bush went on the warpath against the jobless bill as he left the White House for a day devoted largely to campaigning for GOP candidates in Pittsburgh and Louisville.

He ruled out tapping an unemployment trust fund, saying "we are using tons of money to pay unemployment benefits."

Later, at a GOP fund-raising luncheon in Pittsburgh for Dick Thornburgh's Senate campaign, he said the Democratic Congressional leaders "sense of a political issue here to use next year against all of us."

"They were determined to pass and ram down my throat a budget-busting bill," he said. "And I will veto their approach because it will further burden all taxpayers."

The president favors an alternative jobless bill offered by Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole of Kansas. Dole's measure would extend benefits for up to 10 weeks and pay for it by selling unused radio frequencies and stepping up debt collections.

The Democrats would pay for their bill by borrowing, which increases the budget deficit.

House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt of Missouri said on CBS' "Morning News" that Bush was "out of touch with what is happening to ordinary families in America today who are struggling, trying to pay their bills ... and they're looking for these benefits they earned, and he is not listening to them."

Bush thwarted an earlier congressional attempt to extend unemployment benefits in August, but he didn't have to resort to a veto. Bush has vetoed 22 bills and never been overridden.

Republicans, including Thornburgh, are eager to forge a compromise and not appear heartless as the recession drags on. With the unemployment rate at 6.8 percent and 8.5 million Americans out of work, some 300,000 people exhaust their unemployment benefits each month.

Both the House and the Senate voted Tuesday to extend benefits beyond the standard 26 weeks. The House vote, 300-118, was large enough to override a veto, but the Senate's 65-35 tally was two votes short of a two-thirds majority.

Trustees request $235M for '92

Takes cue from Weld, Board aims for "world class" system

By JASON GEORGE
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Board of Trustees voted yesterday to put forth a request of $235 million for UMass' state budget allocation for the 1992 fiscal year.

The Board met at the UMass Worcester Medical Center campus in that body's second meeting since Gov. William Weld's reorganization of the Massachusetts higher education system.

The reorganization bill merged the former University of Lowell and Southern Massachusetts University into a new five-campus University of Massachusetts system. The two universities were renamed UMass-Lowell and UMass-Dartmouth.

The $235 million request that the Board voted to approve covered general operations for the UMass system. The budget was developed by a task force representing all of the system's campuses and was chaired by UMass-Lowell Chancellor William Hogan.

Hogan noted that the current economic recession forced the task force to develop a budget that could be defended in a period of dwindling state resources.

"We developed [the budget] with the idea that this would be a publicly defensible request," Hogan said. "But we had real questions about a new University which is supposed to build itself up to 'world class' status."

Weld and University President E.K. Fretwell have frequently stated that the reorganization bill is a step toward building a "world-class" UMass system.

In addition, the task force developed a series of budget priority requests for the 1993 fiscal year under eight categories including student access and retention, academic and research equipment and facilities maintenance.

The budget request notes the special budget priority requests, totaling approximately $30 million, is "related to the limited goal of preserving the University's academic integrity and long-term capacity to aid economic growth and competitiveness."

Hogan noted that the request "focused on academic infrastructure rather than people."

The UMass system faces the threat of having its "academic talent raided," Hogan said, but has to develop strict priorities in the current economic situation.

"Under the current fiscal situation [the budget] had to be politically defensible," Hogan said. "If you're going to protect integrity, other items have to be addressed. . . [the request] was a judgement call on integrity."

Chairman Gordon Oakes said the budget request should not be considered final and that more work needs to occur.

"We have to be armed with information and statistics to convince people that we need more money," Oakes said. "We need a better definition of what's in that $235 million."

The Trustees tentatively set a "ceiling" of $285.4 million in total appropriations for the 1993 year, although the Board noted a potential need to go above that with emphasis on "wages and deferred maintenance."

The Board also took action on 11 new academic programs that were proposed. The Trustees voted to "reapprove" nine programs to be sent to the newly-formed Higher Education Coordinating Committee, the body that replaced the Board of Regents for Higher Education.

Inside:

Page 3:
Decision on basketball forward William Herndon still up in the air.
Page 4:
Felice Cohen admits to going on a blind date (with a law school graduate!). She says he was a pretty decent guy.
And in This Weekend:
Get your zoology books, Dinosaur Jr. is coming.
Weather:
Cloudy, with developing rainstorms. Our weather service says it could be heavy at times.

D'Souza rips colleges' ethnic quota policies

By BROOKE WHEELER
Collegian Staff

Affirmative action based on ethnicity is not only ineffective but unjust, said a conservative visiting lecturer to a capacity-filled room at Amherst College last night.

5 Dinesh D'Souza, author of Illiberal Education, asserted to the 300-plus audience that the "multiple track" admissions system many universities have adopted to fill percentage quotas only hurts the minorities and damages their rate of success in the academic world.

"Some minorities who are accepted into the better universities because of ethnic grouping instead of academic merit are competitively outmatched," said D'Souza. "These people would have a higher success rate if they went to a college with their peers."

D'Souza, an immigrant from India and Dartmouth graduate, also asserted that the racial separatism present during the admissions process translates itself onto campus life as well.

"It's the new segregation. Universities that think they are nurturing multiculturalism are instead fostering a racially fragmented environment," he said. "Enclaves of ethnic groups have exclusive dorms and organizations supported by the universities. This only inhibits interaction. Why is this sort of reverse segregation encouraged?"

The author also discussed campus political correctness undermining curriculum quality at modern universities. He argued that core curriculums are being molded around ethnic representation, with a lesser regard to intellectual import.

"The very essence of a liberal education should be

CONTINUED ON PAGE 6

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THE LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is a Registered Student Organization of the University of Massachusetts, published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000.

113 CAMPUS CENTER AMHERST, MA 01003
Phone (413) 545-3500 FAX (413) 545-1992

STAFF

Editor in Chief.....Gayle Long
Managing Editor.....Marc Elliott
Editorial Editor.....Greg Sukiennik
News Editor.....Preston P. Forman
Sports Editor.....Tamir Lipton
Arts Editor.....Paul DeGeorges
Photography Editor.....Carrie Wyeth
Black Affairs Editor.....Sondra Sutton
Women's Issues Editor.....Jessame Hannus
Jewish Affairs Editor.....Felice Cohen, Debra Kriegsman
Multicultural Affairs Editor.....Alexander Nguyen
Third World Affairs Editor.....Madanmohan Rao
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor.....Trystan Skeigh
Business Manager.....Randee Pastel
Advertising Manager.....Dena Haselkorn
Finance Manager.....Jeff Weiner
Circulation Manager.....Jim Winterbottom
Subscriptions Manager.....Stacy Rogers
Promotions Manager.....Scott Macey
Production Manager.....Terry Starmer
Day Graphics Manager.....Jenny Burns

PROFESSIONAL STAFF

Business.....Brian Harrington, Lori Black, Maureen Majerowski
Graphics.....Blake Phillips

GLB Forum

THURSDAY, OCT. 3

Men's group — A discussion group for all men will meet in the LBGA office, 413 B in the Student Union at 9 p.m.

Film — "Longtime Companion" will be shown by The Program for GLB Concerns in CC 803 at 7 p.m. For more information, call 545-4824.

FRIDAY, OCT. 4

Film — "Some Like It Hot" with Marilyn Monroe, Tony Curtis and Jack Lemon will be shown at Amherst College's Campus Center Theater at 7:30 and 10 p.m. $1.50 admission.

Coffee Social — LBGA coffee social will be held in CC 903 from 3 - 6 p.m.

Game — Wimmin's Lavender Pool, for LBGA coffee social attendees starting at 4 p.m. in the pool room across from The Hatch. Wander down and grab a table!!!

LBG Cafe — A show featuring local lesbian hit Erica Wheeler, and Hyatte & Martin, a vocal and piano duo making a debut from NYC and P-Town. Beginning at 8 p.m. in Hamden Theater in SouthWest Towers. For more information, call 545-4824.

SUNDAY, OCT. 6

Reading — Leslea Newman, award-winning local lesbian author, will be reading from her new poetry collection, Sweet Dark Places, at Smith College in the Neilson Library Browsing Room at 2 p.m.

TUESDAY, OCT. 8

Sexuality Support Group — A small support group for men and women dealing with issues of sexual identity will meet at 127 Hills North from 7 - 8:30 p.m. Sponsored by Mental Health Services. For more information, call 545-2337.

Rap group — Lesbian, Bisexual support group will be meeting in 413 B, Student Union, at 7:30 p.m.

PFLAG — Parents and Friends of Lesbians and Gays will be meeting at the Grace Episcopal Church on Spring Street in Amherst at 7:30 p.m.

Coffee House — Smith College's Lesbian/Bisexual Alliance is sponsoring a gathering for women only from 8 - 10 p.m. in the LBA office.

THURSDAY, OCT. 10

Film — Lianna about a young married woman struggling with her sexual identity, will be shown in CC Room 803. Sponsored by The Program. For more information, 545-4824.

Men's Group — See Thursday's schedule.

Patrick & Co. knows how to make my hair feel so good.
Let's get your hair in shape for the cold weather.

$10.00 off any chemical service
$5.00 off a haircut
$15.00 off a haircut & chemical service
Exp. 10/31/91

Columbus found America now you can find

Patrick & Co.
Distinctive Hairstyling For Men & Women

for great haircare.

appointments or walk-ins
586-7477

104 Russell Street • Elmwood Shops
Hadley, MA 01035

Legal Problems?
Call UMass Student Legal Services!
Housing • Family • Student Rights
Civil Rights • Workers Rights
Criminal • Consumer Law
Military and Draft Law
922 Campus Center 545-1995

HAMPSHIRE FITNESS CLUB

FIT FOR LIFE

The Area's Most Complete Club

256-6646
At Echo Hill

• pool • aerobics • aqua-aerobics
• steps • nautilus • raquetball
• full weights • jacuzzi • sauna
• massage • bikes • tennis
• rowers • treadmills
• stairmaster
• student discounts

We're on the bus route

Do you come from a Spanish speaking country?

Would you like to talk to other people who come from Spanish speaking countries?

Life on campus can be a wonderful experience but at times can also be confusing.

Mental Health Services will be offering a support group facilitated by Lynette Bloise, where you can share your experiences on campus.

Group will meet Mondays from 3:30 to 5:00p.m., starting in late October.

Pre-group interview is required; please call 545-2337 for an appointment.

¿Vienes de un pais de habla hispana?

¿Te gustaria hablar con otras personas que vienen de paises de habla hispana?

La vida en la universidad puede ser una experiencia maravillosa, pero a veces puede ser confusa.

Servicios de Salud Mental (Mental Health Services) va a ofrecer un grupo de discusión, dirigido por Lynette Bloise, donde tú puedes compartir tus experiencias en la universidad.

El grupo se va a reunir los lunes de 3:30 a 5:00 de la tarde, empezando a finales de octubre.

Una entrevista antes de comenzar el grupo es requerida; por favor llama 545-2337 para una cita.

Local

Big companies cut recruiting at University

By MICHAEL LEVY
Collegian Staff

The number of recruiters from large companies visiting the University of Massachusetts campus has dropped this semester compared with the number of visits last fall, according to a Mather Career Center official.

Clark Edwards, director of career planning and placement, said the number of companies meeting potential employees at the University is down 20 to 25 percent compared with the final results from last fall.

Edwards was "quite optimistic" about the number being "down only 20 percent" at this point of the year.

Recruitment last year was distorted by what he calls "front loading," a situation occurring when businesses are unsure about their personnel needs due to the fluctuating economy. The companies actively recruit in the fall but do not necessarily hire students in the spring.

He said many companies could not hire employees straight out of college at their usual level and "bailed out in the spring" when the economy soured even more.

Two business categories Edwards said were recruiting less are large computer companies and defense contractors.

"This should not be a shock — all you have to do is read the paper every week," Edwards said.

Among defense contractors, Portsmouth Shipyard is not planning to recruit on campus this year and Raytheon has sent fewer representatives than usual, he said.

Many other large companies are sending fewer representatives to UMass this year, according to Career Center figures. These include Digital Corp. and IBM, two of the nation's largest computer companies. Both corporations have been hard hit by the recession.

United Technologies will only send one or two recruiters this year, if they send any, Edwards said.

In addition, Proctor and Gamble's sales unit has failed to recruit at UMass, although "they have come here for years," said Edwards.

P&G's research and development department, however, will attend, he said.

Collegian photo by Carrie Wyeth

"I CAN'T BELIEVE WE LIFTED THE WHOLE THING" — Construction workers prepare to raise the first section of the roof to the Mullins Memorial Center. This segment weighs almost 70 tons and the cranes that will raise it can support a combined weight of 375 tons.

High hopes mark SGA start

Senators talk of ways to revamp student government

By MARC ELLIOTT
Collegian Staff

As the Student Union Ballroom's disco ball turned overhead, 39 senators, both new and old, began another semester last night for the Undergraduate Student Senate at the University.

Hopes for the advancement of student empowerment are much higher this semester than they were last semester, Senate Speaker Bob Monaghan told the senate in his opening address.

"We had a lot of crazy things happen last year, but we hope a lot of good things will happen this year," he said.

Student government got off to a rocky start last semester when the senate officers began the first senate meeting of the year by announcing their intentions to ask the administration to step in and restructure the Student Government Association.

Monaghan defined the SGA's mission as to defend student rights from whatever force infringes upon them, including the University's administration.

"The administration here, it screws the students," Monaghan said. "And that's what the student government is for, it speaks for students."

In their introductory speeches, the senators voiced differing views on how to best deal with the State House, the administration and the Student Activities Office which many last semester accused of tampering with student control over the Student Activities Trust Fund.

While Senator Micheal O'Brien (Field) said he hoped "we can kick some administrative ass," Senator Micheal Poster (JQA) said he supported working with the administration.

Communication between the administration and the SGA is especially important this semester because of Chancellor Richard O'Brien's request for a "relationship statement" to be signed by both himself and the SGA leadership by the end of this academic year, President David Gagne said.

Gagne also said that he wanted to bring a united campus into the fight for state funding.

"There is no reason why 17,000 people, working together, can't accomplish something," Gagne said.

Senator Eric Nash (Butterfield) said that he would work toward putting more power in the hands of the students.

"Especially the ones living in the dorms to help better their Orwellian existence," he said.

Monaghan said that for senate next week, he and Marc Kennan from the Graduate Student Senate would hold a workshop on the student movement.

No decision on Herndon

By TAMIR LIPTON
Collegian Staff

John Calipari walked out of his office at around 8:15 p.m. last night, looking thoroughly exhausted, and knowing no more about the status of forward William Herndon's eligibility for the upcoming basketball season than he did when he entered the office some 12 hours earlier.

"There's nothing to comment on," Calipari said. "Nothing's been decided."

The National Letter of Intent Steering Committee, meeting in Chicago, began hearing the case at 3:30 p.m. CDT and finished the meeting some two hours later.

A spokesperson from the Big 10 office said the five committee members left to eat dinner and were not returning until this morning.

However, University of Massachusetts Athletic Director Frank McInerney said that one possibility was they went to a function and were going back to the office later to finish discussing the case.

Because of complex technicalities involving the National Letter of Intent, Herndon may be forced to sit out two full seasons instead of one. Herndon transferred to UMass from the University of Richmond in the middle of his freshman, which started the controversy.

McInerney said he had no idea of how the committee would vote, but did say that the committee had hoped to have an answer one way or another so that an appeal could be filed today with the 37 conference commissioners, if need be.

"These are very able administrators, there's no way of predicting how they're going to vote," he said. "It's like predicting the weather for next week, you just can't do it.

"They asked the obvious question, 'was he adequately informed [about having to sit out for two seasons instead of one]?'"

Assistant basketball coach James "Bruiser" Flint who is in Chicago with Herndon said he had no idea if a decision would be made before the end of the night.

As of press time, nothing was decided.

Asked what he thought Herndon's chance of being reinstated was, Flint said "50-50."

"When you sit in those meetings, you have no idea of how things are going," McInerney said. "It may be hours before they reach a decision."

Japanese garden to grace the Hill

By ELIZABETH CHRISTOPHER
Collegian Correspondent

The apple trees are sharing Orchard Hill with an entirely new garden, a Japanese garden. It's a memorial designed by University of Massachusetts alumnus Todd Richardson, commemorating the centennial of the death of William Smith Clark.

Clark was the first president of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, now UMass, as well as the first president of Sapporo Agricultural College, now the University of Hokkaido, in Japan.

The Japanese garden-styled memorial is situated between the Butterfield and Van Meter dormitories where Clark's home once stood.

Richardson, currently a visiting faculty member of the Landscape Architecture and Regional Planning Department, designed the memorial as a student in 1987, in hopes of educating people about Clark's cross-cultural influences.

"William S. Clark in Japan is like Abe Lincoln in the U.S.," said Richardson.

Japanese children learn about Clark because he founded the college in Sapporo and was a progressive thinker of the times, said Richardson.

The memorial represents the significant influence Clark had on others as an educator, said Richardson.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 6

Police confiscate studded collar

A man's studded collar was confiscated by a University of Massachusetts police officer working at the Bluewall on Friday night, police said. This kind of neckwear is illegal in Massachusetts.

Two people were stopped on the Campus Pond on Saturday morning for suspicious activity. Police found one of them hiding a speed limit sign under a sweatshirt. Police will seek a show-cause hearing.

ARRESTS:

•Two men were arrested in a general disturbance in the Kennedy Residence Hall on Saturday night. Bryan C. Fabbri, 17, of Wakefield, was charged with disorderly conduct and for being a minor carrying alcohol. Michael J. Ewing, 18, of West Springfield, was also charged with disorderly conduct and for possession of a fake drivers license.

•Three men were arrested on Sunday morning in Lot 11 for burglary. William A. Dube Jr., 18, of South Hadley, was charged with breaking and entering in the night with intent to commit a felony and with malicious injuries to personal property. Ronald M. Condino, 19, of South Hadley, was charged with breaking and entering and malicious injuries to personal property. Jeff W. Graham, 19, of Holland, was charged with breaking and entering.

— DAVID MASSEY

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions on this page are those of the individual writer or cartoonist, and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian or the University unless otherwise noted.

Editorial Policy

The Editorial/Opinion page welcomes and encourages columns, letters and cartoons from UMass and the entire Five College area. The following are some important guidelines to consider when submitting material to the page:

The Editorial staff reserves the right to edit letters and columns for grammar, clarity and length.

Submissions must bear the writer's name, local address and phone number. This information is subject to verification.

Anonymous submissions will be printed at the editor's discretion. Letters or columns written under a pseudonym will not be accepted.

All submissions must be typed and double spaced to be considered for publication. Untyped material will not be considered for publication.

Letters should not exceed 50 typed, double spaced lines. Columns should not exceed 70 typed, double spaced lines. Letters and columns of unreasonable length will not be considered for publication.

Letters and columns written in response to a previously published letter will not be printed. Responses to or criticisms of columns or other Collegian articles are restricted to letter form. Any exceptions to this guideline will be determined solely by the editors.

The Editorial staff is not required to print all submitted material. All submissions become property of the Collegian and will not be returned.

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual artist or writer and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian, its staff or the Editorial staff.

* * * * *

The Editorial page wants you. Yes, you, the reader of these smudgy pages. We are looking for good writers and good artists to fill this page every day with their ideas and opinions. If you're interested, stop by the Editorial desk at the Collegian office, 113 Campus Center (the basement level). Your opinions count — but no one will know what you're thinking unless you tell them. 19,000 people want to hear what you think.

Is it a living or a killing?

"Pittsfield GE awarded Navy contract" read the headline of the Hampshire Union-News business section.

At first I jumped for joy. There were abundant rumors of General Electric's demise in Pittsfield — another department to close completely, thousands out of work, the entire city spontaneously combusting. (OK, I made the last one up. Too many cups of espresso.) The new contract will undoubtedly bring some measure of security to so many families I know at home.

Greg Sukiennik

But wait a minute here. Should I really be happy? After all, GE is in the death business, making all sorts of neat weapons.

With George Bush appearing on national television to propose massive cuts in the nuclear arsenals of both the United States and the Soviet Union, one gets the impression that the weapons biz may be on the way out. This is either a good or a bad thing, depending where you stand.

When the U.S. military was considering which army, air force and naval bases to close over the summer, there was intense lobbying by nearly every congress-person in Washington. One can only imagine how many favors were promised, how much begging went on, how many bribes changed hands as representatives and senators tried to save the well-being of their constituents at home.

Their concerns were valid. I have friends in Lunenberg and Harvard, towns close to soon-to-be-closed Fort Devens. The people of these communities rely on available work at the base and money that military personel spend in the towns. To them, Devens isn't just an army base — it's a livelihood.

What will they do when Devens is one big, empty playground? "Move, probably," said one. What about people who can't move, who can't just pack up their homes and take off?

Ahh, you say, but what a small price to pay for world peace! After all, what need do we have for army bases in every county when Canada has never threatened to invade? Why not spend the money we'll save on domestic concerns like education, housing and employment training?

So this is what Dwight Eisenhower was talking about when he warned of the military-industrial complex. People choosing up sides in the defense budget battle not only out of personal convictions, but out of the most basic human need: the need for survival.

When you've got kids to feed and bills to pay, when the mortgage is due and your personal loan officer is gunning after you, what good are politics? Strong convictions won't keep you out of debtor's prison.

Then again, how can you work in the death industry if you believe that war is immoral, that peace is society's highest goal? Either you put up, shut up and be miserable, or find other work. This is difficult when so many jobs are defense-related. You name it, the military buys it, and often at incredible profit margins.

America has no easy way out of this dilemma. Maybe no way out, perhaps. For now, all my friends at home can hope for are more defense contracts. Who could blame them?

Greg Sukiennik is a Collegian columnist

Bartlett lobby, the home of cigarettes and English majors

To casual passers-by, Bartlett Hall's lobby most likely resembles a subway station after a Grateful Dead concert. However, unless you major in English, you have probably never stopped to absorb the sights, sounds and smells of this place which I and many others like me have come to know and love.

Todd Kane

As an English major, the lobby serves me with many useful purposes over the course of a typical day. In the morning, the lobby greets me with bright sunshine cast down through its wall-size windows. I can grab a cup of coffee at the coffee stand and a snack out of the vending machine. I am able to purchase a breakfast which has little or no nutritional value with loose change that floats around in my overstuffed bookbag. For myself and many other English majors, getting a little something to eat from the vending machines in the morning and sitting on the heating ducts has become a ritual which, if broken, could prove to be devastating later in the day.

Every Tuesday and Thursday, I subject myself to four upper-level English classes in Bartlett. Over the course of the day, I become so enthralled with the discussion and analysis of literature that I can't leave the building. Nobody would want to talk to me. Certainly, I can't go to the Campus Pond to rest between classes. Who would I talk to? The ducks wouldn't listen to my rantings about Faulkner and Emerson. In fact, the only human beings fit to talk with after an English class are English majors who gather in, where else, Bartlett lobby.

After my 9:30 class, I quickly make a bee-line for the lobby to meet with friends. We talk at length about our classes, as well as the problems we are having therein. In addition, we talk about other fun topics such as music, movies and politics, which are listed here in order of importance. I get record and movie reviews from fellow classmates which are more reliable than Rolling Stone and Siskel and Ebert. The lobby serves not only as the intellectual epicenter of Bartlett, but also as the center for group conglomeration.

The size of the Bartlett lobby makes it perfect place for a diverse group of individuals to meet. Many people cross through the lobby so spotting friends is not a difficult task. The heater ducts run all around the walls of the lobby. These ducts can seat at least 100 people at a time. When there is a large group of people assembled in a closed-in area, heat has a tendency to generate. When you consider how hot Bartlett is anyway, body heat is irrelevant.

After my 11:15 class, I grab a Snickers and a soda from the vending machines and sit down. Usually, I meet a friend to chat with before my butt starts roasting on a heating duct. Ah, yes, that year-round Bartlett heat! The lobby seems warm when I enter in the morning, yet seems cool after a couple classes in the sauna-like Bartlett classrooms gracing our proud building. Bartlett is the only place on campus where one can learn about Shakespeare and lose 20 pounds in the process of one 75-minute class period. I could shoot an exercise video in any one of my classes and call it "Sit-n-sweat" or "Sweatin' to the Classics."

When my 1 p.m. class is over, I sit in my usual spot; that being the one littered with empty Dr. Pepper cans and countless cigarette butts. At this time of day, I remain seated on the heating ducts because I'm just too damn tired to stand up. You know you're tired when you can hear your butt sizzling and don't care. This is the time of day when I say to myself, "Just one more class." This never comforts me because by now, the mere thought of literature makes me want to pound a bottle of Maalox and burn all my books in rebellion. However, I trudge on. . .

At 3:45, my day is done. This is when I bid a fond farewell to the one thing which has gotten me through my day: the lobby. Without this refuge, every Tuesday and Thursday for me would be a traumatic literary nightmare.

The Bartlett lobby is not just a room to an English major, it is a friend whose quirks and glitches make it all the more endearing to its regular visitors. For those of you who have not witnessed the Bartlett lobby for an extended period of time, I highly recommend it as one of the hippest places to be on the UMass campus. The Bartlett lobby — it's not just for English majors anymore!

Todd Kane is a UMass student

Truth or consequences: the story behind a blind date

The blind date. The most frightening experience people go through in their lives. From the stories I had heard from friends, I swore I would never embark on one myself. Why would I chance subjecting myself to what could be an encounter with Jason or Freddy Krueger?

But as things happen, when I was home for the weekend just recently, I received this phone call. It went something like this:

"Hi Felice. I'm Alec. Your aunt gave me your number."

Before screaming into the phone "my aunt's on qualudes!" I took a deep breath and proceeded to count backwards from ten.

Felice Cohen

All summer my aunt had described this guy as "a real hunk who just graduated from Villanova Law school." He also happened to be my aunt's best friend's son.

So then I began wondering. If this guy was so great where had he been all summer when I was home? It turned out he was "touring in England. A gift from his grandmother." Well.

Every time my aunt mentioned his name, I would smile politely. I never gave him a second thought. That was until I answered the phone.

"Sure. Hi, my aunt mentioned your name." Oh great Felice, real smooth. Meanwhile I'm asking myself how I always wind up in these situations.

We ended up speaking on the phone for half an hour and decided to make a date for lunch the following day. Hanging up the receiver, I announced to my family, who were doing an awful job at looking uninterested in my phone conversation, "We're going out for lunch tomorrow."

Then it hit me. Home for the weekend, expecting only to see my family, I realized that I had left all my major necessities at school. More specifically, all I had brought with me were my sweats and homework. In other words, I had better act fast.

With that I was off to my mother's closet, determined to find something to wear.

As it turned out, the date went pretty well. He didn't drool, chew with his mouth open or spill anything on himself or me, so I guess as far as blind dates are concerned, he was a pretty decent guy.

I realized that the blind date scene wasn't as scary as I first anticipated, but in fact exciting. It then got me thinking.

Remembering back to my freshman year at UMass, reading the personals section in the Collegian was a must. It was the life line of this University. Everyone read them. If you are new to UMass you may have a hard time believing this, but back then they were a source of communication on campus. All the latest gossip was started or discovered in the personals.

Let me enlighten you with an example. One day we could read:

"To the woman in Soc 103 who loaned me a pen. I'd like to meet you. Respond here. —Penless"

Then a few days later we would read:

"Penless. The ink stops there."

But on many occasions, people developed these ink correspondences into real "personal" relationships. After responding back and forth a few times, they would eventually set up "blind dates" on their own.

For instance: "Brown eyes. It's time, let's meet. Bluewall at 7:30. I'll be wearing a red hat."

Okay, I admit they sound corny, but they were great. People forgot about their soaps and concentrated on who was stalking who in the Collegian.

Though lately, all the personals ever contain are "Happy 21st Birthday Hope" or "Congrats to the new pledges of Phi Phi Phi." These are all nice and sweet, but let's be honest. We want the juicy stuff.

It's up to us to spice up the page. So take a chance and put in a personal. Next week we're going to make it easier for you by selling them on the Concourse. The time to act is now, so don't be shy.

I mean the worst thing that could happen when you open the door is that your date would be wearing a hockey mask.

Felice Cohen is a Collegian columnist

Bush isn't creating peace for Israel

One of the most impressive and difficult foreign policy achievements of the Bush Administration was the Persian Gulf War. It was no easy task rounding up so many different countries and diverse peoples, for a common purpose, and keeping them in line until the final objective was met. It is not a common occurrence when countries such as America, Israel, Syria and the Soviet Union line up on the same side of the ball.

Bob Freeman

What has to be the most remarkable non-military accomplishment of that whole ordeal was Israel and how they restrained themselves in the face of Scud missile attacks on their citizens and naked threats by Saddam Hussein. To really appreciate this fact, one has to realize that Israel herself was being violated, her citizens were in danger and she had every right to defend herself. Israel has always been self-reliant when it comes to defense. She was not even involved in the Gulf War nor did anything to provoke such inhumane actions. But to appease the United States, to keep the coalition together and achieve the common goal, Israel did President Bush an immeasurable favor by restraining herself.

A little while ago, George Bush returned that improbable and enormous favor Israel did for us by suspending her loans. It naturally shocked Israel and left them in utter disbelief. Many Americans believe that the United States did the right thing. Of course, $10 billion is a lot of money that can be much better spent here at home. Also, Israel is going too far in her quest to settle in the "disputed" territories, disregarding Arabs, and spending America's money to boot. There have even been claims of human rights violations by Israel, and we should cease looking the other way.

The Bush Administration claims it pulled this fast one to give peace a chance, to assure the Arabs will be at the peace conference. He has effectively painted the Israelis as the bad guys and cast the Arabs as the subjected ones who have been wronged. Well, we must look at and understand the bare facts. Israel "acquired" the Golan Heights, Gaza Strip and the West Bank through war. These wars were waged against Israel, and her right to exist, by her Arab neighbors. If given the opportunity, they would have driven off or killed all the Israelis. That is how deep the hatred goes. But, Israel repelled them, defended herself, and, for future defensive and retribution purposes, took these territories fair and square. So, for better or for worse, those are her territories now. Second, the only Arab country that recognizes Israel's right to exist is Egypt. All others do not. As far as countries such as Syria, Iraq and the PLO are concerned, there is no Israel.

The Middle East is one of the most complicated and unstable regions of the world. It has been like this since the beginning of recorded history. For George Bush to think that he will finally bring stability to this region is ridiculous. He is touting this peace conference more to make America look good than as a serious attempt at beginning to settle age-old disputes. In order to appease the Arabs, he put on hold the loan to Israel. To appease the Arabs he wants Israel to stop settling in those territories. To appease the Arabs, he wants Israel to give those disputed territories back. If George Bush feels that there will finally be some sort of semblance of peace in the Middle East once this is accomplished, then he is far removed from reality.

The first step to achieving that longed-for peace can and should only be for the PLO and the Arab countries to recognize Israel's right to exist — nothing more and nothing less. If they do not, then what is the point of discussing things of vital importance with — a ghost? Maybe Israel is toying around with America, maybe Shamir has lied to our President, and maybe any money is not worth being spent there, but that is a discussion for another day. At this juncture, though, the delay in the loan guarantees is not a "pause for peace," but a backstabbing ploy at making America look good at the expense and chagrin of one of her closest friends.

Bob Freeman is a UMass student

Real issues of multiculturalism

On Wednesday, September 25, UMass hosted a debate on multiculturalism in the Cape Cod Lounge. The defendants of multiculturalism as an ally of free inquiry were Professor William Strickland of the UMass Afro-American Studies Department and Margaret Cerullo, Professor of Social Sciences at Hampshire College. The opponents were UMass Sociology professor Paul Hollander and English professor Arnold Silver, also from UMass.

Both sides presented strong arguments for their point of view, but there were two major flaws in both presentations. Strickland, who spoke first, made a wide shift in the case when he focused his presentation upon the issues concerning corruption in the foreign and domestic policies. He appeared to be using the debate as a platform to express views not directly related to the topic. He described the debate topic as a "dubious" issue compared to the issues he raised on American politics. Hollander used the influence of Western culture on Third World countries to defend the integrity of Western thought against the "threat to free inquiry" posed by multiculturalism.

In reality, multiculturalism was created as a response to the "invasion" of Western thought into the cultures of the Third World people of color during the colonial expansion of Europe. Those who claim Western culture is a champion of free inquiry must be reminded that Western culture was instilled into these people of color by force. Those who resisted were dealt with by socially destructive means. Many peoples had their indigenous culture forcibly replaced by the "free inquiry" of Western thought. The West has demonstrated its refusal to fully accept the ideals of others. That's why many Third World nations have "copied" Western culture. The West forcibly transformed them in its own image.

This acculturation left behind another major legacy: racism. Racism is definitely a major issue that was touched upon during Mr. Strickland's presentation. When he called the issue of multiculturalism a "dubious" one, he didn't make the link between that issue and racism. Racism is fueled by the ignorance of people to different cultures. Multiculturalism aims to combat this by educating people on the various contributions people of color have made toward human civilization. Multiculturalism also represents the struggle of people of color to reclaim the culture was stolen from them. These are the real issues of multiculturalism.

Martin Jones
Central

Organization serving non-traditional students

We at Counseling and Advising for Older Students appreciated your article on older students who are returning to college. In fact, we wish that we had been included!

The CAOS office is located at E-23 Machmer Hall. All our counselors are older students themselves and we've tailored our services to meet the needs of the older, non-traditional student. We can answer those perplexing questions about Gen Ed requiremenia or tell you where the Child Care Office is. And if we can't answer your question ourselves, we know where to go to find the answer.

We invite all older undergraduates to stop in, say "hi" and check us out. Because we're a two-way communication center, you're welcome to stop in when you have some answers, too. We'll pass the information along to others who need it.

Let us help you negotiate your way through the University of Maze-achusetts.

Dusty Houser
CAOS

SUPPOSE THERE'S ANY WAY TO CONVINCE GEORGE BUSH THAT SADDAM HUSSEIN IS SERBIAN?
Republic of Croatia
AN EMIR. MAYBE WE NEED TO GET OURSELVES AN EMIR

Loans aren't "humanitarian"

Guaranteeing Israel $10 billion worth of loans for Russian and Ethiopian Jewish immigrants sounds, at first, like a true humanitarian act. Here we are, helping Israel fulfill its original purpose as a haven for oppressed Jews. Here we are, the most powerful nation in the world, helping those less fortunate than we.

The $10 billion for Israel may sound humanitarian. In real life, however, it is anything but.

The ironic part of the whole issue is that most Soviet and Ethiopian Jews do not even want to be in Israel. Most of them would be here in the United States, perhaps studying at the University of Massachusetts, had Israel not pushed for U.S. legislation cutting immigration quotas. $10 billion can never compensate for the fact that Soviet and Ethiopian Jews only need help from the United States because they turned first to the United States and then were forced to go away to Israel.

And, it is no wonder why the immigrants originally chose the United States over Israel. $10 billion may find Jewish immigrants homes, but it cannot take away from the fact that many of those homes are going to be in war-torn occupied territory or, that those homes are at the expense of Palestinians. Already, Israel is settling 4 percent of all new immigrants in the occupied territories and it is obvious that the Israeli government is anxious to settle more.

Why else is West Bank land given free to incoming settlers? Why else has Israel confiscated 70 percent of the territories? Why did Israel vie for the immigrants when it was not able to offer them homes? Why is it that a European Jew who knows nothing of this desert has priority to it over two million native Palestinians who know of nothing else? Precisely because the government has been waiting for this $10 billion opportunity to replace the embarrassing Palestinian population with the more amenable Russian and Ethiopian one.

The United States is aware of the Israeli government's design. On May 22, 1991, Secretary of State Baker admitted that settlement activity "continues not only unabated but at an enhanced pace." In the same breath he added, "I don't think there is any bigger obstacle to peace."

Meanwhile, the U.S. government is pushing to guarantee $10 billion that will lead to this exact "obstacle to peace." Because loans lead to settlements, they are an obstacle to the peace process and thus to U.S. interests. We are not being humanitarian here. We are defeating our own peace policy.

The truth is that $10 billion for Israel is not humanitarian aid but political aid which can be better spent. Israel already receives close to $4 billion a year from the United States, over $700 for every Israeli man, woman and child. One might well ask why Israel gets priority over other, less political areas of the world that desperately need the money much more than Israel. Although Eastern European countries are struggling out of communism as African nations wrestle with drought and famine, and although our own citizens roam homeless, only Israel qualifies for unlimited and unconditional "humanitarian" aid.

The truth is that there can never be anything humanitarian about brutally uprooting one people to make room for another, forcing two million people to live under military occupation, and using vulnerable immigrants to act as a buffer against their neighbors.

Nadia Abushanab is a UMass student

Faith and scare tactics don't mix

As a Christian (and part-time human being) at UMass, I and many of my Christian friends have been asking ourselves the same question that Gayle Long asked in Monday's editorial: Just who is this man pacing around the Student Union with a wooden cross, announcing the impending destruction of all college students? Does he go to a Christian group on campus? No. Does he go to any church at all? No. It appears that he has no association with UMass, and he has done similar things at other state universities as well.

Yes, he has the First Amendment right to free speech and only God can judge whether he is in fact a Christian, but neither I nor any other Christian I know at UMass agrees with his opinions, or the way he conveys them. He says you cannot go to college and be a Christian. That is a lie. God has no bias against education and loves no single human being more than another. This man says people should not go to church to be true Christians. That is a lie; both Jesus and the Apostle Paul teach the need to meet regularly and worship with one another. This man also says that we should write to him if we want to know the truth. Christianity holds that no man has a monopoly on the truth but that God is truth; Jesus said, "I am the way, THE TRUTH, and the life [emphasis added]." We believe that the Bible is God's word to man and therefore THAT is the place to find the answers.

Maybe this sounds like "Christian infighting," but it is important to understand that this man's view is very far removed from the unified beliefs of Christian groups at UMass and of Christians in general. The true Christian belief is one of love, not condemnation. We believe in hell, but God takes no pleasure in seeing people go there. It breaks his heart, so much so that he let his perfect son Jesus die in our place to give us a way back to him — if we choose. It is a message of love, hope and reconciliation that I would rather die for than renounce. It is natural that something so important and amazing to us makes us want to tell others about it — if it is the truth, wouldn't it be selfish to keep it to ourselves? Our aim is not to force others to accept our faith, but to tell people about Jesus so they can make their own informed choice. God is love. Scare tactics are not.

Christians are not perfect people. But we've tasted the honey-sweet truth, to use Ms. Long's analogy, that draws us away from the vinegar we see — or hear — every day.

Stuart Hazeldine
Northeast

■ D'Souza

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

about transcending these barriers," he said. "Why should race, gender, or sexual orientation even be an issue when selecting which authors should be studied? The fact that Shakespeare was a white male does not affect the quality of his writings."

He said the pressures of ethnic representation in the current university atmosphere betray liberal principles, as the title of his book emphasizes.

D'Souza said he is indeed against affirmative action with minorities and racial issues as the main consideration, but he believes in affirmative action for the socio-economically disadvantaged.

"The son of Bill Cosby has an advantage over the son of some poor white coal miner simply because of his ethnic background," he said. "Also, the SATs are not racially biased, but class biased. Students in the suburbs might relate better to the types of questions than those in the inner city but there are whites in the inner city schools as well.

"The real problem, which is economic disadvantage, is not being properly addressed," he said.

He also argued that the forcible promotion of "preferred ideals" is in itself a kind of censorship.

"There is a taboo feeling about any discussion of affirmative action not being a good thing. If someone is for affirmative action, then they are for diversity, and if they're against it, then they are supposedly against diversity, and thus open to attack. There is a feeling of coercion."

D'Souza concluded his lecture by stating that although history displays negative results of societies centered around multiculturalism, the United States may succeed.

"There is no example in human history of a successful multicultural society, but America is a revolutionary type of society. It is based on neutral ideals, and allegiance is dedicated to ideas instead of tribes and ancestry," he said.

When asked if he thought he had been given some of his opportunity because of affirmative action, D'Souza replied that he did not know.

"I honestly hope not and would be ashamed to think so," said the author. "I can think of no greater stigma you could attach to a minority than to make him feel as though his accomplishments were only made possible because of racial preference."

■ Japanese garden

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

Richardson had two objects in mind when he designed the memorial; the garden would have no language barriers to hinder people's understanding of the symbols and that people would be able to simply enjoy the memorial.

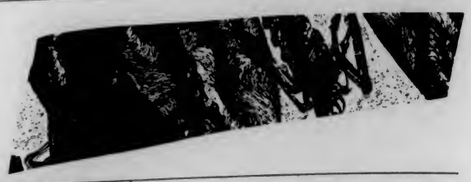
Even if there is no interest in the symbolism, onlookers can still appreciate the site by walking around or just sitting, said Richardson. The plaques, located on the site explaining the memorial, serve those who are interested.

The skylines on the walls of the memorial represent the past and the present. The silhouette of the Clark residence overlooking Orchard Hill represents the past and the skyline of Hokkaido University overlooking its sister campus represents the present.

The leaning stone in the center of the memorial, symbolizes the spirit of Clark in motion, explained Richardson.

"If someone can be moved or can make a connection with Clark, my goal is met," said Richardson.

The memorial was sponsored by many departments and alumni of the University and Hokkaido University.



Clothes That Fit Your Life!

25 CENTRAL

Downstairs at Thornes

150 Main Street, Northampton, MA 413-586-8017

Main St RECORDS

SON OF Main St RECORDS

RECORDS • CASSETTES • COMPACT DISCS

IMPORTED, INDEPENDENT & DOMESTIC
MON - WED 9:30 - 6 SUN 12 - 5
THURS - SAT 9:30 - 9
213 MAIN ST. NORTHAMPTON
586-5726

COLLECTABLES • USED MANUFACTURER'S OVER-STOCKS
MONDAY - SATURDAY 10 - 5:30
THURSDAYS 10 - 9 SUNDAY 12 - 5
21 STATE ST. NORTHAMPTON
586-1707

GREG'S AUTO BODY

Continental Collision Repair Systems Authorized REPAIR CENTER

- MASS. STATE APPROVED SHOP
- FRAME & UNIBODY REPAIRS
- INSURANCE WORK
- RENTAL CARS AVAILABLE
- LOCATED ON THE BUS ROUTE

"WE DO THE INSURANCE PAPERWORK FOR YOU...WITH A SMILE"
"Where Quality Always Comes First"
665-3989 Old Amherst Rd. Sunderland
35 years of experienced staff waiting to serve you MASS LIC. RS1560

Spirit Haus
Liquor Store

BUD LIGHT/ BUD DRY $6.99 12pk bots.

BICENTENNIAL ALE $4.69 6pk
from VERMONT MOUNTAIN BREWERS - $17.99 cs.

OLYMPIA $8.99 suitcase cans

JOSE CUERVO GOLD TEQUILA $9.99 750ml

PEACHTREE SCHNAPPS $5.99 750ml
Juice Bowl 31oz ORANGE JUICE - FREE! w/PEACHTREE

FLEISCHMANN'S VODKA $4.99 750ml

KEGS STARTING AT $33.00 - CHECKS/MASTERCARD/VISA ACCEPTED FOR KEG DEPOSITS. Gourmet Beers for special occassions - Plus over 35 Five Malt Scotches & Cognacs, Brandies & Champagnes.

MEGABUCKS, WE HAVE

338 College St. • one mile east of Amherst center on Route 9
Open 9 am - 11 pm Rain or Shine - Always Open
VISA & MASTERCARD ACCEPTED

BUTTERFLY CHAIR

Chair & Cover $44.90

Faces northampton main st. • 7 days

this weekend

A night of carnivorous sonics to sear your soul

By SAAD HOPKINS
Collegian Staff

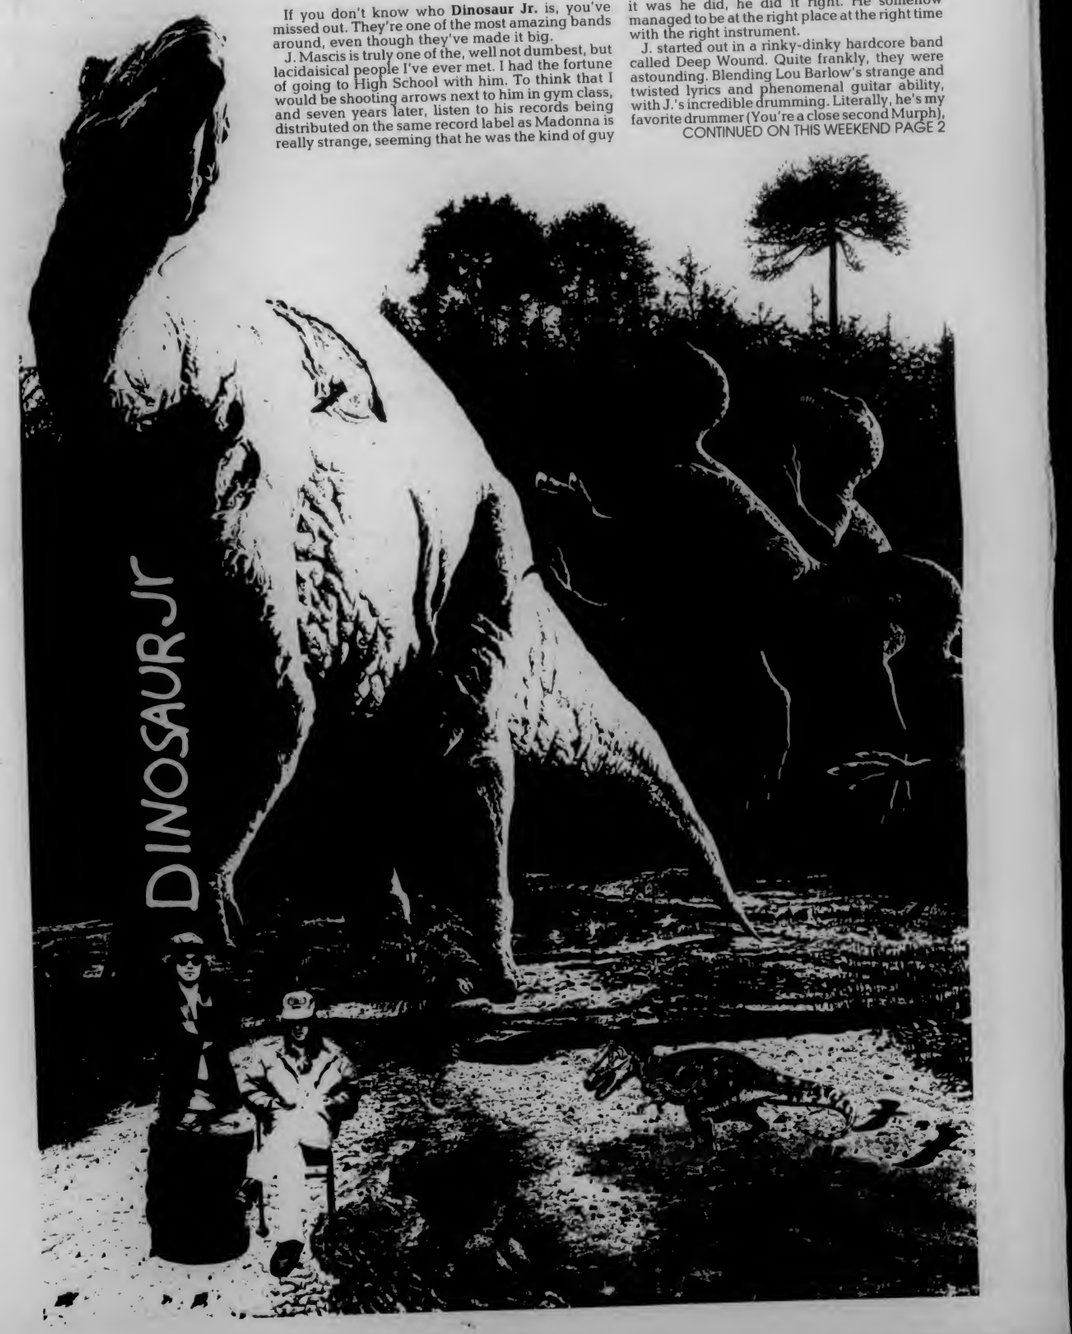
If you don't know who Dinosaur Jr. is, you've missed out. They're one of the most amazing bands around, even though they've made it big.

J. Mascis is truly one of the, well not dumbest, but lacidaisical people I've ever met. I had the fortune of going to High School with him. To think that I would be shooting arrows next to him in gym class, and seven years later, listen to his records being distributed on the same record label as Madonna is really strange, seeming that he was the kind of guy who gave the impression of not having any ambition whatsoever.

But he made it. I don't know how, but whatever it was he did, he did it right. He somehow managed to be at the right place at the right time with the right instrument.

J. started out in a rinky-dinky hardcore band called Deep Wound. Quite frankly, they were astounding. Blending Lou Barlow's strange and twisted lyrics and phenomenal guitar ability, with J.'s incredible drumming. Literally, he's my favorite drummer (You're a close second Murph), and anyone who can get their hands on their Deep Wound single should consider themselves blessed. But it wasn't until late 1984 when J. Mascus, Lou Barlow, and Pat Murphy, otherwise known as Dinosaur, released their single "Repulsion" for Homestead Records, when they started to hit ground, and gained a rather marvelous following.

CONTINUED ON THIS WEEKEND PAGE 2



Dino Jr.

CONTINUED FROM THIS WEEKEND PAGE 1

One cold night in October of that year, Pat Murphy (a.k.a "Murph") found me in front of Thornes Market in Northapmton, pulled me aside and asked me to listen to this "brand new recording that [he] and a friend had made." My 'synth-pop' ears were not used to this 'guitar thing', yet Dinosuar (before they added the 'jr') somehow clicked. They had a remarkable sound that combined simply rocked. The lyrics were funny and J. has a whiney, but attractive voice (come to think of it, J. is attractive himself, in a sort of bizarre way. You decide).

If you've never bought a Dinosaur jr. album, start off with You're Living All Over Me, which is undoubtedly their masterpiece. It features "The Lung", in my opinion, the greatest song they've written, and their critically acclaimed single 'Furry Little Things'. After that, you'll want to check out their third album Bug (when asked why J. called this album Bug, he answered, "Well, because there's a bug on the cover of the album"), that's got great songs such as "The Post", and "Freak Scene".

After that, their original bassist, Lou Barlow, was ousted from the band, due to reasons of incompatibility, and mysteriously enough, J. has had the hardest time consolidating a "group". Thus he has simply kept it to himself and Murph, occasionally recruiting a replacement here and there. On the new, major label debut "Green Mind", he virtually plays all of the instruments. It's a J. Mascus solo album. And, despite my original criticism earlier this year, it's pretty slammin' (apart from two really awful songs!).

To see these guys live is a thrill. J. usually plays his guitar whilst hiding behind his hair. Murph plays his drums, and their new bassist just plays. It sounds simple, but it works well. You don't leave dissappointed, although you might leave with your ears ringing, and feeling a bit lethargic. But on the whole, it's well worth your Eight bucks. Check 'em out.

Dinosaur Jr. and opening act Gobblehoof will live all over you this Saturday night in the Student Union Ballroom starting at 8 pm. Doors open at 7:30.

GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY BEER.....$7.99*CS.
BUD LIGHT.....$6.49*12PK.
COORS GOLD.....$6.49*12PK.
NATURAL LIGHT.....$4.69*12PK.
MOOSEHEAD.....$4.29*6PK.
BARCARDI RUM.....$7.49 .750ML.
FOUR SEASONS VODKA & GIN.....$8.99 1.75L

BUSCH 1/2 BARREL $39.90 & FREE ICE!!!

Deposits Accepted On Visa & Mastercard
*plus deposit
*excluding kegs & sale items

Four Seasons WINES & LIQUORS
ROUTE 9, HADLEY, Between Burger King and Dunkin Donuts • 584-8174

COLLEGE SPECIAL
3 Games of Bowling and Shoe Rental
$5.00
with College I.D.

TUESDAY NIGHT SPECIAL
DOMINO PIZZA AND BOWL
Three Games Plus Slice of Pizza and Coke
$5.00 Plus Shoes
8:30 pm to Close
Every Thurs. Night 9:00pm-12:00am
Northampton Bowl
Live D.J. in the Ally Oops Lounge
Cover $2.00
Call 584-4830 for reservations

WHO'S OPEN LATE?
Sun.- Thurs. 'till 3 a.m.
Fri. & Sat. Open 24 hours
James H. McManus eating place
Route 9, Hadley
256-6889
next to Stop & Shop

AMHERST CINEMA
Now Playing
FREDDY'S DEAD
THE FINAL NIGHTMARE
Showtimes:
Fri. - Sun.
Two shows at 7pm & 9pm
Mon-Thurs.
One show at 7:30pm
Adults $4.00
Student w/valid I.D. $3.00

ALL YOU CAN EAT!
$2.99
Time Out
Homemade Spaghetti
w/ salad&bread
the BEST you'll have!
thurs.night 6-9

HUNAN GOURMET
京 CHINESE RESTAURANT 湘
ADVOCATE ★BEST★ THE VALLEY READER'S POLL 1991 1st Place
The aroma, sound & taste of authentic Chinese cuisine prepared Hunan, Szechuan, Mandarin or Cantonese style — especially for you!
FULL LIQUOR LICENSE
261 King St., Northampton • 585-0202 • Ample Parking
Open 7 Days a Week • NO MSG
TAKE OUT SERVICE AVAILABLE

TACO VILLA
Offering Quality Mexican Food
Great Mexican Food, and some American Favorites, served quickly and inexpensively in a casual atmosphere.
TACOS, CHIMICHANGAS, ENCHILADAS, NACHOS, BURRITOS, BURRITO SUPREMO
TOSTADAS, CHILI RELLENO, QUESADILLAS, MEXICAN PIZZA, TAQUITOS
Buy One, Get the 2nd One at 1/2 Price
Bring in this coupon by Oct. 31, 1991. Not good with any other offers. Limit one per customer.
Corner of Bowker & White Streets, Springfield 788-0919
Downtown Northampton 21 Center St., 584-0672
Downtown Amherst Boltwood Walk 256-8217
TACO VILLA

WEEKEND HAPPENINGS

THURSDAY

Chucklehead is "nasty hip-hop funk with horns." This band will be performing at Pearl Street Night Club in Northampton beginning at 7 p.m. This is an 18+ show which costs $6 in advance.

Grace Paley, activist and author of three highly acclaimed short story collections: The Little Disturbances of Man, Enormous Changes at the Last Minute, and Later the Same_Day will be speaking at the UMass Student Union Ballroom at 7:30 p.m. Admission is free for students and $3 for the general public.

The Messianic Era will be the subject of the "Lunch and Learn" lecture series at the Chabad House at Amherst, 30 N. Hadley Road at 12 p.m. Admission is $3. For information: 549-4094.

Ray Charles, heralded internationally as the master of the blues/gospel/jazz tradition, will be performing live, backed by the seventeen-piece Ray Charles Orchestra and the Raelettes at the UMass Fine Arts Center Concert Hall at 8 p.m. Tickets are $25, $23, and $21; five college students pay half price; children 16 and under pay $10. For more information, call the FAC Box Office, 545-2511.

Preserving and Transmitting Native American Cultures is the topic of lecturer Doris Leader Charge of the Lakota Language and Culture Department at the Sinte Gleska Tribal College in South Dakota. This will be presented at Smith College John M. Greene Hall at 1 p.m. free of charge.

Woman Improvisor, Jin Hi Kim, is a Komungo soloist composer and virtuoso of Korean traditional music who has been able to integrate her Asian skill and sensibilities with the demands of the Western avant garde. This will be presented at the UMass Hampden Theatre (Southwest) at 8 p.m. For information call 545-2416.

Dancing Moons: No-Self Self in the Autobiography of a Tibetan Visionary is a "Colloquium Orientologicum" presented by lecturer Janet Gyatso. The lecture focuses on the superbly literary account of the "secret experiences" and personal identity of the eighteenth century visionary and Rdzogs-chen virtuoso 'Jigs-med Gling-pa. Coffee, tea, and sherry is to be served with contributions of snacks welcome. The lecture will be presented at the UMass Thompson Hall room 100 at 7:30 p.m.

FRIDAY

Authors Paul D. Dickinson and Harrison Nutkins will present live readings at Wootton's Books on 19 North Pleasant Street in Amherst at 7:30.

Society of Professional Hispanic Engineers will be presenting a dance with club music, salsa, and merengue mixed by DJ Chico Jimenez. The dance will be at the UMass Bluewall cafe from 9p.m. until 1 a.m. There will be a cash bar and admission is $3.

"High" and "Low" as One: The Art of the Vernacular, 1922-1940 is a lecture given by Alfred Appel, Jr. of the Northwestern University's English department which will be held at the Amherst College Mead, Stirn Auditorium at 4

Shabbat Service, of which all faculty, staff, and students are welcome, will be at the Mount Holyoke College Abbey Small Chapel at 5 p.m. Dinner follows at 6:15 in the Eliot House. Dinner is $6.50 for non-Mount Holyoke guests. For dinner reservations, call 538-2054 by Thursday.

Distant Voices, Still Lives, a British film directed by Terence Davies, is an autobiographical masterpiece that explores the history and memory through the lives of a Liverpool family during World War II and the 1950's. This will be shown at the Smith College Wright Hall Auditorium at 7 and 9 p.m. free of charge.

Special Shabbat Service, led by Julius Lester and Carolyn Lester will be held at Hillel House, 388 N. Pleasant St., Amherst at 7 p.m. For information, call 549-1710.

Looking Out for Number One gives Torah perspectives on living and giving, yet maintaining a healthy ego. Services and a Shabbat Dinner will be presented in the Chabad House at Amherst, 30 N. Hadley Road at 7 p.m. For information, call 549-4094.

Some Like it Hot is a 1959 comedy film directed by Billy Wilder with Marylin Monroe. Tony Curtis and Jack Lemmon, hiding from mobsters, don drag to join Monroe in an "all-girl" band. This will be shown at the Amherst College Campus Center Theater at 7:30 and 10 p.m. Tickets are $1.50.

Theresa's Day is an anti-Columbus Day celebration of the Native American spirit, performed by by students and community members to be shown at the Northampton Center for the Arts at 8 p.m. Tickets are $6. Other performance dates are 10/5, 10/11, and 10/12.

Russian Graphic Design Before the Revolution, 1880-1917 and Graphic Design from the Thomas P. Whitney Collection of Modernist Russian Art will be the subject of a reception at the Mead Art Museum in Amherst which happens from 4:30 until 5:30 p.m.

Russian Graphics and Russian Culture: Historical Contexts for a Revolution in Visual Representation will be given by Jeffery Brooks of the history department at The John Hopkins University. The lecture will be presented at the Amherst College Mead, Stirn Auditorium at 8 p.m. Admission is free.

Human Arts, Inc. is a rock/rhythm & blues band that will be performing at the UMass cafeteria, The Hatch, located on the ground floor of the Student Union. The set will begin at 9 p.m. Admission is free.

David Wilcox, gifted songwriter signed to A&M records plus Greg Greenway will be performing at the Iron Horse Music Hall in Northampton beginning at 7 p.m. Tickets are $9.50 in Advance. For more information, call 584-0610.

The Fools, a comedy-rock act from Boston will perform at Katina's in Hadley. The show starts at 9 p.m. (Doors open at 8 p.m.) For information, call 586-4463.

SATURDAY

Service and Shabbat Meal will be held at Chabad House at Amherst, 30 N. Hadley Road at 10 a.m. For information, call 549-4094.

Elena Poniatowska, Five College Writer-in-Residence will present her lecture, "Aftershocks: The Mexican Earthquake of 1985 and its Consequences." This is the Plenary session of the Annual Meeting of the New England Council of Latin American Studies and will be held at the Smith College Neilson Library Browsing Room at 3:45 p.m.

Camp Logan, by Celeste Bedford Walker, is a play that tells the story of the members of the 24th U.S. Infantry (an all-balck regiment) who mutinied in Houston, Texas in August, 1917. This New World Theater production will be presented at the UMass Bowker Auditorium at 8 p.m. Tickets are $5 for students and $3 for elders. For information, call the Fine Arts Center Box Office, 545-2511.

Gay, Lesbian, and Bisexual Cafe will present a wonderful mix of singers, poets, performance artists, and comics from the Valley, and from the Boston area at the UMass Hampden Theater at 8 p.m.
Donations are requested. For information, call 545-4824.

Dinosaur Jr. with Gobblehoof will be performing in the UMass Student Union Ballroom at 8 p.m. (Doors open at 7:30 p.m.) Tickets are $8 for UMass students and $10 for all others.

Ranch Romance, the all-western swing band, will perform tight harmonies, good humor, Patsy Cline, and an occasional rope trick at 7 p.m. For information, call 584-0610.

SUNDAY

Rock-A-Mania, a night of five local acts including Live Wire and Brightside will be performing at Katina's in Hadley at 9 p.m. (Doors open at 8 p.m.) For information, call 586-4463.

Afro-Brazilian Folkloric Dance and Drumming workshops will be led by Rosangela Silvestre and Marivaldo Santos at the East Street Studios on 47 East Street in Hadley (off route 9). The drum workshop begins at 12 noon and lasts until 1:30 p.m. Workshop cost is $10. The dance workshop in Orisha and Samba are from 1:45 until 2:30 p.m. The second workshop in Afro-Brazilian contemporary technique is from 2:45 until 3:30 p.m. The workshop costs is $10 each or $15 for both sessions. Student cost is $10 for both sessions.

Leslea Newman will be conducting a reading, "Sweet Dark Places" and signing books in celebration of her newest poetry collection. The reading will be at the Smith College Neilson Library Browsing Room at 2 p.m. free of charge.

Informal Studio Events will include workshops and informal performances by guest artists, faculty, and students at the Amherst College Dance Studio. For information of various times and events, call 542-2411.

Frank Morgan Duo is a saxophonist who has made a successful comeback from the hard life. This bespeaker of grace and sensuality will perform at the Iron Horse Music Hall at 7 p.m. For information, call 584-0610.

Peace for Life exhibit displays diversity

By NICOLE GONZALES
Collegian Staff

Paz Para La Vida
Wheeler Gallery
Thurs., Sept. 19

"What do you think of when you think of peace?" was the question asked of ten-year-old artist, Melody Rubero. Her answer was, "When a soldier puts down his guns and a dove flies down to his finger, and he cries because he is thinking of wanting to go home to his wife and daughter."

Melody's thoughts were later portrayed in a painting called "Soldier wanting to Go Home" which is one of the various personalized artworks in Concepto Latino's latest exhibit, Paz Para La Vida, which means Peace for Life which is being shown at the Whler Gallery.

"We wanted to show diversity in the Latin community, not just Latino professionals," said Norma I. Rivera, artist and member of Concepto Latino, the UMass organization that created the exhibit.

Each piece of artwork, from conceptual sculpture to landscape paintings explores the concept of peace and living through a Latin American perspective. In order to more fully understand the artists' concepts, special lighting and narration will accompany the visual art at a later time to be announced.

Nearby loomed a portrait which used the

CONTINUED ON THIS WEEKEND PAGE 8

AMHERST Boston

Get out of Town on U.S.EXPRESS

for only $12 each way!

U.S.EXPRESS

Get Your Ticket Here

Don't forget to ask for U.S.EXPRESS at the UMASS Hotel ticket window!

For info call 582-1313

Dinosaur jr.
with
GOBBLEHOOF
Sat., Oct. 5th, 1991
8pm (doors open at 7:30)

TIX ON SALE NOW
at TIX (UMass), For the Record (Amherst) & Main St. Records (Noho)
$8 UMass $10 All Others

DINOSAUR jr.

Undergraduate Rights & Responsibilities

ATTENTION
OFF CAMPUS STUDENTS

The 1991-92 Rights and Responsibilities booklet is now available upon request at the:
Campus Center Information Desk
Dean of Students Office (227 Whitmore)
Information Data Bank (2nd floor lobby Whitmore)

THE BOOKLET INCLUDES INFORMATION ON:
Academic Regulations
Code of Student Conduct
Mediation Program
Sexual Harassment Policy
Grading System
Picketing Code
And much more...

ALL STUDENTS ARE RESPONSIBLE FOR KNOWING THE REGULATIONS AND POLICIES IN THIS BOOKLET

University of Massachusetts at Amherst

High-heels, glamour and men in drag: Paris Is Burning

BY TRYSTAN SKEIGH
Collegian Staff

Paris is Burning* offers an unprecedented inside look at Black/Latino gay culture in New York City's Harlem.

Jennie Livingston's documentary explores the inner workings of this unique gay subculture's obsessive focus on "Balls," gala events set up like fashion revues for Black and Latino gay men. These young men in drag mostly define themselves in ultra- modern language as transgenderists and/or transsexuals. Only one of the older interviewees referred to the old-fashioned motif drag queen.

The film's opening frames include an off-screen commentary that sets the tone for the documentary: a male voice notes if a man is black, he has two strikes, but if he is male, black, and gay, then he's out.

Although many "Ball" participants are interviewed, the film focuses in on the life of lovely, blonde, and "petite" Venus, an aspiring transsexual from the House of Xtravaganza.

Houses* are described by different interviewees as close-knit families of children, or young gay "Ball" aspirants, led and cared for by a House mother, usually an older highly successful "Ball" veteran. Houses fiercely compete against one another at the "Balls."

Livingston's work never abandons the voices and perspectives of her subjects to offer a critical outside voice. Rather, the individual viewer is forced to read between the lines and try to sift reality from fantasy, a task made difficult because "Ball" culture is about the concretization of the unreal.

Transsexuals* are men in the process of surgically changing their gender, while transgenderists are men who assume the persona of a woman without the help of surgery. Paris leaves one's head spinning — sexual definitions are deliberately blurred by Livingstone's juxtaposition of vivid scenes of men in drag at the "Balls," and interviews with participants in everyday surroundings, sometimes without their feminine "Ball" identities and costumes. Livingstone's work presents a powerful suggestion that gender is an amorphous accoutrement, and femininity an art form.

However, beneath the glamorous realm of glitter and fantasy, viewers discover a harsh reality: gay Blacks and Latinos have three strikes against them — ostracized by the White supremacist mainstream and their own Black and Latino cultures, they live on the edge — teetering on a perilously narrow tightrope of sexualized glamor suspended above a seething cauldron of widespread social hatred.

One interviewee said successful "Ball" contestants were those who could make it home alive afterwards in costume, wearing their feminine identities so well that they could not be detected on the subway or in the streets.

Livingston delivers the final punch toward the end of the film when she discloses that romantic, hopeful, vulnerable Venus has been killed while doing a "trick."

The viewer is jerked back to the bleak theme pronounced at the documentary's beginning: Black and Latino gay men are living outside the sanctions of society, and the fiercely glamourous, glitter-edged competition of the "Balls" is part of their desperate struggle to affirm themselves and survive in a straight white world that would just as soon see them dead.

Paris Is Burning is a must see for everyone. Viewers will come away with many provocative questions about gender identities and social norms. This film dramatically transmits a powerful argument made by Harlem gay Black/Latino culture that perhaps femininity, masculinity, and even sexuality itself is a human creation, subject to diverse interpretations, unfixed and continually evolving.

UPC kicks off with 3rd Bass

By SAAD HOPKINS
Collegian staff

3rd Bass
Student Union Ballroom
Tuesday, October 1

3rd Bass walk on stage with the most arrogant expressions on their faces. MC Search is more pleasant than their cold-ridden and horribly unpleasant Prime Minister Pete Nice. But Pete can rap, rather well in fact. He almost sounds like Chuck D. (don't throw anything at me, I said that's what he sounds like!): an effective and loud-ass voice.

Half of the songs I don't even know. I hadn't yet heard Derelicts of Dialect, because I hate their single "Pop Goes The Weasel." That song is one of the stupidest things in the universe. But for some reason they blossomed on stage. They were totally awesome live! Still, they kept grabbing their crotches, and acted like total macho studs from hell, but who cares? And plus their D.J. stole the show. You didn't even need to look at those two morons, you just focused on him.

So what did I do today? I went and shelled out the thirteen bucks (that I don't have) and bought the disc. It's flat out horrible, but the fact that those three guys stumbled on the stage and really got busy made me abandon that, and the result was really heavy.

3rd Bass Photo by Michael Lavine

R & P Liquors
Convenient to Brittany & Riverglade
253-9742
505 West St. So. Amherst

AMAAZZING!
Lose weight fast and keep it off.
The Amazing Micro Diet gives you a nutritionally complete program that makes the pounds vanish...
The Amazing MICRO DIET
As seen on The Amazing Micro Diet Show starring Cathy Lee Crosby
The Amazing Micro Diet Weight Loss Center
Dr. Virginia Harper
(413) 549-0335

Some of the biggest, some of the best presents come in the smallest boxes!

STAIRMASTER
AEROBICS
Low Impact
Step
Hi/Low
Nautilus
Free Weights
Cybex
Lifecycle
Biocycles
Treadmill
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
256-0080

安城中國飯店
AMHERST
CHINESE FOOD
WE DO NOT USE "MSG"
• MANDARIN & SZECHUAN CUISINE
• HOME STLYE COOKING
• FRESH VEGETABLES FROM OUR FARM
• EAT IN OR TAKE OUT
• FULL LIQUOR LICENSE
• OPEN 7 DAYS
• NEWLY REMODELED
MASTERCARD & VISA ACCEPTED
253-7835 253-2813
62 Main Street, Amherst

BUM TACKS

KATINA'S
STARTING WEDS., OCT. 9 • EVERY WEDNESDAY!
ROCK • REGGAE
LIVE: ONE LOVE BAND
Red Stripe Beer & Island Oasis Frozen Tropical Drinks!
WARM ISLAND FUN! 18+
OCT 9
SELECTROCUTION
This Area's THURSDAY HOT SPOT!
Mega-Tech Firepower 18+
OCT 3
THE FOOLS
OCT 4
GET FOOLISH!
"PSYCHO CHICKEN"
"WORLD DANCE PARTY" 18+
SELECTROCUTION
MEET PEOPLE WHO LIKE TO HAVE FUN! 18+
OCT 5
ROCK"A"MANIA
• BRITESIDE
• LIVEWIRE
• HARD SILENCE
• KILL CITY KILL
IN A SPECIAL SHOWCASE
SUPPORT LOCAL MUSICIANS All Ages
OCT 6
UPCOMING
WEDS., 10/9 ONE LOVE
FRI., 10/11 BACK IN BLACK
SUN., 10/13 LACHRYMATOR
FRI., 10/18 THE MACHINE
SUN., 10/20 WHITE TRASH
ADVANCE TIX: Katina's, Plasterpus, Strawberries & Music Outlet.
ROUTE 9, HADLEY • 586-8463

Café Ashley
$1.00 OFF
ALL YOU CAN EAT
BREAKFAST BUFFET
Waffles - Eggs- Omlettes - Potatoes
Bacon - Fresh Fruit & much more !!!
Only $5.95 with valid student ID
SATURDAY & SUNDAY
8:00 - 2:00
Route 9 at Howard Johnson Lodge
586-6393

HERE'S THE DEAL: EAT & SAVE !
STUDENT LIBRARY CARD
FREE DINNER!
Eat here 9 times with 15% discount* get 10th dinner free.
* Show us your student I.D. and get 15% OFF everytime you and your guests eat here!
Café Ashley

ACADEMY of MUSIC NORTHAMPTON Opera House 584-8435
LAST WEEKEND TO SEE THIS FILM - ENDS OCT. 10
Curtain daily at 7:00 & 9:00
Having a ball...wish you were here!
A series of astonishments of ever-widening wit, humanity and relevance."
- David Denby, New York Magazine
"OUTRAGEOUS!
One of the best films I've seen this year!"
"AMAZING...
Beautiful, lively and intelligent!"
"★★★★!"
burning
A documentary about VOGUING which studies the manner in which gays display costumes and styles at Manhattan balls. THE MESSAGE OF THIS FILM? "It's about the dignity of the human spirit, how people who are not treated well can rise above that with creativity and wit and intelligence and energy." "It's also about how some people do not have the same economic opportunities because of their race, sexual orientation and because of the class they come from."
Quotes - JENNIE LIVINGSTON - Producer/Director
AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE

Dr. Sharon Kipetz
Dean of Students
and
The Staff of the Dean of Students Office

Cordially invites members of the University community to the

Dean of Students Office
OPEN HOUSE

Friday, October 4, 1991
10:00a.m. to 1:00p.m.
Room 227 Whitmore Building

Ray Charles at the FAC

By JAMES MOLESWORTH
Collegian Staff

With most artists that are truly deserving of attention, they do not receive their just deserts until long after their work has been done, or in the worst cases, after they have died. Luckily that is not the case with Ray Charles, whose music has caught the attention of the world's ear, even without his product sponsorships.

Everyone knows of Ray Charles the pianist, composer and singer, few know that he also plays a little saxophone. Born in Georgia in 1932, an accident left him blind at age six. He studied music at the St. Augustine school for the blind in Florida, leaving at age 15 when he began playing in various local bands. Two years later, he organized his own trio that was in the mold of the Nat King Cole trio.

By 1954, Charles had formed his own band, accompanying singer Ruth Brown. Under Charles' meticulous planning and leadership, the band eventually formed its own voice. That voice received "cross-over" fame, long before there was such a term, spawning hits in the "rhythm & blues" and "rock and roll" genres.

In 1957, Charles released his first album, which consisted primarily of instrumentals, covering jazz standards, popular and gospel melodies, combined into a truly unique sound that has endured to this day. Charles has taken his early gospel, blues and jazz influences, added his own interpretation, and created one of the most memorable musical idioms of the last fifty years as well as broadening the market for "blues" based music. His throaty singing voice, and seemingly uncontainable energy, coupled with the tight arrangements of his orchestra and backing vocals of the Raelettes have left their unmistakable stamp across the face of modern popular music (just consider where the line of Little Richard/Jimi Hendrix/contemporary pop music would be

CONTINUED ON THIS WEEKEND PAGE 7

$10 - $25 HOUR

You Choose Your Hours
You Choose Work Location
Initiative Petition Signature Drive
for
Fair Tax Ballot Question
$.50 per Certified Signature
Call M-F 9am-5pm
1-800-845-1141

GRAND OPENING!

NOBODY'S PERFECT

Thank you, UMass Students, for your patronage at our campus shows. Due to your wonderful response, we now have a great new store with the merchandise you love arriving weekly.

NEW LOCATION
RT. 9, AMHERST/HADLEY BETWEEN SUPER STOP N SHOP & LIQUORS 44
AT THE CAMPUS PLAZA

Merchandise From the Top 2 Specialty Stores in the United States

Ladies & Mens PANTS & JEANS
FIRST QUALITY & SLIGHT IRREGULARS
$14.99 Reg. $30.00-$42.00

50% to 80% Off Their Prices

NOBODY'S PERFECT
Not even the best known specialty & department stores in the U.S. They make mistakes, too...That's when our buyers take advantage and pass the savings onto you!

NEW LOCATION
CAMPUS PLAZA
RT. 9 AMHERST/HADLEY
Phone 256-8686
Hours: Sun. 12pm-6pm
Mon-Wed., & Sat. 10am-6pm
Thurs., Fri. 10am-9pm

Pearl Street NIGHT CLUB

Thur., Oct. 3 -7:00pm /18+/
Early Show!
CHUCKLEHEAD
7:00pm doors, on stage at 8:00pm

Eighteen & Over
Dancing With DJ Dennis

Fri., Oct. 4 - 7:00pm
HOODOO GURUS

The Vestrymen
Dancing With DJ Job

Sat., Oct. 5 - 9:00pm
Dancing With DJ Job

Mon., Oct. 7- 8:00pm
THE RAMONES

The Lost

Tue., Oct. 8 - 7:00pm /18+/
All-Male Dance Revue
PRIVATE COLLECTION

Wed., Oct. 9 - 9:00pm
DANCING with DJ Job

Thur., Oct. 10- 8:30 pm /18+/
THE TOASTERS

Free Press

Fri., Oct. 11- 8:30 pm
MIGHTY DIAMONDS

Mutabaruka
The 809 Band

Sat., Oct. 12- 8:30pm
THE BREAKDOWN

Tue, Oct. 29- 8:00 pm /18+/
DREAD ZEPPELIN
Bop Harvey

Tue, Nov 5- 8:00pm /18+/
DE LA SOL
Dancing Upstairs
Wed.-Gay Night w/ DJ Job
Thur.-18+ w/ DJ Dennis
Fri. & Sat.-DJ Job
Coming... Sun., Oct. 20-18+
House Industrial Imports w/DJ Job

Tickets for all shows as available at Pearl Street, Strawberries, Dynamite Records, For the Record in Amherst, Ticket Pro (800) 828-7800, 10 Pearl Street, Northampton 413-584-7773

Grace Paley to speak

By OLIVIA STEWART-LIBERTY
Collegian Correspondent

Grace Paley, "combative pacifist", feminist, activist, demonstrator and author of three highly acclaimed anthologies of short fiction, and two books of poetry, will be speaking at 7:30 p.m. tonight at the Student Union Ballroom.

Paley will be reading from her writings, after which the floor will be open for discussion.

Described as a second generation radical from the Ukraine, Paley was born in 1922 in the Jewish ghetto of the Bronx. New York, where she has lived throughout her life, provides the pulse for the rich and varied vitality of her writings, and similarly for her fervent political activism.

Political activism and writing contend with each other for a place in Paley's life; the probable reason for the 15-year interlude between her first internationally admired publication, "The Little Disturbances of Man" in 1959 and her second, "Enormous Changes at the Last Minute" in 1974. Throughout the 1960s, Paley devoted the majority of her time to anti-war activities, pamphleteering, rallying, and protesting. She also fought for more localized issues such as the inhumane conditions of New York's prisons, of which she had first-hand experience, serving a six-day sentence in the Women's House of Detention in 1966. Her reason for the sentence (as she then put it) was for "sitting down in the middle of Fifth Avenue for about three minutes among people, lilacs and daisies, in order to confront tanks, missiles and people." Since, and prior to then, Paley has been 'passively active' in all types of socio-political issues, from women's rights to nuclear arms. As expressed by Donald Barthelme, "Grace Paley is a wonderful writer and trouble maker. We are fortunate to have her in our country."

Much of Paley's writings are grounded in the past of America's Jews and the lives of the second and third generations. Her fictions are brief, often times veiling deep-rooted philosophies or political issues with snippets of city conversation or anecdotes (the veiling markedly thinner in her second anthology of fiction, published in Vietnam). Thus global issues are related to an intimate neighborhood community which lends her writings a lively and colorful momentum. Similarly with her poetry.

Philip Roth, following her first publication, enthused about her possesion of "deep feelings, a wild imagination, and a style whose toughness and bumpiness arise not out of exasperation with the language, but the daring and heart of a genuine writer of prose."

■ Ray Charles

CONTINUED FROM THIS WEEKEND PAGE 6

without the initial impetus provided by Charles).

Ray Charles has been lucky to gain the iconographical status he has achieved, considering the long line of African-American musicians who have been forgotten due to a commercialized and racist music industry. His recent product endorsements are not only long over due in terms of compensating him materially but have also not dampened his creative fire. His performances are full of wit and musical virtuosity, and he has the uncanny ability to feed of his audience in order to consistently raise his performance to another level.

Ray Charles will be in performance at the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall on Thursday, Oct. 3 at 8 p.m. Call 545-2511 for tickets and information.

Pig out with local food, music

By BRIAN HARRINGTON
Collegian Staff

Acme Barb-B-Q and Campus Pizza, located on Route 9 in Hadley, are teaming up together and sponsoring a "Hadley Fall Family Festival" this Saturday from 12 to 5 p.m. that will feature all kinds of great food and entertainment.

The event is a benefit to raise funds for the Hopkins Academy Music Department. WRNX 100.9 FM will be broadcasting live with DJ Buddy Rubbish and the musical performers will include the _Wild Cat O'Halloran Band, Love Minus Zero, the Eddie Foreman Orchestra, and the Hopkins Academy Stage Band. Love Minus Zero just happen to be a very promising new local rock band and they are building themselves a solid reputation as fine performers. They are fun, tight and possess some great original material. Acme Barr-B-Q and Campus Pizza serve up some of the tastiest "cheap eats" around. Go for the ribs!

Perhaps the best way to get your feet wet or maintain your chops as a local musician or band is to attend the local "Open Mic" nights that are featured in this area. Sheehan's hosts the most popular on Wednesday nights. Sign up early with Randy. This is the place to make contacts, find a bass player, "talk shop" with fellow musicians, try out new band material, or just jam out together with friends. Sheehan's also offers an acoustic Open Mic on Sunday evenings for solo performers and folkies. A reminder that you must be 21 and over for both Open Mic nights.

The Landmark Lounge over in Belchertown at the intersection of Routes 9 and 202 also offers a similar Open Mic night every Wednesday night. Hosted by MC Bobby Marsland, the club provides the whole set-up and the evening is open to bands and musicans alike. They also make a damn good pizza.

BLAH, BLAH, BLAH....Rockin' Dave and the Rent Party are in Atlanta, Georgia this weekend performing at the Southern New Music Seminar for music industry big-shots. . . Amherst's own Vestrymen are opening for the Hoodoo Guru's at Pearl Street tommorrow night for an evening of psychedelic rock. . . the _Art Steele Blues Band at Sheehan's Cafe in Northampton tonight.

October Savings from Scotts

Scott's LIQUORS
OPEN MON-SAT 8 AM-11 PM
Tel. 549-2692

MOLSON & MOLSON LIGHT 12 pk. bottles $8.39 + Dep.
BECKS BEER 6 pk. bottles $4.99 + Dep.
MILLER LITE 12 pack cans $6.99 + Dep.
ANHEUSER-BUSCH'S NATURAL LIGHT 24-12 oz. cans $8.99 + Dep.
POPOV VODKA $10.99 1.75 Ltr.
CLUNY® SCOTCH $14.95 1.75 Ltr.
CONCHA Y TORO CHILEAN RED & WHITE TABLE WINE $5.99 1.5 Ltr.
GALLO WHITE ZINFANDEL & WHITE GRENACHE $5.99 1.5 Ltr.

Not responsible for typographical errors • Sale good 10/02 - 10/8
WE WANT TO BE YOUR FAVORITE LIQUOR STORE!
Tele-check for your personal check.
6 University Drive at Newmarket Center, Amherst
We now have all Mass Lottery games!
MEGABUCKS We Have It

PEKING GARDEN
BEST OF CHINESE FOOD
SPECIALIZING IN MANDARIN AND SZECHUAN DISHES
5 - 8 PM MON - THURS BUFFET $5.99
11 - 3 PM SUNDAY BRUNCH $6.99
FRIDAY AND SATURDAY COMEDY SHOW
20% OFF DINNER
BANQUET PARTY ROOM UP TO 200 PERSONS
FULL COCKTAIL MENU
48 RUSSELL ST. • HADLEY, MA 01035 • (413) 586-1202
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK
VISA & MASTERCARD

LONDON
ROUND TRIP FROM $350
From NEW YORK round trips starting at
LONDON $350
LENINGRAD $610
CARACAS $410
GUTEMALA C. $390
BANGKOK $939
LOS ANGELES-AUCKLAND $699
Taxes & surcharges not included. Fares subject to change.
Council Travel
79 So. Pleasent Street, Amherst, MA 01002
(413)256-1261

LOW, LOW PRICE
YANKEE DISCOUNT OIL
NORTHAMPTON HOLYOKE
584-4112 • 535-1888

UMASS ARTS COUNCIL

GRANT PROPOSAL DEADLINE
The next deadline for submission of grant proposals for arts-related proects and events

Friday, October 25

Guidelines and application forms are available at the Arts Council Office and the Student Activities Office

UMass Arts Council
209 Hasbrouk Hall, 545-0202

exhibit

CONTINUED FROM THIS WEEKEND PAGE 4

same symbols as Melody Rubero's painting to express a more realistic idea of war. "Sadness," by Luis E. Flores, shows a soldier kneeling down and hunched over as if trapped by the edges of the picture frame. His eyes are hidden by his cap as he keeps his rifle tight in his fists. His other hand presses down on a dove. This Picasso-esque painting contains some mixed messages such as 'Will he have to kill for peace?'

A simple, but striking chest of drawers stands in the room. A female figure is painted on the front of the drawers.

"Peace is when you can find it within yourself at first," said the artist, Rivera. This (the self) is symbolized in the dresser. "Like the dresser," Rivera said, "you can open it every day and find so many different situations, struggles, and triumphs. It's up to us how we confront these new situations."

Three giant medals hang in sharp geometric shapes on wire hangers in Edgar Sabogal's "Decorations." The "ribbons," each in yellow, blue, and red, represent the colors of the Columbian flag. All three of the medallions are marred with tears in the canvas.

"War is a way of expressing sexual repression," said Sabogal. Huge staples were used as an attempt to fix one of these tears.

"Trying to put everything together in the end doesn't work," said Sabogal.

The exhibit plans to travel beyond the Pioneer Valley in 1992 to the Museo Del Barrio in New York City, the Hispanic Artist Workshop in Philadelphia, and finally to California.

Wheeler gallery is located in the Central Residential Area of UMass, near the University Health Center. The exhibit will continue until Thursday, October 17. Gallery hours are Monday through Thursday from 4:00 until 8:00 p.m. and Sundays from 2:00 until 5:00 p.m. Parking is across the street. For more information about the exhibit, contact Norma I. Rivera at 253-0479 or John Vazquez. at 549-3613.

湘 PANDA EAST 園
Advocate "Best in the Valley" 1989 &1990
CHINESE RESTAURANT
We bring Chinatown to you
* Lunch Specials *
from $3.95 including soup & rice
Hours:
Mon. - Thurs. 11³⁰ am - 9³⁰ pm
Fri. & Sat. 11³⁰ am - 10³⁰ pm
Sunday 12 noon - 9³⁰ pm
103 N.Pleasant St. Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 256-8923 (413) 256-8924

QUALITY SILK SCREENED SPORTSWEAR
Free screen $20.00 value (over 24 shirts)
T-SHIRTS • SWEATS
BUMPER STICKERS
MUGS
KENNEDY SCREEN GRAPHICS
16 ARMORY STREET
NORTHAMPTON, MA 01060
(413)584-2124
1-800-287-2124

HEALTHY SKIN
Begins with a deep pore cleansing facial.
Also lash and brow tinting, shaping, hair waxing, make-up, therapeutic massage.
AESTHETICS SKINCARE
34 Main St., Suite 1, Amherst, MA 253-9879

BOLTWOOD MARKET
GRAND OPENING!!
SAT. OCT. 5TH
10am - 5pm
FREE Balloons Samples
MUSIC of Old Familiar Faces
Stop by and join in the Celebration!
(located behind Barts)
HOURS
Monday - Sat. 9-7
Sunday 12-5

THESE COUPONS ARE AVAILABLE ON TAKE OUT AND DELIVERIES ONLY!
La Cucina di Pinocchio
Ristorante Italiano
1177 N. Pleasant Street
Amherst, Massachusetts
At The Lights in North Amherst
549-3669
Fast Free Delivery or Pick-up
GOURMET PIZZAS NOW AVAILABLE!
TRY ONE NOW! $1.50 OFF ANY LARGE TWO ITEM GOURMET PIZZA
VEGI SPECIAL • GARLIC & FRESH TOMATOES • PESTO
CAPERS & SUN-DRIED TOMATOES • ROAST PEPPERS • EGGPLANT & BROCCOLI
JALAPENO PEPPERS • AND MANY MORE TO CHOOSE FROM
Exp. 1/31/92
Coupon Not Valid In Restaurant • For deliv or pick up only • One Coupon Per Order Only
TWIN SPECIAL 2 LARGE CHEESE PIZZAS $12.50 Any Topping $1.25 more One coupon per order-ex. 1/31/92
ANY THREE CALZONES only $9.95 Coupon Not Valid In Restaurant One Coupon Per Order Only Offer Expires 1/31/92

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS
Discount Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441
Koch's Golden Anniversary $7.99 case Everyday!
Captain Morgan $7.99 750 ml
Beringer White Zinfandel was $5.99, NOW $4.29 750ml
Bud Light $6.99 12/pk bottles
Moosehead Beer $7.99 12/pk bottles
Molson's Golden $7.99 12/pk bottles
Bud Dry $6.99 12/PK bots.
Smirnoff 80° $7.99 750 ml
Visa/Mastercard accepted on keg deposits
Many More In-Store Specials (especially on wines)
All Beers plus Deposit Delivery Available

Smith Hadley's TOWER THEATRES
THE VILLAGE COMMONS • SOUTH HADLEY 533-2663
THE COMMITMENTS Daily at 2:45, 7:10, & 9:15pm
At Tower 1: ORSON WELLES CITIZEN KANE Daily at 5:00pm
At Tower 2: RICOCHET Daily at 3:00, 5:05, 7:10, & 9:15pm
At Tower 2: AKIRA Midnight Friday 11:30 Friday

CHINA GARDEN
"The Collegian's choice in delightful dinning"
$2 OFF with purchase of $15 or more with this coupon
Enjoy A Taste of Real Chinese Food
Sunday-Thursday, 11:30am-10:00pm
Friday-Saturday, 11:30am-11:00pm
Lunch Hour: 11:30am-3:30pm 7 days a week
Free Delivery Service Fri., Sat., Sun. 5:00pm-10:00pm Visa/Master Card/ American Exp
•New Remodeling •7 Days a week •Take-out •Luncheon Specials $3.75-$4.55
The Valley's only Dim Sum Brunch
•Dim Sum (Chinese Brunch - Mandarin and Cantonese Styles) Every Day 11:30-3:30
•Weekly Vegetarian Specials (Wednesday and Thursday) New Vegetarian Menu Coming Soon!
13 N. Pleasant Street Amherst, MA • 253-4280/4281

World/Nation

AP photo

WOOLLY WINTER WISDOM — National Woolly Bear forecaster Sam Taylor predicts a mild winter and a white Christmas in these two Woolly Bear caterpillars in Lancaster, Pa., Tuesday.

Yankee Rowe to fight back

Nation's oldest nuclear plant challenges NRC ruling

By TRUDY TYNAN
Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD — Yankee Rowe officials said Wednesday they were ready to challenge the Nuclear Regulatory Commission staff on its move to halt the operation of the nation's oldest nuclear power plant over questions about the adequacy of reactor vessel safeguards.

Plant engineers and Yankee Atomic Electric Co. President Andrew C. Kadak were to meet Thursday morning with the NRC at commission headquarters in suburban Washington.

"At that point we hope to clarify the issues," said plant spokesman William McGee. "We feel that science is on our side."

The little 31-year-old reactor stopped generating power at 11:53 p.m. Tuesday about 12 hours after the company voluntarily began the shut down procedure in response to the move by the NRC staff.

The plant in an isolated mountain valley in the northwest corner of Massachusetts was wreathed with clouds of its own making Wednesday as the hot steam vented from its non-radioactive operations struck the chill morning air.

"We still have enormous amounts of heat and steam in the pipes," McGee said, explaining it takes about 30 hours to reach a cold shutdown. No radioactivity was released, he said.

The 185-megawatt reactor, the nation's smallest, boasted one of the industry's best safety records when the Union of Concerned Scientists charged earlier this year that the NRC was allowing the plant to operate with less than adequate safety margins on the containment vessel.

The watchdog group sought a shut down pending a physical check of the vessel, scheduled for April.

At issue is the 30-foot-tall pressurized steel drum that surrounds the hot reactor core, known as the reactor containment vessel, and how much it may have become weakened, or "embrittled," over the years because of constant neutron bombardment.

During the summer, the NRC staff and then the full commission reaffirmed earlier findings that the margin of safety at the plant was sufficient. Both sides said the worst case scenario was that an emergency, involving thousands of gallons of water to cool the vessel, could lead to a rupture of the vessel and the release of radiation. But the staff estimated that the odds of that happening were "9 in 1 million."

In recommending the shutdown of the plant, the NRC staff revised its calculations, pointing it to two new factors:

First, the staff said it was revising its previous evaluation of the risk of stall rupture based on new information provided by Yankee Rowe. Plant managers used a revised "technical model" in calculating the temperature of the water that would be pumped into the containment vessel.

According to Robert Pollard of the Union of Concerned Scientists, who closely followed the details of the Yankee Rowe case, the revised model indicated that water flowing into the containment vessel could be 25 degrees cooler than was forecast by the earlier model.

The staff said the revised model was "more realistic" than the one that both it and the plant managers had used during the summer in calculating the risk of vessel failure.

Engineers also factored in a "much greater" chance that the steel drum itself, as well as the vessel welds, might fail.

The second key issue examined by the staff was a plan proposed by Yankee Rowe in late August, at the commission's request, to boost the safety margin by using its pump system to circulate and more quickly warm the cold water.

Although the NRC staff found that operation of the pumps in such an emergency would "practically eliminate the chance of vessel failure," it also said there was a chance that the new pumping system might not work in the kind of emergency envisioned in the risk scenarios.

We Have Loose BEADS!
LOCAL COLORS
Arts & Crafts Gallery
174 N. Pleasant St., Amherst
253-7373

TONIGHT WIN $ 300.00 CASH
DRAWINGS ALL NIGHT 9 TIL 1
THE CELEBRATES 23 YEARS PUB IN AMHERST
15 EAST PLEASANT STREET

OOPS!
Now's the time to call...
North Amherst Motors
79 Old Sunderland Rd., No. Amherst
549-2880
Expert Repairs and Reconditioning
Most Major Credit Cards Accepted

Steven H. St. Clair
Attorney at Law
• Personal Injury CLAIMS, ACCIDENTS
• Defense vs. Criminal, Drug and Alcohol Related Charges
• Other legal problems
BY APPOINTMENT
816 North Pleasant
Amherst
549-1681
ADMITTED TO PRACTICE...1970
MEMBER MASS. AND CT. BARS

WANTED: USED MAC's
WE BUY YOUR USED MAC EQUIPMENT FOR TOP DOLLAR. CASH! WE SELL REFURBISHED MAC's AT DISCOUNT! CALL FOR QUOTE.
RENTEX INC. (800) 545-2313, (617) 423-5567

Bushels of Savings...at Liquors 44!
BEER WINE LIQUORS
KOCH'S GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY $8.49 + DEP. case of 24 16 oz. ret. bottles
NATURAL LIGHT $9.29 + DEP. case of 2-12 pk. cans
WURZBURGER OCTOBERFEST $5.69 + DEP. case of 6 pk. bottles
ROLLING ROCK $12.49 + DEP. case of 2-12 pk. bottles
CORONA BEER $16.99 + DEP. case of 24-12 oz. bottles
WINE-OF-THE-MONTH VENDANGE $1.99 750 ML. CHARDONNAY, SAUVIGNON BLANC, CABERNET SAUVIGNON, ZINFANDEL SALE $3.49 MAIL-IN REBATE 1.50 AFTER REBATE
GEORGE DUBOEUF $5.49 750ML BEAUJOLAIS VILLAGES
GALLO $4.99 1.5L WHITE GRENACHE, SAUVIGNON BLANC, WHITE ZINFANDEL
KENDALL-JACKSON $8.99 750ML CHARDONNAY
PICCINI CHIANTI $3.99 750ML
SEAGRAM'S GIN $9.99 1.75L SALE 12.99 MAIL IN REBATE 3.00 AFTER REBATE
DEWAR'S White Label SCOTCH WHISKY $23.99 1.75L
COSSACK VODKA $9.49 1.75L
CANADIAN MIST $9.99 1.75L SALE 12.99 MAIL IN REBATE 3.00 AFTER REBATE
JIM BEAM $13.99 1.75L
Full Redemption Center not responsible for typographical errors
9am to 11pm Monday thru Saturday
LIQUORS 44
HADLEY Campus Plaza/Route 9 253-9344
TWO LOCATIONS
HOLYOKE 30 Lincoln St. 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS 10/3/91 THRU WEDS. 10/9/91
TeleCheck

Student Specials(Sept.-Dec.)
Nautilus (Aerobics included) $119
Racquetball (Court time included) $119
Tennis (Plus court time) $119
All Club (All of the Above) $189
Now offering Step Aerobic Classes
Social lounge, Big Screen TV, Ping-Pong Available To All!
• Pro-Shop
• Snack-Bar with Liquor License
WINNER'S ATHLETIC CLUB
549-4545
Route 116, Sunderland Across From Bubs BBQ

Women's Issues

Sweet dark places

By CHRISTINE DUMAS
Collegian Correspondent

Leslea Newman, poet, novelist and teacher read from her latest work, Sweet Dark Places to a group of 40 women Wednesday as part of the Women's Studies Brown Bag Lunch Series.

The series, which is in its sixth semester, aims to bring together students and guest speakers in an informal setting to explore feminist issues.

Sweet Dark Places, Newman's most recent work, is a collection of poems concerning serious issues such as incest and aging along with humorous pieces like "13 Ways of Looking at a Cat" and "Pencil Test 1969" which tells the story of two young girls discovering their newly formed breasts.

Much of Newman's writing is heavily influenced by her identity as a lesbian and a Jew. She incorporates some Yiddish into her poems, short stories and novels, especially those inspired by her grandmother. "Grandma," a poem Newman recited which deals with the death of her grandmother at the age of 99, was incredibly moving and brought several listeners to tears.

Although in the early days of her writing, Newman struggled to get her work noticed, in 1989 she was the recipient of a Massachusetts Artist Fellowship in Poetry. Currently, "All This Rage," her poem about incest, is being made into a one-act play and a film version of her short story, "A Letter to Harvey Milk" is being shown in film festivals in several countries.

Although Newman is proud of being a lesbian writer, she is bothered by the fact that that title limits her audience. She is interested in attracting a broader audience and feels that putting her work out there educates people in both Jewish and lesbian issues.

In addition to her poetry and short stories, Newman has written a children's book titled Heather has Two Mommies. The book was written to help two lesbian friends teach their daughter about their unique family. The book has since gained much publicity, including a write-up in Newsweek.

Newman revealed many of the inspirations for her work. The Holocaust, her grandmother, her childhood in Brooklyn and her identity as a lesbian are all influences that come through in her writing. After Newman's reading and a period of discussion, many listeners purchased copies of Newman's works which were on display.

Leslea Newman will be giving another, more extensive reading of Sweet Dark Places at Smith College at 2 p.m. Sunday. In addition to her writing, Newman, a Northampton resident, teaches several writing workshops for women entitled Write From The Heart.

Exciting upcoming events

Thursday, October 3:

Film — "Longtime Companion" Both moving and funny, this film details the lives of a group of gay Manhattenites from the onset of AIDS to the recent past. 7 p.m. Campus Center Room 803.

Lecture — Grace Paley, an author and activist will speak tonight at UMass in the Student Union Ballroom at 7:30 p.m. $3; students free.

Women Improvisors — Jin Hi Kim, Kumungo soloist and composer will play at UMass, Hampden Theater at 8 p.m. Jin Hi Kim is a rarity: a musician fully trained in the compexities of Korean traditional music who has been able to integrate her Asian skill and sensibilities with the demands of the Western avant garde.

Friday, October 4:

Social — The first Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Cafe of the year! Featuring Keith Hyatte and Tom Martin as well as Erika Wheeler. The cafe will be in Hampden Theater at 8 p.m. A $3 donation would be welcome.

Saturday, October 5:

Lecture — Elena Poniatowska, Aftershocks: The Mexican Earthquake of 1965 and its Consequences — Five College Writer-in-Residence. Plenary session of the Annual Meeting of the New England Council of Latin American Studies. Free. Smith College Neilson Library Browsing Room 3:45 p.m.

Theater — New World Theater presents Camp Logan, by Celeste Bedford Walker. The story of the members of the 24th U.S. Infantry (an all-black regiment) who mutineed in Houston, Texas, August, 1917. $5; $3 students and senior citizens. UMass Bowker Auditorium 8 p.m.

Sunday, October 6:

Reading — Leslea Newman will read from her book of poetry "Sweet Dark Places," at Smith College Neilson Library Browsing Room at 2 p.m.

Tuesday, October8:

Social — Lesbian Bisexual Women's Union meets Tuesdays at 7:30 p.m. in the LBGA office in the Student Union.

Herstorian previews book

By LISA VESHECCO
Collegian Correspondent

Lesbian herstory and community has always been a source of tremendous diversity said Lillian Faderman, as she addressed a crowd of 65 women at Lunaria, a feminist bookstore in Northampton on Saturday evening.

Faderman read from her new book entitled "Odd Girls and Twilight Lovers" (Columbia University Press), a herstory of 20th century American lesbians.

Faderman draws from a diverse lesbian community through novels, journals, medical records and interviews, making sure to draw from racially, ethnically and geographically diverse sources in order to fill in the gaps of her previous book "Surpassing The Love of Men."

Faderman, a self-proclaimed lesbian came out in the 1956 "gay girls bar" subculture. In 1962, she originally thought she was the sole lesbian on the University of Los Angeles campus, only to witness the emergence of a previously underground large, diverse lesbian community.

She said this community gained visibility with signs such as the emergence of a GLB Alliance, a group of Asian Pacific women, African-American lesbians, "old" lesbians and lesbians who were mothers before they came out as lesbians.

"Odd Girls and Twilight Lovers" traces the strong presence of lesbian voices throughout the twentieth century. Faderman spoke about the blues tunes of the 20s.

She also drew attention to the economic difficulty facing lesbian women in the 30s, where Faderman stated "there were few jobs for lesbians in the 30s".

Faderman said women married for socio-economic reasons. She said, "many women may have had bisexual relations" at that time. World War II opened up jobs for women and lesbians were welcomed into the military, she said.

To the crowds amusement Faderman said the military general at the time cautioned others that "relationships between women may crop up in times under war conditions."

Faderman continued with the herstory of butch/femme subculture of workingclass lesbians in the 50s, also known as the "gay girls bars" and finally reminded us of the resurgence of lesbian "witchhunting" with the onset of McCarthyism.

Faderman said despite societal impositions of morality lesbians continue to make a space for themselves with little resources and an often unfriendly environment.

Lesbians have defied the attempts of sexologists to define THE lesbian, she said.

"The only constant truth to be found" said Faderman. "Is that she prefers women."

Cromwell day held at Smith

By LISA VESHECCO
Collegian Correspondent

Smith College celebrates today the third annual Ortelia Cromwell Symposiam day in recognition of the diversity that exists within the Smith College community at the John M. Green Hall.

Guest keynote speaker is Doris Leader Charge, the college tribal instructor and Lakota language expert for Kevin Costner's movie Dances With Wolves. Leader Charge's talk entitled "Preserving and Transmitting Native American Culture" is at 1 p.m. and is free and open to the public. Additional workshops, presentations and videos will follow.

Ortelia Cromwell is the first known African-American graduate of the class of 1900. Cromwell went on to receive her master's from Columbia University and her doctorate from Yale. She has also studied in Germany.

The Ortelia Cromwell Symposium was established in 1989 in response to a series of racial occurences on campus. Since that time the program has expanded to "increase awareness of the many differences that exist within the Smith community among students, faculty, and staff," says Majorie Richardson, assistant dean for minority affairs.

Ten workshops will be offered at 2:30 - 4:15 p.m. and again at 4:15 - 5:30 p.m. including "The Chicano in American History"; "Stereotypes of Asian-Americans in the Media"; "Positive Images: Portraits of Women with Disabilities"; and "Size and Weight Discrimination: Another Civil Rights Issue."

An evening performance of In Other Words, a combination of dramatic readings, music, and poetry by artists Ruby Dee and Ossie Davis will provide an interpretation of the minority experience in America. This performance will be at 7:30 p.m. in the John M Greene Hall and is free and open to the public.

For a complete listing of workshops or additional information contact the Smith News Office at 585-2190.

Pro-choice rally tonight

By JESSAME HANNUS
Collegian Correspondent

A candlelight vigil and march to the Amherst Common will be held tonight in remembrance of Rosie Jimenez, the first woman to die of an illegal abortion after the Hyde Amendment was passed in 1977. Marchers should gather in front of the Unitarian Church in Amherst at 6 p.m.

The Hyde Amendment cut off Medicaid for women who need abortions. Today is the 14th anniversary of Rosie Jimenez's death. The event was organized by the Hampshire College Civil Liberties Program, a pro-choice organization. The Hampshire College Civil Liberties Theater Collective will be performing gorilla theater.

Notice

The Women's Issues Page is looking for photographers, artists and cartoonists to be shown on this page. If you have any interest or talent, please come down to the Collegian office in the Campus Center and talk to Jessame Hannus, the women's issues editor.

If I am not there, leave a detailed note on my desk including your name, number and art form. I am interested specifically in a cartoonist. If anyone knows of a good woman-centered cartoon strip let me know.

Write for Women's Issues

THE FAR SIDE
By GARY LARSON

Milli Vanilli's bird, Lilly

DOONESBURY
By GARRY TRUDEAU

BOSS? GOT A MINUTE?
NOT REALLY, BUTTS. WHAT IS IT?
BOSS, I'M AFRAID I'M GIVING YOU NOTICE.
WHAT! IN THE MIDDLE OF MY BUSY SEASON? NO WAY, BUTTS!
SORRY, BOSS. MY WORK IS DONE HERE. I HAVE TO MOVE ON.
AND WHAT AM I SUPPOSED TO DO FOR A BARTENDER, HUH? YOU'RE CRIPPLING MY BUSINESS HERE!
BOSS, TRY TO KEEP IN MIND I'M ONLY A HALLUCINATION.
WHO CARES? YOU'RE STILL LEAVING ME SHORT-HANDED!

CALVIN AND HOBBES
By BILL WATTERSON

WANT TO GO SPELUNKING WITH ME?
SPELUNKING? THERE AREN'T ANY CAVES AROUND HERE!
YOU DON'T NEED A CAVE. ALL YOU NEED IS A ROCK.
SPELUNK.

CAST OF THOUSANDS
By BARRY DEUTSCH

CAGE?
BLACKNESS WRETCHEDNESS
GLOOM, DESPAIR, DEATH AND ROT
UH-...JOY, GOOD CHEER, FELICITY, RAPTURE.
AGAST, DESOLATION, PESTILENCE, MISERY, DISMAL, A BANDONED GRIEF
GLEE, DELIGHT, ELATION, SPRIGHTLY EUPHORIA
I SAID DISMAL, ABANDONED GRIEF, DAMMIT!
ABANDONED GRIEF? IS, WHAT'S WRONG, HON?

TANGELO PIE
By TIM SNIFFEN

So. Blackmailed from the Presidency. A bizarre end to a truly demented situation.
Oh, it was a valuable experience! I have no regrets! And I can always go back...
I'm still amazed you ended the whole ordeal without one last foolish prank!
Funny you say that.
Hey! Where'd the Bakery Section go?
Says here it was shipped to some dorm room at UMass. Isn't that weird?

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED
By SHADOW

OKAY, DAVE... WHAT ON EARTH DO YOU WANT FROM ME?!
NOT EARTH--
...I WANT YOU TO COME HELP ME AND DR GALOES DEFEAT THE KING OF MARS!
UMM... OKAY, DAVE. JUST LET ME CHECK MY CALENDAR
I CAN'T GO TO MARS WITH YOU, DAVE! I'VE GOT A CALCULUS QUIZ TO STUDY FOR!
GEE WHIZ, I'M SORRY!

Quote of the Day

"I like condoms and candles - but, boy, do you have to keep then separate."
--overheard

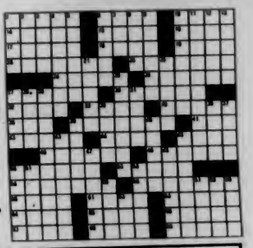
DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHAEL JAFFE

ACROSS
1 Accolades
6 Composer Khachaturian
10 Warning sound
14 Shade of green
15 Timbuktu's country
16 "— Camera": John Van Druten play
17 More contemptible
18 Staggers
19 Ancient strong box
20 Plead for
22 Part of a bagpipe
24 Actress Dickinson
26 Curves
27 Seesaw
30 Make s request
32 Wings
33 Gaelic
35 Whisper from the wings
38 Title for Ian McKellen
39 World — champions
41 Fibbert
42 Controversy
44 0
45 "A Death in the Family" author
46 Closet accessory
48 Explosions
50 Actress Welch from Chicago
52 Bête — pet aversion
54 Novel about Benedict Arnold
56 Cat and goat
60 RBI, for example
61 Larynx location
63 Skip over
64 Roadway
65 Challenge
66 Bottom
67 Ranked competitor
68 In a short while
69 Seed coat

DOWN
1 Osaka Bay city
2 — Bator
3 Part of D.C.
4 Stuffed oneself
5 Calm
6 Valuable violin
7 Like winter weather
8 Baldwin of the screen
9 Accident
10 Namesakes of Petrucho's sister-in-law
11 Human beings
12 Presenter of a sort, for short
13 A predecessor of Carson et al
21 See eye to eye
23 Locales
25 Oriental
27 News source in the USSR
28 Nobel winner Wiesel
29 Event in San Francisco: 1906 and 1989
31 Equal
34 Demolish
36 Tune for a harpsome
37 Nice summers
39 Like a fillet of fish
40 Hood of note
43 Jeered at
45 Small spaces
47 One of the Jacksons
49 Extremely important
50 Grates
51 Bandleader Shaw
53 Bucket in an old song
55 Diet for Jack Sprat
57 Shakes loose
58 Entrance for miners
59 Buona —
62 — Magnon

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

P	A	S	T		S	A	G	O		F	L	U	E	S
O	N	E	E		E	D	E	N		A	O	R	T	A
S	T	E	M		D	E	L	T	A		U	S	E	D
		S	O	M	E	T	I	M	E	S		M	E
S	T	E	L	A		T	I	M	E	S	V	I	E	R
T	A	R	E		A	M	I	N	O		I	R	I	S
E	M	I	R		T	R	I	N		E	N	D	U	E
E	P	A		S	L	E	W	S		T	I	N	C	H
		P	E	T	O	S	K	Y		S	T	I	M	E
T	W	O	T	I	M	E		P	E	C	A	L	L
A	E	R	I	E		A	G	I	T	A		A	R	I	A
S	H	I	N	E	Y		A	Y	E	S		D	A	I	S
		H	I	C	K	E	Y		A	Y	E	S		D	A	I	S	E



Menu

LUNCH
French Dip Sandwich
Quiche Lorraine
BASICS LUNCH
Humus Veggie Pocket
Quiche Lorraine

DINNER
Savory Baked Chicken
Shells in Cheese Sauce
BASICS DINNER
Savory Baked Chicken
Shells in Cheese Sauce

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE

ARIES (March 21-April 19): If legal issues arise, seek the best counsel available. Luck will come through friends who are either powerful or wealthy. Self-restraint is vital. Be careful not to overindulge in food or drink.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): New creative challenges inspire you. Maintain a winning attitude in love. Physical activity tones your mind as well as your body. Practice your tennis or golf stroke. Romance begins to heat up.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You can find new ways to achieve your goals now. Acting self-righteous could alienate a loved one. Be tolerant and stay in contact with old friends. Give yourself credit for a job well done.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Important choices must be made on the home front. An informal chat with your loved ones could lead to something big. The answer to a recurring question will come in the night.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Make good use of an effective communications system. Attend group events if possible. The people you reach can help raise funds or boost your social standing. Be wary of love on the rebound.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Organizing a social function boosts your popularity. Share your ideas to establish meaningful rapport with higher-ups. Stay calm when under fire. Fancy footwork puts you in the driver's seat.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Snap decisions could box you into a corner; take your time when asked to make a choice. Correspondence linked to rules or the law should be carefully assessed. Spend more time on your own.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Do not be afraid to take chances! A problem can be solved if you face it squarely. Keep better tabs on your spending. A teen-ager needs tender loving care; be more supportive.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A sense of humor will help you role with the punches. Tackle a persistent problem from another angle. A fresh approach works wonders! Do not refuse an offer of help. Teamwork is favored.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Have more confidence in your speaking or writing ability. A health problem could be aggravated by worry. Check with trusted advisers before signing papers.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be on the lookout for interesting financial opportunities. New work duties could lead you to the winner's circle. Make home repairs before they get more extensive. A last minute plan pays off.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Be careful what you say or write today; your words could return to haunt you. Look at the world from a loved one's eyes before passing judgement. Great tolerance is needed at home.

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Preston P. Forman
Copy Editor.....Dave Massey
PhotoTechnician.....Carrie Wyeth
Production Supervisor.....Nicole Dumas
Production.....Terry Starmer, Kim Frisino, Chris Prell, Ali Woolwich

Attention Juniors and Seniors with a 3.3 GPA or above...

Watch for your Golden Key National Honor Society letter in the mail

AWARENESS DAYS:
October 7, 8, & 9

Visit our information table on the campus center concourse for more information.

FREE!! FREE!! FREE!!

CAMPUS TRAVEL

NO CHARGE TO PROCESS CONTINENTAL/AMERICAN EXPRESS COUPONS

FREE!! FREE!! FREE!! FREE!!

CENTRAL TRAVEL

INQUIRE ABOUT OUR 10% STUDENT DISCOUNT

CAMPUS TRAVEL
CAMPUS CENTER
UMASS
545-0500

CENTRAL TRAVEL
OF AMHERST
800 MAIN ST. STE. 2
256-6704

TOP of the CAMPUS LOUNGE

Catch all your sports at the Top!

New Big Screen Television, Drink Specials & Draft Beer

Lounge Hours
Mon-Fri 11:30 am-12:30 am
Sat-Sun 5:00 pm-12:30 am

Baseball, Football & More!

11th Floor • Lincoln Campus Center • (413) 549-6000 ext. 7634
University of Massachusetts at Amherst

Only Peter Pan runs the Boston Marathon 15 times a day.

One Way Fare From Only $12; Round Trip From Only $24!

15 bus trips daily from Amherst to Boston; 23 Friday departures including 5 non-stop express trips! (Amherst's only non-stop service to Boston).

Hassle-free pick-ups at UMASS (Haigus Mall) and Amherst Center Terminal (Pleasant Street)!

Convenient drop-offs at Peter Pan Terminal in downtown Boston!

For information, call:
UMass Hotel 545-2006
Peter Pan Terminal 256-0431

©DG 1991

Peter Pan

Hardwork, dedication pay off for St. Laurent

By CHRIS CUDDY
Collegian Correspondant

Going out in style.

That's the way Micelle St. Laurent wants it to be.

"No one really remembers how you started, but they all remember how you finished, so I sort of want to go out with a bang," the senior captain of the University of Massachusetts women's cross country team said.

St. Laurent, an education major from Fall River, Mass., has been a four year varsity runner for the Minutewomen, and is described by coach Julie LaFreniere as a "great leader and a one hundred percent team player. She's tremendously dedicated, everything comes through hard work, and she's probably one of the gutsiest runners I've had in recent years."

With injuries to several key people, St. Laurent has had to step up and lead a young team comprised of several freshmen and sophomores, but a team St. Laurent describes as "small, but a very close one. We just have to build up our confidence and get the freshmen and sophomores to step up to the task."

St. Laurent has remained injury free so far this year, a task that has not proved easy so far for the Minutewomen.

"I trained really hard over the summer, and hopefully I can stay injury free," she said. "I've had some injury problems in the past, and at times you ask yourself why am I doing this, but it's all worth it in the end."

Coming out of Durfee High School, MA, St. Laurent was a good runner, according to LaFreniere, but not one of the most talented ever to come to UMass.

"She's worked out a lot better than many of the 'superstars' who have come here," LaFreniere said.

Pre-Season favorites to win the Atlantic 10 Conference, the Minutewomen are off to a disappointing 1-2 start.

"If we set our minds to it we can still do it, and as of this week we're still the favorites," St. Laurent said.

After the cross country season is over, St. Laurent will compete for both the indoor and outdoor track teams, but admits to finding cross country the most enjoyable of the three. After her graduation in May with a degree in education, St. Laurent will look for a career in upper elementry education, an interest that stems from her "Love for teaching and love for the kids."

With her tremendous work ethic and sheer dedication, Michelle has, "Never run better," according to LaFreniere and with her trial time on the Totman Field course down :41 seconds, St. Laurent's vision of "Going out with a bang," has never been closer.

■ football

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 12

transition.

Add to that that their defense is overrated. LT is the slowest he's ever been and Leonard Marshall has run out of excuses for his soft play. Their defensive line is very soft against the run and has no pass rush at all.

This week will be another close one against the Cardinals. Ten points is almost as generous as those officials. Take the points and Phoenix and make a bundle.

What were the Pats thinking last weekend against Phoenix? Doesn't anybody scout the opposition. The week before, the Cardinals gave up 181 rushing yards against the Cowboys and Leonard Russell was only given the ball three times. What was the Pat coaching staff smoking? I don't think Patriot fans want the game in quarterback Hugh Millen's hands anymore than he does.

After last week's poor offensive performance, (only three points on offense), you've got to like Miami to give only 6 1/2 points. I don't think home field means too much in this one.

One of the best picks this week is Dallas over Green Bay. Green Bay quarterback Don Majkowski separated his shoulder and will not play. The Packers' only win this season was a squeaker against the dominant Tampa Bay Buccaneers. The Packers are only averaging 13 points a game for the season.

Troy Aikman is having the best season of his career and should easily pick apart the Packer secondary. He will have plenty of time to throw against a weak pass rush. Give 2 1/2.

For all of you Jet fans who have been dying for respect, now's their chance. This week they go into Cleveland, who's had trouble getting the offense into gear. The Browns are coming off of a bye week which usually results in a rusty performance.

The Jets looked very impressive in their victory over the Dolphins last week. After two tough losses to the Bills and the Bears, it looks as if they're starting to put things together. The Jets face a team that they have to beat if they expect to make any improvements over last season.

Monday night's matchup looks to be another classic with the Bills going into Kansas City to face the Chiefs. The Chiefs should have some success running the ball unless the newly arrived Bruce Smith can have a major impact. The key matchup will be the Chiefs defense against the red hot Bills offense.

This week's picks in CAPS : (H) : Home

(H)BENGALS(-3 1/2) VS Seattle, DALLAS(-2 1/2) VS (H)Packers, (H)OILERS VS Denver, JETS(-1 1/2) VS (H)Browns, (H)LIONS(-3) VS Vikings, MIAMI(-6 1/2) VS Pats, REDSKINS(-3) VS (H)Chicago, EAGLES(-3) VS (H)Tampa Bay, CHARGERS(+7 1/2) VS Raiders, PHEONIX(+10) VS (H)Giants, STEELERS(-6) VS (H)Colts, BILLS(-3) VS (H)CHIEFS

LAST WEEK : 5-7
SEASON : 21-19

Roy Alexander is a Collegian sports columnist

Classifieds

COME TO THE COLLEGIAN OFFICE 113 CAMPUS CENTER • THURSDAY 8:30-3:30 FRIDAY 8:30-2:30 • DEADLINE IS TWO DAYS PRIOR TO PUBLICATION • 20¢/WORD/DAY FOR STUDENTS • CASH IN ADVANCE

ACTIVITIES

TRI-SIGMA OPEN RUSH
9/30 & 10/2 7-8 PM
10/1 & 10/3 5-6 PM
387 N.Pleasant St
549-3811

Form a MOCKTRIAL team. Compete against other colleges. For more info call Shahna at 542-3000

FIVE COLLEGE EUROPEAN CLUB
Next meeting Thursday October 3
7:30pm Jordan house living room -
Smith College tel 546-3567

ANNOUNCEMENTS

ATTENTION NON-US RESIDENTS
AA-1 immigration lottery is your chance. Apply on friends behalf for efficient strategies Call 542-4220

Bed and Breakfast. Downtown Amherst 549-0733

HEY UMASS**
Let us see you wiggle it just a little bit
UMass Racquetball
For info call anytime 545-2077

SOUTH ASIA CLUB
General meeting
Today Oct 3 7pm
CC rm 168

STUDENT LOCKERS AVAILABLE in Student Union. For storage of books and other personal belongings. Register at OCHO 426 Student Union

True Patriots want to watch the GE boycott video, "Deadly Deception" on Thursday Oct 3, 6pm in CC 162

UMASS BIKE RACING TEAM wants you. Come race with the best. No experience needed. Meeting: 7:30pm Thurs. (check info booth)

AUTO FOR SALE

'82 MERCURY CAPRI New brakes, muffler, battery, shocks good condition $1000 256-3020

1984 MERC LYNX Good condition $1100 o/BO 549-5111

84 FORD ESCORT New brakes, muffler very reliable. $1000 665-4602-evenings

1986 RENAULT ALLIANCE- Immaculate body/flawless interior/excellent ride. Extreme bargain! $990.00 256-0418

89 VW 2 door hatchback Excellent condition Owner moved 665-3799

AWESOME 1978 BUICK CENTURY Trouble -Free! Sunroof $400 will bargain 253-3908

SEIZED CARS, truck, boats, 4wheelers, motorhomes by FBI, IRS, DEA. Available your area now Call 805-682-7555 Ext C-1675

VW RABBIT '82 Diesel Runs well 40miles per gallon call 802-254-5803

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

REPOSSESSED AND IRS foreclosed homes available at below market value. Fantastic savings! You repair. Also S and L bailout properties. Call 805-682-7555 ext H-2009

ENTERTAINMENT

RACK-A-DISC! $175.00 DJs, VJs, Karaoke for house/ Formal parties, Call 586-9900

FOR RENT

EXECUTIVE RENTAL RENT or rent with option to buy 4 bedroom luxuries house in Amherst woods Call 253-7879

FRIDGE RENTALS 253-9742 Free delivery

TOWNHOUSE - 2 bedroom 1 1/2 bath Bus route North Amherst 1-567-1352

FOR SALE

1981 TOYOTA CORROLLA great shape $900 253-3369

1983 Z-26 Black nice $3900 call 253-3369

AKC GOLDEN Retriever Puppies $300.00-400.00 367-2405 or 367-2816

Baby Burmese Python
Healthy, friendly, easy to maintain 250.00/BO: Includes complete set-up. 253-0447

BONDWELL-8310-PLUS Laptop -LCD Backlit
Superfast 16MMZ 286-40MEG Hard disk 3 batteries + Charger-1MEG RAM
1.44 M Floppy-B Charger + $3000 Worth of programs - Weighs only 7lbs!
Asking for $999.- Call Said @ 546-3932

BROTHER AX22 TYPEWRITER
Mint condition
Must sell, $100
Call Amy 546-2585

CENTURIAN IRONMAN EXPERT Excellent condition, low mileage, Bought new for $600, Selling for $350/BO, Call Chris 253-3608

CHEAP $1 VW Diesel Runs great, body in bad shape $300 or BO Pat 6-4002

COMPUTER FOR SALE
$600 Call Cliff
549-1782

DEAD TRADE- Have Saturday need Thursday 256-1183

FIREWOOD
Semi-dry, cut, split + delivered $90.00 per cord (128 ft.) 1/2 cord min Call Leon 549-6231 Leave message

FOR SALE HONDA CB360 4700mi. With extras call 253-0951 $400

FREE CAP WHEN you buy my Ford F150 4x4 Call Steve 253-7922

GEORGE MICHAEL TICKETS. Worcester Centrum, October 28. Good seats. 546-0635

Jerry&Sara, Wild Boys, Pig Tangent 63 KFOG Call Jeff 549-7686

THREE FOOT! Acoustic speakers perfect only $200 electronic typewriter! $100 253-3908

YAMAHA YPP-50: Touch sensitive, excellent piano replication, bought new for $1000.00, will sell for $700.00 B/O.
Also, Roland Juno-106, bought new for $800.00, will sell for $300.00B/O.
Also, Roland Jazz Chorus 120, bought used for $325.00, will sell for $225 firm. Call Rich at 256-6971.

FUNDRAISERS

RAISE $500...$1000...$1500
FOOLPROOF
FUNDRAISING
For your fraternity, sorority, team or other campus organization. Act now for the chance to win a Caribbean cruise and fabulous prizes!
Call 1-800-950-8472, ext 50

HELP WANTED

Earn $2500 & FREE trips selling Spring break packages to Bahamas, Mexico, Jamaica, Florida! Best trips & prices! Spring Break Travel 1-800-638-6786

EXTRA CASH:
FREE monthly Avon catalog or become a representative
Write: Toni OBrien 86 Camden St. Milford CT 06460

FREE SPRING BREAK trip + cash! Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas! Sell trips on campus and earn free trip + bonus cash! Four Seasons 1-800-331-3136

FREE SPRING BREAK TRIPS
to students or student organization promoting our spring break packages.
GOOD pay & fun. Call CMI
1-800-423-5264

FREE TRAVEL-Air couriers and cruiseships. Students also needed Christmas, spring, and summer for amusement park employment Call 805-682-7555 ext F-1426

GRAD STUDENTS needed for administrative /tutorial positions. Up to 25 hours per week. Good grades a must. $8.00/hour. Call the Ronkin Educational Group at 549-4010

INSTALLER
for car audio and security systems. Part time with growth to full time. Must be experienced. Call 584-9547 for interview.

"Know before you go," Where to work, live and ski free in Colorado's resorts. "Current guide to Aspen, Vail, Breckenridge and more! $18.95. Call 1-800-788-6174

PEACE AND JUSTICE organization seeks workstudy. 10 hour administrative assistant position. $4.50-5.50 per hour. Call Carolyn at 256-8305

POSTAL JOBS AVAILABLE! Many positions Great benefits. Call 805-682-7555 ext P-3306

SPRING BREAK REPS!!!
Earn up to $3000! Become a part of a team and sell the best spring break trips on campus. Earn FREE trips and unlimited cash$$. Call now!
Take A Break Student Travel
(617)424-8222 or (800)-328-SAVE
(Boston)

LOST

Black pouch pocketbook NEED GLASSES Please return to Campus Center information desk!

GOLD HOOP EARRING with wire twist Lost in Campus Center !! found call 253-5444 REWARD

LOST LV WALLET
important ID
Reward if return
Call 546-1221 Vivien

LOST -REWARD BEAT-UP Brown leather jacket left in Mahar after Wednesday night class if found contact Jey at 548-9915

LOST!!!!
Watch Timex black leather strap with snaps Lost Wed Sept. 25 in or around Herter Hall Sentimental value !! found please call Rose at 6-1565

SOMEONE SWAPPED THEIR leather jacket for mine at Puffton party 9/28 Sat. If you have info please call 546-0592

MUSICIANS

Guitar Lessons - Beginning/Intermediate Relaxed atmosphere, serious lessons $10/hr. Call Tim-256-6300

PERSONALS

JILL W
Good luck on Saturday!!
Even though you wont have your 4 intelligent roommates with you, we hope you do well!!
Love Ya, 15 Cooty!!

DAVID Z.
You still owe me music, sweetie.
Love GBL

CONGRATULATIONS KAPPA PLEDGES:
JenC, JenR Nicole Kjo'd Lesli Michelle Amy Melissa Jessica Sonya Andrea Hayden Lee Ellie Brindy Tracy --Get ready for a great semester It has only just begun
Love The Sisters of KKG

LISA B.
Happy 77 B-day
See you uptown, maybe!!
We love you,
Lorraine + Sarah

JENNY
I don't look like -- PUP
Happy one year ! Love You
Dan

Betty Nickerspoonman
Happy Birthday #2 Vixon, head, Burrrie, Bessy the Cow, tequila monster, bimbo. You asked for it.
Your Buddies,
Ken, Redface, Al, Stew, Toast & CJ

RESUME SERVICE

Cutting Edge Resumes. Complete resume service. Writing, laser printing, letters, advice 549-0367

ROOMMATE NEEDED

Interested in moving to Southwest coed lowrise? I need a roommate. Call Lynn 6-0525

SERVICES

FREE pregnancy testing; confidential and caring support. BIRTHRIGHT 233 No. Pleasant Street Amherst 549-1906

TYPING: Theses, papers, Laser Quality Dot Matrix Camera-Ready Art Posters, Flyers 549-0006

TRAVEL

Bahama Cruise $99 per person 5 day/4 night hotel. Plan now for your break. Very limited offer. Call now 1-800-621-0572

RUSSIA AND THE UKRAINE! Jan. 6-20, 1992: Moscow, Leningrad, Kiev plus Helsinki, Finland. $2045 complete from New York. Call Prof. Jones, 253-7827, evenings after 7:00

TRAVEL FREE! Campus representatives wanted to earn interssession and spring break trips. 256-8254

TYPING

TYPING PROS: $2.50 per page includes spellcheck. Call 549-8001

WANTED

WANTED- To buy classical guitar Call Gita 546-4185

Sports

Men's soccer tied up by 8th-ranked Brown, 0-0

Gruber dazzles but Minutemen can't score

Collegian photo by Carrie Wyeth

Massachusetts Randy Jacobs battles for a loose ball during yesterdays scoreless tie with Brown. The Minutemen are now 4-1-3 on the season.

By TED KOTTLER
Collegian Correspondent

The players of the University of Massachusetts and Brown University men's soccer teams are probably saying something like, "all that hard work for nothing." Both teams went home last night battered and bruised but with only a 0-0 tie to show for their efforts.

However, the match featured many scoring opportunities for each side, (UMass took 17 shots and Brown took 19.) But neither team could score, largely due to the brilliant goaltending of UMass' Jon Gruber and Brown's Dan O'Connell.

In the first half, Brown outshot UMass, 8-5, but the Minutemen had better scoring opportunities, none better than Ray Cunha's. Cunha approached the net unopposed from the right side (though he was fervently trailed by a Brown defender) and released a ground shot that O'Connell dove for and just got his hand on.

In the second half, UMass outshot Brown, 9-7, and once again the Minutemen had some scoring chances that were almost too good to believe.

Almost exactly halfway through the half, UMass' Randy Jacobs got a great ball right in the slot and was coming hard at O'Connell. He, too, was closely followed by a Brown defender, and his swift ground shot was foiled by the keen goaltender.

But a goaltending clinic on Lower Boyden would not be complete without a demonstration by Gruber. He played the lead role in the greatest play of the match, with about 18 minutes remaining in the second half.

Brown took a corner kick from Gruber's left, and it was well-placed, directly in front of the net. A Brown player fielded it only a few feet from the net, and fired a shot that Gruber somehow managed to save.

But that was only the beginning. Gruber couldn't hold on to the shot, and he spit out a rebound that was again taken by a Brown player and again shot from point-blank range. Guess what happened: Gruber saved it. But once again he couldn't trap it, and Brown picked up the rebound and managed to fire two more shots. Gruber got help from fullback Darrin Stone and midfielder Brett Anthony who deflected the shots respectfully, and the end result of this amazing play was a hand ball against Brown.

Brown began to accelerate its offense beginning with this play, and it also tightened its defense to prevent any further threats from UMass, except one.

In the final seconds of regulation, UMass took a corner kick from O'Connell's left. The ball bounced around a bit and then wound up with midfielder Shawn Bleau, who stood on O'Connell's right. Bleau was not directly facing the net, so he had to turn and shoot at the same time. His shot was a beauty which seemed destined for the net's top right corner. Instead, it brushed the crossbar and rolled out of bounds.

Simon steps up to lead men's cross country

By KEITH BENNETT
Collegian Staff

Consistency when training and the combination of natural talent and a strong work ethic has been the key to University of Massachusetts junior Matt Simon's success as a runner.

This fall, Simon has been forced to step forward from his place as the team's fifth or sixth runner and assume a leadership role on the UMass men's cross country team.

Simon, who ran a 4:14 mile in track as a senior at Lexington High School, has had success on the track in college as well. During his sophomore year, he qualified for every event in the New England Track Championships from the 1,000-meters up to the 10,000-meters. He capped his track season by taking third place in the 3,000-meter steeplechase at the New Englands last Spring.

Despite his success in collegiate track, he has never been the dominant runner on the cross country team, that is until this year. UMass graduated its top four runners from last year's harrier squad and Simon has moved up as the team's top runner.

"Cross country has always been a little bit more difficult for me," Simon said. "I've always been more of a track-oriented runner. In high school it wasn't as hard because it was only three miles. The big problem coming to college is that it was five [miles] instead of three. There's no reason why I can't be equally as good a cross country runner as I am at track, but it's always been a little more difficult."

UMass coach Ken O'Brien also believes Simon can be successful in cross country as he is on the track.

"It's easy for me to assess Matt," O'Brien said. "When he was a freshman, he took our best distance runner and ran him into the ground on 10-mile road runs. He then took our best half-miler and ran him into the ground on track workouts.

"So, with those two things in mind, there's no reason why he shouldn't be able to run five miles in cross country very, very well. There's no doubt in my mind that he could be as good a cross country runner as a track runner."

In the team's first three meets this season, Simon has proved to be the most consistent runner on the team.

O'Brien described Simon as a runner dedicated to the sport.

"He is very committed to his running," he said. "Regardless of whether it's summer time or bad weather, he gets his training runs in so that he'll be prepared in terms of his goals."

Simon supports his coach's description of his dedication. He admits to having a string of 111 days last spring where he didn't miss a day of running. He estimates that he has missed only 5 or 6 days of running since last November.

Collegian photo by Carrie Wyeth

Matt Simon

"I enjoy running just for running's sake, more than I did in high school," Simon said. "I think I'll probably run as long as I can. I'm not sure how much racing I'll do when I graduate, but I think I'll keep running."

Athough he does have specific goals for the upcoming track season, he is concentrating on cross country for now.

"I'd like to have a good cross country season first, because I haven't really done that yet in college," he said.

A good season, according to Simon, would include a finish among the top 10 runners at the Atlantic 10 Conference Championships Oct. 26, a top 30 finish at the New England Championships the next week, and a top 60 or 70 finish at the IC4A Championships Nov. 16, where runners from nearly 100 schools from the East Coast will compete.

O'Brien believes that Simon is close to reaching the next level of competition.

"Matt's a very intense person," he said. "He possesses great intensity and great athletic talent. I think the thing that's lacking right now is; his intensity is there, but he's not daring enough, he doesn't allow himself to dream enough. He's got to be more flamboyant and creative. He's just go to let go.

"I use the term `athletically reckless' You've got to dare to do something that you've never really thought of before or you've thought of it but you haven't allowed yourself to try it. Once he can shake that conservativeness in his approach, then he's got enough talent, and his work ethic has been good enough so that he'll reach those accomplishments. He just needs to be daring and then we'll see a new person."

Simon said he is working on shaking his conservativeness.

"That's what I'm focusing on now," he said. "I've been trying to go out like a mad man. I just concentrate on going out hard, I have to drop at three miles, the next race I'll go four. I'm just trying to go further each race at a crazy pace."

Week five: favorites look best

Roy says Cowboys should roll over Green Bay

The drought is over! Last Sunday the Dallas Cowboys ended their six game losing streak against the New York Giants. By winning 21-16 the Cowboys not only played their best game of the season but also beat the Giants for the first time since 1987.

Roy Alexander

The Giants took the lead 16-14 with just under six minutes to go in the fourth quarter thanks to, guess what? Yes, another gift from the referees, how shocking. Giant quarterback Jeff Hostetler threw a 19-yard touchdown pass to receiver Stephen Baker. Instant replays clearly, at least to me, showed that that the ball hit the turf just before Baker caught the ball. Even Baker looked surprised when it was ruled a touchdown.

Dallas quarterback Troy Aikman marched the Cowboys all the way down the field and took a 21-16 lead on a 23-yard touchdown pass to receiver Michael Irvin.

But Jeff Hostetler was not finished just yet. The Giants quickly and easily moved deep into Dallas territory by feasting on the slumping Isaac Holt. The Giants had burned the Dallas cornerback all day, but they went to the well one to many times when Holt intercepted the ball in the end zone with over a minute to play.

Don't blame this loss or any other on Hostetler any more. Hostetler threw for 383 yards against the Cowboys and his only mistake was listening to coach Handley's last play call. With a minute and a half to play with the ball inside the Dallas 30-yard line, why must the Giants go for it all on one play?

It is time for all of those Johnny-come-lately Giant fans who have been whining and begging for the return of Phil Simms to wake up and smell the coffee. The Giants are not one of the top teams in the league this year. The only reason they won the Super Bowl last year was because they had the best coach in football.

Not only do they have a new quarterback, but they have a new full time running back, a new tight end and a new offensive coordinator. With the careers of O.J. Anderson and Mark Bavaro coming to a close, the Giants' offense is in

CONTINUED ON PAGE 11

SPORTS NOTICE

MIDNIGHT MADNESS

Midnight Madness will be October 14 at 10 p.m. to 12:30 a.m. There will be a three-on-three tournament for UMass students, and a foul shooting contest for both men and women. Students can sign up at the Campus Concourse all week from 9 a.m. - 3 p.m. In order to participate, they must sign up.

The elimination rounds will be held on October 9, at 7 p.m. at Curry Hicks Cage. The field will be narrowed to two men and two women. The final will be held after the three-on-three tournament during Midnight Madness.

There will be prizes and drawings to area restaurants. Grand prize is two round trip US Air tickets to Florida with Hotel accomodations.

Donations of canned food items will benefit the Western Mass Food Bank.

INTRAMURALS

Intramural Ice Hockey teams are still being accepted—bring your completed forms to the Intramural Office, room 215 Boyden or call 545-2693/0022 for further details.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THE LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND

VOLUME CI ISSUE 23 FRIDAY, OCTOBER 4, 1991

Mullins contractors fined, safety violations cited

Collegian photo by Matt Kahn

Sign outside Mullins Arena construction site.

By JASON GEORGE and
MARC ELLIOTT
Collegian Staff

The contractors building the University of Massachusetts Mullins Area were fined $62,325 this summer by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration for federal health and safety violations.

The general contractor for the $44 million recreational arena, Suffolk Construction of Roxbury, and eight different sub-contractors were accused of "serious" violations of the Occupational Safety and Health Act.

Suffolk Construction is the same company that accidently damaged two underground power cables Monday, cutting off electricity to almost half the University's campus.

Violations include an incomplete uninsulated terminal connectors, damaged electrical outlet boxes, a damaged scaffold base section, an unguarded pit, uninspected open trenches and unprotected trench walls.

As the general contractor for the Mullins Arena, Suffolk is responsible for the overall level and health and safety on the site. The Roxbury company was fined $25,375 for "serious" OSHA violations.

OSHA defines serious violations as presenting "a substantial probability that death or serious harm could result."

The violations were discovered when OSHA conducted a "comprehensive programmed safety inspection," between July 23 and August 5, 1991, according to Ronald E. Morin, OSHA director for Western Massachusetts.

"The message we're sending to contractors who are . . . working on this project is simple," Morin said. "Even a single serious citation reflects a potential danger to workers which must be addressed or remedied.

"[It's] better to hew to the standards and preempt hazards before they occur than to run the risk of serious injuries or death," Morin said.

Since the fines were levied, OSHA notes that many of the violations have been corrected, with $15,500 being reduced for six of the nine companies that chose to appeal the OSHA fines.

Michael Melnick, UMass project manager for the Mullins

CONTINUED ON PAGE 4

Anti-apartheid Nobel winner to visit UMass

By MICHAEL LEVY
Collegian Staff
and the Associated Press

Anti-apartheid novelist Nadine Gordimer won the 1991 Nobel Prize in Literature yesterday, a week before her Tuesday night appearance at the University of Massachusetts Student Union Ballroom.

Gordimer, 67, is the first woman to win the award in 25 years.

A White female South African, Gordimer is a member of the African National Congress. ANC officials responded to her award:

"In honoring Nadine, one of South Africa's outstanding writers, the people of the world pay tribute to all South Africans who stand for truth, human dignity and freedom."

Gordimer has written 10 novels and over 200 short stories. Some of her works have been banned by the South African government due to their political content, but all of her material is now legal in her homeland.

She refused to leave South Africa, once telling an interviewer that "to go into exile is to lose your place in the world."

Gordimer will speak at 8:15 p.m. Tuesday at the S.U.B. Upon receiving the news of Gordimer's award, campus sponsors moved the location of the lecture from Memorial Hall to the larger capacity ballroom. Her discussion is entitled "Three in a Bed: Fiction, Morals and Politics."

Gordimer was attracted to the University through the help of Stephen Clingman, associate professor of English.

Clingman has been working with Gordimer for "about 10 or 12 years." He has edited a collection of Gordimer's essays, and authored The Novels of Nadine Gordimer: History from the Inside.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 4

Herndon ruled eligible by Steering Committee

By TAMIR LIPTON
Collegian Staff

Early Thursday morning University of Massachusetts basketball forward William Herndon was ruled eligible to play basketball this season by the National Letter of Intent Steering Committee.

Herndon's reinstatement sets a precedent, according to coach John Calipari, who said there were eight similar cases to Herndon's.

Every school that belongs to the National Letter of Intent now knows about the basic penalty for athletes who transfer before the completion of their freshman year.

Herndon's appeal, which stated that he was not informed about having to sit out for two full seasons as a result of transferring to the University of Massachusetts before he completed his freshman year at the University of Richmond, is no longer an original argument.

"I don't think this will happen again," said coach John Calipari. "The argument that no one knew that the rule existed can't be used anymore."

Richmond coach Dick Tarrant said that he was happy for Herndon and that he wished him the best.

"That's great [that he got his eligibility back], I love to see kids play basketball," Tarrant said.

Tarrant also said that Herndon was granted a release the day he requested it. However, the point where Tarrant's argument differed from what UMass said all along was his statement that Herndon was informed about having to sit out two years.

Herndon said that during the meeting, the committee also question whether or not he had been informed by Richmond about having to sit out two seasons instead of one.

"I was never informed of the rule while at Richmond," Herndon said. "It's a big relief that it's over — now I can concentrate on finishing school without having to worry about an appeal."

Herndon, along with assistant coach James "Bruiser" Flint, Athletic Director Frank McInerney and Assistant Athletic Director Elaine Sortino appealed the case in front of a five-man committee in Chicago on Wednesday.

Members of the committee included Fred Jacoby, the Southwest Conference Commissioner, David Price, the Pacific-10 commissioner, Clayton Chapman, of the Eastern College Athletic Conference, Karl Benson, the commissioner of the Mid-American Conference and James Haney of the Big West.

None of the committee members could be reached for comment.

The meeting lasted approximately two hours and the deliberation carried into early yesterday morning.

"I can't stress enough the job that Frank and Elaine did," Calipari said. "They went to bat for Will and that makes me feel proud to be a part of a school that cares that much about their students.

"I feel good for Will — it's a big, big day," Calipari said.

Inside:

Page 3:
U.S. Express and Peter Pan are striving to win our favor.

Page 6:

Find out who Michael Morrissey's going to vote for in the next Presidential election.

Page 7:

Sick of Siskel and Ebert? We've got the Collegian's new HSCN movie review column!

Weather

I say partly sunny, you say mostly cloudy. Today's overall forecast: Dreary 'n' Drizzly.

Ray Charles a 'real treasure'

By JAMES MOLESWORTH
Collegian Staff

A treasure is not just some piece of jewelry which sits in a box and gets tarnished with age, while maintaining some type of monetary worth. Rather, a treasure is something which contains memories, such as an old record, your lucky coin, your sixth grade autograph book, or a baseball card. It is something you do not hide in the deep recesses of your closet, but that you prominently display. You brag of its origin, and you thirst to tell stories about what it means to you.

Ray Charles Robinson (he dropped the last name out of respect for the great boxer) is a true treasure. People love to tell stories about what he sang when they saw him in concert. His is the ability to truly use music as a socially binding force.

Last night's performance at the Fine Arts Center here on campus attests to this fact.

While the audience buzzed with anticipation over whether or not he would sing "You got the right one baby," he left

CONTINUED ON PAGE 4

Photo courtesy of University News Office

The late Professor Leonard A. Rapping
Story on page 3.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THE LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is a Registered Student Organization of the University of Massachusetts, published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000.

113 CAMPUS CENTER AMHERST, MA 01003
Phone (413) 545-3500 FAX (413) 545-1592

STAFF

Editor in Chief ..... Gayle Long
Managing Editor ..... Marc Elliott
Editorial Editor ..... Greg Sukiennik
News Editor ..... Preston P. Forman
Sports Editor ..... Tamir Lipton
Arts Editor ..... Paul DeGeorges
Photography Editor ..... Carrie Wyeth
Black Affairs Editor ..... Sondra Sutton
Women's Issues Editor ..... Jessame Hannus
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Trystan Skeigh
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Alexander Nguyen
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Madanmohan Rao
Jewish Affairs Editors ..... Felice Cohen, Debra Kriegsman
Business Manager ..... Randee Pastel
Advertising Manager ..... Dena Haselkorn
Finance Manager ..... Jeff Weiner
Circulation Manager ..... Jim Winterbottom
Subscriptions Manager ..... Stacy Rogers
Promotions Manager ..... Scott Macey
Production Manager ..... Terry Starmer
Day Graphics Manager ..... Jenn Burns

PROFESSIONAL STAFF

Business ..... Brian Harrington, Lori Black, Maureen Majerowski
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements that run on a space-available basis for the campus and local non-profit organizations. Because of space constraints, the Collegian cannot print all FYIs submitted and no announcements can be repeated.

To submit an FYI, please send a TYPED press release with all pertinent information to 113 Campus Center c/o News Editor. FYIs cannot be taken over the phone.

Friday, October 4

Lecture — Russian Graphics and Russian Culture: Historical Contexts for a Revolution in Visual Representation will be discussed by Jeffrey Brooks of Johns Hopkins University at 8:00 p.m. in Stirn Auditorium at Amherst College. Admission is free.

Lecture — "High and "Low" as One: The Art of the Vernacular, 1922-1940 by Alfred Appel, Jr. of Northwestern University at 4:00 p.m. at Amherst College in Mead, Stirn Auditorium. Free Admission.

Saturday, October 5

Special Event — A service and Shabbat Meal will be held at the Chabad House at 10:00 a.m.

Theater — New WORLD Theater presents Camp Logan at the UMass Bowker Auditorium at 8:00 p.m. Admission is $5.00, $3.00 for students and elders.

Concert — "Dinosaur Jr." with special guest Gobblehoof, sponsored by the Union Program Council at the Student Union Ballroom from 8:00 p.m. to 11:00 p.m. Admission is $8.00 for UMass students and $10.00 for all non-students.

Sunday, October 6

Book Signing — To be held by Leslea Newman, author of Sweet Dark Places at 2:00 p.m. at the Neilson Browsing Room at Smith College.

Meeting — P.O.W.E.R. will be holding an informational meeting at 7:30 p.m. in room 306 Student Union.

Film — Crossfire will be shown as part of the fimlm series on the Jews in American Popular Culture at 3:00 p.m. at South College, Seelye 10. Admission is free.

AP photo

IS EIGHT ENOUGH? — Set to make her eighth trip down the aisle this Sunday, Elizabeth Taylor stands with her fiance Larry Fortensky at a news conference in New York in September. In preparing for what one reporter called "the Super Bowl of tabloid journalism," wedding organizers are anticipating that battalions of paparazzi will launch an assault on Michael Jackson's Santa Ynez ranch, where the pop singer will give the bride away.

Shuttles cracking up

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA discovered cracks yesterday in the protective thermal layer of the wings of Discovery, the third space shuttle to be hit by the perplexing problem.

Of the five thermal seals removed for inspection, one was cracked, said NASA spokeswoman Lisa Malone. More of the 44 seals were to be inspected on NASA's most traveled spaceship.

The problem was first noticed last week on Atlantis, scheduled to fly in space in November. Eight cracked seals were discovered on Atlantis' wings.

Nine cracked seals were uncovered this week on the wings of Columbia, which is undergoing modifications at Rockwell International's shuttle assembly plant in Palmdale, California.

The reinforced carbon seals are along the edges of the shuttle wings and protect the orbiter from the intense heat of atmospheric re-entry.

Engineers still do not know how or when the cracks occurred. It appears as though the seals were damaged on the ground and not during flight, Malone said.

Technicians were expected to finish replacing the damaged seals on Atlantis with spares Friday. It is uncertain whether the work will delay Atlantis' upcoming military mission.

Good Things
Jewelry Natural Fiber Scarves
Blouses Skirts Dresses
India Print Bedspreads
Happy B'day Cards
Hawaii Posters
Earrings
Chinese Shoes
Rings
Bracelets
Chains
Crystals
Mugs
Indonesian Prints
Incense
Toys
Candles
Tie-Dye
Trade Bead Necklaces
Sweaters
Bags
Area Rugs
Skirts
Baskets
Paper Lampshades
Sale
20 to 50% off selected Clothing
THE MERCANTILE
Great Gifts & Cards
Visa / MC
Sun 12-5
Daily 10-6
Northampton-18 Center St.
Amherst-Carriage Shops

COME AND DISCOVER . . .
a world of opportunity with Ashland Chemical, a Fortune 100 leader in the sales, marketing, and technology of specialty chemical products We are pleased to host an exclusive company presentation on Oct. 9, 1991
from 7:00 to 8:30 PM
at Classroom 811 B, Campus Center
All interested students are encouraged to attend and learn more about the variety of exciting career opportunities we have for you. Casual dress is suggested.
Ashland Chemical
An Equal Opportunity Employer

Rent One of Ours
• Cars
• Trucks
• Cargo Vans
Rent by Day, Week or Month
Special Weekly and Weekend Rates
North Amherst Motors Auto & Truck Rental
79 Old Sunderland Rd.
North Amherst, MA
549-RENT
(549-7368)
Major Credit Cards Accepted
On Bus Route

Local

Nationally-known UMass prof. dies

Economist Leonard A. Rapping struck down at 58

University of Massachusetts economics professor and nationally-known economist Leonard A. Rapping, 58, of Newton, Mass., died Tuesday in Boston following a heart attack.

Born in Indianapolis, Indiana on April 16, 1934, Rapping began teaching labor and macroeconomics at the University in 1974. Before that he taught at Carnegie-Mellon University in Pittsburgh, Penn.

"Leonard Rapping possessed a wide-ranging intellect, and he cared passionately about ideas and, equally, real conditions in the world," said William G. Shepherd, chair of the economics department.

"His work was creative and had large impacts, and not just in rational expectations theory. He will be sorely missed by his colleagues," Shepherd said.

Rapping was the author of several books, including The Economic Value of the American Merchant Marine, and International Reorganization and American Economic Policy.

Rapping co-authored an article on "Real Wages, Employment and Inflation." This article laid a foundation for equilibrium business cycle theory, which has become an important part of modern macroeconomic theory.

He was also hailed by Boston Globe economics columnist David Warsh as, "(One of) the deepest minds" in the field, in a 1989 article. Rapping was also a known colleague of Leonard Silk, economist for the New York Times.

Rapping served on the board of editors for the American Ecoomics Review and The Review of Radical Political Economics. He also worked as an economist for the Rand Corporation, a Southern California think-tank, and was a consultant to a number of federal agencies.

In 1985, Rapping was named to head a study on technology and employment sponsored by the National Academy of Sciences, the National Institute of Engineering and the Institute of Medicine.

The panel spent two years investigating whether technology changed the levels and distribution of employment across occupations, social groups and regions. It also considered technology's impact on wages, labor relations and the demands for employment-based education and training.

Rapping received his bachelor's degree from the University of California at Los Angeles, and was elected to the national honor society Phi Beta Kappa in his junior year. He received his master's and doctoral degrees from the University of Chicago.

He began his career as a specialist in radical economics, later shifting to a more conservative view. He also served as a visiting professor at Notre Dame University, Brandeis University and the University of Nevada.

Dr. Rapping is survived by his wife, Judith and his children Alison and Jonathan.

—Staff Reports

Collegian photo by Carrie Wyeth

AND NOW HERE'S SOMETHING YOU'LL REALLY LIKE! — Rocky is poised to leap onto the head of the next unsuspecting pedestrian outside Melville residence hall.

BOG reopens Craft Shop

By SARAH J. BOLFING
Collegian Correspondent

The Board of Governors decided to reopen the Student Union Craft Shop with a newly revised management policy last night, following much debate.

The Craft Shop closed until a permanent full-time director could be found. The director is to be hired by the Student Activities Office.

With the passage of last night's proposal, the Craft Shop will reopen in approximately three weeks.

In addition, both graduate and undergraduate students will be hired and approximately $13-18,000 will be saved annually. Finally, the BOG committees will now oversee all management, financial and budgetary matters regarding the Craft Shop.

The BOG's role is to oversee events taking place in the Campus Center and Student Union, including the Craft Shop.

Earlier, a separate proposal concerning the Craft Shop was debated and later defeated by a deciding vote from BOG Chair Micah Levy.

"We have the chance to give grad students the

CONTINUED ON PAGE 4

Buses race for student fares

By JACQUELINE SAVINON
Collegian Correspondent

Are you tired of delays, mobs and high prices when traveling in and out of Amherst?

If so, the U.S. Express bus company has vowed to "provide quality service at the right price," according to its president.

Before, students had no alternative but to bus with Peter Pan. For the past two weeks, U.S. Express has been offering a special deal: a free return ticket to UMass on Sunday with the purchase of a ticket to Boston on Friday.

According to U.S. Express President John Herlihy, the company plans to present students with even more incentives in the future, including giving away restaurant discounts in Boston to students who choose U.S. Express.

A Market Student Research poll commissioned by U.S. Express revealed that 80 percent of students would try an alternative if it was available. After students complained about high prices and express buses taking the scenic route, U.S. Express decided to start service in Amherst.

In November, Herlihy plans to conduct another survey to recognize further student needs. For one thing, students are already asking for service to Hartford and New York City.

Peter Pan has provided service into and out of Amherst for the past 35 years. Over this period, they have become known for frequent hourly departures on a daily basis and being a reliable mainstay of traveling students.

Since they are the larger bus company, Peter Pan can travel to a wider area of the Northeast — not only to Boston. Yet, students have traditionally griped about the five- to six-hour trips to New York and rush-hour mob scenes.

During the application to the Public Utilities Board for licensing a new bus company in the area, Herlihy asked the Peter Pan President if he ever conducted a student survey.

"He said they knew what was best for their customers," Herlihy said.

Peter A. Picknelly, Peter Pan president, said "with our state of the art computers we survey the peak times of student travel providing unlimited seating."

Picknelly criticized U.S. Express as "being a dangerous operation." Picknelly said students are abandoned in front of the Essex Hotel in Boston, "which is not the very best hotel.

"We have a state of the art bus station, [while] they have no shelter for students," said Picknelly.

UMass student Laura Barbieri said "the [U.S. Express] bus left us at the corner of Essex and the train station was less than 50 yards away."

A UMass student traveler said, "U.S. Express is on time, their bus drivers are a lot friendlier and showed the Dick Tracy movie along the ride." U.S. Express is equipped with TV monitors.

"U.S. Express is more comfortable, the seats are bigger," said Jimmy Loulourgas, another UMass student.

As time goes on, U.S. Express hopes to expand their

CONTINUED ON PAGE 5

False alarms on increase

JOSEPH REINERT
Collegian Correspondent

Fire alarms at the University of Massachusetts are up 100 percent from last year, despite the fact that actual fire activity has not increased, said a University fire prevention official.

During the 1991 fiscal year at UMass there was over $200,000 worth of damage done to campus property due to fire.

Next week, students will have the opportunity to be educated about these and other related trends during National Fire Prevention Week.

From October 6 to 12, the National Fire Protection Association and UMass' Division of Environmental Health and Safety will be sponsoring a week of educational and other activities about the dangers of fire.

Fire Prevention Week was initiated in 1922 by president Warren G. Harding as a response to the devastating Great Chicago Fire.

David Beaudin, associate fire prevention officer, said that next week will be an opportunity for students to get general information about fire prevention and to sign up for training programs.

"We will have information booths set up in the Campus Center Concourse, Monday to Friday, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m," Beaudin said. "There will also be booths set up in the four dining halls, Monday to Thursday during the dinner hours. If students have questions or want to find about training programs, like how to use a fire extinguisher, this is a good time."

There are other activities planned, Beaudin said.

"We will be making some visits to the three daycare centers on campus to get the children used to firefighters," he said. "And the town fire station in Amherst Center will be holding an open house on October 12 from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m."

Beaudin pointed out that the activities planned for next week are in addition to the usual educational services the agency supplies.

"At the beginning of every year, we run training programs for all the new RAs," he said. "We will also do demonstrations and fire-prevention training for anyone who wants it throughout the school year. And we will be setting up informational booths in each residence hall on different nights during the year.

"The fire prevention agency, operating 24 hours a day and 7 days a week, is also responsible for the investigation of fires and the inspection and upkeep of fire prevention devices on campus like alarms, sprinklers, and fire hydrants.

In addition, the agency runs training programs for school employees, especially hotel workers and building custodians, who work around the clock in area where the possible human loss is greatest.

Beaudin said most residence hall fires are due to carelessness.

"The leading causes of residence hall fires are people not being careful with lit candles and smoldering cigarettes that end up in the trash," he said. "A very small percentage of campus fires are of a suspicious nature."

He said fires at non-resident halls, like the one last year at Clark International

CONTINUED ON PAGE 5

False alarms no joke

Pranks exact financial, physical costs

By DAVID MASSEY
Collegian Staff

Every week at the University of Massachusetts someone maliciously pulls a fire alarm, unknowingly sparking immediate responses from the UMass Police, Amherst Fire Department, the Physical Plant and UMass fire inspectors as they rush to the scene.

"I get upset," said Amherst Fire Department Chief Victor Zumbruski. "It's more than a nuisance call, it's a federal offense."

Zumbruski says when they respond to a fire alarm at UMass, it depletes the town's fire and ambulance resources for 15-20 minutes.

According to Environmental Health and Safety figures, there were 118 malicious activations of false alarms last year, almost double that of the previous year.

Southwest Residential area had 90 last year, Central had 18, Northeast had one and both Orchard Hill and Sylvan had none.

Keith Hoyle, UMass senior fire prevention officer, is mainly concerned with the repeated effect of false fire alarms on residents.

"What concerns me the most is that students become apathetic after the third or fourth fire alarm and don't move," Hoyle said.

He pointed to an example in 1977 in John Quincy Adams in Southwest. A malicious false fire alarm was pulled at 2 a.m. and three hours later, firefighters carried nine students out of the building who were overcome by smoke from an actual fire.

"I don't think [the people who pull alarms] realize the implications of what they're doing," Hoyle said.

"They are desensitizing students to the real meaning of a fire alarm," Hoyle said.

Hoyle also said there are many secondary dangers of false fire alarms.

Each year, several students are injured from sprains or falls from quickly evacuating the residence halls. In addition, speeding firetrucks racing to an alarm pose a real hazard to traffic. Hoyle said nationwide last year, 29 firefighters were killed in traffic accidents.

Malicious fire alarms seriously deplete the area's fire and safety resources, Hoyle said. The town of Amherst has only six full-time firefighters who also run the town's ambulance service.

When fire crews respond to a call that is often false, Amherst and some surrounding communities are without fire and ambulance service for 15 to 20 minutes.

"They are tying up more resources for what — a prank," said Hoyle.

He referred to an incident last semester where crews who were respond-

CONTINUED ON PAGE 5

■ fine

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

arena, told the Daily Hampshire Gazette that OSHA is the strictest of the many inspectors on the site. He said three UMass engineers are on the site daily, the university's health and hazard department inspects it bi-weekly, a state building inspector visits once or twice a month and an insurance company visits monthly.

A Suffolk Construction hydraulic power shovel cut two of four underground electrical cables at the Mullins site Monday leaving parts of the campus without electricity for up to four hours.

Each of the cables carried 13,800 volts of power, with one of the four running directly on to campus, Director of Physical Plant Engineering Hermine Randall said.

Suffolk has a history of electrical accidents. A Suffolk construction crew accidently severed an underground cable in West Springfield in June of 1990, plunging more than 40 stores in the Riverdale Street shopping center into darkness for almost three hours.

Less than a month later, a cement wall the size of a football field at the Riverdale Street site collapsed. While no one was hurt when the 36-by-395 wall was toppled by approximately 30 mph winds, 14 construction workers where working at the site when the accident occurred.

The Fall River firm of Bell Masonry, a Suffolk subcontractor, built the wall.

Suffolk filed an appeal to OSHA, getting its fine reduced to $13,425.

■ Nobel

Photo courtesy of the AP News Library
Nadine Gordimer

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

"Over 40 years, her work has given what I call an inner history of South African life," said Clingman, also from South Africa.

"For many years she has been considering issues of what it means to be a writer in South Africa — questions of political commitments, moral commitments and artistic commitments."

Gordimer began writing at the age of 9, and had her first short story published six years later. At 27, her first book, Face to Face, was published.

"She came to politics through being a writer," Clingman said. "She has a commitment to the craft of writing and social justice in South Africa."

Her most recent novel, published in 1990, is My Son's Story, about a married Black man who falls in love with a fellow activist, a White woman.

The Swedish Academy, which awarded the prize worth about $1 million, singled out My Son's Story for praise, saying, "The relationship of the lovers is described with great tenderness. At the same time, the unyielding political reality constantly intrudes.

■ concert

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

them assured that he is not losing sight of the music which has cemented him a place in the hearts of all those who have heard him. Who else these days (with as much money as Mr. Charles has) can sing "Busted", and still mean it? Probably no one, other than perhaps B. B. King.

His orchestra is tight, simple, and effective. They provide the voicings that give Ray Charles the vehicle he needs to soar through some of the most sincere 'blues' that one gets the opportunity to hear. His Raeletts (note: not the ones from the commercial) round out the sound with the boisterously gospel derived call and responsorial singing that is the signature of African-American music.

One of the most sincerest indicators of a musician's worth is a musician's ability to please an audience containing a full range of ages. Neither young nor old can resist the infectious rhythms that Ray Charles lays down. You can dance, or just tap your feet, sing-a-long, or reminisce. Whatever it is you choose to do (or whatever it is that Ray Charles makes you do), you do it without question. It happens. It happened last night.

Yes he sang "Georgia", and it sounded better than ever. His audience asides still sparkle with wit and honesty. He takes songs you never thought you could hear in a new light, like "Oh, What A Beautiful Morning", and he illuminates them with a full moon of glorious brilliance — the kind that you can stare into without hurting your eyes.

Like a true treasure, Ray Charles has not lost his lustre because of his material gain. His voice, energy, and smile still ring true. He is like that baseball card of your favorite player that you would never trade or sell, no matter what you would get in return for it. He is irrepressible in the mind's eye of his audience, and of himself.

■ BOG

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

opportunity of a lifetime, let's use it responsibly," Levy said.

Gov. Paul McGonnigal, who put up the motions, said he did considerable research into the matters facing the Craft Shop and its problems.

"Just because the SAO has undergone a search for the position, does not mean there is good sense behind [the hiring of students]," he said. "We have an opportunity to 'institute' a greater student model."

The Board members continually expressed their feelings on the importance of the Craft Shop for the students. This included Campus Center Director Bill Harris, who noted that students especially enjoy and utilize the Shop throughout the cold season. Harris said he thought it was important that student's needs were met.

When the meeting was adjourned, McGonnigal said, "I'm pleased to see that students have realized they have a responsibility towards other students; this ideal is embodied in the actions of the Board of Governors of 1991-92."

Live Jazz by Live
REVOLUTIONARY MUSIC ENSEMBLE
TACO BAR Make Your Own Taco .59¢
BROASTED HOT WINGS by 1/2 Lb. $2.50 Lb.
4 – 8 p.m.
the hatch
GROUND FLOOR STUDENT UNION

CRYSTAL SPRINGS PIZZERIA AND LOUNGE
Home of the Buy One Pizza and Get One FREE!!!
Tuesday nights are All You Can Eat pizza night for just $3.95
"OPEN MIC" NIGHT EVERY WEDNESDAY NIGHT
Located: CRYSTAL SPRINGS PLAZA • Belchertown • 323-9636

We've Got 'em
• Black
• Brown
• Green
• Red
ZANNA
Women's Shoes, Clothing & Accessories
Amherst 413.253.2563 Brattleboro 802.254.4421

Benefit reduction plan rejected

BOSTON (AP) — A proposal to reduce health care benefits for state employees to offset a legislative refusal to increase their premium contributions has been rejected by the Group Insurance Commission.

The GIC, which oversees insurance for state employees, rejected the Weld administration's proposals on an 8-3 vote.

Gov. William F. Weld says the program, which includes current and retired state employees and their families, will have a $45 million deficit this year because the Legislature refused to raise the employees' share of costs from 10 percent to 25 percent.

Dominic Slowey, a financial spokesman for Weld, said "We don't control the board politically. It's incumbent on them to live within their appropriation.

"It is also incumbent on the Legislature to appropriate the correct amount of money for the program," he said.

Approximately 255,000 residents are provided medical coverage through the Group Insurance system.

Delores Mitchell, executive director of the commission, said Wednesday the plan it rejected would have saved $14 million.

The commission did raise the $3 fee for prescriptions to $5 for generic drugs and $10 for those with brand names.

Those increases and the start of a pharmacy-preferred provider plan are expected to save $2.1 million this fiscal year.

The commission rejected the major proposal after House Speaker Charles F. Flaherty, D-Cambridge, and labor groups protested the proposed increases.

Ms. Mitchell said both commission members appointed by Weld and one appointed by former Gov. Michael S. Dukakis supported the proposed increases.

But the three representatives of organized labor, one representing retired employees and the other members opposed it, she said.

A letter from Flaherty that was hand-delivered shortly before the commission was to vote said "any reduction in benefits for employees, retirees and their families is unnecessary."

Flaherty said the House made it clear it does not want premiums increased or benefits cut.

"In the event funds are inadequate, supplemental funds will be appropriated as has been customarily done in the past," he said.

■ alarms

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

ing to a false fire alarm in Kennedy were delayed by 10 minutes in responding to an actual fire in a lumberyard.

In addition, Hoyle estimated that responding to fire alarm costs the University and town $600 to $800 per call.

Still, he says, "I'd rather see a false alarm than a fire."

By maliciously pulling a false alarm, offenders could receive a fine of up to $500 or up to one year in jail. Housing Services even offers a $500 reward for information leading to the conviction of false alarm perpetrators.

Some fire alarms do spray a red dye on the person's hand who pulls the alarm, O'Connell said, but still "it's very hard to catch people."

■ buses

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

service. Buses will run to the other campuses in the area and provide more frequent scheduling. Currently service only runs on Friday and Sunday expresses to and from Boston.

Herlihy said U.S. Express has started a "two to three month promotional campaign."

"The first issue is awareness: people don't realize we've started service. The second is quality," said Herlihy.

He said he wants to "provide first class quality at lower prices. After students try U.S. Express they won't leave."

■ prevention

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

House, are often electrical in nature.

The Fire Prevention program at UMass is an on-campus agency, but works closely with Amherst's Fire and Police Department. Beaudin said the agency will also be running first-time educational programs with UMass' Greek organizations, which are technically off-campus houses.

For any information about the upcoming Fire Prevention or fire prevention in general, call 545-2682 or go to room N414 in Morrill Science Center.

Dr. Sharon Kipetz
Dean of Students
and
The Staff of the Dean of Students Office
Cordially invites members of the University community to the Dean of Students Office
OPEN HOUSE
Friday, October 4, 1991
10:00a.m. to 1:00p.m.
Room 227 Whitmore Building

BUNGEE-Mania
Thrill: to experience or cause to experience sudden intense excitement, joy fear, etc.
For the thrill of your life CALL US!!!
1 – 800 – 9
4 JUMPS
CAGE THE RAGE!!!

MIKE'S WESTVIEW CAFE
•DRINK SPECIAL• Milwaukees Best $3.95 Pitcher
FRIDAY'S SMORG MENU
ROAST BEEF
CHICKEN TERIYAKI
CHICKEN & BROCCOLI
SCALLOPS & RICE
VEAL PARM
SWEDISH MEATBALLS
BAKED HAM
MAC SALAD
ROAST POT
TOSSED SALAD
All for $2
5:00pm-7:00pm
•DRINK SPECIAL• Mike's Pink'e $1.50
•DRINK SPECIAL• Busch $4.50 Pitcher

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions on this page are those of the individual writer or cartoonist, and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian or the University unless otherwise noted.

Fundamentalist religions deny changes in social mores

Separation of church and state is a noble idea, essential to a true democracy and a just society, but in the real world it has yet to be realized, much to the detriment of women, gays, lesbians, bisexuals, and people of color.

Historically, the story of Cain and Abel was used by Southern bigots to justify slavery — they argued that dark-skinned people were part of an inferior race, and they pounded on the Bible to emphasize their point.

Today, although great gains have been made in the legal battle against racism, any conscious being living in this country knows that prejudice still remains in the hearts and minds of many Whites.

I remember visiting a town in my Midwestern Bible Belt state a few years ago and being absolutely shocked by the segregation I witnessed and heard about there. Despite state and federal laws, Blacks still lived in a separate ghetto, they weren't welcome in some restaurants, and the general community consensus was that this was the way it should be. The year was 1982.

Women have been struggling for equality for over a century, and perhaps the apex of our current struggles occurred around the ERA in the 1970s. . . now many young women tell me the battle is over, and we have equal rights, and I wonder — do they read the newspaper? Are they aware that Christian sexists are gathering in huge numbers in states across the Union, particularly my own home state, to try to rob women of the control we thought we had finally won over our own bodies?

For a number of centuries now, Christians have used this wondrous tome of irrefutable truth known as the Bible to justify the unrelenting persecution of homosexuals. Because at some point in some society long since dead, someone wrote something that centuries later someone else translated to mean what they thought, according to their innate assumptions, meant that "homosexuals are unnatural" and therefore, unacceptable to God.

Trystan Skeigh

. It never ceases to amaze me how, where Christian and Catholic fundamentalism begins, common sense ends.

Surely any thinking being, not under the heavy thumb of dogma and the fear of ostracization, condemnation, or excommunication, can see that timeless spiritual truths are a completely different animal than social mores (i.e. widespread social opinion), which dramatically changes with time and place.

And to deny an examination of social contexts to those trying to understand the authors lucky enough to be included in the pared-down and polished tome (Oh yes, folks — it used to be a lot thicker) we call the Bible seems ludicrous. How can anyone possibly defend Paul's vitriolic attacks on women and gays as inspired spiritual truths without stopping to check whether or not Paul's education, societal and personal life experience could have been responsible for those views instead? (And I contend they definitely were!)

How is it that once a work is chosen to be included in the anthology we call the Bible, all critical thinking about it is supposed to stop?

The danger within religious fundamentalism is that it teaches people to stop thinking and blindly follow. History is littered with disastrous consequences resulting from this dynamic, including Nazi Germany, Rev. Jim Jones and his fatal purple Kool-Aid communion, witch hunts, inquisitions, even war itself. . .

If I ever raise children, the one message I hope I can give them is this: THINK FOR YOURSELVES, AND FOLLOW YOUR OWN HEART!

Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. dreamed of a time when all human beings could sit at a table of fellowship together — I believe that his vision, one of unconditional love and acceptance of difference, describes a truly advanced spiritual civilization.

It seems highly ironic to me that organized religion seems to be this society's biggest block to attaining Dr. King's dream of loving inclusively.

Trystan Skeigh is a Collegian columnist

Bush clinched re-election

While the Democratic Party was out roaming the streets, looking to find a feasible presidential candidate, President George Bush clinched re-election last week with his proposal to cut nuclear weapons drastically. There is simply nothing more for the man to do overseas. Bush has proven himself to be a capable president in the area of foreign affairs, but many people aren't satisfied.

The president has many detractors, especially at this fine campus. Just go into Food for Thought Books sometime, and you'll easily find anti-Bush propaganda for the whole family.

Michael Morrissey

The reason so many of these liberals dislike Bush is that while he has done much to help out the plight of the Eastern European citizen, he has not given middle-class America a bigger piece of the pie. "No more Bush," these liberals scream.

The sad truth is that Americans, in general, are too small-minded and nationalistic to realize that Bush has pulled off yet another great foreign policy coup. They sit around, whining, "Do something for us," forgetting that the last president who tried to push an aggressive domestic policy let US citizens overseas remain as hostages, and killed more by a lame-ass rescue attempt that ended in a helicopter crash. It took President Reagan to save Carter's ass and bring the hostages home.

In fact, if I remember correctly, Carter's energy policy was to let Americans with odd-numbered license plates purchase gasoline on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, with even plates buying on Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays. (Or was it the other way around?) What a guy! Keep in mind when you vote next November, folks, that he was the Donkey Party's last president.

Reviewing Bush's proposal of last week just makes it seem even better. For you anti-nuclear people, you'll be happy to know that nuclear-armed U.S. bombers will no longer be armed and on constant alert.

For the anti-defense people, just the news that Bush is proposing deep cuts is satisfying. The proposal of reducing and eventually eliminating all short-range nuclear warheads, taking cruise missiles off warships and submarines, and canceling the controversial MX Peacekeeper missiles signify a willingness of the U.S. to become more responsible.

Bush reached out to the Soviets by asking them to cut their weapons also. As you may have heard, they have already agreed in principle, as have France and England, to cut nuclear weapons. They have responded to Bush's challenge courageously, and a citizen must be encouraged by this. Time and time again, the President has made strides overseas.

The question that you will ask is, "Does it really matter?" After all, we have homeless, poor, and elderly who aren't cared for properly. This is a problem in the United States, one that Bush hasn't been able to solve. It is for this reason that Bush was named "Man of the Year" by Time magazine last year.

A capable foreign diplomat, Bush has lacked a strong domestic agenda. He has only succeeded in making himself the "Vacation President" at home. On the other hand, few Democrats have shown enough guts to announce themselves as candidates. We can look forward to another four years of capable leadership.

Bush has worked capably with the United Nations, he has extended his hand in friendship to both Mikhail Gorbachev and Boris Yeltsin, and he has successfully led a military coalition through the Gulf War. The president has also seen the release of Western hostages, and has professed hope for a "New World order." Some say it's not enough, but for re-election, I know it is.

Michael Morrissey is a Collegian columnist

Article covering cannabis reform rally trivialized a serious issue

"Watered-down reefer rally struggles on" (Collegian, Sept. 25) was a fitting headline for last Thursday's watered-down article concerning the hemp rally of the day before. The frivolity with which the Collegian reported the day's activities and the level of misinformation presented was disastrous.

Cannabis reform is a weighty issue with ties into civil rights, environmental and economic concerns. A cooperation between the Cannabis Action Network (a Kentucky-based national effort) and the UMass Cannabis Reform Coalition succeeded in bringing speakers and information about the topic to the Student Union steps on September 25. In spite of the weather, many stopped to talk.

In two words the article trivialized the entire event with a pun. A disinterested tone and countless errors both in grammar and journalism reflected badly not only on the Collegian, but also on the groups involved. Sarah Bolfing seemed intent on telling everyone that nothing important happened.

Ms. Bolfing also seemed to convey a very negative image of the groups by misrepresenting their intents; she concentrated on the recreational use of cannabis rather than its many other purposes. The tunnel-vision is most evident in her interview of CAN spokesperson Kevin Aplin. In what could only have been a calculated effort, she attempted to lead Aplin astray, down the "garden path," so to speak, by repeatedly pumping him for misleading information.

Aplin spoke to Ms. Bolfing for approximately 10 minutes about cannabis, giving much information about its uses as a source of fuel, paper, textiles and food. None of this information was relayed in her article. Finally, Aplin conceded to comment briefly about recreational usage. This statement was the only one printed.

It is this prejudiced treatment that poses the greatest obstacle to cannabis reformation. The social stereotype of the "pot-head" does untold damage to the cannabis movement. Ms. Bolfing even went so far as to apply this stereotype to Elvy Mussika, a much-respected speaker and speaker at the rally. In the article, Mussika was immediately portrayed as a serious "pot-head." Emphasis was drawn to the extent of her medicinal use and the fact that she pursues the right to grow her own "more potent stuff."

UMACRC is a newly-formed group on campus. We are recognized by the Student Government Association and pending Student Activities Office approval, soon will be a registered Student Organization on campus. Bad publicity at any time is harmful to our cause. Contrary to popular opinion, not everyone who supports cannabis reform smokes marijuana. Nor is every cannabis smoker a "pot-head." We urge the Collegian to take us seriously, and ask them to be more careful about reviewing our events in the future.

If you are interested in further information about our cause, feel free to contact any of our members. They will be glad to educate you on the issue.

Kai A. Price
UMACRC

Editor's note: three other members of UMACRC signed this letter

Jason MacDonald a year later

I find myself thinking about Jason MacDonald. I wonder where he is and if anything nasty happened to his persecutors. A month into the semester, no one has mentioned his name. That bothers me, because I think he was one of the few genuine victims we've had on this campus, where being victimized is fashionable and sought after by so many.

For those who are new here or have forgotten, Jason came to UMass last fall, a freshman full of enthusiasm and hope. He decided that here, where diversity and tolerance are so highly valued, he would stand up his beliefs. Active in the LBGA and Queer Nation, he was quoted in these pages and photographed.

But the Happy Valley wasn't kind to Jason. An act of meanness violating his rights jeopardized his ability to study, protest, party or just walk around campus. Was he beat up by drunken, drooling frat boys? No. Death-threatened and harassed into paranoid lunacy? Ignored by professors and administration? No. He was outed to his parents by his LBGA pals. I'm not sure why. Unnamed sources gave ambiguous reasons. The bottom line is that his parents, or maybe just Mr. MacDonald, didn't understand his activities. The last I heard, they probably weren't going to pay for his education. I suppose no one cares.

That Jason was discriminated against by the very people who whine daily about homophobia and discrimination elevated him to martyr status in my mind. So Jason, if you're here, say something. I'd like to buy you a drink. If you're not, I wish you luck. The mediocrity and pettiness of an entrenched group of assholes screwed up your life. And to these assholes, I say only this: by demonstrating your lack of integrity and moral bankruptcy, you will drive potential allies away in what is at first a slow trickle, but what will become a torrent.

Chris J. Petropoulos
Orchard Hill

Arts & Living

Hollywood box-office hopes rest on new films

By JON LUPO
Collegian Correspondent

Hollywood is pulling out all the stops this fall and Christmas, hoping to take your seven dollars to add to the sagging box office. This year, Tinseltown has covered all the bases. Look for the usual Oscar hopefuls, screwball comedies, earnest dramas, and a few remakes.

Both Disney and Universal are coming out with new animated features. Disney has Beauty and the Beast, created by the team who did such a good job on The Little Mermaid. Disney's competition is an animated sequel, Universal's An American Tail: Fievel Goes West. This one's produced by Steven Spielberg's Amblin Entertainment. Speaking of Spielberg, he has his own hands full with Dustin Hoffman as Captain Hook, Julia Roberts as Tinkerbell, and Robin Williams as a grown up Peter Pan in the $50 million fantasy, Hook.

John Hughes, "Mr. Home Alone", has two new features this fall. Macaulay Culkin stars with Jamie Lee Curtis in My Girl. Kelly Lynch and James Belushi headline Hughes' Curly Sue. Speaking of comedy, check out Oscar winner Joe Pesci as The Super, about a slumlord who is sentenced to live in one of his own tenements. Matthew Broderick does the fish out of water thing in Welcome to the Buzzsaw. Da-da-da-dum-dum. . . it's The Addams Family starring Angelica Huston and Raul Julia. There are two new black comedies out. One is Go Natalie, starring Joseph Philips as a real estate man who is smitten with Natalie and decides that he must have her. They're back. . . Kid N' Play reteam for a P.J. party on campus in House Party 2.

Danny Devito has two new movies coming soon. The first co-stars Gregory Peck in Norman Jewison's Other People's Money, and the other is a drama entitled Jack the Bear. River Phoenix also has a double-header this season. First up is the comedy, Dogfight, about a marine who makes a bet to bed the ugliest girl he can find. Second is the very serious My Own Private Idaho, a drama starring Phoenix and Keanu Reeves as homosexual male prostitutes. 'Idaho' was directed by Gus Van Sant, the man who brought us Drugstore Cowboy. The flip side of that is Whore, a gritty drama starring Theresa Russel, that is definitely not Pretty Woman.

Christmas is traditionally the best time to release movies wanting Oscar consideration. This year is no different. Among those hoping to grab the award is the five-time nominee Glenn Close as an opera singer in the comedy Meeting Venus. Other contenders include Barbra Streisand and Nick Nolte in The Prince of Tides, a heavy drama about suicide. Look for a period drama in Madame Bovary; all about that notorious social climber who gets her due. Bette Midler leaves Disney and stars with James Caan in a story about five decades of the USO in For The Boys. Richard Gere and director Akira Kurosawa (!) team up for Rhapsody in August. Gere is a Japanese American (!!) who comes to Nagasaki to convince his aunt to visit Gere's wealthy brother. Michael Douglas and Melanie Griffith star in a Nazi adventure tale called Shining Through. A hot couple indeed, Warren Beatty and mother-to-be Annette Bening star in Bugsy, a comedy about the legendary gangster Bugsy Seigel. Michelle Pfeiffer costars with Dennis Haysbert in an interracial love story called Love Field. Pfeiffer also teams up with Al Pacino in another love story, Frankie and Johnny. Lawrence Kasdan (The Big Chill) directs another ensemble drama, Grand Canyon, with Kevin Kline and Steve Martin. Sean Penn wrote and directed his latest, Indian Runner, which stars Dennis Hopper. Jodie Foster acts as well as directs Little Man Tate with Dianne Weist.

On the remake front, look for Martin Scorsese's Cape Fear, starring Robert DeNiro, Jessica Lange, and Nick Nolte. Steve Martin does his best Spencer Tracy in Father of the Bride, with Diane Keaton co-starring. Don Johnson teams up with his much more famous wife in Paradise, directed by Mary Agnes Donoghue.

In the mood for a little suspense & mystery? Check out Tom Berrenger in Shattered, Goldie Hawn in Deceived, David Mamet's Homocide and Hudson Hawk's very own Bruce Willis in The Last Boy Scout, this time teaming with "In Living Color"'s Damon Wayans.

And finally, the movie season could not be complete without Star Trek VI: The Undiscovered Country. Everyone's back (Yes, they're all alive) and expect this one to tie in with "Star Trek: The Next Generation," setting up a whole new series of "Star Trek" flicks.

A little overwhelmed? Don't worry, you can catch up with them all next summer when they're on video. Sure bets? I'd want to catch Hook, The Addams Family, Beauty and the Beast in the theaters, as well as My Own Private Idaho, Bugsy, Homicide, and Meeting Venus. See you at the theater!

Doors drummer Densmore delivers satisfaction

By MARK PRESTON
Collegian Staff

Seven hundred people waited in anticipation on Wednesday night to hear John Densmore speak about his new book, Riding The Storm, an autobiography about his involvement with the legendary band The Doors.

In Densmore's book, a national best-seller, "he comes to terms with Doors singer Jim Morrison's place in his life. He deals with feelings of anger over the late singers self-destructive behavior, which constantly threatened the group's career and led to Morrison's death at age 27."

Resounding applause overcame Bowker auditorium, for the first Distinguished Visitors Program of the fall semester, when Densmore took to the podium at approximately 8:20. He tried to hold back a smile of appreciation as the applause continued until he brought it to a halt.

"This is not a rock concert, this is a college lecture," he screamed as he took the microphone and swung it wildly in the air, reminiscent of singer Roger Daltry's stage antics of the band The Who.

He proceeded to take a match and light a stick of incense. Densmore said "When the Doors played, we always lit incense because it got us in a collective mood, the smell left the outside world behind. . ."

Densmore's lecture was split into three parts. He read excerpts form his book while intertwining videos of the Doors and playing the drums which seemed to set the mood for the evening. He started the lecture by reading a letter he had written to Morrison after Morrison's death, explaining the feelings that he had for the singer. The audience seemed captivated as the lights were dimmed and the smell of incense permeated throughout the auditorium.

In chronological order, from the year 1963, he explained his own life and how he became a member of the Doors. He highlighted scenes that were instrumental in the development of the band. Including the naming of the Doors, their first hit song "Light My Fire," and the debut of the Doors at Madison Square Garden.

He ended the lecture by reading an excerpt from his book that was written in Los Angeles in 1989. "My friend Jim Morrison got stuck," Densmore said. "He did not become President as Ray always thought he would, but he was a voice of a generation and help cut the umbilical chord from mom and dad."

The reaction to Densmores's lecture was mixed. Joe Donovan, a senior political science major, enjoyed the lecture, saying "I thought the lecture was spirited and motivational." Eric Bergen, also a senior political science major, said, "It was disappointing that he did not provide any further insight than the recent Oliver Stone film".

For the most part, the audience seemed to enjoy the lecture and went home contented.

HSCN to present a week of great movies

By JAMIE GORNSTEIN
Collegian Correspondent

Welcome to the Housing Services Cable Network (HSCN) information column. Each week, I will be reporting and rating the lists of movies that will be shown via HSCN. The ratings are as follows — no stars, a total bomb. You'd have a better time enduring route canal surgery with no anesthesia. One star (), a fair film. Worth leaving your Botany exam. Two stars (), a fair film. Worth leaving the books for a little while. Three stars (), a good film. You should catch this movie at least once. Four stars (), an excellent film. Invite some friends over, make some popcorn. DON'T MISS THIS MOVIE!

For this week the movies are:

Neighbors —John Belushi, Dan Aykroyd, Cathy Moriarty. All chaos breaks loose when raucous neighbor Aykroyd moves into Belushi's sedate neighborhood. ***

Edward Scissorhands — Johnny Depp, Winona Ryder. An unfinished science experiment (Depp) with scissors for hands is brought into a fairy-tale type suburbia. ***

House — William Katt, George Wendt. Vietnam vet plagued by demons in auntie's house. Pure schlock. *

How I Got Into College — Anthony Edwards, Corey Parker. A bizarre take-off on the stress factors involved with getting into college.  1/2

Less Than Zero — James Spader, Andrew McCarthy, Jami Gertz, Robert Downey, Jr. A whirlwind drama revolving around the evils of cocaine addiction.  1/2

Adventures in Babysitting — Elisabeth Shue, Keith Coogan. A babysitter's ridiculous adventure through the city with little tykes. * 1/2 Bedroom Window — Elizabeth McGovern, Steve Guttenberg. Guttenberg plays alibi to his boss's wife who witnesses an assault from his bedroom window. ***

Commando — Arnold Schwarzenegger,

CONTINUED ON PAGE 8

SALADS SUBMARINES SYRIANS
THE SUB
COME CHECK OUT THE BEST SUBS IN TOWN!
33 E. Pleasant St. Amherst 549-5160

ACADEMY OF MUSIC NORTHAMPTON Opera House 584-8435
LAST WEEKEND TO SEE THIS FILM - ENDS OCT. 10
Curtain daily at 7:00 & 9:00
Having a ball...wish you were here!
A series of astonishments of ever-widening wit, humanity and relevance." - David Denby, New York Magazine
"OUTRAGEOUS! One of the best films I've seen this year!"
"AMAZING... Beautiful, lively and intelligent!" - Tennessee Williams, The New Yorker
"★★★★!" - Lawrence Francis, VS Magazine
burning
A documentary about VOGUING which studies the manner in which gays display costumes and styles at Manhattan balls. THE MESSAGE OF THIS FILM? "It's about the dignity of the human spirit, how people who are not treated well can rise above that with creativity and wit and intelligence and energy." "It's also about how some people do not have the same economic opportunities because of their race, sexual orientation and because of the class they come from." Quotes - JENNIE LIVINGSTON - Producer/Director
AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE

COLLEGE SIGHT
MARK WILDE Oct. 4 & 5 A & E Caroline's Comedy Hour & Dongerlad's NYC
Gilbert Gottifried Oct 27 Major Hollywood Films. Look Who's Talking & Problem Child. As Seen on Arsenio Hall. USA Network

Sneak Hadley's TOWER THEATRES
THE VILLAGE COMMONS • SOUTH HADLEY 533-2662
THE COMMITMENTS Daily at 2:45, 7:10, & 9:15pm
Daily at 3:00pm
RICOCHET Daily at 3:00, 5:05, 7:10, & 9:15pm
ROCKY HORROR Midnight Friday
AKIRA 11:30 Friday

amc THEATRES
$3.50 TWILITE SHOW LIMITED TO SEATING
HT FARMS 4 584-9153
THE FISHER KING
DEAD AGAIN
PARADISE
Late for Dinner This could be magic.
HAMPSHIRE 6 584-7550
NECESSARY ROUGHNESS
DECEIVED
SHOUT
The Super
ROBIN HOOD PRINCE OF THIEVES
Ricochet

Feminist poet recites Street Corner Dialog

By OLIVIA STEWART-LIBERTY
Collegian Correspondent

The small robust figure, face framed by a cloud of unruly white hair, clambered onto a cardboard box behind the microphone.

"You feel different when you're taller. I can see that," Grace Paley said.

Paley, the Jewish feminist activist, is a diminutive woman whose powerful presence filled the Student Union Ballroom last night.

". . . Mmmm, I'm gonna read some poems that are very recent recent," Paley said, coughing into the microphone. "And. . .., I'd sorta like to try 'em out . . . hopefully among friends."

Grace Paley opened her presentation with a recitation of "Street Corner Dialog."

"Thank God for the old Jewish ladies, though their sons are splendid with houses and brilliant from college."

The Jewish women replied: "Don't get excited. Hitler is dead."

The city dialog, simple language, reported speech, conveyed forcefully the willingness of people to ignore injustice as long as it is not directly relatable to themselves. Paley criticized the inability of people to speak as a whole and their willingness to "give up the ship."

Applause marked the end of the first recital.

"I'm glad you clapped," Paley said. "[But] please don't clap between poems — I dunno — it just doesn't seem right."

Paley isn't looking for applause. She's looking for someone who will listen, and be fired by the same anger that inspires her political activism and her writings.

Paley's poetry crashes through her "Street Corner Dialog," though the small scraps of trivial neighborhood gossip contain universal injustices.

This is a major theme of Paley's, a concern with all issues that prevent a society from being a 'just society'. These problems include deportation, emigration, color, race, war, AIDS and poverty.

"I thought nobody could possibly be interested in what I was writing about . . . a women and kids — it turned out I was writing about half the people in the world," Paley said.

ROTC rappells!

By LISA CURTIS
Collegian Staff

Over 100 UMass Army Reserve Officer Training Corps cadets rappelled at the Knightville Dam in Huntington on Saturday, September 28.

All cadets from the freshman to senior class participated in this annual event. The juniors and seniors were the primary instructors.

Classes were given on everything from Swiss seats to rapell point hook-up procedures. After the training under a warm sun, the cadets rappelled down one of five lanes. They could choose from a 35-foot drop to an 80-foot drop.

The junior cadets camped out the night before in preparation for their upcoming summer camp, under the able direction of Randy Freeman, a senior.

Chris Albus, the cadet Battalion Commander said, "Our main goal of the entire weekend was to build confidence in the underclassmen and to have fun. Confidence is an integral part of developing young leaders in today's army."

On Wednesday, October 2, the cadets contributed over $500 to Easter Seals. The

CONTINUED ON PAGE 9

Photo by Cpt. Richard Tracey

Rappell!

Rackelas and Intraub a moving experience

By KRISTEN DEVINE
Collegian Correspondent

"I didn't know a man could be so full of crap."

Laughter raged through the Hampden Theater Tuesday night in response to Intraub's comical line concluding a scene depicting the loss of bladder control in public from Rajeckas & Intraub Movement Theater's segment "Full Moon Over Altoona."

Sponsored by the Residential Arts, Rajeckas & Intraub Movement Theater performed a series of scenes entitled "Full Moon Over Altoona (obsessions with Memory)" and "Brotherly Love" on Tuesday, October 2 at 8:00 p.m. Paul Rajeckas and Neil Intraub of New York have been performing together since 1979 infusing dance, dialogue and mime at various experimental theaters in New York as well as surrounding colleges and universities.

Cunningly entertaining, both Rajeckas and Intraub have studied mime techniques but chose to add dialogue to supplement their expressive movements. In 1989, the duo won BACA Downtown New Territory Award for Experimental Theater. And experimental it was.

With the aide of Jonathon Wolken, co-founder of Philobolus Dance Theater, Rajeckas and Intraub wrote and choreographed "Full Moon Over Altoona" and "Brotherly Love" expertly combining drama and comedy through movement.

"Full Moon Over Altoona (Obsessions with Memory)" combined a number of scenes laden with graceful motion to express what I think must have been a series of distorted memories. Rajeckas and Intraub left a wide parameter for free interpretation. Regardless of its ambiguous meaning, the first segment was artistic and insightful into needs of forgiveness and love.

"Brotherly Love," the second segment, revealed the relationship between brothers. Accurate and to the point of shocking, Rajeckas and Intraub re-enacted the tension and love between brothers through intricate movements. Although completely open for varying interpretation, the theme of familial bonding was clearly evident. With dark humor as a means to elucidate the scenes, Rajeckas and Intraub riveted me with their intertwining of rough and gentle movements.

Rajeckas & Intraub Movement Theater caught moments of intense emotion and transformed these instances into a humorous and touching theater production. At times, I was not sure of their message, but yet taken at any level, this production was entertaining. Rajeckas & Intraub worked together masterfully, pulling small scenes together to form a truly moving theatrical production.

■ HSCN

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 7

Rae Dawn Chong. A retired special agent is called back to duty when his daughter is kidnapped. **

Fatal Attraction — Michael Douglas, Glenn Close. Douglas cheats on his wife with psychotic and deranged Close, only to find that there is no escape from her maniacal possessiveness. ***

Hello Again — Shelley Long, Judith Ivey. Long chokes to death and is brought back from the dead years later by her sister only to find that she can't pick up her life where she left off. *

Highlander — Christopher Lambert, Sean Connery. Lambert is an immortal being brought from 16th century Scotland to the present day by his eternal archenemy.  1/2

An Innocent Man — Tom Selleck, F. Murray Abraham. A case of mistaken identity sends an innocent man to prison, where racism and fascism run rampant through the penitentiary. * 1/2

Love Story — Ali MacGraw, Ryan O'Neal. A loving couple with their whole lives ahead of them find their dreams shattered by cancer. ****

THIS WEEK'S TOP CHOICE

Manhattan Project — John Lithgow, Christopher Collet. A teen genius makes his own nuclear reactor.  1/2

The Naked Gun — Leslie Nielsen, Priscilla Presley. From the files of Police Squad comes this laugh-a-minute spoof about zany Lt. Frank Drebin (Nielsen). ****

Off Limits — Willem Dafoe, Gregory Hines. Two pros in U.S. Army criminal investigation detachment, set in 1968 Saigon.  1/2

That's the wrap up for this week. If you've got a Microfridge, keep that popcorn popping because there's quite a few real winners this week on HSCN. Stay tuned for weekly updates on the Campus Cable Connection.

AMHERST Boston

Get out of Town on U.S.EXPRESS

for only $12 each way!

U.S.EXPRESS

Get Your Ticket Here

Don't forget to ask for U.S.EXPRESS at the UMASS Hotel ticket window!

For info call 582-1313

■ ROTC

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 8

money was raised from the students of the UMass campus who paid $1 to cross the rope bridge constructed over the Campus Pond. The cadets affectionately termed the event: "Operation Puddle Jump." The fund-raiser was conducted on the 5th and 10th of September. Students with the top five overall times received prizes.

According to The Warrior Spirit, a monthly ROTC journal published at UMass, "A good number of students were unable to avoid cadet Cpt. Bonica's grasp; utilizing his booming voice and puppy eyes, he convinced many soft-hearted students to cross the bridge.

"UMass-Amherst was one of the 28 charter ROTC schools established in 1916. ROTC traditionally provides the Active Army, the Army National Guard, and the U.S. Army Reserve with more than 70% of their junior officers," states Lieutenant Colonel Christy Outchicunis, Professor of Military Science, in the October Warrior Spirit.

"Let's face it. You pass a lot of nameless, faceless people every day, and most of them will stay nameless and faceless. There are just too gosh-darned many people here for everyone to know everyone else. But when you work for the Collegian, things change. It's not like you get your picture printed with your article - people don't start to recognize you or anything. But it's still cool because you wrote something and a bunch of those people probably read it. Maybe you're still one of the faceless crowd, but at least people know your name now. Thank you Massachusetts Daily Collegian."

COLLEGIAN

"It's not just an adventure, it's a job."

Experience the inner workings of a daily newspaper first-hand. Come to our offices or give us a call. Go ahead. Make our day.

113 Campus Center Basement
545-3500

50% OFF
ALL COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
Monday, October 7th
and
Tuesday, October 8th
Only at our table
on the Campus Center Concourse!

Undergraduate Rights & Responsibilities

ATTENTION
OFF CAMPUS STUDENTS

The 1991-92 Rights and Responsibilities booklet is now available upon request at the:
Campus Center Information Desk
Dean of Students Office (227 Whitmore)
Information Data Bank (2nd floor lobby Whitmore)

THE BOOKLET INCLUDES INFORMATION ON:
Academic Regulations
Code of Student Conduct
Mediation Program
Sexual Harassment Policy
Grading System
Picketing Code
And much more...

ALL STUDENTS ARE RESPONSIBLE FOR KNOWING THE REGULATIONS AND POLICIES IN THIS BOOKLET

University of Massachusetts at Amherst

THIS FRIDAY 2-6 PM

THE TOC SEAFOOD BAR

PEEL 'N' EAT SHRIMP
$ 4.25/HALF DOZ

FRESH STEAMERS
$ 4.50/'BUCKET'

Introducing Pitchers of Miller Genuine Draft for $4.25

ONLY AT THE TOC LOUNGE
11th FLOOR CAMPUS CENTER

THE FAR SIDE
By GARY LARSON

Group photo disasters

DOONESBURY
By GARRY TRUDEAU

YOU BELLOWED, SIR?
YEAH, HONEY. YOU'RE GOING TO HAVE TO PULL DOUBLE DUTY TONIGHT. BUTTS GAVE NOTICE.
HE DID? WHAT FOR?
HE SAID HE HAD TO MOVE ON, THAT HE WAS ONLY A HALLUCINATION ANYWAY.
HE'S GOT A POINT.
YEAH, WELL, NORMALLY THAT'S NOT A PROBLEM. OF ALL THE PEOPLE I'VE HIRED THROUGH THE YEARS, I'D SAY 40% WERE FIGMENTS OF MY IMAGINATION! FRANKLY, I PREFER 'EM!
UM... WHY?
THEY WORK FOR PEANUTS. ALSO, YOU DON'T GET SEXUAL HARASSMENT SUITS.

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHAEL JAFFE

ACROSS
1 Help
11 Group of buffalo
15 Play
16 On top of
17 Easy to sell
18 Foundation
19 Stop, in the navy
20 "— in the kitchen with Dinah"
22 Opposite of arr
23 Partner of only
26 — Tin Tin
27 Printing measures
28 Greek god of war
30 — hound
32 Sault — Marie
33 Vital organ
35 Shallow dish
37 Novelist Bellow
39 Tennis need
41 Like some tea
42 Summon into service
44 "The Seven Year Itch" Tom
46 Arabian outer garment
47 Place in battle formation
49 National retired gp.
53 Card filing aid
54 Make a mistake
55 Dry, like wine
57 Film director Brooks
58 Lasts
61 Throw as a brick
63 Kind of comon
64 Not attending Lat
67 Med. school subject
68 One who leaves his party
69 Takes the blue ribbon
70 Changes in form

DOWN
1 Fleet of warships
2 "Tom Terrific" of baseball
3 Use abrasives
4 Annoys
5 Take care of
6 Make lace
7 Alma — Asian city
8 Birds' beaks
9 Shades
10 Adversaries
11 Knight of the open road
12 Disappear gradually
13 Showed annoyance
14 Actor's helper
21 Involve by necessity
24 Baseball org.
25 Deserve
29 Synagogue
31 Word with wool or mill
34 Got away from
36 Cal. university
37 Gabriela of tennis
38 Birmingham person
40 Pairs
42 Feline's foot
43 Be insistent
45 Nose's neighbor
46 Twig cutter
50 Valuable violins
51 Edit
52 Folds
56 Stingy
59 Namesakes of e Turner
60 Dad
62 Within. Comb. form
65 Outlaw
66 Future grads.

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

K	U	D	O	S		A	R	A	M		B	E	E	P
O	L	I	V	E		M	A	I	L		I	A	M	A
B	A	S	E	R	U	N	A	W	E	S		A	R	C	A
E	N	T	R	E	A	T		C	H	A	N	T	E	R
			A	N	G	I	E		A	R	C	H	E	S
T	R	E	E	T	E	R		A	P	P	E	A	L
A	L	A	E		C	R	I	S		A	S	I	D	E
S	I	R		B	E	A	T	E	R	S		N	U	T
S	E	T	T	O		Z	E	N	O		A	G	E	E
		H	A	N	G	E	R		B	U	R	S	T	S
R	A	Q	U	E	L		N	O	I	R	E
A	R	U	N	D	E	L		A	N	G	O	R	A	S
S	I	A	T		N	E	C	A		E	L	I	D	E
P	I	K	E		D	A	I	N	E		N	A	D	R
S	E	E	D		A	N	O	N		T	E	S	T	A

CALVIN AND HOBBES
By BILL WATTERSON

WELL DAD, OFF TO WORK?
TOO BAD I'M ON SUMMER VACATION. SO I GET TO STAY HOME AND DO WHATEVER I WANT
WELL, GO OFF AND JOIN THE RAT RACE! MOM AND I ARE RACKING UP LOTS OF EXPENSES!
OOG.
I JUST DO THAT TO HELP HIM APPRECIATE THE WEEKENDS MORE 10-4

TANGELO PIE
By TIM SNIFFEN

Gabriel, could I have mist and back mist and surrounded last week?
Actually I burned it as a symbol of removal from Stoic N' Snide... Is that okay?
Oh, that's fine. Could you close your eyes for a moment? I'd like to share something with you.
Sure!
A LIVING MALLET
SLIDE ME DOWN THROUGH
Wha-?
HI, I'M CASS. DO YOU HAVE FREE WILL HERE?
Would you settle for needless violence?
I'm outta here.

CAST OF THOUSANDS
By BARRY DEUTSCH

IT'S ALL HIS FAULT
WHOSE FAULT, CASS?
DEUTSCH'S
WHO?
WERE ALL PUPPETS PERFORMING FOR HIM IN THE SERVICE OF THE ALMIGHTY PUNCHLINE! WELL, NO MORE! I AM THE MISTRESS OF MY OWN DESTINY, DAMMIT!
BUT CASS—
WHAT ARE YOU DOING?
LEAVING!
WHERE? SHE GO?
DUNNO... THERE MUST BE A TRAP DOOR IN THE CEILING OR SOMETHING...

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED
By SHADOW

DAVE, BREE! IT'S BEEN GREAT, BUT I'VE GOTTA MOTOR IF I'M GONNA BE ON TIME FOR MY QUIZ!
NOT SO FAST, JOE!!
GOODNESS GRACIOUS ME!!
ZAP!
WELL PHOOEY! I'VE BEEN TELEPORTED TO THE TOP OF THE TOWER LIBRARY! AND THERE'S A FLYING SAUCER HERE AND.....
I THINK THE WRITER OF THIS STRIP HAS FINALLY FLIPPED!!

Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Fish Munchies	Quarter Pound Burger
Tacos	Egg Roll & Fried Rice
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Fish Munchies	Veggie Croquets
Veggie Tacos	Veggie Egg Roll & Rice

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Advance planning works brilliantly for you. Find a long-term solution to a troublesome personal problem. A parent offers well-meant advice. Listen attentively but follow your instincts.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Timely talks or letter lend strength to your residential or financial plans. Comparison shoppers will save a lot of money. A great day for do-it-yourself projects. Nurture love relationship.

GEMINI (May 1-June 20): Curb a tendency to act or speak hastily. An accident could happen if you rush ahead. Seek inexpensive entertainment this evening. Romance soars to new heights when you ask your mate's advice.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Old friends or a special group will help you solve a problem and smooth the path to financial success. Someone is evaluating your job performance. Abandon outmoded methods for newer.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Keeping a high profile will help you generate financial capital. You may have to bend the ears of influential people to gain their attention. Return to a more traditional approach.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Stay close to home today and do not venture to parts unknown. Stimulating chats take place within your household. Delegate more chores to younger family members. Sharing secrets brings you closer together.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Good fortune could come to your doorstep in the form of a visitor. Do not throw away recent gains for a vague possibility. Send important messages promptly. Wear your heart on your sleeve!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A dream could come true if you communicate a secret desire today. Private discussions provide the key to obtaining additional funds. You could be lucky in love tonight. Gemini figures prominently.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Stop acting like a recluse and try to hook up with wealthy, influential people. You can reel in some big fish if you find the right stream. Terminate a going-nowhere relationship.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be prepared for business delays today. News of a journey gives you fresh hope. The direct approach ensures more hits than misses. Learning to compromise helps a relationship flourish.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Beware of a tendency to act overconfident. Get the whole story before making an important presentation. You feel more responsible than ever in your family's welfare.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A great day for team efforts. Be cautious when trying new procedures. Share the limelight. Your future financial security depends on how well you manage your present income.

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Kim Frisino
Copy Editor.....Jason George
PhotoTechnician.....Matt Kahn
Production Supervisor.....Seth Kaye
Production.....Mike Carvalho, Jason Torla, Oliver Raskin

■ field hockey

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 12

bounces, we'll be used to it. The surface usually shouldn't matter, but there'll be an effect."

The home-field advantage extends beyond the field. A large crowd will help UMass as much as the playing surface, and a good turnout is expected.

"We're not going to worry about it," Hixon asserted. "The whole team will try to step up and enjoy it. It will be a challenge for the players, and a challenge for the coaches, too."

For the Lady Monarchs, it's the second game of a long road trip. For the Minutewomen, it's the toughest challenge of the year.

Sports Notice

MIDNIGHT MADNESS

Midnight Madness will be October 14 at 10 p.m. to 12:30 a.m. There will be a three-on-three tournament for UMass students, and a foul shooting contest for both men and women. Students can sign up at the Campus Concourse all week from 9 a.m. - 3 p.m. In order to participate, they must sign up.

The elimination rounds will be held on October 9, at 7 p.m. at Curry Hicks Cage. The field will be narrowed to two men and two women. The final will be held after the three-on-three tournament during Midnight Madness.

There will be prizes and drawings to area restaurants. Grand prize is two round trip US Air tickets to Florida with Hotel accomodations.

Donations of canned food items will benefit the Western Mass Food Bank.

INTRAMURALS

Intramural Ice Hockey teams are still being accepted — bring your completed forms to the Intramural Office, room 215 Boyden or call 545-2693/0022 for further details.

AMHERST CINEMA
Now Playing
THE DOCTOR
STARRING WILLIAM HURT
Showtimes:
Fri. - Sun.
7pm & 9:15pm
Mon-Thurs.
One show at 7:30pm
Adults $4.00
Student w/valid I.D. $3.00

STAIRMASTER
AEROBICS
Low Impact
Step
Hi/Low
Nautilus
Free Weights
Cybex
Lifecycle
Biocycles
Treadmill
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
256-0080

家酒園南湖 Hunan Garden Restaurant
MANDARIN/SZECHUEN CUISINE
The Best Chinese Buffet
MANDARIN/SZECHUAN CUISINE
WE DELIVER IN AMHERST 5-9:30 EVERYDAY
NEW Minimum $15 plus $2 delivery charge
BUFFET & SUNDAY BRUNCH
Buffet served 5-8 p.m. Sun.-Thurs.
Brunch served Sunday 11:30 a.m.-3 p.m.
ALL YOU CAN EAT $5.99
Children under 10 - $3.00

KATINA'S
STARTING WEDS., OCT. 9 • EVERY WEDNESDAY!
REGGAE • ROCK • ROOTS
LIVE: ONE LOVE BAND
Red Stripe Beer & Island Oasis Frozen Tropical Drinks!
WARM ISLAND FUN! 18+
WEDNESDAY OCT 9
SELECTROCUTION
The Area's THURSDAY HOT SPOT!
High-Tech Flirtation 18+
THURSDAY OCT 3
THE FOOLS
GET FOOLISH!
"PSYCHO CHICKEN"
"WORLD DANCE PARTY" 18+
FRIDAYS OCT 4
SELECTROCUTION
MEET PEOPLE WHO LIKE TO HAVE FUN! 18+
SATURDAYS OCT 5
ROCK"A"MANIA
Assabet Entertainment presents
• BRITESIDE
• LIVEWIRE
• HARD SILENCE
• KILL CITY KILL
IN A SPECIAL SHOWCASE
SUPPORT LOCAL MUSICIANS! All Ages
SUNDAYS OCT 6
WEDS., 10/9 ONE LOVE
FRI., 10/11 BACK IN BLACK
SUN., 10/13 LACHRYMATOR
FRI., 10/18 THE MACHINE
SUN., 10/20 WHITE TRASH
DECEMBER
ADVANCE TIX: Katina's, Pizzaroya, Strawberries & Music Outlet
ROUTE 9, HADLEY • 586-4463

Some of the biggest, some of the best presents come in the smallest boxes!

LONDON
ROUND TRIP FROM 350
From NEW YORK
round trips starting at
LONDON $350
LENINGRAD $610
CARACAS $410
GUTEMALA C. $390
BANGKOK $939
LOS ANGELES-AUCKLAND $699
Taxes & surcharges not included. Fares subject to change.
Council Travel
79 So. Pleasent Street, Amherst, MA 01002
(413)256-1261

Classifieds

COME TO THE COLLEGIAN OFFICE 113 CAMPUS CENTER • THURSDAY 8:30-3:30 FRIDAY 8:30-2:30 • DEADLINE IS TWO DAYS PRIOR TO PUBLICATION • 20¢/WORD/DAY FOR STUDENTS • CASH IN ADVANCE

ACTIVITIES

Form a MOCK TRIAL team. Compete against other colleges. For more info call Shahna at 542-3000

InterVarsity Christian Fellowship RETREAT! Meet at the First Baptist Church 6:00pm tonight. It could change your life!

UMPSO is having a discussion about the ways in which pagans view the Divine. Sunday 10/6 7:00, Campus Center

ANNOUNCEMENTS

ATTENTION NON-US RESIDENTS AA-1 immigration lottery is your chance. Apply on friends behalf for efficient strategies Call 542-4220

Bed and Breakfast. Downtown Amherst 549-0733

POWER MEETING held on Sunday Oct. 6 at 7:30 pm in the Power Office (room 306 SU)

PVOC OIL CO-OP Purchase home heating oil at reduced cost. COD or automatic delivery. Register at OCHO 426 Student Union.

STUDENT LOCKERS AVAILABLE in Student Union. For storage of books and other personal belongings. Register at OCHO 426 Student Union

AUTO FOR SALE

'82 BUICK SKYLARK good cond. Runs fine New tires $1300
'81 VW RABBIT DIESEL. Runs fine $750 Bill 665-2894

'82 MERCURY CAPRI New brakes, muffler, battery, shocks good condition $1000 256-3020

1984 MERC LYNX Good condition $1100 or/BO 549-5111

84 FORD ESCORT New brakes, muffler very reliable. $1000 665-4602-evenings

AWESOME 1978 BUICK CENTURY Trouble -Free! Sunroof $400 will bargain 253-3906

ENTERTAINMENT

RACK-A-DISC! $175.00 DJs, VJs, Karaoke for house/ Formal parties, Call 586-9900

FOR RENT

EXECUTIVE RENTAL RENT or rent with option to buy 4 bedroom luxuries house in Amherst woods Call 253-7879

FRIDGE RENTALS 253-9742 Free delivery

FOR SALE

1981 TOYOTA COROLLA great shape $900 253-3369

1983 Z-28 Black nice $3900 call 253-3369

Baby Burmese Python Healthy, friendly, easy to maintain 250.00/ BO. Includes complete set-up. 253-0447

BROTHER AX22 TYPEWRITER Mint condition Must sell, $100 Call Amy 546-2585

CENTURIAN IRONMAN EXPERT Excellent condition, low mileage. Bought new for $600, Selling for $350/BO, Call Chris 253-3608

CHEAP 81 VW Diesel Runs great, body in bad shape $300 or BO Pat 6-4002

COMPUTER FOR SALE
$600 Call Cliff
549-1782

DEAD TRADE- Have Saturday need Thursday 256-1183

EARINGS AND BOXERS for sale! Inexpensive silver and stone earrings. And cool neon boxers. Great prices!! Call Susan, Nancy or Melissa at 549-7727

FOR SALE HONDA CB360 4700mi. With extras call 253-9951 $400

FREE CAP WHEN you buy my Ford F150 4x4 Call Steve 253-7922

Jerry&Sers, Wild Boys. Pig Tangent 63 KFOG Call Jeff 549-7686

PLANE TICKET
Oct 11 to Oct 14/15
From Hartford to Cleveland , OH
$150 or best offer Call 546-5886

THANKSGIVING RT TO DC
$116
Kim 6-0107

YAMAHA YPP-50: Touch sensitive, excellent piano replication, bought new for $1000.00, will sell for $700.00 B/O. Also, Roland Juno-106, bought new for $800.00, will sell for $300.00B/O. Also, Roland Jazz Chorus 120, bought used for $325.00, will sell for $225 firm, Call Rich at 256-6971.

FUNDRAISERS

RAISE $500...$1000...$1500
FOOLPROOF
FUNDRAISING
For your fraternity, sorority, team or other campus organization. Act now for the chance to win a Caribbean cruise and fabulous prizes!
Call 1-800-950-8472, ext 50

HELP WANTED

Earn $2500 & FREE trips selling Spring break packages to Bahamas, Mexico, Jamaica, Florida! Best trips & prices! Spring Break Travel 1-800-638-6786

EXTRA CASH:
FREE monthly Avon catalog or become a representative
Write: Toni OBrien 86 Camden St. Milford CT 06460

FREE SPRING BREAK TRIPS
to students or student organization promoting our spring break packages.
GOOD pay & fun. Call CMI
1-800-423-5264

INSTALLER
for car audio and security systems. Part time with growth to full time. Must be experienced. Call 584-9547 for interview.

"Know before you go," Where to work, live and ski free in Colorado's resorts. 'Current guide to Aspen, Vail, Breckenridge and more! $16.95. Call 1-800-788-6174

PEACE AND JUSTICE organization seeks workstudy, 10 hour administrative assistant position. $4.50-5.50 per hour. Call Carolyn at 256-8306

SPRING BREAK REPS!!!
Earn up to $3000! Become e part of e team and sell the best spring break trips on campus. Earn FREE trips and unlimited cash!$$. Call now!
Take A Break Student Travel
(617)424-8222 or (800)-328-SAVE
(Boston)

TRAVEL SALES REPRESENTATIVE
STS, the leader in collegiate travel needs motivated individuals and groups to promote winter/spring break trips. For information call Student Travel Services, Ithaca NY at 1-800-648-4849

LOST

Black pouch pocketbook NEED GLASSES Please return to Campus Center Information desk!

GOLD HOOP EARRING with wire twist Lost in Campus Center If found call 253-5444 REWARD

LOST LV WALLET
Important ID
Reward If return
Call 546-1221 Vivien

LOST -REWARD BEAT-UP Brown leather jacket left in Mahar after Wednesday night class If found contact Jay at 548-9915

LOST!!!!
Watch Timex black leather strap with snaps Lost Wed Sept. 25 In or around Herter Hall Sentimental value If found please call Rose at 6-1565

MUSICIANS

Guitar Lessons - Beginning/Intermediate Relaxed atmosphere, serious lessons $10/ hr. Call Tim-256-6300

PERSONALS

DAVID Z.
You still owe me music, sweetie.
Love GBL

VICTOR
Thanks for making me smile

JAMES
Just one more day and I'll have had the pleasure of knowing you for one year!
Thanks for being such a special and sweet guy
You have my heart
I LOVE YOU IMMENSLY!
Sonya

BARBARA
I hope this day is as special to you as you are to me.
Happy Birthday!
Love Ed

WILDCAT
Its been a wonderful and fabulous year loving you! I'm looking forward to many more special moments with you!
With much love,
Lingerie Boy

THERE ONCE WAS a girl named Michelle, who had so much to drink that she fell It won't happen again,
She told Di and Jen,
But it will cuz we know her so well!

BRIAN
Sorry about being so crude
It was a drunk thing Truce?
Friends?

WOMENS NOVICE CREW
This Saturday is our wake
Their funeral

ATTENTION DELTA ZETA SENIORS
Emergency mandatory meeting
Friday Oct. 4 at 4:30
Your senior year has begun
Love, Shesa

Have a Happy Day Kristinka!
Just to let you know I was thinking about you
D

LIZ
Happy Birthday and first personal
Have a great day Love Kevin

ERIC-
Happy 19th birthday. Are you surprised? Have a great weekend!!
Love, Laurie

MICHELLE-
We are three voices and we are singing
Happy 20th Birthday. Have a great weekend!!! Love-LBK

HAPPY 20TH EM!
You want to be 21?
Too bad for you!
Love, Nancy, Diane, Sue, Kendra, Trish, Jeanine, Jen, and Janet.

CONGRATULATIONS CHERYL FISHER!!!!
You finally did it! Hope it was worth it! Here is the personal that you wanted so badly. I finally got to it. I hope you are happy now!!! Love, Peanut (You better know who it is).

SYLVAN JEFF Where are our roses?
Love, Jen n Sha

ROSEBUD,
Happy 2 years! Can you believe it?! I LOVE YOU FOREVER! All my love, Geek!

BOULTA
Happy birthday Button!
Smile, laugh, and be you
We love you and your pinky.

RESUME SERVICE

Cutting Edge Resumes. Complete resume service. Writing, laser printing, letters, advice. 549-0367

RIDE WANTED

HELP! Need ride to Philly/South Jersey area Columbus day wknd. Will help w/ expenses Please!!! Call Melanie 546-4981

Need a ride to Ithaca Syracuse or Binghampton for Oct. 11 and returning the 14 PLEASE! Call Kristen 546-1581 will share expenses.

RIDE NEEDED to Pennsylvania Columbus day weekend Will share expenses 546-6831

SERVICES

BICYCLE BROKEN?
Call Pat
546-0119

PREGNANT?
Need a pregnancy test, information or support? Call for free and confidential services. ALTERNATIVES 245 Main Street, Northampton 586-3000 or Greenfield 774-6019

FREE pregnancy testing; confidential and caring support. BIRTHRIGHT:233 No. Pleasant Street Amherst 549-1906

TRAVEL

Bahama Cruise $99 per person 5 day/4 night hotel, Plan now for your break. Very limited offer. Call now 1-800-821-0572

RUSSIA AND THE UKRAINE! Jan. 6-20, 1992: Moscow, Leningrad, Kiev, plus Helsinki, Finland. $2045 complete from New York. Call Prof. Jones, 253-7827, evenings after 7:00

SOME RELIABLE TOURS aren't so reliable. That's why Mardi Gras Travel has the #1 for for fun price guarantee to Montreal! SEX LIES IN THE MONTREAL BAR CRAWL! Party weekends include 2 nights & transp. Group leaders travel FREE! (LAGNAF)-Call today 617-444-1111 We're #1 for fun!

TRAVEL FREE! Campus representatives wanted to earn intersession and spring break trips. 256-8254

TYPING

TYPING PROS: $2.50 per page includes spellcheck. Call 549-8001

HEY YOU!

Bunches and bunches of people all over the UMass area pick up the Collegian every single day. And those people look to the Collegian classifieds for everything from A to Z. Maybe you should look into them, too.

The Collegian.
Whoa.

Sports

Minutemen battle explosive JMU

By BRETT MORRIS
Collegian Staff

"This is unbelievable."

That's what University of Massachusetts head football coach Jim Reid had to say when he saw James Madison University's offensive statistics yesterday.

The Minutemen (2-2, 2-1 in the Yankee Conference) will face JMU (3-1) tomorrow at 1:30 p.m. in Harrisonburg, Virginia.

"This could be the most explosive offense we've faced," Reid said.

The Dukes are averaging just over 30 points per game so far this season and are racking up 447 yards per game of total offense.

Making the calls for the Dukes is junior quarterback Eriq Williams, the ECAC Offensive Player-of-the-Week. Williams tied the school record with four touchdown passes in their 29-28 win over eighth-ranked William and Mary last Saturday.

He enters the game averaging over 208 yards per game and 18.5 yards per completion. He is also the team's second leading rusher, 38.3 yards per game.

Williams has three main targets, Dwayne Hayes, David McLeod and Anthony Archer. McLeod is averaging 23.1 yards per reception and leads the team in catches (14), yards (323) and touchdowns (5). Hayes is averaging 19.4 yards on 12 catches and Archer has nine catches for 202 yards.

"These guys should be illegal in Division I-AA," Reid said of the three wideouts.

Tailback Kenny Simms, who has three consecutive games of over 100 yards rushing, leads the ground game. Simms has four TDs and is averaging 117.5 rushing yards per game.

UMass has its own Williams at quarterback, Tony. The redshirt freshman saw his first playing time in a Minuteman uniform last week and will start tomorrow.

Williams, who entered the game against Boston University with 1:23 remaining in the first quarter, led the Minutemen to two touchdown scoring drives in UMass' 15-7 win. He completed four of six passes for 40 yards and carried 25 times for 121 yards. He was named the Yankee Conference and ECAC I-AA Rookie-of-the-Week.

UMass tailback Jerome Bledsoe, who has now carried for over 100 yards in three consecutive games, is ninth in the nation in rushing with 479 yards, 119.8 yards per game.

Bledsoe and Williams ran an effective option game last week against BU, each running for over 100 yards (UMass hasn't had two players rush for over 100 since last year against BU, Gary Wilkos and John Johnson).

Now with Williams at quarterback, the Minutemen have an option game that should put more points on the board as they are averaging only 15 per game.

"The option allows us to run the perimeter with two people instead of one," Bledsoe said. "The option opens up big plays and forces the defense to stay disciplined."

Reid said, "I think the option puts more pressure on the defense than any other offense."

However, UMass has relied on their defense so far this season, and will have to do the same tomorrow.

"If this game is high scoring, we're in trouble," Reid said.

Reid is also concerned about the caliber of JMU. The Dukes lost their first contest of the season to Division I-A Virginia Tech 41-12. Since then they have beaten three Division I-AA ranked opponents; Central Florida, ranked 11th in the nation, Appalachian State (19th) and William and Mary (eighth).

"If we win it will be a big boost to our program," Reid said. "We can win. We have to go in to this game with confidence, wanting to win badly."

UMass' outside linebacker Mario Perry is listed as doubtful for tomorrow. Flanker Eric Thimas, who injured his shoulder against BU last Saturday is out for the game.

Women's soccer hoping to avoid upset loss

Collegian photo by Carrie Wyeth

Colleen Milliken chases down a ball. She'll be in action this weekend against New Hampshire.

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

When you are ranked eighth in the nation, a lot of teams are trying to take a crack at you. Especially undefeated, regional rivals that could make their season by beating you.

These are some of the problems that the University of Massachusetts women's soccer team must endure, when they travel to Pepperell, MA tomorrow to face the University of New Hampshire.

"There are a lot of teams out there who would like to knock us off," UMass coach Jim Rudy said. "They look at the rankings and say we should be No. 8, how come they are way up there when they have a loss? I know UNH is thinking that and I hope they come in undefeated, so we can beat them."

New Hampshire is ranked 19th in the country and is 5-0-1 on the year before playing Vermont yesterday afternoon.

"We get a great amount of satisfaction in defeating a ranked team and UNH is one, this is a very big game for us," Rudy said. "The first thing I am going to tell my players is what happened to field hockey [a 1-0 upset loss to Northeastern]. We do not need that to happen to us."

For that not to happen, Massachusetts needs to continue to play the same strong ball control and defensive game that they have all season. However, it won't be easy.

New Hampshire is led by an offense that has pumped in 20 goals this season. Sweeper Paige Christie leads the team with six tallies, followed by Mary Beth Sydlowski and Leah Deniger, who each have four goals.

"They have quite a good front line," Rudy said. "Sydlowski is great in the air, she's got a great left foot that can really thump. There other frontman, Valentina Avramovic, may be their best player. She's a big kid, about 5'9" with a lot of strength and skill.

"Their midfield is also strong, Veronica O'Brien from the left side just doesn't stop attacking and it's the same on the right side with Deniger. She's a little buzzer who knows how to score. Their front six are all good."

One thing to note is that all of the scoring has occurred against teams of a lesser quality than Massachusetts. None of New Hampshire's opponents this year have been ranked nationally, so this is the first big test of the year for the Wildcats.

The Minutewomen will counter the UNH offense with a team defense that hasn't been scored upon in over four games. The cornerstone of that defense is goaltender Briana Scurry. Scurry is 6'1" with five shutouts and a goals against average of .285.

"Bri has been great all year for us," Rudy said. "I'm going to keep playing her as long as she plays this well."

In the net for UNH will be either Molly Kirchner or Maja Hansen and probably both. The duo often gets interchanged during the game and so far the strategy has worked since both have been successful.

Massachusetts has shaken off the early season injury bug and is healthy, although this game tends to be rough. Last year's 2-0 UMass win was marred by what Rudy described as "a lot of skin, a lot of contact. They try to talk it up and intimidate us, but I don't see my team being intimidated."

Field hockey hosts top-ranked Old Dominion

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

Imagine if the Running Rebels of UNLV showed up at the Cage for a game one night, or Notre Dame came to Alumni Stadium to take on the football team. It would be worth going to just to see the athletes, the coaches, and the legacy. Well, the number one team in the country is coming to UMass Saturday, and it isn't for football or basketball.

Yes, the Old Dominion Lady Monarchs come to Totman Field Saturday at noon as the number one field hockey team in the country. As of press time, they were unbeaten and untied, and at times, unbelievable. They are clearly the best team in the nation right now, and barring an upset at the hands of Richmond, Old Dominion will be 9-0.

However, as UMass painfully found out, upsets do occur. Unranked Northeastern University beat UMass 1-0 Wednesday in a game that coach Pam Hixon said her team was "incredibly flat." The Minutewomen also found out Tuesday that they had dropped below Penn State in the rankings to number three in the country.

"The difference between two and three in the country is negligible," Hixon said. "It's not where you start, it's where you finish."

The rivalry between UMass and Old Dominion is ten years old, and although UMass has come up on the short end (They are 2-11 against them), the competition has been superb. Whenever the best athletes in the country of any sport get together, you can expect an exciting and sometimes memorable game.

Hixon described her two most memorable moments against Old Dominion:

In 1985, UMass beat the Lady Monarchs, who were the three-time defending champions, 2-1. One of the interesting things of that year was an unranked Northeastern team tied UMass the week before that game. (They beat the Minutewomen this week.)

"The win over Old Dominion was memorable," Hixon said. "My most memorable moment though was a game we lost to them two years ago [in the NCAA playoffs in Boston]. It was a very emotional game, and we had a lot of opportunities to come back, but we lost 2-1."

One of the mainstays of the 1989 Old Dominion team, and the 1991 team is Maikke Hilbrand, who is back after a year off. Hilbrand had 46 goals and 14 assists in 1989, and she has a shot that Hixon described as "awesome."

"She's the corner hitter for them, and one of their leading scorers. She has an shot that's unstoppable on turf," Hixon said.

Old Dominion is the type of team that can lose a 46-goal scorer like Hilbrand, and still win the National Championship, as they did last year. Their depth is unbelievable, as they've mixed most of last year's championship team with freshmen recruited from three countries.

To top it all off, they have one of the best goaltenders in the nation. Senior Kathy Fosina notched 18 shutouts last year, not allowing a goal in the NCAA playoffs. This year, she has a 0.5 goals against average, with six shutouts.

Coach Beth Anders moonlights as the head coach of the U.S. Olympic team, and she is the winningest field hockey coach in NCAA history. She has a .902 winning percentage, and has won five national championships.

Add all of this up, and you figure Hixon must be pretty nervous and frightened about Saturday, right? Wrong.

"I always enjoy playing Old Dominion," exclaimed Hixon. "I look at this game as a win-win situation. No one expects you to win, so it's no shame to play hard and not win. If we do win, it's even better."

"I think our field will be an equalizer, because Old Dominion is totally a turf team," Hixon continued. "When the ball takes

CONTINUED ON PAGE 11

Collegian file photo

Kathy Phelan scraps for a ball as Holly Hockenbrock looks on. The field hockey team hosts Old Dominion tomorrow at noon on Totman Field.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THE LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND
VOLUME CI ISSUE 24 MONDAY, OCTOBER 7, 1991

Collegian photo by Jeff Egan

A HORSE IS A HORSE OF COURSE, OF COURSE — Office Jim Turati of Umass Mounted Police waits patiently for his partnet Dutch to finis lunch

Administration may freeze grads' salaries

Threats include hiring scabs

By DAVID MASSEY
Collegian Staff

If the membership of the Graduate Employee Organization decides to strike, the University of Massachusetts administration may freeze their salaries and hire replacements, according to published reports.

Chancellor Richard O'Brien told the Hampshire Union-News last week if GEO decides to strike, the administration would not recognize the organization as a union and would hire replacements.

Negotiating teams from both the administration and the GEO have been trying to hammer out GEO's first union contract for nine months.

Last week, the GEO membership refused to ratify the administration's most recent concessions on the four major demands GEO wants on their contract. Both sides will go back to the negotiating table on Friday.

O'Brien could not be reached for comment.

Graduate employees include teaching assistants, research assistants, interns and students with fellowships.

"I think that Chancellor O'Brien's comment on a potential strike and how we would act reveal his own vulnerabilities since he's choosing to threaten GEO members before anything happens," said Emily Isaacs, co-speaker of the GEO, which represents about 2,200 of the estimated 6,100 graduate students on campus.

"I think it reveals his own awareness of how unreasonable the contract he has agreed to so far is," Isaacs said.

Leaders of the GEO have threatened to take "decisive action" if their demands remain unmet and some GEO members have expressed the possibility of a strike. At this time, members of the GEO are voting in a secret ballot on an issue Isaacs could not comment on. Isaacs said she hopes for a negotiated agreement to end this long-running contract dispute.

"We're not interested in scare tactics, we're interested in bargaining," she said.

She did say however that state law does not forbid GEO from going on strike. In spring 1990, GEO held a one-day "work stoppage" to protest the administration who at the time would not recognize them as a union. That action differs from a strike, Isaacs said, which is for an unspecified amount of time.

David Lenson, president of the Massachusetts Society of Professors, which passed a resolution in support of the GEO's demands several weeks ago, said O'Brien's idea that faculty could simply "change their patterns of teaching" to make up for a lack of teaching assistants if they strike is impractical.

"The notion that the faculty can cover for TAs is ridiculous," Lenson said, adding that the campus has lost 160 faculty over the last three years. "We're just barely able to handle Gen-Ed courses."

Without skilled TAs who are hired from all over the world, Lenson said, a large proportion of activities at the University would be suspended. He said it would be impossible for professors already stretched thin by budget cuts to cover for TAs.

"I think [a strike] would cause a tremendous amount of disruption," Lenson said.

He also wondered how faculty could hire skilled replacement TAs without seriously injuring the undergraduate academic experience.

"Where are you going to hire replacements?" Lenson said of O'Brien's statement.

Fines to Mullins Arena contractors reduced

By MICHAEL LEVY
Collegian Staff

Suffolk Construction of Roxbury received a reduction in Mullins Center-related fines from the Occupational Safety and Health Administration last Wednesday.

The original amount of $25,375 was reduced on October 2 to $13,425 during an informal conference, said Ted Fitzgerald of OSHA.

Although the sum has been lowered, all 16 violations are still being held, along with their category of "serious," he said.

Suffolk's project manager for the Mullins Center construction John Lynch refused to comment on Friday.

The 16 safety violations included the absence of a list of hazardous chemicals, non-insulated terminal connectors, damaged electrical outlet boxes and damaged scaffold base section available for use.

The categorization of "serious" contrasts those which OSHA labels "other than serious," which are not health-related. Other categories are "repeat," the finding of a specific violation a few times and "willful," a violation of which the employer had prior knowledge.

The violations filed against Suffolk and the eight project sub-contractors were discovered between July 23 and August 5 this summer during a "comprehensive programmed safety inspection" on the site.

Fitzgerald said the violations have been corrected.

Most sub-contractors of Suffolk also received fine reductions. Electrical Contractors, Inc. saw their fine drop from $6,325 to $3,600. P.H. Mechanical Corp. had theirs fall from $1,925 to $1,050 and New England Reinforcing, Inc. had a reduction from $2,600 to 1,800.

"Ideally, they [the violations] should not exist," said Fitzgerald. He said Suffolk's 16 serious violations were "not an extreme amount, but not small."

Fitzgerald added larger worksites have more potential for fines, pointing to a direct relationship between number of workers and potential for hazards.

On Monday, sub-contractors for Suffolk accidentally severed two electrical wires, each carrying 13,800 volts. Power was cut from most of campus with some buildings remaining without electricity for four hours.

In June 1990, Suffolk workers accidentally cut an underground cable in West Springfield, cutting power to more than 40 stores in the Riverdale Street shopping center.

A few weeks later, a wall the size of a football field, built by sub-contractors for Suffolk, toppled in 30 mile per hour winds, delaying a construction project for two weeks. None of the 14 workers were hurt in the incident.

Inside

Page 3:
The world of female impersonators and drag queens comes to the pages of the Collegian.

Page 4:
Darienne Hosley sheds a little light on the good food and bad chacks in the Capitol building.

Page 8:
The Minute(wo)men come up short on more than one front this weekend. Check out the details.

Weather:
Happy Monday! Sunny and cool with a high of 58-63. Same for tomorrow.

Veteran UMass staffer saves choking victim

By JASON GEORGE
Collegian Staff

In the 19 years Timothy O'Hara has worked at the Campus Center, he said nothing like what he experienced last week has ever happened to him.

O'Hara was having a cup of coffee in the Campus Center Coffee Shop last Monday morning when he saw a woman at a nearby table apparently choking.

"I heard a noise — and I saw her putting a napkin to her mouth," O'Hara said. "I walked over and asked the guy next to her what was wrong."

The "guy next to her" turned out to be the woman's husband. O'Hara, a volunteer firefighter in Hadley, showed the man his firefighter's badge.

"He told me 'do whatever you have to to save my wife because I love her,'" O'Hara said.

O'Hara had received first aid training from the Hadley Fire Department while becoming a volunteer firefighter.

"She couldn't speak well, so I told her to give me two fingers when [what was in her throat] was starting to come up," O'Hara said.

After several attempts to dislodge the food, O'Hara was successful in getting the piece of blueberry muffin from her throat through using the Heimlich maneuver.

O'Hara said he walked over and got another cup of coffee after the incident, then returned to check on the woman.

"She just said to me 'thanks a lot for what you've done for me,'" O'Hara said.

Although "this was the tops" of all the things O'Hara has seen working in the Campus Center, he said it wasn't the first time he's used his first aid training.

"About a year ago, a little boy next door came over and said his dog wasn't feeling too well," O'Hara said.

It turned out the dog, a black labrador, was choking on a marble.

"I just felt in its mouth and popped [the marble] out," O'Hara said.

O'Hara and Auxiliary Services Personnel Manager Timothy Cox said the woman Francine Ryan, was from New Jersey and was at UMass attending a conference on hydrocarbon contamination with her husband.

continued on page 2

Collegian photo by Jeff Egan

Timothy O'Hara

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THE LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is a Registered Student Organization of the University of Massachusetts, published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000.

113 CAMPUS CENTER AMHERST, MA 01003
Phone (413) 545-3500 FAX (413) 545-1592

STAFF

Editor in Chief ..... Gayle Long
Managing Editor (interim) ..... Marc Elliott
Editorial Editor ..... Greg Sukiennik
News Editor ..... Preston P. Forman
Sports Editor ..... Tamir Lipton
Arts Editor ..... Paul DeGeorges
Photography Editor ..... Carrie Wyeth
Black Affairs Editor ..... Sondra Sutton
Women's Issues Editor ..... Jessame Hannus
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Alexander Nguyen
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Madanmohan Rao
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Trystan Skeigh
Business Manager ..... Randee Pastel
Advertising Manager ..... Dena Haselkorn
Finance Manager ..... Jeff Weiner
Circulation Manager ..... Jim Winterbottom
Subscriptions Manager ..... Stacy Rogers
Promotions Manager ..... Scott Macey
Production Manager ..... Nicole Dumas
Day Graphics Manager ..... Jenn Burns

PROFESSIONAL STAFF

Business ..... Brian Harrington, Lori Black, Maureen Majerowski

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements that run on a space-available basis for the campus and local non-profit organizations. Because of space constraints, the Collegian cannot print all FYIs submitted and no announcements can be repeated.

To submit an FYI, please send a TYPED press release with all pertinent information to 113 Campus Center c/o News Editor. FYIs cannot be taken over the phone.

Monday, October 7

Lecture — The Distinguished Visitor's Program is sponsoring a lecture by Li Lu on "China: Tianamen Square and Beyond" from 8 p.m.-10:30 p.m. at the Campus Center Auditorium.

Tuesday, October 8

Movie — The Sci Fi Society is showing "Clockwork Orange" at 3 p.m., 5:30 p.m., 8 p.m., and 10:30 p.m. in the Campus Center Auditorium. Admission is $1 at the 3 p.m. showing and $3 at all others.

Workshop — Beta Alpha Psi is sponsoring a workshop from 6:30-10:30 p.m. in Campus Center room 803.

Wednesday, October 9

Movie — The Hang Gliding Club is showing the movie "The Doors at 5 p.m., 7:30 p.m. and 10 p.m. in the Campus Center Auditorium. Admission is $2 at the 5 p.m. showing and $3 at all others.

Festival — The Student Activities Office is sponsoring a "Student Group Festival" from 11 a.m.-3 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom. Admission is free.

Blood Drive — The UMass Blood Drive will be held from 11 a.m.-4 p.m. in Campus Center room 101.

Meeting — The SGA operations is holding a Senate Meeting from 7 p.m.-9:30 p.m. in the Campus Center room 803.

Lecture — The eminent historian Michael Kammen will speak on American historical memory at 7:30 p.m. at the Stern Auditorium at Amherst College. His topic will be "Mystic Chords of Memory: The Transformation of Tradition in American Culture".

Wrong turn ends in crash

Compiled By DAVID MASSEY
Collegian Staff

A car driven by Grace Sullivan, of New York, collided with a second vehicle as it crossed two lanes of traffic on Massachusetts Avenue on Thursday afternoon.

Jennifer St. James, of Holliston, was driving the second car. Sullivan was cited for an improper turn. No injuries were reported and property damage was estimated at $4,000.

A man in John Adams Residence Hall suffered deep cuts to his arm and hand from a broken window in the bathroom Friday morning, police said. He was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital by an Amherst Fire ambulance.

Police did not release his name and his present condition was unknown at press time.

A man kicked a door in Butterfield on Thursday afternoon in a domestic dispute and caused some damage.

LARCENY:

•A man reported his 1985 Mazda stolen from Lot 22 on Wednesday afternoon. The value of the car is estimated at $7,000 and property inside at $250, police said.

• A man reported his telephone stolen from his unlocked room in Kennedy on Thursday evening. The phone is estimated at $170.

Cancer claims professor

William Gugli was teacher of French, Italian

University of Massachusetts professor William V. Gugli, 59, a professor in the French and Italian departments, died Friday from cancer at the Roger Williams Medical Center in Providence, Rhode Island.

Gugli had been on leave since January 1990.

Gugli, who had helped establish programs in France and Italy, began teaching at the University as an assistant professor in 1967.

He had been acting chairman of the department of French and Italian from 1979 to 1980 and from 1987 to 1989. He also coordinated the honors program in the department from 1978 to 1980.

A native of Providence, Gugli received his bachelor's and his master's degree from Brown University. He received a doctorate in French and a minor in Italian from Syracuse University.

Gugli taught in the Providence school system from 1956 to 1962 and was a graduate assistant and instructor at Syracuse from 1962 to 1967.

Gugli received a Fulbright-Hays Fellowship to the University of Paris in 1965 and a faculty research grant from the University of Massachusetts in 1971.

Donations may be sent to the oncology department at the Roger Williams Medical Center care of Dr. Jeffery Clark, Chalkstone Avenue, Providence, Rhode Island 02908.

■ O'Hara

continued from page 1

O'Hara is a resident of Hadley, where he was born and raised. He has worked for UMass Building Operations department for 19 years, the past six in the Campus Center Bookstore.

Student Specials(Sept.-Dec.)

Nautilus (Aerobics included) $119
Racquetball (Court time included) $119
Tennis (Plus court time) $119
All Club (All of the Above) $189
Now offering Step Aerobic Classes
Social lounge, Big Screen TV, Ping-Pong Available To All!
• Pro-Shop
• Snack-Bar with Liquor License
WINNER'S ATHLETIC CLUB
549-4545
Route 116, Sunderland Across From Bubs BBQ

PHYSICISTS! MATHEMATICIANS! COMPUTER SCIENTISTS!
XonTech is a highly respected, progressive R & D firm specializing in the empirical analysis of complex physical phenomena and development of advanced concepts and technologies in support of numerous defense programs.
Our research encompasses the following:
• Analysis and evaluation of flight test data taircraft ballistic missile satellite) including:
• Trajectory reconstruction • Re-entry aerodynamics
• Navigation analysis • Orbital mechanics
• Research, development, and evaluation of advanced radar and weapons systems including:
• Performance analysis • System simulation
• Signal processing • System design
• Signature analysis
Our work is technically challenging, and offers exceptional visibility and direct client contact, with opportunities for technical and managerial advancement.
Positions are available at the Ph.D., Master's, and Bachelor's levels. Degrees must be in Physics, Mathematics, or Computer Science. Electrical Engineering with signal processing emphasis is also acceptable.
Qualified professionals are invited to submit cover letter and resume in confidence to Corporate Personnel Department, XonTech, Inc., 6862 Hayvenhurst Avenue, Van Nuys, CA 91406.
U.S. Citizenship Required.
All applicants selected will be subject to a security investigation and must meet eligibility requirements for access to classified material.
XonTech will be at the Career Planning and Placement Office on Thursday, October 10th. Sign up today for an interview!
XonTech, Inc.
"People, Science and Technology"
Northern & Southern California
Washington, D.C • Huntsville, Alabama • Colorado
We are an equal opportunity employer M/F/H/V

Steven H. St. Clair
Attorney at Law
• Personal Injury CLAIMS ACCIDENTS
• Defense vs. Criminal, Drug and Alcohol Related Charges
• Other Legal Problems
BY APPOINTMENT
816 North Pleasant
Amherst
549-1681
ADMITTED TO PRACTICE: 1970
MEMBER MASS. AND CT. BARS

AMHERST CINEMA
Now Playing
THE DOCTOR
STARRING WILLIAM HURT
Showtimes:
Fri. - Sun.
7pm & 9:15pm
Mon-Thurs.
One show at 7:30pm
Adults $4.00
Student w/valid I.D. $3.00

LONDON
ROUND TRIP FROM $350
From NEW YORK
round trips starting at
LONDON $350
LENINGRAD $610
CARACAS $410
GUTEMALA C. $390
BANGKOK $939
LOS ANGELES-
AUCKLAND $699
Taxes & surcharges not included.
Fares subject to change.
Council Travel
79 So. Pleasant Street,
Amherst, MA 01002
(413)256-1261

STEINBECK
COLLISION REPAIR
&
AUTOBODY
53 S. Prospect St. Amherst Center
Imports & other unibody vehicles are our specialty
Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass replacement
REMEMBER
It's your car and your choice of repair facilities
256-8157 256-1385
Shop Reg #RS1212

Focus

Men in drag: Both art form and lifestyle

By TRYSTAN SKEIGH
Collegian Staff

Female impersonators, usually gay and often called "drag queens", have been part of the entertainment world for many centuries. As 54-year-old female impersonator Robin Rogers pointed out, "The first Juliet was a man."

Despite their historical presence in the entertainment world, men who dress as women still face many prejudices, according to five performers who were interviewed after a benefit show last Sunday night at The Pub, a popular gay nightclub in Springfield, Mass.

"My name is Emi, just call me Emi, a human being"
— Miss Emi

Only one of the five performers interviewed accepted the term "drag queen". Four used the pronoun "she" when referring to other female impersonators. All but one wished to be identified by their female performing names and genders. One said she was a "transvestite", and two others said they were "female impersonators."

One refused any labels at all and said, "my name is Emi, just call me Emi, a human being."

Emi, who appeared on stage as a slender, shapely singer/dancer in a variety of colorful costumes, said that for her, the thrill comes from performing before a live audience. "It's exciting for me, but it's important that the audience feels excited also."

Emi says dressing as a woman is an art form that requires a special gift: "It's an individual thing and you have to be gifted with it — you have to really be gifted . . . to feel inside that you have an urge to put women's clothes on and feel comfortable [performing] in front of people."

Miss Rachel, who performed a torchsong as a shapely, curly-haired brunette in a low-cut 1940s-style cocktail dress, said she considers herself a female impersonator. She said many gay men who perform as women are at different places with their self-identities. She said some may eventually have a sex change operation, because they personally self-identify as women, while for others, it's strictly an art form.

Two other performers, Miss Sue and Miss Shawna, both said they maintain their female personas off-stage. Miss Sue said she dresses as a woman "every day, 24 hours a day, seven days a week".

Miss Shawna said, "I sleep with make-up and I wake-up with make-up."

Miss Sue, who performed as a buxom, older blonde, said she has been cross-dressing for 17 years. She said it was hard to come out as a gay man who dressed in women's clothes.

"The straight community never accepted us gays to begin with, and for a man to come out dressed as a woman was really hard because they weren't even accepting gays at that time, especially a man that looks so much like a woman that he could fool another man."

Miss Shawna, who performed as a long-haired, full-figured, young Latina woman, said she's been dressing as a woman for 15 years.

She said she considers herself a woman. "Well, I feel like inside of me there's a woman locked in. I feel like a woman more than a man."

Both Miss Sue and Miss Shawna said they are waiting for sex-change operations. Both said they feel the surgical procedures will help them physically match their emotional, inner-identities.

Miss Sue said, "I am, like the song says, I Am What I Am, because this is the way I feel in life, you know. I mean, I look at it this way. God fucked up on the day I was born. So, I have female's intentions, but he had other ideas."

Referring to her future surgery, Miss Shawna said, "Then I'll be a woman. When I have my sex change then I'm a legally queen."

Miss Sue said she wished society was more accepting toward men who identify as women. "If they only realized that we're all human. We all have our own sexual preferences, our own ways. Everybody is not created equal, as they say."

"We're all different, we're all unique, we're all special in our own way," said Miss Sue. "Some men like women that like men, some men like to be a woman and like to be loved by a man. It's hard, and it's difficult but hey, this world has got to listen and understand that."

Jason McDonald and Sven Davisson contributed to this article.

Photo by Trystan Skeigh

"Miss Emi" dazzles audience members during a benefit held last Sunday at The Pub, a popular gay nightclub in Springfield. "Miss Emi" is a female impersonator and regular performer at the club.

Local gay man fights cancer

Benefit held for female impersonator Robin Rogers

By TRYSTAN SKEIGH
Collegian Staff

Robin Rogers is a 54-year-old gay man who worked as a professional female impersonator for 25 years. He says his career was cut short in 1984 when he was hit with cancer. Now Rogers says he's been hit "hard" a second time by the disease.

Last Sunday night about 150 people gathered at The Pub, a popular gay nightclub in Springfield, Mass., for a musical benefit that Rosie, the club's owner, said raised over $1,000 for Rogers' medical bills.

Rogers said he was shocked at the outpouring of support.

"I never, ever thought this turnout would be here — never in my life ever," he said. "I went bonkers — I love Rosie, I love all the gay kids in town."

Paul, who said he works as a bartender at The Pub and videotapes the shows, said the large turnout showed that gays in Springfield support each other.

"Tonight showed everybody how important we feel those are who are with us . . . if we don't take care of ourselves, who will?"

Rogers' battle with cancer is only one part of a personal history which includes a long successful career as a professional impersonator.

Rogers said when he began his career as a female impersonator in 1960 he worked exclusively in straight nightclubs until he came to Springfield in 1972. He said he's performed "everywhere", including "Hollywood, Florida, New York and all of the Midwest."

Rogers said for a while he traveled with a troupe of female impersonators.

"We had 25 men and one girl in our show, and they would offer anyone who could guess who the female was a bottle of champagne — and they always voted for me," Rogers said.

Rogers said he and the lone female performer were the only members of the troupe who were still alive, "because of suicide, drugs and all that crap."

Fooling audiences was the best part of performing, said Rogers.

"It was wonderful to go out there in makeup and everyone thought you were [a woman] and to just let them think that until I let them know with a thud," he said.

Rogers said his performances were different than most because he used his own voice, rather than lip-synch. "I sang soprano, alto, tenor, baritone and bass."

Miss Rachel, a female impersonator who performed in the benefit, said Rogers' early performing years helped open the doors for younger performers.

"Robin was one of the pioneers and he opened the doors for us, by making it accessible and acceptable for us," she said.

Miss Rachel said the art of female impersonation has changed over the years. At first, she said, female impersonators mostly worked straight nightclubs, "like in Victor/Victoria" but then "it was of course, accepted by gays and that made it more open for more people to do it."

Rogers said people need to understand female impersonators are not making any political statements. Rather, he said, it's strictly art.

"It's not about anything, it's an art form. It's the ability to go out there and perform for the audience and allow them to think you are one thing and you are another," he said.

Photo by Trystan Skeigh

"Miss Shawna" sings to honored guest and former female impersonator Robin Rogers, who is fighting cancer, during a benefit that raised money for his medical bills.

Gender roles broken down by drag queens

Society teaches people that there is a "normal" set of behaviors — women are supposed to be feminine and men are supposed to be masculine.

Anything that doesn't fit these two sex-based stereotypes is labeled "queer," "deviant," or "strange."

When I came out at the age of 14, I was willing to accept being gay as long as I could pass in straight society. I wanted to look "normal".

Jason McDonald

This is why discovering that some gay men liked to dress in women's clothing ("drag") came as a shock to me. It was not what I had been taught in my Irish-Catholic upbringing as being appropriate behavior for men.

But then, at the age of 16 I sat in the audience of Rocky Horror for the first time, watching a group of men wearing corsets, garter belts, black underwear, high heels and fish nets, and felt thrilled at the thought that I might do that someday.

Many of my friends could not understand this. They asked, "Why do you want to do that?" "Don't you think that men dressing in women's clothing is a little weird?" "Why can't you just accept yourself as a man?"

That was when I realized that "masculine" or "feminine" ways of dressing are simply social constructions. There is no real reason why a man can't wear a dress or assume a female persona. After experiencing a desire to wear "drag" myself, I realized that my earlier disapproval of drag queens was totally wrong.

Drag queens, transvestites, transsexuals, female impersonators and transgenderists not only question what society considers "normal" male behavior, they defy it. "Drag queens" prove that anyone can wear a mask of "femininity" or "masculinity" regardless of their biology. Their refusal to conform to social norms is an act of courage and reflects a commitment to self-honesty.

Rather than condemn those who cross the boundaries of sexual stereotypes, I think we must look toward them to grasp a better understanding of ourselves as versatile and creative human beings.

Jason McDonald is a Collegian Correspondent. Sven Davisson contributed to this commentary.

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions on this page are those of the individual writer or cartoonist, and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian or the University unless otherwise noted.

Bounced checks, debts send Representatives scrambling

I remember learning two years ago in a history class about the special privileges granted to members of Congress.

I knew about that nifty transportation system beneath the government buildings but the cheap, tax-free food provided in the Capitol Hill cafeterias and restaurants was news to me. So, it is with much delight that I'm following the mini-scandal surrounding the bouncing checks and growing debts in those very same dining rooms.

When the news broke, I didn't pay much attention. It didn't surprise me — I don't know anyone who thinks politicians are models of integrity.

Okay, so House representatives owe over $300,000 in debts to these restaurants. No problem. Everybody writes a bad check once in a while. So they had free overdraft protection. No big deal — my checking account does too. Of course, the money is taken from my savings account rather than the accounts of other depositors, but. . . well, whatever.

Spokespersons at first reassured the public that covering the debts wasn't costing the taxpayers anything, and that, in fact, most of the debts each year are eventually paid. Okay, I thought, nothing to get all upset about.

Darienne Husley

It was the ensuing clamor that I found so entertaining. Suddenly, the representatives were falling all over themselves to "confess."

The General Accounting Office refused to unveil any of the offenders. Then, someone suggested that, if the debts are not paid, the names of the guilty lawmakers should be posted on the walls of the restaurants. The race began.

Every day, more politicians are stepping out to reveal their sin. At first, many denied being one of the guilty ones rubberizing checks. A few days later, they changed their minds and say yes, they did write bad checks, but it wasn't their fault.

The "not-me" tactic. A favorite excuse for children of all ages.

Wisconsin's Rep. Scott Klug, a Republican, pleads, "We're innocent victims of a system we didn't know existed." How come people in government never know what's going on? Ignorance seems to be running rampant in the nation's capitol.

During the Persian Gulf conflict, those government officials allowed to comment on unfolding events rarely said anything except, "I don't know." The last two nominees for the Supreme Court were remarkably indecisive - they didn't know either. And now Robert Gates, hoping to head the CIA, acknowledges that he doesn't know either.

Rep. Pat Roberts, (R-Kan.), said, "Members clearly need accurate accounting systems for their personal finances. The system allowed members to develop bad habits."

These people making decisions about the national budget claim to have had no idea that their accounts were overdrawn. Some members, not wanting to appear stupid, admit that they were well aware that their checks were bouncing. But they did it anyway.

It's reassuring to hear that the House ordered an investigation of the House bank by the ethics committee. It's also good that representatives must now pay with cash or credit card. But I think they need a course in financial management.

Compared to other issues such as education, the recession/recovery (depends on who you listen to), Gates, and Supreme Court nominee Clarence Thomas, this is a trivial issue. But hey, watching members of Congress squirm is more fun. Sure, we know they're scoundrels, but that's why we love them.

Darienne Hosley is a Collegian columnist

Vacation paradise or tropical hell? Read on and find out

With Spring Break only 152 days away, I figured that the time was right for me to offer you a little hint on how to make this week-long vacation from sobriety an enjoyable experience.

Don't go to Florida.

I'm from this waste of precious swampland, and personally I just don't see the appeal of the place. Florida is the only state where the average age is "dead." Okay, so maybe this is cool if you're into shuffleboard and 80 year-old women in string bikinis. Personally, that's just not my thing. I prefer 70 year-olds.

Jared Blaut

What is the appeal of a place where the dominant life forms are mosquitoes the size of Volkswagens and roaches which have less in common with other insects and more in common with Sherman tanks? These insects are so large that they routinely devour small children (but unfortunately they missed my brother).

It's a lucky thing for us that they hate the color pink. You know those tacky pink flamingos, the ridiculous monstrosities which lead most people to believe that everybody in Florida has inhaled way, way too much swamp gas? Well, those are actually cleverly disguised insect-repelling scarecrows.

Yeah, right.

No, the sad truth is that tacky plastic pink flamingos are what pass for high culture and style down there. And the weather is just so beautiful, too — all three kinds:

1. Really Damn Hot.
2. Really Damn Hot and Muggy.
3. Really Damn Hot Muggy and Raining.

Okay, So there is Disney World and Epcot Center and the Disney/MGM Studios and Universal Studios. I can't complain about these. I like six-foot tall, mute rodents running around scaring little kids. I enjoy two-hour lines for two-minute rides. I live to be entertained by lip-synching mechanical bears. Hell, even the actual living, breathing people in the parades put Milli Vanilli to shame.

Add to these bastions of pleasure the wide variety of lesser-known, but equally amusing tourist traps like "Bob's World 'O' Reptiles," "Larry's World 'O' Insects" and the ever-popular "Oswald's World 'O' Inbreeding" and you have all you need to really stretch your entertainment dollar.

Ah, but why does everyone really want to go to Florida? What, my friends, is the big attraction? Why the beach, but of course. Everyone dreams of those wonderful sandy beaches which stretch on for miles and miles and miles and miles and miles and miles and miles and miles and mi. . .

Sorry. Got a little carried away.

Yes the beaches do stretch on for miles and mi... I mean a really long way; the problem of they are about three feet wide. So what happens is you have all these people lying sideways on the beach, toe to head, like a chain of burnt flesh offerings to some Greek god who's observing all this and thinking, "What stupid mortals. I think I'll smite some."

Don't forget that the Florida beaches are the home of those ever-popular beach sports "Dodge the Hypodermic Needle," "Name the Black Tarry Substance" and "Hey Mom, why are all those people doing push-ups?" (Think about this last one really hard, it'll hit you.)

The only explanation I can think of for Florida's continued popularity as a gathering spot for thousands of gullible college students is that few or none of these students ever approach sobriety during these trips.

But if after everything I have told you, you are still determined to spend hundreds of dollars to be eaten up, burned, drunk, sweaty and uncomfortable, I ask you to remember one thing.

All my columns end in one-sentence paragraphs.

Jared Blaut is a UMass student

License for keg soon a reality

When students returned to classes this semester, they found themselves struck by yet another blow to their social outlets. After scrambling to outmaneuver the "keg tagging" policy, almost everyone knows how to get "clean" kegs, making tags a mere inconvenience.

However, just when you thought it was safe to throw a bash in Amherst, the local Select Board has established the newest by-law in their "War Against Beer."

Actually in the works since before last semester, it will essentially make it illegal to possess a keg in the town without being deemed a "respectable" person and being issued a license for said possession.

The time frame for implementation is probably this spring but who knows with the attitude the town has.

This past summer, I was asked to be a member of the "Keg Policy Task Force," a committee that would formulate various specifics surrounding the new by-law.

I agreed — because as a student dedicated to beer I could help keep this by-law from careening out of control at the hands of people without the best interests of the student body in mind.

While we (the Task Force) haven't completed our task, and are decisions are only recommendations for the Select Board's approval, there are a few guidelines we can be relatively sure of:

1. Anyone can apply for a license to possess a keg, although you may be discriminated against for reasons like the reputation of the house you live in, etc. Licenses will probably consist of two kinds — long-term and short-term.

2. Penalties for possession of a keg without a license are $200 for the first offense and $300 for the second and consecutive offenses. These figures were already in the by-law and undebatable by the Task Force.

3. If the cops respond to a disturbance, your license will probably get yanked, which will probably prevent you from getting another one in the future.

It breaks my heart to see such developments in a town which, up until now, has had such a great "social atmosphere."

Paul Kirchoff
Amherst

Thesis lacks evidence to back it up

I am responding to Alexander Nguyen's article, "Manufacturing Multiculturalism" (October 2). Mr. Nguyen does much name-calling, but reveals little evidence to back his angry and dramatic assertions. Perhaps his thesis is correct. Perhaps the UMass administration and much of the community's efforts to provide "multi-cultural education" is superficial, and indeed only window dressing that masks a deeper racist intent. But in place of "nonsensical talk shops," "food and dance events," and meaningless "awareness weeks," Nguyen suggests activities that "reinforce concepts stressed in academics." Like what? His final advice is incredibly vague: "Operate like cultural guerilla warriors, striking quickly, withdrawing, and regrouping, only to lash out again, when the time is right..."

In an entire page of ranting and raving, Nguyen only produces a few concrete examples to support his thesis, and these examples are themselves not analyzed in detail and thus give weak support to his case. Finally, in paragraph four, we get down to it: minorities comprise only ten percent of the faculty. This is a legitimate and concrete complaint and thus deserves analysis but we are given none. His next assertion is dramatic, and perhaps true, but where is his evidence? He says: "Cultural diversity classes...remain racist and oppressive in their methodology." Thirdly, he states, that with "racist arrogance" UMass does not give a "cultural diversity class focusing on white American culture...and its inherent racism." This is an interesting idea. But has he or anyone else made an effort to introduce such a class and Failed? Nguyen claims, "The core curriculum remains unreformed because issues of race, culture, gender, ability, and class are insufficiently addressed." Without explanation or examples, statements like this are subject to question.

Other charges seem far out. Nguyen asserts that various minority groups must "fight over centrally-controlled funding" and that this is part of a "divide and conquer tactic." Might not such limited funding be simply symptomatic of the present financial crises at UMass, rather than an administrative plot?

Actually, I am in agreement with Nguyen — concrete, not superficial changes, need to be made at UMass to broaden and enrich the curriculum. Drastic and unfounded generalizations, however, only hurt his argument. Does he really believe all teachers "deftly manipulate and control the so-called mutilcultural discourse to fit smoothly into their political agenda?" That can't be true — most of my teachers, in a scholarly way, have described white America as being historically and currently racist and oppressive. I suggest Nguyen locate these teachers and like-minded students and find something constructive to do.

James Karis
Amherst

Golden Key a worthwhile investment

This is in response to Marc Elliott's comments on Golden Key National Honor Society in "Notes from the Campus Center Basement."

I also thought the membership fee was unnecessarily high. But I took the time to read the information sent with the invitation and decided that Golden Key was a worthwhile investment for me.

The one-time membership fee is the only requirement of members. A NON-PROFIT organization, Golden Key uses the fee to maintain the society — from national and regional conferences down to the induction ceremony. In addition to annual scholarships, there is the Career Assistance Reference, listing over 150 companies nation-wide that recognize and recruit members.

Members can get involved in nationally known projects like the Best of America campaign, a drug and alcohol abuse prevention effort. The intrinsic rewards cannot be found in the everyday "race" to succeed in this world.

Golden Key is a nationally recognized honor society, with 250,000 members and over $500,000 awarded in scholarships. But like any other organization on campus, it's what you make of it. You can simply hang your certificate on the wall or you can get involved with a worthwhile experience and make a difference.

Michelle DeRusha
Secretary, Golden Key Honor Society

THE FAR SIDE
By GARY LARSON

"You should hear him! . . . First he howls and growls at me and then he thinks he can make everything OK by scratching me behind the ears."

DOONESBURY
By GARRY TRUDEAU

OKAY, THIS IS LIKE OUR FIRST DATE, GOT IT? WE'RE STARTING ALL OVER AGAIN!
YEAH, RIGHT.
REMEMBER, WHAT THE FACILITATOR TOLD YOU! TRY TO IMAGINE I'M 18 AGAIN, AND WE'RE MEETING FOR THE FIRST TIME!
18 AGAIN? THAT'S JUST LUDICROUS, BOOPSIE! I CAN'T IMAGINE THAT!
SURE YOU CAN! JUST LET THE MOOD TAKE... I MEAN, FOR STARTERS YOU'RE ABOUT 15 POUNDS HEAVIER!

CALVIN AND HOBBES
By BILL WATTERSON

TANGELO PIE
By TIM SNIFFEN

It's been so long since we've had company! Here, have some cocoa...
THANKS.
KINDA SPARSE IN HERE, DON'T YOU THINK?
We think of it as "leaving plenty of room for plot."
OH, WONDERFUL. PLOT IS EXACTLY WHAT I'D LIKE TO ESC- WHOAH!
SORRY 'BOUT THAT. GUESS THE LINES AROUND HERE DON'T TAKE VERY MUCH WEIGHT.
Stay back.

CAST OF THOUSANDS
By BARRY DEUTSCH

Hello, have we met?
I DON'T THINK SO... I'M ZACK
Gabe. Y'know, even though we've just met...
...IT FEELS LIKE WE'VE GOT SOMETHING IN COMMON.
Hmmm...
HMMN...
Say... does your roommate suck?
SAY... DOES YOUR ROOMMATE SUCK?

UNDER 21
By KRIS K. EARLE

BITE ME
UNDER 21 RETURNS
BY KRIS K EARLE
ELVIS IS COMING! 10.8.91
HOUSING SERVICES
THIS COMIC HAS BEEN DEDICATED TO ALL WHO GET CONSTANTLY SCREWED OVER FROM HOUSING SERVICES THOSE PRICKS.
BLAM
OFF-CAMPUS HOUSING HERE I COME!

Quote of the Day

"Sometimes a cigar is just a cigar"

--Sigmund Freud

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHAEL JAFFE

ACROSS
1 Awn
5 Haggard heroine
8 Promenade
12 Elliptical
13 Rhone tributary
15 Silkworm
16 Singer McEntire
17 Of the ear
18 Close
19 Commentator Severed
20 Scoundrel
22 Biblical measure
24 Quaker pronoun
25 Realize
29 "Forever —"
33 Actor Flynn
34 General Bradley
36 Regan's father
38 19th cen. Canadian rebel leader Louis
39 Chore
40 Operatic high spot
41 M. Descartes
42 Cover with wax
43 Describing a sour taste
44 Powerful beam
46 Lowers, as a flag
48 Cover
50 Ailing
51 Judo experts' swords
57 The — of March
61 Hindu god
62 Harden
63 Part of a window
64 Hibernia
65 Skull cavity
66 Ankles
67 Miami's county
68 Notice
69 Bridge feat

DOWN
1 Tedious one
2 State
3 1944 Nobel prizewinner
4 Collapsed stars' results
5 Nobelist novelist Bellow
6 Israeli dance
7 Legislate
8 Carte
9 Neighborhood
10 Ananias, for one
11 Enrich
13 Sword for a Buckingham Palace guard
14 City near South Bend, Ind.
21 Exercise arena, for short
23 Black gold
25 Shakespearean sprite
26 Notch
27 Show of hands
28 Arabian rulers
30 Boycott rolls
31 Eldritch
32 Forays
33 Blunder
35 Dill herb
37 Entertainer Bolger
39 Screwers
43 Bother
45 BPOE member
47 Stands
49 Patron saint of France
51 Reared
52 Pasternak heroine
53 In the center of 54 Sugar —
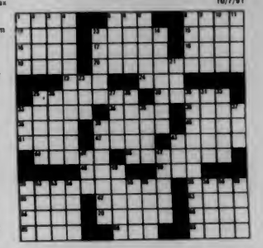
55 Crescent
56 Genuine
58 Watch face
59 Cinders of the comics
60 Svelte

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

M	A	Y	A		B	A	S	T	E		T	I	T	O
O	M	A	N		A	S	P	E	N		R	O	A	R
T	I	L	T	A	T	W	I	N	D	M	I	L	L	S
O	D	E		A	M	E	N		I	T	A		O
			T	A	R			E	N	O
	S	I	D	E	S	T	E	P		I	N	C	E
B	A	R	O	N		H	E	R	O	D		H	A	M
O	D	I	N		P	R	I	M	E		L	I	R	A
W	A	S		A	I	D	A		P	I	L	E
		T	H	E	D	E	V	I	L	T	O	P	A	Y
			L	A				A	R	S
A	L	U	M		B	O	R	S		M	A	S
A	D	E	S	T	I	N	E		R	O	T	A	C	T
C	A	K	E		S	A	B	I	N		A	L	T	O
S	M	E	D		E	L	E	N	I		B	I	T	E

10/7/91



Menu

LUNCH
Duchess Meat Pie
Grilled Cheese Sandwich
BASICS LUNCH
Caponata with Pocket
Grilled Cheese on Wheatberry

DINNER
Beef Bourguignon
Chicken Fajitas
BASICS DINNER
Curried Chick Peas
Chicken Fajitas

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): An emotionally charged situation could change dramatically by evening, if you exercise more self-control. You have already stated your feelings. Examine your physical needs objectively.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Take the lead at work today and someone's respect for you will grow. Your extensive experience may scare those with less knowledge. Be diplomatic when showing other people how to do things.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You have a chance to make a comeback. Heed your first impressions. Although paperwork irritates you, handling it promptly can mean the difference between success and failure.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Self-improvement activities play a large role in your plans. Be objective. Your personal appearance can be a big plus or minus in business. Shed those extra pounds.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Excellent conditions exist for business talks and marital discussions. Present your ideas confidently but be prepared for objections. Serious subjects deserve your attention.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Financial matters are emphasized today and tomorrow -purchases, investments and debts. Investigate a credit matter. There are unusual avenues or bargains available to you now.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Paperwork, phone calls and errands make this an active, even hectic, day. Thoughts and words come faster than you can handle. Take things one at a time. Romantic fireworks are in the air.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Numerous projects and interesting people vie for your attention. It pays to be selective. It is easy for you to say "yes" to people. Refused to be rushed into making a commitment.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A romantic encounter takes you by surprise. Enjoy the fringe benefits that come with a promotion or new job. Pay your monthly bills promptly, even if you cannot pay them in full.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You may find yourself somewhat moody or quick on the trigger today. Tackle new projects with enthusiasm but do not waste time on those who fizzle out. Showcase your talents to impress higher-ups.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your will power is unusually strong. New professional gains or personal benefits are part of the picture. Reach out to co-workers who agree with your goals.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): If you sense that a business offer is not all it should be, reject it! Someone in authority gives you a helpful hint. Act on it immediately.

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Gayle Long
Copy Editor ..... Tamir Lipton
PhotoTechnician ..... Jeff Egan
Production Supervisor ..... Camille Pansewicz
Production ..... Susan Tomaski
Brad Hutchison

Arts & Living

Kim plays komungo

By NICOLE GONZALEZ
Collegian Staff

Jin Hi Kim
Hampden Theater
Thursday, Oct. 3

Jin Hi Kim, virtuoso of Korean music, demonstrated the unusual effects of her table harp-like instrument, the komungo.

Usually performing with other "avant-gardists" such as the Kronos Quartet, Circle of Fire, and New York's Eliot Sharp, her solo performance in the Valley was truly a rare event.

In a black room under soft lights, Jin Hi Kim sat Indian-style with one side of the komungo board across her lap. With a pencil-sized bamboo stick in her right hand, she hit the strings in persistent rhythm. Reaching her left hand further down the board, the strings softly wailed under her pressing fingers.

The entire effect produced a surprising variety of sounds. Only three or five notes were played in each song, however, each improvised number evoked distinct, emotional portraits. The swift plucking and twangy sound of the strings seemed to express anger and melancholia almost simultaneously. When played slowly with rests, the intense, gypsy like rhythms gave way to a meditative dreamy quality.

While putting down the acoustic komungo, she introduced the instrument that boosted her popularity, the world's only electric komungo. It was built especially for Kim by Danny Ferrington. "In L.A., he made the measurements and constructed it overnight," she said proudly. "And since then, I play it."

This electric version, made without an unneccessary sound board was much smaller, about the size of a shoe-box. With the pick ups, reverb, and amplifier Kim's music rung out with hints of a steely Western electric guitar. It was apparent that the combining of Korean classical with the Western avant-garde has been her life-long dream. "It (the electric komungo) leaves the composer open to more possibilities."

Although this artist has has completed both her undergraduate music degree in Korea and her master's degree in electronic music composition from Mills College, this artist has met the familiar obstacle of tradition.

Wanna be sedated?

Photo by George DuBose

The Ramones will play at Pearl Street tonight at 8 p.m. with opening band The Lost for a 21 and over crowd.

Styles By Deborah
The Spa For Hair & Skin Care
549-5610
65 University Drive Amherst

$4.00 OFF With Cheryl Only — Professional Consultation and Style, Cut & Dry
First time customers only • Exp. 10/31/91

$5.00 OFF — Any Perm, Facial or Highlighting
First time customers only • Exp. 10/31/91

TOP of the CAMPUS LOUNGE

Monday Night Football

BUFFALO VS. KANSAS CITY

LOUNGE HOURS:
MONDAY-FRIDAY
11:30am-12:30am
SATURDAY-SUNDAY
5pm-12:30am

11th FLOOR CAMPUS CENTER

THE INTERDEPARTMENTAL PROGRAM IN FILM STUDIES PRESENTS

A Lecture by Price Hicks From the Academy of Television Arts & Sciences in Hollywood

On Student Internships, College Student Film/ Video Awards and Career Opportunities

The Film Studies Program is pleased to announce that Price Hicks, the Director of Educational Programs at the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences, will be visiting the University to give a presentation on the various programs sponsored by the Academy, including paid summer internships for students, cash prizes and awards for student film/video productions, and career opportunities in television. Application forms and more information available after the lecture. All students welcome. Refreshments will be served after the lecture.

Wednesday, October 9, 1991 at 7-9:30 p.m.
Campus Center 101 • University of Massachusetts at Amherst

The United Christian Foundation

cordially invites you to attend a reception for new chaplins

DAVID CROSBY

KENT HIGGINS

TONY AHLSTROM

Monday October 7th from 4 O'Clock to 6 O'Clock in the afternoon

At the Faculty Club

University of Massachusetts

WMUA 91.1 FM Amherst

Auto Glass Center
American & Foreign
• SAME DAY SERVICE
• BILLED DIRECTLY TO INSURANCE COMPANY
• WINDSHIELDS REPLACED
North Amherst Motors
78 Old Sunderland Rd
North Amherst, MA.
549-2880
Most Major Credit Cards Accepted

AMHERST CINEMA
Now Playing
THE DOCTOR
STARRING
WILLIAM HURT
Showtimes:
Fri. - Sun.
7pm & 9:15pm
Mon-Thurs.
One show at 7:30pm
Adults $4.00
Student w/valid I.D. $3.00

STAIRMASTER
AEROBICS
Low Impact
Step
Hi/Low
Nautilus
Free Weights
Cybex
Lifecycle
Biocycles
Treadmill
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
256-0080

50% OFF
ALL COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
TODAY
and TOMMORROW
Only at our table
on the Campus Center Concourse!

Golden Key National Honor Society

Attention Juniors and Seniors with a 3.3 GPA or above...

Find out more information about the
Golden Key National Honor Society

AWARENESS DAYS:
October 7, 8, & 9
Visit our information table on the campus center concourse for more information.

Classifieds

COME TO THE COLLEGIAN OFFICE 113 CAMPUS CENTER • THURSDAY 8:30-3:30 FRIDAY 8:30-2:30 • DEADLINE IS TWO DAYS PRIOR TO PUBLICATION • 20¢/WORD/DAY FOR STUDENTS • CASH IN ADVANCE

ACTIVITIES

UMASS CLUB COMM Meeting Mon Oct 7 7:00 PM in Mach-E-37 New & old members are welcome!!!

UMASS OUTING CLUB General meeting tonight! 7:00 904-8 Campus Center Open to all, everyone welcome Trip announcements!

ANNOUNCEMENTS

ATTENTION NON-US RESIDENTS AA-1 immigration lottery is your chance Apply on friends behalf for efficient strategies Call 542-4220

Bed and Breakfast. Downtown Amherst 549-0733

INTERESTED IN secondary teaching certification? Deadline for S.T.E.P. applications is October 23. Call 545-4397

TARKOVSKY FILM FESTIVAL any interest? Send wants, thoughts, and ease to: Tarkovsky c/o Box 395, Northampton 01061-0395

AUTO FOR SALE

'82 BUICK SKYLARK good cond. Runs fine New tires $1300

'81 VW RABBIT DIESEL. Runs fine $750 Bill 665-2894

'82 MERCURY CAPRI New brakes, muffler, battery, shocks good condition $1000 256-3020

84 FORD ESCORT New brakes, muffler very reliable. $1000 665-4602-evenings

87 SUZUKI SAMURI convertable 4x4 5 speeds 27K miles AM/FM cassette CB radio soft/hard tops $3500 or BO. 549-0318 or 545-2395 Chin.

COLLEGE PIZZA

COLLEGE PIZZA Fall special Small cheese $3.50 Large cheese $6.00 Free soda with the purchase of a large sub, salad, or spaghetti 549-6098 549-6073 Must mention this ad

ENTERTAINMENT

RACK-A-DISC! $175.00 DJs, VJs, Karaoke for house/ Formal parties, Call 586-9900

FOR RENT

EXECUTIVE RENTAL RENT or rent with option to buy 4 bedroom luxunes house in Amherst woods Call 253-7879

FRIDGE RENTALS 253-9742 Free delivery

FOR SALE

1981 TOYOTA COROLLA great shape $900 253-3369

1983 Z-28 Black nice $3900 call 253-3369

BROTHER AX22 TYPEWRITER Mint condition Must sell, $100 Call Amy 546-2585

CASIO PMP-400 KEYBOARD $250/B.O. Call 6-1798 Excellent condition

CENTURION/IRONMAN EXPERT Excellent condition, low mileage, Bought new for $600, Selling for $350/BO, Call Chris 253-3608

CHEAP! $1 VW Diesel Runs great, body in bad shape $300 or BO Pat 6-4002

COMPUTER FOR SALE $600 Call Cliff 549-1782

DEAD TRADE- Have Saturday need Thursday 256-1183

EARINGS AND BOXERS for sale! Inexpensive silver and stone earings. And cool neon boxers. Great prices!! Call Susan, Nancy or Melissa at 549-7727

FOR SALE HONDA CB360 4700mi With extras call 253-0951 $400

FREE CAP WHEN you buy my Ford F150 4x4 Call Steve 253-7922

INTERVIEW SUIT - Woman's lightweight 100% wool suit. Size 12, navy, classic $75.00 253-9685

Jerry&Sara, Wild Boys. Pig Tangent 63 KFOG Call Jeff 549-7586

PANASONIC KX-P1125 printer. Brand new. Lots of features. 24 pin quality Call Alan - 546-7377 $275 or B.O

PLANE TICKET Oct 11 to Oct 14/15 From Hartford to Cleveland , OH $150 or best offer Call 546-5806

YAMAHA YPP-50: Touch sensitive, excellent piano replication, bought new for $1000.00, will sell for $700.00 B/O. Also, Roland Juno-106, bought new for $800.00, will sell for $300.00B/O Also, Roland Jazz Chorus 120, bought used for $325.00, will sell for $225 firm. Call Rich at 256-6971.

FUNDRAISERS

RAISE $500...$1000...$1500 FOOLPROOF FUNDRAISING For your fraternity, sorority, team or other campus organization. Act now for the chance to win a Caribbean cruise and fabulous prizes! Call 1-800-950-8472, ext 50

HELP WANTED

"CAMPUS REPRESENTATIVES NEEDED" Earn free trip and big commissions by selling Cancun, Mexico. For more information call toll free at 800-755-7996 or in Connecticut at 203-975-8833

Earn $2500 & FREE trips selling Spring break packages to Bahamas, Mexico, Jamaica, Florida! Best trips & prices! Spring Break Travel 1-800-638-6786

EXTRA CASH: FREE monthly Avon catalog or become a representative Write: Toni OBrien 86 Camden St. Milford CT 06460

FAST FUNDRAISER Greeks, Clubs, Anyone (800) 748-6817

FREE SPRING BREAK TRIPS to students or student organization promoting our spring break packages GOOD pay & fun. Call CMI 1-800-423-5264

INSTALLER for car audio and security systems Part time with growth to full time. Must be experienced. Call 584-9547 for interview

"Know before you go," Where to work, live and ski free in Colorado's resorts. "Current guide to Aspen, Vail, Breckenridge and more! $16.95. Call 1-800-788-6174

PEACE AND JUSTICE organization seeks workstudy, 10 hour administrative assistant position. $4.50-5.50 per hour. Call Carolyn at 256-8306

SPRING BREAK REPS!!! Earn up to $3000! Become a part of a team and sell the best spring break trips on campus. Earn FREE trips and unlimited cash$$. Call now! Take A Break Student Travel (617)424-8222 or (800)-328-SAVE (Boston)

LOST

BIOLOGY BOOK Between Bartlet and Whitmore Please call Anne 546-2913 REWARD- I have an exam!

Black pouch pocketbook NEED GLASSES Please return to Campus Center information desk!

MISSING KEYS!!! Four keys on a silver/turquoise chain -Call Mari #6-2886

MUSICIANS

Guitar Lessons - Beginning/Intermediate Relaxed atmosphere, serious lessons $10/hr. Call Tim-256-6300

MARIANNE

Happy Anniversary Hon for two great years!! Thank you for the wonderful times and I hope there are many more I LOVE YOU! MATTHEW

PERSONALS

Happy 21st birthday Merry, Jill and Karen Tee time is at 5:00 in the Hatch Bar. Prepare yourself for a night you wont remember!

JILL B. It's xxxx time! Happy 21st Go Crazy!!! Love ya, Daryl

HEY GARY- You are just too lame for us! Here's your very own personal! Guess Who??

KATHY- Surprised? No. Anyway, Happy 18th! Love, ME

GABRIELA KOSEK- Congratulations on your citizenship! Love the sisters of Alpha Chi Omega!

A BELATED CONGRATULATIONS to our newest Flamingos - Karyn and Roachie We love you !!! Love your big sisters- Courtney and Arleigh

NEW SISTERS OF Alpha Chi Omega Congratulations! Karyn, Nicole, Erika, Jen, Liz, Julie, Andrea, Heather, Marla, Keri, Kristine, Leslie, Ronni

BONYSOTTPHA; My Chinese, Heater, Furry, Mani Thanks for Flue! Your Bodsockloot!

GREG G. Newport Creamery Worc Remember the tall brunette and blond every Sunday night? ...Signed The Tall Brunette

TWEETY(ctfl) I am glad we are back together. I really missed you alot as I sat alone on the shelf. I Love You Paxton

RESUME SERVICE

Cutting Edge Resumes, Complete resume service Writing, laser printing, letters, advice. 549-0367

RIDE WANTED

Need a ride to Ithaca Syracuse or Binghampton for Oct. 11 and returning the 14 PLEASE! Call Kristen 546-1581 will share expenses

RIDE NEEDED to Pennsylvania Columbus day weekend Will share expenses 546-6831

SERVICES

BICYCLE BROKEN? Call Pat 546-0119

PREGNANT? Need a pregnancy test, information or support? Call for free and confidential services. ALTERNATIVES 245 Main Street, Northampton 586-3000 or Greenfield 774-6019

FREE BOTTLED WATER for 1 week Call 546-3371

FREE pregnancy testing; confidential and caring support BIRTHRIGHT 233 No. Pleasant Street Amherst 549-1906

TRAVEL

Bahama Cruise $99 per person 5day/4 night hotel. Plan now for your break. Very limited offer. Call now 1-800-821-0572

SOME RELIABLE TOURS aren't so reliable. Thats why Mardi Gras Travel has the #1 for fun price guarantee to Montreal! SEX LIES IN THE MONTREAL BAR CRAWL! Party weekends include 2 nights & transp. Group leaders travel FREE! (LAGNAF)-Call today 617-444-1111! We're #1 for fun!

TRAVEL FREE! Campus representatives wanted to earn turnsession and spring break trips. 256-8254

Sports

Minutemen succumb to Dukes, 24-7

By GREG ABEL
Special to the Collegian

In a game that at times resembled a sandlot grudge match, the James Madison University football team was able to overcome their own sloppy execution and a very physical University of Massachusetts squad en route to a 24-7 win Saturday.

The Dukes lost a fumble, missed an extra point, had a punt blocked deep in their own territory and never got their passing game going: but behind a stingy defense and the running of tailback Kenny Sims, they dropped the visiting Minutemen to 2-3.

"I told our whole team, 'Be proud of the fact that we won,'" JMU head coach Rip Scherer said. "I don't all of a sudden get spoiled by the fact that we won a few football games that we've got to apologize because we didn't look like the New York Giants out there. I've said all along, [UMass is] a real good defensive football team."

The 17th-ranked Dukes, now 4-1, got on the board before Mom and Dad could even get cozy in their parents' Weekend seats. On the game's opening play, Sims took a handoff up the middle and broke away to the left sideline for an 80-yard touchdown run, his fifth TD of the season. Sims, who finished the day with 166 yards on 15 carries, credited the offensive line for his success.

"[The offensive line has] been doing a great job blowing people off the ball and getting them out of the way," Sims said. "Lately all I've had to do is run through the holes."

While Sims was tying a JMU record by going over 100 yards for the fourth straight game, JMU quarterback Eriq Williams continued to be slowed by the groin injury that has plagued him for the past two weeks. He showed better mobility than last week at William & Mary but still felt the effects.

"I think after a couple of snaps I realized I wasn't quite 100 percent because I got caught from behind a couple of times, I don't think in the past I would have," he said. "I don't have any pain, I just wasn't my normal self."

For the game, Williams completed nine of 15 passes for 117 yards and one touchdown while rushing for 49 yards on 15 carries.

Defensively JMU was able to key on the UMass ground game all afternoon. Quarterback Tony Williams, a converted defensive back made his first collegiate start. He runs the option well, but his ineffectiveness as a passer allowed the Dukes to concentrate on stopping the run.

Williams completed only four of 14 passes for 62 yards, with one touchdown and an interception. He ran 15 times for a net of 34 yards.

"We knew they were going to keep the ball on the ground and just pound the ball at us because they have that big offensive line," JMU cornerback Richard Bryant said. "We were ready."

"You've got to win games different ways," Scherer said. "You've got to come from behind, you've got to play ugly and win, you've got to play great defense and win... we're doing all those things. The bottom line is we're 4-1 and the guys are playing their hearts out."

No. 1 Old Dominion squeaks by UMass, 1-0

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

After experiencing the joy of victory for the first month of the season, the University of Massachusetts field hockey team discovered how agonizing defeat can be, losing a 1-0 heartbreaker Saturday to Old Dominion, the top team in the country.

While being competitive against the Lady Monarchs is difficult enough, UMass played at their level and looked as if they would break out ahead in the first half. However, they could not punch the ball in, and when Laura Knorr slammed a penalty corner past UMass goalie Philippa Scott at 25:04 of the second half, ODU had all they needed.

Or did they? The Minutewomen seemed to wake up after the goal, and began to play inspired field hockey. Scott made two spectacular saves on Lady Monarch penalty corners in the next minute that pumped both the crowd and her teammates up.

The Minutewomen pounded the ball in the Lady Monarchs zone, and they had three stellar opportunities in the last 10 minutes to tie the game up. With about nine minutes left, UMass got the ball by ODU goalie Kathy Fusina, but it trickled wide of the goal.

With six minutes left, UMass had a dead ball in, and for a second, the crowd thought the match was tied. The ball did not touch a second UMass player, however, which it must do on an indirect shot, so the apparent goal was nullified.

With 1:57 left in the match, Old Dominion was assessed a penalty and UMass attempted its third penalty corner of the half. A bad bounce on the inbounds pass eluded the team, and UMass tried unsuccessfully for another chance in the waning minute.

"We had our chances, both in the first half and in the second, but with a young team like ours, it's just having enough confidence to finish," Hixon said.

The big question was whether or not UMass could stop the Lady Monarch's offense. Old Dominion had beaten teams by scores of 9-0, 10-0 and 11-0 this year. The Minutewomen were successful due to the play of Scott in goal, a well executed game plan, and some lucky bounces.

Scott made some unconscious saves, especially on penalty corners by Old Dominion. Her first test came on the Lady Monarchs first penalty corner. Maiike Hilbrand's shot was dead on, but Scott made the save and UMass breathed a sigh of relief.

In fact, Scott saved everything that came her way in the first half, and with each successive save, her teammates built more and more confidence. Their regular offense was more potent than Old Dominion's, and it seemed imminent that they would score before the half ended.

Neither team scored, which may have been the reason why UMass came out flat in the second half. Old Dominion, after getting a few bad bounces in the first half due to the natural grass field, adjusted on their first penalty of the second half. Hilbrand assisted to Knorr, who shot it past Scott into the open corner.

"[Scott] did an excellent job," said sweeper Tracy Barclay, and Hixon concurred.

"She did well, she made some great saves," Hixon said. "The goal they scored was in the only open place in the goal. It was a great shot."

The game plan that stopped Old Dominion sounded simple enough, but it took a lot of players to step up and make it work.

"We were just trying to overplay the right side and make them force it to our strong side," Barclay said. "On the penalty corner, we had to get our flyer out to the ball," she said.

UMass also shadowed Old Dominion's best players, including Hilbrand, by sticking close to them at all times. Junior Joy Blenis played excellent defense in shadowing Hilbrand, so much so that Hilbrand was visibly frustrated.

"Joy and Colleen Duffy played very well defensively today," Hixon said.

Just as critical as UMass' fine defensive play Saturday was the condition of the field. Old Dominion was stifled consistently by bad bounces off the grass, and they were unaccustomed to this. From the opening whistle, the Lady Monarchs seemed surprised each time the ball bounced over their sticks. Their game is suited totally to artificial turf, and grass was as big a factor as Hixon thought it would be.

"We were competitive, and that was our number one goal today," she said. "We accomplished that goal. We learned a lot, and though we're happy with our competitiveness, we're disappointed with the result," Hixon added.

Like the sun that tried to break through Saturday, for a few minutes, one almost thought that the Minutewomen would break through and triumph. Unfortunately it didn't quite happen, although there's always another day.

Collegian photo by Carrie Wyeth

Dawn Trumbauer battles an Old Dominion player for a loose ball in Saturday's field hockey game. Old Dominion handed UMass their second loss of the season 1-0.

Men's soccer splashes to fifth victory of year, 4-1

By TED KOTTLER
Collegian Correspondent

On the muddy confines of Lower Boyden Field yesterday afternoon, the University of Massachusetts and University of Rhode Island men's soccer teams sloshed about in an entertaining (but dirty) match, and when it was over, the Minutemen joyously celebrated a well-executed 4-1 win.

Offense was the driving force behind UMass' success. The Minutemen (5-1-3) fired 22 shots to URI's 12, and 15 of UMass' shots were on net. Four found their way past URI goalie Patrick Maguire, with the first one coming at 18:00 of the first half, courtesy of Ray Cunha.

Justin Edelman brought the ball down one side of the field, and Cunha attacked with him on the other side. Edelman fed Cunha a pass across the box and Cunha launched it past Maguire for a 1-0 UMass lead.

UMass took a 2-0 lead on an unassisted Brett Anthony goal at 10:00 of the second half. Anthony drilled a shot from the top of the box and into the net.

About 12 minutes later, Todd Kylish scored his team-leading fourth goal that Anthony assisted on. Following a free kick, Kylish headed the ball for a score.

Another 8 minutes later, Steve Scott scored from Mike Doyle for a 4-0 lead. Scott was falling down as he shoved the ball past Maguire from the right side of the net.

Despite the commanding lead that the Minutemen held, they never relaxed defensively. In the final 15 minutes of the match UMass worked its hardest, rarely allowing the Rams a chance to get back in the contest.

UMass goalie Jon Gruber played most of the match and made four saves, but he gave way to Jon Roche, who played the final five minutes. While Roche allowed URI's only goal of the game (and only the sixth UMass has allowed all season), which Brian O'Haver scored from Brian Bradley with about five minutes left to make it 4-1, he also made 3 saves.

URI head coach Ed Bradley is concerned with certain problems his team has been having that continued yesterday.

"We've been playing pretty good soccer, but we have mental lapses," Bradley said. "We're playing scared out there. I just hope we can play a little better before the season's over."

UMass coach Sam Koch said, "[It was] A good job all the way around, both offensively and defensively. They kept it up until the very end."

The Minutemen host West Virginia in an Atlantic-10 match on Saturday, at 3 p.m. at Lower Boyden Field.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THE LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND

VOLUME CI ISSUE 25 TUESDAY, OCTOBER 8, 1991

O'Brien denies plan to hire replacements should GEO strike

By DAVID MASSEY
Collegian Staff

Chancellor O'Brien said yesterday that he was misrepresented by a Hampshire Union-News report that said he would hire replacements and freeze the salaries of members of the Graduate Employee Organization if they decide to strike.

This news which appeared in last Friday's Union-News appears to have stunned members of the GEO and onlookers alike.

O'Brien said freezing salaries and hiring replacements is only one of many options available to deal with a possible strike in the near future. He has sent a formal complaint to the Union-News expressing his dissatisfaction with the article by Jessica Clarke.

The article concentrated on this one option but did not discuss any other plans to deal with a potential strike, O'Brien said.

"We hope that there won't be a strike," O'Brien said. He also added that "no decision has been made" on what, if any, action to implement in the event of a strike.

O'Brien said one line from the letter that he is sending to the Union-News includes the passage, "We do feel we have an obligation to provide the undergraduates the education that they expect."

Marsha Blomberg, the city editor for the the Hampshire edition of the Union-News, said she stands by the reporter.

She also said she trusts the reporting skills of Clarke.

"The reporter [Clarke] is thorough, competent and careful," Blomberg said.

Jessica Clarke could not be reached for comment.

Union-News City Editor Robert Chipkin said he needs time to "sort out" O'Brien's complaint.

"It's very hard to react," Chipkin said, "The headline may have been unfortunate."

The headline used the slang word "scabs" to represent the replacements of potential striking graduate employees.

Chipkin said the article was written in an "unconditional" manner but added that if the Union-News were to be found at fault, they would run a correction.

The GEO has been negotiating with the administration for nine months to finalize their first union contract. The union, the largest on campus, represents teaching assistants, research assistants, interns and fellows.

The organization has threatened to take "decisive action" if their four major demands are not included in their contract. Some members have threatened to strike.

Peter Underdown, a GEO spokesperson, called O'Brien's possible response to a strike "a provocative statement."

"To speak in terms of threats when we are still negotiating an agreement, it's like he is trying to scare us," Underdown said.

"Among graduate employees, casually and informally, it makes them really mad, it's unecessarily confrontational," he said.

Underdown added that negotiating teams from both sides are meeting on Friday to try again to create an agreement. Underdown said the GEO is still waiting for a "reasonable offer" from the administration.

Patricia Greenfield, director of the Labor Relations and Research Center, said both sides of the dispute are now trying to exert their power to settle the conflict.

Greenfield said O'Brien's strategy of threatening to hire replacements if graduate employees strike is commonly used but in this case, difficult to implement. "Hiring

CONTINUED ON PAGE 2

Collegian photo by Jeff Egan

BEWARE OF DOG — Donna Horn displays her creation, "Ralph," at the Apple festival on the Amherst common Saturday afternoon.

Army occupies palace

Haitian Legislature removes president

By KEVIN NOBLET
Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti - Soldiers opened fire on the Legislative Palace on Monday and state-run radio reported about an hour later that lawmakers had decided to replace exiled President Jean-Bertrand Aristide.

About 150 soldiers sealed off the palace and a man who identified himself as a deputy said from inside that the building was under siege.

"Soldiers are occupying the palace," said the man, who refused to give his name. He said the soldiers had attacked the palace with tanks and gunfire at about 4:30 p.m. No one was wounded by gunfire, but soldiers struck some lawmakers with gun butts, he said.

About an hour later, state-run radio reported that the National Assembly had decided to invoke Article 149 of the constitution providing for a Supreme Court judge to replace Aristide, ousted in a Sept. 30 coup.

Earlier, about 70 soldiers burst into the waiting room of the international airport while a nine-member mission from the Organization of American States was meeting Haitian leaders to press for the

CONTINUED ON PAGE 3

Seabrook license upheld, foes to begin safety fight

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — Seabrook nuclear plant opponents acknowledged that an unfavorable Supreme Court decision Monday ends the battle over federal licensing, and shifts the fight to whether the plant is operated safely.

The court rejected an appeal by New Hampshire anti-nuclear groups and Massachusetts state officials who say a radiation leak on a summer day would be a major disaster for thousands of beachgoers along the seacoast in both states.

Without comment, the court let stand the federal licensing of the reactor that has been a target of anti-nuclear activists since construction began in 1976. Justice David Souter, a former New Hamphire judge and once the state's attorney general, disqualified himself from participating in the case.

The $6.6 billion plant was completed in 1986, but didn't get a license until March 1990 and began commercial operation in August 1990.

"It was almost inevitable," said Manchester lawyer Bob Backus, who represents the Seacoast Anti-Pollution League. The appeal of an earlier appellate court ruling upholding the Nuclear Regulatory Commission licensing procedure was "a very long shot," he said.

He said the licensing issue appears dead, but the plant still can be ordered shut down for safety operation issues.

He said his group still is trying to intervene in the licensing transfer from New Hampshire Yankee to Northeast Utilities in Connecticut, which is taking over bankrupt Public Service Company of New Hampshire. Public Service owns 36 percent of the plant. Backus' group claims Northeast is not running its Millstone nuclear plants safely, raising the question of whether it can run Seabrook safely.

Diane Curran of the New England Coalition on Nuclear Pollution, with headquarters in Brattleboro, VT., said from Washington the court rejection is "the end of the road on emergency planning."

"We have to live with the interpretation

CONTINUED ON PAGE 3

Nobel laureate Gordimer to speak

By GAYLE LONG
Collegian Staff

Nadine Gordimer, the South African novelist and recipient of the Nobel Prize for Literature this year, will be making two appearances in the Five College Area over the next 36 hours.

Gordimer, whose novels include "A Sport of Nature" and "July's People," will be speaking tonight in the Student Union Ballroom at 8:15 p.m., and Wednesday at Amherst College's Johnson Chapel at 12:30 p.m.

Tonight's lecture titled, "Fiction, Morals and Politics," is part of the Troy Lecture Series and is sponsored by the University of Massachusetts English department.

Tomorrow, Gordimer and Kenyan-born writer Ngugi wa Thiong'o will be speaking to the public about "African Writing: Past, Present and Future."

Gordimer, 58, had her first short story published at the age of 15. Her novels explore the changing historical landscape of her country and life under apartheid.

In South Africa, she is the founding member and leading figure in the Congress of South African Writers, which opposes apartheid.

Gordimer has published eight volumes of short stories and 10 novels. A new volume of short stories, "Jump," will be published by Farrar, Straus and Giroux this fall.

Gordimer's collection of essays, "The Essential Gesture: Writing, Politics, and Places," was edited by UMass associate professor of English Stephen Clingman. Clingman is the author of "The Novels of Nadine Gordimer: History from the Inside."

Ngugi is the Five College Distinguished Visiting Professor of Literature for Fall 1991. He teaches courses at both Amherst and Smith College.

Ngugi, who has many short stories, novels and plays to

CONTINUED ON PAGE 3

Inside:

Page 3
Tiananmen Square activist, Li Lu, speaks to a crowd of about 200 last night in the campus center.

Page 4
Jeremy P. Levinson cuts grass and gets cheated, causally.

Page 8
Minutewoman soccer just keeps on trucking with another win. Chalk one up for UMass.

Weather
Sunny and cold today with temps ranging anywhere between 58 and 35. A lot like my grades.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THE LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is a Registered Student Organization of the University of Massachusetts, published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000.

113 CAMPUS CENTER AMHERST, MA 01003
Phone (413) 545-3500 FAX (413) 545-1992

STAFF

Editor in Chief.....Gayle Long
Managing Editor.....Marc Elliott
Editorial Editor.....Greg Sukiennik
News Editor.....Preston P. Forman
Sports Editor.....Tamir Lipton
Arts Editor.....Paul DeGeorges
Photography Editor.....Carrie Wyeth
Black Affairs Editor.....Sondra Sutton
Women's Issues Editor.....Jessame Hannus
Jewish Affairs Editor.....Felice Cohen, Debra Kriegsman
Multicultural Affairs Editor.....Alexander Nguyen
Third World Affairs Editor.....Madanmohan Rao
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor.....Trystan Skeigh
Business Manager.....Randee Pastel
Advertising Manager.....Dena Haselkorn
Finance Manager.....Jeff Weiner
Circulation Manager.....Jim Winterbottom
Subscriptions Manager.....Stacy Rogers
Promotions Manager.....Scott Macey
Production Manager.....Terry Starmer
Day Graphics Manager.....Jenny Burns

PROFESSIONAL STAFF

Business.....Brian Harrington, Lori Black, Maureen Majerowski
Graphics.....Blake Phillips

Women's Forum

Tuesday, Oct. 8:

Lecture — Nadine Gordimer, "Three in a bed: Fiction, Morals and Politics." 8:15 p.m. Memorial Hall, UMass.

Wednesday, Oct. 9:

Seminar — Reflections on Thelma and Louise: A Dialogue Between Feminists. 12:15 - 1 p.m. Campus Center 804-808. Sponsored by the Women's Studies Program's Brown Bag Lunch Series. For this semester's schedule, stop by the Women's Studies Office.

Thursday, Oct. 10:

Film — Lianna, John Sayle's ground breaking movie dealing with a young married woman coming to terms with her lesbianism.

Sponsored by the LBGA and the UMass Program for Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Concerns.

Lecture — Mexicanas and Chicanas, a lecture by Elena Poniatowska. 7:30 p.m., Hampshire College, Franklin Patterson Main Lecture Hall.

Friday, Oct. 11:

Benefit — Feminist Aid to Central America, featuring numerous artists. 7:30 p.m., Wendell Town Hall. $5-10 at the door.

Have a nice weekend!

■ GEO

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

Greenfield did say she feels this dispute will result in a negotiated agreement since there is room for movement from both the administration and the GEO.

Harvey Friedman, former director of the Labor Relations and Research Center, said such an option expressed by the Chancellor will exacerbate this long-running dispute and make reaching a negotiated agreement a more difficult task.

"I don't think that makes much sense, to hire strike-breakers before a strike even starts," Friedman said.

Nevertheless, he said, striking would not be prudent. "There's too much to be lost at this stage of the game by a strike."

'scabs' has become a more and more frequently used management tactic," Greenfield said.

She also said that graduate students are not easily replaced. "Even if you could replace the graduate students, you have to consider the impact that any action will have on the institution," she said.

"It's hard to envision how that approach can be workable in a University setting," Greenfield said. "It certainly would be disruptive to the educational process to have new people coming in."

Florence
An Academic Year Abroad in the Arts and Humanities

A year or semester of undergraduate study immersed in the life and culture of Florence. The program combines university courses with individual tutorials and language study and, for students of the arts, work with Italian artists.

For information and an application:
Sarah Lawrence College In Florence
Box UMAF
Bronxville, New York 10708

SARAH LAWRENCE COLLEGE

WANTED:
USED MAC's
WE BUY YOUR USED MAC EQUIPMENT FOR TOP DOLLAR. CASH! WE SELL REFURBISHED MAC's AT DISCOUNT! CALL FOR QUOTE.
RENTEX INC. (800) 545-2313, (617) 423-5567

Tuesday 10/8 • 9pm
Comedy Night: Featuring Top comedians from TV and comedy clubs around the country.

Wednesday 10/9 • 9pm
Art Steele Band w/ Blues Jam
The best of the valley blues
Area musicians and volcalists invited to sit in, bring your own horns, etc.

Thursday 10/10 • 9pm
Blackout with the best of Rock & Roll
Playing your favorite cover tunes.

the hatch
GROUND FLOOR STUDENT UNION

Do you come from a Spanish speaking country?

Would you like to talk to other people who come from Spanish speaking countries?

Life on campus can be a wonderful experience but at times can also be confusing.

Mental Health Services will be offering a support group facilitated by Lynette Bloise, where you can share your experiences on campus.

Group will meet Mondays from 3:30 to 5:00p.m., starting in late October.

Pre-group interview is required; please call 545-2337 for an appointment.

¿Vienes de un pais de habla hispana?

¿Te gustaria hablar con otras personas que vienen de paises de habla hispana?

La vida en la universidad puede ser una experiencia maravillosa, pero a veces puede ser confusa.

Servicios de Salud Mental (Mental Health Services) va a ofrecer un grupo de discusión, dirigido por Lynette Bloise, donde tú puedes compartir tus experiencias en la universidad.

El grupo se va a reunir los lunes de 3:30 a 5:00 de la tarde, empezando a finales de octubre.

Una entrevista antes de comenzar el grupo es requerida; por favor llama 545-2337 para una cita.

Local

Companion Program invaluable

By ARI VAIS
Collegian Staff

Waiting for my interviewees, Michael Shaldone and his 'little companion', at Bart's Ice Cream in Amherst, I had a worrying thought: they had no idea what I would look like and vice versa. As I scanned the entrance nervously and wondered what I could do to look more like a reporter, my subjects walked in. I recognized them right away. In the Pioneer Valley, where we 18-22-year-olds are almost completely surrounded by tens of thousands of other 18-22-year-olds, kids stand out like sore thumbs.

At his mother's request for privacy, the 'little companion' will be called "Akeem" in this article.

Michael and Akeem's wonderfully atypical friendship formed through the Companion Program at the Resource Center in Amherst.

Akeem is, at twelve, the oldest of four children in a single-parent household. As his mother works, Akeem often finds himself looking after the children. Indeed, it could be said that he has always been the man of the house, a young man with a lot of responsibility. Hoping to avoid the risk of Akeem growing up too fast, his mother enrolled him in the Companion Program last summer. Akeem was paired up with Michael Shaldone, an older University of Massachusetts School of Management student in August.

In Shaldone, Akeem found the male role-model he needed while the former discovered the refreshing joy that it is to spend time with people much younger than yourself.

The Companion Program is similar to the national Big Brother and Big Sister programs: adult volunteers are matched up with children and teens and the couples spend at least a few hours a week together. Michael Shaldone spoke excitedly about his relationship.

"Akeem and I, we throw the football around a lot, go to UMass football games, go to see movies occasionally, or ..."

"We play pool," Akeem offered quietly.

"... we play pool, we took the dog out for a walk one day, we just hang out. We talk."

When Michael went up to get a root beer, Akeem confided in me: "When boys, around twelve or thirteen, don't have a father in their house, you can't talk to your mother about girls, see? You need someone else to talk to." Michael reappeared with his drink: "They're looking for male role models", he elaborated.

'Akeem's' cool, blase and extremely mature presence contrasted nicely with Michael's excitable enthusiasm, and the two seemed to enjoy each other's company greatly.

While Akeem and Michael have spent time on the UMass campus, the former does not figure it into his college plans. Instead, he is eyeing Syracuse, "for the football."

"That's his prime sport," said Michael, launching into a proud monologue about his 'little companion,' "but he was on the Amherst little league team this year.

They beat all the teams around here. Akeem was on the All-Stars and the team went and played Boston. So he's a great baseball player, too."

"Second in the state," Akeem inserted. Noticing his school friend Armando at a table near us, Akeem waved him over and the two began discussing last week's 3rd Bass concert at UMass. How do Akeem's friends feel about him hanging out with an adult?

"They know Mike. They think he's cool. We all hang out sometimes," he said.

The program is lacking in male volunteers. While the female half of the Companion Program has ample help, there are eighty-nine boys still waiting to be matched up. Michael Shaldone would very much like to see that number shrink.

"There are tons of men around here, because of the colleges, that have three, maybe five, hours a week that they can commit to a simple, simple relationship, one on one, with a young kid," Shaldone said.

"And it's really no effort, and once you get into it, I think it's a great experience," he continued. "It gives you an idea of what it's gonna be like when you have a kid, also it gets you involved in community work, which I think is important. In this day and age, there's not enough of that going on.

Anyone interested should contact Renee Moss at 253-2591 for more information.

Tiananmen Square activist describes his experiences

By MORGAN BITTON
Collegian Staff

Li Lu, one of the student activists who helped lead the Tiananmen Square uprising in the People's Republic of China in the spring of 1989, never imagined two years ago that he would be in the United States giving a speech in English, not Chinese he told a crowd of 200 in the University of Massachusetts Campus Center last night.

"It's very peculiar to have escaped and to be in exile," said Lu, who is now a student at Columbia University in New York. He explained that Tiananmen Square is often in his mind and feeling cut off from his family and friends.

Invited to join the Communist Party for winning awards and academic achievement, Lu hoped to work for change within the party. In 1985, he entered Nanjing University where he organized reform groups, with the interest of bringing democracy to China.

Lu describes the death of Hu Yaobang, in April 1989, as "a symbol to lead a protest movement. The Spring of 1989 was a time ripe for the emergence of democracy in China and the end of the Cold War era." Yaobang was known as a symbol of political reform. Lu organized a boycott of classes.

When police investigations began and his personal safety was being threatened on campus, Lu left for Beijing. Students who sat in front of Tiananmen Square, requesting to consult with government officials about problems facing China, were beaten by guards attempting to disperse them. "My life has never been the same after my trip to Beijing," said Lu.

Lu describes the movement as "a struggle between a special group of old men and a whole young generation of Chinese. We are a generation who has glimpsed independent life free from the oppression of communist regime."

The student forces, which grew to about 200,000 people according to Lu, were non-violent demonstrators. They wanted the government to hear their demands concerning the communist regime in China, "we believed we would make a new turn in history," said Lu.

The government tried to "crack down" on the movement and Lu helped organize a hunger strike. Lu explains that a hunger strike, in Beijing, is a formal declaration of war on the government. Lu described the night of June 3, with tanks rolling in and soldiers opening fire on anybody. Early the next morning, Lu left with the remaining students who got permission from military commanders to leave without being attacked.

Collegian photo by Carrie Wyeth

Tiananmen Square activist, Li Lu, speaks in the Campus Center last night.

Woman reports sexual assault

Compiled by DAVID MASSEY
Collegian Staff

A woman reported to the police on Friday night that she was sexually assaulted by a male person while riding back from a party with a group of students.

The incident is under investigation, University of Massachusetts police said.

ARRESTS:

• Kevin P. Kelly, 19, of Roslindale, was arrested Saturday morning in Lot 34 and charged with breaking and entering into three cars, larceny from two cars, and larceny of a credit card.

• Two UMass students from Seoul, Korea were arrested Friday afternoon in John Quincy Adams and charged with possession of marijuana.

LARCENY:

• Three rooms were broken into on Saturday afternoon in Skinner Hall. Three keyboards, a computer, and a monitor with a total value of approximately $4000 are missing. Police called the theft "an extensive break-in" and said the matter is under investigation.

■ Seabrook

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

that court has given us," she said. "Our best chance now is to show the plant is not being operated safely."

Her group will continue to monitor the plant's operation, she said.

Alan Nogee, energy specialist for the Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group in Boston, called the decision "consistent with previous Supreme Court decisions that have generally upheld the NRC's discretion to do anything it wants."

Tom Moughan of Citizens Within a 10-Mile Radius said the issues were generic about the NRC's authority and its effect on the adequacy of evacuation plans.

Moughan, of Newburyport, Mass., said activists are particularly upset that the court heard no testimony on the adequacy of the area's evacuation plans.

"[Seabrook officials] never had to prove the plans are adequate under any definition," Moughan said.

Neither Massachusetts group was among the opponents filing the challenge.

Former Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis and former Attorney General James Shannon were vocal critics of emergency plans that would affect Massachusetts communities near the New Hampshire border.

A spokesperson for Attorney General Scott Harshbarger said Harshbarger also raised legal questions.

"Clearly, we hoped the Supreme Court would hear the case based on the legal issues we had identified, but we respect their decision," spokesperson Thomas Samoluk said.

■ Haiti

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

return of Aristide. The OAS meeting took place on a floor above the waiting room.

The soldiers grabbed Aristide's former campaign manager, Evans Paul, roughed him up and dragged him away. Paul told reporters he was being sent to Venezuela, where Aristide first flew into exile.

A soldier fired a shot into the air to scatter reporters and photographers who tried to approach the soldiers.

The OAS diplomats, foreign ministers from eight countries and a leading U.S. State Department official, continued their meeting, and made no immediate statement on the disturbance.

■ Nobel

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

his credit, has written his two most recent novels in his native tongue, Kikuyu.

Because his critique of neocolonialism in Kenya resulted in his detention without trail for a year, Ngugi has been living in exile in Britian and the United States since 1982.

He has recently returned from an extensive lecture tour of the Republic of South Africa, and has been teaching at Yale University for the past three semesters in the English and Comparative Literature departments.

The lecture at Johnson Chapel is sponsored by the Five College Distiguished Visitors Program.

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions on this page are those of the individual writer or cartoonist, and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian or the University unless otherwise noted.

Casual work, casual pay

If we didn't extend some trust in life, we'd all go nuts.

When we get a new job or sign a new lease, we tend to assume that the boss or the landlord is going to treat us reasonably. We try to ignore the fact that this person's income is whatever he or she can take from us. We don't want to know that everything about the relationship is a give and take: We give and they take.

I consider myself a vigilant person; some might say to the point of neurosis. In any case, experience has taught me that I need to protect myself when it comes to bosses and landlords — no matter what swell people they are. Indeed, this is the story of one who should've known better.

Jeremy P. Levinson

My new landlord is a super-hip guy. He'll come over and socialize, telling stories and hanging out. A real Northampton progressive type. Unlike other landlords, this guy is on the level.

When I moved in, the house was in dire need of repairs and I offered my services to the landlord. Over beers he listed some things I could do, told me to keep track of my hours and we'd work something out. Casual. No big deal. It didn't occur to me to work out the specifics.

My major project was ripping out the landscaping and preparing the area to be re-landscaped. The grass, weeds and bushes hadn't been maintained in years and the place had started to look like the "Addams Family" house. So, I spent a lot of time working alone. I enjoyed working outside with my hands and I certainly needed the money.

After a couple of weeks of this, my landlord stopped over and we were talking about this and that. The end of the month was coming so I asked if we should talk about wages. Whatever, it's cool. My super-hip landlord turned and said "I'll pay you minimum wage for the yardwork." I stared and waited for him to laugh. When he didn't I said "You're out of your fucking mind."

"Hey," he said, "I could get some high-school kid to do this for three bucks an hour." I was still staring at him.

"But you didn't hire some high-school kid. You hired someone you know needs the money."

"Look, take it or leave it. If you don't want it ..."

I eventually talked him up to five bucks an hour. Mr. Super-Hip Guy wasn't so super-hip when pay day came. When I started the work everything was relaxed. Now that a chunk of it was done and we needed to talk money, things weren't so relaxed.

My landlord is the type of guy that's adamant about working people's rights — in Guatemala.

I took the five dollars an hour because, as Mr. Landlord had said, it was better than nothing. But then I let him know that I thought he was taking advantage of the situation. Then I let it go. Talking about it with him only created tension. It was like talking to a dollar sign. So, I continued to work.

Every once in a while, he'll bring it up out of nowhere, telling me why the situation is fair. He has got all sorts of rationale. In particular he loves to tell me that the work around the house isn't real work for real money. Rather, it's casual work for casual money.

Casual work could mean, "Well, I'll pay you whatever you think is fair." But it doesn't. It means "I'll pay you as little as possible and you'll like it, or I'll get someone else."

Don't get me wrong. I like my landlord. But when it comes to unequal relationships — boss/employee or landlord/tenant — personalities don't mean anything. When money gets into the equation, personalities become irrelevant. I've learned this lesson. Again.

You can guess what happens when I tell him to expect his rent in casual dollars.

Jeremy P. Levinson is a Collegian columnist

D'Souza gets facts wrong

Dinesh D'Souza's attack on Affirmative Action in his speech on Oct. 2 at Amherst College was only the latest salvo in his assault on multiculturalism in university education. But as in Illiberal Education (see separate articles by Catherin Stimson and Jon Weiner in The Nation, Sept. 30), D'Souza often gets his facts wrong. He claims that SATs are not racially biased, but only class biased. Yet data from the College Board demonstrates that significant disparities exist both by class and by race.

Jim Matson

While dismissing European cultural bias in SATs or curriculum, D'Souza rails against those who would seek to be more inclusive of multicultural perspectives. Yet he has sought to cast himself as something of a moderate in this debate, as someone in favor of "authentic multiculturalism," and it is his supposed moderation that merits the same critical appraisal he advocates for both Western and non-Western cultures.

D'Souza offers a multicultural reading list of his own in an Op-Ed column in the Wall Street Journal (Sept. 24). He highlights eight non-Western works, and provides a brief appraisal of their contributions and lasting significance. His choices are rather conventional, with his tastes running to unassailable classics — Confucius' Analects, the Koran, The Tale of Genji — and Nobel Prize laureates. They deserve to be read. But his short characterizations so distort and misrepresent these classics that one has to question both his knowledge of the texts and the lessons he thinks they impart.

Surprisingly, for someone from India, D'Souza mistakenly asserts that the Bhagavad-Gita, a key portion of the epic poem the Mahabharata, is part of the Upanishads. While this may appear an academic distinction to those who are unfamiliar with either text, the conflation indicates a rather sloppy approach to non-Western traditions.

The sole work written in English is Chinua Achebe's slender first novel, Things Fall Apart. Yet his account of this fine tragic tale about the onset of British colonialism in Southeast Nigeria is so lurid and simplistic that it echoes the very caricatures of African society in European literature that Achebe sought to correct.

D'Souza's summary description of "the destruction of thousand-year-old indigenous traditions" (which he elaborates as "internecine warfare," "drink[ing] wine from skulls of rival tribesmen," "wife-eating," and other gory superstitions) supposes that the village customs of the Ibo were primordial, unchanging, and without history. Yet if D'Souza had seriously studied the work and considerable scholarship it sparked he should know that the Ibo identity only emerged in the wake of the slave trade, as a term applied first to the communities among diverse lineages in the upland Niger delta victimized by slave hunters, and only gradually became a name for an ethnic category. D'Souza's plot summary is emblematic of his uncritical and insensitive approach to differences, and appears entirely unaware of the broad critique of the "invention of traditions."

In short, D'Souza seems to know very little of what he speaks. Perhaps that was no shortcoming as a "Domestic Policy Analyst" for the Reagan White House. But it is a serious flaw in one who would expound on the content of university curriculum.

Jim Matson is a visiting history professor at UMass

Third world affairs page criticized for "substantial problems"

As regular readers of the Third World Affairs page, we are frequently embarrassed by some of its defining features. Aside from turgid language, cliches, and a tendency to present serious issues in comic book caricatures, there are substantial problems with the page.

Firstly, the issue of class within Third World societies remains generally ignored. In repeating the now bankrupt rhetoric of nationalism, the TWA-page clique remains unaware of the fact that it is class structure in the Third World, and not merely the subjective will of elites in Brazil, India, Iraq, etc., which buttress imperialism. Beyond simple collaboration with Western powers, the elites of the South engage in independent indigenous exploration and repression, and often it is precisely the rhetoric of anti-imperialism that is used to legitimize such policies. Ibish, Rao, and company's appeals for technocracy and arguments in favor of nationalism betray their ignorance of history and their partial understanding of the dynamics of oppression.

Their representation of the nation-state as the indivisible entity and the object of oppression dismisses the complexity of the situation. The stance of the TWA-page cabal raises some questions: is the TWA page still in contact with social movements in the Third World? Has it ever been in contact with social movements in the Third World? Their consistent deference and glorification of state power leads us to the answer "no."

Secondly, the writers' unabashed support of statism in the Third World points to the problems of their conceptual framework and overall vision. Ironically, the framework is flawed by America-centrism, i.e. the faithful implicit depiction of U.S. imperialism as the sole propelling force of modern history. Hardly any factors remain in the hands of the Third World save the army, the state, and/or a nationalist yearning for naked power. Curiously, this prescription is in large measure an imitation of U.S. imperial vision. Subsequently, their ideals become the large regional hegemonies and would-be imperial powers in the Third World — e.g. Brazil, India, Iraq — who are transformed into "defenders of faith." Morality becomes a function solely of geography.

Furthermore, by deriding the left and remaining ignorant of Third World progressive movements, the rhetoric of resistance used by the TWA-page junta is exposed for what it is — an ally of Third World imperialism and reactionary forces in the West. Hence their response to the New World Order is added militarism.

Finally, it was argued four semesters ago that the Third World community, having been ignored and defamed, needed a voice to address its concerns and cover its events. Now those controlling the voice almost exclusively address (White) America in redundant, mind-numbing polemics. The Third World campus community itself is left beyond the margins. The only purpose of this mode of politics is the display of the writers' "moral" superiority, and this facet best illustrates their petite-bourgeois nature and shopkeeper mentality. Undoubtedly, the legacy of neo-colonialism must be combatted. But we must also have the courage and integrity to oppose the reactionary politics of oppressive Third World regimes and religious fundamentalism.

The only lesson the TWA-page cabal has to offer is an existential one, for in trying to present the banality of evil, they only give us the evil of banality.

Robin Varghese
Amherst

Editor's note - three others signed this letter.

Notes from the Campus Center basement

Well, well, well ... What do we have here? Yet another week of absolute gibberish to further warp your distracted and distraught minds.

Yes, [expletive]-head is famous. Everyone knows one. So this week's column is dedicated to [expletive]-head. You know him, let us give him the recognition he so richly deserves.

Graffitti of the Week! Graffiti of the Week! Graffiti of the Week! All the way from Herter Hall, home of history and all those other majors that offer no hope for employment and put you right on the road to graduate school, comes this little ditty that was defacing a wall in the men's room (it would never be found in the women's room for a reason that will become apparent in a moment). "If you're reading this, you're probably pissing on yourself." You can guess which wall it was written on...

One year ago this week, that whole Mapplethorpe controversy got started. [Expletive] censorship.

They did it again! Those bastards! Who is that cruel, cruel sadist working at the Housing Services Cable Network who keeps cutting "Godfather" fans off at the knees? Twice, the villains advertised the showing of "The Godfather" and "Godfather II." Twice, they've stopped "The Godfather" in the middle at exactly midnight. What happens in the HSCN offices at midnight every time they show "The Godfather?" Is that when the video cassette is due back at the rental store? Do they have their systems sabotaged by anti-Godfather terrorists? Does the staff have this strange mental fixation about tollbooths and machine guns?

I'll say this for Financial Aid Services. At least they're trying.

Marc Elliott

A tower lies empty. Everyone talks about a decline in enrollment. You've been put on the top floor of a tower in which people live who know how to use fire alarms but don't know what they're for. Your roommate's religion requires that he kill you or go to Hell. And yet, there are no singles to be found. You've just entered ... the Housing Services zone.

I refuse to indulge in DC jokes because they're (in my humble opinion) overdone. Just like a lot of the food.

Liz, Liz, Liz ... you go through marriages like Federal Express trucks go through small, furry, woodland creatures prone to crossing busy streets.

Why must at least one portion of the campus go on strike each semester? This time is the graduate students' turn. They vote this week as to whether or not they want to put down their books and pick up their picketing signs to go on strike (according to several flyers I've seen posted around campus). I don't want to be accused of trivializing the graduate students' concerns and campaign (and I know I will be) but, I just know there is at least one undergrad out there thinking: "Yes! Then I can get out of Spanish class! Go for it dudes!"

Without UMass, Amherst would be farmland.

So, if you think I'm just a big phallic symbol with a lousy haircut, or you want to make a submission for Graffiti of the Week, or you want to see me chopped into little beef strips after taking me out for a quick bite at the local Taco Bell, write in and tell me dammit! Seeing how campus mail is ridiculously slow, bring it down and drop it off at the classified window in 113 Campus Center Basement and address it to: Joe Bob Elliott the bonehead and columnist extraordinaire. Thanx.

Until next week, remember, "I'm not only the Hair Club president, I'm also a client."

Marc Eliott is a Collegian columnist

50% OFF
ALL COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS
TODAY ONLY!!!
Look for our table
on the Campus Center Concourse!
Or come to our classified counter at 113 Campus Center.

THE
EDWIN M. ROSSMAN
ALUMNI CAREER FORUMS
MATHEMATICS
DATE: WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 9, 1991
TIME: 4:00 PM
LOCATION: CAMPUS CENTER 168
SPONSORED BY:
MATHER CAREER CENTER
ALUMNI ASSOCIATION
DEPARTMENT OF MATHEMATICS AND STATISTICS
This is an opportunity to meet with alumni and discuss their experiences in the working world. Don't miss this important panel discussion!
ALUMNI PANELISTS:

Paul C. Desmarais, Ph.D. '74	Professor American International College Springfield, MA
Joan Burgess '61	Data Processing Manager National Evaluation System Amherst, MA
Joann Dittmar, '88	Assistant Actuarial Associate Mass. Mutual Life Insurance Co. Springfield, MA
Gerald Janowitz, '86	Systems Consultant Symmetric Systems Hartford, CT

For more information, please contact:
Mather Career Center
545-2224

the hatch
presents
smoke house lineup
and it's a winner!

"The Dinners"

Barbecue Chicken $4.75
Barbecue Brisket of Beef ... $4.95
Smoked Turkey Breast $5.95
Smoked Barbecue Ribs ... $6.50

All served with the Hatch's Special Barbecue Sauce, Barbecue Beans or Potatoes, Coleslaw and Roll & Butter

"The Specialties"

Smoked Ribs ..... $5.25/$9.99
Smoked Whale Ribs $14.99
Beef Brisket Sandwich $2.75
Smoked Turkey Sandwich .. $2.95
Smoke Ribs & Chicken ... $6.99
Barbecued Chicken ... $1.80/$3.49
Smoked Ribs & Hot Wings $8.99

All served with the Hatch's Special Barbecue Sauce!

Available 4:30-10:30 pm
Try our Flavor Crisp Chicken too!

CARRY OUT AVAILABLE
CALL 545-2597

And For A Limited Time-

COUPON COUPON COUPON COUPON COUPON
Save 10% on any Smokehouse Dinner or Smokehouse Specialty Item Offer good through October 19, 1991 with this coupon
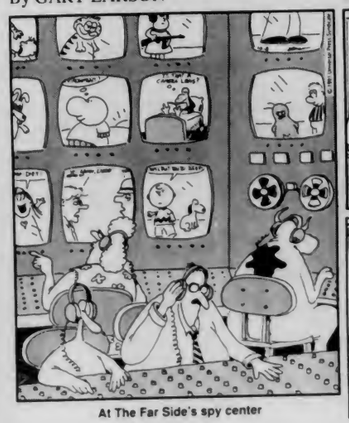
the hatch GROUND FLOOR STUDENT UNION

THE FAR SIDE
By GARY LARSON



At The Far Side's spy center

DOONESBURY
By GARRY TRUDEAU

LISTEN, B.D., IF YOU DON'T TAKE THIS DATE SORIOUSLY THEN YOU CAN FORGET ABOUT GETTING BACK TOGETHER!
OKAY, OKAY...
SO TELL ME ABOUT YOURSELF. WHAT ARE YOU INTERESTED IN?
THE USUAL... WATCHING TV, HAVING A FEW BREWS, THAT SORT OF THING.
WOW!... THAT'S FASCINATING...
THANKS.
YOU KNOW, I FEEL LIKE I'VE KNOWN YOU MY WHOLE LIFE.
YOU HAVE, DAMMIT! CAN WE GO HOME NOW?

CALVIN AND HOBBES
By BILL WATTERSON

HI, HOBBES!
GOOD HEAVENS, WHAT'S WRONG WITH YOU?
MOM SAID IF I KEEP MAKING THIS FACE, IT WILL FREEZE LIKE THIS FOREVER!
YOU REALLY THINK SO?
IT'S WORTH A TRY...
I'LL BET MY FEATURES ARE HARDENING ALREADY
I ALWAYS LIKED GARGOYLES

TANGELO PIE
By TIM SNIFFEN

SO YOU MEAN FREEDOM DO YOU GET AROUND HERE?
We have the run of the place. The owner's too zoned out to notice.
LET'S SEE... CAN YOU GROW A CARROT OUT OF YOUR HEAD?
Presto.
OK, CAN YOU PUT THE CASTLE FROM DISNEY WORLD ON YOUR TONGUE?
Satisfied?
I CAN SEE WHY YOU DON'T DO THIS MORE OFTEN... YOU LOOK LIKE AN IDIOT.
Got an explanation?

CAST OF THOUSANDS
By BARRY DEUTSCH

Zack, have you ever felt like your whole life is just a series of, well, stupid, contrived situations?
...YEAH.
Like some... some huge... ROMANCE NOVEL!
YEAH!
NAAH...
Hold on, I'll get it...

UNDER 21
By KRIS K. EARLE

AND NOW...
COOKING WITH ELVIS
It's The King In His Kitchen
HOWDY, FOLKS. TODAY WE'RE GOING TO MAKE ELVIS' FAVORITE LUNCHTIME MEAL... SHTEAK!
A young Elvis Presley 1955.
SHTEAK
TURN ON THE OVEN, SEE THE TEMPERTURE RISIN' FLAMES GETTING HOTTER, SEE THEM STARKLIN' AND FLYIN'
I SAID I HAFTA-HAFTA-BURN MY LUNCH WHOA!
I SAID I. HAFTA-HAFTA-BURN MY LUNCH
A fat Elvis circa 1971.
The Off The Ten Tv.
"I Sang To Burning Love"
WBCN

Quote of the Day

"If the doors of perception were cleansed, everything would appear to man as it is, infinite."
--William Blake

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHAEL JAFFE

ACROSS
1 Los Angeles athlete
4 Muslim faith
9 Trap
14 Truce
16 Cornhusker city
17 False
18 Of the early morning
19 Cut of meat
20 Putting on a pedestal
22 Gave a hand
24 Rocks
25 Heater for a hood
28 Ni-belst Mother
30 A large amount
34 Wed
36 Racket
37 — homo
38 Overran
41 Mosey along
43 Mitchell mansion
44 Edge
46 Note taker
47 Algerian port
48 Hans Christian Andersen's birthplace
51 Wet stuff
52 Blue
54 Singes
56 Upset
60 Silk worm
64 Running wild
65 Vexatious
67 Edda language
68 Sweetbrier
69 Unpleasant look
70 Appears
71 Turf

DOWN
1 Bonster
2 Florence's river
3 Galba's 2101
4 Sgt. neighbor
5 Pace
6 Saxony songs
7 Gave in
8 Simple Simon
9 Burns or Benny: e.g.
10 Wonder
11 Mr. Hulot portrayer
12 Gab
13 — fire: pend
15 Mull Island's neighbor
21 Climbing plant
23 Social note
25 Zest
26 Sadat
27 Coronet
29 Shirley, to Warren
31 Played a part
32 Drama part
33 Goat antelope
35 Change keys
39 Abrade
40 — away with 42 Manipulator
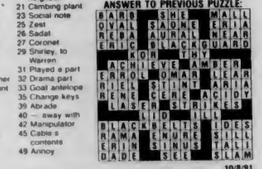
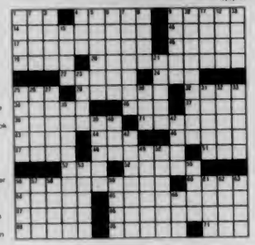
45 Cable's contents
49 Annoy
50 Hussein
53 Vary
55 Dispatched
56 Quayle and Rather
57 Presser
58 Your majesty!
59 Iowa town
61 Social worker Jacob
62 — time: swiftly
63 Like Methuselah
66 Nanny has three

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:



10/8/91



Menu

LUNCH
Keilbasa Dog
Chicken Cuttlet

BASICS LUNCH
Boursin and Sprout Sand.
Chicken Cuttlet

DINNER
Veal Cutlet Cordon Bleu Rotini

BASICS DINNER
Vege Shepherds Pie
Rotini

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): High-tech learning tools make a big difference for both students and teachers. Use all of your resources to advance your career aims. Business profits rise. Romance becomes more active.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Things begin to turn around for you. You make rapid financial progress. Be careful not to promise more than you can deliver. Eat those foods that give you energy, not extra pounds.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Rewarding relationships do not just happen. You must nurture them. Open up to those who have your best interests at heart. An older, more experienced person offers sage advice.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Close friends will be there when you need them. Have greater faith in your own abilities. Those who are flexible will make the largest gains. Go along with a loved one's plan.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Satisfy your strong urge to do something by seeking constructive outlets for your abundant energy. Any chores you have postponed can be cleared up with relative ease. Trust your financial instincts.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Tackle a new project enthusiastically; you finally have a chance to make your mark! A conservative, pragmatic approach to decision-making is far better than yielding to impulse.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A career transition can be tough on the nerves. Your sense of humor helps you through any difficult moments. Develop a new outlook on your love life. Better days lie ahead!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your financial goals are easier to achieve now. A timely investment or second source of income means greater security. Intelligent compromises are the key to a lasting alliance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be willing to go along with others where an exciting business idea is concerned. You must take action within the next few days. Be patient with your loved ones. Deeper rapport is possible.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be more willing to answer questions, otherwise, people may think you have something to hide. A family relationship finally changes for the better. Your financial position improves.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your actions could be misunderstood now. Be careful not to take advantage of someone while trying to improve your own position. You have a very good feeling about a new product.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Find out what is going on with your associates. Someone in authority wants to be surrounded by well-informed people. Make better use of your contacts. A timely investment pays big dividends.

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Marc Elliott
Copy Editor ..... Joanne Quimby
PhotoTechnician ..... Carrie Wyeth
Production Supervisor ..... Nicole Dumas
Production ..... Traci-Ann Disalvatore
Beth Butts

■ Red Sox

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 8

There were many a summer day/night when my girlfriend and I would be driving to or from one place or another, and she would say, "Come on, do we have to?"

"Just let me check the score, hon."

And so it went. Last Sunday (9/22) the Sox were one strike away from a first place tie. Hello, Roberto Kelley. The following Thursday was the Greg Harris Walk-a-thon, as the Sox blew two four-run-leads. I almost lost the faith then. Almost.

I sat on my couch last Wednesday night, on the brink of shock, but fully into denial. The Blue Jays were mobbing each other after (hello) Joe Carter's game-winning hit.

All hope, however, is not lost. You see, I'm also a Braves fan. No, I didn't just jump on the bandwagon. I've been a fan since the early '80s. The only baseball hat I own is a blue Braves hat from the old uniforms. These Braves have been the most exciting team in baseball for nearly the whole season, and won the West this weekend. The Braves owned the season series 9-3, but the Pirates are peaking. It could be a very interesting series.

The 1991 Boston Red Sox season is over. I've accepted that. But wait 'till next year. Every player will live up to their potential, the World Series trophy will call Beantown home, and there will be dancing in the streets.

First things first. Come on Rene, take me to the A.T.M.

AMHERST CINEMA
Now Playing
THE DOCTOR
STARRING
WILLIAM HURT
Showtimes:
Fri. - Sun.
7pm & 9:15pm
Mon-Thurs.
One show at 7:30pm
Adults $4.00
Student w/valid I.D. $3.00

STAIRMASTER
AEROBICS
Low Impact
Step
Hi/Low
Nautilus
Free Weights
Cybex
Lifecycle
Biocycles
Treadmill
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
256-0080

Bucci
a hair space
25 N. PLEASANT ST. AMHERST / 256-0733

rock bottom prices
YANKEE DISCOUNT OIL
584-4112 • 535-1888

Rent One of Ours
Columbus Weekend Special
Holiday weekend rate applies noon Friday to Tuesday morning
Rates start as low as $65.95
Must be 21 years of age or older with major credit card.
North Amherst Motors Auto & Truck Rental
78 Old Sunderland Rd., North Amherst, MA
549-RENT (549-7368)
Trucks and cargo vans also available
Don't be disappointed - reserve TODAY!
On Blue Route

家酒園南湖 Hunan Garden Restaurant
MANDARIN/SZECHUEN CUISINE
The Best Chinese Buffet
MANDARIN/SZECHUAN CUISINE
10 Belchertown Rd. • Route 9 Amherst • 256-0851/0852
WE DELIVER IN AMHERST 5-9:30 EVERYDAY
Minimum $15 plus $2 delivery charge
NEW BUFFET & SUNDAY BRUNCH
Buffet served Saturday 5-9p.m.
Buffet served 5-8 p.m. Sun.-Thurs.
Brunch served Sunday 11:30 a.m.-3 p.m.
ALL YOU CAN EAT $5.99
Children under 10 - $3.00

PAWSS
THE FIVE COLLEGE PROGRAM IN PEACE & WORLD SECURITY STUDIES
presents:
"CHINA AND THE NEW WORLD ORDER"
A lecture by:
JOHN ZHAO, U.S. Institute of Peace
Tuesday, October 8th, 8:00 PM
Herter 231
The University of Massachusetts
This event is free, open to the public, and wheelchair accessible.
For more information call PAWSS at 549-4600, ext. 519.

Classifieds

COME TO THE COLLEGIAN OFFICE 113 CAMPUS CENTER • THURSDAY 8:30-3:30 FRIDAY 8:30-2:30 • DEADLINE IS TWO DAYS PRIOR TO PUBLICATION • 20¢/WORD/DAY FOR STUDENTS • CASH IN ADVANCE

ACTIVITIES

CONCERTS CONCERTS CONCERTS!!! UPC Productions weekly meeting Rm. 163CC Tuesday Oct.8 6:00 PM Everybody Welcome

ANNOUNCEMENTS

ATTENTION NON-US RESIDENTS AA-1 immigration lottery is your chance. Apply on friends behalf for efficient strategies Call 542-4220

Bed and Breakfast. Downtown Amherst 549-0733

BUFFALO WINGS Get ready UMass students Your mama is in town!!!

TARKOVSKY FILM FESTIVAL any interest? Send wants, thoughts, and sase to: Tarkovsky c/o Box 395, Northempton 01061-0395

AUTO FOR SALE

'82 MERCURY CAPRI New brakes, muffler, battery, shocks good condition $1000 256-3020

'84 FORD ESCORT New brakes, muffler very reliable. $1000 665-4602-evenings

'87 SUZUKI SAMURI convertable 4x4 5 speeds 27K miles AM/FM cassette CB radio soft/hard tops. $3500 or BO. 549-0318 or 545-2395 Chin.

COLLEGE PIZZA

COLLEGE PIZZA Fall specs! Small cheese $3.50 Large cheese $6.00 Free soda with the purchase of a large sub, salad, or spaghetti 549-6098 549-6073 Must mention this ad

ENTERTAINMENT

RACK-A-DISC! $175.00 DJs, VJs, Karaoke for house/ Formal parties, Call 585-8900

FOR SALE

1981 TOYOTA COROLLA great shape $900 253-3369

1983 Z-26 Black nice $3900 call 253-3369

CASIO PMP-400 KEYBOARD $250/B.O. Call 6-1798 Excellent condition

CENTURIAN IRONMAN EXPERT Excellent condition, low mileage. Bought new for $600, Selling for $350/BO, Call Chris 253-3508

CHEAP 81 VW Diesel Runs great, body in bad shape $300 or BO Pat 6-4002

COMPUTER FOR SALE $600 Call Cliff 549-1762

FOR SALE HONDA CB360 4700mi. With extras call 253-0951 $400

FREE CAP WHEN you buy my Ford F150 4x4 Call Steve 253-7822

INTERVIEW SUIT - Woman's lightweight 100% wool suit. Size 12, navy, classic $75.00 253-9685

Jerry & Sara, Wild Boys. Pig Tangent 63 KFOG Call Jeff 549-7686

PANASONIC KX-P1125 printer. Brand new. Lots of features. 24 pin quality. Call Alan - 546-7377, $275 or B.O.

YAMAHA YPP-50: Touch sensitive, excellent piano replication, bought new for $1000.00, will sell for $700.00 B/O. Also, Roland Juno-106, bought new for $800.00, will sell for $300.00B/O. Also, Roland Jazz Chorus 120, bought used for $325.00, will sell for $225 firm. Call Rich at 256-6971.

FOUND

CAT FOUND Sylvan area- Gold with black markings on nose and mouth 6-7114

FOUND a History book in Herter Hall Call 549-0071 evening Kim

FUNDRAISERS

RAISE $500...$1000...$1500 FOOLPROOF FUNDRAISING For your fraternity, sorority, team or other campus organization. Act now for the chance to win a Caribbean cruise and tabulous prizes! Call 1-800-950-8472, ext 50

HELP WANTED

Earn $2500 & FREE trips selling Spring break packages to Bahamas, Mexico, Jamaica, Florida! Best trips & prices! Spring Break Travel 1-800-638-6786

EXTRA CASH: FREE monthly Avon catelog or become a representative Write: Toni OBrien 86 Camden St. Milford CT 06460

FAST FUNDRAISER Greeks, Clubs, Anyone (800) 748-6817.

FREE SPRING BREAK TRIPS to students or student organization promoting our spring break packages. GOOD pay & fun. Call CMI 1-800-423-5264

INSTALLER for car audio and security systems. Part time with growth to full time. Must be experienced. Call 584-9547 for interview.

"Know before you go," Where to work, live and ski free in Colorado's resorts. "Current guide to Aspen, Vail, Brecken-ridge and more! $18.95. Call 1-800-788-6174

SPRING BREAK REPS!!! Earn up to $3000! Become a part of a team and sell the best spring break trips on campus. Earn FREE trips and unlimited cash$$. Call now! Take A Break Student Travel (817)424-8222 or (800)-328-SAVE (Boston)

LOST

BIOLOGY BOOK Between Bartlet and Whitmore Please call Annie 546-2913 REWARD- I have an exam!

Black pouch pocketbook NEED GLASSES Please return to Campus Center information desk!

LOST Gold rope chain w/ heart charm 2 pearls in heart Please call 549-9332

LOST- Gold rope necklace If found call 549-4889 REWARD

LOST- UMass notebook, flips from the top Please Please call 549-6709 REWARD!!

MISSING KEYS!!! Four keys on a silver/turquoise chain -Call Matt #6-2886

MY LIFE!! Black wallet near LGRT a Reward! 256-3459

REWARD! Black metal prescription glasses in black case Call Jeff 546-7073

MUSICIANS

Guitar Lessons - Beginning/Intermediate Relaxed atmosphere, serious lessons $10/hr. Call Tim-256-6300

PERSONALS

VICTOR Thanks for making me smile

YO SADLOWSKI!!! Happy birthday The big 20 ! Love, James

LYNN: Happy 6 months I LOVE YOU!!! Sydney

RACHAEL, Just here to wish you a happy 21st from your roomies Tracey, Charity, & Nicole. We love you!

HAPPY BIRTHDAY JJ!! You win endless even if you're spending tonight in the HC room. I got you e case of S to S for your late night studying with Jim. You'll rage after exams. Good luck. Love Ye YFPS

AMY T Happy 5 month anniversary, "cutie" For the past 5 months we have grown so much together. Here's to an everlasting relationship! Love My Lady John M

DANNY- I LOVE YOU! Happy 23rd birthday. Love, Samanthe

DAVID Z. Heard melodies are sweet, but those unheard are sweeter. Love, Linda

THE PHANTOM TURNED 21 Sunday, and no one even said boo! Not even one "psyche psyche psyche!" For old time's sake. Not even one "You finally made it, Phantom" or a "Watch out, UMass!" Oh well, I'm still wicked super-duper psyched!

-THE PHANTOM

Hawkeye, you ugly, drunken, lazy, no good at fightin bum. Your floor hates you. Your old school hates you. You offend people everywhere. Good for you. Happy 21st. The James Boyz

ALEX TANTER got his green card. Congrats! I Love You! Your Wife

RESUME SERVICE

Cutting Edge Resumes. Complete resume service. Writing, laser printing, letters, advice. 549-0367

SERVICES

BICYCLE BROKEN? Call Pat 546-0119

PREGNANT? Need a pregnancy test, information or support? Call for free and confidential services. ALTERNATIVES 245 Main Street, Northampton 586-3000 or Greenfield 774-6019

FREE BOTTLED WATER for 1 week Call 546-3371

FREE pregnancy testing, confidential and caring support. BIRTHRIGHT 233 No Pleasant Street Amherst 549-1906

STUDENT GROUPS FESTIVAL

STUDENT GROUPS FESTIVAL Wednesday, Oct 9th 11am-3pm in SUB 50 RSO's, performances, prizes, free food.

TRAVEL

Bahama Cruise $99 per person 5 day/4 night hotel. Plan now for your break. Very limited offer. Call now 1-800-621-0572

SOME RELIABLE TOURS aren't so reliable. Thats why Mardi Gras Travel has the #1 for for fun price guarantee to Montreal! SEX LIES IN THE MONTREAL BAR CRAWL! Party weekends include 2 nights & transp. Group leaders travel FREE! (LAGNAF)-Call today 617-444-1111 We're #1 for fun!

TRAVEL FREE! Campus representatives wanted to earn intersession and spring break trips. 256-8254

Sports

Women's soccer blanks UNH, 4-0

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

On Saturday the University of Massachusetts women's soccer team continued it's success against nationally ranked teams as it defeated No. 19 New Hampshire 4-0. The eighth ranked Minutewomen improved their record to 7-1 on the season and 5-1 against the top 20.

Massachusetts came out with the offensive explosion that it had been missing thus far in the season. The assault was led by Holly Helmuth, who netted two goals, bringing her team leading total to seven.

Both of Helmuth's goals were scored in her usual fashion — head balls off of corner kicks. Helmuth has scored six that way this season.

"It's starting to become routine, I mean [Paula] Wilkens serves them in and Holly puts them home, what's new," Coach Jim Rudy said. "I figure one of these days the other teams are gonna start to figure the play out."

Helmuth put the Minutewomen on the board in the 10th minute on UMass' fourth corner of the day. Woodside placed the corner towards the back post where Helmuth was able to outleap everybody and head the ball off the upright and past New Hampshire goalie Molly Kirchner.

Five minutes into the second half Wilkens and Helmuth combined again on a corner, this time at the front post.

"We have a play where we put [Kim] Eynard on the goal line near the keeper, and just use her as a decoy," Rudy said. "She attracts a lot of attention and on that play she moved back a few yards and the keeper followed her which opened up the near post. Kirchner just moved because of Kim, and Holly headed it in."

In the 79th minute Wilkens scored herself with the assists going to Carrie Koeper and Michele Woodside. Koeper served the ball to the center about 25 yards out. Wilkens tipped the ball by two defenders and beat the charging Kirchner to the ball and put it in the net.

"That was a nice pass by Koeper," Rudy said. "It was a good goal, Paula was able to get behind the defense with a real cute move."

Six minutes later it was more of the same as Tracey Arwood collected a Koeper pass and slipped by the defense, beat Kirchner on a one-on-one move and scored into the empty net.

"It was nice to get some goals from t[he] field," Rudy said. "We had been scoring most of them from the corners."

Briana Scurry continued her dominance in the net. She has not been scored upon in over five games now and this game lowered her goals against average to a miniscule 0.25.

"Briana has been great," Rudy said. "She had to make a few big saves in this one but everything seems so routine for her. UNH had a few great bids but she turned them away every time."

Scurry and her teammates take a brief break from the top 20 competition as they host Dartmouth at 3 p.m. on Wednesday before traveling to No. 13 Hartford on Sunday.

Massachusetts, after two weeks at No. 8, could move up in the national rankings when they are released today.

"We would like to keep heading up," Rudy said. "We're doing very well right now. This weekend Eynard rose her game a notch and it showed. Also Paula Wilkens is healthy and was just marvelous.

When those two are playing well, we do well."

Collegian file photo

The University of Massachusetts women's soccer team continued to roll over the competition last weekend, defeating New Hampshire 4-0.

Sox fans must wait again

Let's get one thing straight; this will not be a whiney, they-did-it-to-us-again column. The Red Sox are no longer playing baseball. I've accepted that. I think.

Think back with me, to spring training in sunny Winter Haven, Florida. The Sox had a line-up akin to the powerhouse Yankee teams of the '50s and '60s. Optimism abounded. This is it. All the way. A summer-full of Joe Morgan's bizarre quotes. Home runs as abundant as mosquitoes. Clemens leading an overachieving pitching staff. Then reality hit.

Kevin Herlihy

They stunk the house up for much of the year, but there's no need to go over that ugliness. On August 9, our beloved BoSox were 11.5 games out, and I was being harassed with some frequency. I'm not the only Sox fan in my group of friends, but Rene (pronounced RAY-nee) bet me $10 that the Sox would not win the American League East. It was money in the bank.

From that point on it was tough. We'd be sitting around watching a Sox game, and if my boys got behind in the scoring, Rene would say, "Kev, I'll take you to the A.T.M. now."

But I wouldn't give in to that thinking. I figured, "Hey, anything can happen in over 50-something games. Toronto has been pegged as chokers for years now. If the Sox pick it up a bit, and Joe Carter gets caught in Skydome's retractable roof, we can do it.

There. I said it. "We." As a loyal Sox fan I see myself as part of the vast family network the team has inspired over its storied past. On my bedroom wall there is an actual cotton pennant from the 1967 season. It isn't worth a ton of money, but it's the only one in existence (that I know of). So now I put it away for a few months.

This past summer, instead of going home and saving money, I stayed in Amherst and spent money. My house didn't have the almighty "CABLE" television hook-up for most of the summer, so I became a loyal listener of Red Sox radio.

For you Johnny Most fans, try listening to the Bob Starr/Joe Castiglione team over the NESN or TV-38 telecast. Sean and Monty will disappear from your mind.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 7

From the dugout to the office

Former UMass coach still involved

By DAVID SCOTT
Collegian Staff

Staring out the window of his North Amherst office, Dick Bergquist borrows a line from a character played by former "Saturday Night Live" cast member Garritt Morris and said with a smile, "Base-ah-ball has been berry, berry good to me."

In turn, the former University of Massachusetts baseball coach has been very, very good to the baseball community worldwide.

A 1957 UMass grad, Bergquist, 59, began coaching at UMass in 1966 and compiled a .550 winning percentage in over 700 games before turning the reigns over to the present coach, Mike Stone, in 1987.

"When I was growing up, and then attending UMass, it was my dream to coach baseball," Bergquist said. "My idol was Earl Lorden, (former UMass coach) who I played for."

Bergquist recently assumed the job of executive director for the American Baseball Coaches Association, an organization with over 5,000 members concerned with preserving, promoting and advancing the game of baseball.

Founded in 1945, the ABCA recently moved its offices from Omaha, Neb. to Montague Road in North Amherst in order for Bergquist, who has lived in Amherst for 32 years, to run the office. It appears to be a match as obvious as a bat and a ball.

The coffee mug behind Bergquist's desk reads, "I'd rather be playing baseball," and while the former pitcher's playing days may be over, his days of helping baseball maintain its status as the national pastime are in full swing.

"I'd like to give [the ABCA] some direction for a few years," Bergquist explained. "As long as I have some vitality, I can help baseball in that respect."

Bergquist's resume reads like the yellow pages of baseball organizations and includes work with the College World Series, the 1984 Los Angeles Olympics, various Team USA baseball clubs as well as numerous tasks with international baseball and the United States Baseball Federation.

An ABCA Hall of Fame member, Bergquist has spent time with the Boston Red Sox in the fall Instructional League in Sarasota, Fla. and during one of those stints wrote an instructional book titled, "Baseball: Fundamentals and Strategies."

While at UMass, Bergquist coached the likes of major leaguers Jeff Reardon of the Red Sox and Mike Flanagan of the Baltimore Orioles. He's also traveled all over the world and received numerous honors, and through it all the amiable Bergquist remains both grateful, and perhaps more importantly, a fan of the game.

"I've been fortunate to be in the right place at the right time," Bergquist said. "I'm a very lucky guy to live out my dream."

Bergquist is clearly proud of the work that ABCA does in helping to promote amateur baseball while at the same time solving some of the problems facing the sport today. A yearly convention unites coaches from across the country and throughout the world for four days of clinics and conferences.

Anyone who has been around baseball as long as Bergquist has is bound to have formulated some opinions on the way the game should be played, and that very fact is one of the things that gives baseball its great tradition, according to Bergquist.

"Part of baseball is second-guessing, it's one of the fun parts of the game," Bergquist said. "As a coach or a player you must develop a thick skin."

Like most New Englanders, Bergquist has been on the twisting, turning roller coaster ride that each Red Sox fan endures from April to September. However, he reserves any harsh criticism, often aimed at the manager, having himself seen the view from inside the dugout.

"A lot of people who read the papers don't realize what goes on, both on and off the field during the course of a season," Bergquist said. "A manager sees these players day in and day out."

Bergquist uses the example of his former player, Reardon, as a prime indication of the peculiar ways of baseball. Reardon, who saved 40 games for the Sox this year, gave up a game-tying ninth inning home run to New York's Roberto Kelly in a game that would have put the Sox in a tie for first place.

"Instead of the 40 saves, he'll be remembered for that home run," Bergquist said shaking his head. "That's the nature of the game. If you're too sensitive, you'll never survive."

Bergquist also sees what is happening to many college sports programs and views the situation as one that must be corrected.

"There's a lot of abuse of programs," he said. "There do need to be some restrictions placed."

Bergquist believes the role of the institution itself will be vital in the coming years.

"The institution doesn't really take control now," he said. "They've got to realize that they must control the sports program. Some presidents don't know what's going on in their own athletic departments."

On matters pertaining strictly to baseball itself, Bergquist has been around long enough to see what he likes and dislikes, and in the process he has changed some of his views. Take the controversy of whether or not the designated hitter rule is beneficial to baseball.

"I liked it for years and was an advocate for the DH," Bergquist said. "But now I'd like to see it without the DH, it puts more thinking into the game when the manager has to finagle the pitching position."

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THE LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND

VOLUME CI ISSUE 26 WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 9, 1991

Thomas vote delayed due to allegations

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate on Tuesday postponed its vote on Clarence Thomas' Supreme Court nomination for one week to investigate allegations he sexually harassed a former aide. Thomas "totally and unequivocally" denied the accusation.

The embattled nominee requested a delay to "clear my name" as several crucial Democratic supporters said they could not vote for him until the allegations were aired.

Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, said the allegations should be "publicly and fairly resolved."

Anita Hill, a law professor who says Thomas repeated lewd remarks to her when she worked for him a decade ago, said she would cooperate with the Senate. "I intend to go to Washington if it is requested," she said.

Thomas appeared a sure bet for confirmation until Ms. Hill's allegations became public over the weekend. Since then, several Thomas opponents have urged new committee hearings to investigate Ms. Hill's allegations.

Thomas supporters had initially fought a delay, but relented when it became clear there might not be enough support for confirmation if the Senate voted Tuesday. "I can count," said Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas.

The decision to delay the vote capped a dramatic and remarkable day which saw the Senate agonizing not only over how to proceed with the nomination but also with the larger issue of its sensitivity to the issue of sexual harassment.

Even as they reluctantly agreed to the delay, Republicans vented anger that a private committee report on Ms. Hill's allegations was leaked to the media. Sen. Hank Brown, R-Colo., Judiciary Committee member, said he would demand appointment of a special prosecutor to investigate unspecified violations of Senate rules.

Under the agreement reached Tuesday night, the vote on the Thomas nomination was delayed exactly one week, until 6 p.m. Oct. 15.

Mitchell said the delay was "to give time for further inquiry into this matter by the Judiciary Committee." He did not specify what action the committee would take.

Sen. John Danforth, R-Mo., said he requested the delay after Thomas told him in a telephone call that "I have to restore what they have taken from me. I have to appear before the appropriate forum and clear my name."

Thomas remained out of public view Tuesday. Danforth released a sworn affidavit in which the nominee said "I totally and unequivocally deny Anita Hill's allegations of misconduct of any kind toward her, sexual or otherwise."

AP photo

University of Oklahoma law professor Anita Hill has alleged she was sexually harrassed by Supreme Court nominee Clarence Thomas.

Collegian photo by Erik Stone

WANNA SHARE? Rover makes friends with first-year music preformance graduate student Martha Gold at lunchtime outside the Student Union.

Nobel-winning author discusses imagination

By GAYLE LONG
Collegian Staff

Nadine Gordimer is a writer with a perfect sense of timing.

Gordimer, a South African novelist who was awarded the 1991 Nobel prize in Literature last week, was scheduled to visit the University of Massachusetts before the announcement was made.

"I'm happy to be here," Gordimer, 57, said. "As you know, I was coming anyway," she said to a crowd of 500 people in the Student Union Ballroom last night.

The petite Gordimer was dressed simply in dark slacks, a white blouse and a dark printed shawl. Her silver hair and warm smile were just barely visible to the back of the audience as she serenely glided to the podium.

But her small size and comfortable demeanor did not detract from her message for committed writers: The imagination should never belong to any institution, else the writer's sense of reality is lost.

Gordimer discussed the pressures on fiction writers in today's society in a lecture titled, "Three in a Bed: Fiction, Morals and Politics," which Gordimer termed as a "bit of a kinky cultural affair."

Gordimer said although the relationship of the concepts of morals and politics are shadily ambiguous, fiction is a defining responsibility.

"The more it [fiction] amazes me, the more I challenge it," she said.

Morals have been in storytelling since imagination developed in human beings, she said.

"I believe it was the inkling of development that the fear was somewhere about the truth about being alive might lie," Gordimer said.

She said morals developed from religion, which was also the invention of the human imaginations. Politics, she said, simply followed morals into fiction.

"Morals are the husband-stroke wife of fiction," she said. "Politics picked the lock and immobilized the alarm system."

She said the two concepts shared a family connection as politics' ancestry is morality.

"Fiction thought the embrace of politics was that of morals, and fiction accepted the third presence in the sheets," she said, referring to the title of the lecture.

Censorship's base can be found in the ancestry of morality, which can still be found

CONTINUED ON PAGE 4

Collegian photo by Jeff Egan

Nadine Gordimer

SAO directorate filled

Korza to head office for 1991-'92 year

By JASON GEORGE
Collegian Staff

The position of interim director of the Student Activities Office was filled yesterday following several weeks of contentious debate.

Assistant Dean of Students Edward P. Korza was named to head SAO for the current academic year. The position opened early last month when current director Irene Carew announced her intention to take an 11-month leave effective September 15.

"I look forward to the position with great enthusiasm," Korza said in a statement issued yesterday. "It's an exciting opportunity to work with Student Activities Division staff and students, and to help make a difference in addressing the needs and concerns of all constituencies."

In the weeks prior to Korza's appointment, Student Government Association leaders expressed their concern regarding the position to the administration. Following a stormy spring semester where the administration attempted to take over the SGA, Chancellor Richard O'Brien and Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Jo-Anne T. Vanin have expressed their desire to improve SGA-administration relations.

Vanin said Korza's appointment will allow relations between the SGA and administration to move forward.

"Korza had the support of the [SAO staff]," Vanin said. "Students were clear in maintaining their support for [Legal Services Director] Charles Dimari, but I respect their efforts to give a fair review to all the candidates they interviewed."

SGA President David Gagne said Korza's lack of experience with the Student Activities Office could hurt his ability to handle the position.

"[Korza] wasn't our first choice," Gagne said. "It's not that we don't want Ed — but

CONTINUED ON PAGE 2

Inside:

Page 3:
Students question ten billion in U.S. loans to Israel at rally yesterday.

Page 5:
Roger Long sees similarities between Kafka work and UMass bureaucracy.

Page 12:
Seventh-ranked women's soccer faces Dartmouth today at 3 p.m.

Weather

Cold disappears as temps reach 65-70. Put your jacket back in the closet and go outside.

Duffey memo illegal

Letter violated state campaign laws

By JASON GEORGE
Collegian Staff

A memorandum sent to faculty and staff by former University of Massachusetts Chancellor Joseph Duffey in Aug. 1990 violated Massachusetts campaign spending laws, according to the state's campaign finance office.

In a memo dated Aug. 20 on "Campus Budgets, Fiscal 1991 & 1992," Duffey urged faculty and staff to become informed about "all the ballot initiatives, but especially the proposal sponsored by the Citizens for Limited Taxation.

"I plan to oppose that iniative actively and seek to persuade as many persons as I can to vote "No" on the CLT referendum," Duffey wrote.

The Massachusetts Office of Campaign and Political Finance issued a letter to UMass general counsel William Searson on Oct. 4 stating that "the attached letter did constitute a use of public resources to influence a ballot question in violation of the campaign finance laws, M.G.L. c. 55."

The 1978 case establishing this precedent, Anderson v. City of Boston, "prohibits the expenditure of public funds or resources to promote or oppose or otherwise influence a ballot question absent express statutory authorization."

The CLT referendum, known widely as simply "Question 3", sought to roll state fees and taxes back to 1988 levels. The question was badly defeated last November.

Pat Carli, the campaign finance office's

CONTINUED ON PAGE 4

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THE LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is a Registered Student Organization of the University of Massachusetts, published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000.

113 CAMPUS CENTER AMHERST, MA 01003
Phone (413) 545-3500 FAX (413) 545-1592

STAFF

Editor in Chief....Gayle Long
Managing Editor....Marc Elliott
Editorial Editor....Greg Sukiennik
News Editor....Preston P. Forman
Sports Editor....Tamir Lipton
Arts Editor....Paul DeGeorges
Photography Editor....Carrie Wyeth
Black Affairs Editor....Sondra Sutton
Women's Issues Editor....Jessame Hannus
Jewish Affairs....Felice Cohen, Debra Kriegsman
Multicultural Affairs Editor....Alexander Nguyen
Third World Affairs Editor....Madanmohan Rao
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor....Trystan Skeigh
Business Manager....Randee Pastel
Advertising Manager....Dena Haselkorn
Finance Manager....Jeff Weiner
Circulation Manager....Jim Winterbottom
Subscriptions Manager....Stacy Rogers
Promotions Manager....Scott Macey
Production Manager....Nicole Dumas
Day Graphics Manager....Jenn Burns

PROFESSIONAL STAFF

Business....Brian Harrington, Lori Black, Maureen Majerowski
Graphics....Blake Phillips

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements that run on a space-available basis for campus and local non-profit organizations. Because of space contraints, the Collegian cannot print all FYIs submitted and no announcements can be repeated.

To submit an FYI, please send a TYPED press release with all pertinent information to 113 Campus Center c/o News Editor. FYIs cannot be taken over the phone.

Wednesday, October 9

Movie—The Hang Gliding Club is showing the movie "The Doors" at 5:00 p.m., 7:30 p.m., and 10:00 p.m. in the Campus Center Auditiorium. Admission is $2.00 at the 5:00 p.m. show and $3.00 at all others.

Festival—The Student Activities Office is sponsoring a Student Group Festival from 11:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom. Admission is free.

Blood Drive—The UMass Blood Drive will be held from 11:00 a.m.-4:00 p.m. in Campus Center room 101.

Meeting—The SGA operations is holding a Senate meeting from 7:00p.m.-9:30 p.m. in Campus Center room 803.

Lecture—Historian Michael Kammen will speak on American historical memory at 7:30 p.m. at the Stern Auditorium at Amherst College. His topic will be "Mystic Chords of Memory: The Transformation of Tradition in American Culture.

Thursday, October 10

Conversation—An informal conversation will be held with Julius Lester, UMass professor of Judiac studies and author of Lovesong: Becoming a Jew. The conversation will start at 8:00 p.m. in the Hillel House Lounge.

Lecture — The Campus Crusade for Christ invites you to a lecture by Dan Korem on "Fraud and the Supernatural" at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center Auditorium.

Meeting — There will be an Operation Exodus meeting to help out Soviet Jews coming to Israel at 4 p.m. in the Hillel House.

■ SAO

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

said. "It's not that we don't want Ed — but our biggest concern is that he hasn't been involved in the Student Activities Division [of the University].

"Until he realizes how things run, he may take longer than we want him to to make changes [in SAO]," Gagne said.

The SGA's top choice, Associate Dean of Academic Affairs Ricardo Townes, declined the position two weeks ago.

Korza had served as Assistant Dean of Students since April 1989, prior to which he served as assistant director of the division of Educational Access and Outreach since Dec. 1985.

Get Involved!
with campus health issues
SHAB*
- Sponsor health projects
- Represent student health care concerns
- Review UHS budget
- Serve on UHS Search Committees
- Meet other students interested in health care

COME SEE WHAT IT'S ALL ABOUT

Meeting: WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 9
Where: UHS Room 302
Time: 5:15 - 6:15 P.M.

Student Health Advisory Board (est. 1971)
University Health Services

OPEN 'TIL
2 A.M.
7 DAYS
A WEEK
BUFFALO BILLS
FAMOUS
ROAST BEEF
&
CHICKEN WINGS

What: Haigis Mall Street Fair
Where? Haigis Mall @ UMass
* accessible via PVTA buses
UMASS HOMECOMING 1991
Restoring the Tradition!!!
Game Booths
Fly With Hot Air Balloon Rides
When? 2:00 - 6:30 pm
Saturday, October 12th
Live Jazz & Latino Bands
Featuring: Food !!! and Drink Proper ID Required
Prepared by Top of The Campus
Sponsored by: UMass Alumni Relations & The Greek Area Government

STUDENT GROUPS FESTIVAL
TODAY!
Student Union Ballroom
WEDNESDAY OCTOBER 9
11AM-3PM
Free Food
Prizes
Entertainment
Activities
Demonstrations
Information
SPONSORED BY: The Student Activities Office

MIKE'S WESTVIEW CAFE
DRINK SPECIAL
Milwaukees Best
$3.95
Pitcher
Wednesday Night is GUEST BARTENDER NIGHT
At Mike's
Free t-shirts & Prizes
This week's guest bartender is: Wendy Rasketivz
Come have fun with Wendy and put your name in for the drawing.
Next week could be you!
Prizes:
*$25.00 Gift Certificate to Mike's
*Mike's Original T-Shirt
*2-Week membership to THE GYM
*Large Cheese Pizza from Pinocchio's
Your Picture will be Enshrined on the Walls of MIKE'SWESTVIEW
Drawing is Wednesday Night
Must be present at drawing to win but put your name in at any time!
Be here for next week's selection!!
DRINK SPECIAL Mike's Pink's $1.50
Always something for everyone!
DRINK SPECIAL Busch $4.50 Pitcher

Local

Future of Zeta Psi house undecided

By MICHAEL LEVY
Collegian Staff

Almost six months after a fire destroyed the third floor of the Zeta Psi fraternity house, the Phillips Street residence is still uninhabited.

Around 8:15 p.m. of last Apr. 10, a fire burned the third floor and left the floors below with water and smoke damage. The 14 fraternity brothers who had resided there were accepted into different fraternity and sorority houses for alternate housing.

They had plans to renovate over the summer which did not materialize, said Greek Affairs Director Edward Korza.

He also said the fraternity plans to move back into the house next fall.

"The chapter is alive and still flourishing," added Korza, who held the dual role of assistant dean of students and Greek Affairs director before being promoted to the position of interim Student Activities director yesterday.

Fraternity President James Quinn agreed about the impact on the fraternity, saying the change has been "nothing really, yet." He added that any reprecussions on the group will be long term.

There are about 35 members of Zeta Psi, according to Quinn.

The fire which sent 14 fraternity brothers out of their home was caused by a towel which rested on a brass lamp, according to official fire department records.

Wind blew the damp towel, which was hanging on a window, onto the lamp, reports said.

The future of the Zeta Psi house will be decided by Monday, said Quinn. A meeting with the fraternity's Alumni Board clarify the organization's future.

The Zeta Psi chapter has no control over the decisions regarding their house, said one fraternity brother.

"We're basically at their disposal now," he said.

Meanwhile, the brothers of Zeta Psi are scattered on and off campus, Quinn said. They await the fate of their central location.

Collegian photo by Josh Reynolds

OUTDOOR STUDYING — Evelyn Rosinski, a Junior psychology major, catches up on classwork on the Campus Center steps.

Students protest aid

U.S. money for Israel questioned

By BROOKE C. WHEELER
Collegian Staff

A small group of Jewish students gathered on the Student Union steps yesterday afternoon to protest $10 billion in United States loan guarantees to Israel.

The protesters, about ten students in all, carried signs saying "Israel security depends on Palestinian self-determination" and "Jews for a free Israel."

The students said the demonstration was also a commemoration of the killing of 17 Palestinians by police at a violent protest at Jerusalem's Temple Mount, a Muslim holy site near the Western Wall, a Jewish holy site, last October.

"Supporting this funding to Israel is not the same as supporting the Jewish people," said Charles Lechner, a sophomore Near Eastern Studies major.

The students said they fear the monetary aid will be used by the Israeli government to annex the West Bank by building more settlements there for Soviet Jewish immigrants, furthering conflict between Israel and the Palestinians.

The West Bank, an area of land that splits Israel nearly in half, was seized by Israel during the 1967 war. It has remained disputed territory ever since.

"The money will go into these settlements on the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, and this will only damage any chance of peace," said Lenchner.

The students moved from the front steps of the Student Union to the south side and into the Earthfoods cafe, handing out different informational pamphlets, including individual letters addressed to Senator Patrick Leahy (R-Vt.) regarding his stand in the matter.

"There has been so much violence," said senior Shira Katz, a STPEC/women's studies major. "As a Jew, I think the occupation should end for all involved. The Jewish people can't get it together until Palestinians and Jews have their own self-realization."

Lenchner also said inhabitants of the West Bank are being told to vacate their villages to make room for the settlements.

"It is against U.N. laws to give money to human rights abusers," he said. "That is exactly what they are doing."

"It is important to separate the idea of Jewish identity and love for Israel from the occupation in the West Bank," said senior anthropology major Jeffrey Yas.

"Jewish students on campus think they should support Israel no matter what. We have to deconstruct this myth," Yas said.

Collegian photo by Erik Stone

Students demonstrate yesterday afternoon on the Student Union steps to mark the first anniversary of the killing of 19 Palestinians at the Temple Mount in Jerusalem. The demonstrators, a group of Jewish students opposed to continuing Israeli settlements in the West Bank, are opposed to the proposed $10 billion in loans from the U.S. to Israel.

China accepts change

Expert sees Communism declining

By MICHAEL R. LINSKEY
Collegian Staff

Former bastions of communism will inevitably begin to move toward democracy due to the sweeping changes which have taken place in Eastern Europe over the past few years, an expert on China said last night.

John Zhao, a fellow at the United States Institute of Peace in Washington D.C., said that the People's Republic of China, which has traditionally had a conflict-filled relationship with the United States since Communist China's birth in 1949, is likely to begin adapting to a capitalist system.

"The changing of the international environment is a big factor for the changing of Beijing's perception toward the outside world," said Zhao of the Chinese capital. "China will gradually move toward democratization due to strong demand."

Zhao, speaking before a small crowd in Herter Hall, detailed the mutually suspicious and antagonistic relationship which existed between China and America from the Truman Cold War years until 1972, when China was accepted into the UN Security Council.

After discussing Chinese domestic history, Zhao noted similarities between China and the ever-tumultuous Soviet Union.

"Both societies have deeply-rooted Communist ideologies and were for a long time controlled by the Communist Party," he said. "The second similarity is that both have a strong demand from the masses for political democratization and pluralistic political agreement."

However, Zhao sees an orderly transition from communism to capitalism for China, not the rapid change the Soviets are undergoing.

"In the near future, say the next three to five years, you'll see an evolutionary process," he said. "All the conditions I have discussed will lead to that evolution rather than a revolutionary process."

The lecture, sponsored by the Five College Program in Peace and World Securities Studies (PAWSS), was followed by a question and answer session.

Study abroad praised

Planning important, coordinator says

By CATHERINE FINNERAN
Collegian Correspondent

It's never too early to start planning for study abroad, according to a University of Massachusetts study abroad coordinator.

Carol Lebold, a coordinator at the UMass International Exchange Center, believes in order to get a good idea of the variety of programs available and to decide which one is most suitable, it is necessary for students to start as soon as possible.

"The sooner you start, the greater are your options," Lebold says about the exchange process. She notes there is a lot of information available to students interested in studying abroad, and suggests that people take advantage of it so they can find a country and university that is right for them.

She suggests those interested come to the International Exchange Program headquarters, located in the Goodell building or go to the 10th Annual Study Abroad Fair, being held today from 10-3 on the Campus Center Concourse across from the Blue Wall.

Lebold believes that studying internationally is an incredible experience and that the success of the program is great. She says that being a student in a foreign country is a good way of seeing it inexpensively.

She added that not only do you experience another way of life, but that the experience "has impact on how you feel about yourself."

Lebold feels the process is "easier than people imagine" and often is not much more expensive than attending UMass.

Russ Edgar, a senior at UMass who spent two semesters in Spain feels that "If there is any possible way that you could do [the international exchange], I wouldn't leave school. . .without doing it."

Edgar believes that studying internationally makes "you go out and you push yourself to help yourself in another language."

Edgar said he feels that one year in a foreign language speaking country is comparable to eight semesters of studying a language at school.

Sheri Marcella, a classics major who spent a semester in Athens, believes that traveling abroad is a way of broadening your whole life. "You learn so much not only about what you are studying but about yourself," she says.

She also feels a student should start early and "get to know what's out there" so they make the choice that is right for them.

Gordimer

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

in countries today, she said, citing her own as an example.

"Two years ago, I would have said the pressure to write fiction that would conform to a specific morality, either political or religious long had been and could be and were saftely ignored by writers," she said.

Gordimer referred to South Africa when discussing what that government calls "politically-subversive" writing.

"The [government-backed] Church has twisted religion into racism; and the idea of purity being one race above another," she said.

Gordimer said writers have to let go of the morals and politics, which contort and twist reality.

"The time has come for writers to release themselves and experience life," she said. "The imagination transformation of fiction helps people understand their own natures and freedoms."

letter

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

director of auditing, said the use of public funds to influence the outcome of a referendum was a clear violation of state campaign spending laws.

"The letter was sent out which indicated taking a position on a ballot question with the use of public funds," Carli said. "That's a violation of the law."

Political Finance Office Director Mary F. McTigue recently told the Springfield Union-News that she ordered the University to develop a report of the expenditures involved in sending the letter, after which she would decide on whether the University would have to return money to the state.

Carli said if a restitution were ordered, it would be figured based upon the "total costs of the mailing," including printing, mailing and distribution.

Although the letter to Searson indicates that the first three pages of the four-page memo are devoted to budgetary and fiscal concerns, and only the final page concerns the CLT question, UMass is still responsible for reporting the total cost of the letter "even if only a portion of the materials contains advocacy in order to permit full disclosure."

Searson was unavailable for comment yesterday.

charlie's

1 Pray St., Amherst – 549-5403 • Open 11am

7 days a Week

Kitchen open til midnight

Game Room with 2 pool tables

Don't Forget Our Specials 9 pm-midnight

SAMUEL ADAMS OCTOBERFEST BOTTLES $2.25

Drink of the Week FUZZY NAVEL $1.95

Monday - 10c Mozzarella Sticks

Tuesday - 10c Mild or Hot Buffalo Wings

Wednesday - 25c Cheese Pizza Slices

Thursday - 10c Chicken "Hot Lips" Nuggets

Sunday - 10c Potato Skins

Arguments for recycling:

* saves natural resources
* saves money
* prevents water polution
* makes you feel good
* it's politically correct
* it's a town law

Arguments against recycling

* I'm lazy
* who cares about the environment
* who cares about the future
* lets use up our natural resources
* I get my water from the tap
* I want to give more $ to UMASS

CONTACT LENS CARE

AT THE UNIVERSITY HEALTH SERVICES

We take great pride in being able to fit many people who have had difficulty in the past wearing contact lenses.

•••

Offering a broad array of contact lenses with a large in house inventory.

•••

The new daily wear disposable and frequent replacement contact lenses are now available.

•••

All fittings are done by our eye doctors with experience in contact lens care and solving contact lens problems.

•••

Emphasis is placed on your ocular health and professional service.

uhs

EYE CARE PROGRAM

Convenient hours and convenient on campus location.

For questions or appointments, call 549-2671

TIAA-CREF on SOUND RETIREMENT INVESTING

WHEN PLANNING FOR THE FUTURE, SOME PEOPLE WANT EVERYTHING.

(We think that's perfectly reasonable.)

Retirement should be everything you dreamed it would be. With good health, you may spend a quarter of your life doing the things you've always dreamed of—like travelling the world, starting your own business, or playing tennis twelve months a year.

RETIRE YOUR WAY, WITH TIAA-CREF SRAs.

TIAA-CREF Supplemental Retirement Annuities are a unique way for members of the education and research communities to save extra money for their retirement years. Through tax-deferred savings, TIAA-CREF SRAs can help provide the extras that will make your retirement truly enjoyable. They will supplement your basic pension and Social Security in retirement, and they offer real benefits now:

- The benefits of tax deferral.
- A broad range of allocation choices.
- NO sales charges.
- Among the lowest expenses in the insurance and mutual fund industries.*
- A variety of ways to receive income, including lifetime retirement income, payments over a fixed period, or as cash.

TIAA-CREF CAN HELP MAKE YOUR DREAMS COME TRUE.

With the help of TIAA-CREF, retirement can be your chance to look after yourself the way you've always wanted. After all, nobody deserves it more.

GET YOUR FREE SRA KIT

which includes a slide calculator for estimating tax savings. Mail this coupon to: TIAA-CREF Dept. QC, 730 Third Avenue, New York, NY 10017. Or call 1 800-842-2733, ext. 8016.

Name (Please print)

Address

City State Zip Code

Institution (Full name)

Title Daytime Phone ( )

TIAA-CREF Participant ☐ Yes ☐ No

If yes, Social Security #

TIAA CREF

Ensuring the future for those who shape it.

© 1991 Teachers Insurance and Annuity Association-College Retirement Equities Fund

*A.M. Best Co. Best's Insurance Reports; Lipper Analytical Services, Inc., Mutual Fund Performance Analysis. CN

Some of the biggest, some of the best presents come in the smallest boxes!

AMHERST CINEMA

Now Playing

THE DOCTOR

STARRING WILLIAM HURT

Showtimes:

Fri. - Sun.
7pm & 9:15pm
Mon-Thurs.
One show at 7:30pm
Adults $4.00
Student w/valid I.D. $3.00

LONDON

ROUND TRIP FROM $350

From NEW YORK round trips starting at

LONDON $350
LENINGRAD $610
CARACAS $410
GUTEMALA C. $390
BANGKOK $939
LOS ANGELES-AUCKLAND $699

Taxes & surcharges not included. Fares subject to change.

Council Travel

79 So. Pleasent Street, Amherst, MA 01002 (413)256-1261

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions on this page are those of the individual writer or cartoonist, and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian or the University unless otherwise noted.

Oppression of bureaucracy can be overthrown with unity

In The Trial by Franz Kafka, the oppressive nature of life in the modern bureaucratic state is brilliantly depicted. Sound far-out and away from everyday life? Not really, or at least not when students have to deal with our beloved Whitmore Administration. Bureaucratic buck-passing and denial of responsibility is equally frequent and insidious in both places.

Now I've got a story to tell, but before I say anything else it's worth mentioning that certain individuals at UMass somehow, somewhere got the idea that students aren't interested in "politics." We're told instead that students — that means you — prefer to read "human interest" stories that are all "apolitical." The world's such a horrible place, after all (sob, whine, sob).

I don't share that view. I think students are interested in politics. Some students may even take an interest in left-wing politics, but don't say that one too loudly or by Christ you'll get a taste of the New World Order faster than Dan Quayle can swing a golf club.

Anyhow, last Thursday a couple of other people and myself were fortunate enough to meet with a certain (powerful) official in Whitmore concerning the ridiculous fee increases that students have had to bear over the past several years. I can sum up in two lines what transpired:

Us (politely, steadfastly): "But what about working-class kids and people of color who have been driven out of the University as a result of skyrocketing fee increases?"

Them (innocently, bureaucratically): "It wasn't my doing, I didn't have the power to prevent these increases. I'm sorry."

In The Trial the main character, Joseph K., is arrested for no reason because those who arrest him are merely "doing their jobs." Mr. K. hires a lawyer and tries to learn the law himself, only to find that responding legally to a particular "charge" is impossible if the charge isn't known by anyone, including they who do the actual sentencing. In the end, our hero is legally murdered, his throat cut by executioners who are, in fact, only "doing their jobs." There is no accountability for oppression, for no individual or group of individuals is accountable. There is no target for opposition. Opposition is impossible because it's never known who to oppose.

Roger Long

Our health fees went down $2.50. Sound good, or not too bad? The U.S. has emerged from the recession — yes, just like Dan Quayle passed his bar exam on the first try. What's outrageous for students is that co-payments have gone way up for routine exams, after-hours doctor visits, prescriptions and the like. It's called "cost-shifting": creating the illusion that students' costs have "stabilized" while more and more items aren't covered. This is only the beginning, and it's not limited to the heath fee by any means. It's bad news for healthy people who now feel the money squeeze. Others leave the University because they've been squeezed a little too much. Evidently the old adage "you get what you pay for" is no longer true at this University, this state, this country. Or maybe it never was. Maybe only now people are realizing that they've been screwed all along.

If we believe what bureaucrats tell us — "it's not my fault, I'm sorry" — it's useless to protest or even complain. But lighting a fire under the collective rump of the bureaucracy is not worthless, despite Kafka's pessimism. You see, a bureaucracy is just a sophisticated way of diffusing discontent, and Whitmore's expert bureaucrats make their living at it. Any obstacle to human liberation that can be thrown up by the powers that be will be thrown up, whether it be political, cultural, economic, bureaucratic or all of them at once. First "fees," then bigger fees, then more expensive but worse health care in the name of "cost-shifting," and all the while, "It's out of my control — I'm sorry."

When will it stop? The answer — only when we stand together and prevent it from going any further. It's quite simple. The simplicity, though, is betrayed when we realize how terribly difficult and how much work simplicity really is. I do know this: Right now our target is Whitmore. Very simply, for all students who won't stomach further lies and deceptions, the buck stops there.

Roger Long is a UMass student

Basics need reviewing

I'll be blunt. My job is not to paint hearts and flowers for humanity, and it has never been, either. Simply because I get a wonderful enjoyment out of pointing out the less lovely aspects of everyday life. Thus, this makes me a pessimist, realist, or a cynic. (Much to the dismay of my unnamed dorm neighbor who "fing hates cynics because they are so negative." How very observant. I guess life should be as peachy, chipper and all-around swell for the rest of us dastardly dismals with nasty attitude problems.)

Lorrie Cozzens

Well, enough of that jargon. Now I'll create for you the picture of my torturous discontent: I'm plodding down the infamous Orchard Hill path, quietly minding my own business and listening intently to the sound of my shoes smacking against the pavement. Out of nowhere a giggly woman (I use that term very lightly) and her gum-smacking, big-hair girlfriend appear for the ascent up the hill. The first one looks at me critically for a moment, smirks and remarks "go back to the 60's." She said it under her breath, but I was well within earshot of her rampant, flapping gums.

It's worth mentioning that that not only does this person need a crash course from Miss Manners, but apparently she needs an eye exam as well. Although it was a complete miscall on her behalf, the manner in which I was dressed is irrelevant. What is important, however, is that it is painfully obvious she missed some vital lessons from the sandbox at kindergarten. The theme song to the old television show "Different Strokes" says it all for me. Everyone is different, and I'd hate to think of how mundane the world would be like if everyone were a snide, gum-snapping, big hair person.

May I be struck by a flying saucer driven by Elvis if I am wrong, but I seriously believe that an institution with such a large wealth of people and cultures like our beloved UMass, everyone could be a bit more accepting towards what is different from themselves (and perhaps even willing to learn a little bit about it). For example, in my dorm the musical taste ranges from heavy metal, rap, jazz, rock, world beat, etc., yet everyone still happily co-exists with one another as if they were a family.

I guess I was wrong in thinking everybody could be as civil and nice. I think that's a real shame. After all, we're pretty much stuck with each another for quite some time. It makes huge amounts of sense to follow the old adage: "If you don't have anything nice to say, don't say anything at all." (Please, no comments on the First Amendment and the whole free speech deal. I'm talking about unsolicited and very unprovoked rudeness here.)

Education doesn't stem from the classroom only, nor should it either. Besides, isn't an education what we're all here for? I think it's time for someone to go back to the sandbox and learn a few basic lessons before hitting the college scene. Besides, I think your mom is calling.

Lorrie Cozzens is a UMass student

Bush isn't proven to be capable

I am responding to a letter by Michael Morrissey in the October 4 Collegian, entitled "Bush Clinched Re-Election." The letter's title was as close to the truth as Mr. Morrissey ever got in his shallow and unresearched sophistry.

Bush's proposed cuts in nuclear weapons amounts to little more than political maneuvering near election day. The cuts themselves are inconsequential, leaving 19 of 20 nuclear weapons in place while George still pushes for full production of the B-2 and SDI. Hopefully Mikhail Gorbachev, who has demonstrated continued sincerity toward far-reaching disarmament proposals while being repeatedly ignored by the Reagan and Bush administrations, will take full advantage of Bush's token gesture.

As for the "lame ass rescue attempt that ended in a helicopter crash," there is documented evidence that this fiasco was doctored by the CIA as part of the "October Surprise," in which George Bush was a key player. Is Mr. Morrissey purposefully ignoring blatant realities, or is he just incredibly blind?

According to Morrissey, Bush has worked capably with the U.N. If bullying, bribing and blackmailing are essential credentials, then Bush has proven to be highly capable.

It seems vital to Morrissey, also, that Bush was voted Time Magazine's "Man of the Year" in 1990. Since its inception as Henry Luce's propaganda vehicle, Time has been intolerant of dissent, chauvinistic, and a purveyor of superficial and slanted journalism. In other words, George Bush is the ruling class's "Golden Boy of the Year."

Michael Morrissey believes that with Bush's re-election "we can look forward to another four years of capable leadership." In light of a man whose obvious interests are geared toward the continued onslaught of predatory capitalism at all costs, I have to question if the planet can withstand another four years of such "capable leadership."

Kevin J. Smith
Amherst

Fundamentalism teaches love and equality, not condemnation

I am a fundamentalist Christian. Unlike the so-called "fundamentalists" in Friday's editorial by Trystan Skeigh, I am neither a blind follower nor a warmonger. Such terrible things, too often done "in the name of God," stem from a LACK of fundamentalism.

What is fundamentalism? It's following a small set of ideas, letting them guide the things you do and think. True fundamentalist Christians obey these two commands: Love God first, and love your neighbor as yourself (see Matthew 22:40). There is no room for condemning other people.

We are all on the same ground before God, regardless of the shade of our skin or the symbol on our restroom door. Equal. And following Christ does not mean being in intellectual agreement with the nearest pastor. It means accepting the spirit and forgiveness of Jesus Christ, who excluded no one while he was on Earth, and through his death on the cross saved all people.

Despite these two clear statements, Christians have to guard against the same dangers that Trystan points out. First, people tend to return to the culture they're used to, without thinking about it. Paul himself had to convince Christian churches in the first century to give up the "requirement" of avoiding meat, a Judaic tradition.

And when Christianity spread through barbaric Europe, it did not immediately change the role of women or blacks as part of the lower class. Why? For the same reason that Martin Luther King's dream is still a dream: people don't like to change. (Christ transcends culture; but that's another issue.)

As Trystan also points out, there is a second danger to the "organized religion" — possible manipulation. Some people — like Jim Jones — would try to play God and get people to worship THEM. The cure for both cultural inertia and Jim Jones-type leaders is already in the Bible.

Paul writes, "Test yourselves, to see if you are still following Christ," and later, "Test everything. Keep only what is good." Does this sound like a religion to "teach people to stop thinking and blindly follow?"

If you MUST label racist, closed-minded sexists who wrongly use the Bible as a "defense," then call them just that. Fundamental Christianity means going back to Christ for our answers, and he was none of those.

"Religious fundamentalism" is hardly a sedative. Just the opposite: it is a challenge to keep our priorities straight.

To strip away our artificial rules and or judgements of each other; if we're really following Christ, those things take care of themselves. To live as Thoreau urges, "Simplicity, simplicity, simplicity!"

The real issue is not that "fundamentalists deny the changes in accepted morality," but that society denies the changes proposed by fundamentalists — like inclusive, unconditional love.

Mark Wistey
Northeast

THE
EDWIN M. ROSSMAN
ALUMNI CAREER FORUMS

MATHEMATICS

DATE: WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 9, 1991
TIME: 4:00 PM
LOCATION: CAMPUS CENTER 168

SPONSORED BY:

MATHER CAREER CENTER
ALUMNI ASSOCIATION
DEPARTMENT OF MATHEMATICS AND STATISTICS

This is an opportunity to meet with alumni and discuss their experiences in the working world. Don't miss this important panel discussion!

ALUMNI PANELISTS:

Paul C. Desmarais, Ph.D. '74	Professor American International College Springfield, MA
Joan Burgess '61	Data Processing Manager National Evaluation System Amherst, MA
Joann Dittmar, '88	Assistant Actuarial Associate Mass. Mutual Life Insurance Co. Springfield, MA
Gerald Janowitz, '86	Systems Consultant Symmetric Systems Hartford, CT

For more information, please contact:
Mather Career Center
545-2224

TEST YOUR

HIV/AIDS AWARENESS

and

WIN FREE CONDOMS

just for trying

This is HIV/AIDS Awareness Week (Tuesday, October 8 through Thursday, October 10). See how aware you are by bringing your completed quiz to the AIDS information table on the Campus Center Concourse to pick up free condoms for each of your correct answers. Or, win free condoms from Captain Condom or Dental Dame if they spot you on campus and ask for your completed quiz!

1. What percentage of college students report using condoms every or almost everytime they have sex?
   a) 3 b) 93 c) 15 d) 59 e) 31
2. According to a recent study of universities nationwide (including UMass), an average of how many students are infected with HIV, the virus which causes AIDS?
   a) 1 in 20 b) 1 in 500 c) 2 in 50 d) 1 in 1000 e) none, yet
3. As of August 1, 1991, how many Massachusetts AIDS cases have resulted from heterosexual contact?
   a) 378 b) 24 c) 1,095 d) 106 e) 208

Sponsored by: University Health Center
Health Education Division
Peer Sexuality Education/Peer Health Promotion

DISTINGUISHED TEACHERS AWARD NOMINATIONS

DEADLINE: NOVEMBER 4, 1991

IF YOU KNOW A FACULTY MEMBER OR TEACHING ASSISTANT/ASSOCIATE WHO IS TRULY OUTSTANDING AND DESERVES RECOGNITION, SUBMIT A NOMINATION IN WRITING WITH A BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF WHY YOUR NOMINEE DESERVES THE AWARD.

FACULTY, ALUMNI AND CURRENT GRADUATE/UNDERGRADUATE STUDENTS MAY NOMINATE.

SUBMIT NOMINATIONS BY MONDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1991

TO: DISTINGUISHED TEACHING AWARD COMMITTEE
GRADUATE DEAN'S OFFICE
514 GOODELL BUILDING
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS

Third World Affairs

A statement of purpose and an answer to critics

Hark, hark, the dogs do bark!

Once again the time has come to remind everyone of the mission of the Third World Affairs page. As usual, and as predicted, this page has been subject to a series of criticisms in the past two semesters, some of them from members of the Third World community itself. At first these efforts have generally been greeted with a mixture of amusement and incredulity. It is amazing what people will admit to in public. Let us consider some of the most interesting or common charges.

We are condemned, as we have said we would be, by campus Third Worlders who are "embarrassed," primarily socially, by our unapologetic anti-imperialism. After all, it must be difficult to justify this kind of talk to various American Leftist friends, and it makes everyone oh-so-uncomfortable. Naturally our trenchant criticisms of the White "Left" are very unpleasant for those Third World students, and hanging-on ex-students, who like to hang out with these same shaggy Leftists. So sorry to embarass you, but we aren't about to let ourselves get stuffed and mounted for display, like teddy bears on the common. I guess we'll just never be nice and cuddly like you all.

Yes, we value and call for technological development. In case you hadn't noticed, technology does affect one's ability to avoid victimization. Or did you sleep through the Gulf War? But, of course, it's not PC or chic to think about anything as sordid as battlefield realities. The wise people never sully their elevated minds with anything as crude and banal as the mechanics of power. Nevertheless, we cling to some basic insights which, though out of fashion in the Happy Valley, may still contain some truth, like Power flows from the barrel of a gun.

We are identified as America-centeric for recognizing the unique power and influence of the United States in 1991. Of course, the ostrich approach is much more enjoyable, but not entirely realistic. In a calculation of the dynamic forces that determine the course of events in international relations, relative power seems to be an important variable, however unpleasant that may be to the hyper-idealistic.

Furthermore, we have often been criticized for being obsessed with the U.S. role in the South and always pointing out its crimes. However, given the leading role of the USA in the various imperial ventures of the North, it is obviously both necessary and appropriate to examine these issues on a regular basis, since it would be difficult to overemphasize their importance.

Generally these criticisms come hand in hand with a claim that we ignore the concerns of the on-campus Third World community. Let us repeat that this page is not for reporting the routine happenings of interest to Third World students, although we do often contribute articles on these topics to the news section. Nonetheless, we did feature no less than three polls of the views of Third World students on various issues last semester. This page exists to provide a counterweight to the prevailing discourse, of both the Right and the Left, to provide a perspective rarely seen in the U.S. media of any kind. Naturally, people who are embarrassed by this would rather see us print curry recipes, fashionable babble, and fashion tips.

Hussein Ibish

Much whining is devoted to our support for the more worthy, or potentially worthy, state structures of the South. We are charged with supporting "Third World imperialism" as supposedly demonstrated by such nations as Brazil, India, and Iraq. Obviously, "Third World imperialism" is about as silly an oxymoron as "the wealthy poor." Moreover, the charge is as unfounded and offensive as it is unsupportable. Condemning the efforts of India or Iraq to redress the depredations of colonialism and restore their national integrity as "imperialism", and linking it in kind to European racist colonialism, reveals a lack of commitment to the anti-colonial effort in its practical aspects and a sympathy with the world view of the State Department, which indulges in the very same rhetoric. Persons would be well advised to keep such views confined to the safety of the U.S. campus and not to bring them to the public sphere in the South.

In this vein we have been charged with statism and supporting (what some see as the bankrupt) ideology of nationalism. The first problem comes from the fact that many of the persons making this particular charge also declare themselves to be somehow in "solidarity" with the Palestinian people. If so, why do they support a Palestinian State, or perhaps they would rather see the creation of the Happy Families Palestinian Commune which will be free of statism, free of technology, defend itself by tossing roses at aggressors and be a giant social movement.

Naturally, these critics are at a loss to offer any concrete alternatives to some kind of state structure. The truth is that we currently live in a world of states and are probably better off dealing with reality rather than fantasy. Besides, all of our regular readers will be aware that we routinely lambaste those governments in the South that do not properly resist, or actually cooperate with, imperialism, as well as criticize those states that we may admire. The point is that those who do actively resist must be acknowledged, especially those who are genuinely revolutionary.

It is both easy and popular to criticize everyone who assumes power, for the exercise of power involves making hard choices that can always be attacked. Many people, including some well known Valley figures, make careers out of always being on the fence, of never taking a stand, but always assuming the moral high ground of denouncing anyone in power. That way they can never be wrong. But they are foolish, dangerous, often senile, and their young acolytes are insufferably silly.

In fact, a lot of these disagreements stem from the fact that many of our critics are hypnotized by and intoxicated with the values of Western Marxism, whereas we are either not Marxists, or are of the independent school of Third World Marxism. Having this mindset, they would like us to address, ad nauseum, class conflict in the South, and give less attention to the reinvigorated imperial assault that accompanies the new decade. Being Western Marxists, they attribute a "shopkeeper mentality" to us, as if it were a shame and disgrace to own a little shop somewhere. To them, it seems, the enemies are the ordinary petite-bourgeois of the South, rather than the massed armies, predatory multi-nationals, and neo-colonial ruling elites at the command of the imperial North.

Our various critics from these small segments of the Third World community have never agreed to heartfelt and repeated pleas to join staff members on radio for a public dialogue. This is consistently the case, from one semester to the next. At this stage it can only be concluded that this abject fear of public dialogue speaks not only to personal cowardice, but to a profound uncertainty in the validity of these various critiques.

Once again, this page is meant for dissent. It is a vehicle for alternative points of view emanating from the South. In this context, parroting the worthless cliches of the U.S. Left is as pointless as supporting the vile policies of the U.S. government.

There is a conflict abroad in the world between those in the North who exploit and those in the South who suffer. This conflict is a pervasive one between societies, economies, and cultures. It is this conflict that is represented in the contents of this page, whether this embarrasses some people or not.

Hussein Ibish is a Collegian staff member. The opinions in this article are not necessarily those of the Collegian.

International larceny: IMF and World Bank

The Third World finds itself in a most unusual predicament: it has to squander its resources merely to remain its squalid state of poverty. Strangely enough, much of this is being carried out in a professedly benevolent manner by institutions bearing august names like the "World Bank" or "International Monetary Fund."

More shrill, anti-Western rhetoric from disgruntled Third World reactionaries? Well, let the track record speak for itself.

The roots of the World Bank and IMF consortium lie in the Bretton Woods conference of 1944. Created to regulate inter-imperialist rivalries, the IMF took on the agenda of eliminating restrictions that hampered global trade growth, and the World Bank was designed to promote Western investments.

Fundamental to these institutions is a hostility to any restrictive investment and trade regulations. It is therefore unacceptable for a Third World country to close off its markets, regulate prices, provide consumer subsidies, or create trade barriers, even though these are essential for nurturing a budding manufacturing base and bringing about progressive change.

Far from being "impartial international institutions," the World Bank and the IMF are the most potent tool of Western imperialists to wrest economic and political control from the hands of Third World nationalists. And as the largest shareholder and contributor to this consortium, U.S. economic and political interests have always dominated its agenda. Key presidents of the World Bank have included Robert McNamara, manager of the Vietnam War, and A.W. Clausen, Bank of America president.

AP photo

On the first anniversary of the Al-Aqsa Mosque massacre of Palestinians by Israelis, Israeli Occupation forces cast a wary eye on the enemy.

Madanmohan Rao

From the very onset, these institutions have displayed their complete lack of support for the concerns of Third World liberation movements or nationalists. Some of the initial "developmental" loans supported the Western imperialists' resource extraction projects in their colonies, such as in Kenya (then a British colony), or the Belgian Congo (under Belgian rule).

Instances of blatant control for political purposes included the suspension of aid to Vietnam during the war, or for the Aswan dam in Egypt, or to Indonesia under Sukarno. Instead, support cheerfully flowed to the corrupt regimes in Mobutu's Zaire and Marcos's Philippines because they favored Western investment.

Most loans to the South have been for so called "social infrastructure" projects whose record speaks for itself.

As in the golden age of colonialism, funding was generous for projects which facilitated easy suction of resources into Western markets, such as creation of railroads in the mining districts of Mauritania, Brazil, and Botswana, and ports in Latin America.

Happily, this also opened up these markets to the Western motor industry, coupled with a flat refusal to support domestic oil exploration or production, and promotion of high usage of imported oil, to boost the revenues of Western oil companies.

Touting the importance of electricity for development, a slanted program of lending deliberately supported projects close to factories owned largely by Western corporations, such as the Rand mining Center in South Africa, the Shell-owned nickel mines in Colombia, and the Alcan-owned aluminum factory in Guyana.

Not be outdone in its zeal for championing the cause of the abject poor in the Third World, the World Bank was used to alleviate a glut in the Western fertilizer industry by promoting fertilizer-intensive projects in the South. A convenient famine in India, along with a foreign exchange crisis, was exploited to the hilt to extract concessions for Western fertilizer companies.

The widespread deforestation in the Third World is deplored as a major ecological crisis, but blame is placed squarely on "slash and burn" agricultural policies of the poor communities, ignoring the major role of the World Bank in assisting forest exploitation by Western cartels in Indonesia, Malaysia, and Ivory Coast.

Claiming to be the ally of the small farmer, the World Bank lent exhaustive support to programs which actually appropriated land for production to serve Western markets and local elites, as in the "Green Revolution" in India, and the move from subsistence farming to cash crop farming in large parts of Africa, which contributed disastrously to situations of famine.

Periodically, nationalist forces in the Third World have challenged the domination and intervention of the World Bank-IMF consortium. The responses have been entirely predictable.

Strikes at the Selebe-Pikwe copper-nickel mining project in Botswana, largely supported by the United States and South Africa, were suppressed brutally by the mining companies in association with the local government. Attempts to nationalize the U.S.-owned Hanna Mining Company in Brazil were thwarted by a coup in 1964 supported by the United States, the IMF and the World Bank.

Exploiting the weakness of nascent Third World states and buying the loyalties of corrupt elites, found in abundance, they keep the Third World in a perpetual state of economic vassalage.

Their most recent target is India, where those indoctrinated by the IMF have begun undoing a 40-year tradition of self- reliance. To some, it means untold fortunes in the days to come. To others it is a much-awaited relinquishing of state control.

And to some, as always, it will be a matter of life and death.

Madanmohan Rao is a Collegian staff member. The opinions in this article are not necessarily those of the Collegian.

Arts & Living

Soviet exhibit makes last U.S. stop in Amherst

By LISA CURTIS
Collegian Staff

Russian graphic design before the revolution, 1880-1917, a collection of 101 works on paper from the V.I. Lenin State Library in Moscow, is an unusual window into the Soviet Union's history. The exhibit, which opened Friday, Oct. 4 in the Mead Art Museum at Amherst College, was packed with a mix of age groups from the five college community.

"While selections from the collections of the Lenin Library have recently been shown outside the USSR, Russian graphic art design before the revolution, 1880-1917 is the most comprehensive exhibition to evaluate this seminal period of Russian design," writes Lenin Library spokesperson, Nina Barburina.

The exhibit has been shown in only two other places in the United States. Amherst College is the last stop, and then, "The exhibit will move on to Europe," said director of the Mead, Martha Sandweiss.

The works ranged from gorgeous, detailed Czarist menus in the style russe (a style which emphasizes the creative reworking of historical Russian themes and motifs) to humorous political propaganda, to ornate candy wrappers.

The largest menu on display is a beautiful three foot long work for a dinner on May 14, 1896 in honor of the coronation of their Imperial Majesties, Nicholas II and Alexandra Fedorovna. From the gold letters topping the page, to the tiny, intricate detailing of the courtiers's costumes, to the peacocks at its base, the menu suggests the luxury and elegance of the Czars of this often overlooked period in the USSR's history.

The menu was designed by Victor Vasnetsov (1848-1926), the same man who executed murals for the Historical Museum in Moscow, the Cathedral of St. Vladimir in Kiev, and designed the facade of the Tretyakov Gallery in Moscow.

"This exhibit helps us understand both Russian art and the consumer culture. It is work dating from right before the constructionist period, a period people don't know much about. It's a special treat to have it here," said Sandweiss.

The five stylistic and thematic categories are the style russe, Moderne (the Russian version of the Art Nouveau style which was known for its decorative manipulation of natural forms), the world of art group (innovative graphic artists associated with Sergei Diaghilev's journal of the same name), and political and commercial graphics.

"Many artists turned to the idiom of popular prints, or lubok, which provided the general public with a chronicle of recent military events of directed popular sentiment," added Barburina in reference to events of World War I.

One of the exhibition's examples of a Lubok is a caricature of a tall, pot bellied man with a rat like face and red jacket. The caption, translated from the Russian, reads, "At Vissla the Germans cursed their luck, and then, by God, they ran amok." This cartoonish type poster, looking very much like Gary Larson's Far Side work, was designed by Kazmir Malevich.

Another poster which beseeched aide for the victims of the war (1914) is a sombre contrast to the lubok print. The colors are drab and moody with the only brightness emanating from the brightness of the blood in the sketched soldier's hand and on the floor. The artist is Leonid Pasternak (1862-1945), father of Russian author and Nobel Prize winner, Boris Pasternak. A friend of Leo Tolstoy, Leonid was a painter and graphics designer who worked essentially in an academic manner.

"All are objects of material culture of the period, objects that touched the daily lives of most Russian citizens and collectively contributed to an aesthetic both rich in Russian tradition and responsive to international artistic currents," wrote Barburina.

"The flourishing of graphic art design in Russia in the four decades before the Revolution coincided with a period of rapid economic growth and the rise of a new class of wealthy entrepreneurs who had a keen interest in the arts and aesthetic matters," wrote The Amherst College News.

The exhibit was held in conjuction with a loan of works from Thomas P. Whitney's Collection. Whitney is an alumnus of Amherst College, and also donated his collection of Russian manuscripts by Russian emigres to the college. Amherst College will create the Amherst Center for Russian Culture in their library to house the gift given over the summer.

The Mead Art Museum is located on the east side of the college quadrangle. Admission is free. Open 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. weekdays and weekends 1 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Sci-fi and psychedelia this week on HSCN

By JAMIE GORNSTEIN
Collegian Correspondent

* A Poor Movie
 A Fair Movie
 A Good Movie
* An Excellent Movie
No Stars — A total waste of time

Hello movie lovers, and welcome again to the weekly reviews of what you can see on the Housing Services Cable Network. There's a great line-up this week, so be sure to catch a few of these blockbusters starting Wednesday, Oct. 9.

Return of the Jedi — Mark Hamill, Carrie Fisher, Harrison Ford. The third episode of the Star Wars saga is an adventure-packed as ever, if not a bit too emotional. 1/2

The Untouchables — Kevin Costner, Sean Connery, Robert DeNiro. The old TV series is brought to the big screen as Elliot Ness (Costner) brilliantly brings to justice the brutally corrupt Al Capone (DeNiro). Stunning performances by Costner and Connery (Best Supporting Actor). THIS WEEK'S TOP CHOICE! ****

Wisdom — Emilio Estevez, Demi Moore. A young grad student and his girlfriend travel cross country performing bank heists. A poor plot and even poorer directing and acting. THIS WEEK'S BOMB!! No Stars.

All The Right Moves — Tom Cruise, Lea Thompson, Craig T. Nelson. A high school football jock with high ambitions runs afoul of his coach. **

Bad Dreams — Jennifer Rubin, Bruce Abbot. Pitiful plot, appalling acting, and dreadful directing make for one pathetic horror movie about a girl who is awakened from a coma after thirteen years to discover that her therapy group is being murdered, one by one. If somebody can find me a REAL horror movie that has been released within the past four years, please let me know. I'm getting older, and these horror movies are not getting any better. No Stars.

Cocoon — Wilford Brimley, Hume Cronyn, Jessica Tandy, Don Ameche (Best Supporting Actor). Elderly residents of a Florida home are brought "back to life" after discovering an "out of this world" fountain of youth. A little tacky in parts, but the cast is a treat to watch. 1/2

The Doors — Val Kilmer, Meg Ryan. Oliver Stone presents this wild trip into the life of the late Lizard King Jim Morrison. Extremely convincing acting and the music is intense. 1/2

The Freshman — Marlon Brando, Matthew Broderick, Maximillian Schell. An NYU student falls in with a mob family in this light comedy. Brando is his wonderful "Godfather-like" self. ***

Check out the This Weekend section of the Collegian for a more complete listing of HSCN movies.

TJ's
One Bridge Street, Northampton
Massachusetts
413 - 586 - 1726
Sports Bar & Restaurant
PRESENTS:
'KARAOKE'
LIVE ENTERTAINMENT
Laser - Video - Sing - A - Long
October 9 - 16 - 23 - 30
WEDNESDAY
It's Fun!
It's Exciting!
New Concept!
Fabulous Prizes!
First in New England!
8:30 pm till 1:00 am

STAIRMASTER
AEROBICS
Low Impact
Step
Hi/Low
Nautilus
Free Weights
Cybex
Lifecycle
Biocycles
Treadmill
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
256-0080

WE WANT YOU!!! become a
JUDICIAL ADVISOR
If you're a:
-- Full-Time Undergraduate
-- Above a 2.0 GPA
-- Interested in the University of Massachusetts Judicial System
Training and Participation in hearings will begin in early November
APPLICATION DEADLINE: October 21, 12:00p.m.
Applications available at:
Cluster offices--BCP--CCEBMS--PGLBC--Legal Services Center
United Asia Cultural Center--Dean of Students Office-227 Whitmore
Student Atty. General's Office-420 Student Union
If you have any further questions, call the Student Atty. General's Office at 545-0341 or The Dean of Students Office at 545-2684

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 9th
ONE DAY SALE
LOSE IT ALL FOR ONLY $99.
CALL TODAY
nutri/system
NORTHAMPTON • 586-8111
HOLYOKE 536-0219
WILBRAHAM 596-8123
ENFIELD 203-741-6679
BRATTLEBORO 802-254-4430
W. SPRINGFIELD 787-1782
GREENFIELD 772-2148

THE FAR SIDE
By GARY LARSON

At the monthly meeting of Squidheads Anonymous

DOONESBURY
By GARRY TRUDEAU

THEN IN THE THIRD QUARTER I HIT WEINSTEIN ON THEIR 23 FOR A SHORT PICKUP OF-- OH, BO!
WHAT? YOU'VE BEEN TALKING ABOUT FOOTBALL FOR A SOLID HALF-HOUR! DON'T YOU WANT TO KNOW SOMETHING ABOUT ME?
OH, RIGHT, RIGHT...
SO IS THAT A BLEACH JOB OR WHAT?
CHECK!

CALVIN AND HOBBES
By BILL WATTERSON

DON'T MAKE FACES AT THE TABLE, CALVIN
I CAN'T HELP IT.
MOM SAID MY FACE WOULD FREEZE LIKE THIS SOME DAY, AND IT JUST DID.
NO, IT DIDN'T
IT DID, DAD! MOM WAS RIGHT. I'M HORRIBLY DISFIGURED FOR LIFE.
NO, YOU AREN'T.
BUT DON'T WORRY, I WON'T SPOIL DINNER SEE? ELEPHANT MAN!

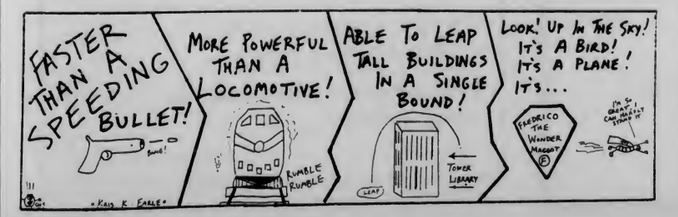
TANGELO PIE
By TIM SNIFFEN

YOU BOUT REPLACING MY HANDS WITH DEMOCRATIC PRESIDENTIAL HOPEFULS?
How 'bout my nose with a golf shoe?
O.K., TRY WRAPPING YOUR HEAD AROUND YOUR CHEST?
Better yet, I'll compress my skull to a height of 3 inches!
Cass, we really should stop this petty one-upsman-ship. It could have dangerous results.
OKAY.
BUT ONLY IF YOU CAN MAKE A HUGE REPLICA OF GARY TRUDEAU'S NOSE!
How 'bout a 950 lb. halibut with flower earrings!

CAST OF THOUSANDS
By BARRY DEUTSCH

I DUNNO... IT'S ALL JUST TOO WEIRD
How so?
WE SEEM PREMATURALLY SIMILAR... LIKE WE'RE BOTH HERE TO FULFILL A SIMILAR COSMIC FUNCTION OR SOMETHING
Hmmm...
You know, we even LOOK kinda alike...
YOU THINK SO? HERE TRY ON MY GLASSES...
I don't even want to THINK about what this means.
WHAT WHAT MEANS?

UNDER 21
By KRIS K. EARLE



FASTER THAN A SPEEDING BULLET!
MORE POWERFUL THAN A LOCOMOTIVE!
RUMBLE RUMBLE
ABLE TO LEAP TALL BUILDINGS IN A SINGLE BOUND!
LEAP
TOWER LIBRARY
LOOK! UP IN THE SKY! IT'S A BIRD! IT'S A PLANE! IT'S...
FREDERICO THE WONDER MAGGOT
I'm S' GLAD I'M NOT CLOSE TO IT!
• KRIS K. EARLE •

Quote of the Day

"The more I know, the less I understand."

--Don Henley

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

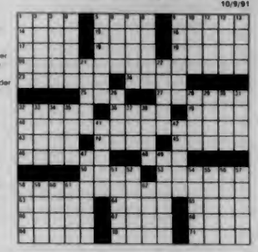
ACROSS
1 Fish to fry
5 Popinjays
9 Harsh sounds
14 Topper
15 "Time —!"
16 Give a share
17 Byron poem
18 A, in communications
19 Computer device
20 Upper story lines?
23 Like a rat race
24 Convery of films
25 California export
27 Climber's rope trick
32 Nonchalant
36 Sit one out
39 Comstock. i.e
40 Highball a bill?
43 Part of A.D
44 Fruitrate
45 Playful swimmer
46 Notice
48 Court
50 Olympus dweller
53 Customs
58 Chuggin toward home
63 Ticklish response
64 Tirolh's partner
65 Spanish stew
66 Gets in line
67 Colorado feeder
68 "Bind as —
69 In a curious way
70 Beguile with flattery
71 Clip

DOWN
1 Agronomist's concern
2 Not — in the world
3 Glacial form
4 Cobra's kin
5 Disaster
6 Chrishama today
7 Light pastry shells
8 Outpouring
9 Helen Hunt Jackson heroine
10 Matty of baseball
11 Ersatz coin
12 Tony
13 Dale's countermand
21 Not as surly
22 Strongard
26 George Washington, e.g.
28 Put heads together
29 Have the sulks
30 Postcards from the —
31 Glassmaker's oven
32 Nail
33 Highway part
34 — She Sweet
35 Wild plum
37 Put in
38 Tuck away
41 Banks or space
42 Rule the —
47 Not up to snuff
49 The —: Jane Russell flick
51 Saturn has them
52 Once more
54 Riotous
55 Emperor before Otho
56 Dazzling success
57 Emulate Scott Hamilton
58 — von Bismarck
59 With "The," Larry Shur play
60 Whomp
61 Command to a corgi
62 City near Mauna Loa

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

R	A	M		I	S	L	A	M		C	A	T	C	H
A	R	M	I	S	T	I	C	E		O	M	A	H	A
I	N	C	O	R	R	E	C	T		M	A	T	I	N
L	O	I	N		I	O	E	A	L	I	Z	I	N	G
			A	L	E	D		E	V	E
G	A	I	T		S	I	D	E		S	A	M	A	S
U	N	I	T	E			D	I	N	E	C	C	E
S	W	A	R	M	E	D		S	A	U	N	T	E	R
T	A	R	A		R	I	M		S	T	E	N	O
O	R	A	N	G		O	D		N	S	E		D	E	W
			S	A	D			S	E	A	R	S
D	I	S	P	L	E	A	S	E	D		E	R	I	A
A	R	I	O	T		M	A	D	D	E	N	I	N	G
N	O	R	S	E		E	G	L	A	N	T	I	N	E
S	N	E	E	R		S	E	E	M	S		S	O	O

10/9/91



Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Tri-County Ham Sandwich	Roast Turkey
Tuna Noodle Casserole	Cape Cod Fillets
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Swiss Muffin Sandwich	Roast Turkey
Tuna Noodle Casserole	Pinwheels

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES(March 21-April 19): Wake up and recognize what is really important to your mate's happiness. Material possessions count for less than affection and understanding. Become a better listener. Discretion is essential.

TAURUS(April 20-May 20): Avoid looking to other people for motivation. Find it within yourself. The business and employment outlook will improve soon. Do not jump off into the unknown. Stick to the safe and familiar.

GEMINI(May 21-June 20): You deserve better friends than those you are associating with now. Widen your social circle. A bonus is not the whole answer to your financial worries. Look for another source of income.

CANCER(June 21-July 22): Be aware of what is going on behind the scenes at work. You need all the information you can get to negotiate a profitable business deal. Your family's financial security is involved.

LEO(July 23-Aug. 22): A phone call or letter triggers a bright idea. Do your research now, but postpone making a presentation until you have the attention of those in authority. Remain both objective and prudent.

VIRGO(Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Wait a little longer before popping an important question. Some news regarding a family dinner proves very interesting. Cheer up someone who is feeling under the weather. Make sure your shoelaces are tied.

LIBRA(Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Recognize that there are no shortcuts to success and you will be ahead of the game. A work problem is not nearly as serious as it seems. A good evening for entertaining.

SCORPIO(Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A close relationship becomes more rewarding. A period of relaxation will help you return to work feeling refreshed. You feel like a new person! Let others discover your great sense of humor.

SAGITTARIUS(Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Stay the course. A positive attitude is the key to winning a competition. If concentration is difficult, take an occasional brief break. Romance needs more time to grow.

CAPRICORN(Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A chance meeting with an old love leaves you feeling full of vigor. Take care to finish all business projects on time. An evening shopping expedition could uncover some real bargains.

AQUARIUS(Jan. 19-Feb. 18): The emphasis now is on finishing what you start. Tackling too many things at one time could land you in hot water. Establish your priorities and stick to them. Persistence pays off!

PISCES(Feb. 19-March 20): A friendship may be more valuable than a current romance. Performing a favor for someone will work to your advantage. Keep a tight rein on your personal spending. Get together with friends tonight.

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Greg Sukiennik
Copy Editor.....Jason George
PhotoTechnician.....Carrie Wyeth
Production Supervisor.....Mike Carvalho
Production.....Lisa Jezowski, Joanne Quimby

Do you come from a Spanish speaking country?

Would you like to talk to other people who come from Spanish speaking countries?

Life on campus can be a wonderful experience but at times can also be confusing.

Mental Health Services will be offering a support group facilitated by Lynette Bloise, where you can share your experiences on campus.

Group will meet Mondays from 3:30 to 5:00p.m., starting in late October.

Pre-group interview is required; please call 545-2337 for an appointment.

¿Vienes de un pais de habla hispana?

¿Te gustaria hablar con otras personas que vienen de paises de habla hispana?

La vida en la universidad puede ser una experiencia maravillosa, pero a veces puede ser confusa.

Servicios de Salud Mental (Mental Health Services) va a ofrecer un grupo de discusión, dirigido por Lynette Bloise, donde tú puedes compartir tus experiencias en la universidad.

El grupo se va a reunir los lunes de 3:30 a 5:00 de la tarde, empezando a finales de octubre.

Una entrevista antes de comenzar el grupo es requerida; por favor llama 545-2337 para una cita.

■ women's tennis

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 12

Vilinskis played a fast paced match in defeating Kerri Kamiski 6-2, 6-0.

One of UMass's two wins resulted from a hard fought match which saw Amy Ryan rebound from a second set loss to Nicole Gaudet to win the third set and the match 6-4, 5-7, 6-1.

The other win came from the doubles pairing of Eddy and Girasella as they defeated Barrett and Vilinskis 8-4 in an eight game pro-set.

In another eight game pro-set, the doubles team of Yamasaki and Ryan lost to Enller and Nicole Gaudet 8-6. In the last match, Grim and Pam Levine were defeated by Darsi Cocozza and Krista Irmisher.

"It was a good match," said UConn coach Pat Babcock. "I think our experience made us just a little better."

COLLEGE SPECIAL
3 Games of Bowling and Shoe Rental
$5.00
with College I.D.

TUESDAY NIGHT SPECIAL
DOMINO PIZZA AND BOWL
Three Games Plus Slice of Pizza and Coke
$5.00 Plus Shoes
8:30 pm to Close
Every Thurs. Night 9:00pm-12:00am
Northampton Bowl
Live D.J. in the Ally Oops Lounge
Cover $2.00
Call 584-4830 for reservations

家酒園南湖 Hunan Garden Restaurant
MANDARIN/SZECHUEN CUISINE
The Best Chinese Buffet
MANDARIN/SZECHUAN CUISINE
10 Belchertown Rd. • Route 9 Amherst • 250-0251/0252
WE DELIVER IN AMHERST 5-9:30 EVERYDAY
Minimum $15 plus $2 delivery charge
NEW BUFFET & SUNDAY BRUNCH
Buffet Served Saturday 5-9p.m.
Buffet served 5-8 p.m. Sun.-Thurs.
Brunch served Sunday 11:30 a.m.-3 p.m.
ALL YOU CAN EAT $5.99

Eating Disorder Programs
Fall 1991 Sponsored by University Health Services.
Eating Disorder Self-Help Groups
Led by trained students recovered from an eating disorder. Open to anyone. Confidentiality Assured. Call 549-2671, Clinic IV, for more information.
Eating Disorder Treatment Program
For individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner.
Mondays or Tuesdays - beginning September 17, University Health Services. Confidentiality Assured. Call 549-2671, Clinic IV.
Food and Feelings Workshop
Led by Peer Health Educators to schedule for your Residence Hall - call 549-2671, ext. 181.

UPC & DEC Presel.
SHABBA RANKS
Weds., Oct. 16th
8pm
in the UMass Fine Arts Center
TIX on sale NOW at the UMASS Fine Arts Center Box Office
(413) 545-2511
$10 UMass Students
$13 All Others
MC/Visa Accepted

STEINBECK COLLISION REPAIR & AUTOBODY
53 So. Prospect -Amherst Center
256-8157 • 256-1385

- Imports & other unibody vehicles are our specialty.
- State of the art equipment for precision frame and unibody straightening (+or-1/2 mm)
- Over 90 years staff experience.
- Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass replacement.
- Advanced European Technology Painting and Refinishing Systems.

Remember it's your car and your choice of repair facilities.

Shop Registration # RS1212

■ postseason

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 12

Zane Smith is just as solid. Their relief corps is stronger than the Braves', which could be crucial.

Although Bobby Cox of the Braves should win Manager of the Year, the Pirates' Jim Leyland is more competent between the lines. Leyland's ability may even squeeze a win out of this series for his team, although it won't be enough. Atlanta will triumph in seven games, and will face Minnesota in the Fall Classic.

I look for the most exciting playoff series since 1986, and I hope I won't be disappointed. I can see any of these four teams winning a World Series title, although only one will: Atlanta. To use an already overused cliche, it will be the Braves' new world.

Michael Morrissey is a Collegian staff member

Rent One of Ours
Columbus Weekend Special
Holiday weekend rate applies noon Friday to Tuesday morning
Rates start as low as $65.95
Must be 21 years of age or older with major credit card.
Trucks and cargo vans also available
North Amherst Motors Auto & Truck Rental
76 Old Sunderland Rd., North Amherst, MA
549-RENT (549-7368)
Don't be disappointed - reserve TODAY!
On Bus Route

"Dedicated to Treating the Cause, Not the Symptom"
AMHERST CHIROPRACTIC
Family Health Center
DR. VIRGINIA D. HARPER
Chiropractic Physician
549-0335 OFFICE HOURS BY APPOINTMENT

WITH ROOTS HERE AT UMASS, STUDENTS CAN BRANCH OUT TO ONE OF OVER 90 COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES ACROSS THE UNITED STATES THROUGH THE NATIONAL STUDENT EXCHANGE PROGRAM

INTERESTED?! PLEASE ATTEND ONE OF THIS MONTH'S INFORMATION SESSIONS, FROM 4-5 PM:

Oct. 9 Wed. CC 904-908
Oct. 15 Tue. CC 904-908
Oct. 24 Thur. CC 904-908
Oct. 30 Wed. CC 904-908
Nov. 4 Mon. CC804-808
Nov. 7 Thur. CC 804-808
Nov. 12 Tue. CC 904-908
Nov. 20 Wed. CC 903

Classifieds

COME TO THE COLLEGIAN OFFICE 113 CAMPUS CENTER • THURSDAY 8:30-3:30 FRIDAY 8:30-2:30 • DEADLINE IS TWO DAYS PRIOR TO PUBLICATION • 20¢/WORD/DAY FOR STUDENTS • CASH IN ADVANCE

ACTIVITIES

5-College Armenians and Friends
Armenian Club Meeting
Thurs. Oct 10, 7pm, Room 168C, UMass Campus Center
For info, call 549-1409

ATTENTION: Pre-med, Public health, nursing and all other students interested in health care issues...Stop by the Student Health Advisory Board's next meeting on October 9, 1991 (Wed) at 5:15 in room 302 at the Health Center.

UMASS TAE KWON DO
Self-defense keep in shape
Come train with us
Interested? Call Marty 546-7003 or Marianne 546-6443

ANNOUNCEMENTS

ATTENTION NON-US RESIDENTS
AA-1 immigration lottery is your chance. Apply on friends behalf for efficient strategies Call 542-4220

BRADY BUNCH FANS:
Get soaked at Delta Upsilon and
Sigma Kappa's
Dunking Booth!
Saturday 10/12
Haigis Mall

KSA 3rd General Meeting
on
Oct 10 (Thurs) at 7:00 PM
at
Campus Center Room 165-169
*Refreshments will be served

OPERATION EXODUS meeting. Help Soviet Jews coming to Israel. 4pm Hillel House Oct. 10

TARKOVSKY FILM FESTIVAL any interest? Send wants, thoughts, and ease to: Tarkovsky c/o Box 395, Northampton 01061-0395

AUTO FOR SALE

'92 MERCURY CAPRI New brakes, muffler, battery, shocks good condition $1000 256-3020

84 FORD ESCORT New brakes, muffler very reliable. $1000 665-4602-evenings

1985 CHEVY SPECTRUM
New brake, new carborator
Runs great! $1,300 or B.O.
Call 253-9339

87 SUZUKI SAMURI convertable 4x4 5 speeds 27K miles AM/FM cassette CB radio soft/hard tops. $3500 or BO 549-0318 or 545-2395 Chin.

DEBATE

Are you interested in public speaking? Would you like to participate in e Mock Trial Competition or other competitive debate? Come to the UMass Debate Society Meeting on Wednesday 7:00 in the Debate Trailer or call 545-3509 for more information.

EDITING & TUTORING

Editing, English language tutoring, wordprocessing offered by retired teacher to international students end non-english majors. Quick service, modest fees. 253-3354.

ENTERTAINMENT

RACK-A-DISC! $175.00 DJs, VJs, Karaoke for house/ Formal parties, Call 586-9900

FOR SALE

BROTHER AX22 TYPEWRITER
Mint condition
Must sell, $100
Call Amy 546-2585

CENTURIAN IRONMAN EXPERT Excellent condition, low mileage. Bought new for $600, Selling for $350/BO, Call Chris 253-3608

COMPUTER FOR SALE
$600 Call Cliff
549-1762

Folk Guitar, need cash so must sell, $100 256-8721

FREE CAP WHEN you buy my Ford F150 4x4 Call Steve 253-7922

INTERVIEW SUIT - Woman's lightweight 100% wool suit. Size 12, navy, classic $75.00 253-9685

Jerry&Sara, Wild Boys, Pig Tangent 63 KFOG Call Jeff 549-7686

MOUNTAIN BIKE
18" Univega Alpina
Cro-mo frame & forks
Complete upgrade on all parts
Over $200.00 invested, call for details $350.00 O.B.O. 546-4149

NEW & USED COMPUTERS
Call Darrin 6-2270

Olin racing skis and Nordica N981 ski boots. Will sell separately. Phil @ 253-7575. Excellent condition.

PLANE TICKET Nov 6 - Nov 11 From Hartford to Augusta GA Price neg. Call Chris 549-4829

R/T TICKET TO D.C.
For Thanksgiving
$118
Kim 6-0107 Lv. message

"THE EMPEROR WEARS NO CLOTHES"
Buy the Bible of the Legalization Movement now! Only $14 call Scott at 253-4245

USED TEN SPEED bikes, excellent condition $50 and up Call 367-2041

YAMAHA YPP-50; Touch sensitive, excellent piano replication, bought new for $1000.00, will sell for $700.00 B/O. Also, Roland Juno-106, bought new for $800.00, will sell for $300.00B/O. Also, Roland Jazz Chorus 120, bought used for $325.00, will sell for $225 firm. Call Rich at 256-6971.

FOUND

CAT FOUND
Sylvan area- Gold with black markings on nose and mouth
6-7114

FOUND a History book in Herter Hall Call 549-0071 evening Kim

Gray with White Paws
might be pregnant
53 Kellogg Ave., Amherst
Please call 253-0868

HELP WANTED

"CAMPUS REPRESENTATIVES NEEDED" Earn free trip and big commissions by selling Cancun, Mexico. For more information call toll free at 800-755-7996 or in Connecticut at 203-975-8833

Earn $2500 & FREE trips selling Spring break packages to Bahamas, Mexico, Jamaica, Florida! Best trips & prices! Spring Break Travel 1-800-638-6786

FREE SPRING BREAK TRIPS
to students or student organization promoting our spring break packages. GOOD pay & fun. Call CMI 1-800-423-5264 for car audio and security systems. Part time with growth to full time. Must be experienced. Call 584-9547 for interview.

INSTALLER

"Know before you go," Where to work, live and ski free in Colorado's resorts. "Current guide to Aspen, Vail, Breckenridge and more! $16.95. Call 1-800-788-6174

LOST

Key on brass whistle key ring 6-1850

LOST
Gold rope chain w/ heart charm
2 pearls in heart
Please call 549-9332

LOST- Gold rope necklace
If found call 549-4889
REWARD

LOST-MY LIFE
If I don't find my amethyst
and ruby rings.
Please call Lisa 549-7949 --REWARD

LOST- UMass notebook, 9ps from the top Please Please call 549-6709 REWARD!!

LOST!!
Watch- Caravelle with green/black spotted band. Lost morning of 10/2- somewhere between Marston 23 and Thompson 102, inclusive. Sentimental value. If found, please call Mike at 6-6888.

MISSING KEYS!!!
Four keys on a silver/turquoise chain
-Call Matt #6-2886

MY LIFE! Black wallet on Lincoln Ave. or in/ near LGRT. Lost Oct 2 Dave 256-3459

REWARD! 4 Antique cameo ring
Veronica de Voe 6-6214 or drop at CC info. desk.

REWARD!
Black metal prescription glasses in black case
Call Jeff 546-7073

MOCK TRIAL

Are you interested in the National Mock Trial Competition? Call 545-3509 for more details. Ask for Malaika or Chris

MUSICIANS

Guitar Lessons - Beginning/Intermediate Relaxed atmosphere, serious lessons $10/ hr. Call Tim-256-8300

COLLEEN ADAMS

Don't forget your favorite little cousin. Please call. Same number as last year. -Margarita

PERSONALS

Danit-
The sun rises
A new day has begun
SMILE!

Diana- I Love You
Love, DJ

MaryBeth- You're the best! ILYT Scott

CONGRATULATIONS
WENDY PERULLO
Sigma Delta Tau pledge
I'm so proud of you!
With love,
Your Mom
Kimberly

RICK
Thanks for bringing my smile back You're the greatest Nicole

MORRISON IZ GOD.
Painful knee injuries to the evil Anti-Jim. If you refuse to turn to the lord, God, and savior, Mr. MOJO RISIN, then you must die. Special thanx to John.
Your breather in Jim,
A prophet of Morrison!

TO 3SOUTH G
Thanks for being such a great floor
Love Yaz and Laura

FRANCESCA CLAIRE TRONCHIN
Thanks for your love and inspiration!
"You're so unbelievable" Love William

PAUL
I know everything is going to work out. You are so special to me
!!Love You!
Heidi

CHALAD--Stop redoing this and talk to me! Barb

HAPPY BIRTHDAY CHERYL
18 at last!
Good luck on Bio exam
Love, Jim M

LORENZO
My Hero
You're the sweetest, craziest, bestest man I have eyes only for you! With Love, Lucretia

KRISTEN AND KAROLYN:
Congratulations on Tri-Sigma
We love you!
Sharon and Debbie

DENISE L. -Hi I miss you. Meet me at the concourse 7:15pm Friday -Sean

LEE! Your man is gone so have his throat sliced open! Now, remember it for some reason he doesn't make it out alive, we'll have to depart to our small Greek island and raise sheep
Your Obsessionminded cojecilitator

MIGGY- Welcome to Apo!!!
Good luck pledging!
In LFS,
Your Big Brother,
Rayna

LISSA Thanks for everything! Your an awesome friend. Good luck with you know what!
Love ya
Sue

HAPPY BIRTHDAY KARA
You're no longer a teenager!
Love Mike

HAPPY BIRDAY OYVIE DARLING
You have all my gloves.
Your Russian Ponce

JIM
Happy Birthday Darlin!
I know it isn't a room full of balloons, but oh well!
Happy 18th
Always, Kel

Congratulations to the Gamma pledge class of AEPhi, StephanieR., AmyS, TinaD, AllisonB, JessD, RobinF, MaureenH, BetsyH, MicheleK, KristenK, AlisonL, BerbL, AllisonM., KathiR, MichelleL., MarianW., KimY.
Welcome to our "Phi-amily"
LML ---the sisters of AEPhi

MICHEAL
I'm so glad you're my ittie
What do you say we go out soon?
Love Toni

APO Pledges
The largest pledge class on campus. Congratulations. Get psyched. We are going to have a great time. You're all awesome.
Luv Toni

Melissa- Stop stressing your 4.0 can't get any better. We love you! Amy + Beck

HEY TUSHYFACE!
This makes 2 years +!
I Love You!
RUMPO RUMPO RUMPO

DANIEL R. - WELCOME!
I know we'll have a great semester together. Welcome to APO. Goodluck in pledging. In LFS, Your Big Brother Karen "I Love Trash" McClure :-)

ZOOT ZOOT LB Here's your personal for a great, sick last semester with me KMM

PAUL
Happy Birthday to the biggest schner at UMass. See you at the Pub. Love ya,
Karen and Laurie

RESUME SERVICE

Cutting Edge Resumes. Complete resume service. Writing, laser printing, letters, advice 549-0367

RIDE WANTED

Ride Needed to NYC
Columbus Day Weekend
Will share expenses 548-0877

Ride needed to NYC or northern NJ on Thursday or Friday- Columbus Day Weekend. I'll pay for gas, tolls, munchies etc. Call Eileen -549-1315

ROOMMATE WANTED

FEMALE WANTED TO share large room in townhouse Nov 1st $180/Mo. 549-8015

LOOKING FOR 2 non-smoking females to share room in beautiful South Amherst apt next spring/1992 175+, please call 549-3593

SERVICES

BICYCLE BROKEN?
Call Pat
546-0119

PREGNANT?
Need a pregnancy test, information or support? Call for free and confidential services. ALTERNATIVES 245 Main Street, Northampton 586-3000 or Greenfield 774-6019

FREE BOTTLED WATER for 1 week Call 546-3371

FREE pregnancy testing; confidential and caring support. BIRTHRIGHT 233 No. Pleasant Street Amherst 549-1906

SUBLET

3 GIRLS NEEDED to sublet furnished townhouse in Mill Valley Estates next semester. On bus route. 256-0333

TRAVEL

Bahama Cruise $99 per person 5 day/4 night hotel. Plan now for your break. Very limited offer. Call now 1-800-821-0572

SOME RELIABLE TOURS aren't so reliable. Thats why Mardi Gras Travel has the #1 bar for fun price guarantee to Montreal! SEX LIES IN THE MONTREAL BAR CRAWL! Party weekends include 2 nights & transp. Group leaders travel FREE! (LAG/NAF)-Call today 617-444-1111 We're #1 for fun!

TRAVEL FREE! Campus representatives wanted to earn intersession and spring break trips. 256-8254

TYPING

PAPERS TYPED: $1.50/typed page
Quick, Accurate Service Call Brian 546-3563

WANTED

7 year old, spayed, litter box trained, white long haired male cat needs responsible mom or daddy. 253-0743

CREATIVE? Looking for someone to design my wedding dress. Keri 256-0192

FEMALE VOCALIST:
For harmonies & some lead.
In an acoustic/electric original progressive band
Must be energetic, charismatic & creative!
For The Groove Dogs!
Contact Mike at 253-2320

Pilot needed to fly 3 people to Martha's Vineyard on Sunday Oct. 13. Will pay for plane. Marc 549-5191

Singers/Guitar players!!
Like JT, CSN&Y, Simon & Garfunkel?
Want to form a group? Call Jim 546-2205

THREE EXPERIENCED HOCKEY players looking for a team to play on. Will tryout Contact Mike 546-5632

LOOKING FOR AN EFFECTIVE WAY TO UNLOAD ALL THAT JUNK IN YOUR CLOSET? NEED TO SUBLET THAT APARTMENT? HOPING FOR ETERNAL LOVE? THE COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIEDS ARE SEEN BY 19,000 PEOPLE EVERY DAY. MAYBE YOU'VE GOT WHAT THEY NEED.

THE COLLEGIAN.

GNARLY, EHH?

Sports

Scurry looks to extend streak vs. Dartmouth

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

On Sept. 15, 1991 the University of Wisconsin's Janet Newinski headed a pass from teammate Kari Maijala past University of Massachusetts goalie Briana Scurry and into the UMass net.

Since that day nearly a month has passed, the New England Patriots have won a football game, the Soviet Union has crumbled, Joe Morgan has been fired and no other opponent has been able score a goal on Scurry.

Scurry enters today's game against Dartmouth College (3 p.m. on lower Boyden) looking to extend her streak of five straight shutouts, and seven hours and 55 minutes of playing time without being scored upon.

"She has done a marvelous job for us this year, just about as well as anyone could play," Massachusetts coach Jim Rudy said. "Her importance to this team is critical. We had a slow start scoring goals and setting up good offensive plays but she came up with big saves that kept us in games. Bri allowed us to pinch a goal here or there and win a few."

Indeed a few have been won. Massachusetts is 7-1 on the season, ranked No. 7 in the nation and Scurry has played a major roll in the success.

Scurry has started every game for the Minutewomen, recording six shutouts. She has allowed only two goals on the season giving her a mere 0.25 goals against average. Last season she split time with Skye Eddy but this season Eddy has been hampered by injuries and now the job is all Scurry's.

"We have two great keepers, but right now with Skye being a bit injured, Briana is our starter," Rudy said. "Last season they split the playing time but if we had made the playoffs Bri probably would have played, she was just more confident."

Scurry, a sophomore from Minneapolis, Minn. came to Rudy's attention in a somewhat unusual way — from the father of Denise Swenson, a high-scoring forward for second-ranked Connecicut.

"Pete Swenson and I have been good friends for a while and Bri was a teammate of Denise, who I tried to recruit when I coached at Central Florida," Rudy said. "Anyway, Pete called me and told me he had a great athletic goalie for me and so we started recruiting her. We got one of the best keepers in the nation from the father of a player of our regional rival."

When she arrived at UMass, Scurry was long on athleticism and short on technique. But hard work has taken Scurry's natural abilities and made her an all-around goalkeeper.

"Bri is a real quick learner and a hard worker," Rudy said. "She has a tremendous amount of athletic ability but she lacked experience and some of the basic rules of being a keeper. However, she just never stopped working. After every game she comes in and watches the films of her play and learns from her mistakes.

"She has developed into a smart keeper. She has now knows how to play in position and how to make the correct decisions. When recruiting her we told her that we already had Skye as our starter but Briana didn't come here to be second string."

Field hockey hopes to end skid at Springfield

Minutewomen ranked fifth in nation

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts field hockey team (8-2) will attempt to rebound from back-to-back losses as they travel to Springfield College (5-5) today at 4:00 p.m.

The Minutewomen dropped to number five in the country (from number three), but retained the top spot in the Northeast, as the new NCAA Division I poll was released Tuesday.

More important to the team than their national ranking has been their inability to score goals. The Minutewomen have been held scoreless for the last 140 minutes. Coach Pam Hixon lamented her lack of offense after the Old Dominion game Saturday.

"I don't know what we're going to do," she said. "I'm not sure we've scored a goal on a penalty corner all year."

The surface at Springfield may help UMass get on track. The artificial turf should help the team's offense, especially in the penalty corners. The turf speeds up play, and the ball doesn't take crazy hops, as it is prone to on grass.

Hixon will look for everyone to step up on offense tomorrow against Springfield, especially Jenn Salisbury and Dawn Trumbauer. Salisbury leads the team with 11 goals. Trumbauer has five goals and two assists this year.

While the Springfield team is not nationally ranked, they could pose a threat to the Minutewomen. Their offensive attack is well distributed, with senior Julie Wood leading the team with six points.

The two teams have played three common opponents this year. Both teams beat Boston College and Rutgers and lost to Northeastern. Springfield also beat Rhode Island, Holy Cross and Maine. Their losses came at the hands of Michigan, Brown, Boston University, and Harvard.

Collegian file photo

The University of Massachusetts field hockey team, ranked fifth in the nation, travels to Springfield College today to challenge the Chiefs.

Tennis looks to rebound this weekend

LILLIAN K. LEGGIO
Collegian Correspondent

Stress and frustration were written all over the University of Massachusetts women's tennis team after Monday's 7-2 loss to the University of Connecticut for the second time this season.

This same stress and frustration seems eminent for UMass as they set to play a string of matches, four in the next five days.

"It's tough when you have to reschedule this many matches that fall within the same week," said UMass coach Edwin Gentzler. "It's not only tiring on the body and mind, but these girls also have exams and homework to contend with."

Today, as the Minutewomen ready themselves for a match against Dartmouth College, the pressure to win and the match intensity are downplayed by the fact that it will not count on either team's schedule.

"This match should be less tense than when we play a team in our conference," said Gentzler. "But, certainly, no less competitive."

Monday's match against the University of Connecticut was a match UMass did not take lightly. UMass sought to revenge this year's earlier 7-2 defeat by UConn. The Minutewomen battled several close matches into the third sets, but once again fell short in their efforts.

"We didn't play to our potential," said Gentzler. "I think a lack of practice because of last week's weather really affected us."

In an evenly paired match, UConn's Katie Enller fought off Gail Girasella's comeback in the second and third sets to win 6-3, 4-6, 7-5.

UMass's No. 4 player, Kerensa Eddy, won her first set against Cory Robinson, but lost the match 2-6, 6-1, 6-2. UConn's Flo Gaudet defeated Kelly Grim 6-3, 6-4.

In other singles matches, Shizuko Yamasaki, UMass's No. 1 player, came back from a poor first set, but still lost to Ellen Barrett 6-0, 7-6. UConn's Ashley

CONTINUED ON PAGE 10

It's time for postseason ball

Since I usually write about topics I know nothing about, I found it fitting that I should write a baseball playoff preview. By the time you read this, one team will already be on its way to the Fall Classic, the Granddaddy of 'em all, the World Series. It's a great time in sports, where superstars become goats and rookies become heroes, so sit back and enjoy this great time of the year.

First of all, let's take a look at the American League Championship Series, pitting the Toronto Blue Jays versus the Minnesota Twins. This series could go either way, because neither team jumps right out of the paper. The four games at the Metrodome provide a huge advantage for the Twins, contrary to what the Blue Jays think. The Twins have never lost a postseason game at home. Let me repeat, the Twins have never...

Michael Morrissey

Going right to advantages on the field, I see the Twins' first baseman Kent Hrbek and shortstop Greg Gagne as keystones on the Twins' side, while MVP candidate Roberto Alomar and third baseman Kelly Gruber will lead the Blue Jays on both defense and offense.

Minnesota has a slight edge in the outfield, with Kirby Puckett and Dan Gladden providing valuable experience to the team. Devon White has been the second-best center fielder in the league, and Joe Carter gets his first opportunity to showcase his immense talents in postseason play.

Any team that can start 20-game winner Scott Erickson in Game 3 of the ALCS has to be stocked with pitching. Jack Morris is one of the greats, and Kevin Tapani is a true diamond in the rough. He, not David West, has proven to be the plum of the Frank Viola deal two years ago. Oh yeah, they received Rick Aguilera (42 saves, 2.35 earned run average) in that deal also.

The Blue Jays' loss of Dave Stieb and Tom Henke has to hurt them, although they still have Tom Candiotti, Juan Guzman, Todd Stottlemyre, and Jimmy Key. The Jays have more pitching depth than the Twins, and a return by Henke could lift them emotionally. Duane Ward has filled in nicely in the closer role.

Minnesota has a big edge over Toronto in the managerial department. Tom Kelly has postseason experience, while Cito Gaston has recently spent more time in a hospital bed than in a dugout.

Two things will bring the Twins over the top this series: the hitting of Chili Davis and the catching of Brian Harper. Harper is a poor defensive player, but he fits the classical mold of unknown postseason hero. Look for him to win playoff MVP if the Twins win.

The Blue Jays could shock the Twins in game 1, and will take two of three in the Skydome. But the Twinkies will prevail in Game 7, and advance to the World Series.

The Pittsburgh Pirates-Atlanta Braves matchup is, in my mind, the more exciting series. For instance, there will actually be games played on grass! The Braves blazed through the end of the regular season, and they'll stay not. The Pirates fell just short last year, and this year they were the winningest team in baseball. Speculation is that this is the last year the super outfield of Bobby Bonilla, Bobby Bonds, and Andy Van Slyke will be together.

Both teams have strong outfields. Lonnie Smith is a wily veteran who will get the most out of his ability this series. Ron Gant is an unknown superstar who reached the 30 home run, 30 stolen bases plateau again this year. David Justice's return from a back problem has gotten the whole South excited. Justice's play so far in his young career has already made fans forget about Dale Murphy.

The trio of Pirate outfielders are the best in the league, both defensively and offensively. Bonds must shake the stigma of a poor showing versus the Reds in last year's NLCS.

Both team's infield is strong on the left side of the diamond. Terry Pendleton led the league in batting, solidified the third base slot, and brought the team oodles of playoff experience.

Pittsburgh's Jay Bell is great defensively, and the best bunter in the league. His double-play partner, Jose "Chico" Lind, has the best range of any infielder in baseball. The Braves are young around the diamond, with Rafael Belliard and Mark Lemke occupying the middle of the infield.

Steve Buechele gives the Pirates a good defensive third baseman, although the team lost its first baseman, Sid Bream, to the Braves last year. Bream wasn't wanted by the Bucs, so look for him to take revenge in this series.

Mike LaValliere and Don Slaught platoon for the Pirates at catcher, and they have the edge. Atlanta's Greg Olson is worn out from the rigors of a long season, and he has no playoff experience.

Pitching is basically a wash, only because both teams are stocked. Tom Glavine is a 20-game winner and future Cy Young winner, and Steve Avery and John Smoltz round out the rotation. Crafty lefty Charlie Leibrandt could pitch in the series. Atlanta's relievers are somewhat steady, but will get burned once or twice.

Pittsburgh's rotation of John Smiley, Doug Drabek, and

CONTINUED ON PAGE 11

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THE LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND

VOLUME CI ISSUE 28 THURSDAY, OCTOBER 10, 1991

Homosexuals not a risk

Gov't: Character unrelated to sexuality

By JOHN DIAMOND
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A report under Defense Department review Tuesday concludes that homosexuals pose no greater security risk in sensitive government or private industry posts than heterosexuals.

The 39-page report, prepared by the Pentagon's own security analysis institute, concludes that "sexual orientation is unrelated to moral character. Both patriots and traitors are drawn from the class character. Both patriots and traitors are drawn from the class 'American citizen' and not specifically from the class 'heterosexual' or the class 'homosexual.'"

Pentagon spokesperson Susan Hansen said the draft report was not a prelude to a change in the policy barring homosexuals from military service. Rather, it addressed the question of whether gays and lesbians — as civilian government employees or outside consultants — could be trusted with government secrets.

"This speaks only to the singular topic of homosexuality in personnel security," Hansen said, not to the question of gays in the military. She said the Pentagon's Defense Personnel Security Research and Education Center in Monterey, Calif., turned in the report a few months ago.

But the document does have potentially broad implications in that it addresses the degree to which homosexuality should be taken into consideration in investigating security clearances for thousands of civilians working in sensitive areas in and out of the government. Examples could range from a civilian Pentagon employee to a consultant doing contract work for the Central Intelligence Agency.

Entitled "Homosexuality and Personnel Security," the report examined 117 espionage cases since 1945 and found that most revolved around money or resentment, not sexual orientation.

Rep. Gerry Studds (D-Mass.) one of two openly gay members of Congress, obtained a copy of the report and made it public Tuesday. He praised its conclusions as further evidence that the Pentagon should abandon its policy of barring gays and lesbians from military service.

"It is essential for the public to see this report and decide for themselves whether it is sensible to continue to exclude lesbians and gay men from positions of service," Studds said. "Patriotism is not limited by someone's sexual orientation."

The Human Rights Campaign Fund, the nation's largest gay, lesbian and AIDS political organization, called the report, "another nail in the coffin for the Pentagon's out-of-date policy discriminating against lesbian and gay Americans."

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney helped fuel the optimism that the military's anti-gay policy would change in July when he discussed it on a weekend network television show. Cheney noted that he had "inherited" the policy barring gays from military service. And he called the argument that homosexuals posed a greater security risk, "a bit of an old chestnut."

But later statements by high-level Pentagon officials indicated no pending change in the policy against gays and lesbians serving in the military.

"Who can be trusted with the nation's secrets?" is the opening question raised by the security research report, written by

CONTINUED ON PAGE 6

GLB community still dissatisfied with military

By MICHAEL LEVY
Collegian Staff

A report that says homosexuals are no greater a security risk than hetrosexuals in "sensitive government or private industry" jobs met with nodding approval from members of the University of Massachusetts lesbian, bisexual and gay community.

Military officials on campus, however, refused comment.

The 39-page report, prepared by the Pentagon's security analysis institute, collected data from 117 espionage cases and found that sexual orientation has no relation to Pentagon security. A spokesperson for the Pentagon said this does not mean there will be a change in the military's policy of exclusion of homosexuals.

Edgar McIntosh, a graduate intern at the Program for Gay and Bisexual Concerns, expressed dissatisfaction with the Pentagon's reluctance to change its policy. "It is absurd that people are omitted from

CONTINUED ON PAGE 6

Hill's accusations sound, Kennedy says

By JEFF DONN
Associated Press

HINSDALE, Mass. — U.S. Sen. Edward Kennedy says the law professor who publicized alleged sexual improprieties by Supreme Court nominee Clarence Thomas is not just "some quack making accusations."

Kennedy (D-Mass.) also denied Republican charges that his party's staffers had initially leaked the accusations to the news media. Kennedy opposes the nomination.

He spoke Wednesday on a swing through western Massachusetts, where he threw his support behind opponents of a regional dump proposed in the Berkshire Mountain town of Hinsdale.

Kennedy told about 40 local residents and officials that such landfills could leak toxic chemicals and turn into "underground Chernobyls," referring to the Soviet nuclear disaster of 1986.

In his comments on the Thomas nomination, Kennedy called Anita Hill, the judge's accuser, a "competent witness" to testify before the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Hill, the Oklahoma law professor, accuses Thomas of making lewd comments to her when she served as his aide at the U.S. Education Department and later at the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

She made her accusations public at a news conference Monday, prompting the Senate to delay the confirmations vote on Thomas scheduled for the next day. She said she was speaking out then because the news media has asked her about the incidents.

Supporters of Thomas have described her accusations as an 11th-hour attempt to smear the judge's character.

Kennedy said he had not spoken publicly on the issue before Monday because Hill initially "set a condition. . . that it would only be for members of the committee." She is expected to give further testimony before special hearings of the Judiciary Committee, to which Kennedy belongs.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 7

AP photo

TO THE WHITE HOUSE — Supreme Court nominee Clarence Thomas and wife, Virginia, leave their Alexandria, Va. home Wednesday en route to the White House to meet with President Bush.

Collegian photo by Josh Reynolds

"DO YOU HAVE ANY CRUMPETS?" — Chancellor Richard O'Brien stops by the Worcester Dining Commons yesterday at dinner but due to a tight schedule had to eat and run, according to bewildered students at the scene.

Use native tongue, authors say

By GAYLE LONG
Collegian Staff

The future of African literature lies in the freedom of African writers to write in their mother tongues and not the language of the colonizing powers, said two prominent African writers yesterday.

Nobel-prize winner Nadine Gordimer of South Africa and Kenyian writer Ngugi wa Thiong'o spoke to the packed pews of Johnson Chapel at Amherst College.

The chapel itself, the walls lined with the portriats of White male scholars, was almost a reflection of the pressures of the publishing world upon African writers. Gordimer said there is a real push to write in English on the African continent.

"The pressure to write in English [for Black African writers] is very strong," Gordimer, a White African, said. "We have to change the emphasis of writing in a second language [for these writers] to be read."

Ngugi, who wrote his first four novels in English but published the last two in his mother tongue of Gikuyu, said the historical colonization of Africa has played a large part in this pressure.

"Colonization took African culture away, and 'gave' language of the colonizing powers in our schools and libraries," he said.

Ngugi said the representation of Black Africans in the literature of the colonizing powers also gave unrealistic stereotypes.

"Black Africans who collaborated with the colonizers were depicted as intelligent and fair, while those who opposed colonialism were seen as bad and ugly," he said.

Gordimer said as a child in Springs, a small mining town in South Africa, she had no connection with the Black African culture, and Black African literature was unavailable in schools and libraries.

"My experiences in literature belonged to Europe," she said. "There was no literature to read which expressed the life experiences, ideas, attitudes and morals of those [I lived] among."

Gordimer said only later did she learn of early Black African writers, who often had their works printed by the missionaries in French and Portuguese.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 7

Inside:

Page 3:
Board of Governors argues with the Student Activities Office over the Craft Shop.
Page 4:
As far as culture goes, America has little to be proud, says Brooke Wheeler.
This Weekend
Homecoming comes home.
Weather
Increasing cloudiness and showers by dark.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THE LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is a Registered Student Organization of the University of Massachusetts, published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000.

113 CAMPUS CENTER AMHERST, MA 01003
Phone (413) 545-3500 FAX (413) 545-1592

STAFF

Editor in Chief....Gayle Long
Managing Editor....Marc Elliott
Editorial Editor....Greg Sukiennik
News Editor....Preston P. Forman
Sports Editor....Tamir Lipton
Arts Editor....Paul DeGeorges
Photography Editor....Carrie Wyeth
Black Affairs Editor....Sondra Sutton
Women's Issues Editor....Jessame Hannus
Jewish Affairs....Felice Cohen, Debra Kriegsman
Multicultural Affairs Editor....Alexander Nguyen
Third World Affairs Editor....Madanmohan Rao
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor....Trystan Skeigh
Business Manager....Randee Pastel
Advertising Manager....Dena Haselkorn
Finance Manager....Jeff Weiner
Circulation Manager....Jim Winterbottom
Subscriptions Manager....Stacy Rogers
Promotions Manager....Scott Macey
Production Manager....Terry Starmer
Day Graphics Manager....Jenn Burns

PROFESSIONAL STAFF

Business....Brian Harrington, Lori Black, Maureen Majerowski
Graphics....Blake Phillips

Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Forum

Gay, lesbian, bisexual FYIs are public service announcements that run on Thursdays for campus and local events.

To submit an FYI, please send a TYPED press release with all pertinent information to The Collegian, 113 Campus Center, c/o GLB Editor. Submissions need to arrive by Tuesday morning. FYIs will not be taken over the phone.

Thursday, October 10

Film — "Lianna," a film about a married woman discovering she is lesbian, will be shown in Campus Center room 803 at 7 p.m.

Friday, October 11

National Coming Out Day — A day of activities will be held in the Student Union Ballroom, including videos, discussions, information tables and the LBGA Posterity Quilt from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Rally — There will be a "Coming Out Day" rally at noon on the Student Union steps. Wear jeans to show your support.

Dance — There will be a dance for all GLB folks and allies in the Student Union Ballroom from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m.

Deadline — Students need to pre-register for the Amherst Lifeline Counseling Center's Oct. 19 safer sex workshop, run by Dr. John Dreyer of AIDS Action Boston, in order to receive a discount.

Tuesday, October 15

Rap group — The Lesbian and Risexual Women's Union will meet in the LBGA office, room 413 B in the Campus Center, at 7:30 p.m.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 17

Men's group — A discussion group for men will meet in the LBGA office at 9 p.m.

Performer — Gay writer Michael Kerns will be discussing his nationally acclaimed play "Intimacies" in Campus Center Rm. 917 at noon. Sponsored by The Program for GLB Concerns.

Film — James Ivory's "Maurice," a "beautifully filmed adaptation of an E.M. Forster novel about a young man facing his homosexuality," will be shown in Campus Center room 803 at 7 p.m. Sponsored by The Program.

Show — Michael Kerns will perform "Intimacies" at the Northampton Center for the Arts at 8 p.m.

Roseanne: Daughter abused

By ROBERT JABLON
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Roseanne Arnold told a national talk show audience that her father molested her daughter during the comedian's wedding last year.

The star of the ABC hit series "Roseanne" also said her sister was attacked by her father a decade ago.

Miss Arnold got a hug from alleged incest victims in the audience following Tuesday's one-hour taping of the "Sally Jesse Raphael" talk show at CBS Television City. The nationally syndicate show is scheduled to be broadcast Thursday.

Miss Arnold, 38, has publicly accused her parents, Helen and Jerome Barr of Salt Lake City, of sexually molesting and abusing her as an infant and youngster.

They have denied the allegations, which Miss Arnold first made public last month at a gathering of incest victims in Denver.

On Tueday, she said Barr attacked her daughter, Jessica, during Miss Arnold's June 1990 wedding.

The entertainer's husband, Tom Arnold, said Jessica's grandfather "was all over her" after the 14-year-old was left with Barr a few hours after the ceremony while the Arnolds left for their honeymoon.

Jessica revealed the alleged abuse six months later when she was hospitalized for emotional problems, and the couple filed charges against the elder Barr, they said.

The Arnolds did not make clear the outcome of those charges.

Miss Arnold said she wasn't afraid her public revelation would harm her children because "my children already have been hurt. Healing from this thing will not hurt them."

Miss Arnold also alleged that her father molested her sister, Stephanie, in 1980 when the girl was 17.

Miss Arnold said her two sisters moved in with her at her Denver home for a year, but that her mother, Helen, refused to believe the incident occurred.

Miss Arnold dismissed a contention by her parents' attorney, Melvin Belli, that they passed a lie detector test.

"Everyone knows that you have to have a conscience and feel guilt to fail one, and they have never had either," she said.

A call to Belli's San Francisco office late Tuesday night wasn't immediately returned.

Thief tries to dupe clerk with her plastic

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (AP) — A sporting goods store clerk had reason to be suspicious when a 15-year-old tried to buy a shirt with what he said was his mother's credit card. It was the clerk's own card, stolen just hours before.

"I couldn't believe the odds that the guy would rob my car at my apartment and come in and use my card right in front of my face," Penny Erisman said.

When Mrs. Erisman said she wanted to show the credit card to her manager, the teen-ager fled. He was caught by an off-duty sheriff's deputy at the Lehigh Valley Mall and faced charges in juvenile court.

NOW IN THE
2ND FLOOR LOBBY OF WHITMORE...

EVERYTHING YOU WANTED TO KNOW ABOUT CAMPUS
BUT WERE AFRAID TO ASK:

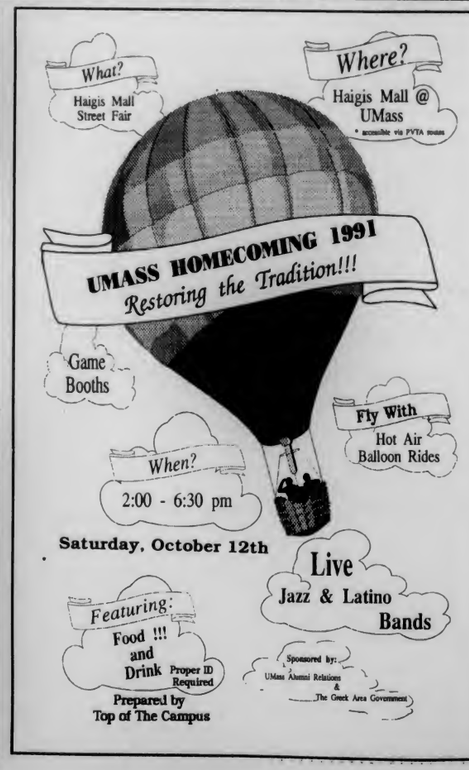
INFORMATION DATA BANK

The Information Data Bank (IDB) is a telephone and/or walk-in referral center which maintains information on University administrative and academic policies and procedures; bus, library, athletic etc. schedules; campus current events; and a variety of other reference materials.

HOURS: 8:30a.m.- 6:00p.m. MONDAY- FRIDAY

CALL IDB AT 545-1555

IDB is a service of the Dean of Students Office



Local

AP photo

NOW FROM THE SENATE — Stanley Rosenberg, former state representative from Amherst, is applauded by supporters after being sworn in a state senator by Massachusetts Gov. William Weld at the Statehouse in Boston Wednesday. Rosenberg will succeed John Olver, who is now a U.S. Representative in the First District.

Craft Shop head sparks controversy

By DAVID MASSEY
Collegian Staff

Leaders of the Board of Governors have charged that the Student Activities Office has circumvented their powers and conducted an illegal search for a professional director of the Student Union Craft Shop, which has been closed since May.

The BOG, which oversees events in both the Campus Center and Student Union, last week passed a much debated proposal spearheaded by Gov. Paul McGonnigal that would open the craft shop in about three weeks by hiring graduate and undergraduate students to direct the shop.

The plan could save from $13,000 to $18,000 annually, promoters said.

"The SAO is asserting an authority over the Craft Shop that they don't have," said McGonnigal. He said the BOG has complete control over the facility and should be responsible for its operation.

Micah Levy, chairman of the BOG, said SAO should have consulted with them before going ahead and conducting a search process and choosing a director.

"I think there should have been more BOG involvement in the search process," Levy said.

Levy said the McGonnigal proposal "wasn't well thought out" but provoked some healthy debate among members and symbolized a more civil BOG than in years past.

He said opposing the SAO's choice for director of the craft shop at this time would do more harm than good.

"It's done now, if we fight it, it is going to hurt the craft shop," Levy said. Still, he said he looks forward to an improved relationship with the SAO.

McGonnigal said the SAO went ahead with a search process which narrowed 50 applicants for professional director of the craft shop to three finalists. He said one professional has been chosen from the field.

McGonnigal said Suzanne Jean, SAO associate director, who interviewed the applicants, was "absolutely the wrong person to be interviewing [applicants] for that position." He argues this process should be run by the BOG which oversees the Craft Shop.

"Just because the SAO has pursued a course of action with regard to the hiring of a professional in the position of craft shop director does not in any way mean an untried but more fiscally prudent alternative shouldn't prevail," McGonnigal said.

SAO Business manager Allen Brainerd said it is too late for the BOG to implement their proposal since the SAO has handled the search process for a new director for months.

He added the SAO, not the BOG, has been overseeing the craft shop all along. "We feel that the BOG's involvement at this point is not appropriate," Brainerd said.

He also questioned the validity of the BOG constitution. "We are the ones who need to make the personnel decisions — they're not in power to do that," Brainerd said.

Brainerd said the BOG's proposal to hire non-professionals to run the craft shop is not the best choice even though it may save some money.

"We feel we need a professional person down there," Brainerd said. He hopes to open the craft shop "with in a few weeks."

Paula Yolles uses the craft shop to make jewelry and silk scarfs and even socialize. She is upset that it is presently closed since student fees charge students for use of the craft shop.

Computer, printer stolen

Compiled by DAVID MASSEY
Collegian Staff

An IBM computer and an Epson printer were reported stolen Tuesday afternoon from the custodial office in the Physical Plant. University of Massachusetts police said the estimated value of the stolen equipment is $950.

ARRESTS:

• Jonathan L. McSweeney, 22, of Westborough, was arrested Monday afternoon on University Drive and charged with driving after his license had been suspended and driving an unregistered car.

• Duane A. Beauchesne, 18, of Montague, was arrested yesterday morning on North Pleasant Street and charged with driving under the influence of alcohol, transporting alcohol as a minor, possession of a fake license and driving with a defective headlight.

LARCENY:

• A woman reported to the police Tuesday afternoon that the spoiler on her car in Lot 22 had been torn off the trunk. The estimated value of the spoiler is $300.

New SAO head sets agenda

Cites accessibility as key to 'student-friendly' SAO

By JASON GEORGE
Collegian Staff

The new interim director of the University of Massachusetts Student Activities Office said he hopes to use his 20 years of experience in education to help make his office "tops in New England."

Assistant Dean of Students and Greek Affairs Director Edward Korza was named Tuesday to head SAO until next August. Irene Carew, the current director, left the position for an 11-month professional improvement leave on Sept. 15.

Korza said one of his first goals is to create an atmosphere of accessibility to students, a common complaint about the SAO from students and student leaders.

"I want to have an open-door policy," Korza said. "I want to create an atmosphere where students feel able to come in and talk to me.

"My goal is to make SAO 'student-friendly,'" Korza said.

Korza pointed to his record as director of Greek Affairs for the past three semesters as part of his "pro-student" attitude.

"My experience working with the Greek area was a good one," Korza said. "The position I took there was to be their champion and their advocate."

During Korza's period as Greek director, two fraternites that had been sent off campus, Theta Chi and Alpha Tau Gamma, were reinstated.

Korza added that playing an advocacy role is something he has "been doing for the past 20 years" in many of the positions he has held.

The position of SAO director has been a subject of friction in the past due to the role SAO plays in overseeing the Student Activities Trust Fund. While the Student Government Association controls the allocation of trust fund monies to Registered Student Organizations, SAO administers the actual funds to RSOs.

The SATF fee is $112.50 a year for full-time undergraduates. In total, the SATF is worth slightly less than $5 million dollars, according to University officials.

Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Jo-Anne T. Vanin said there have been problems in the past about the relationship of students and the SAO office to the trust fund.

"My sense is that there's a historic tension around how best to manage SATF," Vanin said. "There's a need to keep in balance the needs of the SAO administration with the kind of student input that allows students to have a say over the process."

Vanin said she made it "absolutely clear" to all the candidates she interviewed for the position that improving student and administrative relations is one of her major goals for this academic year.

"[Korza] is taking this position knowing that this is a top priority," Vanin said.

Korza said he feels he will be able to play a role in attempting to improve relations between the SAO, the administration and the SGA leadership.

"I feel I can be a player and a catalyst in bringing various constituencies to the table," Korza said. "I want to bring things into a win-win situation."

Korza added that his "role is to bring the Student Activities Division to a higher level."

Vanin said the salary for the position will be in the range of $40,00 to $49,000.

Leaders of SGA encourage senators to revitalize gov't

By MARC ELLIOTT
Collegian Staff

The Undergraduate Student Senate continued to educate its new senators on the Student Government Association's background and mechanics during this week's senate meeting in the Campus Center last night.

The senate listened to an hour-long lesson on the history of the Student Senate given by long-time senate member and student advocacy activist Ted Chambers.

Chambers told the 33 senators attending the session that the senate's past has been darkened by infighting.

"I must admit that I still can't walk into this room without getting a knot in my stomach, some of the stuff that went on here," he said.

Chambers said that from 1986 to 1989 the senate was made powerless by fighting between a "right" faction led by W. Greg Rothman, one of the founders of The Minuteman, and a "left" faction lead by self-described communist, Jason Rabinowitz.

Infighting shifted form from 1989 to a conflict now

CONTINUED ON PAGE 7

University gets rave reviews in college guides

By MICHAEL MEEHAN
Collegian Correspondent

Despite fiscal woes and budget cuts, the University of Massachusetts has been given four stars out of a possible five for academic quality in the latest publication of the Fiske Guide to Colleges.

The University, which has been cited for its academic quality in the Fiske guide in past years, is described as one of the "best state universities in the Northeast" in the 1992 Fiske guide, its eighth edition.

The guide, published by Times Books, was released last month as high school seniors begin college "shopping."

UMass has also been listed for its academic quality in the 10th edition of Peterson's Competitive Colleges 1991-1992. The guide, published by Peterson's Guides, Inc., was released in April 1991.

Peterson's lists UMass among the top colleges and universities around the country "that consistently attract and accept the brightest students."

When identifying colleges for inclusion, Peterson's uses student achievement and aims toward both the typical and the academically gifted student, according to Peterson officials.

"We look at SAT scores and high school class rank to get a statistical picture of the students at our colleges," said Lisa Garb, Peterson's director of public relations.

Business Week's Guide to the Best Business Schools also recently commended UMass. The University's School of Management was "one of the best business schools in the East."

Not everyone is impressed with this ratings game, however. Dario Politella, professor emeritus of journalism who has taught at UMass for 26 years, questioned the credibility of college guides and the research involved in creating them.

While he feels UMass is an "impressive school," he said the fact that it was favorably mentioned in the three guides does not mean it is "that impressive."

However, Director of Undergraduate Admissions Timm Rinebart said he feels these favorable reports are "very important" to UMass and that they play a

CONTINUED ON PAGE 7

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions on this page are those of the individual writer or cartoonist, and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian or the University unless otherwise noted.

Hill case proves oppressed peoples' voices can be heard

I wanted to write a column this week about how vitally important it is for gays, lesbians and bisexuals to "come out" and openly acknowledge their sexualities, because this Friday is National Coming Out Day. However, this week something else erupted that highlights some crucially important issues for oppressed groups who live within a representative democracy.

Tuesday, House Rep. Patricia Schroeder, a Colorado Democrat, "strode onto the Senate floor," breaking protocol to tell off the "old boys" network that runs our government.

She felt compelled to do this to support the suppressed voice of a sister — Professor Anita Hill, a woman of color and a tenured professor at Oklahoma University Law School.

Hill's voice had been stifled because she brought up issues that stodgy old (male) politicians don't like to hear or think about — sexual harassment. Hill's charges were known by at least some of the members of the all-male Judiciary Committee on Sept. 12, and on Sept. 25 this information (in the form of an FBI report — now there's an organization women can trust) was "made available" in a sadly lackadaisical and irresponsible manner — "Here guys, there's this report about some crazy broad who thinks she was sexually harassed sitting on the table — take a look at it if you have time. . ."

Yet until some male fool on the committee with a teeny, weeny conscience leaked this report to the media, anonymously of course, so he wouldn't lose his Friday night seat at the poker game at the Old Boys' Clubhouse (where everyone writes bad checks and it's OK), the all-male Committee paid no attention to Hill's charges.

And they probably would still be sitting back in their testosterone-induced blind/deaf stupor if it weren't for the bold, courageous actions of the 29 congresswomen and a bunch of kick-ass women journalists who said SCREW PROTOCOL, THIS IS WRONG!!!

Trystan Skeigh

And after they spoke up, enough of their semi-enlightened, but weak-spined poker-playing male colleagues got off their royal duffs and agreed to delay the vote in order to explore the deadly serious nature of Hill's charges.

This was a wonderful example of representative democracy at work — and one that all oppressed groups should take to heart.

Those 29 congresswomen spoke up for the rights of all women Tuesday. They refused to be intimidated or deterred by some silly male-created rules of behavior called "protocol." Like so many strong, independent, powerful and responsible women before them, they refused to be limited or stopped by convention. They broke the rules, by Goddess, and I'm thankful, as a woman, a sister and a constituent, that they did.

Although these women have all been selected in elections defined by geography, that male-created political system was unable to prevent them from, in our hour of need, speaking for their giant national constituency of sisters.

No — I do not think society or government should be about a "war" between the sexes — that implies a need to conquer and dominate that is also, like so much of the mainstream ideology within this country, a male-originated concept. But until the rules-bound, grey-haired old chauvinists sitting in the Capitol become enlightened enough to realize that women are equals, our concerns are just as important and our needs just as valid, it will take confrontations like yesterday's on the Senate floor to ensure justice for women.

For gays, lesbians and bisexuals, yesterday's lesson shows why we need more gay, lesbian and bisexual representatives in government. Since we're estimated to be somewhere between 30 and 10 percent of this population, we should have a significant presence on Capitol Hill and in our statehouses.

But more importantly, in order to make democracy work for us, we all need to come out and make our presence known — we already exist on all levels of society — including the Capitol, but too many gays, lesbians and bisexuals choose to hide, out of fear and concern for their lives and careers. But if we all came out together, we could help each other. A sizable, noisy and highly visible GLB constituency would provide the necessary support and reinforcement for GLB policies and politicians.

Think about it. And by the way, Happy Coming Out Day!!!

Trystan Skeigh is a Collegian columnist

This is our idea of culture?

What on earth has happened to us?

The American way has become half-assed.

I must say it makes me sick just to go shopping. If it doesn't have a "gold-like finish," then it's only 10 percent real juice. Cliff Notes, Van Gogh's "Starry Night" immortalized in a postcard, Price Chopper toaster pastries, cubic zirconia — nothing but cheesy representations of the real thing.

Half-assed. Barely there.

Brooke C. Wheeler

Soap operas instead of sex, Donahue instead of real life, Harry Connick Jr. instead of Sinatra. We gravitate further away from the real stuff, the good stuff.

France has the Eiffel Tower, Russia has St. Basil's, Italy has Il Duomo, and what does the United States have? Disney World. A plastic castle, large happy rodents, fake trees. Costumes, stage makeup, cotton candy, singing bears.

China has hand-painted porcelain, India has hand-hammered copper and brass, the Germans make stunning crystal, Peru makes beautiful pottery. Alright, I'll say it. We have Tupperware.

What is the American contribution to the world of international cuisine? The Egg McMuffin. Plastic forks and Happy Meals represent America all over the world as Micky D's spreads like a disease into every foreign port.

American culture is becoming infamous. American culture is becoming an oxymoron.

Where has our integrity gone? What happened to our pride in quality and ingenuity, doing our best, being the top?

I'll give you American ingenuity. Nutrasweet. Lee Press-On Nails. Polyester. Vinyl. Velveeta.

Quality? Excuse me while I snort with contempt. Our reputation for "quality" deserves to be laughed at. American automobiles? You'll be lucky if your door handles don't fall off after the first year. Buy German. And what about our low-budget movies, clothes that come apart at the seams, Geraldo? Quality is no longer part of American vocabulary.

And we don't seem to care.

Sitting here on this architectural chaos we call a campus, I watch it going on all around me. Apathy has become fashionable. The biggest decision some people make during the course of the day is whether to bother going to class.

Of course, I don't blame them entirely. Some classes just aren't worth going to. Why? Ask the professor. Who can worry about effective lesson plans when your department might be "eliminating" your job from the budget? And we all ask why is the U.S. trailing so pathetically in international academic test scores? Why there are so many illiterate people in this country? Gee, I dunno. I'm just here to get drunk and watch various politically motivated bureaucratic types use my campus as a sparring ground. This is what we Americans get for quality education.

I'm sorry, but the only word that aptly encapsulates my feelings is "disgust."

Even religion and death are not exempt from our damaging American ways. There is a huge graveyard/theme park in California, which shall go unnamed, that my father calls "the Disneyland of death." It has talking headstones. And if that doesn't do it for you, have you ever been to the National Shrine in Washington, D.C.? About 20 different chapels, all styles for all occasions, the gaudiest mosaics of Bible scenes you've ever witnessed, and a gift shop full of red plastic rosaries and glow-in-the-dark nativity scenes.

Things like this speak for themselves.

Brooke C. Wheeler is a Collegian by-product

ONLY A FEW OF THESE RUBBER CHECKS ARE FOR OUR PERSONAL USE.
THE REST ARE FOR THE FEDERAL BUDGET.
Boing
IMAGINE OUR AMUSEMENT SOMEBODY NOTICED —

Autumn brings memories

The first time I ever noticed leaves when I was eight years old. I remember playing in the piles my Dad created when he would rake the lawn as the summer breezes grew colder. Their colors were bright and happy and a sure sign of fall, but it never occurred to me to admire their beauty.

Felice Cohen

We moved when I was ten. Our new house had a much larger yard and when fall came there were many more bodies needed to gather the fallen leaves. Soon I forgot about the leaves as ever having been fun. Suddenly it had become my job to accumulate them into piles, stuff them in large black Hefty "cinch sacks" and drag them over to the side of the house where I would empty the leaves onto the neighbors property.

I was blind to their extra qualities — colors, shapes and designs. As I sweated on those lazy Sundays, scooping, bending and stuffing garbage bags, my younger sisters would jump gaily in the piles I worked so hard at sorting.

"How come they don't have to help?" Ignoring my pleas, my dad would smile and continue creating huge mounds for me to pick up.

I hated raking.

My hands developed blisters and I always wound up with bugs in my clothes from carrying the leaves so close against my body.

Despite the hard work involved, my dad had tried to make raking seem fun and sometimes challenging. Well, as best as he could.

I learned balancing acts during those dreaded days of fall. When we would take a break, my dad would balance the end of the pole on his finger tip. I thought he was so incredible until I soon mastered that trick. Soon my dad graduated himself from finger tip to chin. Now that was impressive.

Eventually I learned that too, so my dad added an incentive. For every bag that I filled I would receive a slice of pizza. Now that worked for a while.

After a few seasons my dad finally came to grips with the reality that our one and a one half acre lawn was too much for just our family to handle. Braking down, he called the same company that mowed our lawn. (Don't misunderstand me, he had tried to mow it himself the first year we lived in the house.)

Then early one season it happened. I remember waking up to the sweet sound of a motor ripping across our lawn. Jumping out of bed I stared out the window. Rubbing my eyes to make sure I wasn't dreaming, I saw it. There below my window was an entourage of people. But they weren't raking.

For years, while my dad and I were busy killing ourselves with wooden sticks with combs at the end, modern technology had invented machines that not only blew those little buggers into piles, but simultaneously sucked them up and out of sight. From that moment on the leaves had once again changed their appearance.

Walking through the campus now, I smile contently as I watch the leaves silently make their way to the ground for one simple reason. I no longer have to rake them.

Felice Cohen is a Collegian columnist

D'Souza's assertions misleading

At his recent talk at Amherst College, Dinesh D'Souza demonstrated that he is a charming and articulate public speaker. He also demonstrated an uncanny skill at repeating one particular message — that affirmative action programs are based on unfair racial quotas — in a way which the audiences seemed to receive uncritically.

D'Souza neglected to mention that the college admissions policies he labels critically as "affirmative action programs" differ sharply in practice from Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity policies which focus on the issues of employment. Campus admissions policies with regard to race, ethnicity and gender are undertaken voluntarily. Compliance with Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity policies regarding employees is a requirement of campuses receiving substantial federal funding.

The bilk of federally-required Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity policies aim at discouraging race and sex discrimination in the hiring of faculty and staff. Contrary to D'Souza's assertion, these practices actually prohibit the use of racial quotas and preferential hiring.

While D'Souza's critique of college admission policies has sharpened an important debate in higher education, his broad-brush portrayal of affirmative action policies is inaccurate, misleading, and, frankly, part of a larger agenda aimed at undermining the civil rights gains of the past two decades.

Grant Ingle
Director, Office of Human Relations

State institutions don't provide the care their clients need

Although Massachusetts Gov. William Weld may not be a very popular man in education these days, there is one area where he shows true wisdom. Weld has already begun to cut funding to state facilities for the mentally retarded.

I have worked in privately-owned, community-based residences for mentally retarded adults for the past three years. Last semester, I made the mistake of working part-time at a state-funded residence. What I witnessed shocked and appalled me.

The whole idea behind the community residence is to provide mentally retarded citizens with the best care available while, at the same time, providing them with a "homey" atmosphere, free from the detrimental effects of institutional living. The clients get specialized attention and are able to achieve a greater degree of independence. On the other hand, clients in institutions are often ignored and neglected due to an undertrained and overworked staff.

The problems with state-operated residences, in my opinion, stem from a staff completely unfit to care for mentally retarded adults. Due to the closing of institutions throughout the state, thousands of workers face layoffs. The state gives preference to these former institutional workers when openings in the state-operated residences occur. However, the state does not understand that these insitutional workers have been trained in a manner making them unfit for work in a residential setting.

You see, a mentally retarded person subjected to years in an institution picks up what is called "institutional behavior." A client from an institution may use violent behavior to get a staff person's attention. Many clients have poor communication skills. If they feel they are being ignored, as is common in institutions, their only means of expressing anger is to strike out. If this behavior is ignored or dealt with improperly, such as isolating the client, that client may begin abusing himself because nobody addresses his needs. I have been trained in detecting and dealing with these and hundreds of other institutional behaviors.

In a community residence, the first goal of the staff should be to keep the client safe. Staff persons should assume a teaching role and use consistently implemented behavior programs. If a client is unable to control his behavior, he is unable to learn new things and enjoy new freedom in the community. What I am about to describe is going on this area, right underneath our noses.

Todd Kane

While working for the state, I saw things which went against everything I was previously taught about residential programs. Before starting, I was warned that the client I was to work with was so violently behavioral, he had a whole house to himself. In addition, he required two staff people at all times.

One hour with this client revealed to me that the only thing he needed was a good behavior program to learn more appropriate ways to behave and express himself. I was told by the manager that "one was being made up." The client had been living in the house for over two years and still lacked a behavior program.

One example of this client's unacceptable behavior was his tendency to rip clothes off his body and walk around the house naked. The management's solution? "We make him wear the stuff that he rips. Eventually, he'll learn that if he wants nice clothes, he can't rip them." How would a person with an IQ under 50 learn that ripping clothes is inappropriate unless someone took the time to teach him?

I witnessed a staff person hitting the client in anger and frustration. When I asked him if he knew that his action was a malicious violation of the client's human rights, he said, "All this guy needs is plain old discipline." I immediately reported this to the manager. However, the incident was overlooked because the management was afraid of possible worker's union action.

I could go on for pages reporting the injustices I witnessed in the state operated residential system but where would it get me? I was a part-time worker at the very bottom of a mountain of ill-educated bureaucracy unconcerned with the clients it served. Because the state now gives preference for jobs to former institutional workers, the mentally retarded will continue to suffer in state-operated residences.

So in closing, cheers to Gov. Weld for seeing what a waste of money these state-operated residences are. Not only will closing these forums of abuse and neglect save the state millions of dollars, it might improve the lives of the voiceless mentally retarded minority. I have seen the progress that can be made in a well-run residence. Someone must now speak out for those unable to express their utter dissatisfaction with the state-operated facilities for the mentally retarded and it might as well be me.

Todd Kane is a Collegian columnist

Letters to the Editor

Bush's foreign policy not enough

I would like to reply to Michael Morrissey's absurd column, "Bush clinched re-election," from last Friday. Morrissey's blindness to Bush's hollow bravado is disappointing. I would expect Mr. Morrissey to have more intelligence than that, but apparently he does not.

Morrissey opens his jingoistic speech with the comment that following Bush's proposal to cut nuclear weapons, there is "nothing more for the man to do overseas." To assume that because President Bush pulled a political magic trick all foreign policy questions have been answered is more than being naive, it requires a total lack of sense. Morrissey's (erroneous) conclusion that Bush is God's answer to foreign policy is a grave mistake. Closer inspection of Bush's master plan reveals a lot of talk but lacks substance much like Mr. Morrissey's article lacks any sense.

The Bush plan involves several parts. The first is phasing out Lance missiles from our nuclear arsenal. Lance missiles are obsolete, require costly liquid fuel and are much are expensive to maintain. All Bush did was make a big political stink about removing useless weapons.

Another part of Bush's plan was the removal of all tactical nuclear weapons from Western European soil. The word "tactical" is crucial here folks, it means short range. And with the destruction of the Eastern Bloc, using tactical nuclear weapons means bombing Poland and, as I recall, they were our friends so that would not make much sense.

A third part of Bush's plan is to remove all of our bombers and submarines from red alert status, which allowed them to attack at a moment's notice. But at any time they can be put back on notice. In fact, not a whole lot has changed. I hate to be pessimistic here, but we still have 2,500 nuclear warheads and they are on ICBMs (Intercontinental Ballistic Missiles, as in country to country bombs), missiles that are still on alert and can still do ferocious damage.

Morrissey continues to gush over President Bush as though he were some rock star, even though Iraq still has its military and peace in the Middle East is still eluding us. Not to mention in the U.S., the homicide rate has reached epic proportions and the homeless problem has not gone away. We are in a recession and our financial system is on the cliff's edge to chaos. Oh, and did I mention our trillion dollar debt?

Morrissey also mentions Bush made "Men of the Year" by Time magazine last year. As I recall Bush was given so-so marks for his foreign policy but was lambasted for allowing America to slip closer to economic and social ruin. That is why Time put two pictures of Bush on the cover of their magazine. Bush is two-faced, expanding his presence overseas while the number of American people falling below the poverty line continues to increase. And do the words "budget cuts" ring a bell? Education is continuing to be underfunded while Mr. Morrissey foams at the mouth over Bush's lack of achievement being trumped up as stuff of substance by the White House.

I do agree with Morrissey on one point, however: it looks like Bush is going to get re-elected. And that's even after he raised taxes despite promising that he would not. What more can I say? Let's hear it for Bush in '92.

Dan Cohen
Amherst

Domestic Issues:
WE CAN START ALL KINDS OF PROGRAMS JUST SO LONG AS IT DOESN'T COST ANY MONEY.
Military Issues:
WE CAN CUT ALL KINDS OF PROGRAMS JUST SO LONG AS IT DOESN'T SAVE ANY MONEY.
DISCUSSION?

Diversity in need of more support

As Jews, as officers of the University's organized Jewish faculty, staff and professionals, as well as academics and intellectuals who have committed most of our professional lives to the cause of advancing diversity and multicultural causes in and out of the academy, we have become deeply disturbed by recent events on and off campus.

On campus, there have been what we might call small incidents: an incendiary anonymous leaflet threatening Jews, defacement of some Hillel leafletes, harassment of Jewish students, lack of observance by faculty of the rights of Jewish students concerning religious observances (a noticeable retreat from progress in this area over the past few years).

This is not an overwhelming list of "incidents" or events — we do not want to be alarmist. Our University has been spared some of the viciousness and horrors that have been visited upon other campuses, but against the larger background of growing anti-Semitism and its most recent fortifying expression in Crown Heights (capped by what New York City Mayor David Dinkins called "the lynching" of Yankel Rosenbaum) we cannot remain silent or complacent. It is our duty, all of us, to condemn anti-Semitism whenever it rears its ugly head.

As a group, one of our chief responsibilities is to provide support for any of our students who are vulnerable targets in the current climate of indifference, anxiety or hostility. We pledge ourselves anew to that task. But we are fully aware that other groups also feel threatened. Our commitment to diversity, in our curriculum, as well as in our local and national lives, is based upon sensitivity to the needs of others. We invite other faculty members, students and our administration to come together for systematic thought and action that will help create on this campus (and to extend outward, we would hope) a climate of support rather than one of threat.

Masha Rudman
Jules Chametzky
Co-Chairs, Jewish Faculty and Professional Group

Attack on Bible slanted history

I was greatly dismayed to learn of the shallow, slanted understanding of history, as well as of the Bible, expressed in "Faundamentalist religions deny changes in social mores," (by Trystan Skeigh, Oct. 4). There isn't space in the whole Collegian to list the many errors the author displayed.

It is true that "the story of Cain and Abel was used by Southern bigots to justify slavery. . . and they pounded on the Bible to emphasize their point." It is also true that prominent Christians, especially those known as evangelists, actually opened and read the Bible to end slavery both here and in the British Empire. Interestingly, the majority of Christians in the world today are not white. There is revival occurring both in Africa and in China, where many tens of thousands of people are giving their lives to Jesus Christ every day. I wonder whether the author has had a very narrow experience of biblical Christianity.

Concerning whether the Bible was used to "justify the unrelenting persecution of homosexuals," obedience to the Scripture leads me to conclude that homosexuality is wrong, and that compassion and discussion should be offered to address on this. The Bible clearly states (not vaguely or unclearly, as Ms. Skeigh states) that homosexual acts are wrong. But that this has been misapplied does not mean that the Bible, or this moral principle, is in error. For example, apartheid is clearly wrong. Suppose someone blew up the South African government because they believe apartheid is wrong. Does the fact that the person was wrong in killing bigots, although he or she committed murder in the name of right, mean he or she was incorrect in the belief that apartheid is unjust? Of course not. The overwhelming message of the Scriptures to the homosexual (or anyone, for that matter) is that God loves you, and you can be changed — surrender your life to Jesus Christ. There are many churches living this out, contrary to the images of bad churches that seem to permeate the media.

I was also confused as to why Ms. Skeigh separated Christianity and Catholicism. Certainly Protestant and Catholic fundamentalism can be characterized differently, but does Ms. Skeigh think that Catholicism is un-Christian? I am not Catholic, but, as a Christian, I do call many within the Roman Catholic Church my brothers and sisters.

Furthermore, she is totally off-base when she states that the Bible used to be thicker. The canon of Scripture (the books included in the Bible) was recognized and articulated at the Council of Hippo in 393 A.D., and at Carthage in 397, in response to attempts to include other literature in the Scriptures and has not changed. This was the recognition of the canon of Scripture that the Church had understood from at least 170 A.D. The Apocrypha consists of many books relevant to Judaism and Christianity, although it is not necessarily included in every printing of the Bible.

Rather than Paul attacking women, he lifted them up! He set higher standards for women's rights than existed in the culture around him, stating that women are equal to men in the sight of God, and that, in certain situations, divorce was justified. At that time, women weren't allowed inside most of the temple courts in Jerusalem! Many trace roots of the movement for women's equality to the Methodist revival in 18th century England.

How dismaying that Ms. Skeigh waves the flag off Dr. King and "free thought" as an opportunity to mount her own vitriolic attack on the Christian faith.

Alan Willcox
Amherst

■ Study

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

Roger P. Denk, director of the Monterey center.

The report notes that current policy in the Pentagon and other government agencies concerned with secrecy does not overtly discriminate against homosexual civilians. Several recent court cases including a 1987 federal court ruling in California in a case known as "High Tech Gays" said that homosexuality could be a factor but should not be, in and of itself, grounds to conclude that a person is unreliable or disloyal. And the Defense Department recently dropped the term "homosexual" from its "Personnel Security Program," the official guide to officials charged with granting or withholding security clearances.

Of 117 cases of espionage since 1945 involving American citizens, only seven involved persons identified as homosexuals.

"Their motives appear to be the same as for persons not identified as homosexual: primarily money, secondarily, resentment," Denk reported. "All were volunteers except one, who was recruited as an accomplice by a heterosexual friend. None was the target of blackmail, although one offender claimed to have been coerced."

■ Local reaction to study

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

any profession they want based on sexual orientation," he said.

McIntosh said he has an acquaintance in the military who "needs to be in the closet because of his sexual orientation." He described it as a scary experience to have a job position in jeopardy if someone chooses to report him.

Lt. Colonel Johnson of the Air Force ROTC told a spokesperson yesterday he had "no comment" about the Pentagon report.

The spokesperson for the Army ROTC at UMass was unavailable for comment.

Sudro Brown II, of the Lesbian Bisexual Gay Alliance said "I think the [Pentagon] is being pretty hypocritical about it."

Brown said he saw no reason why a homosexual could be a civilian serving the Defense Department but not directly in the military.

"It is ridiculous that it had to be proven in the first place," said LBGA member Troy Cascia.

He also pointed to the discrepancy between the civilian and military policies regarding homosexuals, saying it is "ridiculous to continue the pattern of discrimination. Policies can be changed."

Cascia noted that blackmail is a major problem with the homosexuals in the military.

"I'm out to everybody in the world — nobody could hold that over my head" where coming out in the military almost always means a discharge, he said.

While he said "coming out" can be helpful, "People should only come out if they feel comfortable doing so. It is a personal decision."

"People should be aware," Cascia said, "that sexuality can be used against them."

Patrick & Co. knows how to make my hair feel so good.
Let's get your hair in shape for the cold weather.

$10.00 off any chemical service
$5.00 off a haircut
$15.00 off a haircut & chemical service
Exp. 10/31/91

Columbus found America now you can find

Patrick & Co.
Distinctive Hairstyling For Men & Women

for great haircare.

appointments or walk-ins
586-7477

104 Russell Street • Elmwood Shops
Hadley, MA 01035

LOW, LOW PRICE
YANKEE
DISCOUNT OIL
NORTHAMPTON HOLYOKE
584-4112 • 535-1888

WANTED:
USED MAC's
WE BUY YOUR USED MAC EQUIPMENT FOR TOP DOLLAR. CASH! WE SELL REFURBISHED MAC's AT DISCOUNT! CALL FOR QUOTE.
RENTEX INC. (800) 545-2313, (617) 423-5567

CAMPUS EMPLOYMENT

Student Manager Information Data Bank

QUALIFICATIONS: Demonstrated (through previous experience and/or recommendations) good communication skills; organizational and supervisory skills; ability to organize data, proof-read, edit; typing and/or word processing skills required, promotional and marketing experience desirable.

ELIGIBILITY: Undergraduate (preferably College Work Study eligible), with at least three semesters remaining at the beginning of the Spring Semester 1992 (excluding summer).

PAY RATE: $6.00 per hour

WORK SCHEDULE: Must be available for a minimum of ten hours per week and on site at least four days per week.

STARTING DATE: Immediately. Training will be provided.

APPLICATIONS: Obtain an application at the Information Data Bank, 2nd floor lobby Whitmore. Deadline is October 24, 1991. An interview may be required.

The Information Data Bank (IDB) is a telephone or walk-in referral center which maintains information on University administrative and academic policies and procedures; bus, library, athletic etc. schedules; campus current events; and a variety of other reference materials.

The Student Manager is responsible for the day-to-day operations of IDB including recruiting, training, scheduling, and supervising a student staff of 8; maintaining and updating the IDB library and information resources; with the assistance of the Graphics Coordinator, arranging for the preparation and placement of one ad per week in the Collegian.

For additional information contact IDB at 545-1555

TEST YOUR HIV/AIDS AWARENESS and WIN FREE CONDOMS just for trying

This is HIV/AIDS Awareness Week (Tuesday, October 8 through Thursday, October 10). See how aware you are by bringing your completed quiz to the AIDS information table on the Campus Center Concourse to pick up free condoms for each of your correct answers. Or, win free condoms from Captain Condom or Dental Dame if they spot you on campus and ask for your completed quiz!

1. What percentage of college students report using condoms every or almost everytime they have sex?

   a) 3 b) 93 c) 15 d) 59 e) 31

2. According to a recent study of universities nationwide (including UMass), an average of how many students are infected with HIV, the virus which causes AIDS?

   a) 1 in 20 b) 1 in 500 c) 2 in 50 d) 1 in 1000 e) none, yet

3. As of August 1, 1991, how many Massachusetts AIDS cases have resulted from heterosexual contact?

   a) 378 b) 24 c) 1,095 d) 106 e) 208

Sponsored by: University Health Center
Health Education Division
Peer Sexuality Education/Peer Health Promotion

HOMECOMING

Don't go home this weekend. Go to Homecoming.

By GAYLE LONG
Collegian Staff

Imagine the smell of pink cotton candy.

You know the smell. It's sickly sweet — the smell of sugar whipped into fabric wisps. It's a hyper child's dream.

Now taste it.

The hairy clump turns a darker color where your lips meet it in an attempt to keep it from making you mouth sticky. The sweetness is so strong, it envelopes your taste buds and travels straight to your stomach.

Yum.

Imagine being able to taste homecoming. The taste of homecoming is a taste of tradition, hot dogs and hamburgers, crisps autumn leaves and woolen sweaters.

It's popcorn, parades and parties.

Were you planning on going home over the long weekend? Don't.

Because the festivities have begun at UMass — this weekend is homecoming.

This year's homecoming events are to try to recapture the feeling of fun, festivity and family the University used to have when the alumni flocked back to the sleepy college town of Amherst, to visit the old classes, look up old friends and cheer their alma mater to a football victory.

But football is just the beginning — there are games booths, food and music at the street fair on Haigis Mall.

For food, the fall favorites of hot dogs and hamburgers with all the fixings are sure to warm the belly. Apple cider, the Amherst cure-all, will be as fresh as the Macintoshes still hanging on the trees in our native orchards.

And dessert — let's not even talk about brownies, homemade chocolate and caramel-covered apples.

Two bands — one jazz band and the other Latino — will be giving the fairgoers a little bit of relaxing entertainment, a little pep and a little spirit.

The spirit might not last until the kickoff, so. . . waste some time at the dunking booth, the pie toss or apple dunking for a taste of a traditional New England autumn homecoming? Or for the people of the 90s, there's mini golf, a condom count and pingpong. There's even a tethered hot-air balloon for the adventurous.

And how about the parade? What's a good homecoming game without a decent march down to the stadium to cheer those Minutemen on to a smashing success.

Well, maybe this is a great reason to call your parents and tell them you won't be on the midnight bus from Amherst on Thursday night. Instead of watching television somewhere on the other side of the state, maybe there is a little bit of school spirit in you that might want to have some fun on Columbus Day weekend.

So cancel you other plans (you know laundry can wait another week) and come out to Haigis on Saturday and maybe start the tradition anew for good ol' UMass.

The parade will leave Lot 32 (across from Haigis Mass at 11:30 a.m. and will proceed up to North Pleasant Street and over to Fearing Street. It will go down Fearing and down to Warren McGuirk Alumni Stadium for the football game (kickoff 1:30 p.m.) The street fair will be open starting at 2 p.m.

THIS WEEKEND

Skankin' your weekend away with the Toasters

By ERIC POULIN
Collegian Correspondent

Toasters founder Rob "Bucket" Hingley certainly has been in the forefront of the recent ska revival on the club scene. The seven piece ensemble that he formed in 1985 has been winning over huge crowds all over creation with their blend of ska, rhythm and blues, jazz, rap, hip-hop and calypso.

"You'll always have your hard-core ska fans, but I think people have been coming from outside the scene and are really finding something with which they can really relate," Hingley said. "I think the interest is really increasing."

The Toasters bring their feel-good, can't-sit-down, make you sweat sound to the Valley this evening. They'll rip through two skankin' sets for an 18-plus crowd at Pearl Street in Northampton, beginning at 8:30 p.m. Early birds will be treated by local favorites Free Press, led by their ever-popular vocalist Rob Skelton.

The bank is presently on their final leg of a 200-date (that's right — 200 dates) world tour in support of their latest studio effort, This Gun For Hire. It's the seventh album for the New York City-based powerhouse who, along with bands like Potato 5, Donkey Show, and Boston's own Bim Skala Bim have fronted a full-scale effort to bring ska out of the small clubs and into the public eye.

"What we've tried to do here is hybrid-ize our sound and make some crossovers to try and find a formula that's going to be a little more compatible with what major labels might want," Hingley said.

Yet despite playing in front of more than 100,000 people a year, receiving international airplay with all their previous albums, and accepting critical acclaim by the truckload, the Toasters still have to record on their own label, Moon Records.

"The labels don't want to take a chance," says Hingley. "For some reason, they're scared of ska."

One big name that wasn't scared away was Joe Jackson, a friend of Hingley's "from many pints ago" in London. Not only did Jackson produce the critically acclaimed Thrill Me Up album, but he was also responsible for their debut EP, Recriminations, which he produced under the pseudonym Stanley Turpentine.

The Toasters also hold the distinction of being voted third in the reggae/ska category (behind Ziggy Marley and UB40), of The Boston Phoenix's 1990 music poll. They also surpassed The Talking Heads and Blondie in setting the record for the largest-ever crowd at CBGB's the legendary bar on New York's lower East Side. In addition, their next single release will be re-mixed by KRS-One of Boogie Down Productions.

So why the big companies showing the Toasters the cold shoulder? Perhaps MTV's reluctance to play anything of the ska genre could be a big reason. Once again, that supposedly-cutting-edge station refuses to break down stereotypes, while offering us Jesus Jones as something alternative.

"Our music has a big pop influence, as well as blending rap, calypso, R+B", says Hingley. "In England what they're doing is probably more conservative, sticking to the original concept. But we're more eclectic. It's what's happening to us as individuals, not something we consciously planned."

Hingley brings along Cashew Miles (vox), Steve Hex (keys), Jonathan McCain (drums), Matt Malles (bass), Erick Storckman (T-Bone), and Doctor Jim Seeley (trumpet) to show everyone a potentially good time. Me thinks that the Valley will be that much happier after this one. Tonight at Pearl Street — be there!!!

Photo Courtesy Falk and Morrow

The Toasters will play at Pearl Street tonight. It's 18+ and not Jesus Jones — so be there!

The real truth about about Morrison and Doors

By JOHN DONAHUE
Collegian Correspondent

Break On Through
James Riordan
Morrow Books

Late last spring a Doors renaissance began, and has now fully bloomed. In contrast to last semester, one often hears the familiar organ riffs, jazz percussion, guitar licks and primal screams booming loudly from one dormitory or another. And it seems UMass coeds are closely listening to the music. In Kennedy Residence Hall there's graffiti paraphrasing a line from "The End" which reads: "Southwest is the best, get here and we'll do the rest." Some of us may have a friend who has strangely metamorphisized into a crazed lunatic who often shouts Doors lyrics and acts peculiarly like the Val Kilmer portrayal of Jim Morrison. Even Best of the Doors briefly climbed back into Billboard's Top 25 — four years after its release! Most astonishingly of all however, is the tremendous sales of The Doors six studio albums — over three million last year!

Unfortunately, Oliver Stone's movie The Doors sparked this flame of enthusiasm. Unfortunate because the movie is loaded with anachronisms, exaggerations and even a few false portrayals. In its wake, the movie left tens of thousands of Doors fans with a specious image of Jim Morrison. Not that the much celebrated book No One Here Gets Out Alive did any better 11 years ago. The movie and the book did however, adeptly recreate the madness of Morrison's world. But this is only a one-sided representation of his life. In the final analysis, they are merely sensationalist efforts to enlarge the already overbearing mystique that so clouds the reality of Morrison's story.

Until the release of Break on Through, this past August, looking beyond the hype was virtually impossible. Break on Through, by James Riordan and Jerry Prochnicky, is a 514 page biography that gently dismantles this unhealthy aura that has grown inordinately since Morrison's death in 1971. Not only do they remove our former image, they methodically work to fill the void with the closest picture of reality possible.

James Riordan is a serious author in the music business (his two previous books are available in the UMass Music Library). In the preface he acknowledges that he entered the Morrison project with hesitation because "such tales of debauchery and music could never be treated as serious books." Upon meeting Jerry Prochnicky, "with his library of information in Jim Morrison," Riordan realized that "Morrison's story was as serious and as relevant as any subject could be and yet, to tell it right, it could not be separated from the sex, drugs and rock 'n' roll that spin madly at its center."

After five years of research, Riordan has achieved what he proposed to do. A 15 page bibliography and the names of nearly 40 interviewees stand testimony to the legitimacy of the work. He exhausted all available sources in the attempt to sift the fiction from Morrison's story. With Prochnicky's help, Riordan wrote what could be the most honest and objective biography of a rock star to date.

We first see Morrison living on a Venice Beach rooftop, entranced in a week-long acid trip, writing the lyrics that would later provide the basis for the first two Doors albums. Riordan then very briefly outlines the influences in Morrison's life to explain why he chose the path he did during that fateful week in the summer of 1965.

The thoroughness in Riordan's discussion of the authors and ideas which shaped Morrison's outlook is remarkable. He gives a certain topic such as shamanism or an author such as Nietzche a separate subsection in the chapter in order to fully convey the idea. Morrison's reading was expansive and his erudition was beyond that of most of us philistines. Riordan's intellectual treatment of these topics is indispensible in understanding Jim Morrison. In addition, Riordan pauses throughout the book to tell the reader what else was happening at that time. Too often, biographies are written within a bubble. To Riordan's credit, he connects the story to the time in which it occurred.

The author reviews each album and explains the origin of some songs. He's careful, however, not to over-analyze the meaning of the songs. Unlike many literary and music critics, he doesn't try to read absurd ideas into the songs. In reviewing the albums, Riordan also gives great insights into the creative process of each album. Even long-time Doors fans will find themselves with a greater appreciation for the music.

Not of little impact is the 32 pages of rare photographs. Many of which were previously unpublished.

The most interesting feature of this book is the thesis that James Douglas Morrison (his preferred name) was a great American poet. Throughout the book, Riordan quotes extensively from Morrison's poetry. And he comments, in the last chapter, that Wilderness (a collection of Morrison's poetry) is now taught at Duke, Stanford and Yale.

If you like The Doors, whether marginally or intensely, Break On Through will become a favorite.

Stay at home and watch loads o' TV this weekend

By JAMIE GORNSTEIN
Collegian Correspondent

This is a listing of HSCN's week of movies:

From the Hip — Judd Nelson, Elizabeth Perkins, John Hurt. A pathetic lawyer whose courtroom antics are clever enough to induce a yawn finds that he must defend in a murder case. Hurt's performance is the only bright spot of this disastrous movie.*

Ghostbusters 2 — Bill Murray, Sigourney Weaver, Dan Aykroyd. They're back again, but the plot is weaker and chintzy. Still, the comedic performances by Murray, Aykroyd, Rick Moranis, and Harold Ramis are well worth the time. 1/2

High Spirits — Peter O'Toole, Daryl Hannah. Two typical yuppies move into a 200-year-old house where the idiotic ghosts run rampant and the sets collapse at the snap of a finger. Cheap, that's all I have to say. No stars.

The Hunt for Red October — Sean Connery, Alec Baldwin. Outstanding screen adaption of the Clancy bestseller. A Soviet submarine captain (Connery) may or may not be trying to defect, and an American intelligence agent (Baldwin) tries to predict Connery's every step. Another brilliant performance by Connery.*

Johnny Handsome — Mickey Rourke, Ellen Barkin, Elizabeth McGovern. A disfigured Rourke is thrown into prison after his partners in crime desert him following a heist. **

The Karate Kid — Ralph Macchio, Pat Morita, Elisabeth Shue. A social outcast learns to fight back with the help of his Okinawan friend (Morita). The ending is SOOO predictable, but everybody loves it anyway. Stand up and cheer. ***

Mannequin — Kim Cattrall, Andrew McCarthy, Estelle Getty. Cattrall is an ancient Egyptian spirit who journeys through time only to become a department store mannequin that only McCarthy can see. Pathetic script and cheesy acting. No stars.

Meatballs — Bill Murray, Harvey Atkin, Kate Lynch. Murray is the counselor we always wanted at camp, but it doesn't save the movie. Some cute moments, but an ending so callable it makes one wince. *1/2

Never Cry Wolf — Charles Martin Smith, Brian Dennehy. Based on a true story of an author who braves the Arctic to learn about wolves — and himself. Standout performance by Smith. 1/2

The Odd Couple — Walter Matthau, Jack Lemmon. Based on Neil Simon's play about two divorced men living together. Matthau and Lemmon are incredible. They don't write 'em like this anymore. ****

Romancing the Stone — Michael Douglas, Kathleen Turner, Danny De Vito. Romance novelist Joan Wilder (Turner) is sent a treasure map by her kidnapped sister from Columbia. Adventure, romance, and comedy all blend into one very enjoyable movie. ***

WEEKEND HAPPENINGS

THURSDAY

The Toasters, mighty ska band from the Lower East Side of New York City will be performing with Free Press at the Pearl Street Night Club at 8:30 p.m. This is an 18+ show.

National Coming Out Day Dance with DJ A Phil and Magnus will be held at the Hampshire College Dining Common. Admission is $3 or $2 if you come outrageously dressed.

Gail Rothschild, a nationally renown installation artist based in New York, will present her on-site installation about Lord Jeffery Amherst, "The Father of Modern Germ Warfare," at an opening reception at the UMass Hampden Gallery in the Southwest Residential Area from 5 to 7 p.m.

The Messianic Era is the subject of a "Lunch and Learn" series at the Chabad House at Amherst on 30 N. Hadley Road beginning at 12 p.m. Admission is $3.

The Big Tune Concert Music in the Belle Epoch is a music lecture by Henry Mishkin at the Amherst Music Center room 3 at 12:15 p.m. with listening at noon.

Graduate Education and Careers in International Affairs will feature topics which include international career options, admissions, preparation for grad programs, joint degree programs, financial aid and the nature of international relations graduate programs. Representatives present will include The Fletcher School, The Nitze School of Foreign Service at Georgetown, The School of Public and International Affairs at Columbia and the Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs at Princeton. This presentation will be at Mount Holyoke College Mary Wooley Hall, New York Room and will be happening from 1:30 - 3 p.m.

Maria Magdelena is the 1973 film directed by Franz Xaver Kroetz which is part of the German Film Series. Showings will be at Amherst College Merrill II at 4 and 7:30 p.m. Admission is free.

Leon Russell: A legend is a legend. He will perform at the Iron Horse Music Hall at 7 p.m. Tickets are $20 in advance.

Coffee House at Chabad will provide live entertainment and gourmet foods. Chabad House at Amherst is on 30 N. Hadley Road and the fun starts at 8 p.m. Admission is $4. For information call 549-4094.

Opus One, String Ensemble, directed by Charles Treger, will present works by Bach, Mozart and Shostakovich at the UMass Bezanson Recital Hall at 8 p.m. Tickets are $5 and $2.50. For information call 545-2227.

FRIDAY

Russian Graphic Design Before the Revolution, 1880-1917 continues its exhibit at the Amherst College Mead Art Museum until November 10.

Lianna is John Sayles' ground breaking movie dealing with a young married woman coming to terms with her lesbianism. One showing will be held at the UMass Campus Center room 803 at 7 p.m. This is sponsored by the LBGA and the UMass Program for Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Concerns. For information call 545-4824.

The House of Blue Leaves is an award-winning play by John Guare. This zany farce brings a balmy family together with a big Hollywood producer and some sightseeing nuns. This will be presented at the Smith College Mendenhall Center for Performing Arts Theatre at 8 p.m. Admission is $4, $2 for students and elders.

Informal Conversation with Judaic Studies professor Julius Lester will be held at the Hillel House Lounge on 388 N. Pleasant Street at 8 p.m. This event is free. For information 549-1710.

Feminist Aid to Central America will present a benefit concert with Annie Hassett, Sandy Mandell, Jaimie Morton, Ann Ferguson, Julia Burroughs, Grace Albert, Justina & Joyce, Flying Tiger Martial Arts and Katie Tolles with Dorothy Lang & Pat Ouellette. This event will take place at Wendell Town Hall beginning at 7:30 p.m. A dessert-o-Rama will also take place. Tickets are $5 and $10 at the door.

National Coming Out Day events will be taking place all day and night at UMass including videos, discussion and information tables at the Student Union Ballroom (contribute a panel to the LBGA Posterity Quilt), a rally at the Student Union Steps at noon; an LBGA coffee social in Campus Center room 903 from 3 p.m. to 6 p.m.; and a dancin' party at the Student Union Ballroom from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m.

Shabbat Service will be held at 7 p.m. at the Hillel House Lounge on 388 N. Pleasant Street.

Dance sponsored by the UMass Lesbian Bisexual Gay Alliance will take place in the UMass Student Union Ballroom from 8 p.m. until 1 a.m. Service and Shabbat dinner in Chabad House at Amherst, 30 N. Hadley Road at 7 p.m. For information call 549-4094.

The 17th annual Multiband Pops will feature The Minuteman Marching Band, UMass Marimbas, Wind Ensemble, Symphony Band, Jazz Ensemble I, Chapel Jazz Ensemble, Vocal Jazz Ensemble, Percussion Ensemble and the University Dancers. They will perform at the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall at 8 p.m. Tickets are $8 for the General Public and $4 for students and seniors.

The House of Blue Leaves will be presented again tonight (see Thursday) at 8 p.m.

Benefit Dance for AIDS Allies will be held at the Northstar restaurant & bar on the corner of West & Green Streets in Northampton. DJ Betsey will be spinning the tunes from 10 p.m. until 1 a.m. There will be a sliding scale, $5-$10 fee.

The Mighty Diamonds, roots reggae legendaries, will be performing with Mutabaruka and the 809 Band at Pearl Street Night Club in Northampton. The show begins at 8:30 p.m. For information call 584-7771.

Bill Morrissey, favorite singer of many novelists and editors has songs that "constitute virtual Raymond Carver stories with whiskey soaked hard luck characters" with a bit of humor to even things off. He will perform at the Iron Horse Music Hall in Northampton at 7 p.m. Tickets are $8.50 in advance. For information call 584-0610.

SATURDAY

Service and Shabbat Meal will be held at Chabad House at Amherst, 30 N. Hadley Road at 10 a.m. For information call 549-4094.

The Breakdown will be performing at the Pearl Street Night Club in Northampton at 8:30 p.m.

New York Songwriters Showcase includes three of the finest writers from the 70's-80's NYC Fast Folk Cooperative; Rod MacDonald, Richard Meyer, and Michael Jerling. The performance will be held at the Iron Horse Music Hall starting at 7 p.m. Tickets are $6 in advance. For information call 584-0610.

Philip de Fremery will perform Spanish classical guitar at the Northstar Restaurant & Bar in Northampton. The performance will take place from 7:30 - 9:30 p.m. with dancing to DJ Jim McD from 10 - 1 a.m.

SUNDAY

The Gyuto Tantric Choir performs powerfully evocative chants for world peace in which each monk is able to sing three notes simultaneously. This will be the only area performance and all proceeds will benefit Tibetan refugees living in India and Nepal. The performance will be held at Smith College John M. Greene Hall at 7:30 p.m. For ticket information call the Northampton Box Office 586-8686

Holly Near, one of America's foremost songwriters and social activists will perform at the Iron Horse Music Hall in Northampton at 7 p.m. and again at 9:30 p.m. Tickets are $17.50 in advance. The artist requests these shows run as close to on-time as possible. Please arrive between 5 and 6:30 p.m. for the early show and not later than 9 p.m. for the later show. She will perform another show on Oct. 14.

All you can eat!
Café Ashley's
Famous Sunday Buffet

- Belgian Waffles
- Eggs & Omelets
- Home Style Potatos
- Bacon & Sausage
- Scalloped Apples
- Carved Ham
- Fresh Fruit
- Fruit Breads
- Croissants
- Bagels

Always $6.95

Rt 9 Hadley • 2 Miles from UMass • 586-6393
next to Howard Johnson's Lodge

PEKING GARDEN
BEST OF CHINESE FOOD
SPECIALIZING IN MANDARIN AND SZECHUAN DISHES

5 - 8 PM	11 - 3 PM
MON - THURS	SUNDAY
BUFFET	BRUNCH
$5.99	$6.99

FRIDAY AND SATURDAY COMEDY SHOW
20% OFF DINNER
BANQUET PARTY ROOM
UP TO 200 PERSONS
FULL COCKTAIL MENU
48 RUSSELL ST. • HADLEY, MA 01035 • (413) 586-1202
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK
VISA & MASTERCARD

RUSSELL'S
Discount LIQUORS Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441

Barbarossa Spiced Rum $5.99 750 ml
Koch's Golden Anniversary
$7.99 case Everyday!
Sebastiani White Zinfandel
was $6.99, NOW $4.99 1.5L
"Light" $6.99 12/pk bottles
Beck's Beer
$8.99 12/pk bottles
Genuine Draft
$6.99 12/pk bottles
Molson's Golden & Light $7.99 12/PK bots.
Vodka 80° $8.99 1.75L $5.99 L
Visa/Mastercard accepted on keg deposits
Many More In-Store Specials (especially on wines)
All Beers plus Deposit •Delivery Available•

BOLTWOOD MARKET
COME TO BOLTWOOD MARKET
For all of your tailgate picnic needs!
If you don't have the time to pack your own, order a BOLTWOOD BROWN BAG ready to pick up for your picnicing pleasure!
Orders must be received by noon on Friday (10/11) for Saturday morning pick up.
Homecoming Special
COKE / DIET COKE
$1.89/6 PAK
253-9081
HOURS
Monday - Sat. 9-7
Sunday 12-5
Thursday til 9:00pm

WHO'S OPEN LATE?
Sun.- Thurs. 'till 3 a.m.
Fri. & Sat. Open 24 hours
James H. McManus eating place
Route 9, Hadley
256-6889
next to Stop & Shop

AMHERST CINEMA
Now Playing
THE DOCTOR
STARRING WILLIAM HURT
Showtimes:
Fri. - Sun.
7pm & 9:15pm
Mon-Thurs.
One show at 7:30pm
Adults $4.00
Student w/valid I.D. $3.00

Chowder House Restaurant
"Where the fish is fresh and the beer is cold."
- The Collegian 1990
.95¢ Drafts
Buy one dinner-
Get one for half price!
of equal or greater value
Expires 10/18
Deerfield Fish & Lobster
665-8333 - just minutes away from UMASS
Sun-Mon: 11:00-8:00, Tues-Thurs: 11:00-8:30, Fri-Sat: 11:00-9:00
65 South Main Street, South Deerfield
Wholesale Retail Restaurant

ALL YOU CAN EAT!
$2.99
Time Out
Homemade Spaghetti
w/ salad & bread
the BEST you'll have!
Thurs. night 6 - 9

Singin' in the shower with Barney

By BRIAN HARRINGTON
Collegian Staff

One of my favorite Flintstones episodes is the one where Fred hears his neighbor Barney Rubble singing in the shower, and then gets the idea that Barney is the guy he needs to complete his barbershop quartet and win the big contest he has entered. The only problem is that Barney can only sing in tune when he's in the shower. There are the obligatory Flintstones hijinks, such as Barney's runaway bathtub careening out of control through the streets of downtown Bedrock, but Fred finally convinces Barney to appear with his group on television, in his bathtub of course. Barney Rubble, the bathtub shower singer, croons some sort of "rub-a-dub-dub" ditty Las Vegas style and of course becomes a sensational hit.

Those of us who sing in the shower can relate. Until now the shower was about the only place that us Sinatra and Streisand "wannabes" could warble away to our heart's content. Now this has all changed thanks to those innovative Japanese who have introduced the world to karaoke and subsequently opened the door for us to get out of the bathroom and into our neighborhood pub to sing our favorite Top 40 hits.

Remember that "Mister Microphone" toy that was popular back in the Seventies? Well karaoke is sort of that same thing, only better. Karaoke is basically a video juke box that plays a selection of Top 40 hits without the vocal tracks. The idea is that you sing the Whitney Houston vocal to "I Wanna Dance with Somebody" or the Young MC rap to "Bust a Move." But who remembers the lyrics? What's really great about this concept is that the karaoke machine plays the lyrics slightly ahead of the music in worded subtitles on the video screen. You don't need to know the lyrics.

Jabberwocky

Karaoke is all the rage in Japan, as friends of mine who recently returned from a business trip to Tokyo attested to me. Almost every popular bar and restaurant in Japan has karaoke and everybody ranging from old folks to young children takes part. It has also become immensely popular over in Europe.

Now karaoke has arrived in the Pioneer Valley and TJ's Sports Bar and Restaurant in downtown Northampton is the very first to offer this unique form of music entertainment to the Western Mass. area. TJ's holds their karaoke on Wednesday evenings beginning at 8:30 p.m. The next karaoke nights are on the Oct. 16, 23 and 30. TJ's is located adjacent to the railroad trestle on Main Street and they serve up some great food, including pizza, as well as offering draft beer specials. TJ's is a restaurant, meaning all college students are welcome and those who are underage can enter and still order food and soft drinks. I am told that more area businesses will be offering karaoke as it becomes more popular.

My first experience with karaoke was at a Japanese sushi restaurant in Cambridge last month. I have never seen a bar crowd have so much fun with a jukebox and display so much enthusiasm for singing since my experience with "sing-a-longs" at pubs in Liverpool, England. I was so enthralled with this karaoke machine that half of the fun was in just watching. Everybody who got up to sing got a loud round of applause from the patrons when finished, regardless of how they sang. I also have to admit that even though I was prodded by our Japanese waiter to sing, I declined due to a combination of shyness and a fascination in observing the proceedings. I later regretted not trying it out.

The whole idea surrounding karaoke is that you do not have to possess a choir voice to participate. What makes karaoke the most fun is when some guy with absolutely no singing voice attempts to do a Mariah Carey impersonation. Believe me, after a few beers and a parade of amateur off-key tenors, almost everybody is willing and able to try their hand. The point is to have a good time, and not to impress those assembled with your vocal abilities, although you'll be surprised when it's revealed that your girlfriend, drinking buddy or next door neighbor has a hidden talent for singing and entertaining like Barney Rubble.

Pearl Street
Thur., Oct. 10 - 8:30 pm /18+/
Ska from NYC
THE TOASTERS
FREE PRESS
Eighteen & Over
Dancing With DJ Dennis
Fri., Oct 11- 8:30 pm
MIGHTY DIAMONDS
MUTABARUKA
The 809 Band
Dancing With DJ Job
Sat., Oct 12- 8:30 pm
THE BREAKDOWN
Dancing Upstairs With DJ Job
Wed., Oct. 16 - 9:00pm
Dancing with DJ Job
Fri., Oct. 18 - 8:30 pm
THE HERSCHLER BROTHERS
Dayna B. Kurtz
Sat., Oct. 19 - 8:30pm
Reggae Dance Party
THE EQUALITES
Every Sunday Begining
October 20th (7:00pm)
"House Industrial Imports"
Eighteen & Over
Dancing with DJ Job
Thur., Oct. 24- 8:30 pm /18+/
Free Show
THE INNOCENCE MISSION
TOAD THE WET SPROCKET
Tickets Available at For The Record, About Music & Dynamite
Sat., Oct. 26 - 8:30pm
WRSI Homegrown Series
RIPPOPOTAMUS
Mal Thursday Experience
Mon., Oct. 28- 8:00 pm /18+/
THE BODEANS
Tues., Oct. 29 - 8:00 pm /18+/
DREAD ZEPPELIN
Bop Harvey
Thurs., Oct. 31 - 8:00pm /18+/
The Area's Ultimate HALLOWEEN Dance Party
Up - DJ Dennis
Down - Who's Kiddin' Who
Tues., Nov. 5 - 8:00pm /18+/
DE LA SOUL
Tickets for all shows available at Pearl Street, Strawberries, Dynamite Records, For the Record in Amherst, Ticket Pro (800) 828-7080, 10 Pearl Street, Northampton 413-584-7771

COLLEGE SPECIAL
3 Games of Bowling and Shoe Rental
$5.00
with College I.D.
TUESDAY NIGHT SPECIAL
DOMINO PIZZA AND BOWL
Three Games Plus Slice of Pizza and Coke
$5.00 Plus Shoes
8:30 pm to Close
Every Thurs. Night 9:00pm-12:00am
Northampton Bowl
Live D.J. in the Ally Oops Lounge
Cover $2.00
Call 584-4830 for reservations

Main St Records
Son of Main St Records
RECORDS • CASSETTES • COMPACT DISCS
IMPORTED, INDEPENDENT & DOMESTIC
MON - WED 9:30 - 6 SUN 12 - 5
THURS - SAT 9:30 - 9
213 MAIN ST. NORTHAMPTON
586-5726
COLLECTABLES • USED MANUFACTURER'S OVER-STOCKS
MONDAY - SATURDAY 10 - 5:30
THURSDAYS 10 - 9 SUNDAY 12 - 5
21 STATE ST. NORTHAMPTON
586-1707

BUNGEE-Mania
Thrill: to experience or cause to experience sudden intense excitement, joy fear, etc.
For the thrill of your life
CALL US!!!
1 – 800 – 9
4 JUMPS
CAGE THE RAGE!!!

THESE COUPONS ARE AVAILABLE ON TAKE OUT AND DELIVERIES ONLY!
La Cucina di Pinocchio
Ristorante Italiano
1177 N. Pleasant Street
Amherst, Massachusetts
At The Lights in North Amherst
549-3669
Fast Free Delivery or Pick-up
GOURMET PIZZAS NOW AVAILABLE!
TRY ONE NOW! $1.50 OFF ANY LARGE TWO ITEM GOURMET PIZZA
VEGI SPECIAL • GARLIC & FRESH TOMATOES • PESTO
CAPERS & SUN-DRIED TOMATOES • ROAST PEPPERS • EGGPLANT & BROCCOLI
JALAPENO PEPPERS • AND MANY MORE TO CHOOSE FROM
Exp. 1/31/92
Coupon Not Valid In Restaurant • For deliv. or pick up only • One Coupon Per Order Only
TWIN SPECIAL
2 LARGE CHEESE PIZZAS
$12.50
Any Topping $1.25 more
One coupon per order-ex. 1/31/92
ANY THREE CALZONES
only $9.95
Coupon Not Valid In Restaurant
One Coupon Per Order Only
Offer Expires 1/31/92

HEALTHY SKIN

Begins with a deep pore cleansing facial. Also lash and brow tinting, shaping, hair waxing, make-up, therapeutic massage.

AESTHETICS SKINCARE
34 Main St., Suite 1, Amherst, MA 253-9879

UMASS ARTS COUNCIL

GRANT PROPOSAL DEADLINE
The next deadline for submission of grant proposals for arts-related proects and events

Friday, October 25

Guidelines and application forms are available at the Arts Council Office and the Student Activities Office

UMass Arts Council
209 Hasbrouk Hall, 545-0202

HOME STYLE LAUNDRY
Squire Village Shopping Center
Amherst Rd. (Rte. 116) Sunderland
(Next to 7-11)

14th ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION
(October 14 through 31, 1991)

- Top Loaders (~~$1.00~~) ..... 75¢
- Double Loaders (~~$1.50~~) $1.00
- Triple Loaders (~~$2.00~~) $1.50
- Drawing 100 FREE WASHES
(No purchase necessary to win)

COME! SAVE! BE A WINNER!

ONE FREE WASH

(top-loader)
with one paid wash
exp 11/30/91

Nobody Does It Better...than Liquors 44!

BEER WINE LIQUORS

COORS, COORS LIGHT AND COORS GOLD case of 24 12 oz. cans $12.99 DEP	GALLO CLASSICS $5.99 3.0L	ABSOLUT VODKA $19.99 1.75L
SAM ADAMS BOSTON LAGER case of 24-12 oz. bottles $16.99 DEP	CONCHA Y TORO CABERNET/MERLOT SEMILLON/SAUVIGNON $5.99 1.5L	BOMBAY GIN $21.99 1.75L
ROLLING ROCK case of 24-12 oz. export bottles $12.49 DEP	NAPA RIDGE WHITE ZINFANDEL $2.49 750ML AFTER REBATE SALE 3.49 MAIL-IN REBATE -1.00	Seagram's V.O. $17.49 1.75L
FALSTAFF & FALSTAFF LIGHT case of 24-12 oz. cans $8.49 DEP	CHT. STE. MICHELLE DRY RIESLING $4.49 750ML	POPOV VODKA $9.99 1.75L
BUSCH & BUSCH LIGHT case of 24 12 oz. cans $9.99 DEP	August Sebastiani WHITE ZIN/RED ZIN/CHEIN BLANC CHARDONNAY/CABERNET SAUVIGNON/ GRENACHE/WHITE ZIN/MERLOT, CHEVAL BLANC, CHARDONNAY, CHEIN BLANC

Hoodoo Gurus!

By NICOLE GONZALEZ
Collegian Staff

"Are you all gonna go disco dancing tonight and shake your bootie?" asked the Hoodoo Guru's smart aleck lead singer, Dave Faulkner.

"No!" shouted the audience. They were ready to kick up the dust for some gritty, Australia-based, progressive rock 'n' roll.

Having been together for about ten years, the group boldly called out for requests according to the order of their albums.

"We're going to take a poll," Faulkner said. "On Stoneage Romeos, (their first album released in 1983) will it be "My Girl" or "Arthur"? Neither song got the audience's pick as they shouted for "Melony".

Later on they played a number which pointed to their influences, Alex Chilton and Badfinger, that the audience didn't seem to recognize. "That riff was stolen from Ringo Starr," joked Faulkner to a barely aware young crowd.

They had obviously come to hear the hit singles that were saved for the last half of the show. "This song is 'Roxanne,' but on the flip side of the coin," said Faulkner as he introduced "Come Anytime," their catchy dance tune of the US album, Magnum Cum Louder.

Their jangly guitar sound kept everybody dancing to their latest single, "Miss Freelove '69." Finally, without introduction, they played their most popular single, "What's My Scene?" Like an existentialist anthem, the audience sang to the words while they danced. "And another thing, I've been wondering lately, am I crazy to believe in ideals?. Oh, honey if only I was sure what I feel."

They returned to the stage in an automatic encore and listened to their belted out requests. Driving hard into their last song about an American Beauty, "Like Wow-Wipeout," The Hoodoo Gurus ended the show in a definite knockout.

Collegian photo by Seth Kaye

PSYCHOTHERAPY - C-Jay Ramone riffs away as he and his brother Ramones invaded Pearl St. on Monday night.

KATINA'S
EVERY WEDS.!
LIVE ONE LOVE BAND
SELECTROCUTION OCT 10
BACK IN BLACK OCT 11
AC/DC SALUTE!
SELECTROCUTION OCT 12
LACHRYMATOR OCT 13
along with MORTAL PUNISHMENT
HERE!
ROUTE 9 HADLEY • 586-4483

安城中國飯店
AMHERST CHINESE FOOD
WE DO NOT USE "MSG"
• MANDARIN & SZECHUAN CUISINE
• HOME STLYE COOKING
• FRESH VEGETABLES FROM OUR FARM
• EAT IN OR TAKE OUT
• FULL LIQUOR LICENSE
• OPEN 7 DAYS
• NEWLY REMODELED
MASTERCARD & VISA ACCEPTED
253-7835 253-2813
62 Main Street, Amherst

家酒園南湖 Hunan Garden Restaurant
MANDARIN/SZECHUEN CUISINE
The Best Chinese Buffet
MANDARIN/SZECHUAN CUISINE
10 Belchertown Rd. • Route 9 Amherst • 256-0251/0252
WE DELIVER IN AMHERST 5-9:30 EVERYDAY
Minimum $15 plus $2 delivery charge
NEW BUFFET & SUNDAY BRUNCH
Buffet Served Saturday 5-9p.m.
Buffet served 5-8 p.m. Sun.-Thurs.
Brunch served Sunday 11:30 a.m.-3 p.m.
ALL YOU CAN EAT $5.99

Student Specials(Sept.-Dec.)
Nautilus (Aerobics included) $119
Racquetball (Court time included) $119
Tennis (Plus court time) $119
All Club (All of the Above) $189
Now offering Step Aerobic Classes
Social lounge, Big Screen TV, Ping-Pong Available To All!
• Pro-Shop
• Snack-Bar with Liquor License
WINNER'S ATHLETIC CLUB
549-4545
Route 116, Sunderland Across From Bubs BBQ

GREG'S AUTO BODY
Continental Collision Repair System Authorized REPAIR CENTER
• MASS. STATE APPROVED SHOP
• FRAME & UNIBODY REPAIRS
• INSURANCE WORK
• RENTAL CARS AVAILABLE
• LOCATED ON THE BUS ROUTE
"WE DO THE INSURANCE PAPERWORK FOR YOU...WITH A SMILE"
"Where Quality Always Comes First"
665-3989 Old Amherst Rd. Sunderland
35 years of experienced staff waiting to serve you MASS LIC. RS1560

WE WANT YOU!!!
become a
JUDICIAL ADVISOR
If you're a:
-- Full-Time Undergraduate
-- Above a 2.0 GPA
-- Interested in the University of Massachusetts Judicial System
Training and Participation in hearings will begin in early November
APPLICATION DEADLINE: October 21, 12:00p.m.
Applications available at:
Cluster offices--BCP--CCEBMS--PGLBC--Legal Services Center
United Asia Cultural Center--Dean of Students Office-227 Whitmore
Student Atty. General's Office-420 Student Union
If you have any further questions, call the Student Atty. General's Office at 545-0341 or The Dean of Students Office at 545-2684

LIVE IN SPRINGFIELD
PARAMOUNT
1700 MAIN STREET, SPRINGFIELD, MA.
DREAMGIRLS
THE SMASH HIT MUSICAL
OCTOBER 11-12-13th
.38 SPECIAL WITH HENRY LEE SUMMER SUNDAY OCTOBER 27TH
PATTI LaBELLE TUESDAY OCTOBER 29TH
GEORGE CARLIN SATURDAY NOVEMBER 2ND
VINCE GILL WITH PAM TILLIS SUNDAY NOVEMBER 10TH
TICKETS ON SALE PARAMOUNT BOX OFFICE (413) 734-5874; TICKETPRO PHONE CHARGE 1-800-828-7080; NORTHAMPTON TICKET OFFICE (413) 586-8686; RECORD EXPRESS; STRAWBERRIES

■ Judge Thomas

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

Speaking to WSBS radio in Great Barrington earlier Wednesday, Kennedy said that, if a member of the Senate Judiciary Committee had intended to leak the accusations, he would have done so before the panel voted.

The committee failed to endorse Thomas in a 7-7 vote Sept. 20, but it passed the nomination to the Senate.

Some Republicans have suggested that Democratic staff members of the Judiciary Committee leaked Hill's accusations to journalists.

In Hinsdale, the senator bristled when asked if the Senate is an appropriate forum for judging an individual's sexual conduct. Asked if the rape charges against his nephew hurt Kennedy's own credibility on the new Thomas issue, he waved off the question and said "not at all."

Kennedy has faced scrutiny since his nephew, William Kennedy Smith, was charged with raping a woman at the family estate in Palm Beach, Fla.

Speaking about the landfills at its proposed site, Kennedy told residents he hoped other public officials would "recognize the legitimacy. . . of your opposition."

Local officials and activists have battled vehemently against the dump in this town of about 1,500 residents. Town residents voted 831-59 against the proposal.

■ African writers

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

"These writers were being printed, but it was not allowed in the libraries — it was not even talked about," she said.

Ngugi said the oral traditions of Black African literature were as important as the written word, because the art of storytelling became an important event, almost a competition in towns and villages.

"The competitions were killed by the authorities who didn't want people gathering," he said. "And this type of artist was put into prison," he said.

Ngugi said prominent African writers are writing in their native languages, but are not known internationally.

He said Gordimer, like other White African writers, are paying specific attention to writings in African languages.

"She [Gordimer] is focusing her attention on the area of African language. There is a place for other languages which were important," he said.

"The future of that literature is the freeing of African languages to create a heritage of humankind. The way literature believes language," Ngugi said.

■ College guides

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

significant part in student recruitment to UMass.

He said admissions would suffer if UMass was excluded from these guides, but "who knows how much?"

All three of the above publications favorably compared the University's high academic standing with its relatively low cost. Jeannette Lamberti, a senior journalism major, agreed with this comparison.

However, Lamberti said the quality of UMass "seems to be getting progressively worse," as tuition rockets upwards and classes become more crowded.

■ SGA

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

between "front" students who advocated working with the administration and "back" students who were suspicious of the administration's intentions, he said.

Last semester a group of "front" students asked the administration to step in and restructure the SGA. "Back" students won out in the end however, defeating a campus-wide referendum question that would have replaced the SGA with a new structure that had no senate.

SGA President David Gagne asked the senate to discourage infighting in the "new" Student Senate.

"We're here not because we want to beat each other over the head," he said.

Former Treasurer Patricia Donaghue, who resigned during the summer because of health reasons, made an appearance to try to encourage new senators to "hang on."

"You learn so much here that is applicable in the real world," she said. "Just hang on through all the boring parts and pretty soon something exciting will come up."

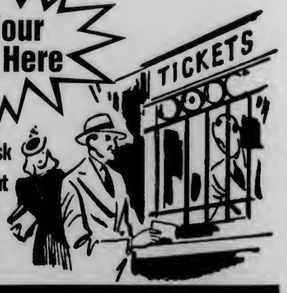
Donaghue is currently an intern with Massachusetts State Sen. David Locke (R-Wellesley).

SPECIAL EVENT
CODE WEST
Friday, October 11
10 a.m.-6 p.m.
Choose from: • Dozens of styles & colors in high & low Western boots • Ed Romano, Code West area Rep, will be taking special orders on unusual & exotic styles on Friday • FREE T-shirts with every Code West purchase on Friday.

ZANNA
Women's Shoes, Clothing & Accessories
Zanna • North Pleasant Street • Amherst
413.253.2563

HOMECOMING WEEKEND
20th ANNUAL
BLOODY MARY BREAKFAST
14 oz. Bloody Mary - 2 eggs, ham, bacon or sausage, homefries, toast, coffee
4.25
SATURDAY, OCTOBER 12th
10:00 AM - 1:00 PM
AFTER THE GAME
-JOIN US-
Food Served until 9:30 PM
DANCING TIL 1:00AM
THE CELEBRATES 23 YEARS 1968 • 1991 PUB IN AMHERST
•1o5 EAST PLEASANT STREET•

AMHERST Boston
Schedule change for COLUMBUS DAY WEEKEND: Due to the holiday weekend our Sunday schedule will apply to Monday instead.
Get out of Town on U.S.EXPRESS
for only $12 each way!
U.S.EXPRESS
Get Your Ticket Here



Don't forget to ask for U.S.EXPRESS at the UMASS Hotel ticket window!
For info call 582-1313

World/Nation

Baffling bubbling blood

Scientists: Ancient blood no mystery

By MALCOLM RITTER
Associated Press

NEW YORK — A mystery dating from medieval times, the ability of the reputed clotted blood of a saint to turn liquid when handled in a religious ceremony, may be just ordinary chemistry, researchers say.

The scientists report they created a dark brown gel that turns easily to liquid when disturbed and then thickens back into a gel.

Such a mixture may be in the vial that is said to hold the blood of St. Janarius, also called San Gennaro, in the Roman Catholic cathedral of Naples, Italy, the researchers propose in Thursday's issue of the journal Nature.

In a ceremony performed since the 14th century, the hermetically sealed, 4-inch glass container is repeatedly turned upside down. Many Neapolitans believe good luck will follow if the vial's contents liquefy, while disasters such as earthquakes may await if the contents remain solid.

"The event draws crowds of thousands and a televison and media audience of millions," they wrote. "The phenomenon seems genuine, is well documented and is still regarded as unexplained."

One of the researchers, chemist Luigi Garlaschelli of the University of Pavia in Italy, said in a telephone interview that he had observed the ceremony, and that the substance in the vial "looks exactly like ours."

The gel was made with substances available in the 14th century, including table salt, water, calcium carbonate and ferric chloride hydrate, the researchers wrote.

They said the repeated turning over of the Naples vial could disturb such a mixture enough to turn it liquid.

"Thus a successful performance of the rite does not involve any conscious cheating," they wrote. "Indeed, inadvertent liquefaction events have been observed many times over the centuries during handling for repairs to the case that contains the sealed vial."

A team of researchers who examined the vial at the church's request reported in 1989 that it appeared to contain blood. The conclusion was based on analysis of light shown through it.

Garlaschelli said it might contain traces of blood, but if so, it is "present in a mixture of different substances, because real blood alone is known not to behave in this way."

The contents of the vial could be established only by opening it, the researchers wrote, but "our replication of the phenomenon seems to render this sacrifice unnecessary."

Monsignor Ugo Grazioso of Naples Cathedral said this week that the scientists who had found evidence of blood in the vial had no explanation for the liquefaction. They called it a "biological absurdity," he said.

Asked about the new hypothesis, Grazioso said: "This must be established by science, not us."

The Vatican has not classified the liquefaction as a miracle, and generally disapproves of the way it is linked to misfortune in Naples, said Vatican spokesperson Joaquin Navarro.

AP photo

BACK IN CARACAS — Escorted by Venezuelan Army officers, deposed Haitian President Jean-Bertrand Aristide, right, walks through the hall of the Caracas Hilton Hotel, Tuesday. Aristide returned to Caracas after a few hours stay in Kingston, Jamaica. Supreme Court justice Joseph Nerette was appointed Monday to the Presidency of Haiti after soldiers opposed to Aristide stormed the parliament and forced legislators to name Neretta.

Marcos' body may return home

By OLIVER TEVES
Associated Press

MANILA, Philippines — President Corazon Aquino said today that the body of former President Ferdinand Marcos may be flown directly to his home province and buried there if his widow approves the plan in writing.

A group of 14 members of the House of Representatives and other northern provincial leaders proposed in a meeting with Mrs. Aquino that Marcos' body be flown directly from Hawaii to Laoag City, capital of Ilocos Norte province.

Under the proposal, the remains would lie in state for nine days before burial in Laoag City, 250 miles north of Manila.

"We are in conformity with that," Mrs. Aquino told reporters after the meeting. Executive Secretary Franklin Drilon said the group, which includes close associates of the former president, assured Mrs. Aquino that it would oppose plans to bring the remains back to Manila.

NOBODY'S PERFECT

50% to 80% Off Their Prices

NEW LOCATION

RT. 9 AMHERST/HADLEY BETWEEN SUPER STOP 'N' SHOP & LIQUORS 44

AT THE CAMPUS PLAZA

Merchandise From the Top 2 Specialty Stores in the United States

LADIES LYCRA LEGGINGS $9.99 REG. 26.00 & UP

LADIES LONG SLEEVE SOLID KNIT TOPS $9.99 REG. 34.00

MEN'S & LADIES FLEECE TOPS $9.99 REG. 28.00-38.00

MEN'S & LADIES JEANS $14.99 REG. 30.00-42.00

DRAWING FOR LADIES LEATHER COAT VALUED AT $300.00 WITH ANY PURCHASE

NAME .....
ADDRESS .....
PHONE #. .....

DRAWING OCT 19TH AT 1 pm

FIRST QUALITY & SLIGHT IRREGULARS

NOBODY'S PERFECT

Not even the best known specialty & department stores in the U.S. They make mistakes, too...That's when our buyers take advantage and pass the savings onto you!

NEW LOCATION

CAMPUS PLAZA RT. 9 AMHERST/HADLEY
Phone 256-8686
Hours:
Sun. 12pm-6pm • Mon., Tues., Wed. 10am-6pm
Thurs., Fri. 10am-9pm • Sat. 10am-6pm

THE FAR SIDE
By GARY LARSON

DOONESBURY
By GARRY TRUDEAU

EXCUSE ME, MISS? IS THAT GUY WHO WENT TO GET THE CAR YOUR BOYFRIEND?
I'M NOT SURE YET. WHY?
HE IS TOTALLY HOT!! I DON'T KNOW! HOW YOU CAN KEEP YOUR HANDS OFF HIM!
REALLY?
UH-HUH! MORE YOU DON'T MIND MY SAYING SO.
PROMISE YOU A BIG TIP. DID HE?
UM...YEAH. YOU WON'T BLOW IT FOR ME, WILL YOU? I GOT KIDS.

CALVIN AND HOBBES
By BILL WATTERSON

HERE COMES SUSIE.
HA! WON'T SHE BE HORRIFIED TO SEE HOW OUR FACES HAVE TRAGICALLY FROZEN!
HI, SUSIE.
HI, CALVIN.
WHAT DID YOU DO, GET YOUR HEAD STUCK IN THE BLENDER? IT'S AN IMPROVEMENT.
THIS IS LUNACY! I CAN'T STOP!
NO RETREAT!
I seem to be out.
Zack, should there be a fish blocking your balloon?
WHOA...
AAAGH!
THIS IS NEWS?

UNDER 21
By KRIS K. EARLE

AS STRONG AS AN OX AND THEN SOME!
FREDRICO THE WONDER MAGGOT
KING OF THE LARVAE.
WE BEGIN OUR TALE BY WATCHING FREDRICO BRING JUSTICE TO THE STAR MARKET.
I'LL TEACH YOU TO NEVER RIP-OFF COUPONS AGAIN!
WITH HIS ALMIGHTY STRENGTH FREDRICO CARRIES THE THIEF UP TO 10,000 FEET
OH, GOD.
AND DROPS HIM. THEN HE WENT INTO STAR MARKET AND ATE MELON RINDS.
KET
Box of Coupons
THUD
PHOP

Quote of the Day

"Whatever doesn't kill me, only makes me stronger."

— someone said this but we're too tired to find out

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHAEL JAFFE

ACROSS
1 Smart
5 Greek letter
10 Former TV host Jack
14 Heroic narrative
15 Bulls, in Barcelona
16 Alter the decor
17 Ancient instrument
18 Trickles
19 Silkworm
20 Foregone conclusion?
23 Delete
24 Ruby and Sandra
25 Seller's partner
28 At no time
31 Broadcast
32 Interfere
35 "Terrible" tsar
39 Plan ahead
41 Dioxide used as a white pigment
43 Scorch
44 Inchines
46 Adherent
47 "Come in!"
49 Waldorf, e.g.
51 African lox
53 Error's partner
56 Self-control
61 Word for February 14
62 Magna —
63 Broadway sign
65 Hebrew unit
66 Mythical hunter
67 Comfort
68 Sailors
69 Tall tale
70 Printer's direction

DOWN
1 Jefferson Davis' govt.
2 Fastener
3 Composer Stravinsky
4 Profession
5 On the ocean
6 Loamy deposit
7 Make believe
8 Arizona Native American
9 Part of NAACP
10 Bygone, formerly
11 Penthouse, perhaps
12 Good-bye, in Granada
13 Horse of another color
21 Theatrical offering
22 Lemon or lime additive
25 Charts
26 Home of the Leprechauns
27 Space
29 Verve
30 Outlet
33 Formerly
34 Editor's note
36 Colorado ski resort
37 "Iron Man" canine
38 Requirement
40 Irons
42 Area of India
45 Gram or graphy lead-in 48 Once called
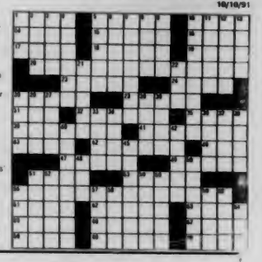
50 Types of skirts
51 Bouquet
52 Cut
54 Revolving cylinder
55 "— man be without sin..."
56 Scheme
57 Corps. or sgts.
58 Horse-drawn vehicle
59 Far from messy
60 Medical quantity
64 After taxes

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

T	A	S	K		F	O	P	S		R	A	S	P	S
I	C	E	R		I	S	U	P		A	L	L	O	T
L	A	R	A		A	L	F	A		M	O	U	S	E
T	R	A	I	N	S	O	F	T	H	O	U	G	H	T
H	E	C	T	I	C		S	I	A	N
				C	O	S		R	A		A	P	P	E
B	L	A	S	E		P	A	S	S		L	O	D	E
R	A	I	L	R	O	A	D	T	H	R	O	U	G	H
A	N	N	O		U	N	D	O		D	O	T	T	E
D	I	E	T	E	S				W	O	O
				H	E	R	A		U	S	A	G	E	S
O	N	T	H	E	R	I	G	H	T		T	R	A	C	K
T	E	N	E	E		N	A	I	L		O	L	L	A
T	R	U	E	S		G	I	A			A	R	A	T	E
O	D	D	L	Y		S	N	O	W

10/10/91



Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Pizza	Bacon Burger
Fishburger	Ravioli Alfredo
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Flat Bread Sandwich	Mixed Bean Casserole
Pizza	Ravioli Alfredo

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES(March 21-April 19): Use your special communication skills to help a loved one attain a cherished goal. A check really is in the mail! Accept a last-minute social invitation.

TAURUS(April 20-May 20): Too many cooks could spoil the broth at work. You belong at the front of the parade. Take charge and show others what you can accomplish on your own. Your professional reputation grows.

GEMINI(May 21-June 20): Strengthen your credibility by keeping any promises you make. A financial decision can no longer be postponed. Follow through on a helpful suggestion. Both your home and your mate need more attention.

CANCER(June 21-July 22): Once you get better organized, no one will be able to accomplish more than you. Do what you can to help a friend, but refuse to be dragged down. Past efforts bring new rewards.

LEO(July 23-Aug. 22): Concentrate on clearing away that paperwork on your desk. Your productivity will rise once the clutter is taken care of. Seize a golden opportunity to cement a business relationship.

VIRGO(Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Focus on the central issue and you will waste less time. It is possible to mix business with pleasure successfully. Your social schedule is more crowded than usual. Dress up and enjoy yourself.

LIBRA(Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Cou those who think positive and sha your interest in good works. Diplomacy will get you what you want. Develop a recently discovered talent and you will reap new profits.

SCORPIO(Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A sense of humor helps you make an important point. You are more convincing when you lighten up. A challenge proves stimulating on both sides. Do your homework and you will win big.

SAGITTARIUS(Nov. 22-Dec. 21): The direct approach works best. Confide in your mate or business partner. By taking a closer look at recent expenditures, you will find ways to save money.

CAPRICORN(Dec. 22-Jan. 19 Give an older associate the benefit the doubt. Financial tensions subsi thanks to good news from afar. confident of success and you will g what you desire most. New alliance prosper.

AQUARIUS(Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Keep your options open. Postpone signing legal papers a while longer. A family member may want greater freedom. Give your loved ones a chance to spread their wings.

PISCES(Feb. 19-March 20): Travel and sports vie for your attention. Flex your brain power as well as your brawn. Romance enjoys highly favorable influences. Listen eagerly to a partner's views on busines and pleasure.

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Preston P. Forman
Copy Editor.....Dave Massey
PhotoTechnician.....Carrie Wyeth
Production Supervisor.....Terry Starmer
Production.....Seth Kaye,
Nicole Dumas, Chris Prell, Ali Woolwich

Tough challenge for X-Country

Men face ranked teams in UConn, Providence

By KEITH BENNETT
Collegian Staff

The road isn't getting any easier for the University of Massachusetts men's cross country team. After facing six nationally ranked teams at the Dartmouth Classic Sept. 28, the Minutemen prepare to meet two more ranked teams.

The Minutemen compete against Providence and Connecticut, who are currently ranked fourth and 25th, respectively, in the NCAA poll, at 3 p.m. Friday at the Mansfield Hollow State Park in Storrs, Conn.

In the meet last year between these three teams, which was run in Amherst, Connecticut upset Providence. Connecticut won the meet with 24 points. Providence, who competed without two of their top five runners, finished second with 47 points. UMass placed third with 60. A healthy Providence squad beat Connecticut two weeks later at the Big East Championships.

"I anticipate both Providence and Connecticut to be running extremely hard at each other," UMass coach Ken O'Brien said. "They're both Big East opponents and intense rivals. We had the same meet here last year. . . The six fastest times that have ever been run on our course came out of that meet last year. So that's how intense the competition was last year and I don't anticipate it will be any less intense this year."

O'Brien expects that his harrier squad, with a record of 1-4 in dual meets this season, may have to take their lumps again this weekend.

"I have no illusions of taking our team down and upsetting one of the top 25 teams, unless we have just a stupendous race from our top seven and catch some luck against someone else," he said. "Like any coach in this situation, I really expect the kids to go down and take the opportunity that's presented and do something with it.

"I think we have to put the wins and losses part of it into perspective. If we go down and say 'Gee, we can't win the meet,' and then we don't get excited about being there, and racing to our utmost, then, of course, we haven't made any progress in terms of ourselves as a team.

"I think the team has prepared itself well over the last week or so. We should be able to run better, as a team, than we did in a similar situation two weeks ago at Dartmouth. I'm anxious to see how the team responds."

O'Brien expects Providence to be the clear-cut favorite in the meet.

"I think Providence is the best team they've ever had, and they've had some great ones," he said. "Providence, to me, is at least fourth in the country. I think, if they have a good conclusion to their season, it would not be beyond their possibilities to win the NCAA's.

"I don't think Connecticut can beat them now, or later in the season. Providence is much stronger than they were last year."

■ David

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 12

section — nothing," Dr. Fieldengoal said. "It's the only way."

"But Doc, what about all the other people who are on the same road?"

"I'm not worried about them, although they'll all need some help sometime, I'm worried about you," the doctor sounded sincere.

"Okay, whatever it takes just give me until the Celtics begin, I've got to see if Dee starts over Brian."

The doctor shook his head again and said, "Not right now."

Perhaps Joe Morgan can join me in solitary, we've got a lot to talk about.

David Scott is a Collegian staff member

National Coming Out Day
Friday October 11

The Umass Lesbian Bisexual Gay Alliance invites You to a Day of Celebration

10 am to 6 pm: Student Union Ballroon
Daylong videos, discussion, info tables and more.
CONTRIBUTE A PANEL TO THE LGBA POSTERITY QUILT!!!!!
Noon: Student Union Steps, RALLY
JEANS DAY IS BACK WEAR JEANS TO SHOW YOUR SUPPORT

NATIONAL COMING OUT DAY

National Coming Out Day
Friday October 11

The Umass Lesbian Bisexual Gay Alliance invites You to a Day of Celebration

8 pm to 1 am: Student Union Ballroom, DANCIN' PARTY

Enjoy a delicious meal ... and take advantage of a special offer!

COUPON

Order one lunch at the regular price and receive the second luncheon entree at half-price.

OFFERS EXPIRES 10/18/91.
COUPON NOT VALID WITH ANY OTHER DISCOUNT

Lunch served Monday through Friday, 11:30 am-2:00 pm
Telephone: 545-3216
Major Credit Cards Accepted
Validated Parking in Attached Garage
Casual Dress

Top of the Campus Restaurant & Lounge

11th FLOOR · LINCOLN CAMPUS CENTER
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST

Genuine U.S. and European Surplus!

ANNUAL ARMY & NAVY Surplus Sale

University of Massachusetts
Student Union Ballroom

October 15 thru 18th
Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday

9:00am - 8:00pm

Sponsored By:
Cape Verdean Student Alliance

- Genuine U.S. & European Military and Antique Overcoats $25-$35
- Wool, West German, British, French Pants $10 - $17
- U.S., British, French, Italian Wool Sweaters $8 - $15
- Mexican Baja Pullovers and Blankets $12 & $15
- Heavy Cotton, 6-Pocket Field Pants : U.S., Dutch, West German $7 - $16
- Genuine Issue Camo, Desert, Tiger, Urban Black Six Pocket Pants $25
- World Flags (3'x5') $10 each/ 2 for $18
- Down Feather Mummy Sleeping Bags (0' - 15') $30
- U.S. Navy Wool Middys and Peacoats $10 - $30
- Full Leather Raincoats & Trenchcoats $6 - $15

Wool Blankets, Gloves, Hats, Scarves, & Much, Much More!

presented by the Army Barracks of Martha's Vineyard

Mastercard, Visa, and American Express accepted

Some of the biggest, some of the best presents come in the smallest boxes!

AMAAZZING! Lose weight fast and keep it off.

The Amazing Micro Diet gives you a nutritionally complete program that makes the pounds vanish...

As seen on The Amazing Micro Diet Show starring Cathy Ivor Crosby
The Amazing Micro Diet Infomercial Monitor

The Amazing MICRO DIET

Dr. Virginia Harper
(413) 549-0335

Celebrate Home Coming at Scotts!

Scott's LIQUORS
OPEN MON-SAT 8 AM-11 PM
Tel: 549-2692

ROLLING ROCK & ROLLING ROCK LIGHT 24-12 oz. bottles $12.99 + Dep.

BUDWEISER 12 pk. cans $6.99 + Dep.

MOOSEHEAD 12 pack bottles $8.39 + Dep.

HARPOON OCTOBERFEST 6 pk. bottles $5.39 + Dep.

ABSOLUT VODKA 750 ml $11.99

CAPTAIN MORGAN $15.99 1.75 Ltr. w/FREE 2.0 litre coke

COLUMBIA CREST SEMILLION 2 FOR $9.99 750 ml

SUTTER HOME CHARDONNAY 2 FOR $9.99 750 ml

Not responsible for typographical errors · SALE GOOD THROUGH 10/16 · MC/V AND CHECKS ACCEPTED FOR DEPOSITS ON KEGS

Tele-check for your personal check.

WE WANT TO BE YOUR FAVORITE LIQUOR STORE!
6 University Drive
at Newmarket Center, Amherst

We now have all Mass Lottery games!

MEGABUCKS We Have It

Classifieds

COME TO THE COLLEGIAN OFFICE 113 CAMPUS CENTER • THURSDAY 8:30-3:30 FRIDAY 8:30-2:30 • DEADLINE IS TWO DAYS PRIOR TO PUBLICATION • 20¢/WORD/DAY FOR STUDENTS • CASH IN ADVANCE

ACTIVITIES

1991 HOMECOMING FOOTBALL
Go to Alumni Stadium Saturday afternoon to see the Umass Minutemen battle Rhode Island's Rams.

HEY UMASS!!
Forget UVM! Don't go home!
Stay here this weekend!!
Dunk a D.U. & Soak a Sigma Kappa
Haigis Mall Street Fair
12-6
Dunk us, we dare you!!

HEY UMASS!!
Here's your chance
Dunk a D.U. & Soak a Sigma Kappa
Come to Haigis Mall 10/12
We dare you!!

MIDNIGHT MADNESS! Everything on sale! Good stuff cheap, one day only! Friday, October 11 9am to midnight!
Strawberries Pt 9 next to Stop N Shop

Riddle
Q-What's orange and black and lates all over?
A-Find out Oct.23,24,25 on the Campus Center Concourse

ANNOUNCEMENTS

ATTENTION NON-US RESIDENTS
AA-1 immigration lottery is your chance Apply on friends behalf for efficient strategies Call 542-4220

Chabad House is sponsoring a coffee house Featuring Fishel Bressler. Music, Magic, and comedy. Refreshments. Thurs Oct. 10 8pm

FIRST RESPONDER COURSE
Basic life saving and support, CRR, and first aid. Classes start Oct 15. Call 6-0990 for info

Get Ready!!
Working is coming!!
UMTG

HEY UMASS:
Here's your chance
DUNK A DU
SOAK A SIGMA KAPPA
Saturday 10/2
Haigis Mall Street Fair

KSA 3rd General Meeting
on
Oct 10 (Thurs) at 7:00 PM
at
Campus Center Room 165-169
"Refreshments will be served

Sing in the shower? Tap with your toothbrush? "Talent Orgs" Interviews are TODAY at 7pm in rm 163CC

SPECTRUM MAGAZINE
Accepting submissions for 1992 issues
Art Poetry Prose Photography
Bring to 406E Student Union Deadline Dec 2
Questions? 545-2240

TARKOVSKY FILM FESTIVAL any interest? Send wants, thoughts, and ease to Tarkovsky c/o Box 395, Northampton 01061-0395

AUTO FOR SALE

1990 Oldsmobile Cutlas Supreme
New brakes runs perfectly $450 549-7913

1980 TOYOTA COROLLA Sunroof hatchback Runs great New parts $750 B.O. 586-6148

92 MERCURY CAPRI New brakes, muffler, battery, shocks good condition $1000 256-3020

83 TRANS AM
76K miles great shape
$2500 or BO
549-6781 Perry

84 FORD ESCORT New brakes, muffler very reliable. $1000 665-4602 -evenings

1985 CHEVY SPECTRUM
New brake, new carborator
Runs great! $1, 500 or B.O.
Call 253-9339

87 SUZUKI SAMURI convertable 4x4
5 speeds 27K miles AM/FM cassette CB radio soft/hard tops $3500 or BO. 549-0316 or 545-2395 Chin

EMPLOYMENT

Colorado Utah New Mexico
Real jobs! No hidden charges! Real contact people! Seasonal, yearround, intersession. Work at the BEST resorts, shops, manufacturers. Winter, spring or summer help always wanted! Go West. Work, play and have a GREAT time! Send us name, address, age, areas of interest to BALLOONS 925 Grandview Boulder CO 80302 and for a VERY SMALL FEE we will send you at least 8 excellent job prospects! We can supply great affordable housing options also. DON'T DELAY- We need all responses by Nov. 2 1991

DEBATE

Are you interested in public speaking? Would you like to participate in a Mock Trial Competition or other competitive debate? Come to the UMass Debate Society Meeting on Wednesday 7:00 in the Debate Trailer or call 545-3509 for more information.

ENTERTAINMENT

RACK-A-DISC! $175.00 DJs. VJs. Karaoke for house/ Formal parties. Call 586-9900

FOR RENT

2 rooms available January 1, 253-0743, no smoking, on bus line

FRIDGE RENTALS 253-9742 Free Delivery

FOR SALE

AMIGAZOOOHD-w/Z286 Bridgeboard. 40MB HD RGB Stereo monitor, Mouse, keyboard, 2MB RAM-$2475 or b.o. Toshiba Pagelaser6-$600 firm Scott 549-0228

ARE YOU SICK of computer lab hours Smith Corona typewriters word/processor and computers starting at $199 Call 546-0390

CALCULATOR/HP16C PROGRAMMABLE $30, luton, queen size, good condition $30, will deliver 367-2253

CENTURIAN IRONMAN EXPERT Excellent condition, low mileage. Bought new for $600, Selling for $350/BO, Call Chris 253-3608

DTK 386sx IBM compatable computer Color VGA, 8MB RAM, math coprocessor, Hayes modem, lots of software $1700 Call Mike at 549-8957

FREE CAP WHEN you buy my Ford F150 4x4 Call Steve 253-7932

HOUSE TAPES from underground NY. John, late eves. 253-2595

IBM PS/2 COMPUTER
NEC letter quality printer
Must sell Call Dave 546-1348

INTERVIEW SUIT - Woman's lightweight 100% wool suit, Size 12, navy, classic $75.00 253-9685

Jerry&Sara, Wild Boys, Pig Tangent 63 KFOG Call Jeff 549-7686

LIFECYCLE- Computerized aerobic trainer Professional health club model Excellent condition $1100. 256-0080

MOUNTAIN BIKE
18" Univega Alpine
Cro-mo frame & forks
Complete upgrade on all parts
Over $200.00 invested, call for details $350.00 O.B.O. 546-4149

NEW & USED COMPUTERS
Call Darrin 6-2270

Olim racing skis and Nordica N981 ski boots. Will sell separately. Phil @ 253-7575 Excellent condition.

ONE WAY FLIGHT from Boston to San Francisco Oct 13 $100 or B/O 256-6258

PLANE TICKET Nov 6 - Nov 11 From Hartford to Augusta GA Price neg Call Chris 549-4829

SAILBOARD- 390cm Magnum, complete, good beginners board or light wind. Mast cracked but repairable. $90/BO 659-3993 Leave message

SKIS AND BOOTS
180cm Ladies size 6
Call Judy after 6pm 739-7652

SPEAKERS
$600 value
Must sell $280 obo 546-1039

"THE EMPEROR WEARS NO CLOTHES"
Buy the Bible of the Legalization Movement now! Only $14 call Scott at 253-4245

U2 DEMOS 1991 Two 90m tapes $20.00 How Prince demos $10.00 Lots of video also available. Arthur 665-4832

YAMAHA YPP-80: Touch sensitive, excellent piano replication, bought new for $1000.00, will sell for $700.00 B/O
Also, Roland Juno-106, bought new for $800.00, will sell for $300.00B/O.
Also, Roland Jazz Chorus 120, bought used for $325.00, will sell for $225 firm. Call Rich at 256-8971.

FOUND

Gray with White Paws
might be pregnant
53 Kellogg Ave., Amherst
Please call 253-0868

PAIR OF EYEGLASSES by GRC busstop. Call 546-5765 and leave a message

FUNDRAISERS

RAISE $500...$1000...$1500
FOOLPROOF FUNDRAISING
For your fraternity, sorority, team or other campus organization. Act now for the chance to win a Caribbean cruise and fabulous prizes!
Call 1-800-950-8472, ext 50

HELP WANTED

FREE SPRING BREAK TRIPS
to students or student organization promoting our spring break packages.
GOOD pay & fun. Call CMI
1-800-423-5264

"Know before you go," Where to work, live and ski free in Colorado's resorts. "Current guide to Aspen, Vail, Bracken-ridge and more!" $15.95. Call 1-800-748-6174

LOST

14K GOLD BRACELET oval links safety clasp extreme sentimental value Lost on 9-23 Deb 256-8161

FREE $$20 FOR whoever found my red and blue windbreaker with green stripes along zipper. Left in Oakmoam DC on Friday September 27th. Call Chris 546-5767.

Key on brass whistle key ring 6-1850

Key with purple key chain
From goodwill Chris Meuson
Please call Cathleen 546-0243

LOST- Gold rope necklace
If found call 549-4889
REWARD

LOST-MY LIFE
If I don't find my amethyst
and ruby rings.
Please call Lisa 549-7949 -REWARD

MISSING KEYS!!!
Four keys on a silver/turquoise chain
-Call Matt #6-2886

MY LIFE! Black wallet on Lincoln Ave. or inr near LGRT. Lost Oct 2 Dave 256-3459

ONE SET OF 5 keys on a green clear keychain Call 6-1943 & Please leave message. Lost near Van Meter

REWARD! 4 Antique cameo ring
Veronica de Vos 6-6214 or drop at CC info. desk.

REWARD!
Black metal prescription glasses in black case
Call Jeff 546-7073

SUNGLASSES LOST
LGRC lowrise on Tuesday morning Brother's gift. Of sentimental value. Please return to Campus Center Info Desk or call 549-0944. REWARD!

MOCK TRIAL

Are you interested in the National Mock Trial Competition? Call 545-3509 for more details. Ask for Malaika or Chris

MUSICIANS

Guitar Lessons - Beginning/Intermediate Relaxed atmosphere, serious lessons $10/hr. Call Tim-256-6300

PERSONALS

TAMARA: Do you think you'll ever figure it out? -J-

HEY AMY: Did you find my toothbrush yet? -J-

CLAUDINE
Hey, you got a personal! Happy year and a half. Love Always, John

Ed,
Ever since I met you on that drunken night last November, my life has never been the same. You mean more to me than you will ever know. "Wa,wa, I'm falling off the bed."
Love, Chrissy

GENEVIEVE CONLIN is 21 today!!
Happy Birthday!!

HAPPY BIRTHDAY AMES! Only one more year to go until you have a life! But lock your door (and windows) this weekend because he's back... To leave his 25cents! Get ready for tonight! Love, Julie, Karen, Mich, and Lauren

BECKY RIVET
Happy 21st Birthday

HY
The last year has been awesome
Thanks, for it,
Bill

BRENDA STONESTREET- Happy 21st birthday Now your really legal. How's it feel? Get ready for a night to remember. Have fun and happy birthday. I love you —Brian

HEY KATHY! Did you hear about that guy Paul who really really likes you?

John T. My car is full of bread crumbs! Smile!
Love, Tracy

HEY BOOBOO your cute!
I LOVE YOU!
Bunny

To the two sexiest men on campus-
Hi!
Love Ya!
ME

SAMEH
Your the best T/A a girl could ever ask for Call me when you bathe this month
Love SM

WICKED BUNS- You buttered my bagel at People's Market. Let's get a cup of coffee - respond here NUTS FOR YOU

HEY GERKIN!
I miss you! Keep a smile and never let the house of happiness die
Spike

HI HUN! Whatcha doing? I dunno I'm always thinking of you! Love, ME

DIANE OZZOLEK Happy Birthday You're finally 21! Love, The 500 Club

Thanks to the boy who brought me his typewriter at 2am You're the bestest!

SPINE -HOLLY -HILL -JEN
-KEITH -AMY -TIM
What a bargain! Wanda & Meredith
P.S. Pita

DENA-
After four months, I'm still chasing
RIEM said it best. You are the everthing
Still in pursuit,
The Jerk

IT'S ABOUT TIME the 5 beautiful women of 123 So.East St got a personal!

You see there is an awfully large AMT. of him there but its as if he tries to stretch that AMT over an expans so xtrm one would assume he meant to make his personality limitless R.S.V.P. to her

E. GEORGE, CARRIE, Sha +6 -I've fallen behind but would like to catch up. Let's get together soon! -Swell

JOSEPH-
My love toy- Come back to my playroom you left your Indiana Jones whip here and its lifeless without your command.
Revenge is sweet!
Leather

TO TOWNEHOUSE LADIES
in Saturday night car crash
Sorry 'bout tha boo boos!!
Hope your noggan is ok!

Cari- a blue Mustang, iced tea and thee -s babe's dream.

Jack Russell
Welcome to the wonderful world that is Alpha Phi Omega today!
Your Big Bro-Michele

HEY KATEY, Why ask why?
Shut! Shut!

JOE ROB you are not only a phallic symbol With your graceful, willowy form, doe-like eyes and gentle laugh, you epitomize today's virile man.

RED-
Please
Luv Bones, D. T. Raingirl, Beth

965 + BLUE HOUSE
We luv you guys!
You're the best!
Luv your sisters at 66 Pelham

HEY HALEY:
Personal tag! You're it!
U-Know-Who

THE BIG O-
You only live once and the sky's the limit, screw the rest, babe
Love ya, Little J
P.S. Follow your heart

Hey Poop-
Why I oughta.. straddle D-rock. Go pastrare on a dog. Rueben and Uncle Roy are going to g— -King
ILU, Inspiration

BEN- Get wicked, wicked, super psyched for our 6th monthversary. I wish you could be here for it. I miss and love you tons! -Troy

DENISE,
You're the best mom any pledge could want! This semester's going to be the best!
Love, Your new daughter Jen!

DONNA
Is a Goddess!
Love your Bi-gal pal

SYDNEY- ACK! I'm a day late- 2 actually- in saying happy six months! Sorry! I love you!
Love, Lynn
P.S. Happy 23rd B-day!

RESUME SERVICE

Cutting Edge Resumes. Complete resume service. Writing, laser printing, letters, advice. 549-0367

RIDE WANTED

Ride needed to NYC or northern NJ on Thursday or Friday- Columbus Day Weekend. I'll pay for gas, tolls, munchies etc. Call Eileen -549-1515

TO/FROM N.Y.C. /Area Columbus Day Weekend. Will share expenses. Please call ASAP. Linda 546-5319

ROOMMATE WANTED

FEMALE WANTED TO share large room in townhouse. Nov 1st $160/Mo. 549-8015

LOOKING FOR 2 non-smoking females to share room in beautiful South Amherst apt next spring/1992 175+, please call 549-3593

SERVICES

ATTENTION VCR OWNERS
Make your VCR work like new again! VCR head cleaning only $14.99 -$35 elsewhere Pickup and delivery FREE on campus sepcial! Act quickly! 1-527-8076 Leave message + number

BICYCLE BROKEN?
Call Pat
546-0119

ORDER AVONI
546-1999
Call for brochure.

PREGNANT?
Need a pregnancy test, information or support? Call for free and confidential services. ALTERNATIVES 245 Main Street, Northampton 586-3000 or Greenfield 774-6019

Seniors and Juniors
Time to think about resumes
Let me help you design your resume
I offer professional resumes at college prices.
Call Andy at 549-4002

TYPING: Theses, papers, laser; quality dot matrix, Camera-ready Art Posters, Flyers 549-0006

FREE BOTTLED WATER for 1 week Call 546-3371

FREE pregnancy testing; confidential and caring support. BIRTHRIGHT:233 No. Pleasant Street Amherst 549-1906

SUBLET

3 GIRLS NEEDED to sublet furnished townhouse in Mill Valley Estates next semester. On bus route 256-0333

TRAVEL

Bahama Cruise $99 per person 5 day/4 night hotel. Plan now for your break. Very limited offer. Call now 1-800-621-0572

SOME RELIABLE TOURS aren't so reliable. Thats why Mardi Gras Travel has the #1 for for fun price guarantee to Montreal! SEX LIES IN THE MONTREAL BAR CRAWL! Party weekends include 2 nights & transp. Group leaders travel FREE! (LAGNAF)-Call today 817-444-1111 We're #1 for fun!

TRAVEL FREE! Campus representatives wanted to earn intersession and spring break trips. 256-8254

TYPING

PAPERS TYPED! $1.50/typed page Quick, Accurate Service Call Brian 546-3563

WANTED

7 year old, spayed, litter box trained, white long haired male cat needs responsible mom or daddy. 253-0743

FEMALE VOCALIST:
For harmonies & some lead
In an acoustic/electric original progressive band
Must be energetic, charismatic & creative!
For The Groove Dogs!
Contact Mike at 253-2320

Pilot needed to fly 3 people to Martha's Vineyard on Sunday Oct 13. Will pay for plane. Marc 549-5191

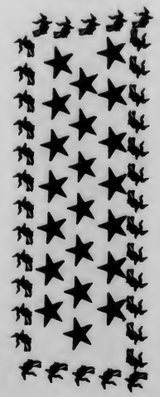
Singers/Guitar players!
Like JT, CSN&Y, Simon & Garfunkel?
Want to form a group? Call Jim 546-2205

THREE EXPERIENCED HOCKEY players looking for a team to play on. Will tryout Contact Mike 546-5632

USED COMPUTER & PRINTER- Sorta bad double Call 536-5318

USED Dorm-size fridge wanted Call Jun 546-4361 or 545-5724

WANTED
New or used fridge
Call Nona
546-5175



Sports

Hackathorn's OT winner lifts soccer

Collegian photo by Carrie Wyeth

The University of Massachusetts women's soccer team defeated Dartmouth College yesterday 1-0 in overtime. The Minutewomen improved to 8-1 on the season.

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

There is nothing like waiting to the last minute, or as the University of Massachusetts women's soccer team found out yesterday, if that doesn't work you can always wait for overtime.

The Minutewomen (8-1) thoroughly dominated Dartmouth yesterday but could not score on the Big Green until the extra time frame. Then, only 1:40 into overtime, freshman Polly Hackathorn collected a loose ball near midfield and passed to Kim Eynard on the right side. Eynard drove down the right flank beating a defender before crossing the ball through the goal mouth to Hackathorn, who was charging down the slot. Hackathorn made no mistake by driving the ball home from five yards out.

"At midfield I got the ball through to Kim and then headed down field," Hackathorn said. "Down by the goal Kim made an excellent cross and I was there."

"I wanted to get the play in the middle of the field," Eynard said. "On our team you always know someone will be there when you cross it like that."

Massachusetts continued to control the play the rest of overtime to bring in the win, 1-0.

The story of the game was the Minutewomen's ability to control the ball for long stretches of time, especially in the second half. Although Massachusetts held the ball in the Dartmouth end of the field for about 35 minutes of that half, they had few good scoring opportunities.

Dartmouth played a zone style defense with 10 women back that was effective in blanketing the UMass attack. While the Minutewomen owned the play the only scoring opportunities were long range shots.

"They have a helluva defense," UMass coach Jim Rudy said. "They played a zone that we hadn't seen and everytime we got the ball on the flank the whole damn team got in our face. They knew how to minimize our stregths."

"We can't match a Massachusetts skill for skill, so we had to try a zonal approach," Dartmouth coach Steve Swanson said. "We had to give a little more space to them and our game isn't as offensive but I think we adapted well."

The conservative defensive style showed up on the statistics sheet as UMass dominated in all offensive categories. The Minutewomen outshot Dartmouth 14-2 and had 9 corners to the Big Greens one.

UMass goalie Briana Scurry had an easy time in getting her sixth straight shutout (7th of the year) as she only had to make two saves, neither difficult.

"Our defense was great," Rudy said. "Bri wasn't challenged as Lisa Mickelson anchored the defense again."

Dartmouth's goalkeeper Kari Reuter, under constant pressure from the UMass attack, was forced to make 10 stops, a few of them tough ones.

In the 75th minute, Michele Woodside collected a loose ball at the top left corner of the penalty box and unleashed a drive that Reuter was forced to make a diving stop on. With nine minutes remaining Woodside took a shot from 35 yards out that was headed for the upper left corner until Reuter leaped to make the grab.

The Minutewomen were able to stay focused and not get fustrated with the tough defense of the Big Green.

"I knew [a goal] was going to come sooner or later because we were dominating them," Eynard said.

"I guess we were a little bit fustrated but we played really well in overtime and I knew a score would come," Hackathorn said.

"I am really pleased with the way they hung in there," Rudy said. "They kept working and working until something got in. We got our chance and took it."

UMass travels on Sunday to the University of Hartford to play the 13th-ranked Hawks.

Sportsaholic seeks treatment

My name is David and I'm a sportsaholic. I recognize that I have a problem and I am dealing with the situation, and one day I'll be able to watch sports again, perhaps.

Dr. Arthur Fieldengoal believes I can be cured and he's the best in the country, probably the world in dealing with this rare condition. Money is no object, the doctor is taking my case pro bono, it has come that far. He's never seen a case like mine.

"You have a very serious case of sportsanoma," the good doctor said. "We must tackle the situation head on, sorry, tackle was a bad choice of words, we'll conquer it."

"It's okay Doc, I'm ready, I can kick this thing, just keep me away from that [expletive] ESPN," I was talking big, but the doctor knew it was bull.

Dr. Fieldengoal specializes in this type of disease, he told me he's treated over 80 cases in the past year alone. Most have been Boston sports related he admitted, but their have been patients from Chicago, Cleveland, Minnesota and elsewhere.

"At least you realize that you have a problem," Dr. Fieldengoal said in typical doctor vernacular. "Most fans just suffer through season after season allowing the problem to build to a point where they just want to explode. Some actually do explode."

I couldn't let it build any further, not now, especially at this time of year. The Red Sox. The Patriots. The Bruins. The Celtics. Midnight Madness. College football. I know I have a problem, just don't let me near the Boston Globe sports page, especially on Sundays.

Dr. Fieldengoal doesn't believe in group therapy, he says it brings back too many bad memories.

"I ran a group session once and it set each of the 12 members back at least three months," Dr. Fieldengoal said. "One guy brought up Bucky Dent's homerun, which triggered Bill Buckner flashbacks. It was the domino effect. Brutal."

"Doctor?" I was feeling woozy. "Do you know what you just said? Buck... I can't say his name, please I'm not ready for this yet."

"Of course, what was I thinking? I'm sorry, let's discuss pleasant thoughts, like the Patriots turnaround this year. They've already doubled their win total from last year."

I smiled momentarily at the thought of the Pats having improved so quickly but then I remembered this past Sunday.

David Scott

"I went to the Miami game, Doc," I admitted cowardly. "I know you told me to stay at least 10 miles away from Foxboro, but I had to go. Squish the fish, kill Marino. I had to go. I thought it would be okay. Tell me it was okay, please."

"This is worse than I thought," Dr. Fieldengoal shook his head. "Who took you there? Your friend Kevin or was it the one you call Bundy. You've got break the chains, get away from those guys."

I bowed my head like a dog who sees his owner after spending an hour chewing on his master's shoe.

Summers are always the worst for me, the realization that the Bruins came so close along with the reality of another failed Celtics campaign is the equivalent of being buried in sand at the beach. It's a suffocating, dark, helpless feeling.

Then a beachcomber, the Red Sox, comes and spreads the sand more evenly over my body. But instead of staying under the warm sand, I claw my way to the surface.

I watch each game and curse at the television screen, I read the paper and anticipate the trades and acquisitions that both Garden occupants will make, and I even venture to Smithfield, R.I. to watch the Patriots practice in 90 degree heat.

I have no control. I'm addicted and that's the bottom line. What's worse is that I continually take on new teams to follow. I've now set aside time to follow the UMass teams and the heartbreak is sure to follow.

"David, we have to put you in solitary confinement, no Sports Illustrated, no Sportscenter, no USA Today sports

CONTINUED ON PAGE 10

SPORTS NOTICE

Congratulations: to the winners of the UMass women's swimming "Eat out in Amherst " raffle.
Grand Prize: Bob Thrasher
1st Prize: Jason Stone
2nd Prize: Bob Fontaine

Intramurals: Volleyball teams are still being accepted, especially women's. Enter a team and join in the FALL FUN. Stop by Boyden for further details!!

Men's Gymnastics Team Managers: To apply call Roy Johnson at 545-0815 or stop by room 248A Boyden Gymnastics office.

First Annual UMass Lacrosse Alumni Game: Saturday, October 12, at 10:30 a.m., on the Lower Boyden Field. Former four-time All-American Sal Lacasio will be taking on the 1992 Garber's Goril-

Tennis regains form with win over Dartmouth

By LILLIAN K. LEGGIO
Collegian Correspondent

In a complete turnaround from Monday's frustrating loss to the University of Connecticut, the University of Massachusetts women's tennis team got back on the winning track yesterday by defeating Dartmouth College's B squad 6-3 in an exhibition match.

Today at Upper Boyden tennis courts (3 p.m.), the Minutewomen will attempt to stay on that winning track as they set to face Tufts University.

This might be a more difficult feat for UMass to accomplish as Tufts rolls in with a 5-2 record and an aggressive, quick style of tennis that rivals that of Division I teams, according to Tufts coach Jim Watson.

"This will be one of the toughest teams that we play all year," said UMass coach Edwin Gentzler. "They have incredible speed on the court and hopefully we'll be able to keep up with them."

In the match against Dartmouth, the UMass squad no longer looked stressed or frustrated as they did against UConn.

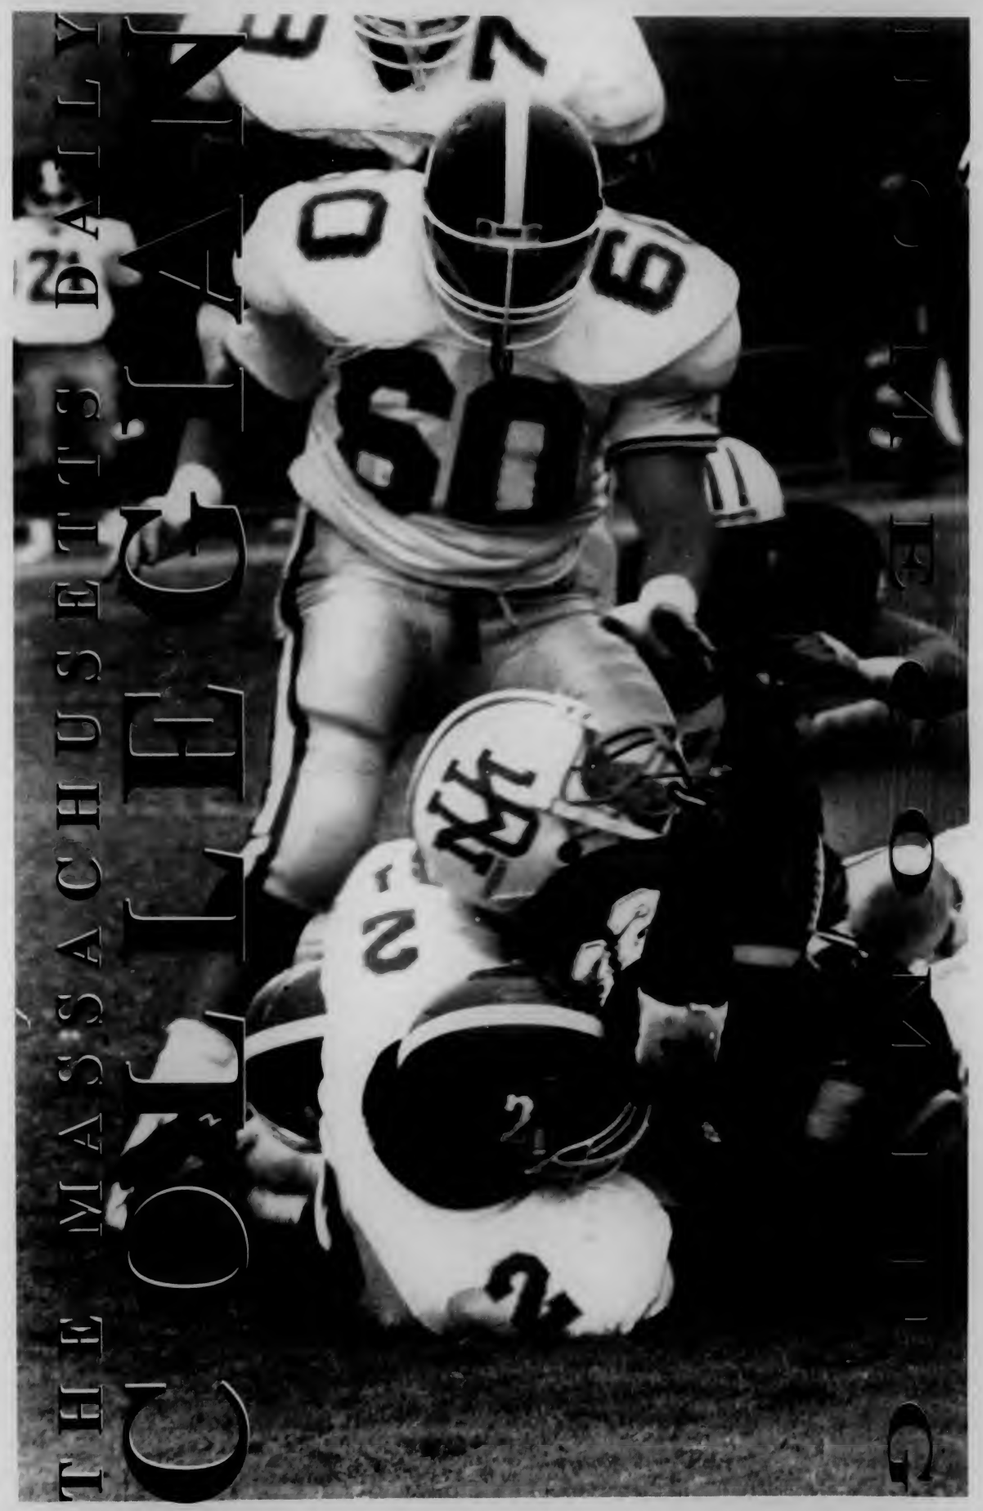
"We had a good practice yesterday," said Gentzler. "We just felt a lot more relaxed and we got our energy and confidence back."

In singles play, UMass's No. 1 player, Shizuko Yamasaki, defeated Jennifer Floren in straight sets 7-5, 6-2. Also in straight sets, Amy Ryan beat Elizabeth Lynn 6-1, 6-4 and Lesley Watts defeated Jennifer Evers 6-4, 6-4.

Playing as the No. 2 player, Kerri Kamisnki battled through two tiebreakers in the first and third sets to finally salvage a win over Abby Bergholtz 7-6 (7-4), 3-6, 7-6 (7-3). Another long match saw UMass captain Sarah Nadolny lose the first set to Jennifer Sach, but rally to win 4-6, 6-1, 6-1.

In other singles play, UMass' Kelly Grim lost to Susan Cashion 1-6, 6-2, 6-4 and Dartmouth's Elyse Newton defeated Bethann Thompson 5-7, 7-5 (7-3).

In doubles, UMass'Gail Girasella and Kerensa Eddy beat Floren and Bergholtz 6-2, 6-2. Dartmouth's Evers and Lynn defeated Pam Levine and Stacy Scheckner and UMass Amy Finn and Mary Edwards lost to Cashion and Newton.



BOSTON BARTENDERS SCHOOL OF AMERICA

If you are over 18 be a bartender

LOCAL/NATIONAL PLACEMENT

DAY/EVENING 1 WEEK

NOVEMBER AND DECEMBER

CLASSES NOW FORMING.

CALL TODAY

747-9888

1655 MAIN ST. SUITE 202 • SPRINGFIELD, MA 01103

CHINA GARDEN

"The Collegian's choice in delightful dinning"

$2 OFF with purchase of $15 or more with this coupon

Enjoy A Taste of Real Chinese Food

Sunday-Thursday, 11:30am-10:00pm

Friday-Saturday, 11:30am-11:00pm

Lunch Hour: 11:30am-3:30pm 7 days a week

Free Delivery Service
Fri., Sat., Sun.
5:00pm-10:00pm

M S G

- New Remodeling
- 7 Days a week
- Take-out
- Luncheon Specials $3.75-$4.55

Visa/Master Card/American Exp

The Valley's only Dim Sum Brunch

- Dim Sum (Chinese Brunch - Mandarin and Cantonese Styles) Every Day 11:30-3:30
- Weekly Vegetarian Sepecials (Wednesday and Thursday) New Vegetarian Menu Coming Soon!

13 N. Pleasant Street Amherst, MA • 253-4280/4281

Northampton Bowl

College Specials

On Thursdays!!

Live D.J. in Ally Oops Lounge
WHMP Dance Party Night
Every Thurs. Night 9:00 pm-12:00am

Call 584-4830 for reservations

Peter Pan

THE ONLY NON-STOP SERVICE

AMHERST to BOSTON

- 16 bus trips daily
- 23 Friday Departures
- 5 non-stop express trips
- Ticket purchase on Campus
- Hassle-free pick-ups

U-MASS (Haigus Mall)
Amherst Center Terminal

- Convenient drop-offs

Peter Pan Terminal
Downtown Boston

HOURLY EXPRESS SERVICE TO

NEW YORK CITY
HARTFORD
SPRINGFIELD

All New Student Fares

Amherst to

Boston	NYC
$24.00 round-trip	$36.95 round-trip

Must show college ID Some restrictions apply

VISA MasterCard Gladly Accepted!

For schedules and fares call:
Peter Pan Buses Depart From
U MASS (Haigus Mall) 545-2006
Peter Pan Terminal
(79 South Pleasant St) 256-0431

"Rocktober"

Join Peter Pan & WAQY 102 every Friday afternoon in October at Rafters in Amherst for a "Take You Home Party". Party begins at 2:00 PM and our 2:45 PM express bus to Boston will depart right from Rafters sports bar parking lot. Be one of the first 50 students to purchase your bus ticket from the Peter Pan representative at Rafters and get-

- FREE Lunch
- Peter Pan Prizes
- Rock 102 Prizes
- Rock BUS express to Boston

CONGRATULATIONS!

Robyn Thayer (Orientation)
Jason V. Fox (College Fest)
Winners of a $250. Book Scholarship
Compliments of Peter Pan

800-237-8747
CORPORATE HEADQUARTERS

The People Professionals

PANDA EAST

Advocate "Best in the Valley" 1989 &1990

CHINESE RESTAURANT

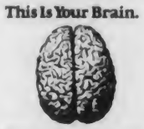
We bring Chinatown to you

* Lunch Specials*
from $3.95 including soup & rice

Hours:
Mon. - Thurs. 11³⁰ am - 9³⁰ pm
Fri. & Sat. 11³⁰ am - 10³⁰ pm
Sunday 12 noon - 9³⁰ pm

103 N.Pleasant St. Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 256-8923 (413) 256-8924

This Is Your Brain.



This Is Your Brain Without Pizza.

Any Questions?

Four Medium Cheese Pizzas
$20.00
Toppings Extra

Pizza Time DELIVERY

For free delivery call: 253-3443.

The Minutemen				UM COACH JIM REID: In his sixth year as a college head coach, all at UMass. . . Maine '73. . . has guided UM to three Yankee Conference titles in his five years. . . twice named Yankee Conference and New England Coach-of-the-Year (1988, 1990). . . record:34-25-2.
1	Barnosky	FL
2	Lambright	CB
3	John Bell	CB
4	Thimas	FL
5	Maguire	K
6	Mike Gray	FB
7	Peter Cutone	FL
8	Meehan	TB
9	McNeilly	QB
10	Feuer	PK
11	Tornatore	QB
12	Tudryn	QB
13	McGovern	QB
14	Dever	QB
15	Fasano	QB
17	Ramos	SE
19	Nevelling	FS
20	Johnson	TB
21	Newsome	SE
22	Bledsoe	TB
23	Drapeau	FB
24	Kotlarz	CB
25	Woodard	TB
27	George	TB
28	Fitchett	TB
29	Mumford	FL
30	Jasek	CB
31	Caparotti	CB
32	Williams	QB
33	Williams	CB
34	Dembowski	TE
35	Tynes	FB
36	Perry	OLB
37	Tetrault	SS
38	Kaplowitz	CB
39	Mattern	ILB
40	Rajotte	FS
41	Robinson	SS
42	Gibson	SS
43	Ingoglia	TB
44	Smith	FB
45	Read	FB
46	Croteau	FB
47	Burke	ILB
48	Lartigue	ILB
49	MacRae	FB
50	Kane	DT
51	Burke	NG
52	Holmes	ILB
53	Brandt	C
54	Barbee	DT
55	Durkin	OG
56	Byrd	CB
57	Curtin	ILB
58	Creamer	DT
59	Michno	C
60	Tulley	ILB
61	Delaney	OLB
62	MacNeil	OG
63	Bono	OT
64	Racich	OG
65	Housel	OG
66	Rice	OG
67	Dakin	FB/DT
68	Fricke	DT
69	Hallard	OG
71	LeBlanc	C
72	Sabella	OG
73	Mancaruso	NG
74	Tinker	OG
77	Dietiker	OT
78	Cavanaugh	OT
79	McKay	OT
80	Stefanski	TE
81	King	WR
82	Robinson	SE
83	Harvey	SE
84	Vallee	FS
85	Miller	FS
86	Villone	TE
87	Hammond	SE
89	Harding	OLB
90	Favreau	ILB
91	Fennell	OLB
92	Corcoran	DT
93	Kaufman	OLB
95	Tejeda	TE
96	Assencoa	OLB
97	Albert	NG
98	Kromenhoek	OLB
99	Hagan	ILB

UMass 2-3, 2-1 in YanCon	Rhode Island 2-2, 0-2 in YanCon
*7 Delaware 24 (h)	*10 Richmond 19 (a)
20 Holy Cross 22 (h)	*7 Delaware 42 (h)
*10 Maine 3 (a)	45 Towson State 25 (a)
*15 Boston University 7 (a, n)	38 Brown 36 (a)
7 James Madison 24 (a)	Yankee Conference Game*

The Rams				URI COACH BOB GRIFFIN: Southern Conn. '63. . . 16th year at URI with a record of 74-94-1. . . lifetime, 20th year, 95-114-1.
1	Pierce	WR
2	Quinn	FB
3	Cassora	K?P
4	Nowson	TB
5	Hunte	CB
6	Thomas	FS
7	Holland	QB
8	Hicks	TB
9	Donovan	FB
10	Rothmann	QB
11	Plamondon	WR
13	Thibault	CB
14	Nordstrom	QB
15	Godoon	FL
16	Coyne	LB
17	Scott	CB
18	Putnam	QB
19	Squiteri	QB
20	Donahue	K
22	Swistak	TB
23	D'Ercole	WR
24	Hoffmen	FS
25	Rogers	FL
26	Fulton	CB
27	Long	SS
28	Shuma	SS
29	Whiting	CB
30	Sullivan	CB
32	Highsmith	TB
33	Rouser	TB
35	Shirley	LB
36	Sotire	FB
37	Zednik	SS
38	Garofato	LB
39	Rizzi	TE
40	Mangil	FL
41	Merritt	CB
42	Hunter	LB
44	Caviolio	LB
46	Vandersea	FB
47	Calascbotta	FS
48	Marinelia	LB
49	Doremus	LB
50	Scoffone	OC
51	Ferrelli	LB
53	Yvon	OC
54	D'Giacomo	OC
55	Rois	LB
56	Boan	OC
57	Maloney	OG
58	Twomey	OG
59	Ivanov	LB
61	Clrell	NG
63	Kiloon	NG
64	Monti	OT
65	Klumbach	DT
66	Fournier	OG
67	Bross	OG
68	Saboit	DE
69	Mullan	NG
70	Wright	OT
72	Kanoally	OT
73	Kolman	OT
74	Rock	DT
75	Hughes	OT
76	Brimhall	DE
77	Hodgins	OG
78	Short	OT
80	Clark	LB
81	Cloud	TE
82	Miner	WR
83	Kassick	LB
84	Giordano	LB
85	Field	TE
88	Dowd	WR
89	Slattery	LB
90	Peterson	DE
91	Caruso	NG
92	Sauer	NG
99	Nowsome	DE

THE SERIES: Umass leads 33-30 with two ties. . . Minutemen are on a win streak of five. . . URI dominated in the early Eighties winning four of five from 1981 to '85 (UM's only win in that time span was 17-7 in '82). . . before 1981 it was the Minutemen who had the edge, taking eight of none form 197 to '80. . . the last URI win in Amherst was in 1985, in a game that was stopped for 16 minutes because of lightning. . .URI took that game, 7-3, in the heavy rain.*

HUNAN GOURMET

京 CHINESE RESTAURANT 湘

ADVOCATE ★BEST★ OF THE VALLEY READERS POLL 1991 1st Place

The aroma, sound & taste of authentic Chinese cuisine prepared Hunan, Szechuan, Mandarin or Cantonese style — especially for you!

FULL LIQUOR LICENSE

261 King St., Northampton • 585-0202 • Ample Parking

Open 7 Days a Week • NO MSG

TAKE OUT SERVICE AVAILABLE

ALL TEST PREP IS THE SAME, RIGHT?

WRONG!

HERE'S HOW THE RONKIN EDUCATIONAL GROUP'S STATE-OF-THE-ART TEST PREP HELPS YOU SCORE YOUR BEST ON THE LSAT, GRE, AND GMAT:

- FREE Initial diagnostic exam
- 40 full hours of classroom instruction (not filled with exams!)
  - Curriculum-based instruction (not gimmicks!)
  - Small classes (never more than 10 students!)
- Two diagnostic exams (two additional three-hour sessions!)
- Unlimited computerized practice (verbal, math, and logic games!)
- Unlimited tutorials (with actual tutors--not cassette tapes!)
- Flexible schedules (afternoons, evenings, and intersession!)

150 Fearing Street
Amherst

THE RONKIN EDUCATIONAL GROUP

Call 549-4010

Ronkin, the nation's largest full-range educational service company, is now in Amherst!

Special Introductory Offer: Registrations through December 31 receive $100.00 Off any prep course, including early registrations for January intersession courses.

RESTAURANT J's SPORTS BAR

ADVOCATE BEST VALLEY 1989 FIRST PLACE

ADVOCATE BEST VALLEY 1990 FIRST PLACE

ADVOCATE BEST VALLEY 1991 FIRST PLACE

"Best Sports Bar In The Valley" 3 Years in a Row

Good Food! Good Sports ! Good Times !

More Than Just a Great Sports Bar
• 8 color T.V.'s • Up to the minute Scoreboard
• Monday Night Football • 1/2 price pizza every Monday & Tuesday

16 0z. BUD/BUD LIGHT A Oct/Nov Special $1.40

1 Bridge St., Northampton, MA. 586-1726

AMHERST Boston
In only about 2.25 hours!

Get out of Town on U.S.EXPRESS for only $12.00 each way!

Ask for U.S.EXPRESS at the UMASS Hotel ticket window!

Get Your Ticket Here

Need more information, call:
UMASS Ticket Window 545-2006
U.S.EXPRESS 582-1313 or
Toll Free 1-800-521-5517

U.S.EXPRESS

THE VALLEY'S LEADING WEIGHTRAINING FACILITY

❶ Polaris free weights & machines
❷ Cobra free weights & machines
❸ Lifecycles
❹ Liferowers
❺ Stairobic Burn
❻ Stairmaster 4000 pts.
❼ Heart Mate
❽ Great Music
Great Atmosphere
Extensive Hours
❾ Walking Distance
From U-MASS

FLEX
FITNESS CENTER
AMHERST, MA
253-3539
CO ED

SIMPLY PUT = THE BEST

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THE LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND

VOLUME CI ISSUE 29
MONDAY, OCTOBER 11, 1991

Photo by Helena Feder
WHERE ARE THOSE KEEBLER GUYS? — Eric Peltier, junior history major waits for the apple to fall so he can rediscover gravity.

Yugoslav Army pledges withdraw from Croatia

By JEROME SOCOLOVSKY
Associated Press

THE HAGUE, Netherlands — Yugoslavia's army agreed in principle Thursday to withdraw from Croatia within a month, and Croat militants pledged to lift their blockades of army barracks in the secessionist republic.

At the same time, the combatants agreed to negotiate a political settlement to the civil war that would address the grievances of the Serb minority in Croatia, said Dutch Foreign Minister Han van den Broek, who announced the agreement.

Van den Broek spoke after five hours of talks with the leaders of Croatia, Serbia and federal military at a European Community-led peace conference in The Hague.

The accord appeared to offer the best chance yet for halting the 3 and 1/2-month-old civil war in Croatia, which has pitted Croat militants against ethnic Serb guerrillas supported by Serbia and the Serb-dominiated federal army.

It was unclear whether the latest peace agreement would be observed by fighters in the battlefield.

More than 600 people are known to have died since June 25, when Croatia declared independence along with neighboring Slovenia. Croatia reported more casualties from clashes Thursday in the eastern part of the republic.

Croatian President Franjo Tudjman and the federal defense minister, Gen. Veljko Kadijevic, both said they accepted the agreement. Tudjmen insisted Croatia be treated as a sovereign republic in the negotiations and Kadijevic linked the army pullout to progress in the political front.

"As the political decision are taken, the army will follow suit and respect them," said Kadijevic.

"If what was discussed today is translated into reality there is a good chance for the settlement of the Yugoslav crisis to be done by political means," he added.

Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic called the one-month deadline "a realistic framework," but added that all parties in the crisis must "fully contribute to the settlement."

Milosevic indicated that a final settlement must give some kind of autonomy to Croatia's Serbian minority, which doesn't want to be part of an independent Croatia.

Van den Broek said both the army pullout and the lifting of the blockades "should be carried out immediately, on both sides, as we speak."

He said, the EC would discuss whether to recognize the independence of republics wanting to break away from the Yugoslav federation.

Van den Broek said the parties agreed that any settlement would need to contain "arrangements for the full protection of ethnic minority groups or communities" in Croatia.

GLB National Coming Out Day celebrated

Coming out within UMass community said to be easier than in the outside world

By TRYSTAN SKEIGH
Collegian Staff

Greta Neunder said she was homophobic before she came out as a lesbian.

Neunder, a UMass undergraduate, said she "leaned toward the homophobic side while [she] was in the closet", although she said she wasn't physically violent, just "derogatory" about the topic of homosexuality.

Her homophobia was part of her "defense against being gay and afraid of it," a fear Neunder said she lost after "coming out" and discovering a community of supportive friends.

Today is the fifth annual National Coming Out Day for gay, lesbian, and bisexual people. Today individuals are encouraged to reveal their sexual identity to friends, coworkers, and family.

The holiday commemorates the 1987 National Lesbian and Gay March on Washington D.C., according to Felice Yeskel, director of the UMass Program for Gay, Lesbian, and Bisexual Concerns, who said she participated in the march and protest at the Supreme Court.

"It was the largest civil rights demonstration in the history of the United States, . . .although it was very under-reported by the media," Yeskel said.

She said the theme of the march was "come out for your friends, come out for yourself, and come out for justice."

The march was in response to the Supreme Court's decision to uphold the conviction of Michael Hardwick, a gay man who was convicted in Georgia under the state's sodomy law, Yeskel said.

Yeskel said Hardwick was arrested in "the privacy of his own bedroom" by police officers who entered his apartment for an unrelated cause and discovered him having sex with another man.

Yeskel said "hundreds of gay people were arrested" following the march on October 14 during a civil disobedience action at the Supreme Court.

Gay, lesbian and bisexual students at UMass who were interviewed said they supported the holiday, although some said they had personal reservations about coming out.

A graduate foreign exchange student said he cannot come out on Friday because he would risk being deported if Immigration Services discovered his bisexuality.

An undergraduate bisexual woman who asked that her name not be used said "Being in this community you can get a false sense of security."

She said that "coming out to friends is easy, but coming out to people outside [the UMass] community can be a shock."

Her concerns were echoed by Steven, a bisexual undergraduate man who asked that his last name be witheld. He said students need to think about their careers after they leave UMass.

"It's not always a good thing to come out in your professional life," Steven said.

Jesse Parsons, a gay undergraduate man, expressed a different view. He said GLB people should confront oppressive social attitudes by coming out instead of submitting to pressures to stay hidden. He says "be who you are" is his advice to gay people.

Lynelle Engel, a bisexual Continuing Education student, said she believes it's

CONTINUED ON PAGE 4

Faculty help University adapt

Create committee to deal with new UMass system

By AMY PRENDERGAST
Collegian Staff

The Faculty Senate approved a plan yesterday to establish an ad hoc Higher Education Reorganization Committee at the University of Massachusetts.

The committee will advise the administration on all matters concerning the implementation of state public education laws affecting the campus. It will consist of members from the various Senate Councils and the presidents of both the Student Government Association and the Graduate Student Senate.

The plan for the Committee was established in response to the Higher Education Reorganization Bill passed by the state legislature last summer.

The bill merged the former University of Lowell and Southeastern Massachusetts University into the new five-part University system, making them the University of Massachusetts-Lowell and the University of Massachusetts-Dartmouth.

The Board of Regents of Higher Education was also abolished in the education reform bill.

Officials presented updated statistics from the Graduate School on the decrease in the number of teaching assistants. The new figures show a much lower decrease in the number of teaching assistants than figures outlined at the last Senate meeting.

Presently there are 1,369 TAs on campus, an 8.3 percent decrease from 1990, according to officials. The administration initially said it was a 17.3 percent decrease.

While the administration discussed budget proposals for the upcoming year, many professors expressed their concerns about a possible salary increase in the near future. Professors and librarians represented by the Massachusetts Society of Professors union have not received a salary increase in three years.

Chancellor Richard O'Brien was asked to respond to a question on curriculum fees for graduate students. According to statistics presented by the Graduate Student Senate, about 120 graduate students were not able to receive a curriculum waiver with tuition waiver, which most graduate

CONTINUED ON PAGE 4

Inside:

Page 3:
UM students plant a tree with a time capsule under it as a gift to the class of 2113.
Page 10:
What to see a movie this weekend? Check out our recommendations.
Page 16:
All you need to know about the upcoming game versus URI.
Weather
Drizzle and fog in the low to mid 60s so you're gonna get wet.

Kennedy faults Thomas' ideas, not behavior

By JEFF DONN
Associated Press

NORTHAMPTON, Mass. — Speaking the day before special hearings on the Supreme Court nominee, U.S. Sen. Edward Kennedy on Thursday was faulting Clarence Thomas for his constitutional ideas, not his sexual behavior.

"I had indicated reservations about ... Thomas previously," said Kennedy, a leading opponent of Thomas' nomination. He said President Bush should offer a nominee who meets "the fundamental standards of commitment to the Bill of Rights and the Constitution."

Kennedy [D-Mass] said he believes the Senate could face a more liberal nominee if Thomas is ultimately rejected. He said a second nominee should show a greater appreciation of the right of privacy.

Kennedy spoke during a brief visit to the Cooley Dickinson Hospital, where he was treated for a back injury he suffered in a 1964 plane crash. A Kennedy legislative aide and the pilot died in that accident.

During his hospital visit Thursday, Kennedy also vowed to help change Medicare reimbursement rules that administrators say cost the hospital $500,000 a year.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THE LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is a Registered Student Organization of the University of Massachusetts, published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000.

113 CAMPUS CENTER AMHERST, MA 01003
Phone (413) 545-3500 FAX (413) 545-1592

STAFF

Editor in Chief.....Gayle Long
Managing Editor.....Marc Elliott
Editorial Editor.....Greg Sukiennik
News Editor.....Preston P. Forman
Sports Editor.....Tamir Lipton
Arts Editor.....Paul DeGeorges
Photography Editor.....Carrie Wyeth
Black Affairs Editor.....Sondra Sutton
Women's Issues Editor.....Jessame Hannus
Jewish Affairs.....Felice Cohen, Debra Kriegsman
Multicultural Affairs Editor.....Alexander Nguyen
Third World Affairs Editor.....Madanmohan Rao
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor.....Trystan Skeigh
Business Manager.....Randee Pastel
Advertising Manager.....Dena Haselkorn
Finance Manager.....Jeff Weiner
Circulation Manager.....Jim Winterbottom
Subscriptions Manager.....Stacy Rogers
Promotions Manager.....Scott Macey
Production Manager.....Nicole Dumas
Day Graphics Manager.....Jenn Burns

PROFESSIONAL STAFF

Business.....Brian Harrington, Lori Black, Maureen Majerowski
Graphics.....Blake Phillips

Postman goes on killing spree, seeks revenge on co-workers

By MICHAEL S. SMITH
Associated Press

RIDGEWOOD, N.J. — A fired postal employee killed his former supervisor and another person in their home, then killed two workers at the post office and set off explosives before surrendering this morning after a 4 1/2-hour stand-off, authorities said.

The suspect, Joseph M. Harris, 35, of Paterson, would be charged with four counts of murder, plus kidnapping and other charges, said Bergen County Prosecutor John Fahy.

He was heavily armed, including hand grenades and an Uzi machine gun, and had left his apartment in Paterson booby-trapped before starting his rampage, authorities said.

Two mail handlers were found dead in the basement of the Ridgewood Post Office after the siege there ended, authorities said.

The victims in nearby Wayne included Carol Ott, 30, who was Harris' former supervisor. She had filed a harassment complaint against Harris last year.

"In my opinion, considering the way he was armed and given the circumstances as they are now, he intended to kill more people," Ridgewood police Chief Frank Milliken said.

Ott was found dead in her home about 4:20 a.m. along with Cornelius Kasten Jr., who lived with her.

Ott had been stabbed and Kasten shot in the head, said Passaic County prosecutor Ronald Fava. Ott was partially disrobed but it was not immediately determined if she was raped, Fava said.

The men found dead at the Post Office were identified as Joseph M. Vanderpaauw, 59, of Prospect Park and Donald McNaught, 63, of Pompton Lakes, Fahy said in a news release.

Ridgewood, Wayne and Paterson are all in northern New Jersey, northwest of New York City.

Fahy said the siege at the post office began when a postal service truck driver arrived to deliver mail at 2:15 a.m. and was surprised to find the building dark and the loading bay door closed.

The driver entered the building and saw Harris in the basement wearing a gas mask. Harris fired a gun at the driver, who managed to flee, Fahy's statement said.

The officers fled the building, and seconds later heard a second explosion. Police surrounded the building and a stand-off continued until shortly before 7 a.m., when Harris surrendered, Fahy said. The explosions caused minimal damage.

Milliken said Harris had a 9mm Uzi semiautomatic, a .22-caliber MAC 10 machine gun with silencer, a samurai sword, three or more hand grenades, several homemade bombs and ammunition.

Harris was fired from the post office in April 1990, two months after Ott filed a complaint with Ridgewood police alleging that Harris had threatened her on the job, Fahy said. Ott later decided not to press charges, Milliken said.

Harris, a postal employee since 1981, had been reprimanded in 1984 for harassing other employees, Fahy said.

In Paterson, police Chief Richard W. Munsey said a search of Harris' apartment turned up a letter in which Harris wrote of injustices he felt and a booby trap.

Lion chews on model's head

MANCHESTER, N.H. (AP) — A model who was posing with a lion for a photograph was injured when the beast suddenly took her head in its jaws, authorities said.

Shannon Audley, 23, of Manchester suffered cuts to her head and back Wednesday. She was listed in good condition at Catholic Medical Center today.

Audley had been posing for a print advertisement with a 6-year-old male lion for about an hour when the animal opened its mouth and clamped down on the side of her head.

The lion apparently acted up when Audley moved her head to one side and the lion moved its head at the same time, said photographer Bill Melton. Audley felt the lion behind her head and jerked away, and the lion reacted.

One of the trainers jammed his arm into the lion's mouth to stop it from doing more damage.

"I've worked with this lion many times and never had a problem before," Melton said.

The city's animal control officer said it wasn't clear if Audley was scratched by the lion's teeth or claws.

The lion, meanwhile, was returned to his home den in Tennessee, police said. His hometown was not known.

Audley did not want to comment on the incident, the hospital said.

For Your Information

Friday, October 11

Special Event — Topic: Buddy, Can You Spare a Ruble? Discussion with service and Shabbat dinner, starting at 7:00 p.m. at the Chabad House.

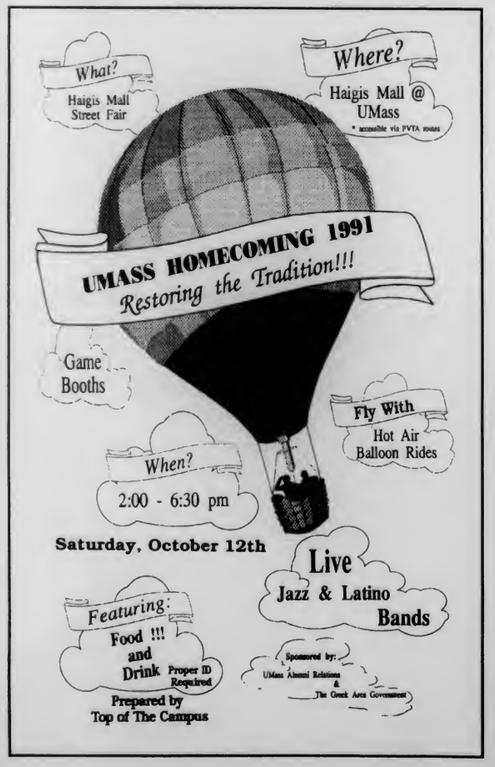
Music — 17th Annual Multiband Pops will be held at the UM FAC Concert Hall at 8 p.m. Admission is $8 and $4.

Saturday, October 12

Homecoming

Special Event — The Chabad House will be holding a service and Shabbat meal at 10:00 a.m.

Blood Drive — A blood drive is scheduled at the 2nd Congregational Church in Holyoke from 10:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m.



ATTENTION; FACULTY AND STAFF

October is here and the United Way campaign is about to begin.

This fall, for the first time, Advocacy Network will be listed as an approved agency by COMEC. (Commonwealth of Massachusetts Employees Contribution) to receive your contribution as a state employee through COMEC via United Way as the collection agency.

Advocacy Network is an all volunteer group which advocates for the mentally retarded residing in Western Massachusetts.

Through the years, Advocacy Network has been closely involved with thousands of University of Massachusetts students who have participated in the long-standing and successful Boltwood Project.

I ask for your financial support through your United Way/COMEC contribution: Please specify Advocacy Network.

If you wish to know more about Advocacy Network, please phone:

(413) 256-1313

Local

Multiculturalism stifles thought, professor says

By HARRY HOROWITZ
Collegian Correspondent

Multiculturalism and the concept of political correctness suppresses free thought, Judaic studies Professor Julius Lester said during an informal meeting held at the Hillel House last night.

"Ideological unity is a form of intellectual fascism," he said, "The first thing that gets sacrificed with unity is the truth."

The Thursday night meeting entitled, "Conversations with Julius Lester," was intended for students to get to know one of the most controversial and, for many students, respected members of the UMass faculty.

Lester began his career at UMass in 1971 as a professor in the Afro-American department.

In 1985, the Afro-American studies department chairman told Lester that he would be happier somewhere else, after Lester criticized Rev. Jesse Jackson for anti-semitism.

Lester is an Afro-American Jew who converted to Judaism in 1982.

Lester published his autobiography, Lovesong, Becoming a Jew, in 1985. He has taught several courses since his arrival at the University, including a course on the writings of Elie Wiesel, a course called, "Blacks and Jews," and he is currently teaching a course called, "Social Change in the

CONTINUED ON PAGE 8

Collegian photo by Matt Kahn

IS THIS THE LINE FOR THE BARRY MANILOW CONCERT? — The deep dark underground tunnel of love that runs between Herter and Bartlett waits for its next meal.

A gift from this year's grads to the class of 2113

Class of '91 to bury new time capsule commemorating UMass' 250th anniversary

Collegian photo by Josh Reynolds

Physical Plant workers plant a new tree by the Old Chapel. A time capsule will be buried Saturday.

By JENNIFER D. HAWKINS
Collegian Correspondent

History repeats itself at UMass.

In October 1990, a storm knocked over a white pine tree near the Old Chapel. Seeing the downed tree, University archivist Mike Milewski did some research and discovered that under the tree was buried a time capsule buried by the class of 1878 during commencement week in 1877. That was way back when UMass was known as The Massachusetts Agricultural College.

On May 14, 1991, a team of anthropology students, physical plant workers and others organized by Michael Nessaney worked for over five hours until they finally unearthed a copper box from the past.

The capsule contained a copy of the class yearbook, an annual report of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, a poem, and some handwritten papers. The capsule had suffered some water damage and some of its contents were unreadable.

This weekend, the class of 1991 will make its own contribution to the future, specifically, to the class of 2113 who will graduate during the University's 250th year.

Jodi Green of Alumni Relations, who helped unearth the 1878 time capsule, and a planning committee composed of class of 1991 members and former members of the Senior Celebration Committee Carl Grygiel, Susan Inniss, Karen Mitchell, Margaret Cunningham, Jarrett Saunders, Doug Bornstein, and Barry Nuesner have teamed up with members of the team that unearthed the 1878 time capsule, Jodi Green, Micheal Nessaney, Mike Milewski who is responsible for archiving the information so the class of 2113 will know that the capsule is there, and new member Virginia Rees of the Alumni Relations office.

The class of 2113 will find inside the vacuum sealed capsule a collection of UMass paraphernalia designed to convey what student life was like at UMass in the early 1990s. For instance, some of the objects included will be an I.D. card, a pennant, a class schedule, and an admissions video tape. The video will serve no only to show what the campus looks like but to demonstrate the role that video currently plays in our society.

The ceremony will be on Saturday, October 12 at 4:30 p.m. In keeping with the traditions of the original celebration, a poem will be read, rose petals will be spread, and a gun salute will be performed. And just like their predecessors a century earlier who stood on a bare hill overlooking the pond, the team will plant a tree above the time capsule.

Jodi Green said that she hopes that this ceremony will be the beginning of a tradition here at UMass. Or perhaps the continuation of a tradition that was begun in 1877 and has been dormant until now.

Grad students' lounge open in Campus Center

By KURT MOFFETT
Collegian Correspondent

An engineering student in a rectangular-shaped room with concrete walls wipes the moisture off his brow as he plods through another dynamics problem. The air is still, the room stuffy. Rustling papers and scribbling pens on sporadically arranged long tables are the only sounds to be heard. The atmosphere is that of the Reading Room.

Next door is the newly built Graduate Lounge. Older men and women than those in the Reading Room congregate at small round tables drinking Samuel Adams beer and mixed drinks and making small talk. A few are studying or reading a newspaper. Cool air blows through the vents and soft jazz plays in the background. Bizarre paintings, some which could be considered offensive, hang from the concrete walls.

The Graduate Lounge was formerly the Music Room, but students could study in there as well as the Reading Room. During the spring 1991 semester approximately 200 students signed a petition opposing its construction. They felt the lounge would create a noisy atmosphere inappropriate for studying, said Bill Harris, director of the campus center.

Harris said that the lounge was built there because there wasn't a place on campus for graduate students to congregate.

The decision to build the Graduate Lounge was made in May 1990. Since that was the end of the semester, students were uninformed of the decision and the Board of Governors didn't have a chance to discuss it, said Ben Preston, BOG vice-president.

The issue was apparently forgotten until construction began during the Fall '90 semester. Students then spoke out and the BOG had a meeting in December 1990.

Preston said the opposition's main argument was that the only place to study after the library closed at 11 p.m. was the Reading Room. By creating the Graduate Lounge, half of this space was being taken away. This meeting occurred too late, however, because construction had already begun.

Construction consisted of creating a foyer with a glass door entrance between the Reading Room and the Graduate Lounge. The Reading Room and the Grad Lounge are separated by each having glass door entrances and a partition.

The opening of the Graduate Lounge was in September and there apparently have been no problems.

Collegian photo by Matt Kahn

Graduate students Anita Dancs and Brian Haloran enjoy some beer in the Graduate Student Lounge.

■ Coming Out Day

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

important for GLB people to come out in order to increase social awareness and end gaybashing.

"If everyone who was GLB was out about it, there wouldn't be any way for anybody to be bashed — it would become an acceptable thing," Engel said.

Tami Monahan, a bisexual undergraduate, said she thinks the holiday "gives us all a chance to look around and realize we're not alone."

Yeskel said National Coming Out Day is also a perfect opportunity for heterosexual allies to come out and show their support for GLB people.

Heather Bell, a UMass undergraduate who said she is a GLB ally, said "it's important for allies to come out and say 'we support this.'"

"I think the rallies and coming out day help GLB students and allies form a community," Bell said.

■ committee

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

students who teach receive.

"We will explore it, we shall repair it. It is just a failure of process," O'Brien said.

A set of procedures for the Graduate School regarding violations of the picketing code were also adopted yesterday.

According to the new procedures, a graduate student accused of violating the University Picketing Code will be entitled to a hearing. If the charge against the student is sustained, the dean of the graduate school will impose the proper sanction, after considering the student's particular circumstances.

These procedures were established in response to the dismissal of graduate students in the spring of 1989 for several demonstrations against research being conducted for the Department of Defense by UMass professors.

Feminist forum discusses the film Thelma and Louise

By MICHELLE BAYLISS
Collegian Correspondent

The main characters in this summer's blockbuster movie, Thelma and Louise, a film about two women running from abusive relationships, were considered to be positive role models by participants in a standing room only session of Women's Studies Brown Bag lunch series Wednesday.

The discussion group agreed that Thelma and Louise's transformation from victims to survivors was admirable.

The series, which is in its sixth semester, welcomes all to come share and discuss feminist issues in an informal atmosphere.

Deborah Carlin, an English professor, led an intense discussion with a brief synopsis of the movie.

Louise, considered the survivor from the beginning, was characterized as being cautious, in control, wise to the ways of the world, having earned wisdom that she had learned from the past. Thelma was considered the unconscious victim in the beginning, being totally unaware, yet pulling through as a survivor.

Ronnie Janoff-Bulman, a psychology professor, discussed the violence of the movie and the shared the feelings of elation and despair she felt upon leaving the movie.

One student shared how she had heard others perceive the movie as male bashing at every level. Others laughed and defended the movie comparing the death of one man to the many other violent movies such as Terminator.

Joyce Berkman, a history professor, discussed recourses to violence. She compared immoral means leading to desired ends and issues about the right of violence, acts of revenge and long-term effects of a collective struggle opposed to individual acts of violence.

Janoff-Bulman compared the movie to a feminist's fantasy with a tragic ending. One student felt the movie offered no solutions, or no appropriate options for Thelma and Louise.

There was discussion about the abusive male-female relationships and the denial of the attempted rape by Thelma.

Carlin recommended the movie Strangers in Good Company for those interested in seeing a great feminist movie.

The next Brown Bag Lunch Series will be held Oct. 23, and will feature a program for gay, lesbian and bisexual issues concerns coordinated by Felice Yeskel.

HOME STYLE LAUNDRY
Squire Village Shopping Center
Amherst Rd. (Rte. 116) Sunderland
(Next to 7-11)
14th ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION
(October 14 through 31, 1991)
- Top Loaders ($1.00) ..... 75¢
- Double Loaders ($1.50) $1.00
- Triple Loaders ($2.00) $1.50
- Drawing 100 FREE WASHES
(No purchase necessary to win)
COME! SAVE! BE A WINNER!
ONE FREE WASH
Home Style Laundry
Rte. 116
(top-loader)
with one paid wash
exp. 11/30/91

Who's been making Amherst's finest Pizza since 1967?
SLICE OF PIZZA 89¢ PIZZA
BELL'S Pizza HOUSE
549-1311
65 University Drive • Amherst
Serving the Valley for over a quarter century
1967-1992
BELL'S PIZZA HOUSE

THIS FRIDAY 2-6 PM
THE TOC SEAFOOD BAR
PEEL 'N' EAT SHRIMP
$ 4.25/HALF DOZ
FRESH STEAMERS
$ 4.50/'BUCKET'
Introducing Pitchers of Miller Genuine Draft for $4.25
ONLY AT THE TOC LOUNGE
11th FLOOR CAMPUS CENTER

NOW RENTING FOR THE SECOND SEMESTER
Don't live in the dorms paying 1800.00 room and board for the second semester
You can live in beautiful
SQUIRE VILLAGE
at an average of $235/Month
(room, board, utilities)
We have large 1 to 4 bedroom apartments fully appliances with:
• Kitchen with dishwasher •
• Wall-to-wall carpeting •
• Air Conditioning •
• Laundry facilities •
• Swimming pool •
• On U-Mass bus route •
Don't Delay! Call
SQUIRE VILLAGE APARTMENTS
ROUTE 116 • 665-2203

World/Nation

Biosphere scientist hurt
Loses fingertip and may leave project

ORACLE, Ariz (AP) — One of eight people in the Biosphere experiment may have to be taken out of the sealed environment, an official of the project said today.

Jane Poynter, 28, was injured while operating a rice-hulling machine Wednesday, said Kathy Dyhr, spokeswoman for the project. The finger was reattached by the crew's doctor, but because the bone was cut, she may have to be taken out temporarily for surgery by a specialist, Dhyr said.

A decision on whether to remove her will be made in the next two or three days, the spokeswoman said.

The crew of eight was sealed into the three-acre, glass-enclosed environment on Sept. 26, intending to stay inside, without material contact with the outside world, for two years. If Poynter were taken out through the airlocks for surgery, it wouldn't invalidate the experiment to see if humans can run a self-sustaining environment, Dyhr said.

"It wouldn't be considered breaking closure," she said.

Poynter, from Surrey, England, is manager of the Bioshere's farm.

She caught the middle finger of her left hand in a machine that removes the hulls from grains of harvested rice, Dyhr said. The accident took off a section of finger about down to the end of the nail, including the bone, she said.

Dr. Roy Walford, who has a well-equipped infirmary, reattached the finger, and Poynter was comfortable on pain-killers, Dyhr said. But because of the bone loss, Walford believes surgery by a specialist may be necessary.

Walford will monitor the healing and decide within two or three days whether to have her sent out to a specialist, Dyhr said.

Haiti seeks new government

By KEVIN NOBLET
Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP)— Haiti's provisional president is trying to put together a new government despite increasing pressure from the United States and dozens of other nations to restore ousted President Jean-Bertrand Aristide.

Joseph Nerette, a Supreme Court justice appointed president after last week's coup, telephoned leaders Wednesday to discuss candidates for Cabinet posts, said one politician, speaking on condition of anonymity.

State-run radio said later that Nerette, 67, summoned leaders of all major political parties to a meeting Wednesday night.

Several names were circulating as candidates for prime minister, including prominent human-rights activist Jean-Jacques Honorat. But Honorat said he wasn't interested.

"I know what politics is," he said. "I'm not even tempted. I'm not going to leave human rights for politics."

In Washington, the 34-nation Organization of American States intensified pressure for reinstatement of Aristide, Haiti's first democratically elected president.

At least 150 people are thought to have been killed by security forces during and after the soldiers' revolt that ousted Aristide.

Cuban congress opens, session closed to public

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Amid unusual secrecy, Cuba's Communists inaugurated a party congress today that will chart the future course of the country's deeply troubled revolution.

Foreign journalists were barred from the proceedings, held in the eastern city of Santiago, and a domestic news blackout was imposed on a speech by President Fidel Castro to the congress. Excerpts from Castro's remarks were promised later in the day, according to broadcasts monitored by the U.S. government.

At the last such congress, in 1986, Castro's report was broadcast live and scores of foreign journalists were present.

Only the ceremonial opening was broadcast this morning. Santiago party leader Esteban Lazo told the gathering that the commander in chief of the armed forces, Raul Castro, and Interior Minister Abelardo Colome Ibarra, were not present for the congress.

Lazo said the two were forced to remain at their "command posts" for security reasons, reflecting continuing concern on the island over the possibility of hostile action by the United States.

About 1,800 delegates had been expected for the congress but the figure given this morning was slightly under 1,700. As evidence of critical fuel shortages in Cuba, many of the delegates made the trip to Santiago by train.

The Cuban media has billed the congress as "the post important meeting in Cuba in this century."

Since the 1986 congress, Cuba's economy has been in steep decline, the socialist bloc has collapsed and President Castro has become increasingly isolated.

Among outside experts on Cuba, the principle unanswered question about the congress is whether Castro will bow to the wishes of moderate elements in the party and permit reforms to revitalize the country's moribund economy.

But Castro has said he will stand by his revolutionary principles. Most outside analysts believe that fundamental reform is not in the offing.

"He wants people to toe the line," says Jaime Suchlicki, a University of Miami history professor.

But American University's William Leogrande believes that recent events, including Cuba's precipitous economic decline, leave Castro and his party little choice but to opt for reform.

"He's got to start a strategy for dealing with the current crisis," says Leogrande. "It has to be a reform strategy. He can't say, 'We're not going to stay the course.'" Leogrande concedes that most Cuba analysts disagree with his thesis.

QUALITY SILK SCREENED SPORTSWEAR
T-SHIRTS • SWEATS
BUMPER STICKERS
MUGS
Free screen $20.00 value (over 50 shirts)
KENNEDY SCREEN GRAPHICS
16 ARMORY STREET
NORTHAMPTON, MA 01060
(413)584-2124
1-800-287-2124

HAMPSHIRE FITNESS CLUB
FIT FOR LIFE
The Area's Most Complete Club
256-6646
At Echo Hill
• pool • aerobics • aqua-aerobics
• steps • nautilus • raquetball
• full weights • jacuzzi • sauna
• massage • bikes • tennis
• rowers • treadmills
• stairmaster
• student discounts
We're on the bus route

CAMPUS EMPLOYMENT
Student Manager
Information Data Bank
QUALIFICATIONS: Demonstrated (through previous experience and/or recommendations) good communication skills; organizational and supervisory skills; ability to organize data, proof-read, edit; typing and/or word processing skills required; promotional and marketing experience desirable.
ELIGIBILITY: Undergraduate (preferably College Work Study eligible), with at least three semesters remaining at the beginning of the Spring Semester 1992 (excluding summer).
PAY RATE: $6.00 per hour
WORK SCHEDULE: Must be available for a minimum of ten hours per week and on site at least four days per week.
STARTING DATE: Immediately. Training will be provided.
APPLICATIONS: Obtain an application at the Information Data Bank, 2nd floor lobby Whitmore. Deadline is October 24, 1991. An interview may be required.
The Information Data Bank (IDB) is a telephone or walk-in referral center which maintains information on University administrative and academic policies and procedures; bus, library, athletic etc. schedules; campus current events; and a variety of other reference materials.
The Student Manager is responsible for the day-to-day operations of IDB including recruiting, training, scheduling, and supervising a student staff of 8; maintaining and updating the IDB library and information resources; with the assistance of the Graphics Coordinator, arranging for the preparation and placement of one ad per week in the Collegian.
For additional information contact IDB at 545-1555

music mania

EVERY
• VIDEO • TAPE
• CD
ON SALE!

EVERYTHING SALE
IN THE STORE ON

1 ONE DAY ONLY

ONCE A YEAR! Friday, October 11th!

THOUSANDS OF ITEMS TO CHOOSE FROM

EVERY "SINGLE ALBUM" COMPACT DISC ON SALE

10.99 EACH OR LESS!

THE COMMITMENTS
7.99 Tp 10.99 CD

GUNS' N ROSES I
7.99 Tp 10.99 CD

GUNS 'N ROSES II
7.99 Tp 10.99 CD

METALLICA
7.99 Tp 10.99 CD

RED HOT CHILI PEPPERS
7.99 Tp 10.99 CD

MARIAH CAREY
7.99 Tp 10.99 CD

RICHIE SAMBORA
6.99 Tp 10.99 CD

CHILLER-ERICH KUNZEL
6.99 Tp 10.99 CD

OZZY OSBOURNE
7.99 Tp 10.99 CD

LENNY KRAVITZ
6.99 Tp 10.99 CD

VOICE OF THE BEEHIVE
6.99 Tp 10.99 CD

VAN MORRISON
14.99 Tp 28.99 CD

HALL & OATES
5.99 Tp 9.99 CD

BEBE & CECE WINANS
6.99 Tp 10.99 CD

20% OFF ALL VIDEO & ACCESSORIES!

ADDAMS FAMILY — The Addams Family 12 original TV episodes! 2 per video! — 7.99

CITIZEN KANE — Citizen Kane The 50th anniversary — 15.99

PLAYBOY — Playboy's Girls of Rock & Roll — 7.99

maxell XL II S 90 2 PK 6.99

maxell UR 90 2 PK 2.99 CD 90 HOLDS 90 CD'S 19.99 LABERLINE

TDK HS I-120 T-120 HS 3.49

TDK SA 90 2 PK 4.99

ROLYDISC CD 20 HOLDS 20 CD's 9.99 ROLYKIT

music mania

LOOK AT THE SAVINGS!

BARGAIN MUSIC CASSETTES	PREVIOUSLY VIEWED VIDEO	BARGAIN MUSIC CD'S	BLANK VIDEO TAPE
4 FOR $10	$8.88	$5.99	3 FOR $7.99

TAKE OVER 50% OFF	TAKE OVER 30% OFF	TAKE OVER 25% OFF	TAKE 20% OFF	ALL Cassingles
Orig. Mfr. List 9.98 - 39.98 Bargain Video 3 FOR: 9.99	CDs Reg. price 15.99 or less. 10.99	CD's Reg. price 14.99 or less. 10.99	ALL VIDEO ALL ACCESSORIES	Regularly priced 3 for $10 3 FOR 7.99

ONE DAY ONLY! FRIDAY OCTOBER 11TH

*SOME RESTRICTIONS MAY APPLY. *MANUFACTURER'S OVERSTOCK NOT INCLUDED. *NO DOUBLE MARKDOWNS.

HADLEY, Russel St. & Route 9.....(413)256-3160
HOLYOKE, 2275 Northampton St.....(413)536-2222
PITTSFIELD, 241 North St.....(413)499-0357
SPRINGFIELD, 1550 Boston Post Rd....(413)543-1517
W. SPRINGFIELD, Memorial Ave.....(413)737-4128
ENFIELD, CT.,Rte. 190 Hazard Ave.....(203)741-3030

Strawberries
music, movies and more!

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions on this page are those of the individual writer or cartoonist, and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian or the University unless otherwise noted.

Columbus Day a celebration of imperialism and murder

Michael Morrissey

Well, the semester marches on, and though most of you thought UMass would be sending refund checks to you before I wrote a politically correct column, surprise, surprise!

Most of you (hopefully) know that this weekend is long in order to observe Columbus Day. For some reason, our ancestors thought it appropriate to honor Christopher Columbus, the saint of the 15th century. And why not? This great navigator "discovered" America in 1492, bringing the Indians "culture and civility."

So Columbus' departure with his three vessels, the Nina, the Pinta, and the Santa Maria to India marked one of the greatest events in civilization. He was off to prove that the world was round, and silence the supposedly predominent "Earth is flat" critics of his.

Is what you've just read new to you, or have you heard it before? I know that this is the way the public schools of my hometown socialized us. We were taught to admire Columbus as a hero, when real history dictates otherwise.

Where do I start? OK, First of all, the Earth was assumed to be round by virtually all educated Europeans in the 15th century. The ancient Greeks and Egyptians both were able to determine that the Earth was round. The reason no one sailed west was because they knew it would be too great a distance.

No one but Columbus, that is. In fact, I will concede to you that Christopher Columbus was one of the luckiest men ever, for if he hadn't run right into a continent, he and his crew would've died of starvation en route to India.

This leads us to the arrival of Columbus to the Western Hemisphere. Evidence shows that the Vikings arrived at least a few hundred years earlier to North America. So why don't we celebrate Leif Erikkson day?

In fact, Columbus never landed on our continent, banging into islands in Latin America. So what was the first thing he did? He named the indigenous people Indians because he thought he landed in India. And to think, he was only a few thousand miles off!

And yet, here in North America, we celebrate this man as a hero. We celebrate this day, we name our cities after him, and we anticipate the 500 year anniversary of his discovery. A friend of mine owns a shirt that reads, "How could Columbus have discovered America if Native Americans were already here?".

The truth is that Christopher Columbus was one of the most savage men who ever lived. He killed and enslaved the native people, and his crew skinned their dead bodies. Columbus was obsessed with gold, and his pursuits were designed to feed this obsession. He tried to strip the land of all of its gold, and he pleaded with Isabella and Ferdinand to finance another voyage to rape and pillage the natives.

As for the natives, Columbus probably can be held personally responsible for the murder of millions of indigenous people that has occurred even up to this day. His savagery was an act that was followed by virtually every proceeding discoverer. If it's so important to be sensitive in this college community, why don't we understand how the Native Americans feel about this day?

It's hard to understand how Columbus, who was widely criticized during his lifetime, has become a hero to our grandparents and parents? Thankfully some of our school systems have begun to change textbooks, making them more historically accurate. Under a little historical scrutiny, the fallacy of Columbus is revealed.

Maybe I'm making too much of an issue, and Columbus simply represents a symbol of the colonization of the Western hemisphere. But on Monday, if you have some time, give a little thought to the fact that while Christopher Columbus' voyage represented a beginning for Europeans in America, it signalled a painful end for the Native Americans.

Michael Morrissey is a Collegian columnist

Not to be recycled

In response to the general confusion over what can and cannot be recycled here at our very own illustrious UMass, I have compiled a brief list of items that some overly enthusiastic but tragically misinformed individuals have attempted to recycle.

These items listed below cannot presently be recycled, but thanks for your suggestions. Please feel more than free to post this handy list near your personal blue box.

WHAT IS NOT RECYCLABLE:

Condoms, new and used, are not recyclable.

Dead animals, even fish are not recyclable.

Any plastic that is not a #1 or #2 bottle, including plastic bags, tampon applicators, rubber chickens, and food from the D.C.s are not recyclable.

Any paper contaminated with food or bodily fluid is not recyclable.

Windows — the glass ones and the ones in envelopes — are not recyclable.

Paper board is not recyclable. This includes cereal boxes, saline solution boxes, cracker boxes, cookie boxes, and any box that vaguely resembles any of the above.

Snotty tissue is not recyclable.

Melons and other fruits are definitely not recyclable.

Carbon paper and paper towels are not recyclable.

Bottle caps and lids are not recyclable.

Vomit has never been recyclable.

For those of you who are wondering how it is you're supposed to know if the plastic bottle that has been rotting in your room for the last two weeks is a #1 or #2, here's a handy tip: look at the bottom of the bottle. There, encased in groovy little recycling arrows, is the number you're looking for.

Jamie D. Weeks
Education Coordinator for the Residential Recycling Program

Do something healthy — take a nap

Jana Brady

Remember when we were in kindergarten, and the words "nap time" made us cringe? Today we could really appreciate hearing it uttered from our teachers' mouths.

Let's not hold our breath waiting to hear it, though. We're not in kindergarten anymore. However, now we're actually tired.

Well of course we're tired! Just think of the past week full of classes, exams and papers. Plus, the hours we put in at the part-time job, as struggling students, feebly attempting to earn survival funds.

Several afternoons and/or evenings were spent attending meetings concerning our extra-curricular activities. We spent time listening and responding to voice mail, because who is ever home to pick up the phone? We needed to get together and catch up with friends, and that takes time.

Finally, everybody's favorite, and well-deserved after a tough week: time may have passed while we were partying.

We are trying to fit it all in and refuse to give anything up, anything but sleep, that is. "Sleeping" was not mentioned in the above listing of our time-consuming activities. Many of us don't consider it a top priority.

For example, we may often sit down to work on a paper the night before it is due. This is, of course, because our busy schedules leave no time to start it earlier.

Soon we become unable to concentrate on it, so we decide to take a short study break to cure our writer's block. Sometimes that turns into a several hours-long, stress-relieving procrastination session of some sort that our friends seem to have time for, so why not us?

We return to finish our paper, a task that requires the use of a good portion, if not all, of our sleep time. Most of us do not function too well on little or no sleep, and often attend classes zombie-style after writing a paper nocturnally.

As students, we try to balance our academic and social lives. Often, to maintain this balance, we give up a few hours of sleep here and there. Many of us believe it is the key to surviving college effectively. We theorize, "If we study and sleep, we will have no life.

On the other hand, if we sleep a lot and have a life, we will not study, and will not have a life for long because we will flunk out." Consequently, we decide to study and have a life — ditch the sleep variable when necessary.

I'm not here to tell you to plan ahead, or to budget your time more wisely. For some reason, no matter how hard many of us try to do things early, it never seems to happen. Instead, I'm advising that if again you use sleep time to accomplish something else, don't be a zombie for too long; take a nap.

Okay, I know what some are saying now: "This girl is bananas! After listing the zilllion things that make up my busy life and explaining how there is never any extra time for anything, she tells me to take a nap! What a crazy suggestion!"

First of all, I may be bananas, but this is not the issue here. It is whether or not the suggestion is crazy, and it isn't. Second, I am not suggesting a three-hour, sleep through dinner, wake up groggy with drool on your pillow nap that leaves you with insomnia for the night, but rather a quick, 20-30 minute rest your brain doze-off and wake up refreshed power nap. The kind that leaves you revitalized and able to function normally through the rest of the day.

I heard that a short nap during the day is healthy and may equal the rest we receive from two or three hours of sleep. Although I didn't hear it from a doctor I took it as medically sound anyway and decided to give it a try. Maybe it was just psychological, but it worked!

So what do you say? Try to find that half hour of time between classes or before studying, where you can catch a few zzzs. Squeeze that time into your hectic schedule once in while. Just don't forget to set the alarm. And get up when it goes off, will ya? Snooze buttons are taboo in this scenario.

Jana Brady is a UMass student

Haitians suffer through violent coup while US sits and watches

Once again, the Haitian people find themselves at a dangerous impasse. Their lives once more threatened and their hopes crushed by money and power-hungry men armed to the teeth, but their motto has not changed, it is still "LIVE FREE OR DIE." Despite the machine guns and the tanks killing them by the hundreds, they refuse to give up. They have experienced too much on the road to establishing a democratic society. They have seen their mothers, fathers, uncles, brothers, sisters, aunts, sons, daughters and friends shot before their eyes. Still they stand.

By last Wednesday Oct. 3, over 1,000 civilians were dead. Still they stood determined to die so that Haitians can live in a free and democratic society. By Friday more than 2,000 unarmed civilians ranging from 7 to 65 years old had been counted among the dead. The numbers of those in mass graves are not yet known.

The army continues to go into neighborhoods house by house and execute people indiscriminately, sometimes plowing down the houses with their tanks regardless of who is inside.

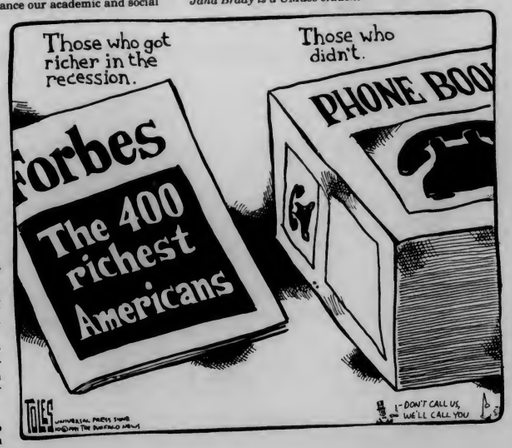
People living in this country do not really know about the atrocities going on right now in Haiti. This is not just "another coup." It is the crushing of the hope of a people and their desperate steps toward democracy.

The news networks in this country seem to be very insensitive about the death of Haitians. They are more apt to show the rundown places of Haiti's poorest than the long piles of dead Haitians throughout the city and its surroundings.

While our democratically elected president is asking for international help to stop the killing, Mr. Bush is saying to wait. For what? Our family and friends are being massacred. Mr. Bush said only if the lives of Americans living in Haiti are in danger he will intervene. For him, Haitians do not count. Where is his "New World Order" theory now that it is needed? Does it only apply to certain countries?

We (Haitians) are forced to wait. Every time the telephone rings, we expect to hear that one or all or our family members or a friend is dead. We wait in agony with our hearts in our mouths.

Moise S. Tirado
Sylvan



AP photo

U.S. UMBRELLAS OPEN — Artist Christo's umbrella crew members celebrate after they raised one of the first umbrellas on the Tajon, Calif. A total of 1,760 umbrellas will be unfurled in the area throughout the day, complementing the umbrellas opened in Japan earlier in the day.

■ Lester

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

Sixties."

The discussion began with a question regarding the nature of prayer. Dr. Lester says that he sees prayer as engaging in anything that one loves to do. "One form of prayer is teaching," he aid. He also used an analogy of people who love to drive. "When a person is one with the machine — that's prayer." In a statement that sums up his total love for what he does, he said, "I convey teaching through love."

Lester said his experience at this University, at certain points, has been filled with anguish. He said his first problems with the Afro-American studies department came in 1979, when he condemned Black leaders for what he thought was anti-semitism.

That was the year that Andrew Young, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations was forced to resign for his communication with the P.L.O. That communication that had been forbidden by the U.S. government, Lester said. Black leaders then accused the Jews of using their influence to oust Young, according to Lester.

Lester wrote a article for The Village Voice rebuking the accusations. He said he was shunned by his fellow professors in the Afro-American studies department. Out of this incident he began to offer a course entitled, "Blacks and Jews."

In his book, Lovesong, Becoming a Jew, Lester said he talked about the late Professor James Baldwin, and his comments regarding Jews in the civil rights movement.

SPECIALS THIS WEEK

Get the best of all worlds, low prices and selection, combined with a warm, personable store.

BECK'S .....$15.69* cs.	Glen-Ellen Chardonnay .750ml $3.99
FALSTAFF & FALSTAFF LIGHT ..$8.49* cs.	Canadian Mist $12.49 1.75L
BUSCH & BUSCH LIGHT ...$5.29* 12pk.	Jagermeister .375ml $7.99
COORS .....$6.49* 12pk.
SAM ADAMS Octoberfest .....$4.69* 6pk.

"A New Family Owned Business" Four Seasons WINES & LIQUORS

ROUTE, HADLEY, Between Burger King & Dunkin Donuts • 584-8174

BOLTWOOD MARKET

COME TO BOLTWOOD MARKET For all of your tailgate picnic needs!

If you don't have the time to pack your own, order a BOLTWOOD BROWN BAG ready to pick up for your picnicing pleasure!

Orders must be received by noon on Friday (10/11) for Saturday morning pick up.

Homecoming Special COKE / DIET COKE $1.89/6 PAK

253-9081

HOURS Monday - Sat. 9-7 Sunday 12-5 Thursday til 9:00pm (behind Bart's)

KATINA'S

EVERY WEDS.!

LIVE ONE LOVE BAND

SELECTROCUTION OCT 10

BACK IN BLACK AC/DC SALUTE! OCT 11

SELECTROCUTION LIKE TO HAVE FUN OCT 12

LACHRYMATOR along with MORTAL PUNISHMENT Rock LIVE!!!! HERE! OCT 13

ONE LOVE THE MACHINE WHITE TRASH 4 BAND SHOWCASE JOHN VALBY

ROUTE 9, HADLEY • 586-6463

Home of the 99¢ ~ Long ~ HOT DOG

Hamburgers Fries/Onion Rings Grinders Fish & Chips

PETE'S DRIVE-IN

11am-10pm • 7 Days Route 9, Hadley 585-0241

Amherst Sunshine CAR WASH

381 College St. (Rte. 9 East)

AUTOMATIC WASH/WAX

Open Daily 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

OUR ATTENDANT IS HAPPY TO ASSIST YOU

Self-Service Bays Open 24 hrs.

Soap/Rinse/Wax • Bubble Brush Tire Cleaner • Engine De Greaser $1.00 & $5.00 Changer

Vacuum Cleaners

All you can eat!

Café Ashley's

Famous Sunday Buffet

- Belgian Waffles
- Eggs & Omelets
- Home Style Potatos
- Bacon & Sausage
- Scalloped Apples
- Carved Ham
- Fresh Fruit
- Fruit Breads
- Croissants
- Bagels

Always $6.95

Rt. 9 Hadley • 2 Miles from UMass • 586-6393 next to Howard Johnson's Lodge

家酒園南湖 Hunan Garden Restaurant

MANDARIN/SZECHUEN CUISINE

The Best Chinese Buffet

MANDARIN/SZECHUAN CUISINE

10 Belchertown Rd. • Route 9 Amherst • 256-0251/0252

WE DELIVER IN AMHERST 5-9:30 EVERYDAY

Minimum $15 plus $2 delivery charge

NEW BUFFET & SUNDAY BRUNCH

Buffet Served Saturday 5-9p.m. Buffet served 5-8 p.m. Sun.-Thurs. Brunch served Sunday 11:30 a.m.-3 p.m.

ALL YOU CAN EAT $5.99

Women's tennis nipped by Tufts in doubles

LILLIAN K. LEGGIO
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts women's tennis team almost pulled off an upset yesterday at Upper Boyden tennis courts against Tufts University, but almost doesn't count in the standings or on the Minutewomen's record as they lost the match 5-4.

After the six single matches, UMass was tied 3-3 and going into doubles upset could be smelt in the air. But it was not to be as Tufts toughened up and rallied in doubles to win 2-1.

"We were lucky to win," said Tufts coach Jim Watson. "I was surprised how much they've improved."

In these crucial doubles matches, UMass got started on the right track as Shizuko Yamasaki and Amy Ryan came back from losing the first set to defeat Karen Kaufman and Lisa Amatangel 4-6, 7-5, 7-5.

The next doubles match saw Kris Schraffa and Alexandra Montilla beat Gail Girasella and Kerensa Eddy in straight sets 6-0, 6-4.

For the rubber match of the evening, the pressure was on sophomores Pam Levine and Stacey Scheckner to defeat the more experienced team of Amy Lederman and Lainie Heit. However, Lederman and Heit prevailed 6-4, 6-2.

"In third doubles the pressure of the match was just too much," said UMass coach Edwin Gentzler. "Hey, but it's good experience for Pam and Stacey. Next time out they'll be able to handle it better."

As for singles play, Tufts No. 1 player Schraffa defeated UMass' Yamasaki 6-3, 6-3. Tufts Kaufman put an end to a second set rally by Kerri Kaminski to win 6-2, 7-5. UMass' Girasella lost in straight sets to Montilla 6-2, 6-4.

The UMass singles wins came as UMass' Eddy rebounded from being down 5-4 in the second set to defeat Amatangel 6-4, 7-5.

Tufts' Lederman fell in straight sets to Ryan 6-4, 6-2 and UMass' Kelly Grim defeated Lauren Ratner 6-2, 6-0.

"We almost pulled it off," Gentzler said. "Tufts had a little more experience which I think was the difference in the match. Matches like this are the ones that give you that experience."

Women harriers journey to New Hampshire

By CHRIS CUDDY
Collegian Correspondent

With a slew of injuries and a pair of tough losses behind them and the Atlantic 10 Conference Championships looming ahead, the University of Massachusetts women's cross country team faces yet another tough challenge, as they travel to the University of New Hampshire for today's meet.

Besides UNH, the Minutewomen will face the University of Rhode Island, Vermont, and Springfield College, the team that handed the Minutwomen their first loss of the season.

Although revenge is on the minds of the Minutewomen, it appears unlikely they will be able to overcome the powerful squad from Springfield.

"It would be safe to say that Springfield should come away with the victory," coach Julie LaFreniere said. "Since the last time we faced them, they have returned a runner, so now instead of being very strong in the first two spots, they're strong with their front three."

Since their second week loss to Springfield, the Minutewomen's fortunes have taken a turn for the worse, however it does appear their is hope ahead.

Becky Johnson is back from an ankle injury suffered at the Dartmouth Classic, and after a week layoff, the lady harriers are "Ready to run and be very competitive," LaFreniere said "We've been training really hard during the layoff, we're starting to get some key people back and I expect a good race."

As it appears Springfield is the favorite to win, the real race will be for second place, a race that "Will be a dogfight. With the exception of Springfield, all the other teams are really evenly matched, and I don't expect anyone to walk away with it," LaFreniere said.

The big news out of the coaches office is the possibility of Kelly Liljeblad, out for the last seven weeks with fallen arches, returning to run for the Minutewomen this week.

If nothing else, Liljeblad's return should prove to be an emotional catalyst for the team, as they gear up for the Atlantic 10 Championships on October 26th.

"If Kelly does return, it would be an incredibly gutsy performance," LaFreniere said. "I really don't know how much I can expect after all that time off, but with Kelly it really wouldn't surprise me if she ended up scoring for us."

■ water polo

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 14

Princeton, Queens, Richmond (Va.), Slippery Rock (Pa.), Villanova, Washington and Lee (Va.), and Yale.

The team was dealt a blow during the week. Second-leading scorer Alex Yelensky will sit out this weekend's action with chronic shoulder problems and a hand injury.

"He doesn't play a lot of minutes," said head coach Russ Yarworth, "but what he is for us is 'The Microwave'. He gives us offense real quickly. I'm hoping Alolpho Oliete can step up and take his place. We can't ask 'T' [Tsan Engin] to play hole offense and hole defense. I think we have enough people to pick up the slack."

The team only scrimmaged last weekend, but Yarworth isn't worried about coming out flat.

"There's always a chance of being stale, a little rusty, but I anticipate a reverse effect in that these kids have not played real good polo for two weeks. They've been playing against each other, listening to me and Jon [assistant coach Miller] yell at them, and I think they're ready for some outside competition. They're going to be hungry for it."

With all 16 teams playing three games each tomorrow, coaches and players alike can't help to look down the road a game or two.

"That can be a common problem," Yarworth said, "but I think we've drummed it into the guys' heads that it's one game at a time. Witness our performance at the last [Eastern] Tournament; we lost our first two games of the day, and believe me, they've heard about it since then."

Washington and Lee, a team Yarworth says has "a pretty good tradition," is UMass' first opponent at 8:45 a.m. A win would pit UMass against the winner of the Princeton vs. Yale game, which Yarworth says should be Princeton.

"They're very big, but we might have an experience edge. We can't be over-confident." The Tigers have two ex-high school All-Americans in freshman Jim Killinger and sophomore Chad Elliot.

If UMass and Navy both win their first two games tomorrow, the Minutemen would meet the Midshipmen, ranked first in the tournament and 13th nationally, in a semi-final game tomorrow night at 7 p.m. "Navy is the class of the East," Yarworth said, "and they have the best player in the East in Louis Nicalao. He's strong, fast and sneaky. Navy plays a really good press defense."

The winner would play for the round two championship Sunday afternoon. The third and final round of the Eastern League Championship will be the weekend of November 9 and 10.

■ Midnight Madness

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 16

at 10 p.m., to be followed by the finals of the student foul shooting contest.

The UMass pep band and cheerleaders will be there to perform the season's first rendition of the "Rage in the Cage."

The game clock will be ticking down all evening until midnight (NCAA rules prohibit any basketball team from having an official practice until October 15).

About five minutes before Tuesday, the lights will go out with Chicago Bulls-style spotlights, and the red carpet will roll out as host Rich Tettemer, from channel 22, will introduce this year's Minuteman squad. (At press time, the basketball office was still searching for smoke for the players to walk out through).

A slam dunk contest will begin the madness at midnight (Rumor has it freshman Louis Roe could pose a challenge to defending champion William Herndon).

"He jumps, but I don't know if he can dunk," said assistant coach James Flint.

"The fans will decide, they will be the the applause meter," Calipari said.

After the slams, the newcomers, a recruiting class that has been touted as one of the nation's best, will challenge the upperclassmen in a full court scrimmage.

HOMECOMING WEEKEND

20th ANNUAL BLOODY MARY BREAKFAST

14 oz. Bloody Mary - 2 eggs, ham, bacon or sausage, homefries, toast, coffee 4.25

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 12th 10:00 AM - 1:00 PM

AFTER THE GAME -JOIN US-

Food Served until 9:30 PM

DANCING TIL 1:00AM

THE 23 PUB CELEBRATES 23 YEARS 1968 • 1991 IN AMHERST

• IS EAST PLEASANT STREET •

WELCOME BACK ALUMNI!
GOOD LUCK U-MASS – BEAT U.R.I.

Do your one stop shopping at

WATROBA'S

GREAT PRICES ON LIQUOR & GROCERIES

Conveniently located in No. Amherst just past the lights!

SUNDERLAND RD., NO. AMHERST, MA 549-0933

35% OFF ALL HALLOWEEN GOODIES!

Ghostly, Ghoulish, Funny & Freaky!

...THURSDAY NIGHTS & SUN. A.M.

MC/Visa Amex

Compliments

71 N. Pleasant St. (Above Cafe DiCarlo) Amherst/256-1551 • Mon.-Sat. 10-5:30

Arts & Living

Williams and Bridges make The Fisher King great

By JON LUPO
Collegian Correspondent

The Fisher King is a wonderful, weird, and stunning film; worthy of Academy consideration and a healthy box-office. It is a refreshing change of pace, a virtual standout: electrifying performances coupled with an interesting and fresh pace. It is only in the last half hour that The Fisher King abruptly halts its unconventional style and opts for cliched plot twists.

The Fisher King opens with Jeff Bridges (Jagged Edge) as a hotshot radio personality whose offhand comments to an unbalanced listener sparks a tragedy. The movie flashes forward to three years later where Bridges is off the fast track and working in a video store. He lives above the store with his girlfriend, played brilliantly by Mercedes Rheul (Married to the Mob).

When thugs thwart Bridges' suicide attempt in order to beat him up, he is rescued by a homeless man named Perry (Robin Williams), who, with his band of friends, turn the tables on the thugs and bring Bridges to Perry's "place". Perry believes he's a knight on a quest for the Holy Grail, and furthermore, that the Grail is on the bookshelf of a billionaire in New York City.

Perry is also in love with a mousey-looking researcher named Lydia, played by Amanda Plummer (TV's "LA Law"). Bridges tries to rebuild his life by uniting the pair and holding on to Rheul.

The strengths in The Fisher King lie in the thrilling, bold performances and entertaining style. Jeff Bridges, doing his best work ever, is great as the cynical D.J. who is on a quest for himself. He is a perfect match for the fantastic Robin Williams. Williams deserves another Oscar nomination for his role as Perry, carefully balancing his outrageous exterior and the tortured soul within him. He is also a capable leading man. In his scenes with Amanda Plummer, there is such honest innocence in every word and every motion.

Scene-stealer Mercedes Rheul is brilliant as Bridges' girlfriend. Another honest and convincing performance by a stellar actress. Amamnda Plummer is sympathetic as the clumsy object of Perry's affections. Rounding out the cast is Michael Jeter (TV's Evening Shade) as a transvestite songstress providing a bulk of the laughs.

The vigorous and larger-than-life style can be credited to semi-cult director Terry Gilliam. As he showed in both Brazil and The Adventures of Baron Munchausen, he can balance strange characters with realistic situations and vice-versa. The lighting is dramatic and the shots are absorbing.

The fault lies with the script. Up until the last half hour, The Fisher King breezes along, lost in its own vibrant world, and then it all comes crashing down into convention. A cliche-ridden slew of plot contrivances disrupts the entire film, throwing it off. Without spoiling the plot, it cheats the audience by opting for cheap melodrama.

The point is: it didn't need to. Thankfully, The Fisher King redeems itself in time for a clever ending true to the whole movie.

Go see The Fisher King if you haven't yet. You'll enjoy the energetic style, on target characterizations, and overall tone. It's better than New York in June . . . (you'll get it after you see the movie!) Grade: A-

Photo Courtesy TriStar Pictures

Perry (Robin Williams), a street person who lives in a remarkable world of his own creation, and down-and-out former D.J. Jack Lucas (Jeff Bridges) in The Fisher King.

Photo Courtesy TriStar Pictures

Robin Williams and Amanda Plummer (Lydia) on a date masterminded by Bridges and Mercedes Ruhel (Anne).

OTHER RECENT RELEASES:

Deceived:

I really wanted to like this movie, trust me. Alas, Deceived is only a passable thriller with creaky plot twists and uneven performances.

Goldie Hawn, looking very good at forty-five, stars as Adrienne Sanders, an art conservator who meets and marries a man named Jack Sanders (John Heard), a museum buyer. Everything is going great until a colleague of Jack's is murdered and a fake necklace that Jack bought is discovered at the museum. He soon takes a mysterious business trip to Boston. Adrienne finds out from two different sources that Jack may never have gone to Boston. But Jack gives Adrienne perfectly reasonable theories about her "evidence" and leaves in a huff. The car that Jack was driving runs off the road and Jack is killed. Or is he?

Adrienne then starts playing Nancy Drew, discovering her husband was not who he claimed to be. But as soon as you can say plot contrivance, Jack turns up very much alive and wanting the real necklace he mistakenly left with Adrienne.

There is nothing wrong with the cat-and-mouse idea, but in Deceived, it is the shoddy way it's carried out that eventually sinks the movie into unintentional comedy. Goldie Hawn spends countless minutes walking down creepy corridors with plenty of murky lighting and scary music.

More often than not, the punch of these scenes is the token cat screeching or the shutter slamming against the window. Therefore, during the final confrontation, you keep wondering if it's Jack chasing Adrienne or the cat chasing Adrienne.

Director Damian Harris (The Rachel Papers) constructs some pretty nice shots and interesting angles, but it's all show if you don't have a solid plot behind it. As a mystery, the movie also fails as it is never given enough screen time to warrant any interest — instead opting for cheap jolts. There are potholes as well, including Jack's "death" and how the whole movie hinges on coincidences.

Godie Hawn plays Adrienne as if she was in a constant state of cluelessness for the first hour; then she becomes Type-A slasher-movie victim. Deceived is one of those movies where you find yourself yelling at the screen "Don't go in there! Don't open the door!" And when she does, you seem to be muttering "She deserves whatever she gets".

John Heard, the father from Home Alone, is not the typical psycopathic father figure. Wait until you find out why he did it all, it's a laugh. It's really not his fault, though,

CONTINUED ON PAGE 12

Smith Hadley's TOWER THEATRES
THE VILLAGE COMMONS • SOUTH HADLEY 533-2663

RICOCHET
Weekdays at 3:00,7:10 & 9:15
Fri.,Sat. & Sun. at 3:00,5:05,7:00 & 9:15

Weekdays at 3:00,7:00 & 9:15
Fri.,Sat. & Sun. at 2:45,5:00,7:10 & 9:25

THE ROCKY HORROR PICTURE SHOW
Midnight Fridays

ACADEMY OF MUSIC NORTHAMPTON Opera House 584-8435
BY PUBLIC DEMAND! THIRD WEEK! ENDS OCT. 17
Curtain daily at 7:00 & 9:00
Having a ball...wish you were here!
A series of astonishments of ever-widening wit, humanity and relevance."
- David Denby, New York Magazine
"OUTRAGEOUS!
One of the best films I've seen this year!"
"AMAZING...
Beautiful, lively and intelligent!"
"★★★★!"
PARIS is burning
A documentary about VOGUING which studies the manner in which gays display costumes and styles at Manhattan balls. THE MESSAGE OF THIS FILM? "It's about the dignity of the human spirit, how people who are not treated well can rise above that with creativity and wit and intelligence and energy." "It's also about how some people do not have the same economic opportunities because of their race, sexual orientation and because of the class they come from."
Quotes - JENNIE LIVINGSTON - Producer/Director
AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE

LONDON
ROUND TRIP FROM $350
From NEW YORK
round trips starting at
LONDON $350
LENINGRAD $610
CARACAS $410
GUTEMALA C. $390
BANGKOK $939
LOS ANGELES-AUCKLAND $699
Taxes & surcharges not included. Fares subject to change.
Council Travel
79 So. Pleasent Street, Amherst, MA 01002
(413)256-1261

Some of the biggest, some of the best presents come in the smallest boxes!

COLLEGE NIGHT
NY COMEDY SHOP
BILL WINN Oct.11&12

Gilbert Gottfried Oct.2

New releases from Delmark bring old jazz to life

By JAMES MOLESWORTH
Collegian Staff

Well I've finally gotten myself organized enough to start writing this column. Basically, this column's purpose is to provide you with information, reviews, criticism, previews, record releases and the such for the music which is commonly referred to as "jazz". The term itself has a clouded history, as it has derived from the racially motivated term "jass", which was used to describe the activity that occurred in the bordellos of New Orleans in the late nineteenth century. I'll talk more about the history of the music at a later point, but right now the issue at hand is the latest release from Delmark records, a medium sized label specializing in jazz and blues and based in Chicago.

Delmark was one of the very few U.S. labels to make a committment to record the music being played by the "avant-garde" (another term for later debate) musicians of the late 1950s and 60s. Delmark's major contribution was to sign the Art Ensemble of Chicago, as well as a number of musicians who were associated with the AACM, or Association for the Advancement of Creative Musicians. The driving force of the AACM was Muhal Richard Abrams, who talents include piano, cello and alto-clarinet. Along with reed player Anthony Braxton, percussionist Thurman Barker (who was part of last year's Magic Triangle series), trumpeter Lester Bowie, and percussionist Don Moye, Abrams and others were able to create one of the most synergistic musical forces of the last thirty years. This creative group recorded numerous albums, and now Delmark has reissued on compact disc some of their most important.

JAZZ SCENE

Muhal Richard Abrams' Levels & Degrees of Light (DD-413) was one of the albums that either cemented the AACM and Art Ensemble's work as a driving force, or spelled it's end, however you look at it. To call the music revolutionary is to call the French Revolution a minor blood-letting. The album, as one would guess, met with major resistance, and was generally dismissed out of hand by many 'critics'. Slowly but surely however, people are starting to change their minds.

Along with Anthony Braxton's 3 Compositions of New Jazz (DD-415), Joseph Jarman's Song For (DD-410), and the Art Ensembles of Chicago's Live (DE-432), these four albums represent not only the cutting edge of African-American improvised music of the sixties, but also still remain on the edge today. They combine vocals, spoken word and poetry with music that is at times, admittedly, hard to listen to. It is dense and complex. Yet when one begins to peel away the various layers, focusing in on individual aspects of the collective improvisations that are occurring, one begins to feel the force and tremendous scope of the music.

Today, the Art Ensemble is still alive and well, though not as abstract as thirty years ago. The AACM is also still working organization together, with several of its original members recently performing in New York (such as Abrams, Barker et. al.). These recordings are of equal historical importance as Louis Armstrong's West End Blues, or Miles Davis' Kind Of Blue album, and should be treated as such. They have remained obscure because of a music industry obsessed with "image" and "marketability", but now that Delmark has made a move, maybe there is a sign of hope that more of these recordings will soon be reissued (as many more exist on other labels).

Exhibit documents impact of war on surivivors

By OLIVIA STEWART-LIBERTY
Collegian Correspondent

Distant Relations: Cambodians Inside and Outside the Homeland
Augusta Savage Gallery

"You must not forget
Remember always
Don't let what has happened
Just pass unnoticed"

Local photographer Leah Melnick's exhibit goes some way to answering the raw plea for acknowledgement in these lines, translated from the native Khmer of a Cambodian poet's writings. Melnick is perhaps stepping where the press fears to tread. Cambodia is a country rarely mentioned, the reason for this silence is perhaps evident from the exhibit which has just opened in the Augusta Savage gallery in the New Africa House.

Black and white faces hang alongside stark lines of contemporary Cambodian poetry, between bare historical facts; the result is a glaring accusation:

"For the past two decades Cambodia has suffered massive U.S. bombing [twice the tonnage dropped on Germany during W.W.II], genocide, civil war, foreign occupation and International isolation." The war continues, the results shown in the exhibit are shocking.

Historical fact comes alive beside the contemporary voice of native poets, and most important, the contemporary vision of an outsider.

The photographs are divided into three divisions as Cambodia itself is: those inside the motherland; those who have been displaced and are now occupying 'temporary' Thai border camps, and those who immigrated to the U.S.

A particularly powerful image, which sticks in mind is the black and white print of a tiny child crouching, examining something in her hands, while behind her looms a vast pyramid of skulls, bordered by thousands of rows of bones; it represents a shrine to a few of those million killed in the bloody Khmer Rouge regime. The photograph is accompanied by a few lines of verse,

"Our people are scattered everywhere
Our leaders destroyed the country."

The whole image sums up the contrasts inside Cambodia today: that of the toll taken on the spirits of people after over two decades of continual warfare; the uncertainties, the bitterness, as set against the new life, the optimistic atmosphere of reconstruction, the hopes for peace next year.

The artist acknowledges that perhaps not all of the U.S. government would be as enthusiastic about the exhibit as those at the opening reception were; also, perhaps not as shocked.

Distant Relations: Cambodians Inside and Outside the Homeland, will be on exhibit through October 27 in the Augusta Savage Gallery in The New Africa House. Gallery hours are 1 p.m. to 7 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. on Friday.

DISCOVER COLUMBUS DAY VALUES AT HAMPSHIRE MALL

J.C. Penney	Extra Values in Every Department Look for our 2-Day Sale Circular
Electronics Boutique	New! Lotus 1-2-3- and Microsoft MS DOS are here
Musicland	Now Available! All On Sale! Guns n' Roses • Motley Crue • Prince • Public Enemy
Waldenbooks	Stephen King's "Needful Things" 25% Off
Chess King	SKIDZ 50% off • Sweaters 2 for $38.00 Twill Pants & Select Jeans $19.99
Designs Exclusively
Levi Straus	25% off Womens Dockers •Docker coupon sale thru the 14th
Deb	20% Off Coats and Handbags (regular priced merchandise)
Hit or Miss	Wool Blazers $44.99-$59.99 Turtlenecks 2 for $17.00 Huge Accessory Markdown
Ups N' Downs	Take an Additional 70% Off Clearance Items excluding reg. priced merchandise
So-Fro	Customer Appreciation Day: 40% Off Fabric, Notions
J.T. Rapps	UMass Football sweatshirts are here!
Foot Locker	Clearance Sale. Select Nylon Jackets and Pants. Mens, Womens, and Kids Sneakers - All On Sale!

Columbus Day Hours: Noon to 9:00 p.m.

Hampshire Mall

South Maple street, Route 9, Hadley, MA Open daily 10-9, Sunday 12-5 movies

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 10

with the lines he has to cackle (yes, cackle), Laurence Olivier would look kind of goofy.

Deceived is a movie strictly for Goldie Hawn devotees (is there such a group?) and die-hard suspense fans that can take enormous leaps of faith again and again. If you go not expecting Hitchcock or high art, you won't be disappointed. If you're in the mood for an intelligent and real thriller, skip Deceived and go see Dead Again

Grade: C-

Ricochet:

Denzel Washington and John Lithgow star in this ultraviolent, scary action/thriller. Lithgow is a sadistic hit-man who breaks out of a prison to gain vengeance against successful Assistant D.A. Washington, the man who arrested him four years ago.

Instead of Lithgow just blowing him away, he chooses to methodically destroy Washington's job, reputation, home-life and sanity. There's plenty of action — Ricochet well earns its "R" rating.

Look for Ice-T and Lindsay Wagner in supporting roles.

Grade: B+

AMHERST CINEMA
Now Playing
LATE FOR DINNER
Showtimes:
Fri. - Sun.
7pm & 9pm
Mon-Thurs
One show at 7:30pm
Adults $4.00
Student w/valid I.D. $3.00

Daisy's
Welcome Back Alumni!
Enjoy
BREAKFAST • OR • LUNCH
ON OUR PORCH
We're looking forward to seeing you soon to enjoy our homemade breads and pastries, great omelettes, burgers, salads and daily specials.
LOCATED BY TOWNHOUSE AT THE LIGHTS IN NO. AMHERST
Open Mon.-Fri. 8am-2pm • Sat., Sun. 8am-3pm

SPECIAL EVENT
CODE WEST
Friday, October 11
10 a.m.-6 p.m.
Choose from: • Dozens of styles & colors in high & low Western boots • Ed Romano, Code West area Rep, will be taking special orders on unusual & exotic styles on Friday • FREE T-shirts with every Code West purchase on Friday.
ZANNA
Women's Shoes, Clothing & Accessories
Zanna • North Pleasant Street • Amherst
413.253.3563

amc THEATRES
$3.50 TWILITE SHOW
NT FARMS 584-9151
THE FISHER KING
Fri at 4:30,7:30,10:30
Sat & Sun at 1:00,4:00,7:00,10:00
Mon at 1:00,5:45,8:30
Tues-Thurs at 5:45,8:30
DEAD AGAIN
Fri at 4:15,7:15,10:15
Sat & Sun at 1:15,4:15,7:15,10:15
Mon at 1:15,6:00,8:45
Tues-Thurs at 6:00,8:45
PARADISE
TOUCHING.
Fri at 4:30,7:30,10:15
Sat & Sun at 1:15,3:30,7:30,10:15
Mon at 1:15,6:00,8:45
Tues-Thurs at 6:00,8:45
Frankie & Johnny
Fri at 4:15,7:15,10:00
Sat & Sun at 1:00,4:15,7:15,10:00
Mon at 1:00,5:45,7:15,10:00
Tues-Thurs at 5:45,8:30
HAMPSHIRE 6 584-7550
NECESSARY ROUGHNESS
Fri at 4:40,7:10,9:40
Sat & Sun at 1:40,4:40,7:10,9:40
Mon at 1:40,5:40,8:10
Tues-Thurs at 5:40,8:10
DECEIVED
Fri at 4:50,7:10,9:50
Sat & Sun at 1:40,4:40,7:10,9:50
Mon at 1:40,5:40,8:20
Tues-Thurs at 5:40,8:10
SHOUT
Fri at 7:30
Sat & Sun at 2:00,7:30
Mon at 2:00,6:00
Tues-Thurs at 6:00
The Super
Joe Pesci
Fri at 9:00,7:30,10:00
Sat & Sun at 2:00,5:00,7:30,10:00
Mon at 2:00,6:00,8:30
Tues-Thurs at 5:50,8:30
Ernest
SCARED STUPID
Fri at 4:50,7:20,10:00
Sat & Sun at 1:50,4:50,7:20,10:00
Mon at 1:50,5:50,8:30
Tues-Thurs at 5:50,8:30
ROCKET
DENZEL WASHINGTON
Fri-Sun 4:40,9:40
Mon-Thurs at 8:10
SHATTERED
Fri at 4:50,7:20,9:50
Sat & Sun at 1:50,4:50,7:20,9:50
Mon at 1:50,5:50,8:30
Tues-Thurs at 5:50,8:30

Halloween Headquarters
GREASE PAINTS • HANDS • FEET • WITCHES' HATS & BROOMS • WIGS • MOUSTACHES • BEARDS • NOSES • FANGS • TEETH • TOOTH BLACK-OUT
NORTHAMPTON HALLOWEEN CENTER
25 State Street • 584-5006
10 Minutes From UMass
LARGE ASSORTMENT OF MASKS TO CHOOSE FROM
Call for extended Haloween hours H.L. CHILDS & SON
Open Daily and Saturday 9:00am-5:15pm, Thursdays 'til 8:00pm
Check Our LOW Prices

Clip & Curl
Hours: Tues. - Fri. 9:AM - 8:PM
Sat. 9:AM - 4:PM
Good Hair cuts for only $11.50 and we use Paul Mitchell products
"GOOD LUCK U-MASS"
Next to 7-11, Route 116 • Sunderland, MA
Tel. 665-2629

PINOCCHIO'S
RISTORANTE ITALIONO
of Amherst
Come and enjoy some favorite specialties:
• Veal
• Beef
• Chicken
• Seafood
• Homemade Pasta
"TO WARM YOUR SOUL and FEED YOUR PASSION"
Open 7 Days - Dinner 5-10
VISA/MC
Gift Certificates Available
1177 N. Pleasant St., Amherst
549-3669

LIVE IN SPRINGFIELD
PARAMOUNT
1700 MAIN STREET, SPRINGFIELD, MA.
THE SMASH HIT MUSICAL
DREAMGIRLS
OCTOBER 11-12-13th
.38 SPECIAL
WITH HENRY LEE SUMMER
SUNDAY
OCTOBER 27TH
PATTI LaBELLE
TUESDAY
OCTOBER 29TH
GEORGE CARLIN
SATURDAY
NOVEMBER 2ND
VINCE GILL
WITH PAM TILLIS
SUNDAY
NOVEMBER 10TH
TICKETS ON SALE PARAMOUNT BOX OFFICE (413) 734-5874; TICKETPRO PHONE CHARGE 1-800-828-7080; NORTHAMPTON TICKET OFFICE (413) 586-8686; RECORD EXPRESS; STRAWBERRIES

THE FAR SIDE
By GARY LARSON

"My marriage is in trouble, Barbara. You ever tried communicating with a hammerhead?"

DOONESBURY
By GARRY TRUDEAU

WELL, THANKS FOR AN OKAY TIME, B.D...
NO PROBLEM. "BOY, IT'S LATE. MIND IF I USE YOUR COUCH?"
THAT'S SO LAME, B.D.! YOU REALLY THINK I'D FALL FOR THAT OLD ROUTINE?
YOU DID ON OUR FIRST DATE— YEARS AGO.
I DIDN'T DON'T RE-MEMBER THAT. WORD OF HONOR?
WORD OF HONOR.
WELL, I GUESS IT'D BE OKAY, THEN...
"IF YOU LET ME SHARE YOUR BED, I PROMISE I WON'T TOUCH YOU."

CALVIN AND HOBBES
By BILL WATTERSON

ARE THE COALS HOT?
YES, THEY'RE VERY HOT I'M JUST ABOUT TO PUT ON THE HAMBURGERS.
BEFORE YOU DO, COULD YOU TOSS IN THE CAN OF LIGHTER FLUID AND MAKE A GIANT FIREBALL?
I'VE GOT THE MOST BORING DAD IN THE WORLD

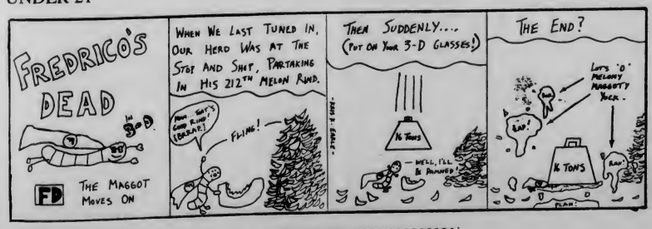
TANGELO PIE
By TIM SNIFFEN

WELL, I'M OUTTA HERE, MARCUS.
Why?
THINGS ARE NO DIFFERENT HERE. MANIPULATIVE JOKES ARE TRADED FOR POINTLESS INSANITY. SAME @#!%, DIFFERENT TOILET. LATER.
My, how depressing. Makes me sorta want to hang out with someone more shallow and superficial.
Bingo.
—LIVING HE... Oh, Hi! Wanna go play video games?

CAST OF THOUSANDS
By BARRY DEUTSCH

Who are YOU?
I'M ZACK.
HE CAN'T SEE ME, GABE.
TOO MANY HOME CROOKING?
Wha- What do you want?
TAP YOUR RUBY HEELS TOGETHER... YOU'RE GOING HOME.
LET'S GRAB SOME DINNER
DO YOU SEE MY SHOES ANYWHERE?
No! Not back to that—
SORRY, GABE, YOU WERE MESSING UP MY NICE CLEAN CONTINUITY.
PING!
AHA!
C'MON, GUY, STUDENT DINING ISN'T THAT BAD
GOD, HOW I LOVE BEING GOD!

UNDER 21
By KRIS K. EARLE



FREDRICO'S DEAD
FD
THE MAGGOT MOVES ON
WHEN WE LAST TUNED IN, OUR HERO WAS AT THE STOP AND SHOP, PARTAKING IN HIS 212TH MELON RIND.
FLING!
THEN SUDDENLY.... (PUT ON YOUR 3-D GLASSES!)
IT THUDS
— WELL, I'LL BE DAMNED!
THE END?
LET'S 'O' MELONY MAGGOTY YUCK.
KA-THUNK!
IT TOMS
SLAM!

Quote of the Day

"Nyuk, nyuk, nyuk."

--Curly

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
By TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

ACROSS
1 One of a Chekhov trio
5 Come in third
9 Rhine tributary
12 Tabby sounds
14 Lion of Oz
15 Show approval
17 Flavor, in France
18 Jai —
19 Jessica's husband
20 Dancer's practice garb
22 Austen novel
23 Baseball stats.
24 Pac. opposite
26 Bottom line
27 Concurred
30 Franz of operetta fame
32 Desist
33 Expunge
36 Camper's quarters
37 Gold-fineness measure
38 Detectives pooch
42 Came down
44 Rimmed
45 Jacques, e.g.
47 Endured
48 Choler
49 Word before rally
51 Kind
52 Assess
54 Richard Carey specialty
59 Kind of rain
60 Needle case
61 Desires
62 Delhi dress
63 Word on a marquee
64 Small bits
65 Saloon service
66 Accomplishes
67 Slalom obstacle

DOWN
1 October birthstone
2 Angler's tool
3 Hot buttered rum, e.g.
4 Engage in a contest of strength
5 Bridge bids
6 Hearty partner
7 "Butterfield 8" author
8 Cold-weather accessory
9 Yearn
10 Smith graduate
11 Kind of batter
13 "South Pacific" chorus member
15 Fuel from a bog
21 Disencumber
25 Permit
27 Tread the boards
28 Whiz preceder
29 Japanese epic
31 Willful
33 Family member, for short
34 Before, poetically
35 "When I was a —..."
37 Ballerina's plie
39 NCO
40 Course necessity
41 Do arithmetic
43 Hans of Dada
44 Loams and marls
45 Noisy brawl
46 Head for beu
47 — Altos
48 Role in "Anthony and Cleopatra"
50 Place for a barbecue
51 To the —: extravagantly
53 Ply a blue pencil
55 Adorable
56 Comb. form used by ophthalmologists
57 Retained
58 To be, in old Rome

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

C	H	I	C		A	L	P	H	A		P	A	A	R
S	A	G	A		T	O	R	O			R	E	E	D
A	S	O	R		S	E	E	P	S		E	R	I	A
	P	R	E	D	E	S	T	I	N	A	T	I	O	N
			E	R	A		E	G	E	S
M	E	D	A			N	E	R	R
A	I	M	M	E	D	D	L	E		I	V	A	N
P	R	E	P	A	R	E		A	N	A	T	A	S	E
S	E			M		S	A	N	I	T	A	R	I	A
			E	N	T	E	R		S	A	L	A	D
A	S	S	E		T	R	I	A	L
P	R	E	S	E	N	C	E	O	F	M	I	N	D
I	D	A		C	A	R	I	A		M	E	D	O	M
O	M	E	R		O	R	I	O	N		E	A	S	E
T	A	R	I	S		S	T	O	R	Y		S	T	E

Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Chicken Burrito	Spaghetti and Sausage
Seafood Salad Sandwich	Cajun Style Scrod
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Chicken Burrito	Hi-Pro Spaghetti
Falafel Pocket Sandwich	Cheese Nut Loaf

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A family matter requires your personal attention. Be careful not to delegate tasks you should handle personally. A compromise helps resolve a financial problem.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The more variety in your life, the happier you feel. Your intelligence puts you ahead of the crowd! Children affect your spending decisions. Romance is in bloom.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Show your appreciation for a friend who came to your rescue in an emergency. A sentimental gift means a lot. Give a child a chance to make more decisions independently.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your charm attracts a new admirer of the opposite sex. Intellectual pursuits make you feel good about yourself. Give your offspring more room to breathe.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Set a good example for those around you. Children need to learn the value of self-discipline. Encourage them to set their own goals and rewards. Curb your impatience.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You feel pulled in two directions now. Making a choice will not be easy. If you do not reach a decision, however, someone else will. Your energy returns following a rest or vacation.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Acting superior is a defense mechanism you often employ. Better find a new approach before you hurt a loved one. Let your true feelings show. A young person will follow your lead.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): New developments could open the door to a wonderful financial opportunity. Make the most of it! Get in touch with a former love; the flame has not gone out. Plan a reunion.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Get ready for big changes! Better days lie ahead. Reach out and grab the brass ring at work. A personal relationship improves with time. Enjoy your new found happiness. Love surrounds you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Although you feel better after letting off steam, you would be wise not to indulge yourself too often. A financial matter can be settled in your favor if you present a specific plan.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): An open-minded attitude will help you develop more harmonious relations with a family member. Stifle any critical comments. A tax matter should be resolved as quickly as possible.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): An emotional response is right on the button. Trust your intuition and do what needs to be done. A phone call sends your spirits soaring. Romance looks more rewarding than in the past.

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Marc Elliott
Copy Editor.....Beth Butts
PhotoTechnician.....Matt Kahn
Production Supervisor.....Seth Kaye
Production.....Terry Starmer, Mike Carvalho

Field hockey to face big test this weekend

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts field hockey team will try to break out of their recent offensive woes this weekend as they travel to University Park, Pa. to face St. Joseph's University and Penn State on Saturday and Sunday, respectively.

While the match against St. Joseph's is an Atlantic-10 conference game, Sunday's meeting with Penn State is even more important. Penn State is ranked number two in the country, and while UMass is down at number five, a convincing win could give them a boost in the rankings.

The Minutewomen (9-2) are in an offensive slump of late, although they somewhat broke out of it on Wednesday. The team beat Springfield College 2-1 in double overtime. While the goals erased a two-game scoreless streak, the fact that UMass squeaked out a win against an unranked team isn't all that impressive.

"We spent 90 percent of the game attacking, we let down in the last minute [of regulation] and they scored," coach Pam Hixon said. "That's inexcusable . . . we should be icing the ball in the last minute."

The Minutewomen were helped by a goal by Tara Jelley in regulation, but Springfield and UMass were tied at one after 70 minutes. The first overtime was scoreless, so the teams played a sudden death, second overtime.

With two minutes left in double overtime, Kathy Phelan passed to Dawn Trumbauer off a penalty corner for the game-winning goal.

Hixon was hopeful that the team's penalty corner is improving, judging from the Springfield game.

"We executed against Springfield," Hixon said. "We got our corner shots off, but their goalie made some great saves. I hope it's improving."

UMass can expect a tough game from both competitors this weekend, although this is largely a rebuilding year for St. Joseph's.

St. Joseph's (5-4-2) is a young team, with coach Michelle Finegan in her second year at the helm. Sara Turnbull, Shannon Carroll and Danya Van Blunk are the lone seniors, and they have been responsible for much of the team's success. Turnbull is one of the top defensive players in the Atlantic-10.

Carroll is second on the team in points with six, and goalie Van Blunk has been the anchor of the defense. She has a 0.94 goals against average, and has played all 670 minutes this season.

While St. Joseph's is characterized by its youth, Penn State can be described as dominating. The team is 10-1 this year and its sole loss was a 5-2 setback at the hands of Old Dominion, the top team in the country. The Penn State squad is loaded on both offense and defense.

Senior forward Elanor Stone leads the team with 19 points, 15 goals and four assists. Christine McGinley has notched 16 goals this year. The assists have come mainly from two players, juniors Jen Stewert and Amy Stairs. They have amassed 15 and 12 goals, respectively.

Michelle Brennan will start in goal for the Nittany Lions, and she has proven to be a strong goaltender. The senior has a .847 save percentage, and a 0.82 GAA.

Penn State provides a good yardstick for the team. UMass will be playing one of the hottest teams in the country on the road, and they will need offensive production if they want to win. All teams go through slumps during a long season, and the mettle of the Minutewomen team will be tested this weekend.

Water polo at Brown

By KEVIN HERLIHY
Collegian Staff

After a two week layoff, the University of Massachusetts water polo team, ranked 15th in the nation, heads to Providence, R.I. this weekend as Brown University hosts the second round of the Eastern League Tournament. The first round, held at the Naval Academy three weeks ago, saw the Minutemen finish fifth in a field of 16.

This tournament is a monster, showcasing the top 16 teams in the East; UMass, Army, Boston College, Brown, Bucknell, Harvard, Iona, M.I.T., Navy,

CONTINUED ON PAGE 9

Women's soccer travels to Hartford for key matchup

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

This Sunday the University of Massachusetts women's soccer team will try to extend it's six game winning streak as they travel to the University of Hartford.

The task won't be an easy one for the Minutewomen. Hartford is 7-4 on the season and are currently ranked No. 12 in the nation, No. 3 in the North. All four Hawk loses have come against teams ranked eleventh or better in the country.

"This is a big game, a lot of people will be looking at this one," UMass coach Jim Rudy said. "It will go far in deciding who qualifies for the post-season."

The NCAA tournament's automatic bids are given out to the top two teams in each regional area of the country; the North, South, Mid-West and West. There are also four wildcard bids given out.

Right now the race for the two automatic bids in the North comes down to a three team race between the University of Connecticut (9-1), ranked No. 2 in the nation and first in the North, Massachusetts (8-1) second in the North and No. 7 nationally and Hartford. Thus this weekend's matchup has postseason importance. UMass hosts UConn on October 21st.

Hartford is led by a trio of offensive-minded players that University of Wisconsin coach Greg Ryan nicknamed "the Bermuda triangle". The threesome consists of Kim Lemere (eight goals, seven assists and 23 points), Rose Daley (eight, four, 20) and Michelle Thornsbury (four, two, 10).

"They are a scary team with a lot of potent weapons," Rudy said. "Those three are very attack oriented, they are basically the team. Lemere has had 26 goals over the past two seasons, so obviously the girl can play a little. She is a front runner and true finisher. Daley is quick up front with break away speed. She has a good counter attack and if you play her too tight she will break one on you.

"Michelle Thornsbury is probably their best overall player. She is very creative and she can shoot from far out, dribble and take it on you. Thornsbury is a dangerous player."

Massachusetts will counter the threesome by playing a man to man defense relying on Holly Helmuth, Amy Mickelson, Carrie Koeper and Paula Wilkens. The defense, playing in front of Briana Scurry (7-1, 0.21 goals against average) has recorded six straight shutouts, four against ranked teams.

Last season UMass and Hartford tied 1-1, on a late goal by Hartford during a downpour.

UMass has the advantage in games against common opponents. UMass defeated Central Florida 2-0 while Hartford lost 4-0. The Minutewomen also beat California 3-1 and Hartford lost 1-0. Both teams lost to Wisconsin 1-0.

"We are going to have to play a strong defensive game," Rudy said. "We'll have to intercept their passes and not let them turn on the net and get loose. Stopping Thornsbury will be the key as will getting one past [Karen] Romero."

Romero was an All-American last year and comes into the game with a 0.73 GAA. Romero, who Rudy describes as a goalie who "loves to fly," has recorded six shutouts on the year.

"If we play a solid game then we have a shot," Rudy said. "We can't let their threesome get free and beat us. Hopefully we can do that and pop one in the net."

CAFE DICARLO

The Ultimate in Casual Italian Dining

Roasted Garlic is only the beginning. . .

open daily at 11:30

71 N. Pleasant St.
Amherst, MA
253-9300

10 PIECE BUCKET
$6.99 Plus Tax
10 Pieces of Chicken
with coupon only
Combination White & Dark meat only.
Offer good at Rt. 9, Hadley, MA
KFC Restaurants
Good 11/30/91
KFC

30 HOT WINGS BUCKET
$8.99 Plus Tax
30 Hot Wing™ Brand Chicken
with coupon only
Offer good at Rt. 9, Hadley, MA
KFC Restaurants
Good 11/30/91
KFC

NO PENALTY FOR CLIPPING

Rent One of Ours
Columbus Weekend Special
Rates start as low as
$65.95
Holiday weekend rate applies noon Friday to Tuesday morning
Must be 21 years of age or older with major credit card.
North Amherst Motors Auto & Truck Rental
79 Old Sunderland Rd., North Amherst, MA
549-RENT (549-7368)
Trucks and cargo vans also available
Don't be disappointed - reserve TODAY!
On Bus Route

Cooking at your table
SPECIAL
Tues.-Wed.-Thurs.-Fri. & all day Sunday
Two Dinners for $15
Steak& Chicken Combo
Two Dinners for $18.00
Shrimp & Scallop Combo
Both include soup, salad, vegetables, noodles, steamed rice, tea, & ice cream
Full Bar • Exotic Specialties
Gift Certificates Available
Goten OF JAPAN
Rt. 116, Sunderland 413-665-3628
Open Tues.-Sat. at 5pm, Sun at 2
Reservations welcomed

After an 8-4 week, Roy hopes to stay red hot

The Kansas City Chiefs picked a good time to wake-up from their season long offensive nap. Monday night, Christain Okoye and the Chiefs ran all over the run-soft Buffalo Bills. After averaging only 13 points a game all year they broke out with an astonishing 33 points against a Bills defense that is living off of last year's reputation of tenacity.

The Bills were dominated on both sides of the line of scrimmage as Jim Kelly fumbled three times and was held to a season low six points. Chief linebacker Derrick Thomas pressured Kelly all day and seemed to be everywhere.

While I don't mean to bash the officials all year long, I can't help but mention how they have deteriorated to a disgusting display of unprofessionalism. Monday night pushed me over the edge and I feel like someone has to say something.

While watching games on television every week I often make remarks on what I feel is poor officiating. I don't know how many times I've claimed to have seen the worst call of my life, but I'm sure it's at least twice a game. But this time there is just no denying it.

Here's the situation: The Bills had first-and-10 on their own 34-yard line. Kelly threw a pass to James Lofton at the 40-yard line. The ball was clearly trapped by Lofton yet the referees insisted on reviewing the play, how unusual. After they decided that the ball had hit the ground, the Bills were supposed to have a second-and-10 back at the 34-yard line. Instead the refs gave them the ball at their 29 and called it second-and-15.

Bills coach Marv Levy went nuts on the sideline and it appeared that the official was confused as well. Rather than stopping play to straighten things out, the next play was allowed to run which eliminated any chance of the problem being fixed.

How is it that among 11 officials on the field, three officials on the sideline, and the officials in the booth, not one saw this? Even Dan Dierdorf, the most uninformed being of all time, noticed this one in between bites.

Roy Alexander

Does anyone remember last year when Colorado was given five downs in a college game? Or two years ago when Dallas was called for a safety on a kickoff return against the Giants on a muffed ball that went into the end zone? Two weeks later on IBM You Make the Call they showed this play and said the ruling was a touchback. The official who made the call was forced to retire.

It's ridiculous to say, but I really think it's time for an official to be placed in the booth to stop play when such atrocities occur. Better yet, let us put someone up there who knows something about what's going on, like you or me.

The best pick this week is Kansas City over Miami. Miami All-Pro linebacker John Offerdahl and offensive lineman Keith Sims will not play. If the Chiefs offense and defense are working in sync again this week, this will be an easy one. Look for Dan Marino to be pressured all day and for Okoye to have another big day against an injured Miami defense.

San Diego is the best 1-5 team in the league and they are probably better than most of the .500 teams. The Chargers really seemed to put things together against the Raiders in Los Angeles. Meanwhile the 2-3 Rams are coming off a bye week and Jim Everett may not play with a sore throwing arm.

The Cowboys return home against the winless Bengals, who are coming off a bye week. While Cincinatti may be due for a win they will have to wait awhile with Dallas, Buffalo and Houston coming up, all on the road. The Bengals defense is the worst in the league giving up more points than anyone else in only five games.

Troy Aikman has only three interceptions, all against the Eagles, and has played well every week. Emmit Smith is one of the leading rushers in the league and is neck-and-neck with Barry Sanders for the rushing title. Dallas will score easily and often while the Bengals' offense will continue to sputter.

For the first time I have picked the Giants. That's because the spread is only 2 1/2 and Jeff Hostetler is on fire. Last week he had another big game against the Cardinals. The Steeler defensive line won't give Hostetler or running sensation Rodney Hampton any trouble. As usual, Pittsburgh's offense will give a mediocre performance.

This week's picks in CAPS: (H) : Home

(H)BILLS(-17) VS Colts, (H)DALLAS(-6 1/2) VS Bengals, OILERS(-3) VS (H)Jets, (H)CHIEFS(-6) VS Miami, CHARGERS(+4) VS (H)Vikings, SAINTS(-4) VS (H)Eagles, (H)FALCONS(+10 1/2) VS 49ers, (H)SEATTLE(-1) VS Raiders, BROWNS(+13) VS (H)Redskins, GIANTS(-2 1/2) VS (H)Steelers

Last week : 8-4
Season : 29-23

Roy Alexander is a Collegian sports columnist

Classifieds

COME TO THE COLLEGIAN OFFICE 113 CAMPUS CENTER • THURSDAY 8:30-3:30 FRIDAY 8:30-2:30 • DEADLINE IS TWO DAYS PRIOR TO PUBLICATION • 20¢/WORD/DAY FOR STUDENTS • CASH IN ADVANCE

ACTIVITIES

HEY UMASS!!
Forget UVM! Don't go home!
Stay here this weekend!!
Dunk a D.U. & Soak a Sigma Kappa
Hasgs Mall Street Fair
12-6
Dunk us, we dare you!!

HEY UMASS!!
Here's your chance
Dunk a D.U. & Soak a Sigma Kappa
Come to Hasgs Mall 10/12
We dare you!!

ANNOUNCEMENTS

MIDNIGHT MADNESS! Everything on sale! Good stuff cheap, one day only! Friday, October 11 9am to midnight Strawberries Rt 9 next to Stop N Shop

SUPPORT OUR TOWER LIBRARY!
Visit the Kappa Kappa Gamma and Lambda Chi Alpha booth this Saturday at Hasgs Mall

ATTENTION NON-US RESIDENTS
AA-1 immigration lottery is your chance Apply on friends behalf for efficient strategies Call 542-4220

FISH TOSS!
This Saturday at
the Hasgus Street Fes
Be There.

NEED A LOAN?
The UMass Student Federal Credit Union offers competitive loans. For more information, visit our loan department today!

TARKOVSKY FILM FESTIVAL any interest? Send wants, thoughts, and sase to Tarkovsky c/o Box 395, Northampton 01061-0395

UNIVERSITY DEMOCRATS
Campaign 92!
Meeting Tues Oct 15 7:00pm
423 Student Union

AUTO FOR SALE

1980 Oldsmobile Cutlas Supreme New brakes runs perfectly $450 549-7913

1980 TOYOTA CORROLLA Sunroof hatchback Runs great New parts $750 B.O. 586-5148

83 TRANS AM
76K miles great shape
$2500 or BO
549-6781 Perry

1985 CHEVY SPECTRUM
New brake, new carburator
Runs great! $1, 500 or B.O.
Call 253-9339

87 SUZUKI SAMURI convertable 4x4 5 speeds 27K miles AM/FM cassette CB radio soft/hard tops $3500 or BO 549-0318 or 545-2395 Chin.

EMPLOYMENT

Colorado Utah New Mexico
Real jobs! No hidden charges! Real contact people! Seasonal, yearround, intersession. Work at the BEST resorts, shops, manufacturers. Winter, spring or summer help always wanted! Go West. Work, play and have a GREAT time! Send us: name, address, age, areas of interest to BALLOONS 925 Grandview Boulder CO 80302 and for a VERY SMALL FEE we will send you at least 8 excellent job prospects! We can supply great affordable housing options also. DON'T DELAY.-We need all responses by Nov. 2 1991.

DEBATE

Are you interested in public speaking? Would you like to participate in a Mock Trial Competion or other competitive debate? Come to the UMass Debate Society Meeting on Wednesday 7:00 in the Debate Trailer or call 545-3509 for more information.

ENTERTAINMENT

RACK-A-DISC! $175.00 DJs, VJs, Karaoke for house/ Formal parties. Call 586-9900

FOR RENT

2 rooms available January 1, 253-0743, no smoking, on bus line.

FRIDGE RENTALS 253-9742 Free Delivery

LARGE BUNNY ROOM
Newly renovated farmhouse
Sunderland - Bus route
$250/mo 665-2617

TOWNHOUSE 2 BEDROOM 1 1/2 bath Bus route N Amherst 1-567-1352

FOR SALE

3 RED HOT Chili Pepper 6x at 8 U. 11/1 Fuji Allegro touring bike $180 or B.O. Cold plate, $200 or B.O Call 256-0965

AMIGAZOOOHH-s/'2286 Bridgeboard, 40MB HD RGB Stereo monitor, Mouse, keyboard. 2MB RAM-$2475 or b.o. Toshiba Pagelaser6 -$600 firm Scott 549-0226

COMPUTER FOR SALE
$600 Call Cliff
549-1762

DTK 386sx IBM compatable computer Color VGA, IMB RAM, math coprocessor, Hayes modem, lots of software. $1700 Call Mike at 549-6957

IBM PS/2 COMPUTER
NEC letter quality printer
Must sell Call Dave 546-1348

LIFECYCLE- Computerized aerobic trainer professional health club model Excellent condition $1100. 256-0080

NEW & USED COMPUTERS
Call Dorrin 6-2270

ONE WAY FLIGHT from Boston to San Francisco Oct 13 $100 or B/O 256-6258

PLANE TICKET Nov 8 - Nov 11 From Hartford to Augusta GA Price neg. Call Chris 549-4828

SAILBOARD- 390cm Magnum, complete, good beginners board or light wind. Mast cracked but reparable. $90/BO 659-3993 Leave message

SKIS AND BOOTS
180cm Ladies size 6
Call Judy after 6pm 739-7652

SPEAKERS
$600 value
Must sell $280 obo 546-1039

"THE EMPEROR WEARS NO CLOTHES" Buy the Bible of the Legalization Movement now! Only $14 call Scott at 253-4245

FOUND

Gray cat with White Paws might be pregnant
Please call 253-0968

PAIR OF EYEGLASSES by GRC bustop. Call 546-5785 and leave a message

FUNDRAISERS

RAISE $500...$1000...$1500
FOOLPROOF
FUNDRAISING
For your fraternity, sorority, team or other campus organization. Act now for the chance to win a Caribbean cruise and fabulous prizes!
Call 1-800-950-8472, ext 50

HELP WANTED

"CAMPUS REPRESENTATIVES NEEDED"
Earn free trip and big commissions by selling Cancun, Mexico. For more information call toll free at 800-755-7996 or in Connecticut at 203-975-6833

EXTERIOR PAINTERS
Experienced student painters needed to paint Amherst area homes. Full or part time America's College Painters (800) 626-6267 "Painting America's homes coast to coast"

FREE SPRING BREAK TRIPS
to students or student organization promoting our spring break packages.
GOOD pay & fun. Call CMI
1-800-423-5264

"Know before you go..." Where to work, live and ski free in Colorado's resorts. "Current guide to Aspen, Vail, Bracken-ridge and more! $16.95. Call 1-800-788-6174

OVERSEAS JOBS. $900-2000 mo. summer, yr. round, all countries, all fields. Free info. Write UC, PO Box52-MAOI Corona Del Mar CA 92625

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

HAPPY B-DAY MARNIN in Pierpont -From a Taunton "friend"

LOST

CALL JEFF 546-7073
Black metal halftrimmed prescription glasses w/black case
REWARD

FREE $$20 FOR whoever found my red and blue windreaker with green stripe along zipper. Left in Oakroom DC on Friday September 27th. Call Chris 546-5787.

GOLD RING W/ INITIALS JMS slightly visible on surface If found please call 549-2749

Key on brass whistle key ring 6-1850

Key with purple key chain
From goodwill China Mission
Please call Cathleen 546-0243

LEVIS-DENIM JACKET w/red stains on left side in upper central on Fri. Oct. 4 important papers inside If found please call Pete 546-1035

MISSING KEYS!!!
Four keys on a silver/turquoise chain
-Call Matt #6-2686

MY LIFE! Black wallet on Lincoln Ave. or in/ near LGRT. Lost Oct 2 Dave 256-3459

ONE SET OF 5 keys on a green clear keychain Call 6-1943 & Please leave message. Lost near Van Meter

SUNGLASSES LOST
LGRC lowrise on Tuesday morning. Brother's gift. Of sentimental value. Please return to Campus Center Info Desk or call 549-0944 REWARD!

MOCK TRIAL

Are you interested in the National Mock Trial Competition? Call 545-3509 for more details. Ask for Malaika or Chris

MUSICIANS

Guitar Lessons - Beginning/Intermediate Relaxed atmosphere, serious lessons $10/ hr. Call Tim-256-6300

PERSONALS

TAMARA: Do you think you'll ever figure it out? -J-

HEY AMY: Did you find my toothbrush yet? -J-

CLAUDINE
Hey, you got a personal! Happy year and a half, Love Always, John

Ed,
Ever since I met you on that drunken night last November, my life has never been the same. You mean more to me than you will ever know. "Wa,wa, I'm falling off the bed." Love, Chrissy

Dandi-
The sun rises.
Another day has begun.
SMILE!
You'll be happy to know this is from -Dave (no "id")

JENNY PENNY,
Have a great weekend. Don't do anything I wouldn't do! Happy Birthday
I Love U, Teri

Attention Theta Chi Victims: Be prepared for a circus. What a long strange trip it will be. It'll be a hypo

-RB 1
Welcome back!!!
Love RB 2

HAPPY BIRTHDAY
Dearest Babe
Love Snoolum

VARSITY WOMEN'S CREW Good luck this weekend, Sorry I can't be there to cheer you on but luck but UMass! Love your #1 fan Sam!

"JUSTIN"
Happy 21st B-day!
I want MP and MV to be together forever
I am so in love with you
-Eva

WATIK!
I could make the sun shine from pure desire —4U
Your New Drug

PINK MESSIAH and tall one Happy second Love Short one

JERVIS- Get ready for a sick 21st birthday! Love your roomie

Happy Anniversary Dinny- a fine year for a fine lady I LOVE YOU P.S. Will you marry me! Maestro

COME OUT, COME OUT, Wherever you are! Student Union Ballroom - Check it out!

HEY JILL RUBIN - This smile is for you
:-)
Get better, okay? :-) Karen (:-

Jerome,
Good luck in tomorrow's game highlight! Love, you #1 fan.
Amy

IT'S THE PUNCH AND JULIE SHOW!
Oct 13th, 1987 to Oct 13th, 1991
Going into it's 5th season!
Sharkey, 4 years is along time, eh? I look forward to many more! I love you very much
The Doctor
P.S. To be continued...

Sparky,
Happy 1 year! You've made me so happy. Always remember- I love you!
Love, Bam Bam

HEY LAMBDA CHIS & KAPPAS
Get ready for an amazing weekend
Lets help restore those traditions
IYQSI!!!

Eric Kraus I love you & happy anniversary
Love Jill
Michelle K Thanks for being there Jill

Lissa-
Shalom! I just wanted to say hi, and that I love you! Take it easy!
love ya
Andie

A MESSAGE FROM PURPLE WORLD! Congrats to the 6 new sisters of PIE
U know who UR
-PAE

THE SUPER PSYCHED SISTERS of PIE wish Karen A Wicked Awesome
19th B-day
Smile

HAPPY 21ST BIRTHDAY Julie Love Scott and Tami Have Fun!

Mark Cameron
Get ready for a great semester pledging for Alpha Phi Omega
In L.F.S
Your Big Brother
Nancy Schultz

HAPPY 21ST MICHELE CAIRNS!
It's about time!
Now you can go WHEREVER, WHENEVER and not be left at home! Have fun.. but not TOO much!
From your other legal roommate

KEDDY MASASON:
Happy 21st birthday roomie!
Lots of love from the house of blonds and Tracy!

HAPPY 20TH BIRTHDAY, JEANNE!
Thanks again. You're "awesome" Love, Jeff

GO UMASS!!
Go Jerome!
Catch 22
Love, JAHND

Marci- Welcome Home. You're the only person who can make me smile while making a tear come to my eye at the same time. Remember, OUR LOVE: REAL, NOT FADE AWAY. ALAN

AMY & KENNY: Get ready to rage in Vermont! Octoberfest here we come. Sorry about your sneakers Woody. I can't wait - Richelle

VP PERRY-
Congratulations on becoming VP of a snakepit! You deserve it! Remember, we do live in the coolest room on campus!!
Love ya-
Andie

If you see Bryan Plumb today, buy him a drink. Professor is 21!

Sandra,
Espero que tengas un Feliz Cumpleanos y que todos tus deseos se cumplan Rox!

YO HOLLY F.!!
You mean more to me than you'll ever know.
I Love You
RUT

NICKI-
Look! Your very own personal.
Sieze the cheeseburger.
love, goober

SIG EP Get psyched for homecoming!! Alpha Chi's get your tips in gear for the weekend
Love, Margo & Tim

CARRIE
Exams are over.
Let's have a great weekend.
VICTOR

NAK
Get any action yet?
Just smooch him
Love your housemates

TIPPY
Happy Birthday
Love The 727 Girls

I'm sorry for being such a whiney drunk. If nothing more, I definetly do want to be friends with you. I feel really awkward about the whole thing- so please call me. -JENN

RACHEL V.
This is our weekend! Lets look for some real men! Get Psyched!
Your Roomie Tina

To the three hunks teaching weight training at 11:15 -Here's the personal you've been looking for -Get pumped up!
From Your A Students

JULIO,
Happy 11 months and 1 day. Nov. 10 is just around the corner. I love you more each day!
Love, The Truck.

Susanna (Mullen) Burns
Welcome Back!
I hope that you and your friends have a great time reliving old memories.
Love,
Your Cousin
Nancy O.

SCOTT M
2yrs. is only the beginning
Happy Anniversary!
Love, LB

Jen,
Happy 21st Birthday!
Love,
Shelley

RICK POPE MD
All right, you were right! And here it is for all the world to see! We were wrong:
The steel rod is only 8 inches! -Cher

MOLLY
Happy birthday to you
Happy birthday to you
Happy birthday dear Molly (buy us beer)
Happy bithday to you
Luv Daves Josh Paul and Eric

TO THE BROTHERS and pledges of AEPi
Get ready to get back to basics!
Homecoming will be amazing!!!
Love, The Sisters and Pledges of SDT

ROOMMATE WANTED

FEMALE WANTED TO share large room in townhouse. Nov 1 st $160/Mo. 549-8015

SERVICES

BICYCLE BROKEN?
Call Pat
546-0119

ORDER AVON!
546-1999
Call for brochure.

PREGNANT?
Need a pregnancy test, information or support? Call for free and confidential services. ALTERNATIVES 245 Main Street, Northampton 586-3000 or Greenfield 774-6019

FREE pregnancy testing; confidential and caring support. BIRTHRIGHT 233 No. Pleasant Street Amherst 549-1906

TRAVEL

Bahama Cruise $99 per person 5 day/4 night hotel. Plan now for your break. Very limited offer. Call now 1-800-821-0572

SOME RELIABLE TOURS aren't so reliable. Thats why Mardi Gras Travel has the #1 for for fun price guarantee to Montreal! SEX LIES IN THE MONTREAL BAR CRAWL! Party weekends include 2 nights & transp. Group leaders travel FREE! (LAGNAF)-Call today 617-444-1111! We're #1 for fun!

TRAVEL FREE! Campus representatives wanted to earn intersession and spring break trips. 256-8254

TYPING

PAPERS TYPED: $1.50/typed page Quick, Accurate Service. Call Brian 546-3563

WANTED

USED COMPUTER & PRINTER Sofa bed double Call 536-6318

WANTED
New or used fridge
Call Nona
546-5175

Sports

Minutemen entertain surging URI Rams

By TAMIR LIPTON
Collegian Staff

As the University of Massachusetts prepares for Saturday's game with the University of Rhode Island, they practice, understanding that they are one of four teams who stand a realistic chance of walking away with the Yankee Conference Beanpot at the end of the season.

But one loss, and (barring a miracle) any dreams of repeating as Yankee Conference Champions will be shattered.

"Two losses this year and I think you're out of it," UMass coach Jim Reid said.

Villanova (4-0 in the conference) and New Hampshire (3-0) appear to be head-and-shoulders above the rest of the league.

Villanova has outscored Yankee Conference opponents 174-29, including a 56-6 win last weekend against Boston University. The defense is allowing only 191 yards of total offense per game.

"I'm just shocked about that 56-6 win," Reid said.

New Hampshire racked up 45 points against a Delaware defense which coach Tubby Raymond has touted his best ever, quite a statement from a coach who has been around for 26 years.

What ever happened to parity in the Yankee Conference?

Back in August, at Yankee Conference media day, every coach used the word parity in a sentence at least once and New Hampshire coach Bill Bowes went so far as to say, "There's never been as much parity in this league like there is this year."

Bowes also said that he thought it was the kiss of death to be picked as the preseason favorite to win the conference, but obviously being picked first has not hindered his team at all.

UNH is a half game behind Villanova, but may actually have the upper hand on the men from Philly since they have already beaten Delaware, one of the four teams in the conference who could conceivably win the whole thing.

It seems as if the winner of the conference will be the team that finishes with one conference loss, unless something bizarre happens like someone upsets either UNH or Villanova, somewhere down the road.

Presuming that the team with one loss is going to win the YanCon, this weekend's game between UMass and Rhode Island looms large.

"This is a game that we have to win," Reid said.

Actually, if one loss is going to win the conference, then every game from here on is a must-win game.

"Football is fun. . . but it's more fun when you're playing for something," Reid said.

The Minutemen enter Saturday's contest, knowing that they will be without the services of linebacker Mario Perry and offensive lineman Bill Durkin for the remainder of the season.

Perry, who is believed to have fractured his ankle in the opener against Delaware, has been unable to play and is being redshirted for the season. His loss creates a huge void, which Gregg Mattern must fill.

"Perry may be the best defensive player in New England," Reid said.

Durkin has a virus which he has been unable to shake, and he too is being redshirted.

Last week, in the team's 24-7 loss to James Madison, tailback Jerome Bledsoe ran over 100 yards for the fourth consecutive week. He leads the Yankee Conference in rushing with 587 yards.

Freshman quarterback Tony Williams did not play well at JMU. He completed only four of 14 passes for 62 yards, a touchdown and an interception, and rushed for only 34 yards in 15 carries.

While Williams was struggling, Rhode Island quarterback Steve Holland was leading the Rams to a 38-36 win over intrastate rival Brown.

URI is 2-2 on the year, but they have won two straight.

Along the way, Holland has put up some impressive numbers. For the season, he has completed 57.5 percent of his passes, for 724 yards and four touchdowns.

Tailback Dario Highsmith was the Yankee Conference Rookie of the Week last week. In his first start, he rushed for 127 yards on 29 carries and two touchdowns. In addition, he caught a 60-yard TD pass.

Game Notes: The 120 chair back seats in section six at McGuirk Alumni Stadium are in recognition of former UMass football coach Vic Fusia. The proceeds from the sale of the seats, will go into an endowed football scholarship created by the Athletic Development Office.

The game starts at 1:30 p.m. and can be heard on WMUA (91.1 FM), WTTT (1430 AM), WGAM (1520 AM) and WGAW (1340. AM).

Collegian photo by Carrie Wyeth

Rich Kane battles a Holy Cross defender as he makes his way to the quarterback. Kane has been mugging quarterbacks on a regular basis and has four sacks for the season.

The madness returns to the Cage, Monday

By BRETT MORRIS
Collegian Staff

Get out the face paint.

The University of Massachusetts men's basketball team kicks off the preseason with Midnight Madness, beginning at 10 p.m. Monday with a full slate of events and giveaways.

Minuteman fans get their first opportunity to see this year's team which has been ranked in the preseason top 25 by Basketball Weekly.

"This is for our supporters, mostly the students," coach John Calipari said. "It's our chance to thank the best fans in the world."

The madness is free and open to the public, with the doors opening at 9:30 p.m.

Last year, the show was in front of a standing room only Cage crowd, so be sure to arrive early. Maybe real early, as the first 1,000 people to enter the Cage will receive a promotional "Building for the Future" poster-size team photo appropriately taken inside the construction of the new Mullins Center.

The Minutemen encourage everyone to bring a can of food to benefit the Western Massachusetts Food Bank. In return, the basketball program will be giving out raffle tickets for a chance to win prizes and "shoot for cash."

The grand prize is two round-trip USAir tickets to anywhere in Florida with hotel accommodations from Campus Center Travel. In addition, numerous prizes will be handed out randomly, including cash give-aways and gift certificates to local establishments. L.A. Gear, the official shoe of the Minutemen, will be giving away sports equipment.

The event will begin with the finals of the student, male and female 3-on-3 tournament

CONTINUED ON PAGE 9

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THE LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND

VOLUME CI ISSUE 15 TUESDAY, OCTOBER 15, 1991

Perplexed senators ponder Thomas vote

AP photo

Supreme Court nominee Clarence Thomas

By JAMES ROWLEY
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Supporters of Clarence Thomas worked Monday to preserve Senate support for his Supreme Court nomination as senators "pained and perplexed" by sexual harassment allegations decided how to vote.

A key Southern Democrat, Sen. J. Bennett Johnston of Louisiana, reaffirmed his support for Thomas, saying the allegations by University of Oklahoma law professor Anita Hill had not changed his mind about the nomination.

"I believe Judge Thomas is qualified. I said so two weeks ago. I know of nothing that has transpired in the meantime to take away from that," said Johnston.

Another former aide to Thomas, Sukari Hardnett, told the Associated Press that black women in his office at the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission felt they were objects of his sexual interest and physical inspection.

"I am generally undecided," said Sen. J. James Exon (D-Neb.) who had been a Thomas supporter before Hill's allegations surfaced.

"I was so disturbed over the events this weekend that I'm literally, entirely in the undecided category," said Sen. Christopher Dodd (D-Conn.) who had previously been leaning toward Thomas, said at a news conference Monday in Hartford, Conn.

"I'm as pained and perplexed as the rest of America," Sen. Joseph Lieberman (D-Conn.) said on NBC, who had originally been a Thomas supporter. "It's quite possible. . . that we're not able to decide that anybody is lying."

Sen. Dennis DeConcini (D-Ariz.) another Thomas supporter, predicted the senate would approve the nomination in a vote that both sides expected to be close.

The vote was scheduled for 6 p.m. today after eight hours of time for debate.

"This is a cliffhanger if there ever was one," said Nan Aron, executive director of the anti-Thomas Alliance For Justice.

"I believe Clarence Thomas. The American people believe Clarence Thomas. I have no idea where the votes are," said Sen. John Danforth (R-Mo.) the nominee's mentor and champion on Capitol Hill.

President Bush said support for Thomas was still "holding strong" despite the explosive allegations of Hill.

"I am very pleased with the way support all across the country is holding strong for Judge Thomas," Bush said, referring to a flurry of last-minute public opinion polls showing Americans believed Thomas' firm, flat denial by roughly a 2-1 margin.

Hill returned to her home in Norman, Okla., where she reiterated her charge and chastised Republicans for attacking her character.

"I am not imagining the conduct to which I testified," she said. "The personal attacks on me without an iota of evidence were particularly offensive," she told a news conference. "I had nothing to gain by subjecting myself to the process. In fact, I had more to gain by remaining silent."

Hardnett, another former assistant to Thomas at the EEOC told Senate investigators that some black women who worked in his office felt they were "an object of sexual inspection" by him.

Hardnett, who worked for Thomas from 1985 to 1986, did not allege sexual harassment but said, "If you were young, black, female and reasonably attractive, you knew full well you were being inspected and auditioned as a female."

Hardnett, who was interviewed by Republican and Democratic committee staff members after writing to the panel, was available to testify but was not called, largely because the panel was running out of time, said a Democratic committee aide.

Who is telling the truth?

Actions of Thomas, Hill stump experts

By JILL LAWRENCE
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Anita Hill or Clarence Thomas could by lying, or each could be telling the truth as they see it. Experts say there's no way to know despite grueling hours of traumatic testimony before a Senate panel.

"It's a terrible problem," says Dr. Richard Ratner, a forensic psychiatrist and professor at George Washington University. "If I were one of the senators, I'd be tearing my hair out."

"People are engaged in the rankest speculation looking for evidence, and it isn't there," said Burt Neuborne, a New York University Law professor and former legal director of the American Civil Liberties

CONTINUED ON PAGE 4

The tenuous future of SAO

By JASON GEORGE
Collegian Staff

The naming of an interim director of the Student Activities Office is nothing new for a division which has had seven different directors in 12 years.

The newest vacancy occurred early last month when Irene Carew announced that she was taking an 11-month "professional improvement" leave.

The one-year position has been filled by Assistant Dean of Students Edward Korza, whose appointment will take effect in about two weeks.

Carew's tenure as SAO director had been controversial, with Student Government Association leaders frequently accusing her of being "anti-student." Student leaders have charged that she is "running away" from an SGA willing to assert student's rights.

Relations between the SGA and the administration were badly strained last spring, with the administration attempting a takeover and restructuring of student government. According to documents obtained by the Collegian last spring, Carew knew of the plan by SGA officers to request the administration takeover prior to its being announced publicly and her office may have helped plan the move.

The plan for restructuring was rejected in a referendum vote by the student body in early May, and the administration recognized the election of the current SGA officers but the ordeal left a bad taste in mouths of many involved.

Korza, however, said he believes he can play a role in improving relations between the SAO, the administration and the SGA leadership.

"I feel I can be a player and a catalyst in bringing various constituencies to the table," Korza said. "I want to bring things into a win-win situation."

He added that it was his desire to make SAO more "student-friendly," and to institute an "open-door policy" where students would feel free to come in to talk to him.

While Korza has expressed a desire to improve the relationship between SAO and students, Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Jo-Anne T. Vanin said Carew shared her commitment to setting a "new agenda" in student-administrative relations.

The role of SAO and the director's position, however, have clearly been a subject of controversy in recent years due largely to the role SAO plays in overseeing the Student Activities Trust Fund. While the Student Government Association controls the allocation of trust fund money to Registered Student Organizations, SAO administers the actual funds to RSOs.

"Before Dr. Carew left she supported my sense of what the agenda should be for the year," Vanin said. "Her resuming her role should move [improved relations] forward.

"I know people are worried," Vanin said. "But I see good potential [with Carew's return]."

The question remains whether Korza will make substantial changes in SAO or simply be a caretaker until Carew returns next fall.

President David Gagne said Korza "may take longer than we want him to to make changes [in SAO], until he realizes how things run."

Gagne said the two major issues that Korza will face involve the confusion over the role of the SGA and SAO in the budget process and the role of Associate Director Suzanne Jean.

"We see Sue Jean as the number one problem in the division," Gagne said. "She has consistently manipulated students and administrators."

Senate Speaker Robert Monaghan echoed Gagne's theme,

CONTINUED ON PAGE 4

Inside:

Page 3:
UMass professor leads study of Columbus exploration
Page5:
Another stunning episode of Marc Elliot's Notes from the Campus Center Basement
Page 12:
Minutemen lose 17-14 heartbreak over Rhode Island
Weather
Another lousy New England day. If you rush, you can go back to bed. Cloudy, maybe rain, lows in the 60s. Really, go back home.

The Madness begins UMass hoop style

By BRETT MORRIS
Collegian Staff

The Madness has begun, UMass basketball style.

If you were anywhere in Amherst last night, or this morning, you probably heard the frenzied, near-capacity Curry Hicks Cage crowd as they emphatically welcomed the 1991-92 men's basketball team to their first practice session of the season.

The game clock over center court started to tick down an hour before midnight and with 16 minutes remaining until Tuesday, the NCAA mandated date, the lights went off, the red carpet rolled out and spotlights went on as host Rich Tettemer introduced this year's highly touted squad to the frantic, face-painted fans.

"The whole school is in to UMass basketball this year," said senior Steve Dorfman.

Deafening, encompassing roars trembled the Cage as each player ran out individually, beginning with this year's freshman class.

"There's a lot of electricity in the air," said sophomore Charles Conner.

After the player introductions, coach John Calipari took the microphone and addressed the crowd: "ESPN says this is one of the toughest buildings in the country to play basketball and it's not because of the coaching staff or the players, it's because of you, the fans.

You're truly a part of this program when you go home soaking wet and you can't sleep after a game."

An awesome display of slam dunks followed, with crowd favorites Will Herndon, Tony Barbee and newcomer Louis Roe leading the way to a chorus of oohs and aahs. Barbee's back-to-the-backboard, one bounce, between-the-legs, off-the-backboard, one-

CONTINUED ON PAGE 3

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THE LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is a Registered Student Organization of the University of Massachusetts, published each week day during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000.

113 CAMPUS CENTER AMHERST, MA 01003
Phone (413) 545-3500 FAX (413) 545-1592

STAFF

Editor in Chief ..... Gayle Long
Managing Editor ..... Marc Elliott
Editorial Editor ..... Greg Sukiennik
News Editor ..... Preston P. Forman
Sports Editor ..... Tamir Lipton
Arts Editor ..... Paul DeGeorges
Photography Editor ..... Carrie Wyeth
Black Affairs Editor ..... Sondra Sutton
Women's Issues Editor ..... Jessame Hannus
Jewish Affairs ..... Felice Cohen, Debra Kriegsman
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Alexander Nguyen
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Madanmohan Rao
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Trystan Skeigh
Business Manager ..... Randee Pastel
Advertising Manager ..... Dena Haselkorn
Finance Manager ..... Jeff Weiner
Circulation Manager ..... Jim Winterbottom
Subscriptions Manager ..... Stacy Rogers
Promotions Manager ..... Scott Macey
Production Manager ..... Terry Starmer
Day Graphics Manager ..... Jenn Burns

PROFESSIONAL STAFF

Business ..... Brian Harrington, Lori Black, Maureen Majerowski
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

140-foot pizza breaks record

HAVANA, Fla. (AP) — It took a bit longer than 30 minutes, but the owner of a pizza restaurant delivered his attempt to make the world's largest pizza.

Lorenzo Amato, helped by 150 pizza cooks, created a pie Sunday that measured 140 feet across and weighed more than 22 tons. The Guinness Book of Records lists a pizza of 112 feet, made by a Pizza Hut in Singapore last year.

"We were more motivated because we were patriotic," Amato said.

"This pizza is a community pizza, a state of Florida pizza, a United States pizza."

Measurements were taken by the state and will be forwarded to Guinness.

The work took almost seven hours. A food company donated 18,174 pounds of flour, 6,445 pounds of sauce and more than a ton of pepperoni. Tens of thousands of people paid $2 apiece for some of the 120,000-slice pizza.

"It's the world's largest pizza," said Ron Villella. "But it's not the world's best."

It was cooked outdoors on a 10,000-square-foot tray heated by gas.

COLLEGIAN STAFF AND CORRESPONDENTS
Thursday, October 17
6 p.m.
in the business office
Professor Dario Politella
Lectures on
"Writing as a K.I.S.S."
Counts toward staff status

MASSACHUSETTS SCHOOL OF LAW
At Andover
Full & Part Time Programs
Majors Offered
De-emphasis on LSAT
lex et veritas
For catalog and information, call or write
MASSACHUSETTS SCHOOL OF LAW
500 Federal St., Woodland Park, Andover, MA 01810
(508) 681-0800
An equal opportunity affirmative action institution

Older Students!
25+ Club Introductory Meeting
Tonight 7pm - 10pm
Main Lounge,
Mc Namara Dorm
(Sylvan Residential Area)
All Invited!
Randy, 253-0761 • Box 114, SAO

AMHERST CINEMA
Now Playing
LATE FOR DINNER
Showtimes:
Fri - Sun
7pm & 9pm
Mon-Thurs
One show at 7:30pm
Adults $4.00
Student w/valid I.D. $3.00

Halloween Headquarters
GREASE PAINTS • HANDS • FEET • WITCHES' HATS & BROOMS • WIGS • MOUSTACHES • BEARDS • NOSES • FANGS • TEETH • TOOTH BLACK-OUT
NORTHAMPTON HALLOWEEN CENTER
25 State Street • 584-5006
10 Minutes From UMass
LARGE ASSORTMENT OF MASKS TO CHOOSE FROM
Call for extended Haloween hours
H.L. CHILDS & SON
Open Daily and Saturday 9:00am-5:15pm, Thursdays 'til 8:00pm
Check Our LOW Prices

CAMPUS EMPLOYMENT

Student Manager
Information Data Bank

QUALIFICATIONS: Demonstrated (through previous experience and/or recommendations) good communication skills; organizational and supervisory skills; ability to organize data, proof-read, edit; typing and/or word processing skills required; promotional and marketing experience desirable.

ELIGIBILITY: Undergraduate (preferably College Work Study eligible), with at least three semesters remaining at the beginning of the Spring Semester 1992 (excluding summer).

PAY RATE: $6.00 per hour

WORK SCHEDULE: Must be available for a minimum of ten hours per week and on site at least four days per week.

STARTING DATE: Immediately. Training will be provided.

APPLICATIONS: Obtain an application at the Information Data Bank, 2nd floor lobby Whitmore. Deadline is October 24, 1991. An interview may be required.

The Information Data Bank (IDB) is a telephone or walk-in referral center which maintains information on University administrative and academic policies and procedures; bus, library, athletic etc. schedules; campus current events; and a variety of other reference materials.

The Student Manager is responsible for the day-to-day operations of IDB including recruiting, training, scheduling, and supervising a student staff of 8; maintaining and updating the IDB library and information resources; with the assistance of the Graphics Coordinator, arranging for the preparation and placement of one ad per week in the Collegian.

For additional information contact IDB at 545-1555

The J•RICH
Build A WARDROBE
Birthday Sale!
1st Item: 5% off
2nd Item: 10% off
3rd Item: 15% off
4th Item: 20% off
5th Item: 25% off
6th Item: 30% off
The more you buy, the more you save!
1 WEEK ONLY • OCT. 14-20
J•RICH
CLOTHING FOR MEN
191 N. PLEASANT ST., •AMHERST • 253-2013
22 MASONIC ST., • NORTHAMPTON •586-6336
OPEN 7 DAYS • THURSDAY TIL 9

Local

National Coming Out Day celebrates support, pride

By JASON GEORGE
Collegian Staff

Despite rainy, overcast skies, about 50 people rallied to support National Coming Out Day, a celebration of the freedom to express sexual identity, on the Student Union steps Friday.

UMass junior Kelly Hayes, the Five College representative for the Lesbian Gay Bisexual Alliance, said the rally reinforced the idea that "coming out" could be positive.

"For me, coming out has been a positive experience," Hayes said. "It's been made easier by groups such as the LBGA that have provided a good base of support.

"For people who are lesbian, gay, bisexual or even heterosexual allies, the message is that you should be comfortable and proud of who you are as a person,"
--UMass junior Kelly Hayes

The term "coming out" is a shortened form of "coming out of the closet," a phrase which refers to the lifelong process of admitting one's sexual identity to family, friends and employers.

Hayes pointed to the example of a friend who remembered Friday that it was National Coming Out Day and said "she had to go home and get a pair of jeans." Jeans are a symbol of support for members of the lesbian, gay and bisexual communities.

National Coming Out Day originated when tens of thousands of members of lesbian, gay, bisexual organizations throughout the country marched to Washington on October 11, 1987, in a national day of celebration, said one LBGA member.

Sophomore Sudro Brown, an LBGA official, said the rally reinforced the message that it's "better to be out that not ... that's why we're out there.

"For me, [Coming Out Day] is a vehicle to show people there are gay people out there and to present a positive image," Brown said. "We don't live up to stereotypes — it's very important for people to know that."

Brown noted that a "large number" of people usually approach LBGA members and come out on October 11.

Junior Tami Monahan addressed the rally on the need to create a "bisexual culture."

"Bisexuals are not half-gay and half-straight," Monahan said. "[Today] is a celebration — people can look at us and see we're happy."

Monahan said that an important aspect of the coming out process involves revealing one's sexual identity to "greater community."

"I don't care who you are — you know someone who is gay, lesbian or bisexual," Monahan said. "No one lives in a vacuum."

Collegian photo by Matt Kahn

GOT CHANGE FOR A QUARTER, MAN — Rick Boucher of Trico refills and repairs the change machine on the arcade outside the Hatch last week.

Columbus in context

Seminar studies complex issues of 1492

By MICHAEL MEEHAN
Collegian Correspondent

Almost everyone learned in grade school about Columbus sailing the ocean blue in 1492. What they may not have learned is what else was going on in the world at that time.

As the 500th anniversary of Columbus's famous voyage draws near, University of Massachusetts anthropology professor Robert Paynter is looking at the trip from many different perspectives.

Paynter feels that while the voyage itself and Columbus's navigation problems are important and interesting, "What is also important is the perspective of those people around him".

To examine the perspective of those people and cultures Columbus's voyage affected Paynter has organized a biweekly seminar titled "The New Worlds of 1492."

"[The purpose of this seminar] is to investigate the multiple social contexts of European expansion heralded by Columbus's voyage," he said.

The seminar, sponsored by the Institute for Humanities, is for faculty only and meets every other Wednesday. At its two meetings so far, Paynter, a fellow of the Institute, said attendance has ranged from 15 to 25 people.

UMass faculty and the Five-College area professors have attended the seminars so far, Paynter said. The seminars will continue until the end of the semester.

Contrary to the current trend to discuss Columbus as a corrupt European oppressor, the seminar does not take an "us versus them" approach, he said.

Its focus is to examine the social forces surrounding and resulting from Columbus's voyage, and attempt to place the voyage in a broad historical context, he said.

Paynter says the question of whether Columbus "was a hero or a villian provides very little insight into the nature of the past or the implications of his actions in our world today".

The seminar is also helping Paynter prepare for a course that examines many of the same issues, "The Worlds of 1492," which will be offered this spring semester.

Chabad House open to all

By JOSEPH REINERT
Collegian Correspondent

The Chabad House at UMass is a somewhat hidden building. Officially located at 30 North Hadley Rd. since it opened in October 1988, it is perhaps better described as one block from Southwest and across from parking lot 32B because many first-time visitors often get lost trying to find it.

But as director Rabbi Chaim Adelman says this is in keeping with the goals of the group, which include helping Jews "find" traditional Judaism.

"We are an outreach movement based on our love of fellow Jews," Adelman said. "We are a medium for Jews to learn about traditional Judaism."

The Chabad movement is part of the mystical Jewish movement of Hasidism which originated early in the 20th century in the Russian Hasidic community.

According to Adelman, it is the largest group within Hasidism — the most religiously strict of the branches of Judaism — and is characterized by its "intellectual approach to godliness."

"Our services have a high level of spirituality and mysticism, combined with our intellectual approach," he said. "This is the way we find truth in Judaism."

Adelman said the Chabad movement has a special function in today's world.

"Today there are millions of Jews who have no real knowledge of traditional Judaism because of assimilation and misconceptions about the Orthodox movement," he said. "We are giving them and others, a chance to find out about us."

Adelman said Chabad House is open to anyone interested and people are encouraged to attend year-round services and ongoing religious classes "to learn about us and give us a try."

Although Chabad House is the only orthodox Jewish organization in the area, and caters also to non-students, it is a Registered Student Organization with an emphasis on reaching out to the UMass community.

One such student is UMass senior Josh Krancer, who regularly attends services at Chabad House. He said he enjoys the comfortable atmosphere of the house.

"It has a family atmosphere, a traditional atmosphere, in general it is a very warm place," Krancer said. "I find Chabad House to be very open for people."

The house will be celebrating "Havdala" ceremony at 8:30 p.m. on Oct. 26, followed by the celebration of "Melavemalka" which promises "live music, stories, singing, dancing and food."

■ Midnight Madness

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

handed-slam detonated the Cage crowd, which doubled as an "applause-meter."

Herndon was the eventual winner, but Roe and Barbee posed a serious challenge to the defending champion.

As expected, Calipari pitted the freshman against the returnees in a full court scrimmage. However, as unexpected, the new recruits, who were urged on by a "let's go freshmen" chant, displayed some court skills that kept them head-to-head with last year's team.

"I really like the student support," freshman Minuteman Ted Cottrell said. "It shows me that they really appreciate us coming."

The crowd became unhinged for the first time of the evening as the UMass pep band and cheerleaders performed the season's first arm-pumping rendition of "There's a Rage in the Cage."

The night began with the highly competitive finals of the male and female 3-on-3 and foul shooting contests.

Throughout the evening, giveaways were awarded to those in possession of the matching raffle ticket number they received at the door and by random crowd selection. In addition, students got the chance to "shoot for cash" from different distances on the court.

Collegian photo by Jeff Egan

Getting psyched up for Midnight Madness at the Cage are (from right) Robb Barnett, sophomore environmental science major, Gregg Montella, a freshman political science and Pete Twarog, a sophomore.

Peace Prize winner may be unaware of award

By EVE EPSTEIN
Associated Press

CAMBRIDGE, Mass — Michael Aris does not know whether his wife Aung San Suu Kyi is aware she won the Nobel Peace Prize. He does not know how she spends her days in confinement. He believes she is alive, but does not know so with certainty.

Aris said Monday he hopes the prize will help bring lasting peace to Burma, the country where his wife is being held under house arrest for pursuing democracy. The last time he saw his wife was over Christmas in 1989. The last time he received a letter from her was last year.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 6

Correction

Due to an editing error, in Thursday's story "University gets Rave Reviews in College Guides," journalism professor Dario Politella was misquoted.

Politella meant that UMass was impressive regardless of the fact that it was mentioned in the college guide.

The Collegian regrets the error.

Thomas

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

Union.

Senators are scheduled to vote Tuesday night on Thomas' nomination to the Supreme Court, after an extraordinary week of drama, acrimony and passionate constituent outpourings on the dilemma.

Lawyers and mental health professionals say it is impossible to tell whether Hill's accusations of sexual harassment or Thomas' categorical denials are truth, lie or somewhere in between.

What happened between the two nearly a decade ago may not be as black and white as the stories they told the Senate Judiciary Committee, the experts said. Hill may have exaggerated; Thomas may have minimized; the victim may actually have been the victimizer; both may believe their memories are true.

"There is no such thing as a perfect memory retrieval. Every memory has gaps in it," said Melvin Gravitz, a forensic psychologist who teaches at George Washington. "A person fills in those natural gaps with what they believe took place, and they believe it. That's normal behavior."

Republicans on the Judiciary Committee have tried to suggest that Hill, a University of Oklahoma law professor, may be unstable, delusional, not entirely rooted in reality.

Hill defended herself Monday against depictions of her as a spurned woman, a fantasizer and someone with a martyr complex. "I will not dignify those theories expect to assure everyone that I am not imagining the conduct to which I testified," she said after arriving home in Norman, Okla.

Democrats, though not impressed with Thomas's candor during the first phase of his confirmation hearings, did not try to raise similar doubts about him.

"They went into her motive and why she would lie," said Richard Sprague, a Philadelphia lawyer who prosecuted the killers of United Mine Workers president Jock Yablonski. "What about his motive to lie now? Do you really think that at this juncture he's going to get up and say 'Yes, I did it'? He's got every reason to lie to protect himself, but nobody made that point."

AP photo

University of Oklahoma law professor Anita Hill

SAO

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

calling Jean "a poison to the system."

"Student-administrative conflict will never be resolved with Sue Jean in that office," Monaghan said. "The system can never work with her there."

Several members of the SAO office, however, denied that Jean has been a source of problems in student-administrative relations.

Activities Coordinator Judy Gagnon said she started working with Jean 12 years ago and that Jean "supports students."

"I've worked with [Jean] for three years," Union Video Center director Jean Paul said. "She has the full support of [SAO] staff."

Jean declined several times to comment for this article. According to an assistant, she "doesn't generally deal with the media."

Despite the high turnover rate, members of that office maintain that SAO will continue its function of serving the needs of students in Registered Student Organizations.

Paul said "its important to focus on the idea that SAO works."

"I think it's going to be a great year," Paul said. "And we're going to continue the work we've been doing [with students]."

Paul pointed to the RSO fair that SAO held last week, with over 40 RSOs represented, and the work that that office does with groups such as the UMass Theatre Guild as examples of the positive things SAO does.

Paul and Gagnon said too much attention has been focused on the directorship of the office and not on what SAO actually does.

"A focus of lot of the work that has to be done is on the director," Gagnon said. "That seems to be some people's vision of the problem."

the POWER to discover

GTE Information Seminar Wednesday, October 16, 7:00 p.m. Campus Center Room #81

Discover the potential of a career with GTE Government Systems. Our representatives will be on campus to conduct an Information Seminar for all students interested in growing with a global leader in communications technology and information systems for the military, government and industry.

Individuals interested in Systems Engineering or Software Engineering who are pursuing a BSEE, BSCE, BSCS, BSMS or equivalent, are especially encouraged to attend this seminar. You'll learn about the technical challenges we offer in:

- System Architecture
- Networking
- Communications Systems Software Development
- Information Engineering
- DBMS
- Secure Switching Systems
- Real Time Software
- Simulation and Modeling
- Rapid Prototyping
- Expert Systems and ANN Designs

Harness the power of achievement. Discover the professional freedom, independence, and team involvement found at GTE Government Systems. See your Placement Office for interview availability. If you cannot attend on the date listed, or would like more information about careers with GTE Government Systems - Command, Control, and Communications Systems, contact Jill A. Shea, College Relations Coordinator, 77 "A" Street, Needham Heights, MA 02194.

GTE Government Systems

Command, Control and Communications Systems

An equal opportunity employer.

FREE!! FREE!! FREE!!

NO CHARGE TO PROCESS CONTINENTAL/AMERICAN EXPRESS COUPONS

FREE!! FREE!! FREE!! FREE!!

CAMPUS TRAVEL

CENTRAL TRAVEL

INQUIRE ABOUT OUR 10% STUDENT DISCOUNT

CAMPUS TRAVEL
CAMPUS CENTER
UMASS
545-0500

CENTRAL TRAVEL
OF AMHERST
800 MAIN ST. STE. 2
256-6704

ATTENTION; FACULTY AND STAFF

October is here and the United Way campaign is about to begin.

This fall, for the first time, Advocacy Network will be listed as an approved agency by COMEC. (Commonwealth of Massachusetts Employees Contribution) to receive your contribution as a state employee through COMEC via United Way as the collection agency.

Advocacy Network is an all volunteer group which advocates for the mentally retarded residing in Western Massachusetts.

Through the years, Advocacy Network has been closely involved with thousands of University of Massachusetts students who have participated in the long-standing and successful Boltwood Project.

I ask for your financial support through your United Way/COMEC contribution: Please specify Advocacy Network.

If you wish to know more about Advocacy Network, please phone:

(413) 256-1313

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions on this page are those of the individual writer or cartoonist, and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian or the University unless otherwise noted.

Notes from the Campus Center basement

The Minuteman came out last week and only mentioned the Collegian twice (both times in derogatory terms, of course), which must be some kind of record. I was a little disappointed actually. I was looking forward to some down and dirty mud-slinging (the sort we've come to expect from The Minuteman). But seeing how I went through all the trouble to think up a put-down, I'm going to use it regardless. When you have The Minuteman right there in front of you, when you're holding it in your hands, just staring at it, you can't help but have the following thought: "Gee, this would have made a damn fine snot-rag if they just hadn't put all this newsprint all over it."

Marc Elliot

Like marching around the Student Union Steps is going to make George Bush do anything.

Ted Kennedy was in Northampton last week. I guess he was visiting the Cooley Dickenson Hospital where he stayed after he was in a plane crash in which both one of his legislative aides and the pilot died. Ted doesn't have much luck with these mechanical forms of transportation, eh? His assistants should get combat pay.

What is it with postmen? Whenever you hear about a mass murder, it always seems to be a mailman that is responsible.

When you have access to an Associated Press wire service, you end up with all sorts of little tidbits (is that a word?) of information. In Albuquerque, N.M., a city whose only claim to fame is the place where Bugs Bunny always gets lost, there exists a group of fat, middle-aged men who dance around in night clubs with little or no clothing on. They call themselves the "Chunkendales" and I'm not kidding. I'm at a loss as to whether to laugh or vomit.

So there are these eight people who locked themselves up in a "Biosphere" to see if they can survive cut off from the world in their own little self-sufficient building. I guess they'll do all right unless one of them gets drunk and spills motor oil in the bathtub. Break out the hot water and paper towels and lock up the canary.

Yahhhhh! Graffiti of the Week! Graffiti of the Week! Fun with Fruit! Graffiti from around the campus, nation and the globe. This week's Bit O' Vandalism comes from Berlin, Germany (imported. . . do I run a classy column or what?), courtesy of Lee Anderson of Southwest. "Life is like pubic hair on a toilet seat; sooner or later someone is going to piss you off." Thanx Lee.

Somebody tell Sen. Joseph Biden that everyone knows he's going bald and that he should stop trying to comb what he has left over his bald spot because he's on TV now and he looks pretty damn stupid.

And I thought I'd never see the Senate spend a week discussing penis size and pubic hair. They ought to open up the hearings to the public with phone-in questions from around the country like they do on "Oprah" or "Donahue" so the rest of us can question these Yale graduates about penis size and pubic hair in their drinks.

I wonder if rentals for that movie starring Long Dong Silver have gone up since these hearings have began?

So when is CNN going to release a video series on the early 90s? They could call it The Bush Years' Greatest Hits and have videos like: "The Gulf War Mini-Series: What You Missed When You Went Out For Cheetos" or "The Thomas Hearings: From Boring Confirmation to Sex on the Senate Floor" (censored and uncensored versions available for the latter, censored only for the former).

I got a bunch of mail last week (three whole letters). One for Graffiti of the Week, one that told me to "have a brawny day" (thanx Mere-dith), and one last one from a Mr. Jason Wisuri who writes "I realize that you are not from New England so your mistake is forgiven, I'm just surprised no one has corrected it sooner." Jason says that New Englanders call it a "cellar" not a "basement." Well Jason, actually I am from New England, Massachusetts in fact. "Notes From the Campus Center Basement" was started way before I came here and I wouldn't want to presume to have the power to change the sacred tradition.

Well that wraps up another week, so if you think I have doe-like eyes and am the epitome of today's virile man (check out the personals now and again) or you think I'm a big weenie without a bun or even if you just want to give some cool graffiti write to "Joe Bob Elliott, that dancin' fool" and either send it by mail or drop it off at the "classified" desk here in the basement.

Until next time remember: "It's another big hit from the Money Store!"

Marc Elliott is a Collegian "Joe Bob"

Coverage as disturbing as the issue

Clarence Thomas says he won't withdraw from his nomination from the Supreme Court and I have just one question to ask — Does he have stock in any of the major networks or newspapers?

I turned on the television on Monday morning, but there was nothing to be seen. Of Clarence Thomas and Anita Hill, that is.

All I saw was Gary Collins frying up some trout.

Where did they go? I was so looking forward to seeing Sen. Orrin Hatch and my personal favorite, Howell Heflin from Alabama — thinking that their smart questions and sarcastic remarks would actually help this nation figure out if the former director of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission is fit for the Supreme Court.

This thing is sickening.

Gayle Long

You know the media is trying to make a big deal out of all of this when ABC News has an introduction screen with music which dramatically reads "THE THOMAS HEARINGS" and the Globe does the same with a mini-banner across six of the pages in the front section.

Most people do not even understand how this man's appointment will affect them, if it will at all.

Why in the world is this stuff covering the press like the dust on the dictionaries in the Collegian?

Because, as all good journalists know — SEX AND SCANDAL SELLS. Big time.

I mean, come on. Let's play this one out to the end. As I am writing this, there are supposed to be eight more hours of Thomas and Hill testimony in the Senate Caucus room, eight more hours of NBC Special News Coverage, etc.

Today the newspapers will be filled again with the analysis and commentary from every side, and even I could be blamed for adding to the overkill.

There are some things I should say, however.

Even if Thomas is doing this to increase the value of his portfolio, or if Anita Hill is a woman with such incredible intuition she could foresee his nomination 10 years in advance and concoct this entire thing in her mind — it doesn't deserve this attention.

The argument that the American public should see the process of the democratic governement at work isn't happening. The public sees smart-mouth senators and sarcastic news commentators making decisions on a woman and a man without hearing the entire case. Without ever being able to know the truth. This is what people see.

The people see polls taken by the hour by news pollsters who have an agenda of their own — I've never maintained that the press (owned by big business) is all that unbiased. We just try to make it look good. How can anyone pass judgement on this man and woman simply on their answers and the comments of a man like Orrin Hatch?

There are other things which the viewing public should see, but they aren't using their MINDS as well as their EYES. For instance, after the emotional turmoil caused by the trial, will Clarence Thomas, even if he is innocent, be able to vote without bias on cases involving sexual harassment in the future? How broad will his definition of sexual harassment be? Or will he have one?

Maybe Peter Jennings and the rest of the "political reporters" should think about that one for a while. Maybe everyone can do a little thinking — and stop worrying about the politics involved in it all. Just a thought.

Gayle Long is a Collegian columnist

College is nothing like real life

Here I am at college. Great. Now besides being concerned with grades, I have to be concerned with when I'm going to eat (is the DC open?), what classes I'm going to stay in, when I should do work, what activities I should participate in, and if the last two overlap, which one takes precedence.

"They" say this is more like the real world. "They" say that this is independence. "They" say this is higher education. Either they are padding the truth or they haven't been to college.

Granted, I do have more responsibilities now that I'm in college. Maybe in that respect it is more like the real world. However, a lot of the responsibilities are assigned in the form of a class schedule or by time constraints in the DCs. These things require a minimal amount of responsibility in comparison to other things I have encountered.

As far as being independent is concerned, I will say that there is a lot more independence in college, but I think a lot of people confuse independence with freedom. There is a lot of freedom and choice that is very prevalent in college: the freedom to go to which classes, the freedom to take courses one is interested in (aside from Gen. Eds!), and the freedom to do what — and go where — one wants, when and as often as he/she wants.

There is another side to the things that one does at college that is concerned with independence. Students are more independent in college than they have been before, but the majority of them are not totally independent. Most of them have their parents paying at least some of the tuition, still depend on schedules for classes to tell them where to go at certain points during the day, and as far as doing what you want to do without fear of not succeeding, the General Education requirements are restrictive.

I am included in the aforementioned things. I think that people see college as a step toward independence. It's a small sampling of independence — more than you had before, but not nearly as much as you will soon face.

Jordan Weeks

College is also referred to as an institute of "higher education." Is this implying that high school was lower or medium education? Maybe. Is this implying that one is supposed to learn much more in college, a large amount of things, "higher" than referring to the level at which one is learning? Maybe. I can assure you that college is one thing: higher priced education.

Altogether, I believe that college can be very useful and one can learn a lot from college, not just academically, but socially. As far as college being like the real world, I'm not sure to what extent that is true. It is often said that college is supposed to prepare you for the real world.

Kurt Vonnegut, Jr. once wrote that he was discussing college with a friend, a fellow writer. His friend wrote that in college you learned what you were supposed to in high school and that the real world was different from high school, but once you get out of college you find that the real world is high school all over, "cheerleaders, class presidents and all."

Jordan Weeks is a UMass student

Founders declare aims of Beer Nation

We, the founders of Beer Nation, are writing in response to the recently proposed restrictions on the purchase and transportation of keg beer. As you well know the town of Amherst is contemplating the implementation of a discriminatory policy of keg licensing. This policy would allow the Amherst police to selectively discriminate against anyone purchasing a keg. This prohibitive proposal on alcohol acquisition would further tighten the noose on our already strapped financial situation.

We, Beer Nation, call upon our allies, brothers and sisters alike, to rise up and take action against this travesty of a law. Beer drinkers have had to deal with many monetary pains as well as being socially oppressed and it's about time for a change. We will no longer sit back and be ridiculed for our choice. The creation of Beer Nation was for the preservation of our recreation and our first Bud Light vigil, to be held in downtown Amherst, will soon be announced.

Dale McGettigan
Amherst

New justice must obey laws of Court

The vote to delay Clarence Thomas's appointment to the Supreme Court does not "reflect the growing power of women and of issues important to women in American politics" (R.W. Apple Jr., New York Times, Oct. 9).

It was simply a political move. The delay had almost nothing to do with women's issues. "There's no reason for a delay if you have the votes," Bob Dole said. He, and other Thomas supporters, realized that the unanswered questions and diminishing support would probably have resulted in the Senate's rejection of Clarence Thomas.

Certain senators reiterated their support of Clarence Thomas and dismissed Anita Hill's charges because she called Thomas 12 times in six years. What does that average out to — two times a year? Even women who are physically abused "stay" with their abusers. Who fully understands the dynamics of relationships between abusers and their victims and between sexual harassers and the harassed?

Most male senators certainly do not understand. Some senators do not even know the definition of sexual harassment, never mind the laws against sexual harassment in the work place. How could these senators not dismiss these allegations when some of them may view certain behavior as acceptable? There is a basic misunderstanding between men and women about what is acceptable and what is threatening.

There is no misunderstanding in the law. The senators — lawmakers — should appoint a Supreme Court justice who not only understands the law, but who obeys the laws of the Supreme Court, especially when this Supreme Court will be ruling on many issues that directly affect women's lives.

Pamela A. Gaulin
Amherst

The Editorial desk gladly accepts columns, letters and cartoons from the Five College area. All submissions should be typed and double-spaced. Letters should be no longer than 50 lines, while columns should run 50-70 lines. Drop them off at our office at 113 C.C.

■ Peace Prize

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

"The joy and pride which I and our children feel at this moment is marked by sadness and continuing apprehension," said Aris, who is a visiting professor of Tibetan and Himalayan studies at Harvard University.

The couple's two sons, Alexander, 18, and Kim, 14, are at school in England.

The Norwegian Nobel Committee commended Suu Kyi for "one of the most extraordinary examples of civil courage in Asia in recent decades." The prize is for $1 million. Aris said the money should be held in trust for his wife and he does not know if she will be able to go to Oslo to accept the award.

Harvard University President Neil Rudenstine said he hopes the prize will bring attention to her struggle. "I hope very much that their own problems can be eased by this event," he said.

Styles By Deborah
The Spa For Hair & Skin Care
549-5610
65 University Drive Amherst

$4.00 OFF Professional Consultation and Style, Cut & Dry
With Cheryl Only
Reg $16.00 to $18.00
First time customers only • Exp. 10/31/91

$5.00 OFF Any Perm, Facial or Highlighting
First time customers only • Exp. 10/31/91

STEINBECK
COLLISION REPAIR & AUTOBODY
53 S. Prospect St. Amherst Center

Imports & other unibody vehicles are our specialty

Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass replacement

REMEMBER
It s your car and your choice of repair facilities
256-8157 256-1385
Shop Reg #RS1212

coffee

COMEDY NIGHT
featuring ...
STEVE KIMBROUGH
has worked with Jerry Sienfeld, Sam Kinison and appeared in "Midnight Run" the movie
and...
TIM MONAHAN
Tuesday Oct. 15th 9:00 p.m. $1.00 cover

Thursday October 17th 9 pm
Nightcrawlers the best of the blues

Friday October 18th 9:00 pm
Slant Six and the Jumpstarts

Wed., Oct. 16th
TBA

the hatch
GROUND FLOOR/STUDENT UNION

DISTINGUISHED TEACHERS AWARD NOMINATIONS

DEADLINE: NOVEMBER 4, 1991

IF YOU KNOW A FACULTY MEMBER OR TEACHING ASSISTANT/ASSOCIATE WHO IS TRULY OUTSTANDING AND DESERVES RECOGNITION, SUBMIT A NOMINATION IN WRITING WITH A BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF WHY YOUR NOMINEE DESERVES THE AWARD.

FACULTY, ALUMNI AND CURRENT GRADUATE/UNDERGRADUATE STUDENTS MAY NOMINATE.

SUBMIT NOMINATIONS BY MONDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1991

TO: DISTINGUISHED TEACHING AWARD COMMITTEE
GRADUATE DEAN'S OFFICE
514 GOODELL BUILDING
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS

Arts & Living

Hot Spot exhibit is only luke warm

By LISA CURTIS
Collegian Staff

Hot Spot: Amherst
Hampden Gallery
Thursday, Oct. 10

About 20 human forms lay contorted and twisted beneath stenciled Army blankets in Hampden Gallery on Thursday. The artist, Gail Rothschild, was asked for her interpretation of Amherst's history and this was it.

Each of my projects begins with a search for some element of local history that will form the central idea of the installation," Rothschild explains. For Amherst, she chose to highlight the doings of Lord Jeffrey Amherst, for whom our little town was named. In June 1763, blankets contaminated with smallpox were given to the Indians, and Lord Jeffrey was deemed "the father of modern germ warfare."

"The effect on the Native Americans was devastating as they had no resistance to the European disease," explains Rothschild.

The second half of Rothschild's exhibit is her correspondence with scientists and activists today involved with biological agents or "germ warfare." Rothschild said her research for this project took six months, but it's actual construction took 10 days.

"I don't do artistic expression," said Rothschild defensively in her black cowboy boots and cropped hair, as she attempts to explain the reasoning behind her work. "My sculpture is about bringing people together and inviting people to ask questions."

According to Rothschild's explanation, the "hay people" are a "reference to the earth which is as vulnerable as the suffering figure." Is this installation art? The figures, intended to shake the viewer up a bit and bring them as close as possible to the horrors of germ warfare, look like what's left behind by our friendly campus police as they ride by on horseback. Sure it's clay and hay, but I'm straying from the point.

The figures are not differentiated in any remarkable way. They didn't evoke feelings from the onlookers, probably because there were no faces. They lost their humanity with the visible chicken wire seen under the hay.

I could be accused of being too skeptical, but the second half of the exhibit is letters. The artist's actual correspondence with germ warfare experts. Good reference material, yes. Art? I'm not so sure. There is plenty of researched material about the subject as you walk into the room. It's a relevant issue for today, and it is a wonderful thing if the community reflects on the implications of

CONTINUED ON PAGE 10

Photo courtesy Hampden Gallery

Gail Rothschild

UPC & DEC Present
SHABBA RANKS
Weds., Oct. 16th
8pm
in the UMass Fine Arts Center
TIX on sale NOW at the UMASS Fine Arts Center Box Office
(413) 545-2511
$10 UMass Students
$13 All Others
MC/Visa Accepted

Perm Special
$40.00/includes cut
(shoulder length hair)
We feature:
PAUL MITCHELL
REDKEN • NEXXUS
SEBASTIAN
Just bring this Ad
Special Tanning Offer
10 for $30.00
HAIR NAILS TANNING
Hairworks PLUS
Campus Plaza • Rte. 9, Hadley • 253-3334
Conveniently located next to Super Stop and Shop

RED HOT CHILI PEPPERS
THIS SUNDAY!
With Special Guest
SMASHING PUMPKINS
plus PEARL JAM
SUNDAY NOV 3 - 7:30 PM
SPRINGFIELD CIVIC CENTER
TICKETS ON SALE NOW AT TICKETMASTER, TICKETMASTER CHARGE AND VENUE BOX OFFICE
ALL TICKETS $18.50
TICKETMASTER
G. FOX: HOLYOKE, MA & ENFIELD, CT
GRAPE STREET RECORDS: AMHERST
MOVIES & MORE: CHICOPEE PLUS MORE
CALL FOR TIX
(800) 382-8080

Black Affairs

"No sobb story here, check yourself!"

It is important for the Black community at the University of Massachusetts to understand that the editorial " A sobb story" written on September 30, 1991 by Jeff Lawerence was separatist, and cliquey.

I am a Black woman in my senior year at UMASS, and by no means at all have I ever needed someone to tell me how I should or should not behave on campus.

As far as the freshman are concerned, we should not come down on them so hard. They also need time to adjust themselves to this school, being that it is a very large and complicated University.

Things become even more complicated when people start labelling them with an "Urban Mentality". Personally I believe this to be a ridiculous and peripheral generalization.

Maybe some days people are in a bad mood, or they just do not want to talk. You must be paranoid to think that everytime someone Black doesn't say hello that they have a problem, I think that you have a problem. Besides this stuff about saying "wat up" is pure malarkey.

You mean to say that I should say "wat up" to every Black person I see, but when I go to the Malcolm X center some of those same people are going to look me up and down and ignore me?

Mr. Lawerence, I speak to those who respond with positive vibes. Only I and other Black individuals alike can be the judge of that, and not you.

I know that we should help one another, and be a unified community,but up here if you don't dress a certain way,wear your hair a certain way,or talk to these specific people , then the majority of the community will not accept you. Sounds like some judgement nonsence to me.

How in the hell can one determine who is lost or who isn't? Let me add that when I came here in 1988, the first few people I met were White people on my floor. When some Black American students on campus saw me with these White people, I guess they automatically assumed that I was "Lost". They would not speak to me, nor did they want to hang out with me. This bothered me, but I let it ride because I have to live my life and no one else can do it for me.

So now , here I am two years later. Those students who wouldn't speak to me, are finally speaking. To tell the truth this does not impess me, but it does confuse me. How people can judge other based on who they talk to is over my head. I do not mean to insult anyone. This article is not in reference to those individuals who respect other students for who they are, and not for who they associate with.

Nicole Garretson

In order for Black students to be truly united on this campus, I think we all need to" take a Tylenol" and wake up.

We have so many internal problems that need to be dealt. But nobody knows where to begin.

Futhermore, it could be quite possible that even you, Mr. Lawerence, may have salivated over some blonde- haired chick walking through the campus somewhwere.

So before you make derogatory statements about "jungle fever", I think you should check yourself and some of your cronie's shit out first. Even if you don't look at Black girls, you should not assume that every Black person who is intimately involved with a White person has a problem.

I sometimes encounter some Black students who try to remove themselves or exclude Blacks who involved in interacial relationships for the comminity. I think these people should think twice. Our community has many more pressing problems that need to be dealt with.

On another topic I did feel very positive about the editorial written by Douglas Greer. It was a constructive way of expressing the idea that we as Blacks in America need to revive our conscienceness. It also implied that unity begins in the center, and that we as Black people need to reclaim that center, that focal point of existence.

But then I read "A sobb story" which was perpetuating the idea that the Black community should have a standardized and peripheral means of interacting.

As far as the freshman are concerned , they'll run into plenty of obstacles throughout their four years in college, and will hopefully deal with them accordingly. The freshman cannot learn to socialize, become mature individuals or deal with their daily lives based on your standards. Besides, our main objectives for being up here should be; to study hard, to grow and learn from our environment , and to graduate successfully.

It also baffles me when you said that the University doesn't care about us. I agree that there is an abundant amount of prejudice and racism in the valley, Blacks should be aware of it and ready to support the Black community, but , Mr. Lawerence if you feel so strongly about these people not liking us, then why are you here? Leave this White University and go to a Black one. But let me warn you, White people are everywhere.

We (the African diaspora) are inevitably a part of the "White" hegemonic structure. So as much as we do not understand it, it is a must that we should use this system, and the Universuty alike to our advantage, together.

Get what these White people get, and more, while strengthening the community in a respective way.

Do not assume that you can categorize everyone in the Black community. You do not know me, and I am pretty sure you have based your judgments on people you know little about.

Unity means more than supporting the New Africa House. Black people in America are in a state of emergency, women and men alike. We can liberate ourselves, so long as there is respect for the inevitable (and not necessarily negative) diversity among us.

" Once the body of the nation begins to live again in a coherent and dynamic way, everything becomes possible." (Frantz Fanon)

Nicole Garretson is a UMASS studeai

" Are you going to get involved ?"

African American males and females on this campus need to take some responsibility. There is no reason why our organizations are not filled to capacity. Yes, we all have classes, but there is no reason why we cannot give two hours a week to better our community.

Douglas Greer

Where is our commitment? For example there was a sunrut meeting called by the African American History Department department, yet hardly anyone showed up. There more professors present than students. But we can spend six hours and fifteen dollars to see Shabba Ranks.

Underclassmen you especially need to get involved, this where you are going to spend the next three to four years of your life. Decisions are being made about your future at the University, by other students Who Don't Look Like You.

Athlete's, we understand your mentality. You come to the University and have thousands of White Americans thinking that you are the best thing that ever walked across the earth, then you forget where you come from. Should be among our leaders, because you have more influence than any other group of African descent on this campus, yet you choose to chase White American women, and start fights with people Who Look Like You.

Upperclassmen, we have a responsibility for all of the above. It is our job to get underclassmen involved, and for two years we have failed to do this.

We have to wake up brothers and sisters and get involved. We have a moral responsibility to ourselves and to those in the past who fought, and died to give us the opportunity to get here.

P.S. Stay away from the fever!

Douglas Greer is a UMASS student.

Yo, Whats Up!

OCTOBER 15

ANACAONA Cultural center study hours , mon- thur from 7-11 in the basement of Thatcher in Northeast.

"Can't Truss It" an indept discussion for first year, and veteran male students of color. Malcolm X center 7pm sharp!

OCTOBER 16

NOMMO NEWS general body meeting 5:00pm in 103 New Africa House

SHABBA RANKS 8;00 PM FAC

SYLVAN CULTURAL CENTER study hours sun-wed, 7-11 at suite 02 CASHIN (Sylvan)

MALCOLM X CENTER STUDY HOURS SUN, MON, WED, 7-11

"REPORTS IN COLOR" with James A. Jemison 91.1 WMUA Topic: Speeches of Malcolm X

OCTOBER 17

"ALANA NIGHT" 9PM Grayson Main lounge, guest speakers, reception, free admission

OCTOBER 18

ANACOANA CULTURAL CENTER PARTY at the Malcolm X center 8pm

OCTOBER 19

"UNIY PARTY" AT THE MALCOLM X CENTER 10-UNTIL music by D.J. KNOCK OUT!

WRITE FOR BLACK AFFAIRS

THE MOST IMPORTANT CAREER STEP YOU EVER TAKE MAY START IN SENEGAL

Or in any of over 70 developing countries in Asia, Africa, Latin America, or Central Europe. Your first job after graduation should offer more than just a paycheck. In the Peace Corps, you'll broaden your world view and your horizons for the future. You'll learn a new language... live in a different culture... develop professional skills...and meet challenges far greater than those you might be offered in a starting position in the U.S.

Peace Corps is looking for people from many disciplines— education, health, the environment, agriculture, community development, engineering, the sciences, and more. With a degree or experience in these fields, you may find that Peace Corps will be able to use your skills like no other employer you're considering. And equip you with the type of experience valued by international firms, government agencies, and private industry and graduate school programs.

PEACE CORPS

UMASS Peace Corps recruiters Tom Akin and Celeste Landon will soon be hosting several activities. Majors in science, math, civil engineering, health, elementary or specialeducation, English, forestry, agriculture, and business are encouraged to attend. Find out how you can qualify:

INFO Thursday, Oct. 17, 7:30 pm. New Africa House
SEMINARS Thursday, Oct. 24, 7:30 pm. 203 Holdsworth Hall

Or call the UMASS Peace Corps Office: 545-2105, or stop by 12 Draper Hall

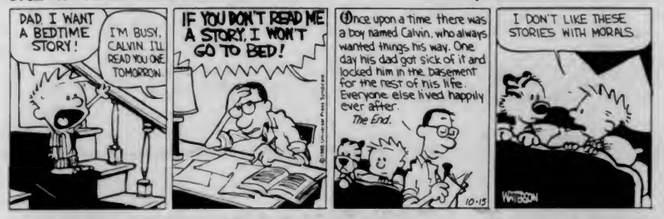
THE FAR SIDE
By GARY LARSON

"Voila! . . . Your new dream home! If you like it, I can get a crew mixing wood fibers and saliva as early as tomorrow."

DOONESBURY
By GARRY TRUDEAU

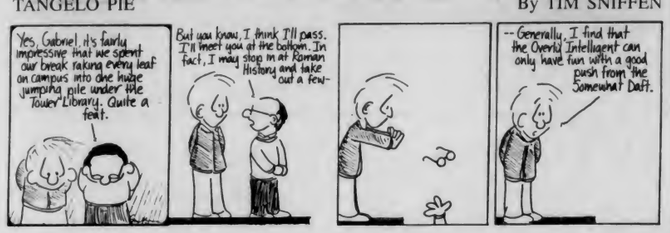
WELL, HELLO, SWEETHEART!
HI, DADDY! DID YOU FIND A JOB?
UM... NO, I'M AFRAID NOT, LITTLE GIRL.
DON'T WORRY, DADDY! I'LL GET A JOB.
YOU WILL?
SURE! I'LL JUST DROP OUT OF SCHOOL!
BUT YOU HAVEN'T STARTED SCHOOL YET.
I DON'T MIND. CAN I BORROW YOUR TIE?

CALVIN AND HOBBES
By BILL WATTERSON



DAD I WANT A BEDTIME STORY!
I'M BUSY, CALVIN. I'LL READ YOU ONE TOMORROW.
IF YOU DON'T READ ME A STORY, I WON'T GO TO BED!
Once upon a time there was a boy named Calvin, who always wanted things his way. One day his dad got sick of it and locked him in the basement for the rest of his life. Everyone else lived happily ever after.
The End.
I DON'T LIKE THESE STORIES WITH MORALS.

TANGELO PIE
By TIM SNIFFEN

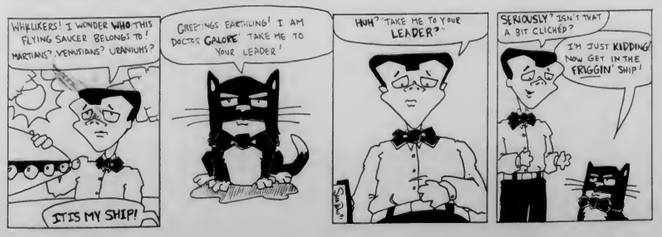


Yes, Gabriel, it's fairly impressive that we spent our break raking every leaf on campus into one huge jumping pile under the Tower Library. Quite a feat.
But you know, I think I'll pass. I'll meet you at the bottom. In fact, I may stop in at Roman History and take out a few-
-- Generally, I find that the Overly Intelligent can only have fun with a good push from the Somewhat Daft.

CAST OF THOUSANDS
By BARRY DEUTSCH

HI CASS.
I SAID FORGET IT!
FORGET WHAT?
BAH! NEVER MIND.
NEVER MIND WHAT?
THANKS, SAY, HAVE YOU EVER TRIED WALKING THROUGH THE PANELS BACKWARDS? IT'S PRETTY COOL.
CASS, WHAT ARE YOU BABBLING ABOUT?
I'M BACK!
GOD, YOU'RE STRANGE.

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED
By SHADOW



WHALKERS! I WONDER WHO THIS FLYING SAUCER BELONGS TO! MARTIANS? VENUSIANS? URANIUMS?
IT IS MY SHIP!
GREETINGS EARTHLING! I AM DOCTOR GALORE! TAKE ME TO YOUR LEADER!
HUH? TAKE ME TO YOUR LEADER?
SERIOUSLY? ISN'T THAT A BIT CLICHED?
I'M JUST KIDDING! NOW GET IN THE FRIGGIN' SHIP!

Quote of the Day

"I don't know what he's made for but it's not college."

--Overheard

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHAEL JAFFE

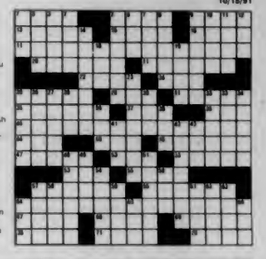
ACROSS
1 Datar —
5 Knock 'em in the aisles!
9 Worship
13 Accumulate
15 Mexican menu choice
16 Take a taxi
17 Advice to novices
20 Sharper
21 Join, as metals
22 Ooze
24 " — no evil..."
25 Cheer for a diva
29 Feedbag fodbit
31 Trophy for Tandy
35 Oxidize
37 Sweet potato
39 " — Blue?
40 Inventor's aim?
44 Pre-holiday time
45 Sail of song
46 React to ragweed
47 City w of Montgomery
50 Calif.'s coast
52 Spud
53 Sprite
55 Fly high
57 Commands
60 Natives of Attu
64 The party's over song
67 Chemical compound
68 Small case
69 Body of Jewish law
70 Domesticated
71 Fast flyers, for short
72 It's underfoot

DOWN
1 Youngster
2 Run —
3 Team anagram
4 Tennis ace
5 Sound system
6 — Vegas
7 Plays a part
8 Spinning toys
9 Pnssy people
10 Houston campus
11 Hebrew month
12 Urge
14 Perceivable
18 Spelling match
19 Margarine
23 Bribes, of a sort
25 Naive ones
26 A Superman
27 Soviet co-op
28 Drum
30 Greek letter
32 Insertion mark
33 Astound
34 Less green
36 Unit of energy
38 Futura like
41 Diagram
42 Plead
43 Social
48 —-of-the-road
49 So be it
51 Raccoons' cousins
54 Snoops
56 Sum total
57 Lady Chaplin
58 "A — with a View"
59 Noncoms
61 Japanese herbs
62 Novice
63 Pinniped
64 Obtain
65 Cabin
66 Haggard novel

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

C	A	G	E		V	E	G	A	S		S	H	A	M
A	G	H	A		S	A	V	E		S	L	E	E	K
B	I	D	S		P	H	E	A		S	U	A	V	E
B	L	U	E	B	E	A	R	D		E	N	S	E	Y
Y	E	L	L	O	W			Y	A	N	G
			I	D	E	A		A	T	R	I	U	M
B	A	R	B	S		S	P	A	R		E	D	N	A
A	B	E	L		P	E	W		R	E	L	I	T
L	I	E	U		T	Y	R	E		A	M	E	N	S
D	E	L	E	T	E		Y	S	E	R
		S	A	D	A		M	E	L	E	E	S
C	A	J	U	N		P	L	U	R	I	D	G	E
A	L	E	E		H	O	V	E		A	G	R	A
T	I	L	D	E		O	V	E	R		N	E	E	R
D	A	T	E	R		R	E	A	S		A	R	T	S

10/15/91



Quote of the Day

"The needs of many outweigh the needs of the one or the few."

--Mr. Spock
(Star Trek II: The Wrath of Khan)

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): VIPs may be touchy ad in no mood to deal with your agenda. Nevertheless, you get things done. Dust off neglected skills and use them to bring in extra dollars.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Consider extra training in your area of expertise. Plan first, then act decisively. You receive useful advice from more experienced people. Show your appreciation in a tangible way.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Maintain a low profile around testy higher-ups today. Romance is on a new high. Loved ones will appreciate any social plans you make for this evening. Keep entertainment costs within reasonable limits.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Curb an urge to violate protocol at work today. You will form valuable friendships while involved in humanitarian pursuits. Listen closely to what teen-agers have to say.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You value your privacy and enjoy spending time alone. A trip you take down memory lane with an old friend could lead to something exciting. Romance is a source of secret delight.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your love life attracts new attention. A proposal, trip or special project prompts you to think about the future. Say "yes" to an unusual request and explore overseas business opportunities.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Those working in advertising or sales have the magic touch now. Time spent on research pays off in the marketplace. Your fence-mending efforts win the respect of influential higher-ups. Be modest.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Literary efforts we favored. A new business relationship holds lots of promise. New doors open to you. Cater to your mate's whims now and then. The two of you make a great team!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Not a good day to take out a loan or violate the rules at work. Do everything you can to advance your career. Romance intensifies. Avoid revealing too much too soon.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): New vistas are revealed today. Be wary of people who act officious. You may be overlooking something about a partner. Contact with cooperative relatives is likely.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You are very decisive and may be given important new responsibilities now. Networking enlarges you contacts and enhances your earning potential. Do not be shy about promoting a pet cause.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Stick to your agenda today, limiting your contact with moody higher-ups. Finding new outlets for your creative talents will boost your income. Be sure your subordinates pull their weight. Set guidelines.

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Preston P. Forman
Copy Editor.....Joanne Quimby
Production Supervisor(s).....Nicole Dumas
Production.....Beth Butts,
Traci-Ann DiSalvatore

WANTED:
USED MAC's
WE BUY YOUR USED MAC EQUIPMENT FOR TOP DOLLAR. CASH! WE SELL REFURBISHED MAC's AT DISCOUNT! CALL FOR QUOTE.
RENTEX INC. (800) 545-2313, (617) 423-5567

■ Hot Spot

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 7

such a horrible weapon. The artist conceded that the sculptures were the work of her graduate students, though. So here we have a researching sculptor who has other people sculpt her stuff, and she tells people how bad germ warfare is. Although the exhibit was informative and educational, it lacked the total emotional connection of the artist and came across as viscerally disappointing.

Hot Spot: Amherst, an exhibit by Gail Rothschild, will be on display at Hampden Gallery through November 22. Gallery hours are Monday through Friday 3 p.m. to 7 p.m. and Sunday 2 p.m. to 5 p.m.*

Bruno's
256-0222
WE DELIVER QUALITY
Prices already include Massachusetts Meal Tax
OPEN DAILY
11am to 2am
FREE DELIVERY

Pizza Toppings

Pepperoni	Fresh Red Pepper	Pineapple
Hamburger	Mushroom	Sliced Tomato
Sausage	Fresh Green Pepper	Broccoli
Ham	Onion	Anchovy
Salami	Black Olive	Spinach
Canadian Bacon	Fresh Garlic	Jalapenos
Artichoke Hearts	Eggplant	Extra Cheese
	Double Dough

Pizza Prices

Cheese	4.25	6.00	7.25
One item	4.95	7.00	8.50
Two items	5.65	8.00	9.75
Three items	6.35	9.00	11.00
Four items	7.05	10.00	12.25
Five items	7.75	11.00	13.50

Salads

Tossed	3.95
Chef's	5.20
Seafood	5.20
Tuna	5.20
Greek	5.20

Homemade Lasagna Served with Hot Bread $5.50

Full Selection of Subs. Steak Subs are our specialty

Speciality Pizzas

Hawaiian (Canadian Bacon & Pineapple)	5.65	8.00	9.75
Pesto	5.65	8.00	9.75
Vegetarian Deluxe (Mushroom, Onions, Green Pepper, Olives, & Extra Cheese)	7.50	10.00	12.00
Combination (Mushroom, Onion, Pepper, Hamburg, Pepperoni, Sausage)	7.90	10.75	13.00

Dressings:
Italian, Creamy Italian, Blue Cheese
Served with hot bread

1.00 OFF Any Medium Pizza — 1 coupon per Pizza please not valid in conjunction with any other specials FREE DELIVERY! CALL 265-0222
1.50 OFF Any Large Pizza — 1 coupon per Pizza please not valid in conjunction with any other specials FREE DELIVERY! CALL 265-0222
1.50 OFF Any Large Pizza — 1 coupon per Pizza please not valid in conjunction with any other specials FREE DELIVERY! CALL 265-0222

ATTENTION
Collegian Staff, copy editors & all others interested in writing for the COLLEGIAN
• October 20, Sunday
• 6:00pm Collegian Offices
Workshop on copy editing by Professor Sara Grimes
Mandatory for copy & night editors
Counts towards staff status requirements

家酒園南湖 Hunan Garden Restaurant
MANDARIN/SZECHUEN CUISINE
The Best Chinese Buffet
MANDARIN/SZECHUAN CUISINE
10 Belchertown Rd. • Route 9 Amherst • 256-0251/0252
WE DELIVER IN AMHERST 5-9:30
EVERYDAY
Minimum $15 plus $2 delivery charge
NEW! BUFFET & SUNDAY BRUNCH
Buffet Served Saturday 5-9p.m.
Buffet served 5-8 p.m. Sun.-Thurs.
Brunch served Sunday 11:30 a.m.-3 p.m.
ALL YOU CAN EAT $5.99

ANNUAL ARMY & NAVY Surplus Sale
Genuine U.S. and European Surplus!
University of Massachusetts
Student Union Ballroom
October 15 thru 18th
Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday
9:00am - 8:00pm
Sponsored By:
Cape Verdean Student Alliance

- Genuine U.S. & European Military and Antique Overcoats $25-$35
- Wool, West German, British, French Pants $10 - $17
- U.S., British, French, Italian Wool Sweaters $8 - $15
- Mexican Baja Pullovers and Blankets $12 & $15
- Heavy Cotton, 6-Pocket Field Pants : U.S., Dutch, West German $7 - $16
- Genuine Issue Camo, Desert, Tiger, Urban Black Six Pocket Pants $25
- World Flags (3'x5') $10 each/ 2 for $18
- Down Feather Mummy Sleeping Bags (0' - 15') $30
- U.S. Navy Wool Middys and Peacoats $10 - $30
- Full Leather Raincoats & Trenchcoats $6 - $15

Wool Blankets, Gloves, Hats, Scarves, & Much, Much More!
Mastercard, Visa, and American Express accepted
presented by the Army Barracks of Martha's Vineyard

Field hockey has 1-1 weekend

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts field hockey team spent the long weekend in State College, Pa. against St. Joseph's and Penn State. They almost swept the two foes, winning 4-0 against St. Joseph's, but losing a close 2-0 match to the Nittany Lions.

The win Saturday versus Atlantic-10 rival St. Joseph's gave UMass the regular season conference title. UMass (10-3) has a perfect 3-0 record in the A-10, with one more conference game, against Rhode Island, coming up.

In Saturday's action, UMass found their offensive stroke, as they combined good passing and shooting.

"They moved the ball really well," assistant coach Heather Lewis said. "They passed well and finished well."

The Minutewomen benefited from goals by Jenn Salisbury, Cathy Jaremis, Joy Blenis, and Sherlan Cabralis.

In goal, junior Philippa Scott and Tina Rusiecki split time against St. Joseph's. Scott notched four saves and Rusiecki saved two shots. Both goaltenders played well, according to Lewis.

Sunday's game pitted the second ranked team in the nation, Penn State, against UMass, No. 5. The Minutewomen came out strong on the turf of Penn State, playing one of their best halves, according to Lewis.

"They opened the field up and they did what they needed to do for the first 35 minutes," Lewis said.

Penn State got on the score board in the first half, before UMass fell apart in the second half. A Nittany Lion goal in the second half iced the game.

Scott played well against Penn State, saving 18 shots. The score could have been much higher if not for Scott's performance. The team did not play nearly as well in the second half, according to Lewis.

"They were really good for one half," she said. "Unfortunately, they didn't sustain it."

Against a team of Penn State's quality, it is imperative to maintain a high level of play. The Nittany Lions' (12-1) only loss this year was against top-ranked Old Dominion, and they continue to win convincingly.

As for UMass, the team is getting their turf play down, which is neccessary for the upcoming post-season play. The Minutewomen will play in the A-10 Championships at Temple, which is an artificial surface. If they advance to the NCAA quarterfinals, the field at Villanova is also artificial, so the experience on turf this past weekend was as critical as the competition.

■ Men's Soccer

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 12

Koch described Gruber as phenomenal in goal. Regarded as one of the Northeast's finest netminders, he kept the muddy Minutemen in the match, making 15, sometimes acrobatic, saves.

The field conditions affected several scoring opportunites by both teams. One such scoring opportunity could have won it for UMass, two minutes into the first overtime as Jacobs missed an empty net by slipping on the mud.

George Washington's score came just two minutes later at 95:36 as Ranzo Massa slipped the ball by Gruber.

"We were lucky because it was a hardfought game that could have gone either way," said George Washington coach George Lidster.

MULTICULTURAL AFFAIRS EDITOR NEEDED
- news experience helpful
- knowledge of multicultural groups and community groups necessary

Come to the Collegian offices, 113 Campus Center and ask for Marc

LONDON
ROUND TRIP FROM $350

From NEW YORK
round trips starting at

LONDON	$350
LENINGRAD	$610
CARACAS	$410
GUTEMALA C.	$390
BANGKOK	$939
LOS ANGELES- AUCKLAND	$699

Taxes & surcharges not included. Fares subject to change.

Council Travel
79 So. Pleasent Street, Amherst, MA 01002
(413)256-1261

OOPS!
Now's the time to call...
North Amherst Motors
78 Old Sunderland Rd., No. Amherst
549-2880
Expert Repairs and Reconditioning
Most Major Credit Cards Accepted

BACK SCHOOL 101
Prerequisite:
Back pain & A REFERRAL from your UHS provider
This 3 session program (classes one week apart) includes information on exercise, some anatomy, massage, treatment options, posture tips and pain relief methods.
DATES: Wednesdays, October 23, 30 & November 6
TIME: 6:00 - 8:00 pm
PLACE: Physical Therapy Dept. Ground Floor - University Health Center
For UHS Health Education by information and registration call 549-2671 ext. 161
*Please advise your UHS provider for the proper referral

Classifieds

ACTIVITIES

CONCERTS CONCERTS CONCERTS UPC Concert Production Meeting Tonight 10/15/91 6:00PM 163CC Everybody Welcome

OLDER STUDENTS: Issues, munchies and more at 25+ Club intro meeting, 10/15, 7PM, McNamara Dorm, main lounge. Randy, 253-0761

SURVIVAL ON THE VAX! VAX help session covering logging on, word/MARC, mail, etc. Today! Marston 220, 7:00 Tues. Oct 15

ANNOUNCEMENTS

DR. WILLIAM RESSLER will speak on the "Social Psychology of Jewish Identity" tonight at 7:00 in the Hillel House Lounge

UNIVERSITY DEMOCRATS Campaign 92! Meeting Tues Oct 15 7:00PM 423 Student Union

AUTO FOR SALE

1980 Oldsmobile Cutlas Suprema New brakes runs perfectly $450 549-7913

83 TRANS AM 75K miles great shape $2500 or BO 549-6781 Perry

1985 CHEVY SPECTRUM New brake, new carbonator Runs great $1, 500 or B.O. Call 253-9339

EMPLOYMENT

Colorado Utah New Mexico Real jobs! No hidden charges! Real contact people! Seasonal, yearround, intersession. Work at the BEST resorts, shops, manufacturers. Winter, spring or summer help always wanted! Go West. Work, play and have a GREAT time! Send us: name, address, age, areas of interest to BALLOONS 925 Grandview Boulder CO 80302 and for a VERY SMALL FEE we will send you at least 8 excellent job prospects! We can supply great affordable housing options also. DON'T DELAY--We need all responses by Nov. 2 1991.

DEBATE

Are you interested in public speaking? Would you like to participate in a Mock Trial Competition or other competitive debate? Come to the UMass Debate Society Meeting on Wednesday 7:00 in the Debate Trailer or call 545-3509 for more information.

ENTERTAINMENT

RACK-A-DISC! $175.00 DJs, VJs, Karaoke for house/ Formal parties, Call 586-9900

FOR RENT

2 large roomed apt Heat inc. Center of Amherst 256-1124

FRIDGE RENTALS 253-9742 Free Delivery

LARGE SUNNY ROOM Newly renovated farmhouse Sunderland - Bus route $250/mo 665-2817

TOWNHOUSE 2 BEDROOM 1 1/2 bath Bus route N Amherst 1-567-1352

FOR SALE

3 RED HOT Chili Pepper tix at B.U. 11/1 Fuji Allegro touring bike $180 or B.O. Cold plate, $200 or B.O. Call 256-0985

BABY BUNNIES- Colorful dwarf lops Housebreakable indoor size. Quiet lovable pets. 584-4960

COMPUTER FOR SALE $600 Call Cliff 549-1762

GEORGE MICHAEL TICKETS 2 for $60 Mon Oct 28th show Call 549-7767 after 7pm.

HONDA CB360 MOTORCYCLE 4700m green windshield and extras $400 253-0951

LIFECYCLE- Computerized eerobic trainer professional health club model Excellent condition $1100. 256-0080

NEW & USED COMPUTERS Call Darrin 6-2270

SKIS AND BOOTS 180cm Ladies size 6 Call Judy after 6pm 739-7652

SPEAKERS $600 value Must sell $280 obo 546-1039

"THE EMPEROR WEARS NO CLOTHES" Buy the Bible of the Legalization Movement now! Only $14 call Scott at 253-4245

FOUND

Gray cat with White Paws might be pregnant Please call 253-0968

Times woman's watch found 2 weeks ago near lot 44 546-2758

FUNDRAISERS

RAISE $500...$1000...$1500 FOOLPROOF FUNDRAISING For your fraternity, sorority, team or other campus organization. Act now for the chance to win e Caribbean cruise and fabulous prizes! Call 1-800-950-8472, ext 50

HAPPY B-DAY CASS

Happy 20th Have a great day Love, Craig

HELP WANTED

EXTERIOR PAINTERS Experienced student painters needed to paint Amherst area homes. Full or part time. America's College Painters (800) 626-6267 "Painting America's homes coast to coast".

FREE SPRING BREAK TRIPS to students or student organization promoting our spring break packages. GOOD pay & fun. Call CMI 1-800-423-5264

"Know before you go." Where to work, live and ski free in Colorado's resorts. "Current guide to Aspen, Vail, Breckenridge and more! $18.95. Call 1-800-788-6174.

OVERSEAS JOBS. $900-2000 mo. summer, yr. round, all countries, all fields. Free info. Write UC, PO Bx52-MAOI Corona Del Mar CA 92625

JEWELRY

Jewelry at great affordable prices. Table in Campus Concourse 16 Oct.

LOST

GOLD RING W/ INITIALS JMS slightly visible on surface. If found please call 549-2749

Key with purple key chain From goodwill China Mission Please call Cathleen 546-0243

MY LIFE! Black wallet on Lincoln Ave. or inv near LGRT. Lost Oct 2 Dave 256-3459

MOCK TRIAL

Are you interested in the National Mock Trial Competition? Call 545-3509 for more details. Ask for Malaika or Chris

MUSICIANS

Guitar Lessons - Beginning/intermediate Relaxed atmosphere, serious lessons $10/hr. Call Tim-256-6300

PERSONALS

We are gonna have a Happy 4th year anniversary G love dirty K

JB can you believe it all started with "Take your pants off". And I'm still so crazy about you. Luv E

Jen Shea- Happy 21st birthday! Hope you experience impaired muscular coordination and syncopation. Lucky for you-no clinical! Love Debbi & Nancy

Shaggy I wanna break up. Don't ever call me, look at me, or talk to me again Scooby Doo

Hi Babe I love and miss you From your number one and only sweetheart Michelle

CONGRATULATIONS TO CAROL for being resident of the month -Way to go!!!

AND WE DRINK! Jen Shea turns 21 today! Now we can go someplace besides Mike's! Happy Birthday, sweetie. We're going to make you drink until you are on the ground how? FLAT- Pancake-like. I love you even though you wake me up at 5:30 AM. Love, Michigan

I have a question! Does everybody know that the countdown is over? Melissa Beck is officially 21 today! Anybody for a road trip to Liquors 44?

Kathleen You are great at keeping me laughing Thanks. It means alot ROOMMATE

MA PETITE FLEUR Happy 14 month anniversary. You have shown me more happiness than I knew possible! I look forward to a lifetime together. Love Always Sam

IT'S TUESDAY Start partying How often is it Tuesday? Only once a week

ROOMMATE WANTED

LOOKING FOR 2 non-smoking females to share room in beautiful South Amherst apt Next spring/ 1992 175+. Please call 549-3593

SERVICES

BICYCLE BROKEN? Call Pat 546-0119

ORDER AVON! 546-1999 Call for brochure.

PREGNANT? Need a pregnancy test, information or support? Call for free and confidential services. ALTERNATIVES 245 Main Street, Northampton 586-3000 or Greenfield 774-6019

FREE pregnancy testing; confidential and caring support. BIRTHRIGHT-233 No. Pleasant Street Amherst 549-1906

TRAVEL

Bahama Cruise $99 per person 5 day/4 night hotel. Plan now for your break. Very limited offer. Call now 1-800-521-0572

SOME RELIABLE TOURS aren't so reliable. Thats why Mardi Gras Travel has the #1 for for fun price guarantee to Montreal SEX LIES IN THE MONTREAL BAR CRAWL! Party weekends include 2 nights & transp. Group leaders travel FREE! (LACINAF)-Call today 617-444-1111 We're #1 for fun!

TRAVEL FREE! Campus representatives wanted to eem intersession and spring break trips. 258-8254

TYPING

PAPERS TYPED. $1.50/typed page Quick, Accurate Service Call Bnan 546-3563

WORD PROCESSING, laser printing, papers, resumes, theses. Rosemary 259-1786

WANTED

USED COMPUTER & PRINTER- Sota bed double Call 536-6318

WANTED New or used fridge Call Nona 546-5175

Sports

Minutemen upset by Rhode Island, 17-14

By TAMIR LIPTON
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts football team's hopes of repeating as Yankee Conference Champions were dealt a severe blow Saturday, as the University of Rhode Island spoiled the homecoming party, upsetting the Minutemen 17-14 in front of 9,427 fans at Warren McGuirk Alumni Stadium.

The Ram offense, which had been stymied for most of the afternoon, saved their best for last. Tied at 14-14, they began what was to be a 75-yard drive from their own 14-yard line with 1:26 to play in the fourth quarter.

URI tailback Dario Highsmith (14 carries, 105 yards) took a handoff and scampered around the left end for 32 yards, and quarterback Steve Holland (7-16, 108 yards and two interceptions) hit tight end Darren Rizzi over the middle behind the UMass secondary for a 39-yard gain.

Three plays later, with 0:08 left in the contest, kicker Chris Cassara nailed a 28-yard field goal which gave [illegible] a 17-14 win and moved them to 1-2 in the YanCon and dropped the Minutemen to 2-4, 2-2 in the conference.

"Five or six plays decides a game, but no one knows which five or six," said URI coach Bob Griffin, whose team improved to 3-2 overall.

If you came to the game a couple minutes late, you missed most of the first half scoring. Rhode Island's Chris Pierce took the opening kickoff and ran it 98 yards for a touchdown. Ironically, the kick was Jim Maguire's deepest of the season. Cassara's extra point was no good and URI's lead was 6-0.

UMass fullback Mike George tied the game with a five-yard touchdown plunge that capped a three-play, 33-yard drive, and Maguire untied it with the extra point, 7-6.

It looked as if this was going to be one of those 38-36 shootouts that URI had been in the previous week against Brown, but both defenses tightened up.

Toward the end of the first quarter, UMass linebacker Gregg Mattern recovered a Sean Donovan fumble at the UMass 12-yard line, ending a Rhode Island drive which was threatening to put the Rams in the lead.

Don Caparotti (2 interceptions) picked off a Holland pass with under three minutes remaining in the half and returned it nine yards to the URI 30-yard line. Six plays later, Jerome Bledsoe on a halfback-option pass threw a four yard TD pass to Eric Thimas.

On the first possession of the third quarter, the Minutemen marched down to the URI 2-yard line where they had first-and-goal-to-go.

Quarterback Tony Williams then fumbled the football trying to pitch it to Bledsoe.

"I tried to stay tight, and I was just about to pitch it and I fumbled," Williams said. "I'm still making mistakes at the wrong time."

Bledsoe, who rushed for 100 yards, (his fifth straight 100-yard rushing game) said, "No one was on me when he pitched it. I'm upset, we should have won that game, there's no reason why we didn't win."

"He's [Williams'] got to realize that if you don't make it in, you have three more chances," said UMass coach Jim Reid.

In the fourth quarter, Holland hit Rizzi at the UMass one-yard line on a 34-yard completion which set up Highsmith's one-yard TD run. Holland then lofted a pass into the corner of the end zone which Rizzi hauled in for the two-point conversion, tying the game at 14-14.

The game looked like it would go to overtime, as both teams' defense was unbending, but then URI began their final drive and Cassara booted a 28-yard field goal that gave URI a 17-14 win.

Collegian file photo

The University of Massachusetts football team dominated Saturday's homecoming game against Yankee Conference rival Rhode Island, but still suffered a 17-14 upset loss.

To give you an idea of what kind of defensive struggle it was, Maguire and Cassara each punted nine times and URI was held to just 262 total yards, while the Minutemen managed 315.

The Minutemen had nine more first downs, URI converted only 1-11 third downs. The Minutemen ran 21 more plays on offense and controled the ball 9:16 more than URI.

"I haven't been in a football game as lopsided as this one," Reid said. "You can't fumble snaps from center, you can't allow special teams' touchdowns and you can't fumble at the one-yard line."

Madness breeds high hopes.

Forget the Boys of Summer, disregard quarterback statistics for the moment and lend an ear to some of the predictions made outside of Curry Hicks Cage last night, as UMass hoop fans cued up as early as 8 p.m. to catch a midnight glimpse of the 1991-92 edition of Coach Jim Calipari's Minutemen.

"They'll make the NCAA's," promised Freshman Jim Lajoie, who held the honor of being the first in line to see last night's Midnight Madness.

"I think they'll win the division (Atlantic Ten), and they'll make the NCAA's unless there's some injuries," said Junior Matt Pavo, who passed the moments before The Cage's doors opened by tossing a football with some of his fellow Minutemaniacs.

So went the prophesies of diehard basketball fans as they awaited what is quickly becoming a UMass tradition, the first official practice of the basketball season, a night of giveaways, promotions and anticipation — Midnight Madness.

The first swarm of fans entered The Cage at 8:45 and were given team photo posters picturing this year's team in the still under construction Mullins Sports Complex, with a caption reading "Building for the Future."

The future is exactly what most of the fans were looking to last night with visions of Willie Herndon dunks in their heads.

"The Sweet 16 (of the NCAA tournament) isn't out of the question," said one of the founding members of the "Will Herndon Fan Club," Senior Derek Hayden whose face was painted red and white.

William and Betty Lord of Sunderland have been following the team for over 30 years and were elated to be attending their first Midnight Madness.

"For a while I didn't think I was going to live long enough to see a winning season," laughed William.

Minutes before entering The Cage, Juniors Sherri Zoltek and Laura Rosenbaum argued over their favorite players on the team, yet found common ground in the form of UMass rival, Temple University.

"They're gonna take the Atlantic Ten and Beat Temple," said Rosenbaum as Zoltek nodded approvingly.

Minutewomen suffer tough loss

Despite pressure, offense stalls against Hartford

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

Although dominating play, the University of Massachusetts women's soccer team dropped their second contest of the season Sunday to the University of Hartford, 2-1.

The Minutewomen (8-2) continually came up short in the offensive end while Hartford (9-4) was able to take advantage of every opportunity that UMass presented them.

The game-winner for the Hawks came as a result of a Minutewomen mental lapse. With only 5:55 left in regulation and Hartford holding a 1-0 lead, UMass' Michele Woodside and Holly Hellmuth broke down the right flank on a two-on-one. Woodside attacked a Hartford defender and sent the ball up to Hellmuth, who immediately crossed it to the center. Polly Hackathorn was able to head the cross into the net and the game was tied.

As play started up again, Hartford's Rose Daley took the ball from the midfield line and drove straight up the field. Paula Wilkens and Heidi Kocher charged up on her but allowed Daley to go right between them. Daley then faked-out Lisa Mickelson to go in alone on UMass goalie Briana Scurry. One move later and the game winner was behind Scurry, only 15 seconds after Hackathorn had tied it.

"It was just an unfortunate mental breakdown," UMass coach Jim Rudy said. "We lined up not focused, still celebrating. I think Daley was surprised as hell to be able to get that much room, we allowed her to run through the defense as both Kocher and Wilkens thought the other one had her."

The Minutewomen were able to mount one last surge and almost put one in with two minutes remaining in regulation. Barbara Verdoliva won a loose ball in the penalty mouth and fired a drive to the top right corner, which hit where the goal post and the cross bar meet. The ball bounced straight up in the air landing about five yards in front of the left goal post, it eluded Hackathorn and sprung back towards the net only to hit the cross bar again.

"It was just one of those days," Rudy said. "We hit three posts and just couldn't catch a break. Though we shouldn't have been struggling to get a goal with two minutes left, if we had taken advantage of our opportunities."

The Minutewomen were able to control the ball and the flow of the game nearly the whole way. They had nine corners to Hartford's one and outshot the Hawks 14-10.

"We carried the play the whole way," Rudy said. "Their only attacks were on counter attacks. I guess when you are the weaker team you do more defending and then look for a break. Since their front people are dangerous that can work for them. Their key players got greater results then our key players."

The Minutewomen will look to rebound on Wednesday as they travel to Harvard.

Men's soccer splits weekend

Minutemen topple West Virginia, fall to GWU

By LILLIAN K. LEGGIO
Collegian Correspondent

It was a dirty and grinding weekend for the University of Massachusetts men's soccer team as they split two physically exhausting games in less than ideal field conditions.

Despite getting only a split, a 4-2 win against the University of West Virginia and a 1-0 overtime loss to George Washington University, the Minutemen (6-2-3) improved their Atlantic-10 Conference record to 3-1-1.

Amidst Friday's drizzling rain and cold wind, UMass and West Virginia battled the elements and each other in an intense and physical game that seemed more like a fight for a championship than a slot in the playoffs.

"These conference games are becoming more crucial as the season winds down," said West Virginia coach John McGrath.

West Virginia opened the scoring at 17:51 when Mark Reilly put a header in the net off a free kick. UMass answered back as Todd Kylish made a crisp pass to Shawn Bleau to make it 1-1.

The Mountaineers then regained the lead when Leon Barnes booted one past UMass goalie Jonathan Gruber. Once again, the persistent Minutemen retaliated a few minutes later as Justin Edelman scored, assisted by Kylish and Brett Anthony.

"We came from behind twice and kept on fighting," said UMass coach Sam Koch.

UMass continued to wear West Virginia down and for the first time in the game took the lead at 66:15 as Justin Edelman scored his second goal of the game assisted by Randy Jacobs.

West Virginia then sealed its own fate by giving UMass a penalty kick on which Todd Kylish promptly converted.

Unlike the match against West Virginia, Sunday's game was not dominated by UMass. George Washington University spent much of the game on offense and in UMass territory, compiling 27 shots on goal.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 11

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THE LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND

VOLUME CI ISSUE 31 WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 16, 1991

Thomas confirmed by slim 52-48 margin

by JAMES ROWLEY
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Clarence Thomas won Senate confirmation for the Supreme Court Tuesday night on a 52-48 vote, overcoming explosive accusations of sexual harassment to become the second black justice in history.

AP photo

Women protest the nomination of Clarence Thomas on the steps of the U.S. Capitol Tuesday.

With crucial help from Southern Democrats, Thomas will take his seat as the 106th justice, a staunchly conservative successor to one of the court's last liberals.

The vote ended one of the angriest, most emotionally charged confirmation battles ever.

Thomas said he wanted to put the ordeal behind him.

"This is more a time for healing, not a time for anger or for animus or animosity" Thomas said, standing outside his house with his wife, Virginia, under an umbrella in the rain.

"I guess in so many ways, as I've said to my wife so many times, I'd like to thank America," said Thomas, who rose from rural poverty in Georgia to prominence in government.

Thomas had been accused by law professor Anita Hill of making unwanted advances and humiliating her with lewd remarks a decade ago when she worked at the Education Department and Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. Her surprise charges brought an abrupt halt to the Senate's plans to vote on Thomas' nomination a week ago.

Thomas emphatically denied the charges and complained he was the victim of a "high-tech lynching." The nation was transfixed as the accusations were spelled out in explicit detail and debated in nationally televised hearings.

In Oklahoma, Hill said she was satisfied she had been "able to go out and tell what I knew to be true." She also said that she was pleased that national awareness of sexual harassment had been raised.

"What I hope is that none of this will deter others from coming forward. This is an important issue and the dialogue will not stop here," she said.

Immediately after the vote, President Bush called Thomas with congratulations. Thomas had watched the vote on television at home.

"You're a wonderful inspiration and you had the overwhelming support of the American people," Bush said, according to press secretary Marlin Fitzwater. "You have a lifetime of service to your country ahead. Well done."

Barbara Bush also got on the phone to congratulate Thomas.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 4

AP photo

Demonstrators on Capitol Hill yell toward the Russell Senate Office Building in support of Supreme Court nominee Clarence Thomas Tuesday as the Senate debated Thomas' nomination.

State agency sees increase in complaints

By JOHN MARCUS
Associated Press

BOSTON — The debate on whether Clarence Thomas should be named to the supreme court has closed, but officials say a floodgate of complaints alleging sexual harassment has opened.

"The silver lining to what everybody agrees is a very, very ugly affair is that there will be increased awareness in workplaces all across the commonwealth," Michael T. Duffy, chairman of the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination, said Tuesday.

The MCAD has been getting as many as 50 inquiries a day from women since charges were first leveled that Thomas sexually harassed Anita Hill

CONTINUED ON PAGE 4

Harassment declines at UMass

By JASON GEORGE
Collegian Staff

While the allegations of sexual harassment against Supreme Court nominee Clarence Thomas have brought that issue into public focus, surveys indicate a declining trend of harassment of students by faculty and staff occurring at the University of Massachusetts.

However, the same reports also indicate that sexual harassment by students of other students rose during the last decade.

According to a Project Pulse report issued by the Student Affairs Research and Evaluation Office in 1989, a series of surveys conducted in 1983, 1986 and 1989 indicated a decline in nine out of 10 different categories of sexual harassment of students by faculty and staff.

Between 1983 and 1989, the percentage of respondents to the Project Pulse survey saying they had experienced sexual harassment from faculty and staff fell from 25 percent to 12 percent.

However, between 1986 and 1989, the percentage of respondents indicating they had ever experienced sexual harassment by other students rose from 52 to 57 percent. The three surveys were conducted through interviews of 202, 347 and 301 women respectively.

The categories that respondents were asked about included negative remarks, presentation of demeaning images, sexual favors and sexual advances.

A 1988 report on the Status and Education of Women issued by the Association of American Colleges named several examples of student sexual harassment, including groups of men discussing women's sexual attributes at meals and thereby forcing women to avoid the cafeteria.

The report describes varying levels of sexual harassment ranging from "so-called 'teasing,' sexual innuendos, and bullying of a sexist nature, both physical and verbal. At the other end of the scale is explicit sexual harassment up to and including sexual aggression."

The University established a sexual harassment policy and grievance procedure in the fall of 1982, along the lines of the national sexual harassment guidelines put forth by the Equal Opportunity Employment Commission in November 1980.

Following this, between 1983 and 1986 the University embarked on an educational campaign conducted by the Office of Human Relations, the Ombuds Office and the Everywoman's Center, centering upon sexual harassment workshops in all administrative units and in one-third of the University's academic departments.

GEO and administration renegotiate

Both seek compromise to end 10-month contract dispute

By DAVID MASSEY
Collegian Staff

Negotiating teams from the Graduate Employee Organization and the University of Massachusetts administration discussed the major issues concerning GEO's contract conflict last Friday but did not finalize anything, sources said yesterday.

Both sides also planned another session next Monday to try to create a compromise and end the 10-month dispute regarding the GEO's first union contract. The organization represents teaching assistants, research assistants, interns and students with fellowships.

"The urgency of our issues has been made pretty clear," said Emily Isaacs, co-speaker of the GEO/District 65/United Auto Workers. "I think I'm a little more hopeful."

Members of the administration and GEO negotiating teams could not relate specifics on the content of negotiations at the three-hour meeting because of a mutual agreement.

Seymour Berger, a member of the administration team, said the meeting was "a very positive effort" even though no concrete agreement was created.

Berger could not guarantee a peaceful ending to the dispute and was unsure of the final outcome.

"It was a positive meeting and we hope we will be able to reach some sort of agreement but the truth is — who knows?" he said.

Some GEO members have expressed the desire to strike if no acceptable contract is offered to the organization.

Isaacs said she wanted to finalize a contract by the end of the semester. "I'd like to finish," she said.

Both sides said Chancellor Richard O'Brien's statement last week which expressed his option of hiring replacements for graduate employees if they do decide to strike did not affect the meeting in any way.

"We felt it wasn't a matter to be discussed in negotiations," Isaacs said.

Berger also said the statement didn't come up at the meeting. "There really wan't any discussion of that as I can recall," Berger said.

Isaacs said some onlookers, primarily undergraduates, are confused on the issues, especially job security, which is one of the four major demands GEO wants on their contract. She explained the union wants to be treated equally in terms of layoffs.

"The numbers show that we've lost people disproportionately and that's what we're starting to fight," Isaacs said. "We want parity — to be treated like everyone else."

Isaacs said the demands the union wants are the same other unions at the University enjoy.

"All our demands come to getting what everybody else has," she said.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 4

Inside:

Page 3:
Smith College alumna Julia Child returns to Northampton, advises students to "learn how to cook."

Page 5:
Feel like UMass is closing in on you? Empathize with columnist Chris Petropoulos.

Page 10:
David Scott mixes Senate hearings and Red Sox woes.

Weather

You might find your umbrella kind of useless when the rain lets up this afternoon. Temps around 55 degrees.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THE LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is a Registered Student Organization of the University of Massachusetts, published each weekday during the calendar year with a circulation of 19,000.

113 CAMPUS CENTER AMHERST, MA 01003
Phone (413) 545-3500 FAX (413) 545-1592

STAFF

Editor in Chief ..... Gayle Long
Managing Editor ..... Marc Elliott
Editorial Editor ..... Greg Sukiennik
News Editor ..... Preston P. Forman
Sports Editor ..... Tamir Lipton
Arts Editor ..... Paul DeGeorges
Photography Editor ..... Carrie Wyeth
Black Affairs Editor ..... Sondra Sutton
Women's Issues Editor ..... Jessame Hannus
Jewish Affairs ..... Felice Cohen, Debra Kriegsman
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... Alexander Nguyen
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Madanmohan Rao
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Trystan Skeigh
Business Manager ..... Randee Pastel
Advertising Manager ..... Dena Haselkorn
Finance Manager ..... Jeff Weiner
Circulation Manager ..... Jim Winterbottom
Subscriptions Manager ..... Stacy Rogers
Promotions Manager ..... Scott Macey
Production Manager ..... Terry Starmer
Day Graphics Manager ..... Jenn Burns

PROFESSIONAL STAFF

Business ..... Brian Harrington, Lori Black, Maureen Majerowski
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

For Your Information

Wednesday, October 16

Fair — A Volunteer Fair will be held in the Newman Center Cafeteria from 10:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Note — Monday class schedule will be followed at the University due to Columbus Day.

Lecture — "NATO in the Changing World Order" will be discussed by Erika Bruce, Director of Information and Press, NATO. Sponsored by the International Relations Program, SWAC, and the Five College European Club, the lecture will be held in the South College Browsing Room at 7:30. Admission is free.

Dance — Israeli Folk Dancing — come learn to dance at the Hillel House, downstairs at 7:30 p.m.

Lecture — "After the Persian Gulf War: Prospects for Peace in the Middle East" will be discussed by Barry Rubin, specialist on the Middle East. Sponsored by the Five College Peace and World Security Studies Program, PAWSS fall lecture series, the lecture will be held at the AC Converse Assembly Room at 8:00 p.m. Admission is free.

Movie — "Robin Hood" will be shown in the Campus Center Auditorium sponsored by the Asian American Student Association. It will be shown at 5:00 p.m., 7:30 p.m., and 10:00 p.m. Admission is $2.00 at 5:00 p.m. and $3.00 at all others.

Meeting — A Senate Meeting will be held in Campus Center room 163C from 7:00 p.m. to 1:00 a.m.

Lecture — "First Hand Report from a Summer's Visit to Israel, the West Bank and Iraq" will be discussed by John Schuchardt, a leading member of the Veteran's Peace Action Team. It will be held at 7:30 p.m. in the Stoddard Auditorium at Smith College.

Meeting — The volunteer meeting of the Residential Recycling Program will be held at 6:30 p.m. in the Campus Center Room 902.

Thursday, October 17

Slide Show — The Robert Head Slide Show sponsered by the Student Union Art Gallery will be shown in Campus Center Room 162-75 from 3:30 p.m. to 5:00 p.m.

Lecture — "Soil, Water, and Civilization Lecture Series: the Role of Humanity on the Divine Earth: Mythological, Theological, and Linguistic Perceptions will be discussed with David Hillel. It will be held in Campus Center Room 162 at 8:00 p.m. Admission is free.

Meeting — The Chris Hani Coalition is holding its first open meeting in Room 311 of the New Africa House at 7:30 p.m.

Panel cites discrimination

By LISA HOLEWA
Associated Press

Milwaukee police officers sometimes mistreat minorities and should get better sensitivity training, a commission studying the department's handling of the Jeffrey Dahmer murder case said today.

The commission said it had found instances in which Milwaukee police had discriminated against minorities by selectively enforcing laws, mistreating minorities and sometimes dismissing residents' complaints.

"Many witnesses perceive that they or their groups are singled out routinely for mistreatment and selective enforcement. That these perceptions bare considerable truth and reality seems beyond question," said the Rev. Albert DiUlio, Marquette University president and commission chairman.

MULTICULTURAL AFFAIRS EDITOR
POSITION AVAILABLE

* Covering MultiCultural Issues and
* Outreaching to the Alana. (Asian, Latino, African and Native American) communities

• Some news experience helpful
• Requires one news story each week, and editing a full page every two weeks.

Apply at the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass Amherst, Ma 01003 or call 545-3500.
Ask for Marc Elliott. The Collegian is an E.O.E.

家酒園南湖 Hunan Garden Restaurant
MANDARIN/SZECHUEN CUISINE
The Best Chinese Buffet
MANDARIN/SZECHUAN CUISINE
10 Belchertown Rd. • Route 9 Amherst • 256-0251/0252
WE DELIVER IN AMHERST 5-9:30
EVERYDAY
Minimum $15 plus $2 delivery charge
NEW BUFFET & SUNDAY BRUNCH
Buffet Served Saturday 5-9p.m.
Buffet served 5-8 p.m. Sun.-Thurs.
Brunch served Sunday 11:30 a.m.-3 p.m.
ALL YOU CAN EAT $5.99

LONDON
ROUND TRIP FROM $350
From NEW YORK
round trips starting at
LONDON $350
LENINGRAD $610
CARACAS $410
GUTEMALA C. $390
BANGKOK $939
LOS ANGELES-
AUCKLAND $699
Taxes & surcharges not included. Fares subject to change.
Council Travel
79 So. Pleasent Street, Amherst, MA 01002
(413)256-1261

Some of the biggest, some of the best presents come in the smallest boxes!
silverscape designs

AMHERST CINEMA
Now Playing
LATE FOR DINNER
Showtimes:
Fri. - Sun.
7pm & 9pm
Mon-Thurs.
One show at 7:30pm
Adults $4.00
Student w/valid I.D. $3.00

RÉSUMÉS
CopyCat Print Shop
• Great Service • Great Prices
228 Triangle St./Amherst 549-3840

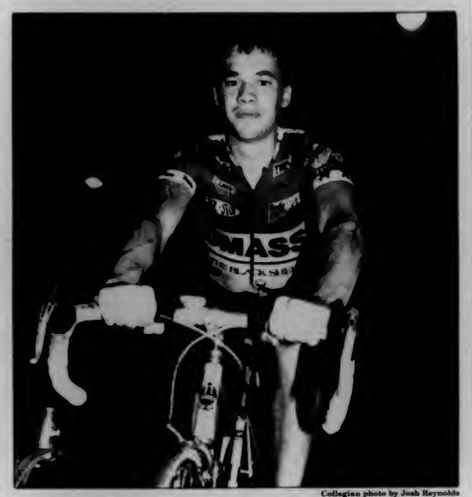
Rent One of Ours
Weekend Auto Rental Special
Weekend rate applies noon Friday to Monday morning
Rates start as low as $49.95
Must be 21 years of age or older with major credit card.
Trucks and cargo vans also available
Don't be disappointed - reserve TODAY!
North Amherst Motors Auto & Truck Rental
78 Old Sunderland Rd., North Amherst, MA
549-RENT (549-7368)
On Bus Route

TJ's Sports Bar & Restaurant
One Bridge Street, Northampton Massachusetts
413 - 586 - 1726
PRESENTS:
'KARAOKE'
LIVE ENTERTAINMENT
Laser - Video - Sing - A - Long
October 9 - 16 - 23 - 30
WEDNESDAY
It's Fun!
It's Exciting!
New Concept!
Fabulous Prizes!
First in New England!
8:30 pm till 1:00 am

Halloween Headquarters
GREASE PAINTS • HANDS • FEET • WITCHES' HATS & BROOMS • WIGS • MOUSTACHES • BEARDS • NOSES • FANGS • TEETH • TOOTH BLACK-OUT
NORTHAMPTON HALLOWEEN CENTER
25 State Street • 584-5006
10 Minutes From UMass
LARGE ASSORTMENT OF MASKS TO CHOOSE FROM
Call for extended Haloween hours
H.L. CHILDS & SON
Open Daily and Saturday 9:00am-5:15pm, Thursdays 'til 8:00pm
Check Our LOW Prices

THE FIVE COLLEGE PROGRAM IN PEACE & WORLD SECURITY STUDIES
presents:
"AFTER THE PERSIAN GULF WAR: PROSPECTS FOR PEACE IN THE MIDDLE EAST"
A lecture by:
BARRY RUBIN,
Specialist on the Middle East
Wednesday, October 16th, 8:00 PM
Converse Hall, Amherst College
This event is free, open to the public, and wheelchair accessible.
For more information call PAWSS at 549-4600, ext. 519

Local



Collegian photo by Josh Reynolds

GEARED UP — Gregory Putnam, senior English major and member of the bicycling team, demonstrates his sport on the Campus Center concourse.

Contest gives students investment experience

By SHANNON FESPERMAN
Collegian Correspondent

It's time for the AT&T Collegiate Investment Challenge, the annual contest that allows college students to test their knowledge of the stock market against that of their peers all over the country.

Beginning on November 1, players are given a fictitious $500,000 brokerage account, that they turn into as large a portfolio as they can by February 28, when the contest ends. The student that has accumulated the most money wins $25,000 and a trip for two to the Bahamas. The current standings of players are published every week in USA Today.

Lisa Nollet, a spokesperson for AT&T, who has sponsored the contest for the past four years, said that about 20,000 college students from all over the country play the game each year.

"About 75-80 percent of the people that play are business students," said Nollet, "but they're not all finance majors. When we look at the top 200, we always see a big cross section between things like accounting, management, and marketing. We also have a lot of engineering students."

"I'd like to see more women get involved. In the past we've seen that females have only made up about 20 percent of the contestants," Nollet said.

Last year's winner was among that 20 percent minority. Doris Ann Wart, then a senator at Louisiana State University, finished with a $1.4 million portfolio.

According to Nollet, the top finishers are usually those students who have tripled or quadrupled their initial investment.

"How high the portfolios get really depends on the market environment. For instance, last year we had 52 student 'millionaires', but only 11 the year before," she said.

Nollet said that AT&T sponsors the contest because they recognize college students as the "future decision makers of America, and as possible future AT&T customers".

"Also, it's an educational event. You don't have to know a lot about the stock market to play, and it's a great opportunity to learn," she said.

Nollet added that AT&T had been "very pleased" with the level of participation by University of Massachusetts students in the past.

Jeffrey Finger, president of the Finance Investment Club and a third year veteran of the game, said that 117 UMass students competed in the Investment Challenge last year, and he expects aobut the same amount this time around.

"I think it attracts people because it gives the opportunity to be on the same level as the big shots. You can compare how you do to them, and to other college students around the country," Finger said.

Any student interested in playing the Collegiate Investment Challenge can call 1-800-545-1970 by October 31.

Famous chef in Northampton

Julia Child tells students, "Learn how to cook"

By ELIZABETH BUTTS
Collegian Staff

On her television show, "The French Chef," Julia Child once was showing viewers how to carve a roasted chicken. While adjusting the chicken's position, Child dropped it on the floor, in front of viewers. Unfazed, she picked it back up and continued.

"Your guests will never know," she said.

It is in part due to this humorous and practical viewpoint that Child, a distinguished French chef, is known. She started her cooking show in the seventies and has been an American institution ever since.

"If you are interested in something, you want to do it well," said Child, in reference to the amount of time she devotes to cooking and the other activities in her life.

Julia Child was at The Depot Restaurant in Northampton last night, along with seven other authors of cookbooks: Jane and Michael Stern, Deborah Krasner, Michele Scicolone, Johanne Killeen and George Germon, and Janeen Sarlin. The cooks were there to sign their new cookbooks and give a taste of their recipes.

Local restaurants donated food and staff to prepare the recipes. The event was a fundraiser for the Hampshire Community United Way.

"Food is one of America's simple and most pleasurable occupations," said Child, whose latest work is entitled The Way to Cook.

"Learn how to cook," said Child when asked if she had any advice for students cooking on a budget.

"People practice their tennis backhand seriously," she said. "Cook for yourself. Take it seriously. It is something so fundamental."

"Put out something good no matter what you spent on it; a dish of beans, for example," said Child.

Child said that when she was a student, cooking wasn't a profession one went into.

She graduated from Smith College in 1934. She said that going to Smith did not help her in her profession, "but it gave me a good education."

Child also said that as she began her career through home cooking and writing cookbooks, she had "no trouble" as a woman going into a predominantly male occupation.

"There are more women going into the profession now," she said.

Child is currently 79 years old, and has published 8 cookbooks.

Collegian photo by Josh Reynolds

Julia Child looks over the shoulder of Eric Leidberg, employee of The Depot in Northampton.

Thoreau resident reports assault by his roommate

Compiled by DAVID MASSEY
Collegian Staff

A man reported to the University of Massachusetts police Thursday evening that he became involved in an argument in Thoreau Residence Hall between himself and his roommate. The man said his roommate then assaulted him.

Police reports say he will seek criminal complaints in court.

• A woman reported to the police on Saturday morning that she was assaulted in a domestic dispute. Police had a restraining order issued to the alleged assailant by a judge.

• Staff at the Franklin Dining Commons reported Saturday afternoon two glass panels which were broken. Police say damage to the windows, which have an approximate value of $600, may have been caused by a BB gun.

• Police investigated an intoxicated 30 year old male who appeared to be indecently exposing himself on Saturday night near the Service Desk in the Campus Center. Police will seek a hearing in court.

Toxic fumes in Boston University dorm necessitate mass student evacuation

BOSTON (AP) — Workers tested the air in Boston University's largest dormitory Tuesday after about 1,500 students were forced out of the building because of toxic fumes.

Fire officials said they found potentially explosive fume levels from a chemical product being used to seal the concrete floors in a three-story, lower-level garage. No serious injuries were reported.

Kevin Carleton, a BU spokesman, said school officials met with contractors Tuesday "to find out what went wrong." Meanwhile, school officials made arrangements for students to spend a second night away from the dormitory.

The school hired a firm to take air samples Tuesday morning and was awaiting the results before deciding whether it was safe to let students return. Most students spent Monday night in the school's student union, while others went to the rooms of their friends.

Two students who went to the infirmary were sent to Beth Israel Hospital and later released, a university spokesman said. Another student was also sent to the hospital after complaining of dizziness, and was later released.

Carleton said it its not uncommon for the sealant to be used in buildings that are occupied, and normally there are not any problems.

Boston Deputy Fire Chief Paul Callaghan said the sealant containing the hydrocarbon toluene was both "a health hazard and a fire hazard." He refused to allow students to re-enter the building, even to retrieve belongings.

Work on the garage, which is used for faculty and staff parking, had begun Thursday, but Callaghan declined to say if safety violations had occurred. He said the contractor had indicated proper permits had been obtained.

Dormitory resident reported smelling fumes over the weekend, but several said the smell intensified Monday evening and reached to the 18th floor of the dormitory's three towers.

The deputy chief of BU's police, Anne Verge, said police had not had any complaints before Monday night.

■ Thomas confirmed

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

Thomas won confirmation with support from 41 of the Senate's 43 Republicans and 11 Democrats: Sens. Sam Nunn, Wyche Fowler, Charles Robb, J. James Exon, Alan Dixon, Richard Shelby, John Breaux, J. Bennett Johnston, David Boren and Ernest Hollings.

Sens. James Jeffords and Mark Hatfield cast the only republican votes against him.

It was the closets vote for a successful Supreme Court nominee since 1888, when Lucius Q. Lamar went onto the bench on a 33-28 vote.

Three Democrats who had supported Thomas before Hill's charges were made public switched sides and voted against him: Harry Reid and Richard Bryan, both of Nevada, and Joseph Lieberman of Nevada.

With the outcome in doubt until the final hours, Vice President Dan Quayle rushed back from a political trip to Ohio to sit as the presiding officer and cast a tie-breaking vote if necessary.

AP photo

BACK AT WORK — Oklahoma law professor Anita Hill is escorted to class Tuesday by a University of Oklahoma Security official. Ms. Hill returned to Oklahoma Monday after giving testimony to the Senate Judiciary Committee on Supreme Court nominee Clarence Thomas.

■ harassment

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

when she worked for him at the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

Business groups and legal associations have also say the allegations leveled so publicly by Hill have emboldened women to lodge protests over sexual harassment.

"In 10 days we've taken in more sexual harassment calls from very angry women than we have over the last several years," said Elliot Sklar, vice-president of Creative Services Inc. of Mansfield, which runs a 24-hour confidential employees hotline for client companies.

"Based on the sense of the calls we've taken, a lot of the women have been subjected to [harassment] for some time," Sklar said. "Now, with this exposure, they understand they have some recourse."

In response to interest in the issue, the Boston Bar Association now plans two workshops on sexual harassment, one for the general public and a second for lawyers.

The Boston and Massachusetts bar associations both reported an increase in calls from women looking for attorneys specializing in employment law.

"This additional attention will make the issue known up and down all levels of management and rank and file," said Katherine Hesse, chairwoman of the Boston Bar Association's labor and employment law section.

The MCAD, which ruled on 48 sexual harassment cases in all of 1990, has decided 67 cases in the first nine months of the year, records show. There are nearly 300 cases pending.

"The phones have been ringing off the hook," said Duffy.

Ellen Convisser, chairwoman of the National Organization for Women Massachusetts chapter, said: "When these things are brought out of the closet, they can't be stuck back in."

■ negotiations

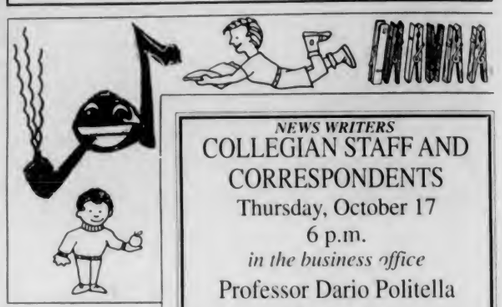
CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

Isaacs also said that negotiating is no simple task.

"Part of it is arguing but part of it is trying to convince them," Isaacs said. "There is a fair amount of rhetorical persuasion inside those sessions."

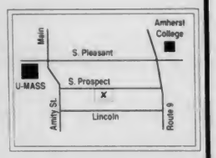
Berger said the key to a succesful outcome is compromise.

"It's a complicated situation. They [GEO] have needs and we [the administration] have our limits. We just have to see what kind of compromise we can reach."



NEWS WRITERS
COLLEGIAN STAFF AND CORRESPONDENTS
Thursday, October 17
6 p.m.
in the business office
Professor Dario Politella
Lectures on
"Writing as a K.I.S.S."
Counts toward staff status

STEINBECK COLLISION REPAIR & AUTOBODY
53 So. Prospect -Amherst Center
256-8157 • 256-1385



- Imports & other unibody vehicles are our specialty.
- State of the art equipment for precision frame and unibody straightening (+or-1/2 mm)
- Over 90 years staff experience.
- Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass replacement.
- Advanced European Technology Painting and Refinishing Systems.

Remember it's your car and your choice of repair facilities.

Shop Registration # RS1212

THE TEXTBOOK ANNEX IS OPEN YEAR ROUND BUT TO MAKE SURE YOU GET THE BOOKS YOU NEED FOR THIS SEMESTER
BUY THEM NOW
We are beginning to return unsold books to the publisher on Friday, October 25th.

University Store's
TEXTBOOK ANNEX
Monday-Friday
9:00 am-4:00 pm
545-3570
WE NOW ACCEPT VISA AND MASTERCARD

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions on this page are those of the individual writer or cartoonist, and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian or the University unless otherwise noted.

Menacing buildings are a sign of menacing bureaucracy

In my world, the day to day joke I call my existence, there are many nightmares. There is the one about all my stereotypes coming true (incarnated by the philosophy majors asking, "Would you like fries with that?"). There is the sense of vertigo, there are the young, firm, supple, deceiving little bitches who only pretend to fall in love with me, and there is the constant threat of drinking myself into oblivion. But the most frightening, most insidious, is what I want to warn you about. This campus is trying to eat me.

I've tried to explain it before. I've tried to explain it in calm measured tones and in sputtering rants. People have always said that I am paranoid and perhaps a bit around the bend. But it's true and I'm sure it can't just be me. All of you, beware, UMass is hungry.

Almost every day I have to walk between the two wings of Morrill, sometimes more than once. Countless others of you must take the same path. I always hurry through there, sweating and nervous. The twin, mammoth brick walls and the steaming manholes together make it one place on campus where it seems so clear. I swear to you that those walls are closer together now than they were last year. Some days they seem closer than even the day before, sometimes farther apart. But definitely closer, on the whole, than last fall or spring. That entire area is just one big salivating maw, quivering back and forth each day, anticipating our tasty demise.

There are other places where the desire of this campus to smother us and cover us in brick or concrete is vividly represented. Bricks hurtle from the Tower library, right? Have you ever walked through the parking garage or in the shadows of the Southwest towers? Ever feel tired there, like you ought to lie down on the cool, hard cement and just forget your troubles, just give up and let the University take care of you?

Chris J. Petropoulos

Ever try to get anything done with any campus bureaucracy which the hungry buildings are manifestations of?

Coming back from work one morning at 3:30, I went to where I was supposed to go: E Lot. The whole place was full. There simply were no spots left. So I drove to the lot designated 49 behind Orchard Hill. It was half empty. So I parked there. Later, I tried to protest the ticket I got. My conversation went something like this:

"...but there were no spots in E Lot."

"I'm sorry. You will have to pay us."

"But isn't it silly? That parking lot behind Orchard Hill is always only half full!"

"There's nothing you can do. Just pay us."

"Do you consider yourself a mindless bureaucrat?"

"Excuse me?"

"Or are you just mindless, or just a bureaucrat? Tell me. I want to know."

Health Services is another example. All they care about is whether or not we are having sex. The buildings are trying to crush us. The various paper factories are trying to dehumanize us. Campus politics and lame interest groups are trying to make us all equal by making us all victims. Whitmore wants us to be good little student ID numbers and Health Services wants to know the frequency of our orgasms. I decided to try this tactic with the parking office.

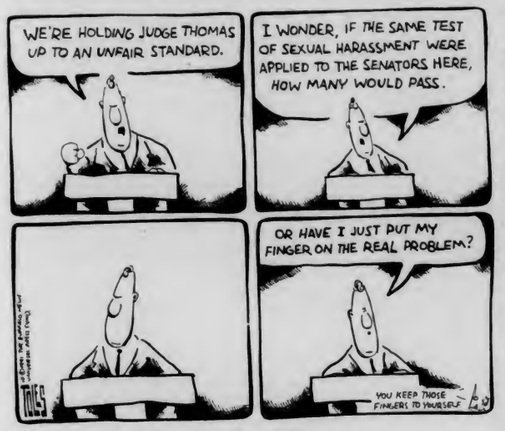
"...or are you just a #@$(*&! mindless paper-pushing useless bureaucratic sack of flesh?"

I hung up then and laughed with myself for quite some time.

The University is very sick, perhaps even on its death bed. In its agony, it's trying to worsen our lives as much as possible or at least my life. But I think I've found myself a solution. I've assembled a UMass student's survival kit.

To find out what's in it, however, you'll have to read next week.

Chris J. Petropoulos is a UMass student



WE'RE HOLDING JUDGE THOMAS UP TO AN UNFAIR STANDARD.
I WONDER, IF THE SAME TEST OF SEXUAL HARASSMENT WERE APPLIED TO THE SENATORS HERE, HOW MANY WOULD PASS.
OR HAVE I JUST PUT MY FINGER ON THE REAL PROBLEM?
YOU KEEP THOSE FINGERS TO YOURSELF

Open letter to Clarence Thomas

Dear Clarence:

First of all, I was never quite certain about where I stood on your nomination. In the end, I am left bewildered, disturbed and appalled by the political and personal charges leveled against you.

The political charges upset me. Your lack of a realistic opinion on the subject of abortion continues to disturb me. Your past decisions and arguments have been shown to be extremely hostile to affirmative action, supporting a Bush/Reagan/Ayn Rand theory of lifting one's self up by the bootstraps. This suggestion, that the oppressed can change the path of their lives by working hard and thinking positively, denies and refuses to consider hundreds of years of oppression and institutionalized violence.

I believe that the personal charges are completely unfair, for the most part. I heard your testimony of Oct. 11 and was as upset as you obviously were, as I heard about the reporters rummaging through your private life, your personal possessions, divorce proceedings, etc. for "dirt." This is unfair.

What you must realize, my friend, is that this happens constantly. It is not fair to anybody. It was not fair to accuse Gary Hart of being an inappropriate candidate for the presidency because he was unfaithful to his wife. It was unfair to Edmund Muskie and Thomas Eagleton to have their political careers ruined by vicious accusations against their personal characters.

The difference, you see, is between personal decisions that reflect a person's legislative or political biases. If it is true, Clarence, that you are guilty of sexual harassment, regardless of its extent or regularity, this reflects an opinion that women are less than human beings, and therefore can be mistreated and abused in a way to which men would not be subject. What does this charge suggest about your future judgements on cases regarding sexual harassment in the workplace? What does this reflect about your opinions regarding the rights of women in general? This is why the charge that Anita Hill has raised is such a serious charge.

And yes, it is a political attack, Clarence. I agree completely. I'm all for it, and at the same time, I am completely appalled. I am offended that your critics have to stoop to a personal attack in order to invalidate your nomination, when so much information regarding your judicial opinions and philosophy is available. It offends me that your sexual behavior is more of an issue than your judicial inexperience.

It is political, Clarence. The nomination of a Black man to replace the only Black man ever on the Supreme Court is political. Why were you not nominated in David Souter's place, if you are as qualified as the President claims? Your nomination is political, my friend, and your downfall is also political.

My only hope, Clarence, is that your suffering is able to end the childish name-calling and mud-slinging that has become a poor substitute for politics these days. This is an appalling trend, and you so rightly claim "It has got to stop." But also, Clarence, the politics of race, as exemplified by your nomination, the political posturing of George Bush, and the demonization of Willie Horton as a "dangerous black man" in the Presidential election — all these are just as dangerous, and have got to stop.

Thomas Vasquez
Hampshire College

Gordimer is a new leader

There are not many people today capable or willing to make a positive lasting impression on society. Knowing that a high school teacher would jeopardize her career by sleeping with a student and persuading him to murder her husband and that a man such as TV evangelist Jim Bakker, claiming to be sent down from God, could embezzle innocent people's money so his dog could have an air-conditioned house, it is hard to imagine that there is someone whose contribution to mankind is both progressive and uplifting.

Manejah Morad

Although throughout history there have been people qualified enough to be considered a leader, within the last decade or so there seems to be an emptiness or hunger for a new type of leadership. The perfect candidate to fill this vacant seat is the recently acknowledged 1991 Nobel Prize Winner for literature, the South African writer, Nadine Gordimer.

Gordimer, 67, is the first woman to receive the Nobel Prize in 25 years. With her novels, including Burger's Daughter and July's People as well as various short stories, Gordimer addresses the issues of apartheid in her home of South Africa. She has taken a stand and spoken through her literature, her seat among the members of the African National Congress, and her contributions to the foundation of the Congress of South African Writers.

I did not know much about Nadine Gordimer when I heard her speak in the Student Union Ballroom on Tuesday, Oct. 8, but her lecture was so moving I was immediately inspired by her words. Gordimer, with her dignified British accent, spoke about the importance of the relationship between politics and truth and how one is dependent on the other. She displays this "affair" in her writing.

Gordimer comments that despite government resistance in publishing certain pieces of literature it is impossible to "stop politics from entering in a novel if it enters in one's life."

Nadine Gordimer has gone to great lengths and risks to bring out the truth in South Africa by using her writing as a tool to spark a new sense of understanding in her readers.

I feel Newsweek best decribed Nadine Gordimer in an Oct. 14 issue, writing, "Her great achievement has been to give the world a reckoning of the terrible cost of racism in her country that goes beyond what journalism can relate."

What has inspired such a small, dignified woman to be so strong and forceful? How is it that among all the chaos within South Africa Gordimer is able to produce such a steady line of truth right up until the present day?

The answer to these quesitons comes from Newsweek, which said, "She has no illusions about the virtue of the oppressed, only the need to relieve the oppression."

It is true that Nadine Gordimer is a leader — a leader who has arrived in our society when it needs her the most. Unlike Pamela Smart and Jim Bakker, who claim to be educational and spiritual leaders, Nadine Gordimer moves mankind forward by clearing the paths of uncertainty in the realm of communication.

She does this by using the ability of a writer to inform and transforms it into a weapon against an unjust government. This unique quality makes her a leader not only in the anti-apartheid movement but in the literature movement as well, for it is in her literature where the actual truth is revealed. "Nothing is as true as my fiction," says Gordimer, and it is this truth that will encourage the awareness and destruction of racial discrimination in South Africa as well as the entire world.

Congratulations, Nadine Gordimer, on a reward highly deserved.

Manejah Morad is a UMass student

LBGA explains outing position

In its entire 21 year history at the University of Massachusetts, the Lesbian Bisexual Gay Alliance has never condoned the practice of "outing." We are deeply saddened and angered by the incident of outing that occurred last Spring semester. However, this act was a personal matter between individuals, and was not done under the auspices of the LBGA as an organization.

In connection with this incident, the LBGA held a community meeting last Spring semester in which we addressed the needs, both financial and emotional, of the outed individual. A member of the LBGA Steering Committee admitted involvement in the incident, and a majority vote of members present asked for and received that individual's resignation. It was also agreed by a majority vote that any persons found to be involved in this incident would be barred from election to the steering committee in subsequent semesters. A committee was formed at that time to provide support and counsel for the outed individual.

We, the members of the LBGA Steering Committee, are committed to creating and maintaining a safe and welcoming space for people to explore issues of sexual identity in an atmosphere of trust and respect. We have recently implemented structural changes in our constitution to make our organization more inclusive of various communities and interests. Copies of the new constitution are available in the LBGA office.

The LBGA cannot serve the needs of the lesbian, bisexual, gay, heterosexual ally community without feedback, both positive and negative. If you would like to see a change in the LBGA, please contact us directly so that we can address it.

Shawn Cotter,
LBGA Steering Committee
10 other students signed this letter

Nation

AP photo

THE GREAT PUMPKIN LIVES! — a sleepy tot takes a nap on a giant pumpkin Monday afternoon during the annual World Pumpkin Weigh-Off in Collins, N.Y. Collins resident Ray Waterman won the contest, as his entry weighed in at 780 pounds.

Nationwide, tuition rises

College Board reports 8-year high

By LEE MITGANG
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Fall tuitions at public colleges and universities climbed by double digits for the first time in eight years as higher education fell victim to state budget cuts, the College Board reported Tuesday.

Average in-state tuitions and fees at four-year public universities rose by 12 percent to $2,137, from $1,908 in 1990-91. Room and board charges increased by 6 percent to $3,351, bringing total average fixed charges at public institutions to $5,488.

This fall's increase marked the first double-digit jump in such rates since 1983-84, when the average also went up by 12 percent.

Tuitions and fees were up an even sharper 13 percent at two-year public universities, by far the fastest growing sector of higher education with some 4.7 million full-time students. Fall tuitions there averaged $1,022, compared with $906 a year ago.

College Board President Donald M. Stewart said the big jump in tuitions wasn't surprising given recession-related budget problems affecting more than 30 states.

"The current recession has had an impact on all sectors of education, public and private," he said.

A recent Associated Press survey found that 17 states cut spending for higher education this fiscal year. Twenty-one others raised spending by less than 5 percent.

Among the steepest in the AP survey: the University of Oregon, up nearly one-third to $2,598; the University of California system, up 40 percent to $2,274; and the 64-campus State University of New York increased tuition by $500 to $2,150 a year, following a $300 rise last December.

Some believe that the tuition surge also may reflect a fundamental change in attitude toward public higher education.

Lawmakers and voters increasingly view colleges as a private, rather than public good. Under that view, legislators are likely to continue to shift more of the cost of public colleges to students and away from taxpayers.

"I would not be surprised if that happens," said Arthur Hauptman, a Washington-based higher education economist. "States face more competing demands on increasingly limited resources. Items like prisons and public elementary and secondary education are taking a bigger bite out of state budgets."

Rates at private four-year colleges, meanwhile, went up a more modest 7 percent this fall. But because such schools are generally far costlier than public colleges, that percentage still translated to a sizable dollar jump: $10,017, compared with $9,340 in fall 1990. Average room and board charges of $4,386 brought the average fixed costs of a year at private college to $14,403.

Among price leaders: Bennington College, $23,200; Sarah Lawrence College, $23,150; Massachusetts Institute of Technology, $22,230; Yale University, $22,200; Wellesley College, $21,928; Smith College, $21,870; Brandeis University, $21,280; and Harvard and Radcliffe Colleges, $20,655.

Average two-year private college tuitions rose 6 percent to $5,290. Room and Board at such schools averaged $3,734, also up 6 percent.

The board calculated that a typical resident undergraduate can expect to spend $16,292 this year at a four-year private school and $7,584 at a four-year public college, counting incidentals like transportation, books and supplies and other personal expenses.

Most of the survey date was contained in The College Cost Book, published by the board, which is available at libraries or at bookstores for $14.95.

OPEN 'TIL
2 A.M.
7 DAYS
A WEEK

BUFFALO BILLS
FAMOUS
ROAST BEEF
&
CHICKEN WINGS

MIKE'S WESTVIEW CAFE

• Drink Special •
Milwaukees Best
$3.95 Pitcher

Wednesday Night is GUEST BARTENDER NIGHT
At Mike's
Free T-shirts & Prizes!
This week's guest bartender is: John Milar
Come have fun with John and put your name in for the drawing.
Next week could be you!
PRIZES:
•$25.00 Gift Certificate to Mike's
• Mike's Original T-Shirt
•2-Week membership to THE GYM
•Large Cheese Pizza from Pinocchio's
Your Picture will be Enshrined on the Walls of MIKE'S WESTVIEW
Drawing is Wednesday Night. Must be present to win but put your name in at any time!
Be here for next weeks selection!!

• Drink Special •
Mikes Pink's
$1.50

Always something for everyone

• Drink Special •
Busch
$4.50 Pitcher

Do you know your LEGAL Protections ??

The LEGAL SERVICES CENTER at UMass offers free, professional legal help to fee-paying students!

We can advise in most matters affecting students, including consumer, criminal, housing, family, employment, military, civil rights, and other matters.

922 Campus Center • 545-1995

You are cordially invited to attend the
UNIVERSITY LECTURE SERIES
Professor Dr. Rudolf Wille of the Technische Hochschule Darmstadt
Will give a lecture on
FORMAL CONCEPT ANALYSIS: A NEW APPROACH TO DATA ANALYSIS
Memorial Hall, 4 p.m., Wednesday October 16
The talk will be intended for a general audience, and will include applications of concept analysis to the behavioral, biological and social sciences.
Sponsored by the College of Arts and Sciences and the Department of Mathematics and Statistics

Arts & Living

A good teenybop flick, classic sci-fi and more

By JAMIE GORNSTEIN
Collegian Correspondent

Before I present my opinions on the movies being presented this week, I would like to clarify something to all of you out there who do not realize that although this column does appear on the Arts and Living Page, it is a very opinionated column. You can take heed of my opinion, or you can discard it with then rest of your recyclables.

In any case, I will be here every week with all of the movies which will be played from now until finals. And now here are the movies that will be shown beginning this Wednesday.

3 Men and a Little Lady — Tom Selleck, Ted Danson, Steve Guttenberg. The bachelors are back, but the movie is not as fresh as the first one, and the schtick just doesn't work as well any more. However, Selleck and Danson are still delightful to watch. ★★1/2

The War of the Roses — Kathleen Turner, Michael Douglas, Danny DeVito. As DeVito states in the movie, "Dog people should marry dog people, and cat people should marry cat people." Without a doubt this is the stickiest divorce I have seen in my life. The movie take divorce and blows it way out of proportion, but it's fun to watch the antics. Beware of the pate. ★★★

Big — Tom Hanks, Elizabeth Perkins, Robert Loggia. Clearly the most delightfully innocent movie I have ever seen. Hanks is a 13 year-old boy who wishes he were big, and gets his wish as he turns into a 30 year-old man the very next morning! Hanks is superb. ★★★★

Catch 22 — Alan Arkin, Martin Balsam, Richard Benjamin. Screen adaptation of Joseph Heller's famous novel based on insanity within the Army during World War II. The movie is long and drawn-out, but the acting shines. ★★1/2

Dead Ringers — Jeremy Irons (playing two roles), Genevieve Bujold. Based on a true story of twin genius gynecologists who fall into a deadly trap of drugs. The movie is extremely depressing, but somehow you just can't turn it off. How Irons missed an Oscar nomination, I'll never know. Two Irons are better than one. ★★★★

Good Morning, Vietnam — Robin Williams, Forest Whitaker, Bruno Kirby. Williams plays Adrian Cronauer, an Army disc jockey stationed in Saigon in 1965. The story line is weak and fallible, but Williams (who is said to have been much funnier than the real Cronauer) has some monologues worth their weight in gold. Classic soundtrack ★★★1/2

Grease — John Travolta, Olivia Newton-John, Stockard Channing. Taken from the long-running Broadway show, Grease is lots of fun to watch. The choreography is simple but magnetic, and the movie just oozes happiness in the 50s. ★★★1/2

He Said, She Said — Kevin Bacon, Elizabeth Perkins. Reminds me of one of those teenybopper books where the guy tells his side of the story, and then you flip it over and the girl tells hers. Ridiculous plot and super-cheesey ending. I had a better time having my wisdom teeth extracted. No stars.

War of the Worlds — Gene Barry, Les Tremayne, Ann Robinson. My dad forced me to watch this movie when I was little, deeming it "necessary." I think I fell asleep then, but I appreciate it now. It's a Sci-fi spectacular based on the novel by H.G. Wells about Martians invading Earth. The Oscar winning special effects were way ahead of their time (1953). THIS WEEK'S TOP CHOICE. ★★★★

Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom — Harrison Ford, Kate Capshaw, Ke Huy Quan. Just doesn't pack the same punch as Raiders, and has an annoyingly wimpy heroine. It does have some great action scenes, but tries so hard to outdo the first that it doesn't leave room to breathe. ★★

Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade — Harrison Ford, Sean Connery, Allison Doody. Without a doubt, much better than the second, but still can't come close to the first. Connery plays father to Indiana Jones and adds delightful flavor as the two search for the Holy Grail. ★★1/2

Lucas — Corey Haim, Kerri Green, Charlie Sheen. For once, a film that doesn't portray teenagers as flat, static characters, but shows the thoughtfulness and insight into several different aspects of several different types of teens. Lucas (Haim) is a social outcast who falls in love with the beautiful new girl in town (Green) who treats him like a cute little puppy. For once, an honest ending. Leaves you smiling. ★★★1/2

Ordinary People — Mary Tyler Moore, Donald Sutherland, Timothy Hutton. Based on the novel by Judith Guest, this movie packs a wallop. Told mostly by the guilt-ridden son of a well-to-do family about the death of his brother. Hutton won Best Supporting Actor, Robert Redford won Best Director, Ordinary People won Best Picture. ★★★★

Paternity — Burt Reynolds, Beverly D'Angelo, Norman Fell. Reynolds wants to be a father, so he hires D'Angelo to be a surrogate mother. Lame comedy with even lamer acting. ★

Predator — Arnold Schwarzenegger, Carl Weathers, Elpidia Carrillo. Arnold and his SWAT buddies go on a mission to South America only to find themselves up against one mean alien. Magnificent special effects and great suspense. ★★★1/2

Predator 2 — Sorry guys, but I just didn't get a chance to see this one.

Prizzi's Honor — Jack Nicholson, Kathleen Turner, Anjelica Huston. Wonderful black comedy about a dim-witted hit man from a Mafia family. Nicholson is hysterical, Huston is superbly sly (she won Best Supporting Actress). ★★★★

The Principal — James Belushi, Louis Gossett Jr., Rae Dawn Chong. Belushi is the principal of the district's highest crime-rated school, and mixes drama with comedy in the first movie Belushi has done that I can stomach. ★★

Project X — Matthew Broderick, Helen Hunt, Bill Sadler. Very enjoyable story with a Disney-like ending about a military pilot wishful who is assigned to teach chimps how to fly simulated planes. Broderick discovers a dark secret, however, and is enraged when he realizes that the chimps are being subjected to more than just flying lessons. The chimps are a delight to watch. ★★★★

The Rescue — Kevin Dillon, Christina Harnos, Marc Price. A ridiculously stupid movie about a group of Rambo wanna-be's that rescue their POW dads. Duh. THIS WEEK'S BOMB! No Stars.

Movies are rated by Jamie Gornstein on a scale of four stars — the highest possible rating, to no stars — the lowest.

Photo courtesy Tri-Star Pictures

WOW, LOOK AT THAT! -- Matthew Broderick starred opposite Marlon Brando in last year's film, The Freshman. This movie isn't showing on HSCN this week, but Broderick fans can see him in Project X opposite some chimps.

Shake yer booty and brain

By LOU COVE
Collegian Correspondent

The Decade of Darkness
Afrika Bambaataa
EMI Records

Photo courtesy EMI Records

Afrika Bambaataa, one of the creators of rap music, has released a new album entitiled The Decade of Darkness.

Afrika Bambaataa just kicked my ass. It might be The Decade of Darkness, but Mr. B is looking to tear it up, and he does just that. Good luck sitting still once you get this disc spinning. I checked out the tape while driving through the back roads of the Valley at sunset last Friday — not what Afrika had in mind, I suspect. Still, I was blown away. This man straddles so many styles and always keeps it sounding right.

Check out "Just Get Up and Dance," the first club single, which starts with the meltdown on Decade. BAM is ready to make you move, and that's as good a start as any for this decade. And as soon as he's got a hold of your couch-potato butt, he slips in the first sign of hope for said decade with "Save the World." Just as he promises later on in "Power Boy Power": "I can make you jump." BAM has you jumping and thinking without skipping a beat.

BAM has always been regarded as cutting-edge, Hip-Hop techno-master and political sage, but "Can't Give You Up" would be torching the Top 40 if EMI had the good sense to pump a fresh sound. "Can't Give You Up" is one of those perfect hybrids of hard rap and cool melody that seems to be what everyone's trying to cut these days. Bambaataa makes it all seem very easy. Ditto for the later track, "Freedom."

I could do without "Sweat," a watered down cut that sounds too much like Prince's "Head," but won't get you nearly as hot. And "Soca Fever" is a slick mix of rap and world beat, but the lyrics are running dangerously close to the sappy side and you might feel kind of stupid singing along. BAM has dredged up the refrain to Buster Poindexter's "Hot Hot Hot" from his sonic library to use on "Soca Fever." In general the man is a genius at sampling, but I think he might have been better off leaving Buster in the dust-bin. Just forget the words and keep dancing.

"In a Minute" drops us back on the cold streets of America: vicious, killer rhymes et al. This track is as sharp and as hard as any gangster rap that's come along and it's that kind of transition, from a salsa flavored world-beat to a no-frills, hard nosed rap that makes this disc something special.

BAM keeps the spirit lively right up to the end with his caustic reworking of James Brown's "Say it Loud (I'm Black and I'm Proud)". Bambaataa teamed up with Brown to make Unity Part 1 a few years back, a royal jam between the Godfather of Soul and the Godfather of Hip Hop (which is well worth checking out if you haven't already), and it looks like he learned something. "Say it Loud" meets the 90s and picks up an even stronger social conscience, capturing the grit of the decade without losing the positive edge that makes this song an anthem.

Decade of Darkness leaves no doubt, Afrika Bambaataa is tying the world up in one thinking, throbbing, rhythmic package, and he's doing it with style.

Now, get up and dance!

Women's tennis streaks to two weekend wins

Team raises record to 7-5 for the season

LILLIAN K. LEGGIO
Collegian Correspondent

Is there an old proverb that says adversity breeds determination? Well, whether there is or not, the adversity faced by the University of Massachusetts women's tennis team has time after time been conquered by their determination.

Take for example this weekend when UMass faced the challenge of playing 8-1 University of Rhode Island and 8-3 Central Connecticut University. UMass came away with a 8-1 win over URI and a 6-3 win over Central Conn.

"This team's confidence has grown from their determination to play competitive," said UMass coach Edwin Gentzler. "Our team wasn't even supposed to have a season and that make them try a little harder and appreciate the fact that they're even playing."

According to Gentzler, UMass players Pam Levine and Stacy Schenkner showed their growing maturity Sunday against Central Conn. For the second match in three days, the pressure of the deciding match lay on their racket strings.

Against Tufts last Thursday, Levine and Scheckner had folded under the pressure and lost, but this was not to be the case against Central Conn, as the pair beat Janine Litzman and Jill Aptekar 6-3, 6-1.

UMass, 7-5, put itself in a position to win by prevailing in singles play by a score of 4-2. UMass' No. 1 player, Shizuko Yamasaki defeated Kate Concannon in straight sets 6-1, 6-1.

Kerensa Eddy came back from losing the second set and a 4-1 third set deficit to beat Phillipa Lane 6-3, 3-6, 6-4.

In the two other singles wins for UMass, Amy Ryan had a relatively short match against Diane Laviero, defeating her 6-0, 6-0 and Kelly Grim beat Litzman 6-4, 6-0.

The two singles losses came as Kristin Planker defeated Kerri Kaminski 6-4, 6-1 and Kathy Dobransky defeated Gail Girasella 6-3, 6-4.

In the doubles match that made the score 4-3 and put the pressure on Levine and Scheckner, Yamasaki and Ryan lost a close one to Planker and Lane 6-3, 7-6 (7-4).

The final doubles match saw Girasella and Eddy beat Concannon and Dobransky 6-4, 6-3.

Against Rhode Island on Saturday, UMass wasn't counting on doubles to determine the outcome of the contest. Instead they wrapped up the match by winning all six singles matches.

Yamasaki abated a second set comeback by Christy Weiner and won her match 6-2, 6-4 (7-2). Kamisnki had a tough time with Naim Kushigian, but still prevailed 4-6, 6-4, 6-3.

Girasella, on the other hand, had an easier time with Molly Keough, netting a 6-0, 6-1 win. Getting another win for UMass was Eddy who defeated Candace Oliviera 6-3, 6-0. Grim and Ryan beat their opponents by the identical scores of 6-1, 6-1.

In doubles, UMass' only loss came as Lesley Watts and Sarah Nadolny lost to Weiner and Kushigian 6-2, 7-5.

In the two other doubles matches, Levine and Scheckner defeated Keough and Chris Boncher 6-0, 6-0 and Amy Finn and Mary Edwards beat Ximena Prudencio and Annia Ferraro 6-3, 6-2.

"The team has certainly matured," said Gentzler. " It's great to see that their confidence and consistency is growing with each match."

How American Express helps you cover more territory. For less money.

Become a Student Cardmember today and get 3 roundtrips on Continental Airlines, for only $129 or $189 each.

Only the American Express® Card offers an exciting travel program exclusively for students—including three roundtrip certificates on Continental Airlines. And much, much more.

Just look at the map and pick the place you'd like to visit. If it's on your side of the Mississippi River, you can use a certificate to fly for only $129* roundtrip. Or you can cross the Mississippi for $189 roundtrip.

You have your pick of more than 150 cities in the 48 contiguous states. And you can fly almost anytime because there are no blackout dates. But you must make your reservations within 14 days of the day you leave. And the maximum stay is 7 days/6 nights and must include a Saturday night.

By becoming a Student Cardmember, you'll also enjoy other benefits from the American Express® Student Privileges™ Program. Such as up to 30 minutes of MCI long-distance calling every month for an entire year—absolutely free. And that's just one example of how the Card can help you save.

For just $55 a year, the Card gives you all these savings. And it's easy to apply. Just call us (have your bank address and account number on hand). What's more, with our special student offer, it's easier to get the Card now while you're still in school than it may ever be again.

So get the Card. And get ready to cover new territory on either side of our Great Continental Divide.

Membership Has Its Privileges®

*Minneapolis-St. Paul, St. Louis and New Orleans are considered cities east of the Mississippi River.
A credit of up to $3.70 for calls will appear on each billing statement for 12 months after enrollment. $3.70 is equal to the charges for a domestic 30 minute night/weekend MCI Card Compant billay call and appropriate surcharges. You must enroll for this service by December 31, 1991.

CALL 1-800-942-AMEX.

TRAVEL RELATED SERVICES An American Express company

Continental

MCI

If you're already a Cardmember, there's no need to call. Information about your certificates will be arriving soon.

Complete terms and conditions of this travel offer will arrive with your certificates. Continental Airlines alone is responsible for fulfillment of this offer. American Express assumes no liability for Continental Airlines' performance. © 1991 American Express Travel Related Services Company, Inc.

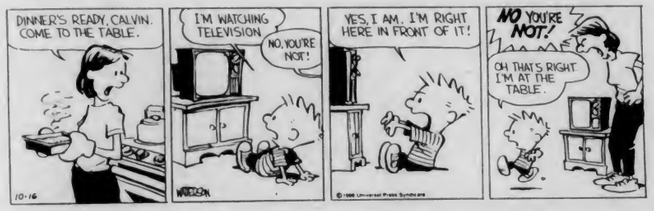
THE FAR SIDE
By GARY LARSON

"You gotta help me, Mom. . . . This assignment is due tomorrow, and Gramps doesn't understand the new tricks."

DOONESBURY
By GARRY TRUDEAU

YOU KNOW WHAT OUR DAUGHTER JUST TOLD ME? SHE'S GETTING A JOB!
WELL, IF SHE DOES, SHE'LL BE THE ONLY BREADWINNER IN THE FAMILY.
WHAT?
MY PERFORMANCE ART SPACE JUST WENT OUT OF BUSINESS.
10-16
THAT'S... THAT'S TERRIBLE, J.J.! I MEAN, I KNOW THERE'S A RECESSION ON, BUT YOU'D THINK PEOPLE WOULD ALWAYS SUPPORT... UM...
...UM... THAT THING YOU DO.
I KNOW. IT'S INCREDIBLE! THE CULTURE'S COLLAPSING!
GB/Trudeau

CALVIN AND HOBBES
By BILL WATTERSON



DINNER'S READY, CALVIN. COME TO THE TABLE.
I'M WATCHING TELEVISION
NO, YOU'RE NOT!
YES, I AM. I'M RIGHT HERE IN FRONT OF IT!
NO YOU'RE NOT!
OH, THAT'S RIGHT. I'M AT THE TABLE.
10-16
WATTERSON
© 1988 Universal Press Syndicate

TANGELO PIE
By TIM SNIFFEN

YOWZA! THIS HEEERE'S D.J. BUBBA COMIN' AT CHA WITH ANOTHER AMAZING HITS IN A ROW! THAT'S RIGHT! NO INTERRUPTIO
BUT WAIT! WE'RE ALSO GAIN' AWAY FREE TODA "THE BEST OF THE PARTY FAMILY" TO OUR 117TH CALLER! CALL IN 641-4600 333!
AND NOW, I'LL JUST SCREAM SOME MORE WHILE I COME UP WITH MORE MINDLESS-
I rather think that's ENOUGH Top 40 radio for today.
Next, some Mozart... but first, let's all take a nap....

CAST OF THOUSANDS
By BARRY DEUTSCH

THIS "ACT-UP" IS A GAY ORGANIZATION?
NOT EXACTLY, ALTHOUGH I AM GAY.
YOU DON'T HAVE A PROBLEM WITH THE POSTER, DO YOU?
NOT WITH THE POSTER AS SUCH, NO.
ACT-UP
OH GOOD, MY LAST ROOMIE THREW A FIT—
HOWEVER, MY RELIGION REQUIRES THAT I KILL YOU.
ACT-UP
HOW ABOUT A NICE, PEACEFUL LESBIAN?
GOLLY, THAT WOULD BE AGAINST THE RULES. I DO HAVE A NICE CHRISTIAN FUNDAMENTALIST AVAILABLE.
(SNICKER) HOUSING

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED
By SHADOW

Quote of the Day

"I am a bear of very little brain and long words bother me."

-- Winnie the Pooh

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
By TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

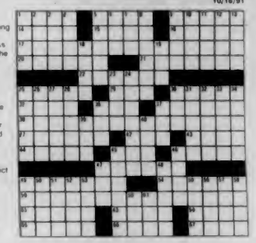
ACROSS
1 PDQ relative
5 Confidence game
9 Hoard
14 Lasso
15 "I Love —"
16 Golfer Palmer to friends
17 Horse racing
20 Raid
21 Hemlock and arsenic, e.g.
22 — de corps
25 Syrian leader
29 Varnish ingredient
30 Stonecrop
35 Diamond or Sedaka
36 Deer
37 Legendary opera tenor
38 Winner of 59 Across 1963 and 1967
41 Turkish capital
42 Mellow
43 GWTW plantation
44 Musical symbols
45 Vigor
46 Domineering
47 Military greeting
49 Counselor
54 See 37 Across
59 Segment of the Triple Crown
62 Billow
63 Tidy
64 — weevil
65 Form into an arch, old style
66 City on the Hudson River
67 Dividing word

DOWN
1 Part of BA
2 London district
3 Copycat
4 Nuisance
5 Wild plums
6 Mongrel
7 Perform
8 Nearsighted
9 Japanese rice drink
10 Baseball's Speaker
11 Part of AD
12 — on the dotted line
13 Brooklyn College president Robert L. —
18 "The — Piper of Hamelin"
19 Measure in bar
58 Down
23 Asset
24 An archangel or painter
25 Sadat of Egypt
26 Left Bank's river
27 Jockey's uniform
28 — once (suddenly)
30 — Browne belt
31 Poetry muse
32 The Sorcerer's Apprentice composer
33 Consumers
34 Eel
36 Lead-in to dog, lion or horse
37 So-so grade
39 US tax bureau
40 USSR secret service, once
45 Family member
46 Scooped
47 — in-law
48 Irritable
49 Church part
50 Bongo
51 Action word
52 "Othello" villain
53 Twist
55 Physics Nobelist: 1944
56 Picture image
57 Gael
58 Norse capital
60 Sun. discourse
61 — Paulo, Brazil

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

L	A	M	A		S	I	A	T		P	R	A	Y
A	M	A	S	S		A	C	O	R	I	D	E
D	O	T	M	E	B	E	S	T	Y	O	U	C	A	N
		K	E	N	E	R		C	O	L	D	E	R
				S	E	E	M		S	E	E
B	R	A	V	A		O	A	T		O	S	C	A	R
A	E	R	A	T	E		P	A	M		A	M	I
B	E	T	I	R	M	O	U	S		T	R	A	P
E	V	E		G	A	L		S	N	E	E	Z	E
S	E	L	M	A		P	A	C		T	A	T	E	R
		I	M	P		S	O	A	R
D	R	D	R	S		M	A	L	E	U	T	S
G	O	O	D	N	I	G	H	T		L	A	D	I	E	S
E	N	O	L		E	T	U	I		T	R	I	A	N
T	A	M	E		S	S	T	S			S	O	L	E

10/16/91



Quote of the Day

"Joan Crawford has risen from the grave."

-- Blue Oyster Cult

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES(March 21-April 19): Observe all security rules at home and work. Do not despair if a project is derailed. Seek advice from more experienced co-workers. Your plans for a trip bring you great satisfaction.

TAURUS(April 20-May 20): Home and family life are accented today. Do-it-yourself projects can reduce household costs. Delegate a few simple chores to small fry but be patient. Do not expect perfection.

GEMINI(May 21-June 20): Although an urge to travel is strong, you will accomplish more if you stay put. Make maximum use of the telephone and fax. A timely compromise will help you avoid an ugly confrontation.

CANCER(June 21-July 22): If a desire for power is all that motivates you, you will not get very far. Avoid issuing ultimatums. A platonic relationship could turn romantic. Welcome a second chance for domestic bliss.

LEO(July 23-Aug. 22): Get in touch with people who share your interests and concerns. A child presents an idea that deserves serious consideration. Think about it. You cannot afford to ignore a loved one's needs.

VIRGO(Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Put on your thinking cap and you will be able to overcome any opposition you encounter. Creative ideas abound! A member of the opposite sex is helpful but distracting.

LIBRA(Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Pull yourself together and make better use of your time. Contact important people early in the day. An investment does better than you anticipated. Dividends arrive to improve your cash flow.

SCORPIO(Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Something that happens today could take you by surprise. A person you thought a permanent fixture moves on. Be open to innovative ideas. Higher-ups admire and reward flexibility.

SAGITTARIUS(Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You feel a strong attraction to someone new. Follow the dictates of your heart. A work project should not be postponed. Keep your mind on business.

CAPCICORN(Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be firm about cutting your ties to negative people. A depressing companion has been dragging you down for too long. You will be deeply moved when someone shows affection for you.

AQUARIUS(Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Pay more attention to the way you look. A polished appearance could mean the difference between getting a better job or standing still. Wear something glamorous this evening.

PISCES(Feb. 19-March 20): Continue to follow your present conservative course. You take real delight in doing things for those you love. Your high spirits prove contagious! Maintain a positive attitude toward your work.

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Greg Sukiennik
Copy Editor.....Beth Butts
PhotoTechnician.....Josh Reynolds
Production Supervisor.....Mike Carvalho
Production.....Joanne Quimby, Lisa Jezowski

The Butch Hobson confirmation hearings

Bob Costas was discussing the party politics involved in the selection process, while Brent Musberger drilled a committee member on whether or not the process should be changed. An entire nation rearranged their schedules to watch the proceedings.

"Is the Red Sox organization doing the wrong thing in bringing up Butch Hobson among all the allegations of his wild nights at Alabama?" Chris Berman asked the assembled group of baseball experts in the ESPN studio.

"Does Don Zimmer have a chance of surviving the Baseball Judiciary Committee's investigation after all of these gambling allegations?" probed Pat O'Brien. "The betting cards that were leaked last week by the Baseball Bureau of Investigation could have irrevocable damages."

I hadn't slept in almost three days, but I didn't care. The future of the Red Sox depends on this decision and when the Major League Senate convenes to decide the fate of Hobson, Zimmer, Rick Burleson and the other nominees, I must be the first to know the results.

Sure, Judge Clarence Thomas has stolen the stage, and yes I feel sorry for both he and Anita Hill, but we're talking about the Boston Red Sox here. We're looking at over 70 years of futility and the chance to finally win another World Series if the young, vibrant Hobson can become the manager.

"We now bring you back to Fenway Park, where the Baseball Judiciary Committee is questioning former teammates of both Hobson and Burleson," Costas said.

"Mr. Remy, it says in your affidavit that Mr. Hobson would often dive after balls into the dugout," began Commisioner Fay Vincent. "Is this some sort of euphemism?"

"No, of course not," Jerry Remy retorted. "Butch was the hardest working player I've ever played with. No sacrifice was too great for the team."

"If I may interrupt Mr. Chairman," said committee member Tommy Lasorda. "We keep hearing this name 'Butch,' does this have anything to do with the party Mr. Hobson attended as a sophomore at Alabama?"

David Scott

"Not that I know of," replied Carlton Fisk. "Butch Hobson has never done a malicious thing in his life, this whole process is just a lynching mob formed by Joe Morgan and his supporters."

Finally, I thought to myself, we're getting to the bottom of this. I knew all along it was one of Morgan's people who leaked all the alleged crimes to the media, but it took "Pudge" Fisk to let the public know.

I suppose there was a time when appointing a manager was as easy as choosing underwear, but not now, not in this time of total sports networks and gavel to gavel coverage of baseball's winter meetings. The Thomas proceedings could change the selection process for ever and sports will surely never be the same.

Sure, this is far fetched and in fact a bit ridiculous, but the circus that developed this past weekend in Washington makes almost anything possible.

If politicians have all these skeletons in their closet it's easy to imagine some of the things that former players and coaches have done in their time on the road.

The similarities between Supreme Court Justice and Boston Red Sox manager are few, if any. But try debating the merits of both jobs to a fan who has suffered through the hardships of 1978, or the heartbreak of 1986. I'll guarantee Clarence Thomas will rank somewhere below pine tar and aluminum bats.

"We now take you to Red Sox General Manager's Lou Gorman's office, where Sweet Lou has some pertinent information to reveal," said Berman with his familiar smirk.

(Please note that Lou Gorman doesn't breathe when he speaks, so the following should be read as one continuous word.)

"Butch Hobson is a fine manager we look forward to having him as soon as the proceedings can be finished He's great with young talent, savvy and well respected. Butch Hobson is our man. What would we do with a Whitey Herzog anyways?" Gorman said in typical Gormanese.

A friend called asking if I could grab a bite to eat. I hung up without answering his absurd question, food was out of the question. The vote was about to come down and I knew in case of a tie, the deciding vote would go to a true Red Sox man, the late Commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti.

His vote had been hermetically sealed prior to his death especially for cases such as these. The Pete Rose case involved a similar situation, but it seems that the jar containing the vote was mysteriously stolen.

I might be able to get some sleep once the vote is taken, but there's a rumor that Dick MacPherson sold drugs at Syracuse.

David Scott is a Collegian sports columnist

No. 5 ranked field hockey faces Dartmouth

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

If the University of Massachusetts field hockey team's season was a horse race, the stretch run would begin today at Totman Field at 3:30 p.m. against Dartmouth. UMass is a few lengths behind the favorite, Old Dominion, but then again, who isn't?

With the latest NCAA poll released Tuesday, UMass (10-3) is stuck at No. 5 in the country. They still trail Old Dominion, Penn State, Maryland, and Iowa.

The Minutewomen's schedule looks favorable though, as they play only three teams in the top 20 in their last six games before the Atlantic 10 Tournament.

One team the Minutewomen should handle is Dartmouth.

The Big Green are having another lackluster season, as they are 3-6. They have beaten UMass-Lowell, Holy Cross, and C.W. Post. UMass traditionally handles Dartmouth, although the Big Green have everything to gain and nothing to lose.

Dartmouth is led by sophomore Jane Eckels, who leads the team in points by a wide margin. Eckels has 6 points on five goals and an assist.

Captain Jade Butman leads the defensive corp, and Jen Clark has played every minute in goal for the team.

As many problems Dartmouth has in scoring goals, UMass has been relatively stingy in giving them up.

Goalie Philippa Scott has been honored as the A-10 defensive player of the week. This is the second time this year the junior from Corsham, England has been honored.

Scott gave up only three goals last week, as she notched a shutout against St. Joseph's. Her goals against average is 0.54, and she has allowed more than one goal in a game only once.

As much as Scott has anchored the defense, offensive support has come from nearly everyone. Jenn Salisbury is leading the team in points, as she has 12 goals and 4 assists, and Dawn Trumbauer is second on the team with 5 goals.

Tara Jelley and Sherlan Cabralis have been an integral part of the offense. Jelley's speed and Cabralis' passing have been quiet yet crucial cogs in the team's wheel.

The Minutewomen will be returning to friendly Totman Field after their mostly successful road trip. They were 2-1, beating Springfield and St. Joseph's, while losing to Penn State.

Totman has given UMass a huge home field advantage, as they've lost only one game there.

Dartmouth has only won one game on the road this year, and judging by the way their season is going, number two shouldn't come tomorrow.

CAMPUS EMPLOYMENT

Student Manager
Information Data Bank

QUALIFICATIONS: Demonstrated (through previous experience and/or recommendations) good communication skills; organizational and supervisory skills; ability to organize data, proof-read, edit, typing and/or word processing skills required; promotional and marketing experience desirable.

ELIGIBILITY: Undergraduate (preferably College Work Study eligible), with at least three semesters remaining at the beginning of the Spring Semester 1992 (excluding summer).

PAY RATE: $6.00 per hour

WORK SCHEDULE: Must be available for a minimum of ten hours per week and on site at least four days per week.

STARTING DATE: Immediately. Training will be provided.

APPLICATIONS: Obtain an application at the Information Data Bank, 2nd floor lobby Whitmore. Deadline is October 24, 1991. An interview may be required.

The Information Data Bank (IDB) is a telephone or walk-in referral center which maintains information on University administrative and academic policies and procedures; bus, library, athletic etc. schedules; campus current events; and a variety of other reference materials.

The Student Manager is responsible for the day-to-day operations of IDB including recruiting, training, scheduling, and supervising a student staff of 8; maintaining and updating the IDB library and information resources; with the assistance of the Graphics Coordinator, arranging for the preparation and placement of one ad per week in the Collegian.

For additional information contact IDB at 545-1555

UPC & DEC Present

SHABBA RANKS

Weds., Oct. 16th
8pm
in the UMass Fine Arts Center
TIX on sale NOW at the UMASS Fine Arts Center Box Office
(413) 545-2511
$10 UMass Students
$13 All Others
MC/Visa Accepted

Women's soccer wary of upset

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts women's soccer coach Jim Rudy is scared of Harvard University. No he isn't frightened by SAT scores, preppies or Ivy covered walls, Rudy's scared of upsets.

"We are ripe for an upset," Rudy said. "It's scary, we are going up against a team that is always dangerous against us and we are coming off an extremely disappointing loss where we did very little right. Also in the last 180 minutes of regulation play we've scored one goal. I'm scared of this game."

Indeed the Minutewomen (8-2), ranked No. 11 in the nation, have been experiencing an offensive drought recently. In the past two games against Dartmouth (1-0, overtime win) and Hartford (2-1 loss) Massachusetts has controlled the play for most of the game but has failed to convert the offensive pressure into goals.

"We've made some terrible decisions around the goal lately and we haven't been making the play," Rudy said. "Just stupid, stupid plays near the net. Against Hartford our key players mentally went to sleep, they were rattled for no reason and we lost. I don't like entering a game after playing the way we have."

As concerned as Rudy is, the Crimson would have to play above their head to pull off what would be a major upset. Harvard is 4-3-1, including wins against at best mediocre squads such as Holy Cross and Pennsylvania. Still stranger things have happened.

"A win against UMass, even a strong result, would mean a great deal for our team," Harvard coach Tim Wheaton said. "UMass is a very successful team and we don't underestimate them, it is a good test for us to play one of the best teams in the nation."

Harvard will be lead by leading scorer Robin Johnson (7 goals, 4 assists, 18 points) and midfielder Laurie Uustal (5-3-13).

"Johnson is a big, rugged player with good speed," Rudy said. "She is dangerous around the net, as is Uustal. Both are quite good."

"We are going to have to stop UMass' talented players," Wheaton said. "Namely [Kim] Eynard and their players out of the back. UMass is tough but we traditionally play well against them."

Rudy said, "If we are who we are then we should win this one. But we will have to play well after a major disapointment and we can't lose it mentally like we've been doing."

■ water polo

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 12

him before shoveling to Harlan. The freshman lefty faked the goalie up before rifling the game-winning shot into the left corner.

A relieved Yarworth said, "That was the hardest game I've ever coached. It was so intense; everyone was playing well, it was really hard to score a goal. It was just a great game. It was water polo at its best. The referees did a great job. It was super. I'm happy. That's a lot of character after losing last night."

Next weekend the team is at Harvard University for the New England League Tourney.

D.P. Dough
256-1616
Delivers Calzones

$1.00 OFF
ANY 2 CALZONES
exp 1/25/92 ● one coupon per 2 Calzones ● Delivery Only

$1.00 OFF
ANY 2 CALZONES
exp 1/25/92 ● one coupon per 2 Calzones ● Delivery Only

OPEN at 11:30 A.M. DAILY

COLLEGE SPECIAL
3 Games of Bowling and Shoe Rental
$5.00
with College I.D.

TUESDAY NIGHT SPECIAL
DOMINO PIZZA AND BOWL
Three Games Plus Slice of Pizza and Coke
$5.00 Plus Shoes
8:30 pm to Close
Every Thurs. Night 9:00pm-12:00am
Northampton Bowl
Live D.J. in the Ally Oops Lounge
Cover $2.00
Call 584-4830 for reservations

haircuts always $10
BUCCI
a hair space
25 N PLEASANT ST AMHERST 256 0733

"Dedicated to Treating the Cause, Not the Symptom"
AMHERST CHIROPRACTIC
Family Health Center
DR. VIRGINIA D. HARPER
Chiropractic Physician
549-0335 OFFICE HOURS BY APPOINTMENT

BACK SCHOOL 101
Prerequisite:
Back pain & A REFERRAL from your UHS provider
This 3 session program (classes one week apart) includes information on exercise, some anatomy, massage, treatment options, posture tips and pain relief methods.
DATES: Wednesdays, October 23, 30 & November 6
TIME: 6:00 - 8:00 pm
PLACE: Physical Therapy Dept. Ground Floor - University Health Center
For UHS Health Education info/information and registration 549-2671 ext. 181
*Please advise your UHS provider for the proper referral

Classifieds

COME TO THE COLLEGIAN OFFICE 113 CAMPUS CENTER • THURSDAY 8:30-3:30 FRIDAY 8:30-2:30 • DEADLINE IS TWO DAYS PRIOR TO PUBLICATION • 20¢/WORD/DAY FOR STUDENTS • CASH IN ADVANCE

ACTIVITIES

MOVIE!!! - NEW JACK CITY
Tonight!!!
Wednesday, October 16
Time: 5:00, 7:00, 9:00, 11:00
Place: Campus Center Auditorium
Sponsored by AASA

ANNOUNCEMENTS

SOCIETY FOR HUMAN RESOURCE MANAGEMENT (SHRM) is holding a meeting Thursday, October 17 in SBA, room 312 (faculty lounge) at 8:30. Anyone interested in H.R. is welcome to attend.

AUTO FOR SALE

83 TRANS AM
76K miles great shape
$2500 or BO.
549-6781 Perry

1985 CHEVY SPECTRUM
New brake, new carborator
Runs great! $1,500 or B.O.
Call 253-9339

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your rights? Contact the Legal Services Center, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

COLLEGE PIZZA

COLLEGE PIZZA
Fall Special
Small cheese $3.50
Large cheese $6.00
Free soda with purchase of a large sub, salad, or spaghetti
549-6098 549-6073
Must mention this ad

DEBATE

Are you interested in public speaking? Would you like to participate in a Mock Trial Competition or other competitive debate? Come to the UMass Debate Society Meeting on Wednesday 7:00 in the Debate Trailer or call 545-3509 for more information.

ENTERTAINMENT

RACK-A DISC! $175.00 DJs, VJs, Karaoke for house/ Formal parties, Call 586-9900

FOR RENT

2 large roomed apt Heat inc. Center of Amherst 256-1124

FRIDGE RENTALS 253-9742 Free Delivery

TOWNHOUSE 2 BEDROOM 1 1/2 bath Bus route N Amherst 1-567-1352

FOR SALE

3 RED HOT Chili Pepper 9x at B.U. 11/1 Fuji Allegro touring bike $180 or B.O. Cold plate, $200 or B.O. Call 256-0985

BABY BUNNIES- Colorful dwarf lops. Housebreakable indoor size. Quiet lovable pets. 584-4960

COMPUTER FOR SALE
$600 Call Cliff
549-1762

GEORGE MICHAEL TICKETS
2 for $60
Mon Oct 28th show
Call 549-7767 after 7pm

HONDA CB360 MOTORCYCLE 4700m green windshield and extras $400 253-0951

IBM COMPATABLE COMPUTER, 1- 5/4 disk drive, 1- 3 1/2 disk drive, 1- 40 meg hard drive and color monitor. $500.00 245-9542

LIFECYCLE- Computerized aerobic trainer professional health club model Excellent condition $1100 256-0080

NEW & USED COMPUTERS
Call Dennis 6-2270

SPEAKERS
$600 value
Must sell $280 obo 546-1039

"THE EMPEROR WEARS NO CLOTHES"
Buy the Bible of the Legalization Movement now! Only $14 call Scott at 253-4245

FOUND

Gray cat with White Paws might be pregnant
Please call 253-0868

Timex woman's watch found 2 weeks ago near lot 44 546-2758

FUNDRAISERS

RAISE $500...$1000...$1500
FOOLPROOF
FUNDRAISING
For your fraternity, sorority, team or other campus organization. Act now for the chance to win a Caribbean cruise and fabulous prizes!
Call 1-800-950-8472, ext 50

HELP WANTED

"CAMPUS REPRESENTATIVES NEEDED" Earn free trip and big commissions by selling Cancun, Mexico. For more information call toll free at 800-755-7996 or in Connecticut at 203-975-8833

EXTERIOR PAINTERS
Experienced student painters needed to paint Amherst area homes. Full or part time America's College Painters (800) 926-8267 "Painting America's homes coast to coast"

"Know before you go," Where to work, live and ski free in Colorado's resorts. "Current guide to Aspen, Vail, Breckenridge and more! $18.95. Call 1-800-766-6174

OVERSEAS JOBS. $900-2000 /mo summer, yr. round, all countries, all fields. Free info. Write UC, PO Bx52-MAOI Corona Del Mar CA 92625

JEWELRY

Jewelry at great affordable prices. Table in Campus Concourse 16 Oct.

MOCK TRIAL

Are you interested in the National Mock Trial Competition? Call 545-3509 for more details. Ask for Malaika or Chris

MUSICIANS

Guitar Lessons - Beginning/Intermediate Relaxed atmosphere, serious lessons $10/hr. Call Tim-256-6300

PERSONALS

HEID
There is no surprise in the number of weeks, months, and years that we spend together. Through all seasons and all types of weather, our love will last forever.
Happy Anniversary
ALL MY LOVE
BRUCE

LISA,
I'm totally psyched that you're my mom! It's going to be the best!
Love your daughter,
Jennifer

HEY JIM
Sometimes you gotta break the rules
-Guess who?!

CHRIS:
"Ai tado la vida se toma a pequeros sorbos, como si sus minutos fueran licores cuya borrachera dura horas."
(Luis Relsel Sanchez)
Perdona lo tarde. Pero no olvides que te quiero.
Happy B-day
A

ROOMMATE WANTED

LOOKING FOR 2 non-smoking females to share room in beautiful South Amherst apt Next spring/ 1992
175+, Please call 549-3593

SERVICES

BICYCLE BROKEN?
Call Pat
546-0119

ORDER AVON!
546-1999
Call for brochure.

PREGNANT?
Need a pregnancy test, information or support? Call for free and confidential services. ALTERNATIVES 245 Main Street, Northampton 586-3000 or Greenfield 774-6019

FREE pregnancy testing; confidential and caring support. BIRTHRIGHT 233 No. Pleasant Street Amherst 549-1906

Seniors and Juniors
Time to think about resumes.
Let me help you design your resume.
I offer professional resumes at college prices.
Call Andy at 549-4002

TRAVEL

Bahama Cruise $99 per person 5 day/4 night hotel. Plan now for your break. Very limited offer. Call now 1-800-621-0572

SOME RELIABLE TOURS aren't so reliable. Thats why Mardi Gras Travel has #1 for for fun price guarantee to Montreal SEX LIES IN THE MONTREAL BACRAWL! Party weekends include 2 nights hotel. Group leaders travel FREE (LAGNAF)-Call today 617-444-1111 We're #1 for fun!

TRAVEL FREE! Campus representatives wanted to earn internsession and spring break trips. 256-8254

TYPING

PAPERS TYPED: $1.50/typed page Quick, Accurate Service Call Brian 546-3563

WORD PROCESSING, laser printing, papers, resumes, theses. Rosemary 259-1786

Sports

Water polo finishes third at Brown

By KEVIN HERLIHY
Collegian Staff

PROVIDENCE, RI — Over the weekend at the 2nd Round of the Eastern League Tournament an overtime win gave the University of Massachusetts water polo team a third place finish in the 16 team field, which saw Slippery Rock win the whole thing.

The third and final round will be held at Brown University, November 1-3.

It is never advisable to look past an opponent.

The team played its first game Saturday against unheralded Washington and Lee. The Generals held tough before losing to the 15th ranked Minutemen 6-5.

Scott Reed scored four goals, Adolfo Oliete and Javier Gonzalez scored one each, and goalie Todd Horihan came up with several big saves.

The lackluster performance in the opening game of this very important tournament may be attributed to three things: a two week layoff from game competition, an 8:45 a.m. starting time and its possible opponent in the third game.

"I think they were looking past them [W&L]," said head coach Russ Yarworth. "Washington and Lee came here to play us. We came here to play Navy."

First things first. Next up was 20th ranked Princeton. UMass fell behind early, and at the end of the first quarter was on the wrong end of a 3-1 score. The first five minutes of the second period saw the Minutemen crank up the intensity, scoring four unanswered goals on their to a 6-4 halftime lead, and a 9-7 win.

Tsan Engin scored four goals, including two early in the fourth quarter that broke open a slim 7-6 lead. Gonzalez, Reed, Rich Schragger, Dan McOsker, and Scott Deluca each scored once. Goalie Todd Larson had ten saves.

One of the keys to the game was McOsker's and Gonzalez' defense on Princeton's primary scorer and resident hothead, Chad Elliot. The two played a physical, annoying, talk-up-a-storm defense, holding Elliot to one goal on only a handful of shots.

So finally, at 8:30 Saturday night, the Minutemen would play 13th rankled Navy. "The most important game of the season so far," Yarworth said before the game. There was no team to look past to, as Sunday's schedule hadn't been set at the time.

Most of the first period saw the two teams playing good pressure defense, exchanging turnovers and steals. Then the offense took over.

Five different Navy players scored unanswered goals in the last 2:30 of the first period and first two minutes of the second. Then it was UMass' turn for a five goal burst.

Jay Peluso scored, followed by two Reed goals, one from McOsker, and another from Peluso, improbably knotting the score at 5-5. Peluso's second goal would be the last UMass would score. Navy ran another five goal streak, ending the game with a 10-5 advantage.

"We were playing alright," Yarworth said. "We kept our composure and climbed back in it, but it took so much energy to do it. We were down by one going into the forth, and it really wasn't a 10-5 game because we started taking chances to try to get steals. We did well, but I think our inexperience caught up with us a bit."

The loss to Navy meant the Minutemen would play rival Iona Sunday morning.

What a game. Nothing like a double overtime win to round out the weekend.

Tom Quinn scored on a breakaway two minutes into the contest, but Iona matched it soon after, and the period ended 1-1.

Play in the second period showed the frustration and fatigue both teams felt after Saturday's three games. Iona went up 2-1 on a breakaway, but a penalty shot by Reed with :34 left made the halftime score 2-2.

Reed scored midway through the third quarter, but an Iona penalty shot with :10 left evened the score again. Larson made two key saves during one exchange.

The forth period had no scoring. Yarworth's frequent substitutions kept fresh defense on the Gaels, forcing bad shots.

Play in the first overtime was tentative, with the best chance for either team being Luke Harlan's blast off the side post in the last minute.

UMass controlled the play in the second overtime, as Gonzalez and Reed each had decent scoring opportunities, only to have the shots deflected. Then, with :35 left, Larson threw an outlet pass to Reed, who drew the lone defender to

CONTINUED ON PAGE 11

Cross country teams have opposite weekends

• Women place second out of five

By CHRIS CUDDY
Collegian Correspondent

In a race that featured the much anticipated return of Kelly Liljeblad to the University of Massachusetts five, the women's cross country team finished second in a five team field at Durham, NH Friday.

The Minutewomen, in upping their record to 5-3, lost to a tough Springfield squad, and defeated teams from New Hampshire, Rhode Island, and Vermont.

With captain Michelle St. Laurent hampered by illness, the Minutewomen received a tremendous boost from the return of Liljeblad who, after almost two months off the track, finished second for the team, seven seconds behind twin sister Kim.

Kim Liljeblad finished in a time of 18:30, followed by Kelly in 18:37, Tricia Mathiesen in 18:43, Becky Johnson in 18:44, and Michelle St. Laurent in 19:07.

"Overall, I was pleased with the way the team ran, I really think we're starting to gel," coach Julie LaFreniere said. "Kim ran the best race I've seen her run, and I was very pleased with the way Kelly ran."

Winning the race was Springfield's Katie Meehan in 17:36, while UMass' top runner finished in sixth place. The Minutewomen's next three runners finished ninth, 10th, and 11th separated by only seven seconds.

In all likelihood, had St. Laurent not been ill, the Minutewomen would have had all five runners finish within 20 seconds of each other, a pack that LaFreniere said "would have given Springfield a run for their money."

"If Michelle had been healthy, and Kelly had a little more running under her belt, I think it would have been a one point race," LaFreniere said. "We're still a couple of seconds behind the top runners, but it's our whole pack that's a couple of seconds behind, not just one or two runners."

With the Minutewomen's dual meet season now complete, the team can set its sights on the championship season, which begins October 26 with the Atlantic 10 Championships.

"I was a little concerned with how tired the team looked, but I really put the girls through hell the past two weeks so it's understandable," LaFreniere said. "I'm not going to run them quite as hard the next two weeks, and hopefully we're a little fresher for the A-10's."

• Men's woes continue with recent losses

By KEITH BENNETT
Collegian Staff

The woes continued for the University of Massachusetts men's cross country team last weekend. The Minutemen fell to Providence, the number four team in the country, and Connecticut, no. 25, Friday afternoon.

Providence won the meet by totaling a scant 16 points. Connecticut placed second with 44 and UMass finished a distant third with 80 points.

"I wasn't surprised by the results of the meet," UMass coach Ken O'Brien said. "I think Providence has a better team than they've ever had and Connecticut proved to be quite a bit better than us also."

Providence runners dominated the race, taking the top four spots. The Fryars were led by Mark Carroll, who won the five mile race in 25:32. He was followed by teammates Paul Logan (25:33), Scott Cody (25:58) and Chris Teague (25:58).

After Connecticut's Christer Malm took fifth place in 26:08, Providence completed its scoring with a sixth place finish from Mark Burdis (26:13).

The Minutemen's top finisher was Matt Simon. He placed 12th in the race in a time of 26:46.

Other harriers scoring points for UMass were Mike Davis (16th, 27:28), Keith Willis (17th, 27:29), Kevin Greenhalgh (19th, 27:47) and Tom Walsh (20th, 27:47).

O'Brien said that he has seen some improvement in his team, as far as physical conditioning in practice, but that he hasn't seen that improvement displayed in the meets.

"I'm pleased with the physical improvement that the team has made since the beginning of the year," he said. "However, we haven't made any tangible improvement, mentally, when it comes to the meets. We look much better in our weekly training but in meets we stay the same. We've hit a sort of a plateau in our racing."

O'Brien said that he hopes to see the Minutemen get over that plateau in time for the upcoming championship season.

"We've got the second half of the season to shed that routine and move into second gear and apply ourselves, mentally as well as physically," he said.

The Minutemen kick off the second half of the season with the Eastern Conference Championships at Orono, Maine Oct. 19th.

Men's soccer faces Holy Cross in Worcester

Minutemen go for seventh win today

Collegian file photo

The men's soccer team is striding to the A-10 playoffs. They journey to Worcester for a match with Holy Cross this afternoon.

There is a terrific story unfolding down on Lower Boyden Field. The University of Massachusetts men's soccer team, cut from the athletic department's budget this past spring is now 6-2-3 and on a collision course with the Atlantic-10 playoffs in what has been termed their "terminal season."

Today, the Minutemen travel East, down the Pike to Worcester for a match with the Crusaders of Holy Cross (1-7).

"They are tough on their home field," coach Sam Koch said, after traveling to Worcester this weekend to watch the Crusaders. "Holy Cross is a hardworking team that is strong on the ball and shows good speed combined with their defensive pressure.

"We're going to have to move quickly through the midfield and switch the point of attack to nullify their work rate."

Koch's club is coming off of a 1-1 weekend in which they beat A-10 rival West Virginia 4-2 and lost to George Washington 1-0 in double overtime.

The story of the team thus far is the play of Jonathan Gruber in goal. The senior, who has started all 11 games, has recorded five shutouts, amassed a 0.73 goals against average and made 86 saves.

"Jon Gruber has been just an animal in goal," Koch said. "He had a great performance Sunday."

Offensively, sophomore Todd Kylish leads the team with 13 points, (five goals and three assists), folowed by Justin Edelman's eight (three, two).

"We were a little disappointed after Sunday's game," Koch said. "But, we have to go up there and just play without letting it bother us. We have to make sure we play as a team. For us to do well we have to put in a full team effort and a full day's work."

The Crusaders are winless, 0-5, in the Patriot League. They are led by sophomore Peter Kilmartin's six points (two goals, two assists). Bill Martin and junior transfer Brian Oates each have three points (one, one).

Sophomore goalkeeper Vito Antonucci has allowed nine goals in his last four contests, an average of 2.2 goals per game.

Overall, the Crusaders have been struggling, allowing 22 goals this season, an average of 2.75 goals per game, while only scoring eight.

Last week, Holy Cross was up on New England rival Providence College 2-1 after goals by freshman James Margiotta and Oates, but Providence eventually tied the game and won in overtime 3-2.

— BRETT MORRIS
and TAMIR LIPTON

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THE LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND

VOLUME CI ISSUE32 THURSDAY, OCTOBER 17, 1991

UM chooses 3 finalists for provost

By JASON GEORGE
Collegian Staff

Three campus officials are finalists for the second-in-command position of provost at the University of Massachusetts, according to the head of the search process.

Frederick Tillis, chairperson of the Provost Search Committee, said finalists for the position are Acting Provost Glen Gordon, Associate Vice-Chancellor for Academic Affairs Norman Aitken and Dean of the School of Public Health Stephen Gehlbach.

Tillis said the search committee, consisting of faculty, staff and student representatives, should have a decision made within three to four weeks.

Candidates were able to either send a letter of application on their own or be nominated by faculty, staff or students. Nominees had to confirm their interest in the position in writing.

The committee began screening applications for the position onSept. 16, after extending the deadline several weeks to accomodate faculty and administrators who were away for the summer.

Tillis, associate vice chancellor for Affirmative Action and Equal Opportunity, said hiring someone from within the University is necessary at a time when UMass has experienced a long series of budget cuts. Hiring from within will also ease the transition period for a new person in the position, Tillis said.

Acting Provost Gordon, former dean of the faculty of Social and Behavioral Sciences, is one of the three finalists. He was appointed in June when Richard O'Brien left the position to become chancellor.

Tillis, however, said that despite Gordon's experience in the position, he believed the committee would look at all candidates equally.

"I think the search committee will look at other candidates and try to glean who will be best for the position," Tillis said.

The position announcement for provost states that "responsibilities include planning and developing academic programs, fostering the academic growth and development of faculty and students, formulating and executing academic policies, and budgeting for and administering academic programs and related institutional activities."

Collegian photo by Josh Reynolds

WOODEN PLANKS FOR FUN AND PROFIT — Freshman Diana Towle makes and creates during her sculpture class at Tildon Farms.

Thomas says no looking back

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Clarence Thomas, saying it is "time to put these things behind us," will take his seat on the Supreme Court positioned to help shape the nation's laws for decades to come. His contentious confirmation battle left President Bush and other supporters today demanding a change in the process.

"I'd like to thank America," Thomas said after the Senate's 52-48 confirmation vote Tuesday night.

"No matter how difficult or painful, this is a time for healing in our country," he said. "We have to put these things behind us. We have to go forward." The 43-year-old Thomas is likely to be sworn in on Monday and assume the court's ninth seat.

He won confirmation only after one of the nastiest confirmation fights in American history, one that his backers called "a search and destroy mission" by Thomas opponents.

Following hearings on the allegation Thomas sexually harassed a former aide, Bush said today he would present some proposals to change the confirmation process.

"I'm going to have something to say. I owe the people my observations and more importantly some suggestions to improve the process," Bush said during a photo session this morning. He said he would be working on his proposals and present them "fairly soon."

CONTINUED ON PAGE 8

Community may ask for Asian center's demise

By MICHAEL LEVY
Collegian Staff

An "Emergency Community Meeting" of Asian and Asian-American students is scheduled for tonight in Knowlton Residence Hall to discuss the possible closing of the United Asian Cultural Center because of reported student apathy and funding problems, according to Asian student leaders.

The possibility of the center's closure was brought up at a recent United Asian Cultural Center Council meeting, said Amy Chee, a student staff member at Academic Support Services and a council member.

Chee cited lack of funding and disinterest in the Asian community as reasons for the proposed action.

"There is not enough money for programing," she said.

The organization "is only funded approximately $11,000," the same as past semesters, but "costs have risen," she said. Chee also pointed to staff expenses to explain the center's fiscal situation.

Denise Lau, the council liason for the United Asian Learning Resources Center, said that many students don't use the center.

"Students don't use the services, so it is just a waste," Lau said.

Lau added that other council meeting participants had their own reasons for closing the center.

Alexander Nguyen, former Multicultural Affairs Editor for the Collegian and one of the organizers for tonight's meeting, refused to comment on the reasons for the possible closing.

"The [Asian] community has to decide what to do," he said.

"If it happens, which it looks like it might, there will be a press conference afterwards," Nguyen added.

Chee objected to a flyer advertising tonight's meeting that said only Asian students will be admitted.

"I really object to that," she said. "Anyone can come. It's not Asian students only."

Lau agreed the "center is geared toward the Asian community," but also said others should not be prohibited from attending the meeting.

In the past, the center has been used as an "outlet for Asian students to study or socialize," said Lau.

The Asian Cultural Center sponsors films and movies which Lau described as "all educational."

Outside calls shut down

Causes unknown in phone failure

By OLIVIA STEWART-LIBERTY
Collegian Correspondent

Telephone disruptions through Tuesday night virtually severed University of Massachusetts telephone connections with the outside world for approximately 12 hours, according to the UMass telecommunications director.

Randy Sailer, director of Telecommunications Services on campus, said disruptions lasted from approximately 8:30 p.m. Tuesday until shortly after 9:00 Wednesday morning.

The disruptions caused difficulties in making and receiving long distance calls from campus. Local and on-campus calls were unaffected, except by the increased congestion caused by rescheduling.

The disruption, according to Sailer, was caused by a problem at the American Telephone and Telegraph Company in Springfield, which connects UMass with the rest of the country.

The cause of the problem was still unknown at the time of the repair on Wednesday morning.

Of the 400 telephone lines serving the University, Sailer said the disruption caused a block in a connection, which in turn caused the 144 lines serving long-distance calls to go down.

Sailer said the problem was at its worst between 11 and 12 p.m. on Tuesday, when most students receive incoming calls. There were not enough lines to handle all the calls at that time, Sailer said.

The disruption did not affect campus safety, Sailer said. Campus police were the first part of campus to be informed of the problem.

Inside:

Page 3:
The Undergraduate Student Senate backs the GEO in its battle with the administration.

Page 7:
Greg Sukiennik complains that the government isn't worth the Hostess Fruit Pies.

This Weekend:
We got us a way-too-cool type of play for you to see.

Weather
Cloudy with a chance of showers in the afternoon and temps in the 60s. How boring.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THE LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is a Registered Student Organization of the University of Massachusetts, published Monday through Friday during the school year with a circulation of 19,000.

113 CAMPUS CENTER AMHERST, MA 01003
Phone (413) 545-3500 FAX (413) 545-1592

STAFF

Editor in Chief ..... Gayle Long
Managing Editor ..... Marc Elliott
Editorial Editor ..... Greg Sukiennik
News Editor ..... Preston P. Forman
Sports Editor ..... Tamir Lipton
Arts Editor ..... Paul DeGeorges
Photography Editor ..... Carrie Wyeth
Black Affairs Editor ..... Sondra Sutton
Women's Issues Editor ..... Jessame Hannus
Jewish Affairs ..... Felice Cohen, Debra Kriegsman
Multicultural Affairs Editor .....
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Madanmohan Rao
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Trystan Skeigh
Business Manager ..... Randee Pastel
Advertising Manager ..... Dena Haselkorn
Finance Manager ..... Jeff Weiner
Circulation Manager ..... Jim Winterbottom
Subscriptions Manager ..... Stacy Rogers
Promotions Manager ..... Scott Macey
Production Manager ..... Terry Starmer
Day Graphics Manager ..... Jenn Burns

PROFESSIONAL STAFF

Business ..... Brian Harrington, Lori Black, Maureen Majerowski
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Forum

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 17

Presentation —Michael Kerns will speak in CC 917 at 12 p.m.

Film — "Maurice" will be shown in CC 803 at 7 p.m. Sponsored by the Office for GLB Concerns.

LBGA Men's Group — Men's group will meet at 8 p.m. in Student Union 413.

Performance — Michael Kerns in "Intimacies" at the Northampton Center for the Arts at 8 p.m.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 18

Coffee Social — The LBGA coffee social will be from 3 p.m. - 6 p.m. in CC 903.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 19

Open House — There will an open house, services, auction and demonstration by the Valley Women's Martial Arts from 1 p.m. - 5 p.m.. Located at Once Cottage Street, Easthampton. Call 527-0101.

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 20

Coffee Social — Amherst College Coffee Social at 3 p.m. Sponsored by the Amherst College LBGA.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 21

Meeting — Amherst College LBGA will meet at 9 p.m. in Room 201 of the Amherst Campus Center.

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 22

Coffeehouse — Smith LBA Space from 8 p.m. - 10 p.m. Women only.

FTC: Diet ads hype benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government yesterday accused three liquid diet programs of making false and unsubstantiated advertising claims about their safety and the long-term prospects of keeping off lost pounds.

Under an agreement with the Federal Trade Commission, the makers of Optifast, Medifast and Ultrafast must "replace unsubstantiated hype with documented facts," said Barry Cutler, director of the FTC's Bureau of Consumer Protection.

The FTC filed its complaint against Minneapolis-based Sandoz Nutrition Corp., which sells the Optifast 70 program; Jason Pharmaceuticals of Owings Mills, Md., and its Nutrition Institute of Maryland, which market the Medifast 70 program; and the National Center for Nutrition of Newingto, Va., which markets the Ultrafast diet program.

All three programs are available only under medical supervision.

Ultrafast is not associated with Ultra Slimfast, the popular over-the-counter diet program, Cutler said, however, that the FTC was looking at "about a dozen" other weight-loss programs, including some "household names" among over-the-counter programs. He did not specify which ones.

Man kills 22 in Texas

Massacre deadliest in U.S. history

KILLEEN, Texas (AP) — A man drove his truck into the window of a cafeteria yesterday and opened fire with a semiautomatic pistol on people waiting in line for lunch, killing 22 before committing suicide, authorities said.

It was the deadliest mass shooting in U.S. history.

Bell County Peace Justice Robert Stubblefield and 23 people were dead including the unidentified gunman in the shooting at Luby's cafeteria. Earlier, Department of Public Safety spokesperson Mike Cox said that in addition up to 15 people were wounded.

"The guy jumped out of the truck and said, 'This is what Bell County has done to me!' said Sheldon Smith, a porter at the cafeteria. "As he opened fire, the guy that he ran over with the truck was trying to get up and he shot him.

"Then he pointed toward the line where the service was and he started shooting down the line."

A dispatcher at the Killeen police department who refused to give her name said "we called for several ambulances, as many as we can get. We've never had anything like this."

The shooting surpassed the July 28, 1984 slayings in San Ysidro, Calif. when James Oliver Huberty opened fire at a McDonald's restaurant, killing 21 people before he was fatally shot.

The attack started about 12:40 p.m., said Lt. Danny Johnson at the Bell County sheriff's office. The man wielded a Glock 9mm semiautomati pistol, authorities said.

Other details were not immediately available.

Robert Holland, 26, a clerk at an auto parts store next door, said he heard the truck going through the cafeteria window and then "people were running everywhere."

"One guy came in here. He said 'Give me a gun, I'll go shoot him," Holland said. "All the sudden we had people in here saying, "Call the cops!" There were cops everywhere."

The gunman then apparently ran into a bathroom in the cafeteria.

He didn't know how many people were hit. His wife was not among the injured.

Killeen is a Central Texas town of about 45,000.

AP photo

GOSH DARN IT, HOW BEAUTIFUL — On-again, off-again couple Donald Trump and Marla Maples were spotted shopping for pumpkins at a roadside stand in the Hamptons last Friday. Hours earlier, the two were seen playing golf nearby as a plane flew overhead pulling a banner proclaiming "Marla, I Love You."

The J•RICH
Build A WARDROBE
Birthday
1st Item: 5% off
2nd Item: 10% off
3rd Item: 15% off
4th Item: 20% off
5th Item: 25% off
6th Item: 30% off
Sale!
The more you buy, the more you save!
1 WEEK ONLY • OCT. 14-20
J•RICH
CLOTHING FOR MEN
191 N. PLEASANT ST., •AMHERST • 253-2013
22 MASONIC ST., • NORTHAMPTON •586-6336
OPEN 7 DAYS • THURSDAY TIL 9

CALLING ALL PHOTOGRAPHERS
Are you interested in shooting for the Collegian?
Stop by 113 Campus Center for more information.

Local

Collegian photo by Jeff Egan

I LOVE THE TUNES — Patricio Diaz practices moments before performing in the Masters In Music '91 at the Fine Arts Center

Senate votes to support GEO contract demands

By MICHAEL R. LINSKEY
Collegian Staff

The Undergraduate Student Senate last night chose to support the demands of the Graduate Employee Organization in its contract squabble with the University administration.

"The vote was overwhelmingly in favor of supporting GEO's demands," said Senate speaker Bob Monaghan. "Only a few senators dissented."

Meeting in the Campus Center, the Senate listened to Jim Delle, a self-described "rank-and-file member" of the GEO, explain the four demands of his organization: binding arbitration, agency shop, health fee waivers for graduate employees, and job security.

"In the last few rounds of budget cuts, we as TA's were especially hard hit," said Delle. "We lost about 10 percent of the TA's across campus last year, and the administration can't guarantee it won't happen again this year."

Delle said binding arbitration would allow an impartial third party to arbitrate labor disputes. He said agency shop would automatically enroll all graduate employees in the union, and it would impose a fee on those who didn't join. Those morally opposed to unions would be granted conscientious objector status, but they would pay a fee to a University general scholarship fund.

Ted Chambers, vice president of the Commuter Area Government, voiced his support for GEO demands.

"In the last four or five years, the administration hasn't lifted a damn finger to do anything for this place," he said. "If [graduate students] don't get what they want, they'll go on strike. . . We have to stand in solidarity with the graduate students and support them before they go on strike."

The SGA also voted to support a proposal which would reinstate the practice of tailgating at sporting events.

"[Former Chancellor Joseph] Duffey's elimination of tailgating was just sucking up to Governor Dukakis in order to become the secretary of education," said Deborah Linehan, CAG Senator. "Besides the partying, I believe tailgating would increase revenues and attendance at University sporting events."

However, other senators said the University's reputation would suffer with implementation of this policy.

"I would hate to see this as the first thing the Student Senate does this year. . . it seems really immature and pointless," said Tami Monahan, CAG Senator. "I don't necessarily think its a horrendous idea, but I don't think its a great idea, either."

Speaker tells of Iraqi plight

Back from Baghdad, traveler sees death, despair

By MADANMOHAN RAO
Collegian Staff

John Schuschart, a member of the Veteran's Peace Action Team, discussed first hand reports from a summer visit to the Middle East with an audience at Smith College's Stoddard Auditorium last night. He just returned from Baghdad this past Monday night.

Expressing his inability to communicate what he had witnessed, Schuschart asked the audience "How many of you know what it is like to be the victim of bombing by at least 2,000 planes a day? How many of you even know what a cluster bomb is?"

Describing the destruction in Baghdad and Basra, Schuschart said, "Every critical life-support system has been destroyed. The trauma of the victims is impossible to measure."

"The use of the word 'sanctions' to describe the siege, the act of killing by starvation, of the Iraqi people is linguicide," Schuschart said. "The sanctions are ensuring that the full-scale war in Iraq continues unabated."

"The X-ray rooms have no films, so that doctors can't find bullets to remove from the wounded, or to set bones," he said. "No prosthetics are available, and without them, limbs will atrophy."

"Raw sewage pours into the rivers, whose water the Iraqis use for drinking, cooking, and bathing," Schuschart said. "What we are doing is equivalent to giving them a big glass from their own sewage tank, and saying 'Drink that, cook with that, until you change your government."

"I saw a newborn baby, with the face of a 100-year old man," Schuschart said. "Just imagine that. He was not even strong enough to cry. I saw shepherds whose legs were blown off by parachuted mines. They have no livelihood now."

"Even though there was every opportunity for a peaceful settlement," Schuschart said, "for six months, the Pentagon lived through a nightmare: what if Iraq pulled out of Kuwait? Even though it was a United Nations-authorized war, the U.S. is not allowing U.N. teams to take in supplies like chlorine."

CONTINUED ON PAGE 9

NATO strong, official says

MICHELLE ROBBINS
Collegian Correspondent

The changes that have erupted in Europe since 1989 have raised concerns about the security of the countries in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, a high-level NATO offical told a crowd of about 50 last night at Smith College.

NATO's essential purpose is "a search for peace, freedom and security in Europe," said Dr. Erika v.C. Bruce, director of the Office of Information and Press of the Headquarters of NATO in Belgium, at a lecture sponsored by the European Club.

"[NATO has] moved from the hopelessness of the 50s to the hopefulness of the 90s," Bruce said. "But we must also expect disappointment, [such as] Saddam Hussein's reign of terror," she said. Bruce also warned against optimism in light of the nuclear arms race and the lingering effects of the Gulf War.

The London Declaration, the Charter of Paris, the unification of Germany, the Copenhagen Declaration, and the Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty are the "building blocks" of NATO's adaption to "the new world order," Bruce said.

The London Declaration, signed in July of 1990, seeks to reduce reliance on nuclear weapons and wants The Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe to become more prominent in Europe's future, Bruce said.

The Copanhagan Declaration, signed in June of

CONTINUED ON PAGE 9

Scholar says attitude key in Judaism

By DEBRA KRIEGSMAN
Collegian Staff

An American scholar teaching in Israel addressed different aspects of Jewish identity at the Hillel House Tuesday evening.

Dr. William Ressler, associate director of the Overseas Studies Program at Ben Gurion University in Beersheva and adjunct professor of psychology at Hebrew University in Jerusalem, spoke to an audience of about 20. The topic of his lecture was the Social Psychology of Jewish Identity.

Dr. Ressler said he wanted to "know what it is that motivates Jews to choose to identify themselves as Jews."

To find an answer, he conducted a survey of young Jewish adults. He studied all demographic variables including psychological well-being and concluded that "it is socialization of one's family, friends, and community combined with a positively valued distinctive education involving religious observances and study."

Ressler surprised his audience when he explained that "strict education, such as Jewish day schools and Yeshivas, has little if any bearing on Jewish adulthood. What has the most impact are parent, sibling and peer attitudes."

In reference to this, Josh Slomich, a sophomore at the University of Massachusetts, said, "Many Jews in Israel have protection but never go to shul (synagogue) and don't observe. There is no identification."

Ressler answered this by explaining that while the religious aspect of Jewish life is important, one needs to

CONTINUED ON PAGE 10

Peace possible in Middle East, expert says

By MORGAN BITTON
Collegian Staff

Although there are still many unanswered questions, prospects for Gulf security are relatively good, said Barry Rubin, director of a program on terrorism at Johns Hopkins University and author of 11 books on the Middle East.

"As I look at the whole situation, a long term slow development towards lowering conflict direction and working towards peace is possible, but its going to take longer than people in the U.S. expect," said Rubin.

Rubin spoke to an audience of about 75 in a lecture last night at Amherst College entitled "After the Persian Gulf War: Prospects for Peace in the Middle East," sponsored by the Five College Program in Peace and World Security Studies.

When the Gulf War began Rubin was in Israel where he was a Fullbright Fellow teaching at Haifa and Tel Aviv Universities.

"Nine months ago tonight I was preparing to go to sleep. At that moment there were eight explosions, very loud. The building started shaking and there were flashes in the sky," Rubin said.

Rubin explained that he does not regret being in the Middle East at the start of a war.

"I was actually glad I was there. It gave me a better understanding to be there under fire than to be running around Washington discussing it," he said.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 8

Collegian photo by Jeff Egan

Middle East specialist Barry Rubin lectures at Amherst College last night.

ANNUAL ARMY & NAVY
Surplus Sale

Genuine U.S. and European Surplus!

University of Massachusetts
Student Union Ballroom

October 15 thru 18th
Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday

9:00am - 8:00pm

Sponsored By:
Cape Verdean Student Alliance

- Genuine U.S. & European Military and Antique Overcoats $25-$35
- Wool, West German, British, French Pants $10 - $17
- U.S., British, French, Italian Wool Sweaters $8 - $15
- Mexican Baja Pullovers and Blankets $12 & $15
- Heavy Cotton, 6-Pocket Field Pants : U.S., Dutch, West German $7 - $16
- Genuine Issue Camo, Desert, Tiger, Urban Black Six Pocket Pants $25
- World Flags (3'x5') $10 each/ 2 for $18
- Down Feather Mummy Sleeping Bags (0' - 15') $30
- U.S. Navy Wool Middys and Peacoats $10 - $30
- Full Leather Raincoats & Trenchcoats $6 - $15

Wool Blankets, Gloves, Hats, Scarves, & Much, Much More!

presented by the Army Barracks of Martha's Vineyard

Mastercard, Visa, and American Express accepted

Main St RECORDS
SON OF Main St RECORDS
RECORDS · CASSETTES · COMPACT DISCS

IMPORTED, INDEPENDENT & DOMESTIC
MON - WED 9:30 - 6 SUN 12 - 5
THURS - SAT 9:30 - 9
213 MAIN ST. NORTHAMPTON
586-5726

COLLECTABLES · USED MANUFACTURER'S OVER-STOCKS
MONDAY - SATURDAY 10 - 5:30
THURSDAYS 10 - 9 SUNDAY 12 - 5
21 STATE ST. NORTHAMPTON
586-1707

HOURLY EXPRESS FROM AMHERST & U MASS
BOSTON • NEW YORK CITY
HARTFORD • SPRINGFIELD
NORTHAMPTON
Daily Service Throughout The Northeast
Connecting Services Nationwide
Sports and Recreational Packages
Peter Pan Buses Depart from
Haigus Mall - U-MASS
Peter Pan Bus Terminal
79 S. Pleasant St.
Amherst Center
Peter Pan
For schedules and fares call:
U-MASS Hotel 545-2006
Peter Pan Term ..256-0431

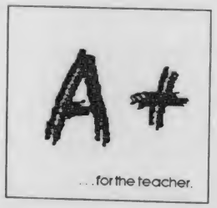
Robert Head
"IMAGES: ALASKA"
Paintings & Drawings

Student Union Gallery
October 17 - 31
Open 11 - 4 daily

Slide Lecture
October 17 3:30 - 5:00
Campus Center Room 162 -75

Opening Reception
October 17 5:00 - 7:00
Student Union Gallery

Sponsored in part by the U-MASS Arts Council



OUTSTANDING TEACHER AWARD

THE COLLEGE OF FOOD AND NATURAL RESOURCES invites students and faculty to submit nominations for the 1991-92 award

NOMINATION FORMS ARE AVAILABLE IN ROOM 111 STOCKBRIDGE HALL OR IN DEPARTMENTAL OFFICES

Faculty in the following departments are eligible for nomination:
Consumer Studies • Entomology • Food Science
Forestry and Wildlife Management
Hotel, Restaurant and Travel Administration
Landscape Architecture and Regional Planning
Nutrition • Plant and Soil Sciences • Plant Pathology
Resource Economics • Veterinary and Animal Sciences

World/Nation

Baker continues efforts toward peace conference

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press

DAMASCUS, Syria — Secretary of State James A. Baker III, after 12 hours of talks with Syrian leaders, yesterday said "we are still on course to hold a peace conference in the month of October."

Baker, before flying to Israel, said there was disagreement on only one point with Syrian President Hafez Assad — the timing of negotiations on such issues as the arms buildup in the Middle East and scarce water resources.

His statement, and similar remarks by Foreign Minister Farouk Sharaa, suggested the United States and the Soviet Union would be able to co-sponsor Arab-Israel negotiations by the end of the month, barring a last minute hitch.

Sharaa called the U.S.-Syrian discussions "very positive."

However, in explaining why Syria was reluctant to give its unqualified approval of negotiations on regional issues, he condemned Israel as being "intransigent" and "not positive."

"That's why we want to test the Israeli intentions at the peace conference," Sharaa said.

The foreign minister also responded with an impassioned 'no' when asked if he would shake the hand of his Israeli counterpart David Levy at a peace conference. "I would tell you frankly no, because this very hand is guilty" of depriving the Palestinians of their rights, Sharaa said.

Baker described the two days of talks here as both "extensive and positive" and said at a joint news conference with Sharaa that Assad had reiterated his intention to participate "in the peace conference itself."

As structured by the Bush administration, the conference, which U.S. and diplomatic sources said Tuesday is tentatively set to begin in Lausanne, Switzerland, on Oct. 29 would be held in phases.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said today it was possible that President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbechev would attend the opening of the conference.

After a ceremonial opening, Arabs and Israelis would negotiate head-to-head on the issues of Israeli control of lands the Arabs lost in the 1967 Six-Day War and, with the exception of Egypt, the refusal of Arabs to accept a Jewish state in the area.

The overriding objective as enunciated by Bush is a land-for-peace deal in which Israel would relinquish land in exchange for diplomatic recognition by the Arabs.

In a separate phase, such regional problems as Palestinian refugees, threats to the environment, scarce water supplies, and a growing military buildup would be negotiated. Saudi Arabia and other Persian Gulf countries would join the talks at that point.

Sharaa said Syria is interested in restricting weapons in the region and is concerned about the Palestinian refugees. But he said the best approach is to delay such discussions until Israel's attitude becomes clear in the other phase of the negotiations.

The chances of Baker keeping to the Oct. 29 date also depend heavily on whether the Palestinians, the last holdouts, signal their consent to negotiations with Israel.

The secretary could find additional problems in Jerusalem in separate meetings with Israeli leaders and a Palestinian group.

AP photo

CLASH AT NEWS CONFERENCE — A private security guard hired to protect the defense team for El Sayyed Nosair, the accused killer of Rabbi Meir Kahane, holds a gun up at the end of a news conference in New York Tuesday. Three supporters of Kahane clashed violently with friends and lawyers for Nosair. No shots were fired.

Uprising leader sentenced

EREZ JUNCTION, Occupied Gaza Strip (AP) — A leader of a radical Islamic group that has spearheaded the Palestinian uprising was convicted of manslaughter yesterday by a military court and sentenced to life in prison.

The court also sentenced Sheik Ahmed Yassin, 56, to 15 years in prison for incitement and leading an illegal organization. The sentences were to be concurrent. It was not known if or when he would be eligible for parole.

Yassin has used a wheelchair since an accident in his teens left him a quadriplegic.

His fundamentalist group Hamas — Arabic for zeal — has, along with the Palestine Liberation Organization, led the nearly 4-year-old Palestinian uprising against Israeli occupation of the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

On Tuesday, five Hamas founders arrested with Yassin were sentenced by the Gaza military court. Each was given four life sentences plus 30 years.

During today's session, Yassin tried to make a statement but was twice interrupted and then cut off by the judge.

"The course of history does not forget anything, and at the end we will always be tried by God," Yassin said.

He added: "It is not right that the Jewish people, who drank the bitter cup of exile, will give this bitter cup to the Palestinian people."

"Let's face it. You pass a lot of nameless, faceless people every day, and most of them will stay nameless and faceless. There are just too gosh-darned many people here for everyone to know everyone else. But when you work for the Collegian, things change. It's not like you get your picture printed with your article - people don't start to recognize you or anything. But it's still cool because you wrote something and a bunch of those people probably read it. Maybe you're still one of the faceless crowd, but at least people know your name now. Thank you Massachusetts Daily Collegian."

COLLEGIAN

"It's not just an adventure, it's a job."

Experience the inner workings of a daily newspaper first-hand. Come to our offices or give us a call. Go ahead. Make our day.

113 Campus Center Basement
545-3500

ATTENTION
Collegian Staff, career students & all others interested in writing for the COLLEGIAN
• October 20, Sunday
• 6:00pm Collegian Offices
Workshop on copy editing by Professor Sara Grimes
Mandatory for copy & night editors
Counts towards staff status requirements

MULTICULTURAL AFFAIRS EDITOR
POSITION AVAILABLE

* Covering MultiCultural Issues and
* Outreaching to the Alana. (Asian, Latino, African and Native American) communities

• Some news experience helpful
• Requires one news story each week, and editing a full page every two weeks.

Apply at the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass Amherst, Ma 01003 or call 545-3500.
Ask for Marc Elliott.The Collegian is an E.O.E.

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions on this page are those of the individual writer or cartoonist, and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian or the University unless otherwise noted.

Anita Hill was the real lynching victim of Senate hearing

The morning before Clarence Thomas was confirmed my truck was towed.

It was a miserable start to a miserable day. Even the weather agreed — it was grey and drizzly.

I spent all day Friday and Saturday listening to Professor Anita Hill and Judge Clarence Thomas testify, and frankly, I think the guy is a slime ball. He used shockingly transparent tactics to avoid having to answer any of Professor Hill's charges. But the Old Boys' Club [i.e. the Senate] went along without a murmur of protest.

Thomas told the Senate Committee he didn't bother to listen to Hill's statement on Friday. He also claimed that the hearings were "a high-tech lynching for uppity Blacks".

I agree with him. But he wasn't the uppity Black who got lynched. It was Professor Anita Hill whose neck was placed in a noose.

How cleverly convenient of Thomas to choose these tactics. It's difficult to delve into the specific nature of sexism charges when the accused refuses to hear the accusations. Its also a great diversionary tactic to scream "racism" so the nasty white senators won't ask any probing questions. Everyone seemed to forget Professor Hill is also black, making Thomas's claim of racism patently absurd.

In a real court of law, which the polemical Republican hatchet men Specter and Hatch kept pretending the hearings were, a defendant would have been forced to sit in the courtroom and listen to all the accusations and then respond in excruciating detail.

In a fact finding hearing or a court of law, why should the accused be treated with kid gloves? Don't we all want to know whether Thomas is actually a sexist pig? Why weren't his views on pornography, a legitimate legal issue, ever questioned, before or during this last hearing?

Since when, in a fact finding hearing or a court of law, do character witnesses outweigh the testimony of the victim and corroborating witnesses? Professor Hill had people testify that in the early 1980s she told them about the harassment. Clarence Thomas just paraded a lot of his friends before the committee who said he was a fine person. Geez!!! If criminals could do that whenever they're accused in court — no one would ever go to jail!

Trystan Skeigh

It seems the Republicans were intent on making this a her-versus-him war, and they already knew they were going to vote for him. This wasn't a fact-finding mission at all—it was a high-tech lynching of a Black woman who was subpoenaed to testify because she reluctantly revealed that she had been sexually harassed.

And that's what everyone in that damn hearing room seemed to conveniently forget: She didn't want to come forward.

Anita Hill is a political conservative and a Republican. She didn't want her affidavit to be made public, she didn't want to appear before the committee — she simply, after being approached several times, decided she had a responsibility to tell the truth of her experience while working with Thomas.

Unlike Thomas, Hill had no apparent motivation to lie. Yet the Republican "prosecutors," Specter, Hatch, and Danforth, threw out a wide array of accusations based on every blatently sexist theory in the book, including such dusty old daggers as she was a rejected woman, she fantasized the whole thing, or she was just a prop for some powerful men who wanted to bring Thomas down.

Thomas had every reason in the world to lie: his nomination to the Supreme Court was on the line. No sane person could possibly expect Thomas to admit to these charges — regardless of their accuracy. The most that could have been hoped for was that he would quietly withdraw, with his "categorical denial" intact. But the Specter/Hatch/Danforth smear campaign against Professor Hill made his withdrawal unnecessary.

I listened to one of the last senators who spoke before the vote Tuesday night. He said he thought Anita Hill was "guilty of ambition" because she followed Thomas to the EEOC rather than quit her job.

Who is being punished for being uppity?

In the end, the Old Boys of the Senate confirmed Judge Thomas to the Supreme Court. What a travesty.

The confirmation vote reflected the harsh fact that for women in this country, the irrational, pompous ravings of a man still carry more weight that the cool, rational, self-composed candor of a woman.

Just for the record, I want people to know that I believe Anita Hill.

Trystan Skeigh is a Collegian columnist

Financial catch-22 no fun

Every day I sit down and wonder why I don't write an article about my current miserable financial standing. I used to think it was bad when I only had twenty bucks to get me through the week. Now, due to extenuating circumstances, I have twenty bucks to get me through the rest of the month, and that's if I don't pay my car insurance.

Todd Kane

This summer, my father was laid off from his job at Palo Verde Nuclear Power Station in Phoenix, Arizona. The magnitude of this event was increased ten-fold because I had just driven 2,900 miles from Massachusetts to Arizona to spend a fun-filled summer with good old dad. I arrived, exhausted and burnt to a crisp, only to find my father miserable and unemployed.

Not knowing what to do about my situation, I decided to take a step toward independence by getting a job in Phoenix in order to save money for the upcoming fall semester. You know, the bill that used to be $2,600 for room, board, and tuition that has remained the same, only without room and board. Well, I went out on a job search and found myself unwilling to slave away making $4.25 an hour doing the same thing that I get paid $7.78 an hour to do in Massachusetts.

My mind was made up — I was going home. I hopped in the truckster and mosied on back to Plymouth and got my old job back.

Here's where it starts to get interesting. I was making enough money to live on after rent was paid, but I also had to pay rent on my apartment in Sunderland. After both rents were paid, I was left with nothing.

I was beginning to freak out at work. I saw myself ten years down the road, working at a group home knowing that I was only two semesters away from a college degree. No way! I was unwilling to accept defeat. I immediately applied for a TERI loan. This is a school loan based on credit, not financial need. I got a letter of rejection a week before my college bill was due.

"What do you mean rejected? I have five credit cards and only one has a balance!"

"Yes Mr. Kane, you do have credit cards but you also have a sufficient debt of over six hundred dollars." My god, it was really happening, I was denied a loan because of money that I charged for my trip to Arizona!

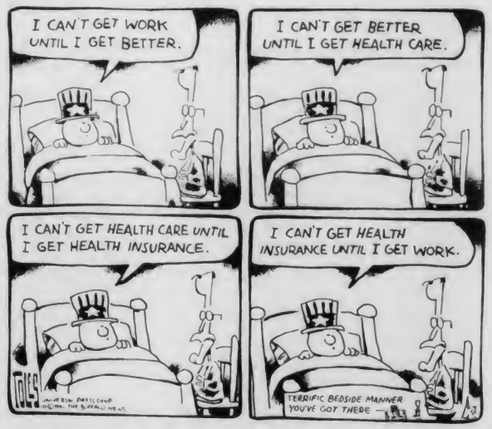
What were my options? The only way I would be able to return to school is by charging it. I ambled over to the local Baybank and took out cash advances on two of my cards and all of my reserve credit. Yes, I was buried in loathsome debt, but at least I could stick the "Valid Fall 1991" sticker on my I.D.

That was then, this is now. I regret ever making that move. Do you have any idea what it's like to pay 19.8% interest on over $3,000 dollars? I am trapped in a whirlwind of bills. You ought to see me when I come back from the mailbox with my bills, they swirl around me like dirt swirls around Pigpen in Peanuts.

You are probably saying, "Get a job, you swine." The truth of the matter is that, taking four English classes this semester has pretty much doused my burning desire to pound the pavement looking for a job. I have applied to a few local places, but I would rather be shot in the kneecaps than work at a convenience store.

I anticipate that I will be working within a week. The income will be nice, but it will be just enough to pay my debts.

Looks like that Ferrari I was thinking about will have to wait.



I CAN'T GET WORK UNTIL I GET BETTER.
I CAN'T GET BETTER UNTIL I GET HEALTH CARE.
I CAN'T GET HEALTH CARE UNTIL I GET HEALTH INSURANCE.
I CAN'T GET HEALTH INSURANCE UNTIL I GET WORK.
TERRIFIC BEDSIDE MANNER YOU'VE GOT THERE —

So, what is my point? I guess the point is that those of you who are not faced with such grave financial difficulties as I should count your blessings. With the cost of education rising like sourdough bread, I worry about what I am going to do next semester.

It frustrates me that financial aid forms are necessary for consideration for most college loans. My father does not claim me as a dependent on his tax returns anymore, but the financial aid form wants to know if he did last year and the year before.

Yes, he claimed me in 1989 and 1990, but this is 1991 and he was out of work all summer. Still, the financial aid people told me that he makes to much money for me to get aid.

So, the fact remains that I am poor, very much in debt, and tired of fighting with banks who don't believe me. When you are faced with the fact that you alone are responsible for your own education, you learn quite a bit about its value. Whatever I have learned about the value of education has not taken away from the realization that, without money, I can't learn. This is a simple fact of life — sad but true.

Todd Kane is a Collegian columnist

Chris Hani Coalition creates a united front against racism and sexism

We could make a list as long as this page of the problems facing most United States citizens today: rising unemployment, runaway factories, no national health or day care system, an increasingly militarized society, falling salaries and rising prices. The fact is we can not live on what we make.

We are not insulated by our student status. As students we face these same problems. Many of us know other young people who can not afford to return to UMass or who were never able to be here at all. There's nothing arbitrary about who gets hit hardest. Black and Latino young people, working class families, and working single mothers carry the burden of the economic crisis in the country.

The face of UMass is changing. It is becoming a bargain for the rich and impossibility for everybody else. Public institutions are no longer accessible to the public. Public institutions across the nation are meeting the same fate: rising tuition and fees, decreasing services and a shrinking student body. This is part of the trend of greater tax breaks for corporations and the rich, while the tab is picked up by those who can least afford it.

The political and cultural system mimics the economic disparity. It is clear this country is in a complete crisis. Although the attitude "I just want to get through college (or graduate school)" is a logical reaction to the crisis, it is actually the opposite of what we need to get by. This is the precise time that individual can not make it on our own. Now is not the time to isolate ourselves. Self-respect and dignity come from struggling against the dehumanizing forces. These are problems we can not run away from, despite Bush's prophecies that the recession is over. We know the opposite is true. Efforts to distract us from this reality surface with a second threat to Iraq. This crisis is growing worse and worse and from this side of the White House gate, it is not going to get any better without radical change.

This university, which in essence is a small city, mirrors the larger social reality. This economic reality is connected with the rising racial, sexual, homophobic, and anti-semitic displays of prejudice and violent attacks. While lawmakers, the President, and the police inanely label these as "bias-related crimes," those of us who acknowledge these connections clearly see these crimes as a much more vicious and dangerous violation of human and civil rights. Let's call it what it is and realize the need for collective organizing.

As students we occupy a unique place in history and culture. The Chris Hani Coalition is reforming this semester to continue working against racism and to provide a voice of resistance to the political and economic crisis. Black, White, and Latino people, gay men and lesbian women, working people, Jewish people — our interests lie in a united front against the racist, sexist, ruling class forces in our country. On both domestic and international fronts, we must raise our voices and carve out a role for ourselves in shaping the future of this nation. The Chris Hani Coalition will hold an open meeting on Thursday, Oct. 17 at 7:30. It will be held in room 311 of the New Africa House.

Binky Feldman
Amherst

Finding out that government isn't worth the free pastry

It's time to take out the trash.

Well, okay, I'll recycle because as Wilford Brimley says in those lovable oatmeal commercials, "It's the right thing to do."

What I mean is, here's a few ideas that have been kicking around my head for columns. They could have all been columns in their own right, but I'm too lazy to develop them. Yeah, it's cheap. But cheap works just fine by me.

When I was younger I had delusions about being in Congress. I thought it would be kind of neat to have influence, power and all the free donuts and coffee I could chow between votes.

I grew up and realized what "power" and "influence" were made of — political action committee money. "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" was indeed nothing but a Frank Capra movie — a good movie, mind you, but just a movie — and the Thomas fiasco made that fact painfully easy to remember.

Who are these people that make up the Senate, this legislative body that holds so much power and decides who our judges and CIA directors should be?

Wealthy White guys with funny names like Howell Heflin and Orrin Hatch and Strom Thurmond. Wealthy White guys playing God with the lives of Clarence Thomas, Anita Hill and anyone else who testified. If you or I can't tell who's telling the truth and who's telling fibs, who the hell are they to decide?

Well, enough ranting and raving. It's over, Clarence Thomas is a Supreme Court justice and the American public can slip back into comfortable apathy again. Pass me another beer.

Two last things before I change gears, though. First, when Hill's charges went public, Nina Totenberg, the National Public Radio reporter who broke the story, appeared on Nightline with Alan Simpson, Republican senator from Wyoming. You remember him — the one who wanted to hang CNN war reporter Peter Arnett for "treason" during the Gulf War and said so on the Senate floor?

Greg Sukiennik

Anyway, Simpson was predictably slamming the media for these awful leaks in what amounted to a personal attack on Totenberg. But do you know what she said in response?

"If you guys had done your job and investigated this issue, [the media] wouldn't have to depend on leaks."

Enough said.

Second, is it me, or does Howell Heflin look and sound like Foghorn Leghorn?

If you're sick of homework and parties, here's a fun weekend suggestion from a Western Mass dude like me who knows these kinds of things.

Jump in the Dodge Dart, grab some pals and head for the countryside to check out the foliage. The countryside isn't that far away from campus, as you may have noticed, and the spectacle of leaves changing all sorts of brilliant colors is a sight you shouldn't miss. Grab a picnic basket and go for it.

It's a lot less expensive than uptown, too.

There's something about yelling yourself hoarse with 4,057 other people that appeals. I guess that's why I really had a blast at Midnight Madness.

Some non-basketball things about a basketball evening stood out, even amongst thunderous slam dunks and an impressive freshman recruiting class. Like the guy in the end zone seats who tossed his cookies, apparently due to overzealous devotion to Bacchus. Fan hint: don't try this at home.

Then there was the four-legged fan who circled the court before the festivities began. How Fido got past the security guards without a student ID I don't know, but no one seemed to mind. I wonder if he found a seat. . .

Why is there a sandbar in the Campus Pond? If you've been by the Isle of View lately to feed the ducks, you may have noticed this pile of sludge above the waterline nearby. It's an eyesore.

Indeed, the Pond somehow always winds up infested with all sorts of junk. That's why I'm telling you about a volunteer effort to clean the Pond Oct. 24-26. Physical Plant is kicking in the materials, so all that's needed is your time, effort and consideration. Look for the handbills about this worthy project in the Campus Center. Better yet, show up at the Pond those days.

After all, Wilford says "It's the right thing to do."

Greg Sukiennik is a Collegian columnist who rarely eats oatmeal

Courage transcends

I'm sure you are sick of reading anything regarding a certain two people, namely Thomas and Hill, so don't worry, my aim here is not to bore you with my own rendition.

This past holiday weekend, I headed south down 91 to The Big Apple. Spending three days with my grandparents and uncle, I visited "the Village," window shopped in Manhattan and was awed by the bright lights on 42nd street.

Felice Cohen

But of all the sights I saw, the most memorable occurred on Sunday morning. Along with my grandparents and my great aunt, we attended a Holocaust Survivors brunch.

Milling about the spacious room, over 100 faces were bouncing around from table to table. Sharing hugs and exchanging "you look greats" in between bites of bagels, they reminisced about family and friends.

Watching closely, I noticed there was something unique in all their faces, though I could not decipher what it was.

Speaking with Polish and German accents, dressed in colorful attire, they blurted out expressions only Mel Brooks could dream of capturing on film.

Jotting down notes (a habit I've picked up since becoming a columnist), my grandfather asked if I was planning on speaking.

"What? No!" I blurted out, but it was too late. He was already on his feet and suddenly my name was penciled in on the morning's agenda.

No idea of what to say, I was told to "talk about the things you do at school. You'll pick up a theme from the other speakers."

So that's what I did.

Singing the American and the Israeli national anthems, the meeting was under way, and before I knew it, I was being introduced. Approaching the podium, staring into a sea of spectacled faces, the words flew freely.

"First I would like to say that my intentions for coming this morning were for the New York Bagels." Laughs.

"My grandparents, they're the ones over there beaming, suggested that I talk about what I do in school that pertains to being Jewish. It is my responsibility that there is sufficient coverage of Jewish events in the school newspaper. Though I've realized that those responsibilities don't end when I leave the newsroom, but just begin.

"As a third generation survivor, making sure that people are educated about the Holocaust is crucial so that it doesn't happen again." It was at that point I realized what it was I had seen in their faces.

"The theme of this morning has become clear to me, it is connectedness.

As survivors, you are each connected through your courage, for which your just being alive proves. In turn just knowing that I am connected to you gives me the courage I need to survive in my life."

Heading back to my seat among the clapping, I was kissed and hugged by people I had never seen before, yet felt connected to.

One older man approached me and in Yiddish said "When you see a child of such caring like this, it gives you the courage to live, because you know that some one like this is existing."

After my grandmother translated this to me, the Hill incident became clear. For the issue of whether she was sexually harassed by Thomas is irrelevant, he won anyway. But was it ever her intention for him not to? Knowing the tremendous coverage that her speaking out would create, maybe Hill's reasonings were for the many other women and men who are being harassed every day.

I was overcome with the urge to call up Hill and to say to her what that old man had said to me. But alas, I cannot speak Yiddish.

Felice Cohen is a Collegian columnist

GORBY'S DEVELOPING A NEW CLASS OF DISARMAMENT PROPOSALS TO GIVE HIM A NUMERICAL, IF NOT INDEED A QUALITATIVE DISARMAMENT PROPOSAL ADVANTAGE.
Fling Fling
Write write
Fold Fold
ONE MISCALCULATION, AND IT'S BUDGET SAVINGS

Conservative, but not prejudiced

I must begin by stating that I am not a liberal — although certain views I hold may be considered liberal, such as gay rights and affirmative action, I prefer to think of myself as a conservative.

Which is exactly why I attended the first meeting of the University of Massachusetts Republican Club. I can now say that I do not plan to join the club and I am beginning to rethink my views. There were approximately 14 current members of the club present, mostly club officers and the staff of the Minuteman, the Club's conservative newspaper.

As the president of the club spoke to open the meeting, I became more agitated and appalled at what the club stood for. In his speech (if one can call a disjointed and unorganized collection of statements a speech) he attacked many liberal views as well as the "liberal rag," the Collegian. He gave no reasons for the flaws of these other modes of thought but just mentioned them in passing.

Another member, an officer in Young Americans for Freedom, announced that they were planning a "straight pride" rally as a compliment to the liberal "gay pride" rallies. Whether or not malice is intended, it puts forth a message that heterosexuals are being oppressed by homosexuals.

These are not ideas I've ever known to be associated with the Republican Party. I am a registered Republican and I speak with other Republicans, but none have expressed views like the members of this club. They are hiding behind the Republican name to carry out their hardcore, reactionary ultra-conservative views. They stand for none of the Republican ideals I hold true, or inasmuch as I gathered from the meeting.

The aspect of club that disturbed me the most was something I read in a pamphlet that was handed out to open the meeting. It had a short "Republican Quiz" that was supposed to tell you if you are a Republican or not.

If you answered "yes" to questions such as "Are you labled a racist because you disagree with affirmative action?" and "Have you been informed by your RA/RD that your beliefs regarding homosexuality are 'homophobic?" then you are correct in joining the club.

I am not a Republican to keep minorities a permanent underclass and to become rich by exploiting the American public. I believe in strong fiscal policies and social programs. I encourage UMass students never to join the Republican Club if you believe in the equality of man and the "American Dream." Do you really want to be a part of something that relies on funding from the John Birch Society to bring in a speaker? I don't.

Michael Seager
Orchard Hill

Just a few quick reminders about the ongoing excitement at the Editorial desk.

We're still looking for witty, able student cartoonists from the five-college area to liven up our pages. Neatness counts - usually, lengthwise on an 8 1/2 by 11 sheet of paper. No ballpoint pen please - use black or blue felt-tip or ink; it looks better.

Also, just a brief reminder on our letter policy. It is important to keep letters as concise as possible, because it looks really lousy when we have to chop a 90-line letter down to a scant 35 lines. As the editorial policy notes, letters should be under 50 double-spaced, typed lines. We're not being picky - it just makes our job a bit easier. Include your name, address and phone number as well.

Keep those nifty letters and columns coming. Drop them off at the Collegian, 113 Campus Center. We'd dig it.

Thomas

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

"There's general agreement around the country and certainly in the Senate that the present process is not fair," Bush said.

"We definitely have to change the process," Sen. John Breaux of Louisiana, one of 11 Democrats who voted in favor of the Thomas nomination, told CBS today.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, a leader of the fight for Thomas on the Senate Judiciary Committee, called the process "just lousy." In an interview on ABC, Hatch blamed "a dishonest senator on the committee and his staff" who, he said, leaked the affidavit in which Anita Hill alleged she was the victim of sexual harassment by Thomas. The senator said he had no idea who was responsible for the leak.

Hatch and Breaux criticized the involvement of "special interest groups in the process."

Breaux said they engaged in "a search and destroy mission where they go out and try to find one incident [to discredit a nominee] . . . We have to change that."

Thomas will take his seat on the court in time to join the review of a heavy load of high-profile cases. Ironically for a man whose nomination was nearly lost in a swirl of allegations involving sexual harassment and X-rated movies, one of his first cases involves the question of prosecution of pornography customers.

Bush telephoned the newest justice as soon as the confirmation vote was in. He praised the conservative black jurist as "a man of honesty, dedication and commitment to the Constitution and the rule of law."

peace prospects

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

Both global and regional changes have contributed to all the events which have taken place in the Middle East over the past few months, Rubin said. Global changes include the decline in power of the Soviet Union and the increase in power of the United States. Regional changes mainly consist of the decline of pan-Arabism, the idea of Arab states uniting as one, he said.

Rubin said he believes the Arab states have realized that pan-Arabism is a dream which cannot become a reality.

"Each Arab state has developed its own history, economy and identity, he said."

Disappointment with Islamic Fundamentalism and pan-Arabism caused a situation which Rubin described as a "political vacuum."

Saddam Hussein portrayed himself as "Iraq's Nationalist," Rubin said.

"Saddam broke the taboo of one Arab state rising against another," Rubin continued. "The Arab masses did not turn to Saddam as various Middle East experts predicted, he didn't appear to be a winner."

In the aftermath of the war, Rubin said that he feels pan-Arabism is "less and less a force in the region."

Looking at the present conflicts in the Middle East, Rubin said, "We are in a period in which there will be a lot more cooperation and openness in reaching settlement."

Credibility and trust among Middle East States is low, Rubin said. He believes it is "highly probable there will be a regional peace conference" but added "it is not clear whether any parties are in favor of the conference succeeding."

Perm Special
$40.00/includes cut
(shoulder length hair)

We feature:
PAUL MITCHELL
REDKEN • NEXXUS
SEBASTIAN

Special Tanning Offer
10 for $30.00

Just bring this Ad

HAIR NAILS TANNING
Hairworks PLUS
Campus Plaza • Rte. 9, Hadley • 253-3334

Conveniently located next to Super Stop and Shop

Home of the 99¢
~ Long ~ HOT DOG
1/4 lb. Hamburgers
Fries
Onion Rings
Grinders
Fish & Chips
PETE'S DRIVE-IN
11am-10pm • 7 Days
Route 9, Hadley
585-0241

WANTED:
USED MAC's
WE BUY YOUR USED MAC EQUIPMENT FOR TOP DOLLAR. CASH! WE SELL REFURBISHED MAC's AT DISCOUNT! CALL FOR QUOTE.
RENTEX INC. (800) 545-2313, (617) 423-5567

RÉSUMÉS
Copy Cat Print Shop
• Great Service • Great Prices •
228 Triangle St. • Amherst • 549-3840

One Way From $12

Round Trip From $24

THE ONLY NON-STOP SERVICE
AMHERST TO BOSTON

Leaves Amherst		Arrives Boston
5:40 AM		8:30 AM
7:00 AM		9:50 AM
Δ 7:30 AM	Express	9:50 AM
8:00 AM		11:00 AM
9:00 AM		12:30 PM
11:00 AM		2:00 PM
* 12:00 PM	Express	2:30 PM
12:01 PM		3:15 PM
* 12:45 PM	Non-Stop Express	2:40 PM
1:00 PM		3:50 PM
* 1:45 PM	Non Stop Express	3:40 PM
2:00 PM		5:00 PM
* 2:45 PM	Non-Stop Express	4:40 PM
3:00 PM		6:30 PM
* 3:45 PM	Non-Stop Express	5:40 PM
4:00 PM		6:50 PM
* 4:45 PM	Non-Stop Express	6:40 PM
5:00 PM		8:00 PM
* 6:10 PM	Express	8:45 PM
6:10 PM		9:20 PM
8:20 PM		11:35 PM
10:20 PM		1:35 AM
1:20 AM		4:35 AM

Departure times are from Amherst U-Mass campus (Haigus Mall). Bus departs Amherst Center Terminal 5 Minutes later
* Friday Only Δ Monday Through Friday Only

Peter Pan Buses Depart from
Haigus Mall - U-MASS
Peter Pan Bus Terminal
79 S. Pleasant St.
Amherst Center

Peter Pan
For schedules and fares call:
U-MASS Hotel 545-2006
Peter Pan Term 256-0431

CAMPUS EMPLOYMENT

Student Manager
Information Data Bank

QUALIFICATIONS: Demonstrated (through previous experience and/or recommendations) good communication skills; organizational and supervisory skills; ability to organize data, proof-read, edit; typing and/or word processing skills required; promotional and marketing experience desirable.

ELIGIBILITY: Undergraduate (preferably College Work Study eligible), with at least three semesters remaining at the beginning of the Spring Semester 1992 (excluding summer).

PAY RATE: $6.00 per hour

WORK SCHEDULE: Must be available for a minimum of ten hours per week and on site at least four days per week.

STARTING DATE: Immediately. Training will be provided.

APPLICATIONS: Obtain an application at the Information Data Bank, 2nd floor lobby Whitmore. Deadline is October 24, 1991. An interview may be required.

The Information Data Bank (IDB) is a telephone or walk-in referral center which maintains information on University administrative and academic policies and procedures; bus, library, athletic etc. schedules; campus current events; and a variety of other reference materials.

The Student Manager is responsible for the day-to-day operations of IDB including recruiting, training, scheduling, and supervising a student staff of 8; maintaining and updating the IDB library and information resources; with the assistance of the Graphics Coordinator, arranging for the preparation and placement of one ad per week in the Collegian.

For additional information contact IDB at 545-1555

THIS WEEKEND

Greed is good, Volpone is hysterical

By DANIEL JOKELSON
Collegian Correspondent

It's an amazingly ironic process sometimes. Designers, stagehands, dramaturgs, directors, stage managers and actors all working long hours together so they can put on a play that shows the devisive nature of human beings — the part of us that will do anything for money and possessions in a century where greed is still one of our golden virtues. But Ben Jonson's Volpone is not that black and white. Although it delves unreservedly into the heart of a society we still sustain (even though the play was written over 300 years ago), where women are put in negligible roles by men and morals are dictated by money, Volpone is also a hysterically funny farce that makes us laugh at ourselves and the extremes we go to to get what we want.

"The satirical intention is very sharp," says Professor Virginia Scott, the dramaturg who adapted the play so that it speaks to our generation. Volpone's premise is this: a rich entrepreneur, Volpone, feigns sickness, and with the help of his servant, Mosca, dupes his fiendishly greedy acquaintances into giving him their wealth so that they'll be "assured" of getting his when he dies. The want-something-for-nothing attitude of the scoundrels makes Volpone's and Mosca's roles appealing because they make the best out of these greedy, self-centered people.

Mosca in particular elicits our sympathy because she "lives by her wits," says Scott. "She's very clever and manipulative, and she puts up a facade of servility, which is what women have to do [to assert themselves in today's world]". Mosca was originally a male character, but both Scott and director, Ed Goldstein, felt that having a woman play the role would speak to the reality of our time. "It gives the play an edge, because of the nature of the role," says Golden.

It was the power of that switch and ulti-

CONTINUED ON THIS WEEKEND PAGE 2

VOLPONE

■ Volpone

CONTINUED FROM THIS WEEKEND PAGE 1

mately the greed and pressure that drives people to play these roles that struck a chord in Golden. "Volpone makes a point, in a wonderful, ironic, pungent way, about greed in society that's timeless." He was also stimulated by the hilarious extremes that these people go to. "It's wonderfully theatrical" — the actors talk directly to the audience at times, an intimate style of theater that modern playwrights don't often use. At the heart of the production is the desire to get the audience involved as much as possible: to feel, laugh, and think about its implications.

Everyone related to the production helps this cause in different ways. For lighting designer Lisa Newman, it was to light the mood of the play, and let the actors add the comedy. "The vehicle is funny, but the point isn't," she says. She has tried to leave just a touch of real life in her moody lighting without negating the fact that the play is essentially funny. Scenic designer Guo-Wen Fang has created a "money world" in such a way that "the audience can see themselves as characters in the play," while at the same time making sure that the set remains "just a very good background for the actors, to make the performances more clear."

Actor Joan Jubett plays Celia, a controversial role because of the abusive treatment she receives from her husband, Corvino. Jubett had to find a way to show that Celia's tolerance of abuse is understandable given the society that surrounds her, which treats women as wealth and not as people. She chose to find Celia's strengths, such as her faith in God in a godless society, to keep Celia human.

Costume designer John McDermott concentrated on images of animals for the characters' appearances (most characters' names are Italian manes for animals: Mosca=fly, Volpone=fox, etc.) and used those images to accentuate the personality traits of each character in his costumes. All costumes are 20th century and make a real first impression so that the audience can say, "I've seen that kind of person."

"I make sure that people know what other people are doing, so that nobody gets hurt," says Kathy Bloch, the stage manager. Does that sound like a moral to a play? Come and discover for yourself this week and next week, but hurry: the theater holds less than 100 and it's selling fast!

The University of Massachusetts Department of Theater's Volpone, or the Fox is playing Oct. 16-19 and 2-26 in the Curtain Theater at 8 p.m. each night, with a 2 p.m. show on the 19th.

Photo courtesy of the Fine Arts Center

Lady Would-Be (Holly O'neall Waite, left) does all she can to ingratiate herself into the graces of the wealthy but ailing Volpone (Edward M. Jewett) and his scheming servant Mosca (Tess O'Brien) in Volpone.

Spirit Haus
Liquor Store

NEW AMSTERDAM BEER ..... $4.99 six pack

LITE BEER ..... $12.99 case 12 oz. bottles

LIONSHEAD DELUXE PILSNER ..... $8.99 case

BECK'S BEER ..... $17.79 case 12 oz. bottles

RED HOT SCHNAPPS $6.99 750ml

ABSOLUTE VODKA 80° $12.49 750ml

Kegs starting at $33.00 - CHECKS/MASTERCARD/VISA ACCEPTED FOR KEG DEPOSITS. Gourmet Beers for special occasions - Plus over 35 Malt Scotches & Cognacs, Brandies & Champagnes

MEGABUCKS, WE HAVE IT!

338 College Street • one mile east of Amherst center on Route 9
Open 9 am - 11 pm Rain or Shine - Always open
VISA & MASTERCARD ACCEPTED

Looking For Entertainment?

Come on down to Northampton Bowl to chill and bowl with students from the Five College area.

: No experience necessary!
: Shoe Rentals are Free!
: Bowl two or three games for 99 cents a game!
: It's after classes and before the evening!
: Relaxing!
: Beat Mike and he'll pay for that game!

Fridays 3:30 - 5:30 : Call Michael Alcock at 549-5088
(leave a message! Ride info, Details, Curiosity, or whatever. Contact me.

GREG'S
AUTO BODY

Continental Collision Repair Systems Authorized REPAIR CENTER

• MASS. STATE APPROVED SHOP
• FRAME & UNIBODY REPAIRS
• INSURANCE WORK
• RENTAL CARS AVAILABLE
• LOCATED ON THE BUS ROUTE

"WE DO THE INSURANCE PAPERWORK FOR YOU...WITH A SMILE"
"Where Quality Always Comes First"

665-3989 Old Amherst Rd. Sunderland
35 years of experienced staff waiting to serve you MASS LIC. RS1560

Patrick & Co. knows how to make my hair feel so good.
Let's get your hair in shape for the cold weather.

$10.00 off any chemical service
$5.00 off a haircut
$15.00 off a haircut & chemical service
Exp. 10/31/91

Columbus found America now you can find

Patrick & Co.
Distinctive Hairstyling For Men & Women

for great haircare.

appointments or walk-ins
586-7477

104 Russell Street • Elmwood Shops
Hadley, MA 01035

GREATER SPRINGFIELD RECORD CONVENTION

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 20, 1991
SPRINGFIELD CIVIC CENTER
SPRINGFIELD, MA
10 AM TO 4 PM
ADMISSION $3

DOOR PRIZE: $50 CASH

RECORDS TAPES CD'S 45'S POSTERS VIDEOS MAGAZINES
ROCK FOLK JAZZ BLUES CLASSICAL SOUNDTRACKS COUNTRY

"A MUSIC LOVER'S PARADISE"

PRODUCED BY: GREATER PROMOTIONS
(GREATER HARTFORD RECORD CONVENTION)
(203)721-7523

Two Irish feminist poets dispel myths

By KERRY HERLIHY
Collegian Staff

Historically in Irish mythology, images of women have largely been created through men's imaginations. Yet, there are two Irish women who have begun to challenge this tradition and reshape it in the process.

Nuala Ni Dhomhnaill, an Irish poet who has been critically acclaimed internationally along with Angela Bourke, a feminist scholar and short story writer from University College Dublin, will hold a two day symposium "The Female in the Irish Imagination sponsored by the Five College Irish Studies Program, on Oct. 22-23 deconstructing and elaborating on this mythology.

Bourke and Ni Dhomhnaill will conduct two seminars. "The Hag and the Maiden in the Irish Imagination" will be held on Tuesday, Oct. 22 and "Sidhe" (an Irish term for the fairy realm perceived as female) will be held the following day on Oct. 23. Both seminars will be held in the Babbott Room at Amherst College at 4 p.m. Bourke will also lecture on "Lament Poetry" on Tuesday night at 8 p.m. in Memorial Hall at the University of Massachusetts. Ni Dhomhnaill will give a reading of her poetry on Wednesday night, Oct. 23 at 8 p.m. at Memorial Hall.

Ni Dhomhnaill is extraordinary for several reasons. She is one of a relative few who has mastered the Irish language and chooses it as a medium for her poetry. Also her feminist voice is rare in this field where many myths have been male constructed. She has received several awards including The O'Shaughnessy Poetry Prize from the Irish American Cultural Institute.

Margaret O'Brien, director of the Irish Studies program, believes Ni Dhomhnaill is setting a precedent in Irish literature.

"She is very involved with feminist rage and the expression of it," O'Brien said. "She mixes traditional imagery with very colloquial language. There is a strange juxtaposition between pre-Christian and late twentieth century Ireland. The movement between these two pools of resources is the hallmark of her work."

O'Brien feels Bourke is "the first feminist theorist to deal with literature and folklore in Irish." She said, "She is a brilliant psychoanalytic reader of myth and folklore. She recognizes the contribution of Irish women to civilization."

O'Brien said the two women, who are close colleagues in Dublin, are excited about conducting this seminar together.

"They are relieved that neither has to be the star," O'Brien said. "The advantage of having Angela (Bourke) is she is able to deconstruct the mythology of the poet and tease out of the narrative the feminist implications."

All events are free and open to the public.

It's time to take out the Trash

By KYLE PRZEKOPOWSKI
Collegian Correspondent

The interesting and innovative sounds of Electra recording stars White Trash will be permeating the walls of Katina's in Hadley this coming Sunday, Oct. 20. The group, along with supporting act, The Lost, will be performing to an all-ages crowd, with doors opening around 8 p.m. This is the group's first area appearance, so catch them while they're fresh - or better yet, while they're here.

The group, hailing from Queens, N.Y., blends a variety of different sounds and influences into their current musical offering. Several influences can be detected when listening to their self-titled debut album: contemporary hard rock, 70s electric funk, and a unique element supplied by their three-piece horn section. A prime example of this multi-faceted sound is heard on their AOR (Album-Oriented Rock) hit "Apple Pie," whose video was played on the regular rotaion of daily MTV over the summer. This track as well as others like "Judge-Me-Do," "Take My Soul," and "Backstage Pass" provide a good-time rock sound that ought to be befriend even the most serious of listeners.

The breakdown of the band is, essentially, two different musical entities incorporated into one. The core of White Trash is: Dave Alvin on lead vocals; brothers Aaron and Ethan Collins on bass and lead guitar, respectively; and Mike Caldarella on drums. The complementary horn section, known as the Badass Brass, is: Chris Arbisi on Alto sax, Terry Thomas on tenor sax, and Brandon Stiles on trumpet. The two combine to form somewhat of a funky Golden Earring-AC/DC sound that, when laid down by these party-goers from New York, produce an amalgam unlike any other of its kind.

From their album and video, one can easily see that these guys aren't big on ballads and earth-conscious pleas. Their songs are simple and fun, like their music, and should be taken as such. On tracks such as "Party Line" and "Prayer B4 Pizza," they're laying it down straight, revealing what they're like, and promoting a straight-out good time not heard of since the days of groups Foghat and KISS. The artwork on the cover of their debut album, created by Jack Davis, shows the group in their natural habitat of beer, girls, and all-around revelry. The music video for "Apple Pie", shot at 59th Street Bridge in New York City, is quite typical of the band's jocular intentions, and that is what they're likely to bring to the Pioneer Valley on Sunday night.

Moving from the clubs of New York City to our neck of the woods is going to be quite

CONTINUED ON THIS WEEKEND PAGE 7

IRON HORSE & 93HMS PRESENT
Michelle Shocked
An Evening With Michelle Shocked-
Halfway to Arkansas Tour
8:30 PM FRI. OCT 25
ACADEMY OF MUSIC
NORTHAMPTON, MA
TIX $18.50 / $16.50 ADV.
ALL TIX NORTHAMPTON BOX OFFICE 150 MAIN ST
TICKETRON 586-8686

PANDA EAST
Advocate "Best in the Valley" 1989 &1990
CHINESE RESTAURANT
We bring Chinatown to you
* Lunch Specials *
from $3.95 including soup & rice
Hours:
Mon. - Thurs. 11³⁰ am - 9³⁰ pm
Fri. & Sat. 11³⁰ am - 10³⁰ pm
Sunday 12 noon - 9³⁰ pm
103 N.Pleasant St. Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 256-8923 (413) 256-8924

RUSSELL'S
Discount LIQUORS Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441

Capt. Morgan $7.99 750 ml

Koch's Golden Anniversary
$7.99 case Everyday!

Sutter Home White Zinfandel $3.99
750ml; 3 bots for $10.99

Beck's Beer $8.99 12/PK bots

BUD DRY + BUD LIGHT
$6.99 12/pk bots

Foster's $8.99 12/PK bots.

Vodka 80° $8.99 1.75L $5.99 L

Visa/Mastercard accepted on keg deposits
Many More In-Store Specials
(especially on wines) 'Delivery Available'
All Beers plus Deposit

KATINA'S
NOW - EVERY WEDNESDAY
HOT ROCK REGGAE
LIVE ONE LOVE BAND
Free Shape Beer & Island Oasis Frozen Tropical Drinks!
HAWAIIAN ISLAND FUN! 18+
SELECTROCUTION
The Area's THURSDAY HOT SPOT!
High-Tech Fantasia 18+
THE MACHINE
PINK FLOYD SUPER SHOW
Come early - It's Awesome!
18+
SELECTROCUTION
MEET PEOPLE WHO LIKE TO HAVE FUN! 18+
WHITE TRASH
+ THE LOST All Ages
FRI. 10/25 Alternative Entertainment presents: BRITESIDE, MONA LISA, INSIDE CHARLOTTE, & MORIAN
SUN 10/27 HALLOWEEN THRASH BASH!
FRI. 11/1 JOHN VALBY
ADVANCE TIX: Katina's, Pleasures, Strawbomes & Music Outlet
ROUTE 9, HADLEY • 586-4463

AMHERST CINEMA
Now Playing
LATE FOR DINNER
Showtimes:
Fri. - Sun.
7pm & 9pm
Mon-Thurs.
One show at 7:30pm
Adults $4.00
Student w/valid I.D. $3.00

安城中國飯店
AMHERST CHINESE FOOD
WE DO NOT USE "MSG"
• MANDARIN & SZECHUAN CUISINE
• HOME STLYE COOKING
• FRESH VEGETABLES FROM OUR FARM
• EAT IN OR TAKE OUT
• FULL LIQUOR LICENSE
• OPEN 7 DAYS
• NEWLY REMODELED
MASTERCARD & VISA ACCEPTED
253-7835 253-2813
62 Main Street, Amherst

WEEKEND HAPPENINGS

THURSDAY

Robin Hoodis Kevin Costner as the Prince of Thieves in this film to be shown at UMass Mahar Auditorium at 6p.m. for $2, 8:30 p.m. for $3 and 11:30 for $3. This is sponsored by IEEE/HKN.

Cephas & Wiggins, ambassadors of the blues, will perform at Hampshire College Red Barn at 9 p.m. for one show only.

Images Alaska is the title of artwork presented by UMass visiting artist, Robert W. Head. He will be giving a slide lecture at UMass Campus Center room 162-75 from 3:30-5:00 p.m. Following will be an opening reception at the Student Union Gallery from 5 p.m. until 7 p.m.

Chris Hani Coalition is a broad, muli-racial, democratic organization fighting racism on campus, nationally and internationally. Their first organizing meeting will be at the New Africa House room 311 beginning at 7:30 p.m.

Rockin' Dave and the Rent Party performs its accordion-slinging, white rapping burning love at the Iron Horse Music Hall in Northampton. For information call 584-0610.

Service and Shabbat Meal with the topic on "The Messianic Era" will be held at Chabad House at Amherst, 30 N. Hadley Road at 12 p.m. There is a $3 fee. For information, call 549-4094.

The Big Tune-Concert Music in the Belle Epoch is a lecture lead by Henry Mishkin and will include listening at noon. This takes place at the Amherst Music Center room 3. Admission is free.

Sexuality, Gender and Identity in the Early Modern World: The Diary of Michael Wigglesworth is a lecture to be lead by Alan Bray, author of Homosexuality in Renaissance England. The lecture will be presented at Amherst College Octagon, Babbott Room and will be taking place at 4 p.m. Admission is free.

Maurice is a beautifully filmed adaption of an E.M. Forster novel about a young man facing his homosexuality. (directed by James Ivory) This film will be presented at UMass Campus Center room 803 beginning at 7 p.m. For information call 545-4824.

Amy M. Sacker Memorial Lecture: Big Trouble-Daumier, Gargantua, and the Censorship of Caricature will be presented in conjunction with the exhibition The Pear: French Graphic Arts in the Golden Age of Caricature. This lecture will be lead by Elizabeth Childs of the Art History department of SUNY at Purchase and will take place at Mount Holyoke College Art Building Gamble Auditorium beginning at 7 p.m.

Soil, Water, and Civilization Lecture Series will present The Role of Humanity on the Divine Earth: Mythological, Theological, and Linguistic Perceptions lead by Daniel Hillel. This is the first in a four-part series which takes place at UMass Campus Center in room 162 at 8 p.m. Admission is free.

The Lover is a play written by Harold Pinter and produced by Ericka Jennings. This will be presented at Hampshire College Studio Theater beginning at 8 p.m. For reservations call 549-4600 x351 on weekdays from 1-5 p.m.

Volpone; Or the Fox is a classic Elizabethan farce written by Ben Johnson in which Volpone and his servant Mosca plot against fortune-seeking scoundrels. Be prepared to see Mosca played by a woman and Volpone's three fools appear as a rock band in this translation by Professor Virginia Scott. The performance takes place at UMass Curtain Theater beginning at 8 p.m. Admission is $5 for students and $3 for elders. For information call the Fine Arts Center Box Office at 545-2511.

The House of Blue Leaves is an award winning American farce that brings a balmy family together with a big Hollywood producer and some sightseeing nuns. The play will be presented at Smith College Mendenhall Center for Performing Arts, Theatre 14 at 8 p.m. Tickets are $4 for students and $2 for elders.

WFCR Airs 1990-91 Springfield Symphony Orchestra Concerts on Thursday nights at nine. The orchestra and chorus will perform Mozart's Requiem in D minor on WFCR, 88.5 FM at 9 p.m.

FRIDAY

Shabbat Service welcomes all faculty, staff, and students with a dinner following at 6:15 p.m. in Eliot House. The service will take place at Mount Holyoke College Abbey Small Chapel at 5 p.m. Call 538-2054 by Thursday for reservations. There is a $6.50 dinner charge for non-Mount Holyoke College guests.

Japanese Tea Ceremony-Nobue Socho Yamashita is open to the Five College Community. The ceremony will be presented at Mount Holyoke College Eliot House, Wa-Shin-An from 7-8:30 p.m. Reservations are required: 538-2054.

Jewish Geneology includes some timeless lessons from our "senior" family member, Abraham. There will be a service and Shabbat dinner. This will take place at Chabad House at Amherst, 30, N. Hadley Road at 7 p.m.

All About Eve is a 1950 film directed by Joseph Mankiewicz with Bette Davis, Anne Baxter and George Sanders. The film features Bette's greatest role. There will be two showings which take place at Mount Holyoke College Gamble Auditorium at 7 p.m. and 9 p.m.

Tron is a film which presents a future where most lives are controlled by the Master Computer. The showings will take place at Amherst College Campus Center Theater at 7:30 and 10 p.m. Admission is $1.50.

A Cappella Homecoming Concert will present performances by the Amherst College Bluestockings, DQ, Sabrinas and Zumbyes. The concert will take place at the Amherst College Johnson Chapel at 8 p.m. Admission is free.

Jazz Ensemble I/Chapel Jazz Ensemble directed by Jeff Holmes and David Sporny will perform at UMass Bowker Auditorium beginning at 8 p.m. Admission is $6 or $3. For information call 545-2227.

Five College Orchestra Homecoming Concert will feature Stravinsky's "Firebird Suite" and works by Elgar, Haydn, and Tchaikovsky. The guest conductor is Raymond Harvey, music director of Springfield Symphony. The concert will be presented at Amherst College Buckley Recital Hall at 9 p.m. Admission is free but tickets are limited. Call 542-2830 for reservations.

Slant 6 and the Jumpstarts are a comedy rock group that has ranked #1 in the Dr. Demento show. Guest group is Ugly Flower. The performance will be at the UMass cafeteria, The Hatch, beginning at 9 p.m.

L.B.G.A. Dance will be held at the UMass Bluewall. For information call the UMass Program for Gay, Lesbian & Bisexual Concerns 545-4824.

Science Fiction Convention begins today. The guest of honor will be Steven Brust, author of JHEREG. The artist guest of honor will be Paul Chadwick, creator of CONCRETE. Special guest will be Dead Elvis. Authors include Jane Yolen and faculty member, Samuel Delany, among others. The convention will continue through Sunday and will take place in the UMass Campus Center Hotel. Call 545-1924 for information.

Culture Shock! is a dance presented by the Smith College Multi-cultural Organizations which takes place at Smith College Davis Ballroom. The dance is from 9 p.m. unitl 1 a.m. Entrance fee is $3.

Young Lions of Jazz presents Christopher Hollyday Quartet featuring their viruoso, neo-traditionalist sax player. The performance takes place at the Iron Horse Music Hall in Northampton and begins at 7 p.m.

SATURDAY

Vintage Vinyl: The Used Record Sale will have classical, folk, jazz, rock-all kinds of music on thousands of used records from the WFCR Music Library, along with donations from members and friends. Find that elusive favorite, enjoy the refreshments and support public radio in the Five College area-the sale benefits WFCR, Five College Radio and 88.5 FM. Volunteers are needed. Call REna Fischer 545-0100. The sale will be held in the Amherst Town Common, rain or shine. (rain site, Grace Episcopal Church on the Common). The sale begins at 10 a.m. and continues until 5 p.m. (no earlybirds).

Service and Shabbat Meal will be held at Chabad House at Amherst, 30 N. Hadley Road beginning at 10 a.m.

Dinosaurs of the Valley-A Family Field Trip will present Walter Coombs, of the biology department at Western New England, and staff member of the Amherst College Pratt Museum. Start at Pratt Museum, Amherst College, where you will see large skeletons and an extensive collection of footprints not generally open to the public; then on to a site along the Connecticut River in Holyoke to view footprints in their natural setting. Registration is requested; call the Hitchcock Center at 256-6006. the trip begins at the Pratt Museum at 10 a.m. and continues until 1 p.m.

Amherst Music: Performance and Composition includes traditional repertoire and compositions by Amherst composers for this Homecoming Concert. The performance takes place at Amherst College Buckley Recital Hall and begins at 4:15 p.m.

Jagged Edge is a razor-sharp film thriller with Jeff Bridges and Glenn Close. The two showings take place at Mount Holyoke College Gamble Auditorium at 7 p.m. and 9 p.m.

Tokyo Symphony Orchestra, directed by Kazuyoshi Akiyama, inclues Japanese violinist, Reiko Watanabe who will perform the Paganini Violin Concerto No.1. The concert will be performed at the UMass Fine Arts Center Concert Hall beginning at 8 p.m.

Amherst College Choral Society Homecoming Concert, conducted by Mallorie Chernin, includes the premiere of a composition by Norman Scribner, commissioned in honor of the Glee Club's 125th anniversary. The concert will take place at Amherst College Buckley Recital Hall beginning at 8:30 p.m. For reservations call 542-2484.

Young Lions of Jazz presents the Mark Whitfield Trio whose Dazzling guitarist has been called "the next George Benson." The performance takes place at the Iron Horse Music Hall in Northampton. The show starts at 7 p.m. For information call 584-0610.

Tron, the film, continues its showings at 7:30 p.m. and 10 p.m. (see FRIDAY)

The Lover will be presented at 8 p.m. (see THURSDAY).

The House of Blue Leaves will be presented at 8 p.m. (see THURSDAY)

The Equalites will perform at Pearl Street Night Club. The show begins at 8:30 p.m. For information call 584-7771.

SUNDAY

Amherst College Gospel Choir Homecoming Concert will be performing at the Amherst College Johnson Chapel at 10 a.m. Admission is free.

Samba Space, an Afro-Latin band, will join forces with Cuban dancer, Alfredo Castillo. This Performing Arts Division event is sponsored in part by the Amherst Arts Council. The performance will take place at the UMass Fine Arts Center Bezanson Recital Hall and will begin at 3 p.m. Admission to this event is free.

Student Recital featuring Matt Dane of Amherst College, class of 1993, will play the viola at the Amherst College Buckley Recital Hall. The recital will begin at 3 p.m.

Almut Rossler-Organ Recital will perform works by Messiaen, Bach and others. The recital takes place at Mount Holyoke College Abbey Chapel. This performance begins at 4 p.m. and continues until 5:30 p.m.

Tron, the film, continues its showings at 7:30 p.m. and 10 p.m. (see FRIDAY)

James Kellaghan, Canadian folk singer/songwriter, performs vocal storytelling with strong lyrics and social commentary derived from traditional Irish music. This is part of the Sundays at Eight Series. The performance will be held at Amherst College Campus Center Frontroom and it begins at 8 p.m. Admission is $ 7 or $1 with an Amherst College ID.

Five College Orchestra will present guest conductor Raymond Harvey, music director of the Springfield Symphony. The concert takes place at Smith College John M. Greene Hall and will begin at 8 p.m. Admission is free. For more information call 545-2227.

UMass Cannabis Reform Coalition is holding its first general meeting at UMass Campus Center,

SOMETIMES, WE CAN ALL USE

LIVE IN SPRINGFIELD
PARAMOUNT
1700 MAIN STREET, SPRINGFIELD, MA
.38 SPECIAL WITH HENRY LEE SUMMER SUNDAY OCTOBER 27TH
PATTI LaBELLE TUESDAY OCTOBER 29TH
VIOLENT FEMMES FRIDAY NOVEMBER 1ST
GEORGE CARLIN SATURDAY NOVEMBER 2ND
FISHBONE PRIMUS WEDNESDAY NOVEMBER 20TH
TICKETS ON SALE PARAMOUNT BOX OFFICE (413) 734-5874; TICKETPRO PHONE CHARGE 1-800-828-7080; NORTHAMPTON TICKET OFFICE (413) 586-8686; RECORD EXPRESS; STRAWBERRIES

Stomp on it!
Flatten it!
Squash it!
Have some fun when you recycle!

LOW, LOW PRICE
YANKEE
DISCOUNT OIL
NORTHAMPTON HOLYOKE
584-4112 • 535-1888

HEALTHY SKIN
Begins with a deep pore cleansing facial.
Also lash and brow tinting, shaping, hair waxing, make-up, therapeutic massage.
AESTHETICS SKINCARE
34 Main St., Suite 1, Amherst, MA 253-9879

AL-BUMS
WE BUY • SELL • TRADE
USED CDs & CASSETTES
All Used Sales Guaranteed.
-NEW TITLES DAILY-
Rock & Roll, Classical, Jazz, Blues, Alternative, Independent Labels, International Thousands of Cassettes
$3.99
Bookcases • LP Shelves • Stereo Centers • CD Racks
M-F 10-8, Sat 10-9, S 11-7 • 181 N. Pleasant St., Amherst • 253-7137

Boltwood Market
Tired of the same old late night snack?
Try an "all nighter" from
Boltwood Market.
Made to order with your favorite delimeats & cheeses or veggies & dips.
Reasonably Priced - Delivered to your door.
Call 253-9081 before 4pm to order your "all nighter" today!
Hours: Mon-Sat 9am-7pm • Sun 9am-2pm
(located behind Barts)

CHINA GARDEN
"The Collegian's choice in delightful dinning"
$2 OFF with purchase of $15 or more with this coupon
Enjoy A Taste of Real Chinese Food
Sunday-Thursday, 11:30am-10:00pm
Friday-Saturday, 11:30am-11:00pm
Lunch Hour: 11:30am-3:30pm 7 days a week
Free Delivery Service Fri., Sat., Sun. 5:00pm-10:00pm
Visa/Master Card/ American Exp
•New Remodeling
•7 Days a week
•Take-out
•Luncheon Specials $3.75-$4.55
The Valley's only Dim Sum Brunch
•Dim Sum (Chinese Brunch - Mandarin and Cantonese Styles) Every Day 11:30-3:30
•Weekly Vegetarian Sepecials (Wednesday and Thursday)
New Vegetarian Menu Coming Soon!
13 N. Pleasant Street Amherst, MA • 253-4280/4281

Get your Turtle signed!

For the grand opening in its new space at 48 North Pleasant st., Crossroads Comics is hosting two signings:

Friday 10/18/91, is 3 p.m. — Rick Veitch, Craig Farley, Mark Bode, Sam Delaney , and Mark Wilson. Veitch, Farley and Bode have all worked on the Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles, the animal farce comic that has inspired a movie, an Archie comics series for children, and a role playing game. All three now work for Tundra Publishing in Northampton, MA. Tick Veitch has done his own series, Bratpack. Sam Delaney is a Hugo-and-Nebula Award winning science fiction author. Mark Wilson is a sculptor and modeler of fantasy miniatures and scenes from alter net sin tax Production.

Saturday 10/19/91, 3 p.m. — Mike Gaydos and John Gentile, creators of the comic Scorched Earth from Tundra Publishing. Mark Wilson will also be there.

Crossroads Comics was started in 1988 by John Wrisley and George Brace, friends who had met in high school. They began by opening a stand selling comics at the UMass Center Concourse. As they saw there was a market in the Amherst area, they moved into a compact space at 96 North Pleasant St. in Amherst. On October 19, they will move to the new, larger space at 48 North Pleasant St., located below D'Angelos Sandwich Shop. There they plan to expand their graphic novel, game and miniature sections, and add toys and possibly a video section and gaming club.

Tundra Publishing Ltd., 320 Riverside Dr., Northampton, MA (413) 586-9525, which was started a year ago, is the brainchild of Kevin Eastman, co-creator of the Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles. He wanted to allow writers and artists to work without the strict control exerted by major publishing companies such as Marvel and DC. The company has 20 staff members not including

CONTINUED ON THIS WEEKEND PAGE 7

OOPS!
Now's the time to call...
North Amherst Motors
78 Old Sunderland Rd., No. Amherst
549-2880
Expert Repairs and Reconditioning
Most Major Credit Cards Accepted

Styles By Deborah
The Spa For Hair & Skin Care
549-5610
65 University Drive Amherst
$4.00 OFF With Cheryl Only — Professional Consultation and Style, Cut & Dry. Reg. $16.00 to $18.00. First time customers only • Exp. 10/31/91
$5.00 OFF — Any Perm, Facial or Highlighting. First time customers only • Exp. 10/31/91

Tower Theatres
THE VILLAGE COMMONS • SOUTH HADLEY
"Sublime Entertainment. Just A Great Time At The Movies."
THE COMMITMENTS
Weekdays @ 2, 7, 9:15 pm • Fri, Sat, Sun @ 2:45, 5, 7:10, 9:25 pm
Ernest SCARED STUPID
Daily @ 3 & 7 pm
ROCKY HORROR
Friday @ Midnight
"SMASHING!" "REMARKABLE..." 2001 ANIMATION
Weekdays @ 9 pm • Fri, Sat, Sun @ 5 & 9 pm

ALL YOU CAN EAT!
$2.99
Time Out Homemade Spaghetti
w/ salad & bread
the BEST you'll have!
Thurs. night 6 - 9

A UMASS COMMON SENSE...

Bruno's
256-0222
WE DELIVER QUALITY
Prices already include Massachusetts Meal Tax
OPEN DAILY 11am to 2am
FREE DELIVERY

Pizza Toppings
Pepperoni, Hamburger, Sausage, Ham, Salami, Canadian Bacon, Artichoke Hearts, Fresh Red Pepper, Mushroom, Fresh Green Pepper, Onion, Black Olive, Fresh Garlic, Eggplant, Double Dough, Pineapple, Sliced Tomato, Broccoli, Anchovy, Spinach, Jalapenos, Extra Cheese

Pizza Prices

Cheese	4.25	6.00	7.25
One item	4.95	7.00	8.50
Two items	5.65	8.00	9.75
Three items	6.35	9.00	11.00
Four items	7.05	10.00	12.25
Five items	7.75	11.00	13.50

Salads

Tossed	3.95
Chefs	5.20
Seafood	5.20
Tuna	5.20
Greek	5.20

Dressings: Italian, Creamy Italian, Blue Cheese
Served with hot bread

Homemade Lasagna Served with Hot Bread $5.50

Full Selection of Subs. Steak Subs are our specialty

Speciality Pizzas

Hawaiian (Canadian Bacon & Pineapple)	5.65	8.00	9.75
Pesto	5.65	8.00	9.75
Vegetarian Deluxe (Mushroom, Onion, Pepper, Olive, extra cheese)	7.50	10.00	12.00
Combination (Mushroom, Onion, Pepper, Hamburg, Pepperoni, Sausage)	7.90	10.75	13.00

1.00 OFF Any Medium Bruno's Pizza
1.50 OFF Any Large Bruno's Pizza
1.50 OFF Any Large Bruno's Pizza
1 coupon per Pizza please. not valid in conjunction with any other specials. FREE DELIVERY! CALL 265-0222

A young lion matures, returns to the Horse

By JAMES MOLESWORTH
Collegian Staff

Only a couple of things going on right now. First off is the Christopher Hollyday Quartet will be performing at the Ironhorse in Northampton on Friday, October 18. For tickets and info call 584-0610.

Jazz Scene

Who is Chris Hollyday? Good question. Hollyday is one of the young "lions" on the scene right now. He hit the scene at about age sixteen, and everyone claimed he was another child prodigy. Don't jump out of your seat quite yet, they say that about every musician under the age of twenty these days. At first, Hollyday was just another kid playing a saxophone with a lot of record company money behind him (the young image is always more marketable). Most people ate it up, while the old guard said he wasn't even playing in tune. Today, some still say he isn't playing in tune, but he has gotten better. Maturity is as important to making music, particularly improvised music, as is technical facility. Fast paced scale running is pointless if all you're doing is showing off how fast you can play. While Hollyday's recent album release The Natural Moment on Novus Records indicates an improvement, Hollyday still sounds a lot like Jackie McLean. Sure, everyone at the start of their career sounds like someone else, but when you've been touted as one of the next "great ones," by your third album you should be sounding a lot more like yourself. While the album is nothing to marvel at, that is not always a true indicator of how someone really sounds live. Since there really isn't anything else going on this weekend for "jazz," it might not hurt to check out the Hollyday Quartet.

In other news, New York City's cabaret laws, which required musicians to have ID cards, and didn't allow any brass instruments in non-zoned areas, have been defeated in court. Instituted over sixty years ago, the cabaret laws kept such notables as Billie Holiday and Thelonious Monk from playing in clubs, and have been a source of great contention between the musicians and the musicians' union. Gigs: Jazz and the Cabaret Laws in New York City is a new book out on the subject. Author Paul Chevigny, who is also the lawyer who argued the case, will be in Amherst on November 16 at Albion Books. Stay tuned for a review of the book, and maybe an interview with the author.

WMUA 91.1 FM, the UMass student radio station has gotten the production of their third annual Magic Triangle Series underway. The Magic Triangle is the only concert series in the area which brings high-quality small combo groups to the University (3 separate gigs put on in Hampden Theatre) for low ticket prices. While the concerts don't start until February, groups that may be performing include a Kirk Lightsey Quartet with Arthur Blythe and Famoudou Don Moye, and a David Murray Quartet with Ray Drummond, Ed Blackwell and John Hicks. Not bad at all.

Where to hear the music on the radio. . . WMUA Mon-Fri 9 a.m. to noon, WFCR 88.5 FM, Mon-Fri 6:30-8 p.m. and WAMH 89.3 FM Monday 6 p.m. to 2 a.m.

Both the Jazz Ensemble I and the Chapel Jazz Ensemble will be in performance at Bowker Auditorium, tonight at 8 p.m. Call 545-2511 for tix and info. The Ensemble recently won DownBeat's "Outstanding Student Performance" dee-bee award for their latest release, Hot Off The Presses. Until next week, keep the music.

Photo Courtesy UMass Music Dept.
Jazz Ensemble I

■ turtles

CONTINUED FROM THIS WEEKEND PAGE 6

writers and artists, with 90 titles in the works, approximately 15 of which have been published so far. Titles published by Tundra include Rain by Ralph Stern, Cages by Dave McKean, who was also an artist for Arkham Asylum, and a line of sketchbooks.

COLLEGIAN STAFF REPORTS

■ trash

CONTINUED FROM THIS WEEKEND PAGE 3

a change for this band, but let's hope they still bring the fire and zeal that brought them to where they are now, the national music scene.

White Trash will play with opening band The Lost at Katina's on Sunday, Oct. 20, beginning at 8 p.m. The show is all ages.

Come see our falling prices at Liquors 44!
BEER WINE LIQUORS
Prices do not include deposit
LITE BEER $11.99 + DEP case of 2-12 pk. bottles
NEW AMSTERDAM AMBER or ALE $17.99 + DEP case of 24-12 oz. bottles
MOLSON GOLDEN ALE $14.99 + DEP case of 24-12 oz bottles
Knickerbocker Beer $7.99 + DEP suitcase 24-12 oz cans
O'DOULS NON-ALCOHOL $11.99 + DEP case of 24-12 oz bottles
VERMONT OLD-FASHIONED HARD CIDER $3.99 750ML
MOREAU BLANC (FRANCE) $6.49 1.5L
GLEN ELLEN CHARDONNAY $3.99 1.5ML
INGLENOOK WINES CHENIN BLANC, FRENCH COLOMBARD, RHINE, BURGUNDY ROSE, CHABLIS BLANC DE BLANC, BLUSH, WHITE GRENACHE $6.49 3.0L
BALLATORE GRAN SPUMANTE $3.99 750ML
SEAGRAM'S 7 $13.49 1.75L
Captain Morgan SPICED RUM $15.49 1.75L
GORDONS VODKA SALE 11.99 MAIL-IN REBATE -2.00 $9.99 1.75L
Gilbey's Gin SALE 12.99 MAIL-IN REBATE -2.00 $10.99 1.75L
EARLY TIMES BOURBON $12.99 1.75L
Full Redemption Center. Not responsible for typographical errors.
LIQUORS 44
HADLEY Campus Plaza/Route 9 253-9344
TWO LOCATIONS
HOLYOKE 30 Lincoln St. 534-4555
9am to 11pm Monday thru Saturday
SALE PRICES THURS. 10-17-91 THRU WED. 10-23-91
TeleCheck

PEKING GARDEN
BEST OF CHINESE FOOD
SPECIALIZING IN MANDARIN AND SZECHUAN DISHES
5 - 8 PM MON - THURS BUFFET $5.99
11 - 3 PM SUNDAY BRUNCH $6.99
FRIDAY AND SATURDAY COMEDY SHOW
20% OFF DINNER
BANQUET PARTY ROOM UP TO 200 PERSONS
FULL COCKTAIL MENU
48 RUSSELL ST. • HADLEY, MA 01035 • (413) 586-1202
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK
VISA & MASTERCARD

THESE COUPONS ARE AVAILABLE ON TAKE OUT AND DELIVERIES ONLY!
La Cucina di Pinocchio
Ristorante Italiano
1177 N. Pleasant Street
Amherst, Massachusetts
At The Lights in North Amherst
549-3669
Fast Free Delivery or Pick-up
GOURMET PIZZAS NOW AVAILABLE!
TRY ONE NOW! $1.50 OFF ANY LARGE TWO ITEM GOURMET PIZZA
VEGI SPECIAL • GARLIC & FRESH TOMATOES • PESTO
CAPERS & SUN-DRIED TOMATOES • ROAST PEPPERS • EGGPLANT & BROCCOLI
JALAPENO PEPPERS • AND MANY MORE TO CHOOSE FROM
Exp. 1/31/92
Coupon Not Valid In Restaurant • For deliv. or pick up only • One Coupon Per Order Only
TWIN SPECIAL 2 LARGE CHEESE PIZZAS $12.50 Any Topping $1.25 more. One coupon per order-ex. 1/31/92
ANY THREE CALZONES only $9.95. Coupon Not Valid In Restaurant. One Coupon Per Order Only. Offer Expires 1/31/92

R & P Liquors
Convenient to Brittany & Riverglade
253-9742
505 West St. So. Amherst

Some of the biggest, some of the best presents come in the smallest boxes!
silver scape designs
GOLDSMITHS • 1389 GALLERY AMHERST • NORTHAMPTON

Pad Street NIGHT CLUB

Thur., Oct. 17 - 9:00pm /18+
Eighteen & Over
Dancing Upstairs
with Denis R.

Fri., Oct. 18 - 8:30 pm
THE HERSCHLER BROTHERS
Dayna B. Kurtz
Dancing With DJ Job

Sat., Oct. 19 - 8:30pm
Reggae Dance Party
THE EQUALITES
Dancing with DJ Job

Every Sunday Begining
October 20th (7:00pm)
House Industrial Imports
Eighteen & Over
Dancing with DJ Job

Wed., Oct. 23 - 9:00pm
Dancing with DJ Job

Thur., Oct. 24 - 8:30 pm /18+
WRSI
Free Show
THE INNOCENCE MISSION

TOAD THE WET SPROCKET
Tickets Available at For The Record, About Music & Dynamite

Fri., Oct. 25 - 8:30pm
MINIBUS
Boarderland

Sat., Oct. 26 - 8:30pm
WRSI Homegrown Series
RIPPOPOTAMUS
Mal Thursday Experience

Mon., Oct. 28 - 8:00 pm /18+
THE BODEANS

Tues., Oct. 29 - 8:00 pm /18+
DREAD ZEPPELIN
Bop Harvey
The Northern Pikes

Thurs., Oct. 31 - 8:00pm /18+
The Area's Ultimate
HALLOWEEN
Dance Party
Up - DJ Dennis
Down - Who's Kiddin' Who

Fri., Nov. 8 - 8:30pm
ROOMFUL OF BLUES

Tues., Nov. 10 - 8:00pm /18+
New Date!
All Tickets Honored
DE LA SOUL

Tues., Nov. 19 - 8:30pm
BURNING SPEAR

Tickets for all shows as alible at Pearl Street, Strawberries, Dynamite Records, For the Record in Amherst
Ticket Pro (800) 829-7000
10 Pearl Street, Northampton
413-584-7771

"SHABBA RANK-ED"

Photo by Gerhard Jurkovic

Shabba Ranks played last night and upheld UPC's tradition of bringing the best alternative talent to UMass. . . boy-eee.

AP Photo

WORST DRESSED WINNERS — Fashion gadfly Mr. Blackwell, who releases scathing celebrity wardrobe reviews every year, on Tuesday announced his choices for the 10 Worst-dressed women of the past 30 years. The winner: Cher!

DOMINO'S PIZZA

U-MASS
256-8911
Mt. Holyoke
535-1111
We Accept
Competetors
Coupons

30c PIZZA
ORDER ANY TWO TOPPING LARGE PIZZA GET MEDIUM 1 TOPPING PIZZA FOR 30c

1.99 PIZZA
BUY ANY LARGE PIZZA GET 2ND ONE FOR $1.99

BUY ANY LARGE PIZZA
for the price of a small Pizza

WHO'S OPEN LATE?
Sun.- Thurs. 'till 3 a.m.
Fri. & Sat. Open 24 hours
James H. McManus eating place
Route 9, Hadley
256-6889
next to Stop & Shop

Scott's LIQUORS
OPEN MON-SAT 8 AM-11 PM
Tel: 549-2692

Scott's 4th Anniversary Sale!

BUSCH & BUSCH LIGHT 12-12 oz. bottles $5.39 + Dep.
CUERVO GOLD TEQUILA $10.99 750 ML
ROLLING ROCK & ROLLING ROCK LIGHT 12-12 oz. bottles $6.99 + Dep
JACK DANIELS WHISKEY $11.99 750 ml
FOSTERS LAGER 6 pk. bottles $4.99 + Dep
GORDON'S GIN $9.49 1.0 L.
SEBASTIANI PROPRIETORS WINES $5.99 1.5 Ltr. All Varieties
COLUMBIA CREST CHARDONNAY $5.99 750 ml

WE WANT TO BE YOUR FAVORITE LIQUOR STORE!
6 University Drive
at Newmarket Center, Amherst
Tele-check for your personal check.
MEGABUCKS We Have It
We now have all Mass Lottery games!

■ Iraqi plight

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

"The CIA, Turkey, Israel, Britain and Iran are all sending money and weapons to the Kurds to destabilize and weaken the region," Schuschart said. "It is a replay of Lebanon — the destruction of an entire region for as long as possible."

"What a failure of religious leadership, that the word 'just' could be used by a major religious leader like a cardinal to describe this war," Schuschart said. "What a triumph of racism that Colin Powell directed the war against 'cockroaches' and 'sand-niggers;' what a triumph of feminism, that women were granted equal right to bomb other women."

Dwelling on recent developments, Schuschart said, "It is pure racism and imperialism to accuse Iraq of developing nuclear weapons, when they are as American as apple pie."

"U.N. inspector David Kay has been very provocative and insulting everywhere," Schuschart said. "He was once caught sending reports directly to Washington instead of Vienna. He also seized personnel files, which were not his mandate."

Addressing the issue of the Palestinians, Schuschart said, "Settlements are being used as an act of war. The U.S. administration makes an issue of when $10 billion in loans should be given, and not whether they should be given at all. The scale of militarization in Israel is unbelievable."

"There isn't the slightest hope, or sign of hope, anywhere in the Middle East," Schuschart said.

"Our society is very sick — it feeds off violence, and violence is the primary form of entertainment," Schuschart said. "Our only exports are weapons and war. We have destroyed entire countries and left them bleeding to die: Laos, Cambodia, Vietnam, Guatemala, El Salvador, Angola, and now Iraq."

■ NATO

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

1991, "it confirmed the core function of the alliance," she said.

This declaration wants to "retain strategic balance in Europe and allow European countries to assume a greater share of responsibility for their [respective] country," Bruce said.

"The Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty between Bush and Gorbachev added to the security and trust in the search for peace and freedom," Bruce said.

"The U.S.A. is the counter weight against the U.S.S.R.," Bruce said.

"The Transatlantic Link will maintain strategic balance in the world," Bruce said. This "Link," will allow North America to be active in newly forming organizations, like the Westen European Union.

Countries on the border of the U.S.S.R., such as Czechoslovakia, will not be allowed to become members of NATO because it would pose a threat to the U.S.S.R., Bruce said.

"NATO has been the most viable, credible defense in Europe for 42 years," Bruce said.

HOUSING EXEMPTION APPLICATIONS

Frosh, Sophomores and Stockbridge students who wish to live off-campus for the Spring 1992 semester should apply for an exemption from the Board of Trustee regulation governing on-campus living. Applications are now available in the Housing Assignment Office, 235 Whitmore. Exemption applications are due no later than Monday, October 28, 1991. Please submit applications to the Housing Assignment Office.

IMPORTANT NOTES: PLEASE READ CAREFULLY

THE EXEMPTION COMMITTEE WILL ONLY MEET ONCE. THIS IS THE ONLY OPPORTUNITY YOU WILL HAVE TO APPLY FOR OFF-CAMPUS PERMISSION FOR THE SPRING 1992 SEMESTER. PLEASE MAKE SURE YOU APPLY IN TIME.

 Signing a lease is not valid grounds for receiving an exemption from the on-campus housing requirement. DO NOT SIGN A LEASE UNTIL YOU RECEIVE AN EXEMPTION. Any student who signs a lease without prior approval from the Exemption Committee and the Housing Assignment Office is responsible for all on-campus fees and will be required to reside on-campus. Thank you.

This Offer Could Be The Highlight Of Your Week.

Get a free highlighter with purchase of a large Pizza Hut® pizza. For free delivery, call 253-3443.
Limited delivery area. Offer valid while supply lasts and on delivery orders only.
Pizza Hut DELIVERY
© 1991 Pizza Hut, Inc.

COMMON SENSE
SENSIBLY PRICED ACTIVEWEAR
25% OFF ALL CLOTHING CHAMPION
VUARNET
OCEAN PACIFIC
WEAVERS...
& lots more!
GRAND OPENING DAY SALE,
Sat, Oct. 19th
10am - 6pm
COMMON SENSE
SENSIBLY PRICED ACTIVEWEAR
At the Village Commons
29 College Street • South Hadley • MA

EPA to investigate Mass. Bay

By TONY ROGERS
Associated Press

BOSTON — The waters of Massachusetts Bay will be searched once again for contamination from low-level radioactive waste that was dumped more than 30 years ago, federal officials said Wednesday.

The announcement by the Environmental Protection Agency came a month after the man whose company did much of the dumping said that radioactive waste was dumped outside authorized areas.

A 1984 study by the EPA of the so-called Foul Area, a dumping ground 19 miles offshore, found no evidence of radioactive contamination.

But George Perry, whose Crossroads Marine Disposal Corp. was hired by industries, universities, and hospitals to dispose of radioactive waste from 1947 to 1957, said last month he dumped the waste much closer to the shore in an area beginning about six miles off Cohasset, a fishing region.

The EPA's new search will examine areas outside the Foul Area.

"It appears that dumping may have taken place in areas that have not yet been checked by the EPA or other agencies," said Julie Belaga, regional administrator of the EPA's New England office.

Belaga said the search, to be conducted in December, will use the 1984 study as a starting point.

"While questions have been raised as to the validity of those studies, we have verified that the EPA did investigate the areas where permitted dumping took place," Belaga said in a statement. "We are reexamining the scope of the investigation based on new information."

Belaga said the captain and crew of the ship that did most of the dumping will be re-interviewed, as will fishermen and others who have contacted various state agencies about the dumping.

Based on that information, a plan will be drawn up of which areas to be surveyed, Belaga said.

The three-week search, using the EPA research vessel "Anderson," will be the first step in a new round of investigations, Belaga said.

"We will concentrate on scanning the ocean bottom in an attempt to detect concrete-enclosed barrels of low-level radioactive wastes," Belaga said.

Next spring, a more detailed sampling of sediment and fish will be done in areas where any contamination is found, Belaga said.

Perry said he dumped 500 barrels of low-level radioactive waste in the area close to shore. Dumping such waste at sea was illegal until the mid 1970's.

Belaga defended the earlier study, saying a review showed it was done in the correct areas, based on the information available. Underwater cameras show hundreds of rusting barrels on the bottom there.

"That does not mean, however, that every area of Massachusetts Bay has been checked," Belaga said. "The fact is that dumping could have occurred in areas both within and outside the authorized dumping areas."

Sheila Lynch, president of Save the Harbor-Save the Bay, an environmental advocacy group that has lobbied for an examination of the dumping sites, applauded the EPA announcement.

"We need to know what is the impact of that waste, the impact on fishermen, the impact on fish," Lynch said. "Hopefully there's none, but we can't say that yet."

■ Jewish identity

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

have both the religious and social aspects in order to have a more positive psychological well-being as a Jew.

Dr. Ressler further explained this by quoting famed sociologist Martin Buber, who believed that there are two aspects to Jewish identity. The first is to stand up and say "I am a Jew," while the other is to view the history of the Jews as one's own history.

"The concept of ourselves extends across time and space to include history. That is when the identity is there," he explained.

Dr. Ressler was born in 1960 in Akron, Ohio and grew up in Cleveland. After majoring in chemistry at Indiana University he went on to get his graduate degree in psychology at Yale.

Ressler has published a study on speech perception and has just completed two studies on Jewish identity. He will be teaching at Ben Gurion and Hebrew University in the spring.

Stomp on it!
Flatten it!
Squash it!
Have some fun
when you recycle!

COMPLETE OPTOMETRY EXAMS
AT THE UNIVERSITY HEALTH SERVICES

We offer...

...quality, comprehensive vision care at a reasonable cost.

...courteous, friendly, professional staff.

...reduced rates on eye glasses at participating opticians with a complete optometric examination at the University Health Services for Student Plan members.

...a comprehensive contact lens service.

uhs
EYE CARE PROGRAM

Convenient hours and on campus location.

For questions or an appointment call: 549-2671

LEAGUE OF WOMEN VOTERS OF AMHERST INVITES YOU TO A
FALL PUBLIC MEETING
THURSDAY, OCTOBER 17, 1991
SPEAKER
UMASS PRESIDENT - ELBERT K. FRETWELL
TOPIC
"THE UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS - A SOLID INVESTMENT"
FORT RIVER SCHOOL CAFETERIA
70 SOUTH EAST STREET
7:30 PM
Reception follows

NEWS WRITERS
COLLEGIAN STAFF AND CORRESPONDENTS
Thursday, October 17
6 p.m.
in the business office
Professor Dario Politella
Lectures on
"Writing as a K.I.S.S."
Counts toward staff status

QUALITY SILK SCREENED SPORTSWEAR
Free screen $20.00 value (over 50 Shirts)
T-SHIRTS • SWEATS
BUMPER STICKERS
MUGS
KENNEDY SCREEN GRAPHICS
16 ARMORY STREET
NORTHAMPTON, MA 01060
(413)584-2124
1-800-287-2124

FREE!! FREE!! FREE!!
NO CHARGE TO PROCESS
CONTINENTAL/AMERICAN EXPRESS
COUPONS
FREE!! FREE!! FREE!! FREE!!
INQUIRE ABOUT OUR
10% STUDENT DISCOUNT
CAMPUS TRAVEL
CAMPUS CENTER
UMASS
545-0500
CENTRAL TRAVEL
OF AMHERST
800 MAIN ST. STE. 2
256-6704

COLLEGE SPECIAL
3 Games of Bowling and Shoe Rental
$5.00
with College I.D.
TUESDAY NIGHT SPECIAL
DOMINO PIZZA AND BOWL
Three Games Plus
Slice of Pizza and Coke
$5.00 Plus Shoes
8:30 pm to Close
Every Thurs. Night 9:00pm-12:00am
Northampton Bowl
Live D.J. in the Ally Oops Lounge
Cover $2.00
Call 584-4830 for reservations

Women's Issues

Abortion allowed for retarded woman

By EVE EPSTEIN
Associated Press

BOSTON — The Massachusetts appeals court Wednesday ruled that a mentally retarded woman described as "childlike" is competent enough to choose to terminate a pregnancy of more than 19 weeks.

The woman's mother, who is her guardian, petitioned the probate court in Plymouth seeking permission for the woman to have an abortion and to be sterilized. The 24-year-old woman, known as "Mary Moe" to preserve her anonymity, told the judge that she wanted the abortion. She had had three previous abortions.

Probate Judge Catherine P. Sabaitis turned down the request last month "because there are no compelling medical reasons for the abortion from either the maternal or fatal standpoint, and . . . that court cannot state with clarity that it would be the ward's substituted judgement to assent to the recommended treatment, i.e. abortion."

The appeals court entered an order allowing the abortion Sept. 26, one day after Sabaitis' ruling, but released an explanation of the order Wednesday.

The appeals court said the probate judge should have given more weight to Mary Moe's statement that she wanted to have the abortion.

"In our view, the judge was too quick in finding that the ward lacked confidence to decide whether to have an abortion," the appeals court said.

Mary Moe is divorced, and is the mother of a 20-month-old daughter. She also suffers from colitis and takes medication for seizures, which could lead to birth defects in the fetus, according to evidence presented in court. She told the court that she did not want — and could not handle — any more children.

Mary Moe lives with her parents, and depends on them for help in caring for her daughter.

According to the ruling, the woman has an IQ between the high 70s and low 80s. That means she fell into the borderline category of intelligence. A psychological report on the woman made in 1989 concluded that her responses, "suggest she is in adequate contact with reality and that she perceives the world as others do."

In a report to the court, Mary Moe's neurologist stated that termination of the pregnancy would be in her best interest from a neurological standpoint.

The court ruling said there was no evidence that Mary Moe expressed religious convictions which would affect her decision to have an abortion. Abortion is legal through the first 24 weeks of pregnancy.

The appeals court based its decision on largely on a previous Supreme Judicial Court ruling regarding the right of sterilization for a mentally retarded person. The state's highest court ruling in 1982 that the personal decision whether to have children is a right so fundamental that it must be extended to all persons, including those who are incompetent.

That ruling held that a judge is not to make what is necessarily the best decision, but rather is to make the decision that would be made by the incompetent person if he or she were competent.

"We conclude that the judge's threshold determination that the ward was incompetent to make the decision whether to have an abortion is unsupported by the record," the court said.

Ellen Convisser, the head of the Massachusetts National Organization for Women, applauded the appeals court ruling.

"There's no reason that mentally retarded people shouldn't have the same rights as people who are not mentally retarded," Convisser said. "It sounds like a very punitive action on the part of the judge to say she couldn't have one."

Officials from the anti-abortion group Massachusetts Citizens for Life said they did not want to comment until they read the appeals court decision.

In her Sept. 25 decision, Judge Sabaitis said she would allow another hearing on the request by Mary Moe's guardians that she be sterilized.

AP photo

ABORTION PROTESTS — Pro-choice supporters demonstrate outside the Supreme Court yesterday in Washington as the court heard arguments over federal court authority to stop protestors who block access to abortion clinics. The Bush administration says the state, not federal courts should deal with cases of protestors who block clinics.

UM professors discuss court nomination

By TRYSTAN SKEIGH
Collegian Staff

Clarence Thomas does not fit the definition of a "lynched uppity black man", said Professor Joy James from the University of Massachusetts Womens' Studies Department.

James said Thomas's inaccurate description of himself as a victim of a "high-tech lynching for uppity blacks" was "an unfortunate opportunistic move on Thomas' part because real violence against blacks was trivialized by this media ploy."

"Uppity" is a term used to describe black people who organize against racist policies and white supremacy, James said.

"His political life doesn't reflect that," James said, referring to Thomas, whom she described as "very conservative."

James said Professor Anita Hill was attacked because she spoke out against the chosen nominee of George Bush and some other powerful conservative politicians. She also said Thomas "cloaked himself" with the charge of racism against the Senate to avoid answering questions about Hill's charges.

"I don't agree racism entered at the point Clarence Thomas says it did and I don't agree with his characterization of himself as 'uppity'," James said, though she stressed that racism was definitely part of the proceedings.

Thomas' tactics made him "the black person" and reduced Hill to "just a woman," denying her status as an African-American, James said.

Professor Janice Raymond, also from the Women's Studies Department, agreed with James' analysis.

"There was a conscious attempt to make Clarence Thomas the champion of race consciousness and to really put her down as a repository of white racism — they tried to blacken him and whiten her,"

CONTINUED ON PAGE 14

The making of a woman rabbi

Mount Holyoke Jewish Chaplain breaks the barriers

By HOPE SISITSKY
Collegian Correspondent

"I wanted to entrench myself in the study of Judaism," said Rabbi Carolyn Braun, Jewish Chaplain for Mount Holyoke College.

Raised in San Mateo, Calif., Rabbi Braun grew up in a non-observant family. At age 10, Rabbi Braun became very interested in Judaism. The Sunday School classes she attended occasionally did not satisfy her desire to learn, she said.

"I always wanted to study with the rabbi — privately, seriously," she said.

She said she decided to become a rabbi for this reason — she did not necessarily want to lead a congregation, she simply wanted to know all that she could about Judaism.

As a junior at Wellesley College in Boston, Rabbi Braun said she believed the rabbis were the only ones who were really knowledgeable about Judaism.

She decided to wait and continued working in the MIT Hillel office and joined Jewish groups in the Boston area, when, during her senior year, the Jewish Theological Seminary, the Conservative Rabbinical School, decided to table women's acceptance. This meant women would not be allowed to study to become rabbis.

She began her graduate studies at the Jewish Theological Seminary in a program that paralleled the rabbinical one.

In 1984, the Seminary voted to admit women. Rabbi Braun was a member of the first class that included women.

As a child, she said she often took an Orthodox prayer book out of the library and read it on her own. She also read the weekly Torah portion, to keep up with the services.

"I felt like part of a line of tradition," she said, as she started to reminisce. "It was the 60s, and I was very active in politics, even at a young age. I was a spiritual person, and sometimes the politics didn't jive with my Judaism. It made me very angry at times."

Once old enough to drive, Rabbi Braun said she and her friends attended Saturday morning services at the conservative synagogue 15 miles from their hometown.

"[Conservative Judaism] seemed more authentic, although I didn't understand exactly what was going on," she said.

"[My family was] very surprised. They didn't understand where I got it from. They thought I was rebeling. I remember when I was younger, I would light Shabbat candles in my bedroom. As soon as someone came near my room, I would blow them out. Now they view it as my career, that's all," she said.

Rabbi Braun was ordained as a rabbi in 1988 and then started her work as the Jewish chaplain at Mount Holyoke College. She conducts services there every other Friday night and will conduct Saturday morning services once a month starting next semester.

She said she helps coordinate a Rosh Hodesh group which meets once a month to study and discuss various Jewish issues. She speaks at classes, gives informal Hebrew lessons, and advises the Jewish Student Union. Rabbi Braun is also part of a team of chaplains at Mount Holyoke that organizes a volunteer program and conducts interfaith programs.

Rabbi Braun said she also spends a great deal of time speaking with and counselling students. "I love talking with people. It is the thing I enjoy most about my work," she said.

The most difficult part of her job is being the only person doing what she does. "The students help out," she said, "but there is so much to do. I want to do more than we have the power to do. With such a small population of Jewish students, we've become rather insular at Mount Holyoke. We need to let people know what is going on."

As a woman, Rabbi Braun is very sensitive to how women are addressed in Jewish texts. Although the laws were written for men, and men probably wrote the Torah, Rabbi Braun sees Judaism as "a dynamic force, moving on, it has to evolve with the world."

She said she feels women must be knowledgeable of Jewish law in order to know what questions to ask and how to establish new rituals. "We are in a different world now," she told me, "and we have to re-interpret. . . add our own interpretations." Rabbi Braun views herself as a fairly traditional rabbi and thinks we must "work within the system and hope it can take modernity."

Looking back on her youth, Rabbi Braun feels she was on a spiritual path and was simply acting on her love for Judaism. Without much encouragement, she continued on that path, always questioning and seeking answers. Now, as an incredibly enthusiastic and energetic role model for many students, she prefers to be called Carolyn.

"Rabbi Braun," she said. "It still sounds funny to me."

On The Merrill Lynch Fast Track

Interviewing in the AMHERST area on November 21 & 22

Resumes will be accepted through November 8th

Meet Kevin Rendino, Carolyn Jones and Patrice Franco. They participated in the Merrill Lynch Individual Investor Intern/MBA Program and their program experience helped them advance quickly to new professional challenges. Kevin, Carolyn and Patrice will continue to rely on what they learned during the program to help them succeed throughout their Merrill Lynch careers.

The Program can help put you on the Merrill Lynch fast track. As a program participant you are offered a challenging position in one of the Merrill Lynch Individual Investor business units where you work under the guidance of a senior manager. Program positions are available in product development, marketing and finance.

Throughout the program you are exposed to firm strategy through meetings with senior management and you participate in task force projects which help a variety of business units to meet their strategic objectives. Formal classes address career development issues and help you enhance your leadership skills. You are given responsibility and accountability and your program experience will help position you for fast-track success in the Merrill Lynch Individual Investor organization.

Candidates for the Individual Investor Intern/MBA Program have outstanding records of achievement in their academics, extracurricular activities and work experience. They are interested in the challenge of the fast-paced financial services industry and want to be recognized for their accomplishments.

If you have the talent, creativity, energy and commitment to be a winner at Merrill Lynch, the Individual Investor Business Group is offering an unequaled opportunity to excel. To find out more, write us:

Individual Investor Intern/MBA Program
Merrill Lynch
P.O. Box 9056
Princeton, NJ 08543-9056

Merrill Lynch
A tradition of trust.

Merrill Lynch is an equal opportunity employer.
© 1991, Merrill Lynch & Company, Inc.

THE FAR SIDE
By GARY LARSON

DOONESBURY
By GARRY TRUDEAU

LET'S FACE IT, MIKE, YOU'RE NOT MAKING IT IN ADVERTISING, I'M NOT MAKING IT IN ART! WE'RE NOWHERE!
SO WHAT ARE WE GOING TO DO? WHAT CAN WE DO?
LAW SCHOOL.
AAIEE!
HOLD ME, HOLD ME!
MY GOD... WHAT'S HAPPENED TO US?

Quote of the Day

"Shut that door, you scum. There's a draft," said one of the guards.

— Passage from One Day in the Life of Ivan Denisovich by Alexander Solzhenitsyn

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHAEL JAFFE

ACROSS
1 Heart of Dixie, for short
5 Parts of a city
10 Hall of —
14 Above
15 Sidestep
16 Mine yields
17 Repair
18 Lethargy
19 Incline
20 Old hand
21 GOAT
23 Snooped
25 Scottish river
26 Photographs
28 Full of ideas
33 Educational insts.
34 Makeup
35 Connective word
36 Indigo
37 Deserve
38 Ado
39 Actress Russell to friends
40 Bargains
41 Thaw
42 Comes before
44 Drifted
45 Neighbor of Minn.
48 Seven: Comb form
47 CAT
52 Darkish
55 Fencing weapon
56 Opponent
57 Han
58 Part of NCAA
59 Related maternally
60 Gang or mob follower
61 New Jersey five
62 Gave out
63 Hauler

DOWN
1 Road warning
2 Mimic
3 HOG
4 See 36 Across
5 Launders
6 Eschew
7 Corded fabric
8 Mailbox
9 Grating
10 Overlook
11 Bedoom
12 Short letter
13 Catch a glimpse of 21 Funny folks
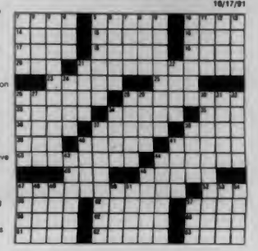
22 Etna anagram
24 On a — winning
26 Line of cliffs
27 "Pozzi's —
28 Woes
29 Jacob of journalism
30 COW
31 Articulate
32 Missed
34 Soccer great
37 Was meaningful
38 Rocker, for one
40 Stone or storm starter
41 Lowdown
43 Groups of twelve
44 Staggered
46 — of the art: latest
47 Actor — Paul Belmondo
48 Church recess
49 Gusto
50 Tramona beverage
51 Egg-shaped
53 Bit of gossip
54 Husband, in Paris
57 Written matter: Abbr.

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

A	S	A	P		S	C	A	M		S	T	A	S	H
R	O	P	E		L	U	C	Y		A	R	N	I	E
T	H	E	S	P	O	N	T	O	P	K	I	N	G	S
S	O	R	T	I	E			P	O	I	S	O	N	S
				E	S	P	I	R	I	T
A	S	S	A	G		L	A	C		S	E	D	U	M
N	E	I	L		S	U	P		C	A	R	U	S	O
W	I	L	L	E	S	H	O	E	M	A	K	E	R
A	I	N	K	A	R	A		A	G	E		T	A	R	A
R	E	S	T	S		P	E	P		B	O	S	S	Y
				S	A	L	U	T	E
A	D	V	I	S	O	R			E	N	R	I	C	O
P	R	E	A	K	N	E	S	S		S	T	A	K	E	S
S	U	R	G	E		N	E	A	T		B	O	L	L
K	M	B	O	W		T	R	O	Y		I	N	T	O

10/17/91



CALVIN AND HOBBES
By BILL WATTERSON

I SAW A TURTLE DOWN BY THE CREEK
BIG DEAL! WHO CARES? I'VE SEEN HUNDREDS OF TURTLES! PROBABLY MILLIONS! WHO WANTS TO SEE ANOTHER DUMB OL' TURTLE?
HA!

TANGELO PIE
By TIM SNIFFEN

Hello. I am Ivy. I am NOT your "waitress". Rather, I am your "Merciful Culinarily Servibur," since, without me, you would starve and die.
Next, you will not be "waited upon"! Instead, your "Existence will be Temporarily Acknowledged, for Monetary Compensation." I suggest writing this down.
And finally, you are not "Out To Dinner," but "Rescued By The Goddess Ivy from the Infinite Drudgery That IS my Life."
Now. What would you like?
My Mommy.

CAST OF THOUSANDS
By BARRY DEUTSCH

GO AHEAD, KISS HER!
BUT I DON'T WANT TO.
NONSENSE! IT'S ALL ANY MAN WANTS!
BUT, BUT WHAT IF SHE'S NOT INTERESTED?
SHE'S BEEN HERE FLIRTING WITH YOU FOR TWO HOURS...
SHE'S JUST FRIENDLY... THINK OF THE EMBARRASSMENT IF YOU'RE WRONG!
(WAIN) TRUST ME, HE'S INTERESTED! WELL GIVE HIM ANOTHER HOUR...
BUT I'M TIRED!

THE ADVENTURES OF FRED
By SHADOW

OH MY GOSH!! THAT WOMAN IS LOOKING RIGHT AT ME!
SH SHE'S COMING OVER HERE TO TALK TO ME!! WHAT DO I SAY?!
OKAY! COOL IT, JOE! THERE'S NOTHING TO WORRY ABOUT! SHE ONLY WANTS TO TALK! JUST BE YOURSELF!
HI- MY NAME'S JOE, AND...
YOUR FLY IS DOWN

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): An old friend could help you get the credit you need. Be honest about your debts. Your social life accelerates. Take care not to go overboard when entertaining. Romance moves to center stage.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Business negotiations could be frustrating today. Look on the bright side. A former associate will offer you both important materials and moral support. Be careful not to neglect your loved ones.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The atmosphere at work is lively today. You may find it difficult to communicated with your loved one. Travel is best postponed. Stop kidding yourself in romance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A good day for doing things with people you really care about. You will be held to any promises you make now! Leave early if you have an important appointment this evening.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Befriend someone new to your office or neighborhood. A lasting friendship is possible. Show more initiative at work. Consult a lawyer if you have any doubts about a real estate transaction.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Snap into action and deal at once with a financial matter. A phone call or letter gives you the inspiration you need to tackle a difficult project. You perserverance pays off handsomely.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Stop sitting on the fence. Once you make a firm decision, you will reap new benefits. Co-workers are friendly but not very helpful. Tackle projects you can handle alone.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Steer clear of dubious investments. Distant affairs look more promising than anticipated. Be practical when making social plans. Keep things simple and inexpensive.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A morning shopping trip could yield some terrific bargains. Self-improvement activities enjoy highly favorable influences. Employees who are flexible will move up quickly.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A message or letter brings gratifying news. People who work behind the scenes will help you advance your plans. Curb your social life. Romance may have to take a temporary backseat to a career.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Refuse to be rattled by gossip. Let other people decide when an announcement should be made. Things get hectic when visitors show up in droves at your place of employment. Mind your manners.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Do everything possible to bring a parent and child closer together. The financial moves you make now could fetch you top dollar later on. A search for a new career proves successful.

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Marc Elliott
Copy Editor.....Dave Massey
PhotoTechnician.....Josh Reynolds
Production Supervisor.....Terry Starmer
Production.....Chris Prell,
Seth Kaye, Ali Woolwich, Kim Frisino

■ football

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 16

his second strong start in a row while going 23 for 31 against the Cardinals. The Vikings may have trouble running against a Patriot defense that is ranked second in the AFC against the run, so expect them to take full advantage of the worst ranked pass defense.

Erratic performances by the Patriot offense make it impossible to take even seven points. Hopefully the two weeks off will have given them time to re-group and to realize that Jon Vaughn and Jeff Russell are the team's future and not Hugh Millen.

Take note of the fact that this week's game between the Bears and the Packers will take place tonight in Green Bay. Packer linebacker Bryce Paup is listed as questionable so Chicago should get their running game on track against a weak Packer defense.

This week's picks in CAPS: (H) : Home

BEARS(-3) VS (H)Packers, OILERS(-4) VS (H)Miami, (H)STEELERS(-3 1/2) VS Seattle, (H)SAINTS(-13) VS Tampa Bay, VIKINGS(-7) VS (H)Pats, JETS(-12) VS (H)Colts, CHIEFS(-1) VS (H)Broncos, LIONS(+7) VS (H)49ers, (H)CHARGERS(-5 1/2) VS Browns, (H)BILLS(-13) VS Bengals,(H)RAIDERS(-4) VS Rams, FALCONS(-2) VS (H)Cardinals

Last week : 6-3-1

Season: 35-26-1

Roy Alexander is a Collegian Sports Columnist

Sox may stay in Winter Haven

Move to Fort Myers now on back burner

FORT MYERS, FL.- (AP) The Boston Red Sox may scrap plans to move their spring training home from Winter Haven to Fort Myers, a team official said.

"I told Winter Haven that the issue had not been settled," Red Sox attorney John Donovan told the News-Press in Fort Myers for today's editions.

This city has already spent $250,000 to lure the team and Mayor Wilber Smith and other city officials say an agreement on a new stadium is expected this week.

The Winter Haven City Comission on Monday voted to allocate $2.25 million to renovate the team's current stadium if the team agrees to stay through 1993. That's the year Fort Myers is hoping to have completed construction of its new stadium.

"I consider every proposal that's coming forward until the matter is wrapped up," Donovan said. "Winter Haven is putting some documents together. They are also making some presentations." Winter Haven wants the Red Sox to agree to a new 10-year contract.

"The Red Sox came back to us and said, 'We don't know if we have a deal with Fort Myers or not,'" said Winter Haven Manager Carl Cheathem. "Contrary to reports coming out of Fort Myers, we have not been eliminated."

But Fort Myers is still at the top of the Red Sox' list, Smith said Tuesday from Boston. He said negotiations with Red Sox officials were going well and he hoped to present a lease to the city council later in the week.

"We have really been assured by the Red Sox that we can complete the negotiations," he said. "I believe we're still on schedule. Winter Haven is continuing to make themselves available to the Red Sox. It is indicative of the value they place on the Red Sox."

City Councilman Bruce Grady, who has opposed the downtown stadium site, predicted that city taxpayers would not be happy with the latest development.

"If this is true, I think the solid majority of the taxpayers will oppose the project," Grady said.

But Councilwoman Ann Knight said Grady might be blameworthy if the Red Sox pick Winter Haven. She said the council's inability to provide a united front may have turned off Red Sox officials.

In other Red Sox news, the team on Tuesday announced a 31-game spring exhibition scheduale, including two games at RFK Stadium in Washington.

The schedule begins March 7 with a game against the Detroit Tigers at Chain O'Lakes Park in Winter Haven, one of 15 home games for the Red Sox.

Boston opens the 1992 season on Tuesday, April 7, against the New York Yankees at Yankee Stadium.

家酒園南湖 Hunan Garden Restaurant

MANDARIN/SZECHUEN CUISINE

The Best Chinese Buffet

MANDARIN/SZECHUAN CUISINE

10 Belchertown Rd. • Route 9 Amherst • 256-0251/0252

WE DELIVER IN AMHERST 5-9:30 EVERYDAY

Minimum $15 plus $2 delivery charge

NEW BUFFET & SUNDAY BRUNCH

Buffet Served Saturday 5-9p.m.

Buffet served 5-8 p.m. Sun.-Thurs.

Brunch served Sunday 11:30 a.m.-3 p.m.

ALL YOU CAN EAT $5.99

Eating Disorder Programs
Fall 1991 Sponsored by University Health Services

Eating Disorder Self-Help Groups
Led by trained students recovered from an eating disorder. Open to anyone. Confidentiality Assured. Call 549-2671, Clinic IV, for more information.

Eating Disorder Treatment Program
For individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner
Mondays or Tuesdays - beginning September 17, University Health Services. Confidentiality Assured. Call 549-2671, Clinic IV.

Food and Feelings Workshop
Led by Peer Health Educators to schedule for your Residence Hall - call 549-2671, ext. 181.

■ professors react

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 11

James said attacks made by White House conservatives, led by Republican Senators Orrin Hatch and Arlen Specter against Hill were both racist and sexist.

Hill was accused of being "a woman scorned," which James said fit into the stereotype of the "promiscuous black woman," and she was accused of being "delusional," which James said fit into the stereotype of "women as hysterical."

Raymond said Anita Hill's treatment by the Senate Committee may inhibit women from leveling charges of sexual harassment.

"I certainly think it will raise consciousness about sexual harassment. . . however if I was a woman experiencing sexual harassment, after watching Anita Hill the last thing I would do is bring charges," Raymond said.

NOBODY'S PERFECT

50% to 80% Off Their Prices

NEW LOCATION

RT. 9 AMHERST/HADLEY BETWEEN SUPER STOP 'N' SHOP & LIQUORS 44

AT THE CAMPUS PLAZA

Merchandise From the Top 2 Specialty Stores in the United States

Ladies Blazers $19.99 REG. 80.00 - 175.00

Ladies Skirts $9.99 REG. 29.00 - 45.00

Ladies Pants & Jeans $14.99 REG. 30.00 - 42.00

DRAWING FOR LADIES LEATHER COAT VALUED AT $300.00 WITH ANY PURCHASE

NAME.....

ADDRESS.....

PHONE#.....

DRAWING OCT 19TH AT 1pm

FIRST QUALITY & SLIGHT IRREGULARS

NOBODY'S PERFECT

Not even the best known specialty & department stores in the U.S. They make mistakes, too...That's when our buyers take advantage and pass the savings onto you!

NEW LOCATION

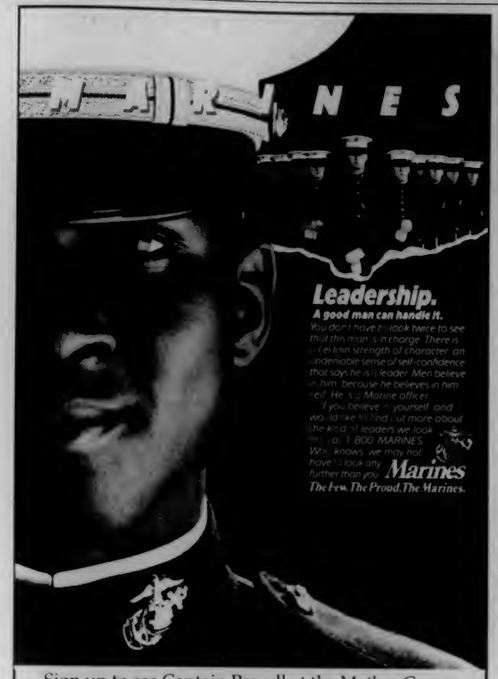
CAMPUS PLAZA RT. 9 AMHERST/HADLEY

Phone 256-8686

Hours:

Sun. 12pm-6pm • Mon., Tues., Wed. 10am-6pm

Thurs., Fri. 10am-9pm • Sat. 10am-6pm



Leadership.
A good man can handle it.
You don't have to look twice to see that this man is in charge. There is an unbelievable strength of character and undeniable sense of self-confidence that says he is a leader. Men believe in him because he believes in himself. He's a Marine officer.
If you believe in yourself and would like to find out more about the kind of leaders we look for, call 1 800 MARINES.
Who knows, we may not have to look any further than you.
Marines
The Few. The Proud. The Marines.

Sign up to see Captain Powell at the Mather Career Center. Resumes are not required. Visit date is Oct. 21 1991 from 10am till 2pm. Or for more info call 1-800-255-8762.

IF YOU ARE OVER 18 BE A BARTENDER!

LOCAL/NATIONAL PLACEMENT ASSISTANCE

DAY/EVENING ONE WEEK

NOVEMBER AND DECEMBER CLASSES NOW FORMING. CALL TODAY

747-9888

1655 MAIN ST. SUITE 202 • SPRINGFIELD

SPECIALS THIS WEEK

Get the best of all worlds, low prices and selection, combined with a warm, personable store.

BUD LIGHT.....$12.99* cs.	Popov Vodka $3.99 175L
COORS.....$12.99* cs.
HEINEKEN .....$8.99* 12pk.	Dewars Scotch $23.99 175L
MOOSE HEAD .....$7.99* 12pk.
CORONA .....$4.29* 6pk.	Busch 1/2 Barrel .....$39.90 & FREE ICE

Four Seasons WINES & LIQUORS

ROUTE 9, HADLEY, Between Burger King & Dunkin Donuts • 584-8174

Classifieds

COME TO THE COLLEGIAN OFFICE 113 CAMPUS CENTER • THURSDAY 8:30-3:30 FRIDAY 8:30-2:30 • DEADLINE IS TWO DAYS PRIOR TO PUBLICATION • 20¢/WORD/DAY FOR STUDENTS • CASH IN ADVANCE

ACTIVITIES

HOT SPOTS T-SHIRTS
On sale in CC Concourse
Oct 16-18
Sponsored by Business Club

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Red Cross Blood Drive
Thurs October 17th
Campus Center Room 101
11:00 4:00 pm
Sponsor: Alpha Delta Phi

SOCIETY FOR HUMAN RESOURCE MANAGEMENT (SHRM) is holding a meeting Thursday, October 17 in SBA room 312 (faculty lounge) at 6:30. Anyone interested in H.R. is welcome to attend

SOUTH ASIAN CLUB
General meeting
CC room 911-915
Thurs. 17th 8:00PM
Be there

UECHI-RYU Karate Classical Okinawan Karate Wed. and Fri. 6:00PM Amherst Community Arts Center Call 665-4501

WORKING IS COMING
Go to it!
UMTG

AUTO FOR SALE

83 TRANS AM
76K miles great shape
$2500 or BO.
549-6781 Perry

COLLEGE PIZZA

COLLEGE PIZZA
Fall Special
Small cheese $3.50
Large cheese $6.00
Free soda with purchase of a large sub, salad, or spaghetti
549-6098 549-6073
Must mention this ad

ENTERTAINMENT

RACK-A-DISC! $175.00 DJs, V.Js, Karaoke for house/ Formal parties, Call 588-9900

EDITING & TUTORING

Editing, english language tutoring, wordprocessing offered by retired teacher to international students and non-English majors. Quick service, modest fees. 253-3354.

DEBATE

Are you interested in public speaking? Would you like to participate in a Mock Trial Competition or other competitive debate? Come to the UMass Debate Society Meeting on Wednesday 7:00 in the Debate Trailer or call 545-3509 for more information

FOR RENT

2 large roomed apt Heat inc. Center of Amherst 256-1124

FRIDGE RENTALS 253-9742 Free Delivery

LARGE BEDROOM IN 3BDRM Puffton apt with own bathroom available Nov 1 Call 549-0748

TOWNHOUSE 2 BEDROOM 1 1/2 bath Bus route N Amherst 1-567-1352

FOR SALE

3 RED HOT Chili Pepper 8x at B.U. 11/1 Fuji Allegro touring bike $180 or B.O. Gold plate, $200 or B.O. Call 256-0985

COMPUTER FOR SALE
$600 Call Cliff
549-1762

HONDA CB360 MOTORCYCLE 4700m green windshield and extras $400 253-0951

LIFECYCLE- Computerized aerobic trainer professional health club model. Excellent condition $1100. 256-0080

NEC LAPTOP COMPUTER. 640K. Two 720K drives. Pop-up programs. New programs: Quattro pro, Reflex 2.0, Keymailer, Golfer 2.0, More. Color monitor. Work center. 773-8997

"THE EMPEROR WEARS NO CLOTHES" Buy the Bible of the Legalization Movement now! Only $14 call Scott at 253-4245

NEW & USED COMPUTERS
Call Damn 6-2270

SPEAKERS
$600 value
Must sell $280 obo 546-1039

INSTRUCTION

GUITAR LESSONS Learn what you want Jon Garner 665-7756

"Know before you go," Where to work, live and ski free in Colorado's resorts. "Current guide to Aspen, Vail, Breckenridge and more! $16.95. Call 1-800-788-6174

HELP WANTED

EXTERIOR PAINTERS
Experienced student painters needed to paint Amherst area homes. Full or part time. America's College Painters (800) 626-4267 "Painting America's homes coast to coast"

OVERSEAS JOBS. $900-2000 mo. summer, yr. round, all countries, all fields. Free info. Write IJC, PO Box2-MAOI Corona Del Mar CA 92625

MUSICIANS

Guitar Lessons Beginning/Intermediate Relaxed atmosphere, serious lessons $10/hr. Call Tim-256-6300

 INTERNSHIPS *****

SPRING 1992 INTERNSHIPS with the Legal Services Center; get hands-on experience in the legal field- work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary -training provided. Contact Legal Services today! 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

LOST

Small box necklace w/ 4 charms. Sentimental value. If found please call Dawn @ 546-3042

PUB FRIDAY OCT. 11?
Did U see a black jacket w/ polar bear interior? Please! Call Liz 549-3785

Reward- Lost Tissot watch with brown ban, sentimental value. If found call 546-4403

TRAVEL

Bahama Cruise $99 per person 5 day/4 night hotel. Plan now for your break. Very limited offer. Call now 1-800-821-0572

SOME RELIABLE TOURS aren't so reliable. That's why Mardi Gras Travel has the #1 for for fun price guarantee to Montreal! SEX LIES IN THE MONTREAL BAR CRAWL! Party weekends include 2 nights & transp. Group leaders travel FREE! (LAGNAF)-Call today 617 444 1111 We're #1 for fun!

TYPING

PAPERS TYPED. $1.50/typed page. Quick, Accurate Service. Call Brian 546-3563.

WORD PROCESSING, laser printing, papers, resumes, theses. Rosemary 259-1786

VAN HALEN TICKETS

Van Halen tickets for sale for Hartford 10/29. First level seats, only four tickets available, act now. Call Bruce at 253-0531

PERSONALS

JAY,
Oh by the way
You're ugly

JEN FROM BAKER
Who's your cute friend from Van Meter?
The Field Guy

ZIPPY TURNS 21
on Sat
He Ha
Feel the Pain

Kathleen:
We never saw that cute guy, so we decided to send you a personal instead
Love, Sharon and Karolyn

Swell- Thanks for forgetting your older friends. Tom, Rach, Jul, Shyno & Werm. Just kidding (wench)

WAYNE FROM PIKE
I'm sorry
I love you,
Maggy

ST. JUDE - Thank you
For giving us Dave Gale 22 years ago today

DUCK HUNT 1991
Catch them before the psycho bimbos do

Michelle Hogan-
Happy Birthday! Have a great day! Don't worry we will have fun tonight!
Love, Lisa

To Lauren, Laura, Matt, Dave, Doug, Chris, Toby, Jefferson, Sharon, Jodie, Debbie of 3 west
U Guys R the best!
KAY

Mother Tucker – The Man and his dream
The man - Gape Tucker
The Dream - To be 21
Happy 21st Gabe
The Old Roomies (i.e. The Math Geek, Dub, Coach Marty, and Russ)

PHIL H. Happy 21st birthday
All you ladies watch out because Phil will get smashed and try to wax your booty
The Boys (and girl) at the Blue House

CAROLYN!
Happy 21st!
Love
Your Co-Libra

JOSH G.
I'd like to be more than just friends
Will you go to dinner with me?
P.S. good here.

Michelle Hogan of Tri Sigma
...ou're the greatest roommate
...appy Birthday Love ya Nicole

ROSE MENDONCA
HAPPY BIRTHDAY
-Tall Man

TODD AND DEREK
We miss you!
Love Marla and Andrea

ULYSSES, SIGEMUND, BEOWULF, Redcross, Arthur, Dave Gale, Tristram, The List goes on.

HEROIC DAVE G.
The Dave continuum,
all davers everywhere, salute you

FOR UNTO US is born a son, 22 years ago today, in the town of Wilbraham, province of Hamden, while shepherds watched their flocks.

As the clownhead Sutra says,
Buddha mind is Dave G. mind.
10,000 bows on the birthday of the Holy one

STACY NEALE
Happy Anniversary Stacy. It has been two great years. Get ready for a romantic weekend! Love Always, Dennis

THORR B- Happy Birthday!
Stay busy from the champagne now you're a FOSSIL. ha-ha-ime

BOB MONAHAN

Happy Birthday
to the oldest UMass student in history!!!
Love, Jill

SERVICES

BICYCLE BROKEN?
Call Pat
546-0119

ORDER AVON!
546-1999
Call for brochure

PREGNANT?
Need a pregnancy test, information or support? Call for free and confidential services. ALTERNATIVES 245 Main Street, Northampton 586-3000 or Greenfield 774-6019

FREE pregnancy testing; confidential and caring support. BIRTHRIGHT 233 No. Pleasant Street Amherst 549-1906

Seniors and Juniors
Time to think about resumes
Let me help you design your resume
I offer professional resumes at college prices.
Call Andy at 549-4002

TYPING: Theses, papers. Laser. Quality. Dot Matrix. Camera-Ready Art. Posters, Flyers 549-0006

Sports

Harvard shuts out women's soccer, 1-0

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

Yesterday, the University of Massachusetts women's soccer team got little accomplished in the offense end of the field and lost its second straight game, this time to Harvard, 1-0.

The Minutewomen (8-3) have had difficulties scoring goals the last few games and it has cost them. After cruising through the first nine games looking very much like a national power, the team is now in a slump.

"It's disappointing," UMass coach Jim Rudy said. "It's the same old thing, we aren't finishing our plays. Harvard came out and played as well as they could, and we didn't."

In the 40th minute Harvard's Skyler Vinton collected the ball about 25 yards out in front of the UMass net. Vinton hit a soft shot towards the upper left corner of the net that somehow eluded UMass goalie Briana Scurry and went into the net, according to Rudy.

"It wasn't a hard shot, she just dinked one, I think she miss hit it," Rudy said. "I don't know how it got in. Bri was up there, she was close enough, I don't know, it just got by her. It was a real strange-looking play, just a little floater."

For a goalie like Scurry, who early in the year was pitching shutouts like Orel Hershiser, "little floaters" don't usually get by.

Vinton's shot was one of only two Harvard had in the game, which might tell where most of the play was. Massachusetts had 10 shots in the contest.

"At times we dominated the game," Rudy said. "The first 25 minutes of play we were at them but we just kept missing the play down by the net. It seemed like we always blew the last pass or we took the wrong shot."

The Minutewomen did hit two posts on the day. In the second half Colleen Milliken drove a shot from 18 yards out that struck the upright, later in the half Polly Hackathorn came in from the left side and just missed the net with a shot.

Later in the half Paula Wilkens crossed a pass in front of the net that Milliken just missed getting to, according to Rudy. Near the end of regulation Michele Woodside broke the left flank with a good scoring bid. According to Rudy, Woodside's shot had the Harvard keeper beat but the ball struck a defender in front of the net.

One point of attack that has been missing from the Massachusetts attack is the cornerkick. UMass outcornered Harvard 7-1 yesterday. The Wilkens-Holly Hellmuth combination earlier in the year was nearly unstoppable. Six times in the first seven games Wilkens served it up and Hellmuth headed it in. The last three games they have been shutout.

"We haven't put away a good corner," Rudy said. "It is something we have to work on and possibly change our strategy. Teams have been packing it in on the corners and confronting our players, especially Holly."

Saturday, UMass hosts undefeated and 16th-ranked Notre Dame.

Minutemaniacs ready to run wild at UMass

By DAVID SCOTT
Collegian Staff

A band from Liverpool, England brought us 'Beatlemania,' wrestler Hulk Hogan was the cause of 'Hulkamania' and now the UMass campus is about to be stricken with 'Minutemania.'

Minutemaniacs, a newly formed student booster organization established under the auspices of the Athletic Development Office, is seeking a few (200) good people to help cheer on UMass sports teams.

"It's just a baby now," said Minutemaniacs President and founder, senior Gabe Tucker. "It's been chaotic getting it started but it's something that can be big."

Working in conjunction with John Nitardy, the director of the Athletic Development Office which oversees the UMass Athletic Fund, Tucker began formulating plans for a type of fan club that could unite students and help to show support for the UMass sports program, specifically basketball, football and lacrosse.

"I like all UMass sports," Tucker said. "But I'm more of a hoop fan than anything else."

Nitardy founded a similar group called "Jaguar Pride" while at the University of South Alabama and thus gave Tucker guidelines to follow in launching the Minutemaniacs.

"It's good to get students involved in the athletic programs while they're still in school," Nitardy said. "It gets the morale going among the students."

Membership in the club costs $20 and includes many benefits including a t-shirt, a newsletter, a car decal, a membership card and perhaps most importantly, seating in the end zone section behind the basket for basketball games. For now, membership is limited to the first 200 students who sign up.

Although members will still have to wait in line for tickets (this year seats are reserved for basketball), every effort will made to have the Minutemaniacs sit together in the end zone section.

While the Minutemaniacs probably won't be as rowdy and rambunctious as the Washington Redskins fans known as the "Hogs," or the "Dawg Pound" members in Cleveland, Tucker hopes the club can generate some excitement at sporting events.

"I believe the support is there for the basketball program," Tucker said. "Together we can boost the team more."

UMass basketball coach John Calipari called the club a "neat" idea and stressed the importance of having the fans root for UMass and not against opposing teams.

"It will bring the campus together and the students together," Calipari said. "The students can have a little identity (when coming to the games)."

Tucker hopes that if there is enough interest in the club then road trips to away games as well as pre- and post-game parties can be arranged.

"It could really catch on and I think the team would like that kind of support," Tucker said. "I like doing something for the school."

Nitardy said that money raised from membership fees will be put aside into an account and members can later decide on what to spend the funds on.

"The money generated can go to a specific thing," Nitardy said. "For instance (the members) could decide to buy a new mascot uniform for the teams."

Nitardy used the example of a mascot as a way to illustrate what he believes is a need for more promotion and better marketing of the University as a whole, and he thinks the Minutemaniacs can help to begin this process.

"Anything we do to generate enthusiasm on and off campus is a positive," Nitardy said, stressing that it won't be "out of control fun."

Both Nitardy and Tucker are very optimistic about the future of the Minutemaniacs and look forward to having fans attend other sporting events aside from the big three. Also down the road is the possibility of an exclusive section being set-up when the Mullins Center is completed, Nitrady said.

Information regarding the Minutemaniacs can be obtained at the Athletic Development Office in 225B Boyden building.

Roy makes his picks for Sunday's games

Kansas City is back in the spotlight. After their 42-7 slaying of the Dolphins last week it is now apparent that the Chiefs have regained last year's offensive form. In the last two games they have averaged 39 points per game.

Running back Christain Okoye had another big week, gaining 153 yards on the ground. Last year was a sub-par season for the All-Pro running back because of a series of off-the-field problems. With his problems behind him, he has gone on to gain 664 yards this season and a 4.8 yards-per-carry average.

Roy Alexander

In addition to Okoye, the Chiefs have two other highly talented running backs in Harvey Williams and Barry Word, who made the Pro Bowl last year. With such a powerful running game now in tact, quarterback Steve DeBerg will have an easier time.

Since the defense has kept Kansas City alive up to this point, the Chiefs have remained close enough to make a run at the AFC title against the defending champion Buffalo Bills. After their 36-6 whipping of the Bills on Monday Night Football two weeks ago, the Chiefs believe that they can go all the way to the Super Bowl.

The Chiefs are only one game behind Buffalo in the race for that all important home field advantage during the playoffs. While it is still early to be talking of the playoffs, a suprisingly weak AFC sets the stage for an early race among the three division leaders, Kansas City, Buffalo and Houston

Even though the Broncos are 4-2, the match-up between Denver and Kansas City (5-2) will not be as close as their records may indicate. All of the teams that Denver has beaten have a combined total of seven wins. Two weeks ago the Broncos were absolutely embarrassed by the Oilers.

Now that the Chiefs have gotten their offense back on track, you can expect to see them pick apart a mediocre Bronco defense. Against the number one ranked defense in the AFC, the running and passing attacks of Denver will have a difficult time putting many points on the board. Kansas City is the best pick this week as only a one point favorite.

It's time for the San Diego Chargers to wake up and begin their season. Last week quarterback John Friesz showed signs of making something of an otherwise disgusting season as he threw for over 300 yards. However, the normally potent running attack was held to a mere 89 yards.

Looking back at this season will only hamper any future progress. The Chargers must start all over, beginning this week against Cleveland. The Browns are ranked second in the AFC in defense but their offense is pathetic. Only the explosive Indianapolis Colts and the Pats rank lower.

Opportunities like this don't come often, so if the Chargers wish to keep any form of self-respect, they must win at home against the Browns. San Diego won't run away with this one, but they should cover the 5 1/2 points.

Viking's quarterback Rich Gannon had

CONTINUED ON PAGE 14

Tennis rained out but ready for New Englands

By LILLIAN K. LEGGIO
Collegian Staff

With the possibility of rain threatening Tuesday's match between the University of Massachusetts and Holy Cross University women's tennis teams, UMass moved ahead to a 4-2 lead by the conclusion of singles play.

Unfortunately for UMass, the rain didn't hold up and the match was officially called no contest.

"Normally, we'd make it (the match) up," said UMass coach Edwin Gentzler. "But with both teams heading into the New Englands this weekend, we don't have the time."

The New England Championship Tournament will be held on October 19-20th in Burlington, Vermont. The participants in the tournaments besides UMass are the Universities of Connecticut, Hartford, Harvard. Rhode Island, and Vermont.

UMass has the misfortune of possessing the worst record of the six teams. However, of the five teams, UMass has played UConn, Harford, URI, and Vermont, defeating Hartford 6-3 and URI 8-1.

"The wins against Rhode Island and Vermont were considered upsets," said Gentzler. "We are clearly the underdogs here, but this is the best possible time for us to play because we have a lot of momentum from our recent wins."

Gentzler also concedes that momentum played a large part in the Minutewomen's successful play against Holy Cross. Going into Tuesday, UMass had won two in a row.

"I think the team feels like as long as they stay close," said Gentzler. "They can win the match."

UMass' Kelly Grim got things started by disposing of Adriana Banga in under an hour by a score of 6-1, 6-0. In another match under 60 minutes, Gail Girasella, UMass' No. 3 player, defeated Stephi Govatsos 6-1, 6-1.

In the match against Holy Cross, Kerry Kamiski came back from being down in the second set against Holy Cross' Sarah Mick, to notch her match 6-2, 7-5. Diedre O'Brian lost to UMass' Amy Ryan in straight sets 6-4, 6-0.

In one of UMass' two singles losses, No. 1 player Shizuko Yamasaki lost a first set lead and the match to Tracy Porier 7-6, 6-2.

Shortly before the singles matches ended and the doubles began, the rains came, making it hazardous to play on the slippery courts. Doubles play was promptly canceled.

"We were disappointed that the match was called because we were playing so well up to that point," Gentzler said. "Still, it was a confidence booster and a good warm-up for the New Englands."

SPORTS NOTICE

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL TRYOUTS: The University of Massachusetts of women's basketball team will be holding tryouts this week. Those interested in playing for the team should report to the Curry Hicks Cage at 6 p.m. this Thursday and at 7:30 p.m. on Friday or call Jill Rooney at 545-1254.

INTRAMURALS: Entries due October 21 for foul shooting and three-point shooting contests. Stop by Boyden gym room 215 or call 545-0022 for details.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THE LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND

VOLUME CI ISSUE 33 FRIDAY, OCTOBER 18, 1991

Garden honors UMass founder

William Clark set up ties with Japanese college

Collegian photo by Matt Kahn

Chancellor O'Brien and Tsutomu Hiroshige, president of Hokkaido University, at the dedication of the William Smith Clark Memorial near Butterfield dorm yesterday.

By LISA CURTIS
Collegian Staff

With red, cherubic cheeks and amazing lungs, music Professor Walter Chesnut vibrantly trumpeted open the dedication ceremony for the William S. Clark Memorial, located near Butterfield Residence Hall yesterday.

The memorial was erected in memorial of Clark, the first sitting president of the forerunner of the University of Massachusetts, Massachusetts Agricultural College.

Many of the speakers said the rock garden symbolizes the ties between UMass and its sister college, Hokkaido University in Sapporo, Japan. Both agricultural universities were founded by Clark in the 1800s.

"Almost all Japanese know him. He's famous," said Ryosuke Suganami, a teaching assistant in Asian languages department. "He's known for his words, 'Boys, be ambitious.' "

Professor Yukie Horiba, who teaches Japanese at UMass, noted how "from our history books every Japanese person knows his name and the fact that he came from the U.S."

The project's design evolved out of a discussion of how to commemorate the centennial of Clark's death.

One professor commented that if a similar ceremony had been held in Japan, steps would have been taken to have translations available for visitors.

"Japanese don't expect foreigners to learn their language," she said.

Another professor noted that Chancellor Richard O'Brien, who made a short speech, should have been told how to correctly pronounce the name of Hokkaido University President Tsutomu Hiroshige, who was also at the ceremony.

Hiroshige was awarded an honorary degree. "The

CONTINUED ON PAGE 2

Superior Court ruling protects abortion clinics

By TONY ROGERS
Associated Press

BOSTON — A Middlesex Superior Court judge yesterday made permanent an injunction issued last year that prohibits anti-abortion activists from blocking access to clinics statewide.

In a 150-page decision that compared anti-abortion protest tactics to those of segregationists who once blocked schools to Black students, Judge Peter M. Lauriat entered the injunction against Operation Rescue Boston, the Pro-Life Action Network, and 38 individual attendants.

The ruling bars the defendants or anyone acting in concert with them from obstructing access to clinics. Penalties include up to 2 1/2 years imprisonment and a $5,000 fine.

But even as the ruling was issued, police in Springfield reported arresting about a dozen anti-abortion activists who staged a sit-in at the Hamden Gynecological Clinic on Maple Street.

Lauriat issued a preliminary injunction in May 1990 in the wake of several Operation Rescue protests that effectively blocked and shut down clinics where abortions were performed.

In his ruling yesterday, Laurist said the protesters' tactics were similar "to those of the segregationists three decades ago, who blocked entrances to educational institutions in the South and elsewhere.

"The defendants' harsh and angry defiance of the rule of law, and of the constitutionally and legally protected rights of their fellow citizens, is intolerable in this society," Lauriat wrote.

Women's groups applauded the ruling.

"What the judge has decided today is that women have the right to be protected against civil rights violations that occur in front of these clinics when the anti-abortion fanatics physically bar access," said Ellen Zucker, president of the Boston Chapter of the National Organization for Women.

Operation Rescue could not be reached immediately for comment. But the group has said it would not be deterred by the injunction. In June, several hundred anti-abortion demonstrators were arrested at three clinics in Brookline.

Students call for closing of Asian Cultural Center

By AMY PRENDERGAST
Collegian Staff

An "Emergency Community Meeting" of Asian and Asian-American students decided to take "an action" on the status of the United Asia Cultural Center, according to a Cultural Center representative.

About 50 members of the Asian and Asian-American community attended the meeting held last night in Knowlton Residence Hall.

The press and the general public were barred from the meeting, which was open only to those involved with the center, according to meeting organizers.

Inside:

Page 3:
Amherst passes a by-law requiring getting a license to buy a keg.

Page 3:
UMass dedicates a rock garden to our first president, William Smith Clark.

Page 8:
The UMass women's soccer team hosts the Fightin' Irish tomorrow at Boyden field.

Weather

Partly sunny, with temps 65-70. Tonight will be clear and cool. Looks like a nice weekend's in store for us.

Flyers were posted around campus stating the meeting was open to "Asian Students Only."

"When we originally fought to get the centers, it was minority students who fought for the centers and it should be minority students that decide the destiny of their centers," said Alexander Nguyen, Cultural Center representative and former Multicultural Affairs Editor for the Collegian.

According to a statement written by a committee of Asian students and distributed at the meeting, the Asian Cultural Center is doing "essentially nothing" for the Asian and Asian-American students.

The United Asia Cultural Center, along with all of the University Cultural Centers, have received minimal funding and space from the administration, the statement said.

"We should close down the center as a statement to the University that we will no longer accept or tolerate its behavior toward Asians and other minorities," said Nguyen.

The committee's statement described the Learning Resource Center as a product of "token funding." The administration is openly exploiting the "Myth of the Model Minority" and stereotyping the Asian students, the committee said.

The organizers hope to transfer the Cultural Center's budget of around $11,000 into the Learning Resource Center.

"By closing our Center, we are unveiling the University's hypocritical claim of multiculturalism. Asian students will be the first to take away the University's ability to claim true diversity," said the committee's statement.

Nguyen said the committee will officially announce its demands at a press conference to be held Monday at 10 a.m.

Collegian photo by Jeff Egan

A closed meeting of those concerned with the Asian Cultural Center last night in Knowlton dormitory.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THE LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is a Registered Student Organization of the University of Massachusetts, published each weekday during the calendar year with a circulation of 19,000.

113 CAMPUS CENTER AMHERST, MA 01003
Phone (413) 545-3500 FAX (413) 545-1592

STAFF

Editor in Chief....Gayle Long
Managing Editor....Marc Elliott
Editorial Editor....Greg Sukiennik
News Editor....Preston P. Forman
Sports Editor....Tamir Lipton
Arts Editor....Paul DeGeorges
Photography Editor....Carrie Wyeth
Black Affairs Editor....Sondra Sutton
Women's Issues Editor....Jessame Hannus
Jewish Affairs....Felice Cohen, Debra Kriegsman
Multicultural Affairs Editor....
Third World Affairs Editor....Madanmohan Rao
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor....Trystan Skeigh
Business Manager....Randee Pastel
Advertising Manager....Dena Haselkorn
Finance Manager....Jeff Weiner
Circulation Manager....Jim Winterbottom
Subscriptions Manager....Stacy Rogers
Promotions Manager....Scott Macey
Production Manager....Terry Starmer
Day Graphics Manager....Jenn Burns

PROFESSIONAL STAFF

Business....Brian Harrington, Lori Black, Maureen Majerowski
Graphics....Blake Phillips

For Your Information

Friday, October 18

Convention — A Sci-Fi convention sponsored by SCUM will be held in the Campus Center Auditorium from 5:00 p.m. to 1:00 a.m. There will be a registration fee for this event. The event will run through the weekend, with the hours on Saturday from 8:00 a.m. to 1:00 a.m. and the hours on Sunday 8:00 a.m. to 10:00 p.m.

Saturday, October 19

Special Event — Vintage Vinyl: The Used Record Sale with all kinds of used records from the WFCR Music Library, will be held on Amherst Town Common from 10:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.

Special Event — A service and Shabbat meal will be held at the Chabad House at 10:00 a.m.

Sunday, October 20

Dance — "Performing Arts Division Samba Space" with Cuban Dancer Alfredo Castillo will be held in the UM Fine Arts Center Bezanson Recital Hall at 3:00 p.m.

Meeting — P.O.W.E.R. meeting will be held in 306 Student Union at 7:30 p.m.

■ dedication

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

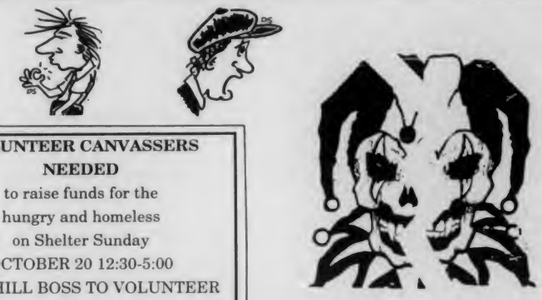
memorial has a unique design to bring the East and the West together," he said, in English.

Gov. William Weld was in Amherst yesterday and had lunch with the visiting delegation, which was funded by the United Nations Day Committee. Weld did not attend the dedication ceremony.

The project designer, 1987 UMass alumnus Todd Richardson, was given a print of Clark's home as it stood before 1890. Clark's home, which burned down, was located where Van Meter stands today.

"I think this is terrific. [The ceremony] is a celebration of the whole process. It marks a new era of collaboration and of common goals between the U.S. and Japan," said Richardson. "The memorial doesn't require the viewer to understand languages. You don't need to speak the language to understand the symbolism."

Richard Prescott, great-great-grandson of Clark, said, "How they ever found us, I don't know. I didn't know what to expect. It's very modern."



家酒園南湖 Hunan Garden Restaurant
MANDARIN/SZECHUEN CUISINE
The Best Chinese Buffet
MANDARIN/SZECHUAN CUISINE
10 Belchertown Rd. • Route 9 Amherst • 256-0251/0252
WE DELIVER IN AMHERST 5-9:30 EVERYDAY
Minimum $15 plus $2 delivery charge
NEW BUFFET & SUNDAY BRUNCH
Buffet Served Saturday 5-9p.m.
Buffet served 5-8 p.m. Sun.-Thurs.
Brunch served Sunday 11:30 a.m.-3 p.m.
ALL YOU CAN EAT $5.99

VOLUNTEER CANVASSERS NEEDED to raise funds for the hungry and homeless on Shelter Sunday
OCTOBER 20 12:30-5:00
CALL HILL BOSS TO VOLUNTEER
253-5296

WRITE FOR THE COLLEGIAN

ATTENTION; FACULTY AND STAFF

October is here and the United Way campaign is about to begin.

This fall, for the first time, Advocacy Network will be listed as an approved agency by COMEC. (Commonwealth of Massachusetts Employees Contribution) to receive your contribution as a state employee through COMEC via United Way as the collection agency.

Advocacy Network is an all volunteer group which advocates for the mentally retarded residing in Western Massachusetts.

Through the years, Advocacy Network has been closely involved with thousands of University of Massachusetts students who have participated in the long-standing and successful Boltwood Project.

I ask for your financial support through your United Way/COMEC contribution: Please specify Advocacy Network.

If you wish to know more about Advocacy Network, please phone:
(413) 256-1313

THIS FRIDAY 2-6 PM
THE TOC SEAFOOD BAR
PEEL 'N' EAT SHRIMP
$ 4.25/HALF DOZ
FRESH STEAMERS
$ 4.50/'BUCKET'
Introducing Pitchers of Miller Genuine Draft for $4.25
ONLY AT THE TOC LOUNGE
11th FLOOR CAMPUS CENTER

Women's Shoes, Clothing & Accessories
Zanna • 187 North Pleasant Street • Amherst
413.253.2563
ZANNA
ALL WOMAN.

Local

Collegian photo by Helena Feder

THE LINES ARE OPEN -- Students taking pledges during the Newman Center Telethon. As of last night, they had collected $135,190.

Town acts on kegs

Task force passes license restrictions

By RIC OLIVEIRA
Collegian Staff

The Amherst Keg By-Law Licensing Task Force approved two resolutions which would lay the foundation of the Amherst Keg Licensing By-Law last night in Amherst.

The measures were broken into two policies which would determine who would be eligible to receive a keg license and the restrictions upon each form of license.

The two forms approved would be a short-term and a long-term license, each with its own separate rules and ordinances.

Over the summer the town of Amherst passed the Keg Licensing By-Law for the purpose of protecting the "health, safety and welfare of its inhabitants."

The by-law permits the town of Amherst to regulate the possession and dispensing of kegs containing malt beverages.

The committee passed resolutions which would establish the Amherst police station and the town hall as the designated offices where applications to the Keg By-Law could be attained.

Every application must receive a recommendation for approval the Amherst Police Chief after a preliminary check.

Scherpa said the process could take anywhere from 20 minutes to a week "depending on the circumstances."

Scherpa added that denial of license applications would be based on a computer check of addresses that had had previous violations of noise by-laws or excessive keg amounts.

The long-term license policy requires that no more than one keg may be upon a licensed property at any time. The short-term Keg license, however, does not have a determined number of kegs allowed.

Neither the short- nor the long-term license applies to empty kegs, only to the amount of visible full kegs upon a licensed property. Any individual over 21 is eligible for a license.

The committee stated that no license cap would be in effect, and that a record of all applications would be kept for a reasonable amount of time. The resolutions now move on to the Town of Amherst committee.

Five arrested in break-in University of Massachusetts police arrested five men last night in connection with a larceny from a residence hall and from a Hadley business.

Police apprehended the five men, some of whom are UMass students, in Lot 50 after being notified by Hadley Police about a break-in at Frank's Nursery on Route 9.

Michael Ostrowsky, of New York; Steven F. Parkinson, of North Attlebore; Laurence M. Shuman, of Newton; Paul R. O'Connor, of Springfield and Christopher N. Speranzo, of Becket were arrested.

They were charged with larceny from a building, receiving stolen property, breaking and entering in the night time with intent to commit a felony and larceny under $200.

An additional receiving stolen property charge was lodged against Ostrowsky.

The men allegedly entered Frank's last night and also stole property from an unidentified residence hall the same night, police said.

Police were unable to identify which of the men were students.

—PRESTON P. FORMAN

UM pres. looks to future

By MICHAEL LEVY
Collegian Staff

Collegian photo by Matt Kahn

Dr. Elbert K. Fretwell

The future of the University of Massachusetts will improve through centralization of the University's five campuses and better state economic performance, according to the system's president.

Dr. Elbert K. Fretwell, UMass interim president, discussed new plans to help the UMass system in its recovery in a lecture sponsored by the Amherst League of Women Voters at the Fort River School in Amherst.

"I am working under the theory that things will get better, or at least not worse," Fretwell said.

Fretwell spoke of the need for further business contributions to help the University. Also, centralizing some of the functions of the five University of Massachusetts campuses could help make the system more efficient, Fretwell said.

An audience member expressed concern with the University's reliance on business and government grants, pointing to the tendency of these grants to be only related to the sciences.

Fretwell agreed, then cited increased tax revenues resulting from economic stabilization as a viable source of funding for arts and behavioral sciences.

Almost all of the 60 people attending the lecture said they have connections with UMass when asked by Fretwell.

The centralized University functions which Fretwell discussed included a new payroll and accounting system which he said will save money and result in better control over expenditures.

He also said planning will be made easier through centralization. Fretwell noted the new computer research at UMass-Amherst as an example of cooperative efforts with business to obtain additional funding for the University.

Every application must receive a recommendation for approval the Amherst Police Chief after a preliminary check.

Scherpa said the process could take anywhere from 20 minutes to a week "depending on the circumstances."

Scherpa added that denial of license applications would be based on a computer check of addresses that had had previous violations of noise by-laws or excessive keg amounts.

The long-term license policy requires that no more than one keg may be upon a licensed property at any time. The short-term Keg license, however, does not have a determined number of kegs allowed.

Neither the short- nor the long-term license applies to empty kegs, only to the amount of visible full kegs upon a licensed property. Any individual over 21 is eligible for a license.

The committee stated that no license cap would be in effect, and that a record of all applications would be kept for a reasonable amount of time. The resolutions now move on to the Town of Amherst committee.

Get Out Of Town. Fast!
Ask for U.S. Express at the ticket window!
Our U.S.EXPRESS Marshals want to run you out of town . . . and then bring you back!
Are you going to Boston pardner? Our coaches give you the fastest service between the Amherst/Northampton area and Boston.
Tickets are only $12 one-way. Get them at the UMASS campus center ticket window. Coaches depart UMASS at the Whitmore Horseshoe and arrive in Boston at Essex St. (across from South Station).

UMASS Friday & Sunday Schedule

Leaves UMASS	Leaves Northampton	Arrives Boston
1:30 p.m.	1:55 p.m.	3:45 p.m.
2:30 p.m.	2:55 p.m.	4:45 p.m.
3:30 p.m.	3:55 p.m.	5:45 p.m.
4:30 p.m.	4:55 p.m.	6:45 p.m.

Boston Friday & Sunday Schedule

Leaves Boston	Arrives Northampton	Arrives UMASS
4:00 p.m.	6:00 p.m.	6:30 p.m.
5:00 p.m.	7:00 p.m.	7:30 p.m.
6:00 p.m.	8:00 p.m.	8:30 p.m.
7:00 p.m.	9:00 p.m.	9:30 p.m.

For more info call 582-1313
Schedule valid through 12/31/91
U.S.EXPRESS

HUNAN GOURMET
京 CHINESE RESTAURANT 湘
ADVOCATE ★BEST★ THE VALLEY READERS POLL 1991 1st Place
The aroma, sound & taste of authentic Chinese cuisine prepared Hunan, Szechuan, Mandarin or Cantonese style — especially for you!
FULL LIQUOR LICENSE
261 King St., Northampton • 585-0202 • Ample Parking
Open 7 Days a Week • NO MSG
TAKE OUT SERVICE AVAILABLE

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions on this page are those of the individual writer or cartoonist, and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian or the University unless otherwise noted.

Editorial Policy

The Editorial/Opinion page welcomes and encourages columns, letters and cartoons from UMass and the entire Five College area. The following are some important guidelines to consider when submitting material to the page:

The Editorial staff reserves the right to edit letters and columns for grammar, clarity and length.

Submissions must bear the writer's name, local address and phone number. This information is subject to verification.

Anonymous submissions will be printed at the editor's discretion. Letters or columns written under a pseudonym will not be accepted.

All submissions must be typed and double spaced to be considered for publication. Untyped material will not be considered for publication.

Letters should not exceed 50 typed, double-spaced lines. Columns should not exceed 70 typed, double-spaced lines. Letters and columns of unreasonable length will not be considered for publication.

Letters and columns written in response to a previously published letter will not be printed. Responses to or criticisms of columns or other Collegian articles are restricted to letter form. Any exceptions to this guideline will be determined solely by the editors.

The Editorial staff is not required to print all submitted material. All submissions become property of the Collegian and will not be returned.

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual artist or writer and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian, its staff or the Editorial staff.

* * * * *

The Editorial page wants you. Yes, you, the reader of these smudgy pages. We are looking for good writers and good artists to fill this page with ideas and opinions. Stop by the Editorial desk at the Collegian office, 113 Campus Center. Your opinions count — but no one will know what you're thinking unless you tell them.

A call to feminist action

The last time I recall being spurred to feminist action came from my first reading of a collection of feminist herstorical writings. As I opened the book the words struck me. I recall them vividly: "To our foremothers who walked the road before us, so that we may live in the world we do today." I recognize that much of what I have today did not come easily nor did it come without the continuous dedication and persistence, joy, anguish and tears of frustration of many dedicated women.

Lisa Veshecco

I urge every woman to perceive the outrageous outcome for Anita Hill and ultimately every woman in the country as a call to action and protest.

The words of Justice Harry Blackmun resound in my head: "I feel a cold wind blow." Justice Blackmun was responding to the plight of women which he feared for after the first chip at Roe v. Wade came down in Webster v. Reproductive Health Services (1991). I wish to know what Justice Blackmun thinks now as he sits as the only court justice who earnestly and vehemently advocates for the rights of women.

As the cold wind blows the court over to the right even more with the addition of the avid fan of Long Dong Silver, I feel the chill. Frankly, I fear for the women of the future as well for many of us today. I am also feeling the responsibility I have to make the world a better, more just and safer place for women to be. I fear for the pitiful demonstration of power politics. I saw as the boys continued to knock heads throughout the circus and Peter Jennings interrupts to ask who won, the Democrats or the Republicans?

And before Anita Hill even makes her way to the hearings for the first time, some bozo named Hatch is yelling for confirmation. And I fear because not one of those boys were any bit closer at the conclusion of those hearings to grasping the concept of sexual harassment, or the horror of the experience as Professor Hill retold it. Male laws are unfit to measure women's experiences.

I fear that too many men and women say what happened to Hill is okay because that is often the dynamic of female/male relationships. I fear that the workplace is going to be as open field a place for women as our homes and streets are now. This is another clear indication that women are not safe and will not be protected by those who are put in government to enact laws to do just that.

As a legal resident and voter in Pennsylvania you bet I will hold [Senator Arlen] Spector accountable for his failure to become familiar with the nature of sexual harassment as well as for the despicable manner which he displayed towards Prof. Hill during her inquisition. Spector, among most others, has clearly demonstrated his inability to represent, and his blatant refusal to understand, women. It's ludicrous to even think he can.

To many it's seen as a sex difference, something that naturally occurs. The experience of sexual harassment humiliates many women and minimizes their sense of self as a human being. The effects of harassment reduce one to the status of object. Professor Hill tried to tell the Senate that she was being treated as and spoken to as an object of pleasure.

Let's make no mistake. If Anita Hill isn't heard, what makes any of us think that we will be heard, or our daughters, mothers, lovers, nieces, aunts, grandmothers or friends?

Lisa Veshecco is a Collegian Correspondent

The scheme to keep us sniffling, sneezing and coughing

Have you ever stopped to think about the multitude of runny noses — attached to fevers, watery eyes and hacking coughs — that become the dominant feature of UMass right around the third week of the semester? How about the lone flu sufferer down the hall who, via the domino effect, manages to multiply his ailment throughout the floor within a matter of days?

Well, fear not, for this investigative reporter decided to find an answer to these mind-boggling questions. How, you ask, can an answer be found? Let me explain. A solution is only as close as the discovery of the root of the problem. Now the investigative procedure begins.

What, pray tell, is the root — the factor that dictates the habitat of various viruses (say that 10 times backwards) throughout the fall and spring semesters? Why must the short-lived epidemics congregate on the UMass campus? What better way to find out than to ask the germs themselves? Absolutely right! There is no better way. However, unless you are an idiot, you know that such an endeavor is not only impossible, but also a sure sign of some type of personal dysfunction or shortcoming. Therefore, it is necessary to look to the conditions of the said environment in order to determine what the favorable circumstances of said germs may be. Observe I did! After hours of grueling pavement pounding, wheel turnings and plain exhausting work, I came up with five possible explanations.

1. Colds, coughs and fevers are simply the side effects of a drug that Whitmore dispenses to the Dining Commons. The drug, referred to by the suits that walk around the Worcester D.C. as "It," is only effective when shot directly into scrod and serves as a brainwashing agent. "It" does the job well. Many students already believe that UMass administrators are not overpayed and that the only way to curve our budget crisis is to increase the size of the freshman class and decrease the number of professors employed.

Diana D'Avanzo

You don't believe me? Well, maybe you can tell me why the D.C.s serves scrod every other night? No matter what you call it — New England Style Scrod, Cajun Style Scrod, Scrumptious Baked Scrod, Overdone Scrod— it's still SCROD! There must be a connection. Mull it over. You'll see.

2. It's all a plot. Every munchy store manager on campus knows that only a life or death situation would force students to purchase ridiculously overpriced cold medications. This is a particularly convincing argument when we consider the location of Health Services, home of lesser-priced relief — too far a walk from most places and not very well advertised on the campus map.

3. I'm convinced that during the hazy, lazy days of summer officials take an annual cruise to a remote island just beyond the furthest corner of the map. The natives of the island promote an authentic blend of sicknesses known by the townspeople as "Small Things That Cause Illness," or STTCI for short. When returned to campus, STTCI is sprinkled onto our dormitory mattresses. The "small things" are attracted to student positive (or negative blood) and infect, with intent to sicken, on contact. The cruel part is the reason for the expensive importation: just so they can laugh at us. (There is no actual evidence for #3.)

4. Bathroom non-cleaning on the weekends is also a believable hypothesis. For two whole days the bathrooms are not cleaned — in fact, they're dirty and grimy — by seven o'clock Saturday evening a popular hangout for dorm crawlies, by midnight an incestuous haven for the breeding of every microscopic thing under the sun. Anyone who sits on a bowl, takes a shower or spends periods of time stooped over in a stall is prone to, well . . . something.

5. Last, but not least, silverware. Yes, boys and girls, the word for the day is silverware. Did you happen to notice how the silverware at the D.C.s is all placed in open green containers, for every hand to touch. Let's think about where some of these hands have been . . . on second thought, let's not. Point is, we use these same utensils to eat with. Yes, they go into our mouths. Enough said.

Thus ends the reasons for our failing health. Now for the solutions. Stay tuned...

Diana D'Avanzo is a UMass student

Partisan politics ruin Supreme Court nomination process

It's quite appropriate that while most of the United States Senate quoted from the works of William Shakespeare during the confirmation hearings of Clarence Thomas, in effect it was "Much Ado About Nothing."

How the relevance of a sexual harassment charge from eight or nine years ago could have on whether or not a nominee is qualified to be a Justice on the Supreme Court is beyond me. On second thought, it could be most relevant.

If soon-to-be Associate Justice Thomas was guilty of harassing Professor Anita Hill, it calls into question his character and integrity. It also would be relevant to ask ourselves, "How will this affect sexual harassment cases on the Supreme Court?"

Unfortunate for the Democratic senators in general and those on the Judiciary Committee in particular, the hearings were not a trial, and therefore, no matter how hard they tried, Associate Justice Thomas could not be found guilty of anything.

This leads me to the conclusion that the hearings were basically a waste of time, and only an eleventh hour leak by a Democratic senator or a senate aide prolonged the whole process. Without underemphasizing the importance of the process, the Senate could have spent this week actually legislating (yes, that is another one of their powers) instead of postulating in front of the citizens of the United States.

Michael Morrissey

Don't get me wrong — I have absolutely no animosity toward Prof. Hill. She obviously didn't think as much of the ancient charges as Senator Biden's camp did. Professor Hill has shown herself to be a very successful, believable person. Yet when charges from eight years prior are held as the only thing standing between a candidate and the Supreme Court, I can't help but be critical.

Prof. Hill had absolutely no concrete tangible evidence to prove that such harassment occurred. Thank God that unlike most other countries in the world, people are innocent until proven guilty. If Prof. Hill did not have strong enough conviction to file formal charges against Thomas eight years ago, how on earth could people expect a flimsy accusation to prevent a candidate from serving his country on the Supreme Court?

The problems of nominating candidates for the Supreme Court in recent years has become increasingly absurd. The Democrats have tried, mostly unsuccessfully, to use this formerly routine process to their political advantage.

The attempt to "lynch" Associate Justice Thomas represents too closely the battle over nominating Judge Robert Bork. Back then, they used the fact that Bork was a CONSERVATIVE (yikes!) to turn down his nomination. Now, they dig deeper, only they fail, to turn down Associate Justice Thomas.

Shame, shame on the Senate for trying to prevent a qualified man from accepting his appointment. Shame, shame on the media for playing this story to the hilt. They are just as guilty as the foolish Senators for continuing a dead-end hearing. Was it obvious to everyone else that by Saturday night, they had asked all of the questions a zillion times?

We watched as the senators went around in circles, and the only thing they did was make the vote a little closer.

Until the halls of Congress are turned on its ear, the process will continue to be as foolish as it is now. The Democrats bitch about how President Bush doesn't do anything for the country, but doesn't Congress initiate legislation? Maybe they should concentrate on that.

It is refreshing to know, however, that in the end, 52 senators showed enough sense to do the right thing.

Michael Morrissey is a Collegian columnist

Arts & Living

Samba Space will mix a musical margarita

By NICOLE GONZALEZ
Collegian Staff

Want to get cultured this weekend? Take in the ambience of a live Latin American jazz band, Samba Space, while watching the award-winning native Cuban dancer, Alfredo Castillo. Admission is gratis, courtesy of the Performing Arts Division.

Castillo's choreography and dancing skill has won Primero Nacional in the famed Cuban carnival in Havana — twice. Although he is proficient in most popular and folkloric dances of the Caribbean, his most noted style is rhumba.

"Rhumba is the primary expression of dance in Cuba which crosses into folkloric," said Samba Space conga percussionist, Joe Platz. "It's the most widely practiced (dance form) in Cuba."

Castillo will perform to such Latin classics as "Cachita" and "La Comparsa" as well as "Mambo Diablo."

Unlike its name, the five-piece ensemble, Samba Space does not exclusively play samba.

"We do a variety of music from the Caribbean, Cuba, Brazil . . . some calypsos, mambas, and cha-chas, but in the jazz mode."

Even non-connoisseurs that have never left the States may recognize a few of the numbers by ear.

"We're playing this tune, Samba de Orfu," said Platz. "It's a Brazilian tune. If you heard it, you'd probably recognize it. It's very popular all over the world. It's the theme song of Black Orpheus. Then we have a calypso from Trinidad, La Comparsa from Cuba, stuff from the U.S. and some things from Africa."

Their sound uses traditional Latin and African percussion including congas, bongo, and several different claves and bells. This is combined with the more Western instruments, the piano, saxophone, flute and bass guitar.

"We don't profess to be super-authentic," said Platz. Mostly what we do is Latin jazz standards from the 40s, 50s, 60s, and 80s . . . standards like Sofrito."

An asset to their musical variety is that they have been playing together for about ten years.

"It's not like an intense band where we play all the time," said Platz. "And most of the people in the band are professional musicians."

For a cool blend of danceable Latin jazz, with the addition of a professional native Cuban dancer, breeze on over to Bezanson.

Alberto Castillo and Samba Space will be performing on October 20 in UMass Bezanson Recital Hall. The show will begin at 3 p.m. The event is sponsored in part by the

·CONTINUED ON PAGE 7

SOMETHING IS ALWAYS HAPPENING AT THE HADLEY PUB
EVERY TUESDAY
STARTING AT 7:30 - All You Can Eat Pasta $1.00
8:30 - Karaoke
Weekly Drink Specials Starting 10/21
$3.00 Miller Genuine Draft Pitchers
Live Bands Every Thursday, Friday, and Saturday
Friday Oct. 18 ChessKings
COME WATCH Saturday Oct. 19 Dang Dang Dang
Monday Night Football on the Big Screen
with a Free Pizza Buffet at Halftime
2 Pool Tables
Rt. 9 Hadley next to CAMPUS PIZZA • 586-4444

MINIBUS
TWISTERS
21+ SATURDAY NIGHT October 19

AMHERST CINEMA
Now Playing
PARIS IS BURNING
Showtimes:
Fri. - Sun.
7:30pm & 9pm
Mon-Thurs.
One show at 7:30pm
Adults $4.00
Student w/valid I.D. $3.00

HEY UGLY!
Write HEY UGLY on a piece of paper and get
$2.00 off
any live show this weekend with this ad
The Original NY COMEDY SHOP
Direct from N.Y. City
It's 90 Minutes of Fast-Paced, Side Splitting, Stand-Up Comedy!
YOU WON'T STOP LAUGHING
3 BIG ACTS EACH SHOW
Showtimes: Fri. 9:30 • Sat: 8:30 & 10:30
Holiday Inn, Holyoke
(413) 534-5400

amc THEATRES
$2.50 TWILITE SHOW
NT. PARIS 6 — 584-9153
THE FISHER KING
Fri at 5:00,7:45,10:30
Sat at 1:30,4:30,7:30,10:15
Sun at 12:15,3:00,5:45,8:30
Mon-Thurs at 5:30,8:15
DEAD AGAIN
Fri at 5:45,8:00,10:30
Sat at 1:45,4:45,7:45,10:30
Sun at 12:30,3:15,6:00,8:15
Mon-Thur at 5:45,8:20
PARADISE TOUCHING
Fri at 5:45,8:00,10:15
Sat at 1:45,4:45,7:45,10:15
Sun at 12:30,3:15,6:00,8:15
Mon-Thur at 5:45,8:20
Frankie & Johnny
Fri at 5:30,7:45,10:15
Sat at 1:30,4:30,7:30,10:15
Sun at 12:15,3:00,5:45,8:30
Mon-Thur at 5:30,8:00
HAMPSHIRE 6 — 584-7550
NECESSARY ROUGHNESS
Fri at 5:30,7:50,10:10
Sat at 1:40,4:40,7:30,9:50
Sun at 12:30,2:50,5:30,8:00
Mon-Thur at 5:30,8:00
DECEIVED
Fri at 5:30,7:50,10:10
Sat at 1:40,4:40,7:30,9:50
Sun at 12:30,2:50,5:30,8:00
Mon-Thur at 5:30,8:00
OTHER PEOPLE'S MONEY
Fri at 5:40,8:00,10:20
Sat at 1:30,4:00,6:30,8:40,10:50
Sun at 12:40,3:00,5:40,8:10
Mon-Thur at 5:40,8:10
Special Engagement no passes or coupons
CURLY SUE
Special Sneak Preview
Sat at 7:30 ONLY
Stay over and see Special Sneak Show!
The Super Joe Pesci
Fri at 5:50,8:10,10:30
Sat at 2:00,5:00,7:50,10:10
Sun at 12:50,3:10,5:30,8:20
Mon-Thur at 5:50,8:20
Ernest SCARED STUPID
Fri at 5:30,8:00,10:30
Sat at 2:00,5:00,7:50,10:10
Sun at 12:50,3:10,5:30,8:20
Mon-Thur at 5:30,8:20
RICOCHET
DENZEL WASHINGTON
Fri at 5:40
Sat at 1:50
Sun at 12:40
SHATTERED
Fri at 8:00,10:20
Sat at 4:50,7:40,10:00
Sun at 3:00,5:40,8:10
Mon-Thur at 8:10
Special engagement no passes or coupons

LONDON ROUND TRIP FROM $350
From NEW YORK round trips starting at
LONDON $350
LENINGRAD $610
CARACAS $410
GUTEMALA C. $390
BANGKOK $939
LOS ANGELES-AUCKLAND $699
Taxes & surcharges not included. Fares subject to change.
Council Travel
79 So. Pleasent Street, Amherst, MA 01002
(413)256-1261

South Hadley's TOWER THEATRES
THE VILLAGE COMMONS • SOUTH HADLEY — 536-2663
"Rousing Entertainment. Just A Great Time At The Movies." ARTHUR CARR, TIME MAGAZINE
THE COMMITMENTS
Weekdays @ 3, 7, 9:15 pm • Fri, Sat, Sun @ 2:45, 5, 7:10, 9:25 pm
Ernest SCARED STUPID
Daily @ 3 & 7 pm
ROCKY HORROR
Friday @ Midnight
"SMASHING!" "REMARKABLE" 2330 ANIMATION
Weekdays @ 9 pm • Fri, Sat, Sun @ 5 & 9 pm

With Special Guest
SMASHING PUMPKINS
plus PEARL JAM
SUNDAY NOV 3 - 7:30 PM
SPRINGFIELD CIVIC CENTER
TICKETS ON SALE NOW AT TICKETMASTER, TICKETMASTER CHARGE AND VENUE BOX OFFICE
ALL TICKETS $18.50
TICKETMASTER
G. FOX HOLYOKE, MA & ENFIELD, CT
GRAPE STREET RECORDS - AMHERST
MOVIES & MORE - CHICOPEE PLUS MORE
CALL FOR TIX
(800) 382-8080

THE FAR SIDE
By GARY LARSON

Professor Glickman, the lab practical joker, deftly places a single drop of hydrochloric acid on the back of Professor Bingham's neck.

DOONESBURY
By GARRY TRUDEAU

I'LL GET IT...
I'M NOT HOME
HELLO?
IT'S JUST SOME CREDITOR. I DON'T KNOW WHY WE EVEN HAVE A PHONE. IT'S NEVER GOOD NEWS. I DON'T GET GOOD NEWS!
WHY? BECAUSE I'M NOBODY! WHEN YOU DON'T HAVE A JOB, YOU'RE NOBODY! WHO WANTS TO TALK TO NOBODY? NOBODY, THAT'S WHO!
IT'S THE WHITE HOUSE.
WELL, OKAY. THAT'S MORE LIKE IT.

CALVIN AND HOBBES
By BILL WATTERSON

CAN I RIDE IN THE GROCERY CART?
I THINK YOU'RE A LITTLE BIG FOR THAT NOW
PLEASE!?
ALL RIGHT UP YOU GO
OH BOY!
NOW RUN DOWN THE AISLE AND LET GO!

CAST OF THOUSANDS
By BARRY DEUTSCH

THIS IS IT? THIS IS WHAT THE MEDIA AND ALL YOUR BUDDIES HAVE TOLD YOU LIFE IS ABOUT! THIS IS...
...KINDA TEDIOUS.
BUT WHO CARES? YOU'RE A MAN!

TANGELO PIE
By TIM SNIFFEN

Let's see... I'll have the Lemon Chicken with noodles...
Kau. Swie hope I don't drop it.
What is that? A threat?
Let's just say the heavier and more complex the item, the greater its chance of hitting the floorboards.
-See that woman over in the corner? She ordered Sirloin Tips & Stuffed Crab last Tuesday. After 113 times, she's still waiting.
Ah, look! Sturofoam Alfredo!
There you go.

UNDER 21
By CHRIS SHADOIAN

OKAY... I JUST MET THIS WOMAN NAMED THERESA ZAPP.
FIRST, SHE EMBARRASSED ME IN FRONT OF EVERYBODY, THEN SHE APOLOGIZED...
SHE SAID SHE WOULD MAKE IT UP TO ME, BUT O NO, IT'S NEVER CALLED.
MAN, I'M SO CONFUSED...
UH OH...
I'M NOT CONFUSED. I'M IN LOVE.

Quote of the Day

"Looking outside my window,
all I see is grey.
Watching the clouds roll by everyday."
--Hüsker Dü

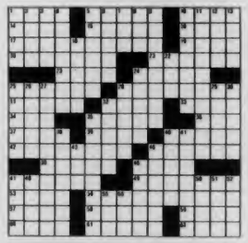
DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
By TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

ACROSS
1 Caps for kilbies
5 Circuits of sporting events
10 Spell out
14 Thessalian peak
15 W Hokkaido city
16 Premed study
17 Has what it takes
19 Guided missile storage spot
20 Toronto's province
21 Button
23 Actor-director Howard et al
24 Felt sun hat
25 Nonbelievers
28 One full of 27 Down
31 Forsyte Saga heroine
32 Fashion magazine
33 Suit to —
34 Shopping bag
35 Used a crowbar
36 "— Gotta Crow"
37 Like a bowstring
39 Part of orange marmalade
40 Rescued
42 Aiming for the moon
44 Spuds
45 John Q. —
46 "True —" Wayne movie
47 Granville of Hollywood
49 Mad scramble
53 Ye — Tea Shoppe
54 Run things
57 Dinkers
58 Long-plumed heron
59 Family group
60 Chimney sweep's quarry
61 Connery and Penn
62 Partner of turn

DOWN
1 Corrida star
2 "It's — to tell..."
3 High-ranking noncom
4 Like a desert
5 Colophonies
6 Bismarck's namesakes
7 Kind of cross
8 Sandy's hello
9 Put up with
10 Winter melon
11 Spunk
12 Story
13 School near Windsor Castle
18 Weighing machine, Scottish style
22 Mixed up era?
24 Like some roots
25 One of Columbus's trio
26 Bailiwicks
27 Have energy and enthusiasm
28 Take a — at 29 Pry
30 Industrial city on the Ave
32 Actress Gray and namesakes
35 Man and monkey
38 Most neat
40 "He — among the trumpers" Job 39:25
41 Enchant
43 Stool pigeon
44 Treatises
46 Like a gardener's thumb?
47 Socks
48 Hodgepodge
50 A Guthrie
51 Certain accts
52 Poetic evenings
55 Ripen
56 Noah's inverted craft

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

B	A	M	A		W	A	R	O	S		F	A	M	E
U	P	O	N		A	V	E	R	T		O	R	E	S
M	E	N	D		A	O	P	O	R		R	A	M	P
P	R	O		W	H	I	P	P	I	N	G	B	O	Y
		P	R	I	E	D		D	E	E
S	M	O	O	T	S		C	R	E	A	T	I	V	E
C	O	L	L	S		P	A	I	N	T		N	O	R
A	N	I		M	E	R	S			S	T	I	R
R	O	Z		A	R	E	S		D	E	L	E	C	E
P	R	E	O	A		E	S		R	O	A	M	E	D
			O	N	T			S	E	P	T	I
J	A	Z	Z	O	F		V	O	T	E		O	I	M
E	F	F		R	I	Y	A	L		M	A	T	A
A	S	S	M			R	N	A	T	E	S	T	E	R
N	E	T	S			O	D	L	E	O		S	E	M	I



Quote of the Day

"And here again it is characteristic of the philosopher to despise the body; his soul runs away from his body and desires to be alone and by herself."

—Socrates

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Stop playing with a loved one's emotions. Honesty is essential. Wipe the slate clean and turn over a new leaf. Set fresh domestic priorities for yourself. Assume the role of peacemaker.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Keep company secrets to yourself. Secure confidential facts and figures in a safe place. Although you are playing for high stakes, you will come through with flying colors.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You are surrounded by very interesting people, each with something special to offer. A special someone will act favorably toward you this weekend. Above all, enjoy yourself.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Forging new alliances is of prime importance in business. Give negative people a wide berth. This afternoon's events have you guessing. Play the waiting game where romance is concerned.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Deal carefully with a ticklish financial issue or controversial project. Keep your promises to yourself and others. A dear one is counting on your loving support and strength.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): It may be necessary to rethink a project. Seek experts' advice to avoid wasting time on fruitless pursuits. Do not rely on past performances. Love is sublime!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You move into a position of power now. Use your authority wisely and be careful about cashing in on your new prestige. Avoid squabbling with adult offspring. Forget past grievances and omissions.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The faster tempo at work could cause tension. Your neighbors and siblings will become friendlier. Someone may try to involve you in their plans. This weekend will be an exciting one for you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A real estate sale may be delayed or canceled. Regroup. Know you own mind at work. Do not hide your light under the proverbial bushel. Communicate your ideas to those in authority.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Protect your health by learning more about preventive medicine. The financial picture shows steady improvement. Build savings. Hug the sidelines at work today instead of taking chances.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Push your career interests for all they are worth. Interviews and conferences enjoy highly favorable influences. It may be time to hire a new assistant. Build fresh social and financial bridges.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You are able to laugh at things that used to distress you. Comparison shop when buying new items for your wardrobe. A good evening to stay home and entertain close friends and family.

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Kim the Frisino
Copy Editor.....Jason the George
PhotoTechnician.....Matt the Kahn
Production Supervisor.....Seth the Kaye
Production.....Oliver the Raskin, Jason the Torla

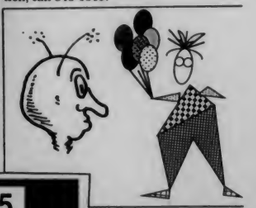
Looking For Entertainment?
Come on down to Northampton Bowl to chill and bowl with students from the Five College area
: No experience necessary!
: Shoe Rentals are Free!
: Bowl two or three games for 99 cents a game!
: Beat Mike and
Fridays 3:30 - 5:30 : Call Michael Alcock at 549-5088
Leave a message! Ride Info, Details, Curiosity, or whatever. Contact me.

Photo by Lynn Lovell
Samba Space

Samba

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 5

Massachusetts Arts Lottery as administered by the Amherst Arts Lottery Council in cooperation with the Performing Arts Division. Admission is free; donations to the Performing Arts Division Scholarship Fund are greatly appreciated. For more information, call 545-0519.



Some of the biggest, some of the best presents come in the smallest boxes!
silver scale designs

STOP SMOKING
WITHOUT GAINING WEIGHT
$30 $25
FOR UMASS STUDENTS ONLY
WITH THE HELP OF A POWERFUL HYPNOTHERAPIST FROM T.I.W.
100% GUARANTEED If you do not quit within a week, we will give you two additional sessions absolutely free to help you quit.
SATURDAY, OCT. 19, REGISTRATION 2:30, SESSION 3-4:30, THE INN (FORMALLY HILTON) JCT. 5 & 91, NORTHAMPTON
T.I.W The Mind Power Station of Northampton • 586-7372 (24 hrs)
CUT AND SAVE THIS AD

KATINA'S
NOW -- EVERY WEDNESDAY
ROOT • ROCK • REGGAE
LIVE ONE LOVE BAND
Red Stripe Beer & Island Cass Frozen Tropical Drinks! HARM ISLAND FUN! 18+
OCT 17 SELECTROCUTION The Area's THURSDAY HOT SPOT!! High Tech Flirtation 18+
OCT 18 PINK FLOYD SUPER SHOW Come early - It's Awesome! THE MACHINE
OCT 19 SELECTROCUTION MEET PEOPLE WHO LIKE TO HAVE FUN! 18+
OCT 20 WHITE TRASH + THE LOST All Ages
FRI., 10/25 Alternative Entertainment presents BRITESIDE, MONA LISA, INSIDE CHARLOTTE, & MORIAN
SUN. 10/27 HALLOWEEN THRASH BASH!
FRI. 11/1 JOHN YALBY
ADVANCE TIX: Katina's, Plasterpus, Screwbornes & Music Outlet
ROUTE 9, HADLEY • 586-4463

HELP YOURSELF BY HELPING OTHERS
Earn good part-time or full-time income at home representing The Micro Diet program. Call or write Amherst Chiropractic, Independent Micro Diet Advisor, 1-800-659-8135.

DOMINO'S PIZZA
U-MASS 256-8911
Mt. Holyoke 535-1111
We Accept Competetors Coupons
30c PIZZA ORDER ANY TWO TOPPING LARGE PIZZA GET MEDIUM 1 TOPPING PIZZA FOR 30c
1.99 PIZZA BUY ANY LARGE PIZZA GET 2ND ONE FOR $1 99
BUY ANY LARGE PIZZA for the price of a small Pizza

Rent One of Ours • Cars • Trucks • Cargo Vans
Rent by Day, Week or Month
Special Weekly and Weekend Rates
North Amherst Motors Auto & Truck Rental
78 Old Sunderland Rd. North Amherst, MA
549-RENT (549-7368)
Major Credit Cards Accepted
On Bus Route

Classifieds

COME TO THE COLLEGIAN OFFICE 113 CAMPUS CENTER • THURSDAY 8:30-3:30 FRIDAY 8:30-2:30 • DEADLINE IS TWO DAYS PRIOR TO PUBLICATION • 20¢ WORD/DAY FOR STUDENTS • CASH IN ADVANCE

ACTIVITIES

AN EVENING WITH InterVarsity Christian Fellowship, 7:30pm, CC903. Come and be in His presence. Now you're playing with Power!

SLANT SIX AND THE JUMP STARTS at The Hatch
Friday 18th 9:00
featuring The song
"Mrs. Fletcher (Help I've Fallen)"

ANNOUNCEMENTS

MONEY is available for every student for more info mail to Scholarship Finders 35 Church St. Ware MA 01082

POWER MEETING ON Sunday Oct 20th at 7:30pm in 306 Student Union (The Power Office)

PUMPKIN-O-GRAMS!!!
Send a pumpkin to a friend. We will deliver on & off-campus. Stop by our table on the concourse Oct 18, 21, & 22. Sponsored by Communication Disorders Club.

UNION VIDEO CENTER
Your very own R.S.O.
Conveniently located right near the Hatch.
We're lonely, so come visit!

ENTERTAINMENT

RACK-A-DISC! $175.00 DJs, VJs, Karaoke for house/ Formal parties, Call 586-9900

FOR RENT

2 rooms in house, January 1, 253-0743
One single, one double

FRIDGE RENTALS 253-9742 Free Delivery

LARGE BEDROOM IN 3BDRM Puffton apt with own bathroom available Nov 1 Call 549-0748

TOWNHOUSE 2 BEDROOM 1 1/2 bath Bus route N Amherst 1-567-1352

FOR SALE

COMPUTER FOR SALE
$600 Call Cliff
549-1762

HONDA CB360 MOTORCYCLE 4700m green windshield and extras $400 253-0951

NEC LAPTOP COMPUTER. 640K Two 720K drives. Pop-up programs. New programs: Quattro pro, Reflex 2.0, Keymaker, Gofer 2.0. Mono Color monitor. Work center. 773-8997

NEW & USED COMPUTERS
Call Damin 6-2270

HELP WANTED

"CAMPUS REPRESENTATIVES NEEDED" Earn free trip and big commissions by selling Cancun, Mexico. For more information call toll free at 800-755-7996 or in Connecticut at 203-975-8833

Earn $2500 & Free trips selling spring break packages to Bahamas, Mexico, Jamaica, Florida! Best trips & prices!

EXTERIOR PAINTERS
Experienced student painters needed to paint Amherst area homes. Full or part time. America's College Painters (800) 626-6267 "Painting America's homes coast to coast"

FREE TRAVEL, CASH, and excellent business experience!! Openings available for individuals or student organizations to promote the country's most successful spring break tours. Call INTER-CAMPUS PROGRAMS 1-800-327-6013

"Know before you go," Where to work, live and ski free in Colorado's resorts. 'Current guide to Aspen, Vail, Brecken-ridge and more! $16.95. Call 1-800-788-6174.

OVERSEAS JOBS. $900-2000 mo. summer, yr. round, all countries, all fields. Free info. Write IJC, PO Bx52-MAOI Corona Del Mar CA 92625

INSTRUCTION

GUITAR LESSONS Learn what you want Jon Garner 665-7756

 INTERNSHIPS *****

SPRING 1992 INTERNSHIPS with the Legal Services Center; get hands-on experience in the legal field--work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary--training provided. Contact Legal Services today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

LOST

CONTEMPORARY LINGUISTICS TEXT by OGrady, Pobrovoisky, Aronoff and a blue vinyl 3 ring notebook with linguistics 201 notes. If found please call Julie at 546-4110

LOST
Small box necklace w/ 4 charms Sentimental value If found please call Dawn @ 546-3042

LOST KEYS
at Newmen Center on 10/15
Please return or contact Newman Center

Reward- Lost Tissot watch with brown band, sentimental value. If found call 546-4403

PERSONALS

JAY,
Oh by the way
You're ugly.

JEN FROM BAKER
Who's your cute friend from Van Meter?
The Field Guy

ZIPPY TURNS 21
on Sat
He Ha
Feel the Pain

JULIE
Happy 1 month together.
Things are going great
so keep up with those stairs ok!
Love
Enc

ZIPPY- I hope your 21st is everything you want it to be Happy Birthday Love Me

HEY DUCHESS MEAT PIE
with lotsa ketchup!
I love being with you
Pipes

Lefty and Daisy
I love you
I always have
That really is the truth
Love, Ace

The Big Sweed
Happy Birthday Cos
21 Wow! Are you really that BIG? How's your head?
Your secrets admirer

Kathleen
Be patient ! 1 /2 isn't too long, especially for what you're waiting for. Just keep that song going. Rick

TRACY
Roommates that shower together stay together. Ha!Ha!
I miss you! MAO

NICKI-
Happy Anniversary
It's been a great six months.
Here's to the next six, and beyond
love always,
Seth

Cindy McCombs
finally caught up to the rest of us.
She's 21 today.

TOM BOZZA
Happy 21st Honey
Love Tammy

HEY KRIS EARLE
This is to wish you a truly non-bogus birthday my friend.
And remember what Mrs. Butterworth said. Sehr Gut.
Alex

HEY -J-
Yeah, I found it. If you want it, come get it!
Amy

Jodi M.-
Get psyched for tonight! You know who your date is, but who am I?!
Love, Your Lyre Buddy

WANDAKOALA!
Happy 18 months! Tonight I will corrupt you! U R my sunshine, I Luv Ewe-SR

JEFF THE SLEEP MONSTER
Six months ago you and Bandit walked into my life and changed everything
I Love You Both!
Happy Anniversary!
-Your Snowball, Lisa

ZETA PSI,
Here's to the BOYZ IN BLACK
Trojan League Intramural Football Champions
Nasty D!
Peace
PHI Q

DANA
Happy 19th
I Love You

SUSIE DERKINS
Throw away that fake ID, at mo#ita tomorrow you won't be needing it anymore.
Happy 21st Birthday
Love Calvin

Paul,
Thanks for always making me smile. The past year was great. Remember, the fun has just begun!
I Love You,
Paula

SERVICES

BICYCLE BROKEN?
Call Pat
546-0119

ORDER AVON!
546-1999
Call for brochure

PREGNANT?
Need a pregnancy test, information or support? Call for free and confidential services. ALTERNATIVES 245 Main Street, Northampton 586-3000 or Greenfield 774-6019

FREE pregnancy testing; confidential and caring support. BIRTHRIGHT 233 No. Pleasant Street Amherst 549-1906

TRAVEL

SOME RELIABLE TOURS aren't so reliable. Thats why Mardi Gras Travel has the #1 for for fun price guarantee to Montreal! SEX LIES IN THE MONTREAL BAR CRAWL! Party weekends include 2 nights & transp. Group leaders travel FREE! (LAGNAF)-Call today 617-444-1111 We're #1 for fun!

TYPING

PAPERS TYPED: $1.50/typed page Quick, Accurate Service. Call Brian 546-3563

WORD PROCESSING, laser printing, papers, resumes, theses. Rosemary 259-1786

VAN HALEN TICKETS

Van Halen tickets for sale for Hartford 10/29. First level seats, only four tickets available, act now. Call Bruce at 253-0531

WANTED

7 year old male cat needs home 253-0743 Spayed and trained

To recycle: Prescription medication bottles/containers (Nonrenewable RX only) Please call 585-8709

Sports

Minutemen hope to rebound at Connecticut

By BRETT MORRIS
Collegian Staff

After last Saturday's disheartening loss to the University of Rhode Island, one would expect to go into the area around the football team's locker room after the game and see broken helmet pieces, hear coaches screaming at players and locker doors slamming.

However, that was not the case.

Instead, the scene was the complete opposite. Players were high-fiving one another while coaches gave them the traditional pat on the rear. Head coach Jim Reid even went over to the opposing coach, Bob Griffin, and asked him to his house for dinner.

Every player walked out of the locker room to face the media with their head held high.

"You just can't keep your head down," cornerback Don Caparotti said. "You lose, you lose. I'm going to go out just like every one else on the team and play hard every single game. That's just the type of players we have here."

Starting quarterback Tony Williams had his sights already set for the next contest, tomorrow's matchup with the University of Connecticut.

"We just have to go to work again on Monday," he said after Saturday's loss. "We'll come out and play hard again next week. We're going to watch the film and clean up our mistakes."

Head coach Jim Reid described the loss as "disappointing," but immediately followed by saying, "all it means is that the guys will have to work a little harder next week."

Last week's "next week" is tomorrow and the Minutemen (2-4) will travel to Storrs, Connecticut to face the 1-4 Huskies.

Cleaning up their mistakes will be a key to the game as the Minutemen turned the ball over five times last week (four fumbles, one interception) and 18 this season.

"Before we can win anything we have to eliminate our mistakes," Reid said. "We keep shooting ourselves in the foot."

Giving the ball away to UConn could be painful for the Minutemen as the Huskies know what to do with it, averaging 21.2 points and over 439 yards of total offense per game, third in the Yankee Conference.

UConn's quarterback Cornelius Benton is averaging almost 300 passing yards per game, tops in the YanCon and is currently fourth in the country in total offense at 311 yards per game.

Benton's main targets are split end Mark Didio and flanker Alex Davis. Didio is ranked No. 5 nationally in Division I-AA and first in the YanCon in receptions per game with 6.6 per contest. The senior is No. 9 in the nation with 97.8 yards per game. Davis is No. 10 nationally in average receptions per game at 6 and No. 13 in receiving yardage, 89 per game.

The Husky defense has been struggling, ranked eighth in the YanCon in rushing, passing and total defense, as they have allowed the opposition more than 450 yards per game.

As for the UMass offense, "We want [running back] Jerome [Bledsoe] to control the game, he's hungry," Reid said.

Game notes: UMass' All-Yankee Conference offensive tackle Rich Cavanaugh is "walking gingerly" after injuring his ankle in practice late this week. The X-rays were negative, but the senior will not play Saturday. WMUA 91.1 FM and the UMass Network, WTTT 1430 AM will broadcast the game.

Women's soccer hosts unbeaten Notre Dame

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

The Fightin' Irish are coming to Amherst.

No, John McLeod will not be pacing the sidelines at the Cage and Lou Holtz has probably never heard of the Pioneer Valley, but at 1 p.m. on Saturday at Lower Boyden field, the Notre Dame women's soccer team (10-0-2) will face the University of Massachusetts (8-3).

Although Notre Dame isn't known for its women's soccer teams, that could change in the near future. Notre Dame is ranked No. 16 nationally, the first time they have cracked the Top 20.

"I don't think we are too far away from being a good team," Notre Dame coach Chris Petrocelli said. "Right now we have better players than ever before and when you have a better talent level you win more games. We'll know how good we are by season's end."

Leading scorer for the Irish is Stephanie Porter, who has scored 12 goals. Alison Lester has 7 tallies on the year.

"We have some talent, but Massachusetts has more," Petrocelli said. "They have a soccer tradition there that we can't compete with. We are excited to play a program like theirs."

UMass having a better tradition than Notre Dame? A school with Knute Rockne, the golden dome and Touchdown Jesus? The only way to wake up the echoes in Amherst is when a strong wind blows by the Tower Library.

"The athletic tradition of Notre Dame both helps and hinders us," Petrocelli said. "There is no doubt it helps with recruiting. Last year Lou Holtz came and spoke with our players and when recruits are on campus for a football game they usually don't want to leave.

"However, a lot of teams make us the biggest game on their schedule, so they shoot for us because we are Notre Dame. They think we've got the Four Horsemen on our team.

"Overall, being Notre Dame is a huge benefit. The kids feel the pride of being here, when they put that jersey on, with the Notre Dame across the front they get a special feeling. Everyone on this campus has that pride, whether they are athletes or not."

As for the game, Massachusetts, ranked No. 11, will have to regain their early season form to win. The Minutewomen have lost two in a row, including a 1-0 shutout to unranked Harvard.

"We're going to have to make some changes, but I am not sure what," UMass coach Jim Rudy said. "I don't have a real deep well to go to.

"This is a big opportunity for my team to show who they are. Last year we got stuck in a losing streak and it cost us a tournament bid, this year the team has a golden opportunity to prove they are a different group, tougher than last year, by beating a ranked team on Saturday.

"Playing a team like UMass is a measuring stick for us to see how good we are," Petrocelli said. "UMass has a winning tradition that is tough to stop."

Men's cross country to compete at Easterns

By KEITH BENNETT
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts men's cross country team will compete in the Eastern Conference Championships in Orono, Maine this weekend. The meet starts at 11 p.m. Saturday.

The Minutemen finished fourth last year, behind Vermont, Southern Connecticut and Lowell and one point ahead of Maine. Coach Ken O'Brien expects similar results at this year's meet.

"I expect we'll finish somewhere between third and sixth this year, with the same teams battling for those spots as last year," O'Brien said.

O'Brien said that he will sit out his top five runners Saturday, in order to rest them for the upcoming Atlantic 10 and New England Championships.

"It's a very tough grind running against a number of tough schools during the dual-meet season and then competing in the Easterns, the A-10s and New Englands," he said. "At this time in the year, I try to juggle individuals or groups of kids to give people some rest."

The team going to Orono will include Tim Caglarcon, Rick Copley, Kevin Greenhalgh, John Raach, Pat Ryan, Scott Sykes and Tom Walsh.

O'Brien expects this group to be very competitive in the race. "I think most of the kids I'm bringing have the potential to finish among the top 20 in the meet," he said. "The kids we're bringing are all kids who have scored in the top five on our team, or have the potential to score in the top five."

Greenhalgh and Walsh were the fourth and fifth finishers, respectively, for UMass in the team's last meet. O'Brien said that both runners are just beginning to run as well as they are capable.

Ryan, a senior and the captain of this year's squad, missed the first four meets of the season with a knee injury and ran in his first meet last weekend. O'Brien described Ryan as "hungry."

Raach was a top five finisher for UMass as a freshman last fall and seems to be regaining his form of last year.

"What I would really like to see is these kids get excited about this opportunity," O'Brien said. "It's just like giving some kids some more playing time and hoping they'll step up their level of play accordingly.

"I've seen a lot of guys who have had great careers at UMass who took their first step at this meet. We gave them more playing time and they took advantage of it."

Field hockey seeks perfect A-10 record

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

When the University of Massachusetts field hockey team hosts Rhode Island at 1 p.m. this Sunday at Totman Field, it won't be another meaningless, season-ending tune-up.

There are two big reasons why the Minutewomen (10-3) will be playing to win Sunday: a win against a New England team will only help their ranking in the Northeast, which was number one as of last week.

The second big reason that UMass will look for a strong victory is that Rhode Island is an Atlantic-10 division foe, and a win would complete the undefeated record the Minutewomen have in the A-10. They are 3-0, and a perfect record would be nice before the postseason A-10 Championship at Temple in November 8-10.

The Minutewomen have been very successful in their other A-10 games. The team is first in goals, shots and penalty corners. In A-10 games, Jenn Salisbury is tied for the league lead with four points. In overall games, she has amassed 16 points, good for second place.

Kathy Phelan has shown an ability to rise to the occasion in A-10 games, notching three points, which is good enough for third in the league. Both Holly Hockenbrock and Tara Jelley are tied for fourth place in the league, as they have two points each.

UMass goalie Philippa Scott has the best goals against average in A-10 competition, at 0.36. She gave up her only A-10 goal to Temple.

Although Rhode Island (5-7) is having a subpar season, they have a few players of note. Forward Andrea Gomez has 14 points on 12 goals and two assists this year. Gomez has notched all five game winning goals for the Wrams. In A-10 play, Gomez has two goals which ties her for fourth place.

Tressa Fiore will be the goaltender for Rhode Island Sunday. Fiore has a somewhat high goals against average at 1.90, but has made 135 saves in 12 games this year.

The Minutewomen will be returning to action for the first time in a week. Their game scheduled Wednesday against Dartmouth was canceled because Totman Field was saturated with water. The game may not be made up.

15th ranked water polo at New England tourney

By KEVIN HERLIHY
Collegian Staff

It is a dangerous weekend for the 15th-ranked University of Massachusetts water polo team as they travel to Harvard University for the New England League Tournament. Teams competing with UMass, seeded first in the tournament, will be MIT, Boston College, Brown, Harvard and Yale.

The Minutemen face MIT at 8:30 tonight. Saturday, they play Harvard at 11:30 a.m. and Brown, 3:30 p.m. Sunday, UMass will splash around with BC at 9 a.m., followed by Yale.

While there is really no ground to gain, a loss to a lower ranked team could be damaging. At the end of the season eight Eastern teams will recieve at-large bids for the NCAA tournament.

UMass is currently ranked third in the East, behind Navy and Slippery Rock.

At the Army Invitational earlier this season, the Minutemen lost to Harvard 10-8, and slipped past BC, 11-8. UMass is coming off last weekend's tournament at Brown that saw the team finish third behind Navy and Slippery Rock.

Head coach Russ Yarworth said, "I think we are playing better every game. We still have trouble playing at an intense level the whole game. We still haven't played how we're capable of playing."

Yarworth said he isn't concerned about playing teams as talented as Brown and Harvard.

"I'm worried about the other teams," he said. "We have to improve our ability to play team defense, switching from pressure to man-to-man defense."

WATER POLO SHOTS— Scott Reed is leading the team in goals, with 23, total points, 29 and steals, 21. Freshman Adolfo Oliete, from Madrid, Spain, is tops with 13 assists. Goalie Todd Larson has a .91 save percentage.

SPORTS NOTICE

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL TRYOUTS: The University of Massachusetts women's basketball team will be holding tryouts this week. Those interested in playing for the team should report to the Curry Hicks Cage at 6 p.m. this Thursday and at 7:30 p.m. on Friday or call Jill Rooney at 545-1254.

INTRAMURALS: Entries due October 21 for foul shooting and three-point shooting contests. Stop by Boyden Gym room 215 or call 545-0022 for details.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THE LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND

VOLUME CI ISSUE 34 MONDAY, OCTOBER 21, 1991

Collegian photo by Jeff Egan

COME ON BABY LIGHT MY FIRE — Joe Saba, class of 1994 finance major pours on the lighter fluid as Ben Treacy, an economic major and class of 1994 is ready to help at the Octoberfest in Orchard Hill last Saturday.

GEO votes to authorize strike to get demands

By DAVID MASSEY
Collegian Staff

The Graduate Employee Organization has voted to authorize a strike vote against the University of Massachusetts because of an apparent lack of progress in contract negotiations, according to published reports late last week.

Members of GEO have been voting on the secret ballot initiative since October 2.

Co-speaker of the GEO Emily Isaacs would not confirm the report in Friday's Springfield Union-News but said the results which were tabulated last Wednesday do not indicate that a strike is imminent.

Isaacs said negotiating teams from the administration and GEO will meet today to try to compromise.

"We are not at a point where it's hopeless," she said. "It's still conceivable that we could wrap up this contract this week. It's possible."

The GEO, which has 2,100 dues-paying members and represents all 6,000 University teaching assistants, research assistants, fellows and interns, has been trying to finalize their first union contract for 10 months.

Seymour Berger, a member of the administration negotiating team, said, "I would hope that we'll still negotiate in good faith. Hopefully, we'll listen to each other." Berger said he hopes there will not be a strike.

The other co-speaker of GEO, Peter Underdown, declined comment on specifics of the vote but said graduate employee representatives from various academic departments, known as stewards, will meet with the GEO coordinating committee on Thursday.

Isaacs said the GEO representatives, "will be talking about implementing the plan put forth by the ballot question" at Thursday's meeting.

Chancellor Richard O'Brien said the administration currently has no plan to deal with a possible GEO strike.

"My hope is there won't be one," O'Brien said.

Isaacs said participating members in a strike would receive $100 a week in benefits from the United Auto Workers Union, the parent union of GEO/District 65, if they stopped receiving paychecks from the University.

She said the pay scale of graduate employees ranges from $75 to $280 a week.

David Lenson, president of the Massachusetts Society of Professors, said this could, "sustain a strike for weeks" since the UAW benefits are close to many graduate employees weekly salary.

Patricia Greenfield, director of the Labor Relations and Research Center, called O'Brien's comment concerning not possessing a plan to deal with a strike "a reasonable stance" since setting up a contingency plan to cope with a strike could, in fact, push the organization to strike.

Greenfield also said since GEO is not officially recognized by the Massachusetts Labor Relations Board as public employees, state law does not prohibit GEO from striking.

Greenfield also said the passage of the vote "does not necessarily mean that there will be a strike. It basically means that the leadership is authorized by the membership to call a strike if necessary." She said in order to call a strike, another vote will be necessary.

"The clear message is the membership stands strongly behind the [GEO] bargaining team," Greenfield said.

"You've got very intelligent, creative people at the bargaining table. If both sides work at it, you can reach a good, strong, fair agreement," she said.

Lenson said it is in everyone's best interest to settle this long-running contract dispute. "Basically, it would shut this University down," Lenson said.

Israel votes to attend Mid East conference

By GWEN ACKERMAN
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Most members of Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's Cabinet set aside misgivings yesterday and voted for Israel to attend next week's Middle East peace conference.

One of Shamir's allies in the government, the ultra-right Tehiyah party, balked and said it would leave the coalition when the peace talks begin on Oct. 30 in Madrid, Spain. Shamir's Ludik party was not in danger of losing power, however.

An Arab group that opposes bombed an Israeli convoy in southern Lebanon, killing three soldiers and wounding two, and raising fears of terrorism by extremists opposing Arab negotiation with Israel.

The pro-Iranian Hezbollah, or Party of God, Claimed responsiblity and reportedly linked it to the conference.

The Cabinet vote was the last step needed for Israel to send representatives to the U.S.-Soviet-sponsored talks. However, the Cabinet set a condition: that Israel's positions regarding the Palestinian negotiators be met.

Israel has said it will not negotiate with representatives of the Palestine Liberation Organization, known PLO members, Palestinian exiles, or residents of Arab east Jerusalem.

It says it will leave the peace conference if the Palestinian negotiators profess ties to the PLO, which Israel calls a terror organization.

The Palestinians will attend as members of a joint delegation with Jordan.

PLO chairman Yassar Arafat arrived in Amman, Jordan, yesterday to meet with King Hussein.

PLO officials said Arafat, who is widely considered to be voice, would discuss with Hussein the makeup and workings of the joint delegation, and to push for a meeting of the PLO and "front-line" Arab states to discuss the conference.

"The PLO is trying to secure an Arab commitment that no Arab state will normalize relations with Israel before the Palestinian problem is properly addressed and resolved," said Abdurahim Mallouh, a member of the PLO's executive committee.

Although Israel has not been shown a list of Palestinian delegates, both Shamir and Foreign Minister David Levy said Friday they believed assurances by U.S. Secretary of State James A. Baker III that the list would meet Israel's demands.

Committee endorses room fee

Area gov't presidents okay $200 dorm payment

By JASON GEORGE
Collegian Staff

The presidents of the five residential area governments voted Friday to endorse a University of Massachusetts Housing Services proposal for a $200 room assignment fee to be paid by students when they apply for housing.

According to the Housing Services proposal, students would pay the $200 assignment fee when they applied for housing. Freshmen would pay during their summer orientation and upperclassmen would pay during the spring room choosing in April, with the fee being applied to second-semester rents.

In the meeting of Residential Committee, an advisory group consisting of the five area government presidents, the committee voted to "endorse the Housing Services fee proposal with the stipulation that a subcommittee of the Residential Students Association to discuss details [of the proposal]."

Committee chairperson Jeffrey Markuns said passing the proposal could lessen the chances that Housing Services will raise housing fees for the 1993 academic year.

"If this passes, [Executive Director of Housing] Joseph Zannini won't throw more of an increase on the back of students," he said. "We're torn. This can make things difficult planning-wise for students on the [financial] brink, but by voting against it, we're setting up for a greater fee increase next year."

Markuns was referring to a memorandum he received from Zannini last Thursday "to confirm my intentions not to raise room rates for FY '93."

The memo stated the "commitment" not to raise room rates was contingent upon Housing Services personnel costs not increasing by more than 4 percent, utility increases not exceeding $250,000 and "that we are able to develop a new year-long contract which will yield approximately $81,000."

Zannini said the large number of students not returning to campus has necessitated the assignment fee.

"What was occurring was that a lot of returning students weren't coming back to the University or were moving off-campus," Zannini said. "As a consequence, we couldn't assign to students what their rooms were."

CONTINUED ON PAGE 2

Inside:

Page 3
Student's are actually paying their bills to creditors on time, which is more than they can say for their parents.
Page 5
Darienne Hosely reminds us all to take in a little fresh air and take a break from monotonous studying.
Page 8
Those daggone Minutemen couldn't pull out a win over the men from UConn.

WEATHER

Increasing clouds today; highs 50 to 55. But lo and behold, tomorrow will be sunny and warmer. Highs 60 to 65.

Select Board to tap into town keg law

An anti-keg law rally to be held tonight at 8:15 p.m. in protest of a new Amherst law restricting keg use has been organized by Student Government Association leaders, who say the law presented is discriminatory against studetns.

The law, to be decided tonight by the Amherst Select Board, would require a license to be purchased before a person in Amherst could have a keg at their home.

SGA leaders cite this and other recent laws as discriminatory against students.

"The kegs aren't the only issue," said Commuter Area President Jennifer Wood.

She spoke of the recent keg tag bylaw, the bylaw prohibiting more than four unrelated people from living together and recent changes in the noise laws as contributing to the necessity of this rally.

"What the town of Amherst fails to recognize is that students are a part of their constituency also," said Student Trustee Kevin Newnan.

Newnan quoted figures provided by the Office of Insititutional Research and Planning that say nearly $110 million is spent each year in the Amherst area by students.

Newnan said the increase in alcohol restrictions on campus over the last eight years has caused this problem rather than students themselves.

"The administration is forcing students to move off-campus," he said.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 5

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THE LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is a Registered Student Organization of the University of Massachusetts published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000

113 CAMPUS CENTER AMHERST, MA 01003
Phone (413) 545-3500 FAX (413) 545-1592

STAFF

Editor in Chief ..... Gayle Long
Managing Editor ..... Marc Elliott
Editorial Editor ..... Greg Sukiennik
News Editor ..... Preston P. Forman
Sports Editor ..... Tamir Lipton
Arts Editor ..... Paul DeGeorges
Photography Editor (intrim) ..... Josh Reynolds
Black Affairs Editor ..... Sondra Sutton
Women's Issues Editor ..... Jessame Hannus
Jewish Affairs Editor ..... Felice Cohen, Debra Kriegsman
Multicultural Affairs Editor ..... [illegible]
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Madanmohan Rao
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Trystan Skeigh
Business Manager ..... Randee Pastel
Advertising Manager ..... Dena Haselkorn
Finance Manager ..... Jeff Weiner
Circulation Manager ..... Jim Winterbottom
Subscriptions Manager ..... Stacy Rogers
Promotions Manager ..... Scott Macey
Production Manager ..... Terry Starmer
Day Graphics Manager ..... Jenny Burns

PROFESSIONAL STAFF

Business ..... Brian Harrington, Lori Black, Maureen Majerowski
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements that run on a space-available basis on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday for campus and local non-profit organizations. Because of space constraints, the Collegian cannot print all FYIs submitted and no announcements can be repeated.

To submit an FYI, please send a TYPED press release with all pertinent information to the Collegian office in 113 Campus Center c/o News Editor. FYIs cannot be taken over the phone.

Monday, October 21

Rally — There will be a rally against the new Amherst keg law at 7:00 p.m. at the Southwest pyramids.

Peer Group — There will be a peer support group for eating disorders from 4:30-6:00 p.m. in Campus Center room 803.

Tuesday, October 22

Study Break — Hillel is sponsoring a study break from 7:00 p.m.-11:00 p.m. in the Dukes Room.

Workshop — The Union Video Center is sponsoring a workshop on Cable Casting/Pre-Production at the Union Video Center. For more information contact 5-1336. Admission is free.

Blood Drive — There will be a public blood drive from 11:00-4:00 p.m. at the Campus Center.

Peer Group — There will be a peer support group for eating disorders from 7-8:30 p.m. in the Baker Hall Basement room B-5.

Wednesday, October 23

Peer Group — There will be a peer support group for eating disorders from 7-8:30 p.m. in John Quincy Adams dorm room 502.

Meeting — There will be a senate meeting from 7:00 p.m.-1:00 a.m. in Campus Center room 163C.

■ fees

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

Zannini said, "asking students to make a real commitment" of $200 would allow Housing Services to give freshmen earlier confirmation of room assignments and allow the University to give out more singles to upperclassmen.

According to the proposal, students on financial aid would be given an assignment fee waiver until they could receive money from the Financial Aid office. Zannini said the year-long contract was being used as a "penalty" against students who decided to move off campus in the middle of the year, but Housing would accommodate students who decided to go abroad or had other legitimate commitments.

Zannini said now that he has the endorsement of the Residential Committee, he will consult with members of the financial aid staff and Bursar's office and with SGA leaders before bringing the proposal to Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Jo-Anne T. Vanin.

Student Trustee Kevin Newnan called the proposal "discriminatory," saying he thought it was unfair for the University to ask students to come up with $200 during the spring.

"People who are already strapped are being asked to put up $200 — only the wealthiest students are going to have room assignments," Newnan said. "This needs to be investigated a lot more. . . it would be a big mistake to implement it."

Newnan declined comment when asked whether he thought Housing was trying to force the proposal to pass by committing not to raise room rents for next year if the proposal was implemented.

HELP CLEAN THE CAMPUS POND!!
VOLUNTEERS NEEDED!!
Hi! I am working with Physical Plant to help clean our Campus Pond. They will supply the materials and I will supply the students, so I need your help!!
Volunteer your afternoons on: OCT. 24, 25, 26
I need to know how many people are interested:
Please contact David at 6-6960.
ALSO CONTACT: Danielle • 256-8816 Heatner • 549-8015
Heidi • 256-1361 Joe • 546-7280

get Ready for MAY now!

ATTENTION ALL BANDS!!!!
ROCK SOUTHWEST
at the
ANNUAL SOUTHWEST
12TH ANNUAL
BATTLE OF THE BANDS
Yo!
Saturday November 2, 1991 • Southwest Horseshoe
APPLICATIONS NOW AVAILABLE
(and due 10/23 5:00pm)
At the SWAG Office
Southside Room Hampden Student Center
Or Call the SWAG Office • 545-0960 for More Information
Another Southwest Area Government Production

THE MOST IMPORTANT CAREER STEP YOU EVER TAKE MAY START IN SENEGAL

Or in any of over 70 developing countries in Asia, Africa, Latin America, or Central Europe. Your first job after graduation should offer more than just a paycheck. In the Peace Corps, you'll broaden your world view and your horizons for the future. You'll learn a new language... live in a different culture... develop professional skills...and meet challenges far greater than those you might be offered in a starting position in the U.S.

Peace Corps is looking for people from many disciplines— education, health, the environment, agriculture, community development, engineering, the sciences, and more. With a degree or experience in these fields, you may find that Peace Corps will be able to use your skills like no other employer you're considering. And equip you with the type of experience valued by international firms, government agencies, and private industry and graduate school programs.

PEACE CORPS

UMASS Peace Corps recruiters Tom Akin and Celeste Landon will soon be hosting several activities. Majors in science, math, civil engineering, health, elementary or special education, English, forestry, agriculture, and business are encouraged to attend. Find out how you can qualify.

INFO SEMINARS
Thursday, Oct. 24, 7:30 pm. 203 Holdsworth Hall
Or call the UMASS Peace Corps Office: 545-2105, or stop by 12 Draper Hall

Local

Students paying their bills on time

By MICHAEL LEVY
Collegian Staff

Students' careful use of credit cards has resulted in clean records for users and confidence from credit companies.

Citibank spokesperson William Ahearn said students actually have better records than the public at large.

Two of every 100 credit card users default on their bills, he said. Only 1 1/2 to 1 3/4 of every 100 students fails to pay the balance of their account, he said.

Ahearn said the students' intentions in applying for a card prevents problems.

For many, "the reason for getting a card is to build a good credit record," he said.

Citibank is also careful accepting student applicants, with a 50 percent rejection rate, and usually start them with a $500 maximum credit line.

Students at the university generally agree, many saying they are careful with their credit cards.

Nathan Ritter, a senior math major, said he has not used his card much since he stopped working.

"I'm pretty frugal about it," said sophomore Hotel, Restaurant and Travel Administration major Liza Pageda. "Some people can get overboard . . . it depends if you have self-control or not.

"I'd hate to pay for interest," Pageda added.

Clarene Errichetto, a freshman chemistry major, said she has no credit cards due to a similarity between her name and her mother's.

"Maybe its better off that I don't have one," she said. "I'd probably abuse it."

A credit company representative on campus said students have been "surprisingly very responsible."

He said students are offered the chance to receive a card because they will soon be working and likely a good credit risk.

The credit representative, speaking anonymously, said he does not pressure students to apply or "jam it down their throats."

The enticement of small gifts is a small matter, he said, "students want instant gratification."

Of the 22 million Citibank cardholders, 1.5 million are students Ahearn said.

Bike path in the works

Completion Expected in fall 1992

By CAIT JAMES
Collegian Correspondent

After numerous setbacks, the bike path from Northampton to South Amherst will begin construction in a few months and will be completed most likely next fall, according to an official in the Department of Environmental Management.

DEM's Thomas Dyer said the early setbacks in construction were due to misunderstandings between the various towns the path goes through, but, "at this point, all concerns have been resolved, the selectmen are supportive and we're now moving forward," he said.

The eight foot wide path for cyclists and pedestrians will be approximately nine miles long. It will begin at Damon Road in Northampton and continue east to Station Road in South Amherst.

The path will be accessible in Amherst at Snell Street, Route 9 and Route 116. In Hadley, bicyclists can get on the path between East and Middle Streets, at Bay Road and other intersecting streets that have a grade.

The hike path, built along the former Boston and Maine Railroad right-of-way to Amherst, will cross few roads. Instead it will pass under or over the majority of the roads along the path.

Along with the eight feet of pavement, the path will include lights, landscaping along some stretches and fences to provide a barrier between cyclists and cows in fields along the path.

The Pioneer Valley Planning Assembly first proposed the idea for the bike path in the 1970s, as a "Five-College bike path."

CONTINUED ON PAGE 5

Art teacher promotes freshmen sculptures

Collegian photo by Josh Reynolds

Kathleen Gilrain stands in front of her students' sculpture near the Marshall Annex and Worcester Dining Commons.

Instructor directs unique art class

By JOSH REYNOLDS
Collegian Staff

Every semester masses of twisted metal seem to grow like mushrooms from the field between Worcester Dining Commons and the Marshal Annex.

Bits of fencing, bike frames, rusted boiler parts and bed springs appear, entwined in a hit-and-run Guerilla Sculpture that is half salvage yard, half art.

The sculptures are the work of freshman art students under the instruction of Kathleen Gilrain, a teaching assistant in her third year of graduate studies at UMass.

Gilrain teaches Three Dimensional Design I, a foundation course taken by all BFA majors.

She sets her students to work every semester on the shallow sloping field, which is bisected by a footpath worn by students plodding to and from the D.C.

The Sculpture is placed to intentionally obstruct the path, she said.

"I wanted students walking the path to have to confront the sculpture," she said, as well as force her students to "think about the public. . . sculpture is not in a vacuum."

The purpose of the large sculptures, Gilrain said, is to get the students to think of sculpture "in terms of the space we live in. . . not just something on a table."

The students work with discarded scraps and materials from the foundry, she said, "so they're pretty chaotic."

When a sculpture is taken down the pieces are returned to the foundry to be used again. Some of the pieces can be seen reoccurring in different sculptures from year to year, Gilrain said.

Because it is the work of the entire class, rather than any one student, "nobody can get their way, individual ideas get mixed in with those of the group," she said, stressing the large sculptures also teach communication.

Earlier in the month her class met at Tilson farms. The students constructed sculptures using rough wooden planks which smelled of manure. The boards were balanced precariously against each other, making only occasional use of a few feet of prayed rope to hold them together.

Several of the pieces collapsed under their own weight before they could be critiqued, teaching the students a lesson in the permanency of art as well as its glamour.

"It takes a lot of energy to think about 20 students work," said Gilrain, yet her syllabus is under constant revision. "It's more interesting for me, to try different things each semester, but the more successful pieces, such as the lawn sculpture, are repeated."

Gilrain said the Art Department relies on its teaching assistants to teach the majority of undergraduate foundation classes. Three of the four sections of the introductory sculpture class are taught by TAs.

Despite this responsibility her salary as a TA does not cover living expenses. In addition to her course work and teaching she must moonlight as a waitress to pay the bills.

"Nobody can support themselves on a TA's pay," said Gilrain. Though their tuition is waived, a TA's stipend is only $82 dollars per week. TAs are forced to either take a job, or take the maximum amount of loans, she said.

Gilrain will be putting up a sculpture installation of her own work at the Amherst Common. The 12-piece exhibit will open Nov. 3.

COMEDY NIGHT
featuring
CHRIS ZITO
and
TOM AGNA
Tuesday
Oct. 22nd
9:00 p.m.
Wed., Oct. 23rd
TBA
Octoberfest '91
WITH
Paula's German Band
THURSDAY, OCT. 24th
at 7:30 PM
JAZZ
OCT. 21
MONDAY
Jeff Holmes
Jazz on a Monday Evening
the hatch
GROUND FLOOR/STUDENT UNION

Woman reports assault

Compiled by DAVID MASSEY
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts Police responded to a call on Thursday afternoon in Thoreau Residence Hall regarding a dispute between a man and a woman. The woman reported she was assaulted.

Housing Staff are trying to resolve the matter, police said.

Police issued a criminal citation for driving to endanger to a man Thursday evening who allegedly drove over a curb on Washington Drive at a high rate of speed.

Police reports say the man drove near to an area where several students were walking.

LARCENY:

•A man working student security at Moore reported Friday morning the theft of his leather bomber jacket while he was briefly away from the desk. The jacket has an estimated value of $300.

•A woman reported Thursday evening the theft of her fanny-pack while she was at class in Field. The pack, which contained a Walkman radio and keys, has an estimated value of $160.

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions on this page are those of the individual writer or cartoonist, and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian or the University unless otherwise noted.

Columnist goes off on the offensive offended's offenses

Hi! You may have noticed that my column was absolutely nowhere to be found last Monday. That was because Monday was officially cancelled so that everybody could properly celebrate the anniversary of the day a racist, womanizing guy named Columbus came over to the New World and abused the masses. Just think, if he were alive today he could get on the Supreme Court.

Jared Blaut

Ha ha. It's a joke, guys.

Well, I would like to officially begin my column this week by apologizing to anyone who, due to the ignorance and heartless stupidity which I've displayed in my articles, has been hurt or somehow offended by anything I have written. I was wrong; you all know what is good and what is right, and since you are the most important people in the world and no one else's ideas matter, I pledge humbly to serve you, the Knowers of Right, the Gods of Good, for all eternity.

Not.

Yep, here it is, folks, another P.C. article. Actually, I'm sort of a P.C. virgin, because before coming to this campus, I had never heard that term before. No, out in the real world we used to let people say what they want to say, and if we didn't like it then hey! We ignored them. I know, I know, we were radicals.

Nope, here in the unreality that is UMass you can't even wipe your nose without fifty members of the Young Republican Campus Crusaders for Phlegm hurling large rocks at you and screaming that snot has rights, too. You know the type of people I'm talking about — they are the ones who hold peaceful, non-interfering organizations on campus (like, oh, I don't know, Hillel or something) personally responsible for things that happen on the other side of the ocean, the ones who scream WE'RE ALL GOING TO HELL when, in actuality, we're going to Anthropology.

I'm amazed that these people think that what they are doing does anything except offend lots of people who are only going to go out and offend the people who offended them in the first place, then the original offensive group, feeling offended at the other group's offense, will feel obligated to offend them back, and then some outside group that previously had nothing to do with the argument is going to jump in and offend everybody, and then the original two groups will really be offended, and so on and so on until some raving lunatic guns down everyone in all the groups, much to the delight of everyone else on campus (note to all raving lunatics out there — do not try this at home).

Most activists here at sunny UMass seem to fall into two basic categories: offensive and defensive. Offensive groups are the ones who just can't seem to let a peaceful equilibrium exist on campus and go out and bully some otherwise peaceful group to cover up their own feelings of insecurity. Defensive groups are the ones who have to put up with the crap that the offensive groups do and spew, and have to fight against them just to protect themselves.

Oh, what the hell, I think I'll dig a really big hole for myself and just blurt out the names of a couple of groups (picked completely at random, of course) that I consider to be evil and good, er, offensive and defensive. Starting on defense, we have the LBGA; playing for the most offensive offense, we have (who else but) those cuddly fellows, the Republican Club.

I can feel the hate; I can sense the article in the next Minuteman. There's no doubt that some people out there are taking me way too seriously and are thinking that leaving me intelligent voice-mail messages like "I think you're an asshole" will make them Really Cool Guys. These people are going to think that this column is just soooo offensive.

Does the mere fact that these guys are going to be offended mean that I'm being hypocritical in my criticism? I don't think so. Why? Because my ideas are right and their ideas are wrong.

That's another joke, people.

No, I don't believe I'm being hypocritical because I don't believe I'm hurting anyone (but the closed-minded) by saying what I'm saying. Who could possibly take offense at this column? What are they going to say, "Hey, who are you to tell me not to go out and offend whoever the hell I want for no real reason, thereby making lots of otherwise happy people upset because I'm a belligerent putz?"

The worst part of it is that some people out there really do think this way. A lot of people's minds are so small that they think that being a bully somehow makes them important, and that's really, really sad.

Jared Blaut is a Collegian columnist.

Put off homework — go out and play

Do you remember what autumn was like when you were in elementary school?

In art class, you endlessly painted pictures of colored trees, pumpkins, scarecrows, and haystacks. The classroom calendars marked days gone by with little cut-out leaves and Halloween stickers. You knew you did well on a worksheet when you saw the grinning jack o'lantern or the cackling witch stuck next the grade.

Darienne Hosley

Autumn was a big thing. Actually, in elementary school, everything was important — not a holiday or season went by without parties, art projects, and special class work. Nothing slipped by. A holiday wasn't just a calendar box with words on it. Sometimes, it meant a day out of school. Sometimes it didn't. But there was always something to enjoy.

I forgot it was autumn until I went home two weeks ago. I suddenly realized that the trees at home were brilliant colors of red, orange, and yellow. I ran through September and part of October, caught up in school and friends and sleep, and didn't realize that the season was changing. The colors of autumn are something to enjoy. I had forgotten that.

As much as I like college, I sometimes wonder about the importance of what I'm learning. Already an accomplished cynic, thanks to the high school years, I'm now in the advanced training program.

Many of my classes are teaching me how to find the faults — the prejudices, the lies, the assumptions — in the world around me and in myself. I'm also being trained to follow the work ethic. Granted, I should be aware of all this. But whatever happened to learning how to enjoy? I need a refresher class or two.

Saturday was a beautiful day, sunny and warm. No classes, no commitments, nowhere I had to be.

I spent Saturday doing homework on my word processor. The window was open, so I could hear people outside playing basketball and football on the lawn. I was lured out of my room once or twice by the breeze drifting in. I went out on the balcony and read some of my history book.

By four in the afternoon, I was kind of depressed. Nothing kept me confined to the room that day except the idea that I had to get all that homework done. I didn't have time to spend the afternoon walking or running or sleeping outside. Supposedly.

My roommate was depressed too. She spent the whole day in the library. She didn't even get a breeze there.

When did I learn that responsibilities were more important than enjoying myself? I don't want to spend all my time on a permanent study break but...well, maybe I would.

I miss some of the lessons of elementary school. It was fun. Do you remember thinking about ostriches and hospitals and giraffe necks and outer space? It was all important stuff and it was all kind of fun. And then there was recess — two or three times a day everyone had to take a break and run around and play silly games.

It's Sunday, and again it's a beautiful day outside. A little cooler, perhaps. It's nearing winter. A scant few yards from my dwelling, people are eating and talking and running around to the music of Octoberfest. I'm spending the afternoon in the basement of the concrete mass of the Campus Center. My roommate is studying in the library.

Enjoy.

Darienne Hosley is a Collegian columnist

Candidate thanks voters for support in state senate race

Please allow me the opportunity to thank those volunteers and voters who stood with me for the values that became the focus of my candidacy. Most of you I hope to thank personally, but I will undoubtedly miss some of you. Please accept this letter as evidence of my appreciation for you.

I continue to be encouraged when I remember you who gave so bravely and tirelessly to make the telephone calls, go door-to-door, or stand at the polls. Then there are the many of you who endorsed me by putting a sign in your yard or car, and kept it there "when the going got rough." Russ and Barbara Pomeroy of Hatfield have twice now donated the lumber for our yard signs, which have become a symbol of our stability.

We should be encouraged that we stood our ground in proclaiming what we believe and that we gave the voters a clear and honest choice. Thank you voters who believe in us. Thank you voters who made the effort to cast a vote.

The Honorable Stan Rosenberg, our new state senator, is to be commended for our clean and hard-fought race. The people of Amherst and Pelham can be proud that Stan was faithful to his duties in the legislature even as he campaigned here in the district.

Thank you all who made our victory gathering a success. We are not done talking about the need to restore the family to its proper place in our society.

Douglas R. Dagarin
Williamsburg

House council pres. decries exclusion from center meeting

By now, most of you have seen the United Asian Cultural Center signs. For those who haven't, they were to announce a community meeting for "Asian Students Only." Most of you also read the article retracting this discriminatory conduct on the front page of Thursday's Collegian [Oct. 17]. Well, don't believe it. It was a lie.

As Co-President of Knowlton, I felt a responsibility to attend this meeting. My purpose was to offer them the help of House Council. I and two others attempted to sit in on this meeting. Before the start of the meeting we were rudely instructed to leave solely because of our race. I couldn't believe it. This action is not only immoral but is also illegal. Not a single person at the meeting stood up for us. In fact, some laughed. I was, and still am, outraged.

This type of action must be stopped. If it is allowed to occur once, it will happen again. This blatant racist occurrence should be treated in the same fashion as any other blatant racist occurrence. I want something done. I want a public apology and I also want the student organizers responsible for this meeting removed from their present positions. I no longer want my tuition funding racist activities such as these. Do you?

Lianne Gerace
Northeast

Administration not guilty for center's demise

Have you ever wondered why almost every article on multiculturalism seems to endlessly bash the administration? It just has to be that the administration is a cold, heartless group of people that just don't care about minorities and want to continue to repress them. However, I don't quite understand why the administration would give minorities, in this case Asians, a cultural center in the first place if they really held this view. Something just doesn't seem right.

In Thursday's issue of the Collegian, [Oct. 17] both Amy Chee and Denise Lau are quoted as saying Asian students were either disinterested or just not using the facilities. Therefore, it doesn't make sense when Alex Nguyen is quoted in Friday's Collegian [Oct. 18] saying the center would be closed because "we will no longer accept or tolerate [the administration's] behavior toward Asians and other minorities." Bad, bad administration.

I got it. The administration owes us something to us, not because we earned it, but because of the color of our skin. Now, isn't that being discriminatory? Let's see what happens of a White organization tried to start its' own cultural center. Now there is a question.

As for a cultural center in general, every race should have one because it is a place for people to try to keep in touch with their culture. However, this idea Asians need a cultural center or advantages to others only in the sense that these advantages are to make up for being repressed is wrong.

If we truly want to make this a fair world, we should always take the best person regardless of race, sex or creed. College will not equalize the playing field for outclassed students. As for now, we can begin by stop acting like victims. Until that time, we will always be oppressed and victims, if not in reality, in our minds.

Overall, it is truly sad the cultural center is being closed in part because of a lack of funding. On the other hand, we must all realize we are under a budget crisis and everyone is suffering, and not just minorities. In this sense, it is a very tragic event. However, we should not totally disregard the efforts, however minute, of the administration. I know the administration is far from perfect, but so are we. All that anyone can do is try.

Jerry Hong
Amherst

Your friends at the Collegian Editorial desk are still looking for capable, witty cartoonists to illuminate the Ed/Op page. Why? Because cartoons are infinitely better than these little blurbs. We think you'd agree. Submit cartoons, done in blue or black ink [no ballpoint pen, it looks skeevy] to the Ed/Op desk at the Collegian, 113 Campus Center. Art need not be drawn to scale, but 8 1/2 by 11 paper the long way works well for us.

We can't pay you, or promise an enhanced sex life, but it's lots of fun.

THE FAR SIDE
By GARY LARSON

Dog previews

DOONESBURY
By GARRY TRUDEAU

SO WHAT'D I'VE BEEN DESIGNATED A POINT O' LITE!
THE WHITE HOUSE WANT?
THEY HEARD ABOUT MY CHASING THE DRUG DEALERS AWAY WITH LOUD MUZAK... THEY WANT ME TO COME TO WASHINGTON TO ACCEPT A POINT O' LITE MEDAL!
WHAT AN HONOR— YOU'VE WON THE MOST CYNICAL PRIZE IN YEARS! BUSH'S PRIVATE SMOKESCREEN FOR INACTION ON POV-ERTY!
UM... I KNOW.
BUT YOU'RE GOING, OF COURSE.
DON'T START ON ME, J.J.! I GOT SERI-OUS RESUMÉ PROBLEMS!

CALVIN AND HOBBES
By BILL WATTERSON

TANGELO PIE
By TIM SNIFFEN

Did your parents take you on Space Mountain at DisneyWorld when you were a kid, Marcus?
-No. Why?
I believe that, ultimately, it is the difference between us. Perhaps if you had ridden Space Mountain as a child, you'd be more free-wheeling today. Alas, too late.
-Hello, Mom? Do we have any trips planned for this summer?

CAST OF THOUSANDS
By BARRY DEUTSCH

THE CATCUS
By SCOTT FORBES

THE RACE BEGINS...
ONLY THE FOOLISH SHALL BE VICTORIOUS.
NEAT-O COOL CAP, DUDE.
MY BIG BOOTS ARE HOT AND UNCOMFORTABLE BUT BY GOLLY, I'M HIP!?
GRR!
MYSTERY TEAM OF NO VALUE.

Quote of the Day

"Life's too short not to play tons of pinball"

--Overheard

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
By TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

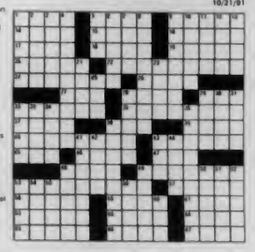
ACROSS
1 Brittle cookie
5 Mariner
9 Original
14 Signal system
15 Over again
16 Poetry muse
17 Smell —
18 Caper
19 Disprove
20 End
22 Gloomy
24 Diversion
26 Dies —
27 Charge
28 Muslim prince
29 Exclamation of surprise
32 Comedy
35 Infatuated
37 Corker
38 Beetle
39 The Emerald Isle
40 Lively
43 Navysayer
45 Serpent
46 Snoop
47 Scrap
48 Stair part
49 Georgia's Nunn is one
53 Tom, Dick and Harry, e.g.
57 Gape
58 Read for caning: Var.
59 Wrongful act
61 Adjective ending
62 Portents
63 Hip bones
64 Musaraji's relatives
65 Cup, in Cannes
66 Small change
67 Being

DOWN
1 Professor
2 Waterwheel
3 Abigail or Amos
4 Small frosted cake
5 Downcast
6 Herb of the carrot family
7 Mother of Castor and Pollux
8 Unfaithful guy
9 Mondale's running mate in 1984
10 Goddess of peace
11 1944 Nobel physicist
12 Stupefy
13 Carry
21 Row
23 "Exodus" author
25 Convened
28 Habitat
29 Elevator man
30 Sandwich, of a sort
31 Frankfurt's river
32 Lohengrin's bride
33 Has a late meal
34 Shorten
36 Provisional
38 Tyrannical
41 Acute
42 — the line
43 College in Cedar Rapids
44 Sea eagles
48 Connery et al.
49 Canary's cousin
50 Stuffed tortillas
51 Certain exams
52 Confederate gen.
53 Jog
54 W. Syrian city
55 AAA abbrs.
56 Burrowing animal
60 Make lace

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

Q	D	A	T	■	A	R	O	M	A	■	C	H	I	P
B	E	L	I	■	R	E	G	A	N	■	A	L	E	S
G	R	E	E	N	K	E	L	L	Y	■	M	I	N	E
I	N	F	E	A	S	■	H	E	T	M	A	N	■	■
■	■	N	O	N	■	I	D	E	O	L	O	G	Y	■
L	U	M	E	N	S	■	R	E	W	A	R	D	E	D
O	N	D	■	S	A	T	A	N	■	D	I	A	R	Y
S	T	O	P	■	P	O	W	E	R	■	A	V	O	N
■	■	T	O	P	■	A	L	I	E	N	■	I	D	E
R	E	Y	N	O	L	D	S	■	M	O	S	E	S	■
■	■	A	S	S	A	Y	■	C	A	R	E	■	■	■
R	E	L	I	C	■	D	E	R	I	A	T	E	S	■
A	R	L	O	S	■	C	E	N	T	■	C	L	A	R
M	I	E	N	■	C	E	N	T	E	■	L	L	A	■
P	E	M	S	■	S	M	E	L	T	■	D	I	E	T

10/21/91



Menu

Sorry, No Menu Today

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21 - April 19) — Do not wait for someone else to make the first move in a relationship. Change tactics and find out where you may be vulnerable. Avoid getting romantically involved with someone at work.

TAURUS (April 20 - May 20) — You may wish to change your surroundings today but encounter opposition from someone who shares them. Seek a compromise. Bright colors raise your spirits and productivity. Love is sublime!

GEMINI (May 21 - June 20) — With draw, if you can, from a scene of excitement and start figuring out what the next move should be. Costly solutions should be rejected. Pen your mind to new perspectives.

CANCER (June 21 - July 22) — Chart your future with the top brass now. A faraway locale could be beneficial for business or romance. Critique your work before showing it to someone influencial.

LEO (July 23 - Aug. 22) — A crowded schedule could be hard on your nerves, your pocketbook, too. Slow down and take stock of your priorities. Look into a loved one's eyes tonight if unsure of where you stand.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 - Sept. 22) — You could be thrust into a leadership role at work today. Changes crop up suddenly. Rise to the occasion — this could be your big chance! Trust your instincts in an emergency.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22) — Those in authority are assessing your importance now — prove your worth through cooperation and performance. Financial progress accelerates, thanks to an outsider's input.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 - Nov. 21) — Guard against displaying vanity or arrogance today; it could invite trouble and put your career in jeopardy. Keep your friends' secrets to yourself.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 - Dec. 21) — A co-worker makes a good partner now. Together you can set an exciting pace and win victory. Postpone shopping, but not bill-paying. Romance intensifies.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19) — Not a good day to tackle a complex, time-consuming project. Wait until you have more energy. Going out to lunch with a friend will restore your high spirits. Choose new allies with care.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18) — A parental figure or VIP helps you make a fresh start now. Show your gratitude in a tangible way. Paying a debt will clear your conscience. Do more than what is expected.

PISCES (Feb. 19 - March 20) — Strive for a meeting of the minds with important people. What transpires at a private meeting could bring you new benefits and greater respect.

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Gayle Long
Copy Editor ..... Tamir Lipton
PhotoTechnician ..... Jeff Egan
Production Supervisor ..... Camille Pansewicz
Production ..... Sue Tomaski, Brad Hutchison

■ Kegs

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

Students are prohibitted from having kegs in their dorm rooms.

Wood said he believes on-campus drinking is safer because there is less need to drive and greater supervision.

Wood said the problem is with the rules, and students are not likely to change their ways.

"The parties are going to happen," she said.

— MICHAEL LEVY

■ Bike Path

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

The right-of-way became available for sale in the early 1980s and the DEM purchased it in 1984 for $500,000.

The DEM has hopes of adding onto the path in the future, according to officials. One possibility is a connection from Damon Road at the Northampton end. Another is to connect Mount Holyoke and Hampshire Colleges to the path, he said.

The $2.3 million cost of the bike path will be funded by the Department of Public Works, using transportation bond money.

Dyer said, "The discussion of using recycled materials such as asphalt and glass in the asphalt mix is being explored now."

The DEM has hopes the path will be as popular used as the path that currently exists in Northampton.

LONDON
ROUND TRIP FROM $350

From NEW YORK
round trips starting at

LONDON	$350
LENINGRAD	$610
CARACAS	$410
GUTEMALA C.	$390
BANGKOK	$939
LOS ANGELES- AUCKLAND	$699

Taxes & surcharges not included. Fares subject to change.

Council Travel
79 So. Pleasent Street,
Amherst, MA 01002
(413)256-1261

COLLEGIAN GRAPHICS
We need Paste-up people
Mac experience prefered
see Terry or Mike at 113 Campus Center
or call 545-1864

Killer Savings.

Save Up To $100
Now's the time to jump for an ArtCarved graduation ring — and save up to $100! Our wide selection of rings are so finely crafted they come with a lifetime guarantee.
ARTCARVED COLLEGE JEWELRY
UNIVERSITY STORE
October 21, 22, 23 • 10:00am - 4:00pm

Auto Glass Center
American & Foreign
• Same Day Service
• Billed Directly To Insurance Company
• Windshields Replaced
North Amherst Motors
78 Old Sunderland Rd
North Amherst, MA
549-2880
Major Credit Cards Accepted
A CARSTAR Collision Repair Center

AMHERST CINEMA
Now Playing
PARIS IS BURNING
Showtimes:
Fri - Sun
7:30pm & 9pm
Mon-Thurs
One show at 7:30pm
Adults $4.00
Student w/valid I.D. $3.00

RESEARCH INTERVIEWERS
Hiring Now For The School Year
Interesting part time telephone assignments to collect data on a variety of research topics. Absolutely no selling involved. Flexible hours Sunday-Friday, 5-10pm and Saturday, 10am-5pm. Shifts up to 40 hours/week available. Choose your own schedule as long as you work 4 shifts a week (20 hours). Start at $7.00 per hour with paid training and earn up to minimum $8.00/hr.
We're at the Mountain Farms Mall which is a stop on the low fare line. Call between 11am and 4pm Monday to Friday 586-8686.
Abt Associates Inc.
Telephone Research Center
Mountain Farms Mall, Rt. 9
Hadley, MA 01035
Abt
An Equal Opportunity Employer

STEINBECK
COLLISION REPAIR & AUTOBODY
53 S. Prospect St. Amherst Center
Imports & other unibody vehicles are our specialty
Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass replacement
REMEMBER
It's your car and your choice of repair facilities
256-8157 256-1385
Shop Reg #RS1212

Winter Session 1992 Catalog Is Here!
So, what exactly is Winter Session?
• a unique "mini-semester," just three weeks long
Well, what's so unique about it?
• you can earn 3 academic credits in only 3 weeks
• over 100 credit courses, including gen. ed. designated classes
How can Winter Session help me?
You can:
• take a class you couldn't get before
• make up credits
• meet graduation requirements
• lighten your spring course load
Winter Session 1992 — January 2-23
Registration by mail only begins November 9. (Registrations must be postmarked no earlier than November 9.)
Catalogs available on campus or at the Division of Continuing Education 6th floor Goodell

Patriots boot Vikings 26-23 in overtime

By HOWARD ULMAN
AP Sports Writer

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — Jason Staurovsky redeemed himself with the biggest kick of the day after watching the Minnesota Vikings get their kicks all game long.

Staurovsky, who missed an extra point in the fourth quarter and a 36-yard field goal in overtime, hit a 42-yarder with no time left that gave the New England Patriots a 26-23 victory Sunday.

The Patriots (3-4) got the ball at their 20-yard line on David Pool's fumble recovery with 2:38 to go at the end of an 18-yard pass play from Rich Gannon to Steve Jordan.

Hugh Millen's 27-yard completion to Greg McMurtry got the ball to the Minnesota 33 with 39 seconds to go. A 5-yard completion to Marv Cook put it at the 24 with 5 seconds remaining to set up Staurovsky's kick.

Minnesota's kicking had kept the game going to that point. After Gannon's 4-yard touchdown pass to Anthony Carter cut New England's lead to 23-20 with 1:37 left, the Vikings (3-5) recovered an onside kick.

Brent Novoselsky got it, but the replay official ruled he touched it after it traveled just 9 yards. The next onside kick went the required 10 yards, and Solomon Wilcots recovered for the Vikings at the New England 43.

The drive ended with Fuad Reveiz's third field goal, a 23-yarder with 20 seconds left in the fourth quarter that forced overtime.

Staurovsky missed on the first overtime possession. Minnesota then punted but got the ball back at its 40 on Audrey McMillan's interception.

Carter's 10-yard run on a reverse and his 12-yard reception moved the ball to the 38. The next play set a record for Gannon, but was the beginning of the end for the Vikings.

It was his 63rd pass of the day, breaking Steve Dils' record of 62 set against Tampa Bay on Sept. 5, 1981. It also ended in Jordan's fumble.

Millen hit Ben Coates for a 17-yard completion on the next play, starting the winning drive.

The Patriots had taken a 14-7 lead in the first half on Millen's 18-yard touchdown pass to McMurtry, and Leonard Russell's 1-yard dive.

Minnesota, which scored earlier on Herschel Walker's 1-yard run, cut the lead to 14-13 in the third quarter on field goals of 23 and 32 yards by Reveiz.

■ football

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 8

intercepted by UConn's Jim Reppi at the UMass 35-yard line and returned for a touchdown to make it 17-7.

McGovern, who replaced starting quarterback Tony Williams on the second play of UMass' third possession of the game, ran three yards on a quarterback draw for a touchdown that capped an eight-play, 45-yard drive to put UMass ahead 7-0.

McGovern, who had offseason knee surgery and had not played since the first round of the NCAA Division I-AA Playoffs last year, finished the day with 10 completions, 125 yards and four interceptions.

con

Connecticut's freshman tailback Ed Long carried the ball 27 times for 125 yards, including a five-yard touchdown run in the second quarter to tie it 7-7. Before Saturday, Long had only 139 yards rushing.

Maguire's onsides kick threaded UConn's Chapman and Mark Didio and was untouched until it fell into the hands of Caparotti.

Yankee Conference Notes: UConn's Jim Reppi was named the Yankee Conference Defensive Player-of-the-Week for his 10 tackles (six unassisted), forced fumble and interception.

Bledsoe, Neveling and George were named to the YanCon Honor Roll.

BE THE MASTER OF YOUR MASTER'S DEGREE
At the Gallatin Division of New York University, you can create a graduate program tailored to your individual academic interests.
Gallatin also offers an M.A. degree with a concentration in Publishing Studies.
Find out about Individualized Study and Publishing Studies at Gallatin.
The Director of Admissions will be on campus
Wednesday, October 23
10 a.m. – 3 p.m.
Campus Center, Auditorium
I am unable to attend the campus visit. Please send me information on Gallatin's ☐ Individualized Study ☐ Publishing Studies.
NEW YORK UNIVERSITY G15

DOMINO'S PIZZA
U-MASS 256-8911
Mt. Holyoke 535-1111
We Accept Competetors Coupons
30c PIZZA ORDER ANY TWO TOPPING LARGE PIZZA GET MEDIUM 1 TOPPING PIZZA FOR 30c
1.99 PIZZA BUY ANY LARGE PIZZA GET 2ND ONE FOR $1.99
BUY ANY LARGE PIZZA for the price of a small Pizza

Classifieds

COME TO THE COLLEGIAN OFFICE 113 CAMPUS CENTER • THURSDAY 8:30-3:30 FRIDAY 8:30-2:30 • DEADLINE IS TWO DAYS PRIOR TO PUBLICATION • 20¢/WORD/DAY FOR STUDENTS • CASH IN ADVANCE

ANNOUNCEMENTS

MONEY is available for every student for more info mail to Scholarship Finders 35 Church St. Were MA 01 082

OLDER STUDENTS: 25 Plus Club needs officers to maintain RSO status. Interested? Contact Randy 253-0761 or Pat 546-3291 ASAP!

ANDREW BRODSKY

Happy 21st Birthday!!
Ooh...Aah...Umm...Ehh
Do you want to partvhnt in the Pascal lab with me, Josh, Neil and Smeldog, I'll bring the Rolyinelh and the 3-liter gallon ol Coke Sagachlyalhyrzaer!
Seymour

ENTERTAINMENT

RACK-A-DISC! $175.00 DJs, VJs, Karaoke tor house/ Formal parties, Call 586-9900

FOR RENT

2 large roomed apt Heat inc. Center of Amherst 256-1124

FRIDGE RENTALS 253-9742 Free Delivery

LARGE BEDROOM IN 3BDRM Pullton apt with own bathroom available Nov 1 Call 549-0748

TOWNHOUSE 2 BEDROOM 1 1/2 bath Bus route N Amherst 1-567-1352

FOR SALE

COMICS! Punisher, predator Much more Call Mark 546-6002

COMPUTER FOR SALE
$600 Call Cliff
549-1762

Cortley Flute
with case. Excellent condition. One owner. Newly reconditioned $200.00 call 546-0096

HONDA CB360 MOTORCYCLE 4700m green wndshield and extras $400 253-0951

NEC LAPTOP COMPUTER. 640K. Two 720K drives. Pop-up programs. New programs: Quattro pro, Reflex 2.0, Keymaker, Goter 2.0, More. Color monitor. Work center. 773-8997

NEW & USED COMPUTERS
Call Damin 6-2270

HELP WANTED

"CAMPUS REPRESENTATIVES NEEDED"
Earn free trip and big commissions by selling Cancun, Mexico. For more information call toll free at 800-755-7996 or in Connecticut at 203-975-8833

Earn $2500 & Free trips selling spring break packages to Bahamas, Mexico, Jamaica, Florida! Best trips & prices!

EXTERIOR PAINTERS
Experienced student painters needed to paint Amherst area homes. Full or part time. America's College Painters (800) 826-6267 "Painting America's homes coast to coast".

FREE TRAVEL, CASH, and excellent business experience!! Openings available for individuals or student organizations to promote the country's most successful spring break tours. Call INTER-CAMPUS PROGRAMS 1-800-327-6013

"Know before you go," Where to work, live and ski free in Colorado's resorts. "Current guide to Aspen, Vail, Brecken-ridge and more! $16.95 Call 1-800-788-6174

OVERSEAS JOBS. $900-2000 mo. summer, yr. round, all countries, all fields. Free info. Write UC, PO Bx52-MAO/ Corona Del Mar CA 92625

WANTED!
Enthusiastic, aggressive, and responsible student or organization to market winter skiing and spring break trips. Earn high commission, and travel benefits while gaining valuable sales and marketing experience! Great fund raiser for any organization! (All destinations and the best rates available.)

 INTERNSHIPS *****

SPRING 1992 INTERNSHIPS with the Legal Services Center; get handson experience in the legal field--work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary--training provided. Contact Legal Services today 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

LOST

CONTEMPORARY LINGUISTICS TEXT by OGrady, Pobrovelski, Aronoff and a blue vinyl 3 ring notebook with linguistics 201 notes. If found please call Julie at 546-4110

LOST KEYS
at Newman Center on 10/15
Please return or consact Newman Center.

PERSONALS

MARLENE
Marlene, the Marlenester,
Marlene-o-rama, the Marlenator.
Marlene-a-tole-
Hope this brithday was better than the last

NURSE NANCY NELSON!!
Happy brithday girlfriend!
May the sweatshirt goddess appear and be good to you!
Love, Debbi, Jen,
& George

SIGMA KAPPA, it may be October but the temperature was hot Saturday night! Hope everyone had fun at the Beach Party!

DREW:
Ya know I was tinkin'
I wanted to say - Happy Brithday
Love, Don Dokken

ABSOLUTE ZERO
The best band in town!!
We love ya
Your Official Groupies

Nicole
Just keep on smiling!
Kathleen

SPIKE
H of H lives
Get psyched for Halloween
GHERKIN

GIRLIE: 6 months ago we took that marathon trek from Pulflton. The whole darn ball of wax has been adventure of my life. "I am the milkman of human kindness- I will leave an extra pint

CG-
Happy 6! Bonk!
Love, Lava Toes

Michelle
Roses are red, violets are blue.
I knew if I did this, it would come as a surprise to you.
Happy Birthday
Love Always
C Cowboy

RIDE WANTED

NORTHAMPTON TO AMHERST weeknights 1:30AM-? 253-2329

SERVICES

BICYCLE BROKEN?
Call Pat
546-0119

ORDER AVON!
546-1999
Call for brochure

PREGNANT?
Need a pregnancy test, information or support? Call for free and confidential services. ALTERNATIVES 245 Main Street, Northampton 586-3000 or Greenfield 774-6019

STOP SMOKING WITH the help of powerful hypnotherapist from T.I.W. Special discounts for students. Call 586-7372

FREE pregnancy testing; confidential and caring support. BIRTHRIGHT 233 No. Pleasant Street Amherst 549-1906

TRAVEL

Killington Collegiate Ski Fest Jan 12-17 condo, hottubs, skiing, and more. Also spring break, Cancun, Jamaica and more. Call John & John 549-8101

TYPING

PAPERS TYPED: $1.50/typed page Quick, Accurate Service. Call Bnan 546-3563

WORD PROCESSING, laser printing, papers, resumes, theses. Rosemary 259-1786

WANTED

To recycle: Prescription medication bottles/ containers (Nonrenewable R/Xonly) Please call 585-8709

Sports

Minutemen turn game over to UConn

By BRETT MORRIS
Collegian Staff

STORRS, Conn — Missed opportunities and five University of Massachusetts turnovers, three of which resulted in University of Connecticut touchdowns, characterized UMass' third straight loss, Saturday, 26-21.

The Minutemen (2-5), down by five points with just over two minutes remaining in the game, had an opportunity to go ahead after a Jerome Bledsoe 6-yard touchdown run, when kicker Jim Maguire and Don Caparotti executed a perfect onsides kick that positioned UMass at midfield.

However, following backup quarterback Dave McGovern's 20-yard pass completion over the middle to Lamar Newsome, the Minutemen were unable to gain any yardage on their next four plays, all passing, sealing UConn's second straight and first Yankee Conference victory.

Two possessions earlier, sparked by a Jerome Bledsoe 35-yard carry, UMass marched the ball 51 yards to the UConn 18-yard line.

But, on second-and-11, McGovern tossed a pass over the middle that was intended for Newsome near the endzone. The ball was tipped by Huskies free safety Scott Mitchell, off of Newsome, and into the hands of UConn's Robert Clarke at the UConn five.

"The offense made some critical errors," coach Jim Reid said. "There are a lot of things we have to clean up."

On the ensuing drive, the Huskies pushed the ball 62 yards resulting in a Nick Sosik 38-yard field goal putting them almost out of reach 26-14, but more importantly taking six minutes off the clock.

"Our defense helped the offense and our offense helped the defense," coach Tom Jackson said. "We played just good enough to win."

Down by nine, 23-14, with 4:54 remaining in the third quarter, UMass had an opportunity to pull within three when a 41-yard Mike George carry gave UMass first-and-goal from the six.

Following a George three-yard rumble, McGovern dropped back to handoff to Bledsoe, but UConn's Mark Chapman came in untouched on a blitz and disrupted the exchange that resulted in a UMass turnover.

George rushed 15 times for a career-high 91 yards.

Jerome Bledsoe, who had two 6-yard touchdown runs, carried the ball for 148 yards, the sixth-straight week he has eclipsed the 100-yard mark.

Superb play by UMass' defensive secondary and defensive line held the Huskies highly-touted quarterback Cornelius Benton, second in the Yankee Conference in passing efficiency coming in to the contest, to a dismal 18-44 passing effort.

Caparotti had five pass break-ups and six unassisted tackles. Free safety Lance Neveling had two interceptions, six tackles and Vaughn Williams had three pass break-ups.

UMass' defensive line, led by Matt Tulley's three tackles-for- losses kept the elusive Benton (he was never sacked) under constant pressure throughout the afternoon.

"Their defense is as good as we've played against," Jackson said.

Three plays into the second half, McGovern's pass intended for Newsome was

CONTINUED ON PAGE 7

Collegian photo by Jody Gahin

Dave McGovern looks for an open receiver in Saturday's 26-21 UMass loss to UConn. McGovern is the fourth UMass quarterback of the season.

Enter: McGovern the fourth UMass QB

By DAVID SCOTT
Collegian Staff

Perhaps the only thing constant for coach Jim Reid's football squad during this 1991 season is — change.

Holding true to this season's practice of equal opportunity quarterbacking, sophomore signal caller Dave McGovern entered Saturday's 26-21 loss to the University of Connecticut in the first quarter and thus became the Minutemen's fourth different QB used this year.

"[Starting quarterback] Tony [Williams] was having a tough time," explained Reid. "I said, 'Enough is enough, get me someone in there that can at least throw a spiral.'"

McGovern entered the contest with a little more than six minutes to play in the first quarter and fumbled his initial snap which he recovered.

"I just rushed the first one," McGovern said. "I hadn't taken many snaps from [center] Andy [LeBlanc] in practice."

Williams had been struggling on UMass' first three possessions, throwing five times without one completion.

"I don't really know what's going on," Williams said after the game. "Yes, I was shocked, but Dave did a good job."

The revolving door that has become the UMass quarterback position has now seen Tom Fasano, Paul Tornatore and Williams, in various order, go from the sidelines to the huddle.

The 6-foot, 190-pound McGovern began the season at number four on the UMass quarterback depth chart, after off-season knee surgery, but has made the same climb that baseball's Atlanta Braves and Minnesota Twins made, from the cellar to the penthouse.

Both Reid and offensive coordinator Doug Berry gave the impression that McGovern, who played in four games, starting three, last season, had a strong enough performance to merit a start in UMass' next game against Northeastern.

On Saturday, however, passing proved to be a bit of a problem for McGovern, completing just 10-of-24 for 125 yards with a painful four interceptions, contributing to three UConn scores.

"I'm just an average QB, nothing great," McGovern said. "I played okay, but I made a lot of mental mistakes today. I'm real happy just to play."

Arwood's goal leads women's soccer to win

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts women's soccer team got back on the winning track Saturday as it ended a two game losing streak by defeating 16th ranked Notre Dame, 1-0.

In the 64th minute Massachusetts' Tracey Arwood gained control of a pass from Kim Eynard in front of the net. Arwood put a fake on a defender and was in alone on Notre Dame goal-keeper Michelle Lodyga. Arwood made no mistakes as she placed the ball in the left corner past the diving Lodyga.

"Kim made the pass over and I was just making the run at the right time," Arwood said. "It was a good cross and I was just glad I could finish. It's a great feeling, we really needed that goal and this win. We had been in a slump and now hopefully this will bring the team back."

Arwood had come off the bench earlier in the second half to replace freshman Polly Hackathorn. The fresh legs proved to be a key.

"I had a lot of energy coming off the bench and I think it made a difference," Arwood said. "I was just a little fresher."

The Massachusetts defense came up strong and was able to neutralize the Irish attack throughout the game. Briana Scurry collected her 8th shutout of the season by making three saves.

One of those stops was a huge one with only 10 seconds remaining in regulation. The Irish were given a direct kick near the left corner in the UMass end of the field. The Notre Dame player lofted the shot in front of the net where Scurry had to outleap two Irish attackers and catch the ball.

"That was the scariest part of the game," UMass coach Jim Rudy said. "It was a difficult save under a lot of pressure. Both kids got a piece of her as she went up and Brijust had to concentrate and make the play. It was the save of the game."

UMass (9-3) is currently ranked No. 11 in the nation and will square off with No. 2 Connecticut at 3 p.m. on Lower Boyden Field.

"Winning this game restores some confidence in our team," Rudy said. "It allows us to be in a positive frame of mind going into UConn. The win was beneficial for our state of mind."

UConn is a strong all-around team, according to Rudy. The Huskies are ranked No. 1 in the North and their only loss of the season came to No. 1 North Carolina.

"We are emotionally, mentally and tactically ready for Connecticut," Rudy said. "We are going to have to step up on defense and stop their scoring opportunities. They have quite a bit of speed up front so it will be a tough match-up."

Field hockey dominates Rhode Island, 4-0

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

Dominating!

That's the only word to describe the play of the University of Massachusetts field hockey team in their 4-0 win over Atlantic-10 foe Rhode Island Sunday.

The Minutewomen (11-3) controlled the game so well that Rhode Island didn't manage one shot on goal in the second half. UMass didn't even allow Rhode Island a single penalty corner during the final 35 minutes.

UMass was able to accomplish this because they controlled the ball on offense so well. They jumped out to a 1-0 lead at 20:05 in the first half on Jenn Salisbury's 13th goal of the year, assisted by Holly Hockenbrock.

Salisbury's goal put her atop the A-10 in scoring with five conference points. In the four conference games UMass has played, Salisbury has three game-winning goals.

Tara Jelley scored her first of two goals with nine minutes left in the first half. The unassisted goal gave her team a comfortable 2-0 lead going into halftime.

Jelley played well, and her second goal with 16:17 left, assisted by Sherlan Cabralis, capped the scoring. UMass coach Pam Hixon rewarded Jelley by giving her the rest of the day off.

UMass was awarded a rare penalty stroke in the second half. With 21:18 remaining, Kathy Phelan lined up to take the shot with only Rhode Island goaltender Theressa Fiore in front of her. Phelan wristed a shot into the open left side of the goal that Fiore didn't get close to.

UMass adjusted in the second half, which helped them control the game even more, according to Hixon.

"We wanted to play steady and play a somewhat controlled game against Rhode Island," she said. "In the second half we opened up the play a little bit more and passed a little bit more.

"We played a two-forward system with four midfielders in the second half, so it just gave us more passing opportunities."

Another pleasant development in the game was the strength of UMass' penalty corners. The team was able to consistently get strong shots against the URI defense. Dawn Trumbauer had a number of hard shots on net that Fiore saved.

"We're trying our turf corners on grass, and it looks like it's paying off," Hixon said.

The corners have been a weak spot in the UMass offense so far, but recently they have noticeably improved.

Freshman Danielle Borges saw action in Jelley's spot, and played remarkably well, as she was consistently around the URI goal.

UMass' next game is in prime time, as they play at 7 p.m. on Thursday at Boston University.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THE LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND

VOLUME CI ISSUE35 TUESDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1991

Students protest Town's plans for kegs

Task Force suggests keg licensing to combat noise

By MORGAN BITTON
Collegian Staff

The Town of Amherst Select Board agreed last night to review suggestions made by the Keg Policy Task Force, which would place regulations, policies and restrictions on the purchase of kegs of beer.

Chairperson of the task force, Linda Smith, explained at the meeting held at the Bangs Community Center that the recommended licenses, which must be approved by the chief of police, are aimed at combating the drunkness and noise that has plagued many "student neighborhoods" in Amherst.

"We're trying to make this process as simple as possible, a person picks up an application and sees the chief of police, then goes up to the Town Hall, then if you can delegate it goes to the Town Selectman," said Smith.

Applications would be made available at the Town Hall and the police station, she said.

According to Task Force recommendations, licenses would be issued for short-term dates, a few days, and long-term licenses — a one year license — would be granted by the licensee and the chief of police. Licensees must be at least 21 years of age and only one keg may be kept on the premises at a time.

The licenses would be issued at no charge, but may become invalid if a noise violation or any violation is issued in conjunction with the Massachusetts laws controlling alcohol, according to Task Force recommendations.

The crowd gathered at the meeting started at about 25, but quickly rose to more than 50, as students from the University of Massachusetts rallying and chanting from a march organized by the Student Government Association joined the meeting. Observers estimated that 80 students walked from UMass to the town.

Marchers screaming, "Hey, hey, ho, ho keg law's have got to go," quickly joined the meeting when the issue of keg policy recommendation were addressed.

Students present complained about the alcohol restrictions on campus and in the town. Commuter Area President Jennifer Wood explained to the board "the parties aren't

CONTINUED ON PAGE 4

Collegian photo by Jeff Egan

Speaker of the Student Government Association rallies students outside the Bangs Community Center.

Keg law rally turnout 'pathetic'

By MICHAEL LEVY
Collegian Staff

The anti-keg law rally held last night before the Amherst Select Board meeting was met with little interest from students when only 80 people came to show their support.

"Small crowd, lotta noise," said junior art history major Sean P. Cassidy, who came from Sunderland to attend the rally organized by Student Government Association leaders.

The noise came from the many props on hand, which included a bull horn, a drum, fog horns, fireworks and whistles.

The atmosphere was also set by the appearance of a student dressed as Bud Man and SGA Budgets Chair Robert Witherell dressed in a chicken outfit. SGA President David Gagne carried the Massachusetts state flag.

Marching toward Amherst, the crowd shouted "we want kegs," which served as their main vocal point for some time.

"I think it will send business away from Amherst," said junior political science major Mark Coinjowski, "I don't think it is very practical."

Coinjowski said the rally turnout was "dismal."

The law, if passed, would require Amherst residents to obtain a license to legally possess a keg.

As of May Amherst and the surrounding towns have had laws passed which require a tag attached to each keg sold with a record of the buyer, where it is going and a $50 deposit.

Witherell said mid-terms were partially to blame for the low turnout. "People are stressing," he said.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 4

Asian students demand closing of cultural center

By AMY PRENDERGAST
Collegian Staff

Several members of the United Asia Cultural Center will attempt to shut down the center this week as a statement to the University of Massachusetts administration that they will no longer tolerate what they term "racist behavior toward minorities."

The student who has led the action, Alexander Nguyen, said at a press conference at the Knowlton Residence Hall, where the center in located, "We demand from Chancellor Richard O'Brien and the University administration that the funding for the United Asia Cultural Center be allocated instead to the United Asia Resource Center."

The center, which is funded by the University, has been in operation for two years.

Vice Chancellor of Student Affairs Jo-Anne T. Vanin, who received official notification of the demands of the group only yesterday, said she was unsure of what will happen.

"If the students are not satisfied with the center, I am perfectly willing to talk with them about it," she said.

Nguyen, former multicultural affairs editor for the Collegian, said he and supporters of the plan want a response from the administration no later than November 6.

The Learning Resource Center has been given a "closet-space" office, no professional staff and no office machinery such as a photocopier or computers, Nguyen said, and therefore cannot adequately serve Asian students in need of academic support.

"The University has allotted only token funding to the cultural centers. They are used to mask the lack of real support for minorities on campus," said Quynh Dang, also a representative of the center.

"By shutting down the center, we are condemning the University for hypocrisy. The cultural center is being used as a multicultural advertisement," said Nguyen.

Nguyen said they also demand the chancellor and the administration initiate committee consultation on a set of issues which include "radical restructuring of the core curriculum to emphasize genuine issues of multicultural concern, and the aggressive recruitment of Asian faculty, administrators and students"

CONTINUED ON PAGE 3

Inside:

Page 3:
Hatch band allegedly makes homophobic remarks on stage. LBGA members removes them.
Page 7:
Focus page examines depression in college students.
Page 5:
Marc Elliott whines again in this week's installment of Notes from the Campus Center Basement.
Page 12:
UConn beats UMass Women's soccer, 2-0.
Weather
Mostly sunny and mild. Lows in the 60s.

Tower more than tall

Librarians eager to demystify resources

By OLIVIA STEWART-LIBERTY
Collegian Correspondent
and ARI VAIS
Collegian Staff

Welcome to UMass, pal. We've got the third tallest library in the world!

Whether or not this widely spread rumor is true, the Tower Library certainly is tall. Twenty-seven floors of government documents, newspapers, magazines, periodicals, computers and study carrels as well as over two million books occupy the space.

Gordon Fretwell, associate director for public services, describes the most renowned building on campus as "the worst type of building one could conceive of," one more designed for graduate studies rather than book-cataloguing.

(This perhaps gives credence to the other rumor perpetually circulating about the library: that in fact it was designed to be horizontal, but the plans somehow were up-turned.)

There are pros and cons to a library of this size. The resources for any field are ample to say the least, however, location of a particular volume can be frustrating and seemingly hopeless. This is where Joyce Merriam comes in.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 3

Photo by Stuart Pankin

Richard Lashapele, a University of Massachusetts alumnus, receives assistance from reference librarian Ann Wood.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THE LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is a Registered Student Organization of the University of Massachusetts, published each weekday during the calendar semester with an circulation of 19,000.

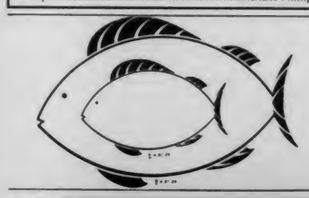
113 CAMPUS CENTER AMHERST, MA 01003
Phone (413) 545-3500 FAX (413) 545-1592

STAFF

Editor in Chief ..... Gayle Lung
Managing Editor ..... Marc Elliott
Editorial Editor ..... Greg Sukiennik
News Editor ..... Preston P. Forman
Sports Editor ..... Tamir Lipton
Arts Editor ..... Paul DeGeorges
Photography Editor ..... Josh Reynolds
Black Affairs Editor ..... Sondra Sutton
Women's Issues Editor ..... Jessame Hannus
Jewish Affairs ..... Felice Cohen, Debra Kriegsman
Multicultural Affairs Editor .....
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Madanmohan Rao
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Trystan Skeigh
Business Manager ..... Randee Pastel
Advertising Manager ..... Dena Haselkorn
Finance Manager ..... Jeff Weiner
Circulation Manager ..... Jim Winterbottom
Subscriptions Manager ..... Stacy Rogers
Promotions Manager ..... Scott Macey
Production Manager ..... Terry Starmer
Day Graphics Manager ..... Jenn Burns

PROFESSIONAL STAFF

Business ..... Brian Harrington, Lori Black, Maureen Majerowski
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips



Correction

Due to a reporting error, the Collegian incorrectly reported the votes of the presidents of the five area governments concerning the Housing Services proposal for a $200 room assignment fee. Southwest Area Government president Dennis Crowley voted against the proposal and Northeast president Ellen Grossman abstained.

The Collegian regrets the error.

Women's Forum

Wednesday, Oct. 23:

Lecture — "Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues: Coming Out/Being Out," a lecture by Felice Yeskel will take place from 12:15-1:30 p.m. in Campus Center room 804-808. The lecture is sponsored by the Women's Studies Department's Brown Bag Series.

Thursday, Oct. 24:

Reading — Katherine Weber and Joan Ackerman will read their work from Uncommon Waters at 8 p.m. at the Odyssey Bookshop in South Hadley. Uncommon Waters is an anthology featuring stories, poems and essays by women about fishing.

RÉSUMÉS
Copy Cat Print Shop
• Great Service • Great Prices •
228 Triangle St. • Amherst • 549-3840

ROLL UPS
SANDWICH SHOP
331 Russell St., Rt. 9 Hadley
(next to Dunkin Donuts)
586-8255
COUPON
FREE! SANDWICH FREE!
Buy One Sandwich, Get One FREE
(Lower Priced Sandwich Is Free)
Not Valid In Conjunction With Other Offers
CALL AHEAD FOR FAST SERVICE
One Coupon Per Person Per Order Please Expires 10/31/91

FRANK SANTOS
Rated R
Hynotist-Humorist
Nov. 16th
1st Show 5:30
General Audience
2nd Show 9:30
Adults Only
HuKeLau
705 Memorial Dr.
Chicopee • 593-5222
Tickets on Sale Now!

THE MOST IMPORTANT CAREER STEP YOU EVER TAKE MAY START IN SENEGAL

Or in any of over 70 developing countries in Asia, Africa, Latin America, or Central Europe. Your first job after graduation should offer more than just a paycheck. In the Peace Corps, you'll broaden your world view and your horizons for the future. You'll learn a new language...live in a different culture... develop professional skills...and meet challenges far greater than those you might be offered in a starting position in the U.S.

Peace Corps is looking for people from many disciplines— education, health, the environment, agriculture, community development, engineering, the sciences, and more. With a degree or experience in these fields, you may find that Peace Corps will be able to use your skills like no other employer you're considering. And equip you with the type of experience valued by international firms, government agencies, and private industry and graduate school programs.

PEACE CORPS

UMASS Peace Corps recruiters Tom Akin and Celeste Landon will soon be hosting several activities. Majors in science, math, civil engineering, health, elementary or special education, English, forestry, agriculture, and business are encouraged to attend. Find out how you can qualify.

INFO SEMINARS
Thursday, Oct. 24, 7:30 pm.* 203 Holdsworth Hall
Or call the UMASS Peace Corps Office: 545-2105, or stop by 12 Draper Hall

Halloween Headquarters
GREASE PAINTS • HANDS •
FEET • WITCHES' HATS & BROOMS • WIGS •
MOUSTACHES • BEARDS • NOSES • FANGS •
TEETH • TOOTH BLACK-OUT
NORTHAMPTON HALLOWEEN CENTER
25 State Street • 584-5006
10 Minutes From UMass
LARGE ASSORTMENT OF MASKS TO CHOOSE FROM
Call for extended Haloween hours
H.L. CHILDS & SON
Open Daily and Saturday 9:00am-5:15pm. Thursdays 'til 8:00pm
Check Our LOW Prices

"To be effective, legal education must be a shared enterprise."

Stephanie Willen
Associate Dean & Director of Admissions
A.B., Mount Holyoke College, 1985

Dean Willen served Western New England College School of Law as assistant director of admissions before her current appointment. A graduate of Mount Holyoke College, she brings to her position strong management skills and significant human resources experience gained during her previous posts with a nationally prominent insurance company, as well as her tenure as a labor relations aide with a state employees union.

Meet with Dean Willen to learn more about our Law School, where faculty and students work together toward a common goal.
Graduate School Day, Wednesday, Oct. 23
10:00 AM - 3:00 PM, Campus Center Auditorium
We invite applications from all persons regardless of race, gender, sexual preference, or handicap.

School of Law
Western New England College
1215 Wilbraham Road Springfield, MA 01119-2689 413-782-1406

Local

University community mourns death of Professor Booth, 61

University of Massachusetts political science professor David Booth, 61, died Sunday night at his home in Pelham.

Booth, a specialist in state and urban politics as well as the politics of local communities, taught at the University since 1967.

"David has been a close friend and colleague for more than 20 years," said Provost Glen Gordon, also a faculty member in the political science department.

"He represents the very best in what we expect a university citizen to be. His legacy is everywhere," Gordon said. "I shall never go to the Faculty Senate or the Faculty Club without thinking of him and reflecting upon his extraordinary contributions to our professional and personal lives."

Political Science chairperson George Sulzner said Booth played a significant role in numerous aspects of University life.

"[Booth] was a unique person on the faculty, in terms of his commitment to the well-being of the University and to his students," Sulzner said. "He spent countless hours teaching the best courses he could teach, and countless hours trying to make the University a better place.

"He had a willingness to take on any job, no matter how onerous," Sulzner said.

One of Booth's positions was chairing the Faculty Senate Priorities Committee, with the job of re-allocatting the University's dwindling resources. Booth served four terms on the Faculty Senate.

Booth was educated at Wycliffe College and the London School of Economics, both in England. He received a master's degree at the University of Virginia at Charlottesville in foreign affairs and a doctorate in political science.

At Virginia, Booth was a member of the national honor society Phi Beta Kappa.

Booth began his teaching career at Vanderbilt University in Nashville, Tennessee, and then moved on to Michigan State University in East Lansing and the University of Kentucky in Lexington.

He became a member of the American Political Science Association and the Southern Political Science Association.

Among the numerous honors Booth won, he was awarded the Chancellor's Medal for Distinguished Public Service at the University of Massachusetts in 1989 and the Distinguished Kentucky Educator at the University of Kentucky in 1966. He was president of the Faculty Club at the University of Massachusetts for five years.

Booth was born in 1930 in London, and was a permanent resident of the United States. He is survived by his wife, Alberta, and their four children.

■ library

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

Merriam is one of 10 reference librarians in the Tower Library. Her job is to make the place seem less towering by helping students to find what they need.

No matter how obscure, or how basic the question may be, she and her collegues say don't hesitate to approach the reference desk. Joyce Merriam dispels frustrations and can answer just about any question — she's been there for 30 years.

Merriam said she is never annoyed by students who come straight to her without first trying to find the material on their own.

"If anyone feels they need some assistance, that's it — we're part of the index systems. We try to put signs up to answer some of the commonly asked directional questions," she said. "Some people see those, others are more accustomed to just asking somebody who appears to be on the staff and that's fine too, as long as ultimately they arrive at the right place."

Merriam was a librarian for several years before getting her professional degree in library arts from the University of Rhode Island. While she holds a master's degree in history, Merriam and the other reference librarians said they adopt a generalist approach behind the desk — they know a little bit about everything.

As the computerization of the library's data continues, Merriam sees the card catalogue completely disappearing. She will still be here though, behind the reference desk, to assist people with their research.

"Many students use only reserved readings, and since they don't have to do projects requiring expanding on their own knowledge of a subject, they don't feel the need to come here, unfortunately.

"I think librarians feel that it's part of your college experience to learn how to seek out information on your own. You need to learn something about how to follow up on the literature in your chosen field. That's something you don't learn about in your classes. That's something we can teach you."

Steve Shraison, director of the microfilm department, was eager to provide some information about another whole world left unexplored by many within the library.

"I would say it's the biggest department in the library," Shraison said, "We've got more stuff in here than all the rest of the library put together."

The collection includes every London Times ever printed, all the British parliamentary papers dating back to 1651, the New York Times since 1851 and all editions of the Boston Globe.

Shraison and his staff are there to show the approximately 1.8 million volumes captured upon microfilm, including geneology material, every phonebook in the country, college catalogues (360,000 separate education documents), State Department papers, FBI reports, the Jefferson papers and all the dissertations ever written at the University.

"We have a huge collection of women's materials, women writers' diaries and things from suffrage movement," said Shraison.

Despite the fact that the job entails "less money and more pressure" according to Shraison, he much prefers it to working in circulation, where he had been previously for nine years.

Shraison regrets the budget cuts saying that it does not enable him to provide the level of service to students which he would hope.

"We should be able to provide a level of service where you can come in and get what you want without any hassle," he said.

It is no wonder that librarians have the same status as professors at UMass. There are 25 professional librarians, between 50 and 60 classified staff and a few-hundred student workers employed to make the Tower Library a vital facility rather than something to avoid.

Collegian photo by Jeff Egan

ENJOYING THE SUN— Freshmen Jack Daniels Gozzi (r), Kelly Driscoll, Denise Goren, and senior Rob Ratkiewicz, hang out on Orchard Hill enjoying the autumn sun and a few tunes.

Band pulled off stage at the Hatch

By DAVID MASSEY
Collegian Staff

It was not a good night for the band Slant 6 and the Jumpstarts, who played the Hatch on Friday night. While several women were dancing to one of their numbers, witnesses say the singer of the band yelled: "What is this, a faggots' dance? Why aren't the guys dancing with the girls?"

Little did the band realize that a dance was being held upstairs in the Bluewall, sponsored by the Lesbian Bisexual Gay Association — an organization historically sensitive to any alleged homophobic statements uttered on campus.

University of Massachusetts sophomore Pauline Kelly had just come from the LBGA dance and was having a drink with some friends in the Hatch when she heard the remark.

"I don't think it's right for anyone to stand up in public and make homophobic and sexist comments," Kelly said.

Aine Duffy, a UMass junior who was with Kelly, said, "I just thought there's no getting away with that. It was pretty homophobic."

The band could not be reached for comment.

Kelly and Duffy proceeded to the Bluewall to inform those at the dance what the band had said. "I thought we should make some sort of demonstration," Kelly said.

"Basically we filled up the space, said we were not going to take this, made our presence known, and probably the band was pretty scared that the whole space was filled with queers."
— Ali Woolwich, social chair of the LBGA.

Ali Woolwich, the social chair for the LBGA and former Collegian gay, lesbian, bisexual issues editor, was at the Bluewall at the time. After she heard from Kelly and Duffy the remarks, she helped initiate a march of the dancers to the Hatch.

Witnesses estimated between 50 to 100 proceeded from the BlueWall to the Hatch.

As people flooded the previously empty dance floor, Woolwich said she grabbed the singer's microphone and shouted, "Are we going to take homophobia?"

Woolwich said the crowd then yelled "no!" as the band played on for a few more minutes.

"Basically we filled up the space, said we were not going to take this, made our presence known, and probably the band was pretty scared that the whole space was filled with queers," Woolwich said.

Kelly said no damage was done to any equipment. "It was not a violent confrontation. It was merely a demonstration."

Woolwich said the band denied that they had uttered the remark and acted "extremely rude and extremely intoxicated."

Director of the Campus Center William Harris said the University has a policy that denies any band permission to play that has previously expressed homophobic, racist or sexist remarks.

Although he was not aware of details of this incident, he said, "There's no problem with that. They won't be invited again. We don't have to put up with insensitive remarks."

■ United Asia Cultural Center

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

Nguyen said his group also demands increased vigilance against all forms of racial harassment, and the introduction of an academic program in Asian and Asian-American studies. A certificate program in Asian Studies is available at the University.

"The chancellor and administration shall respond to these demands with a set of practical proposals by no later than February 15, 1992," Nguyen said.

Representatives from the Latino American Center and the Graduate Student Senate joined the Asian center panel to voice their support for the closing of the center.

Loyda Guzman from the Latino American Center said, "We can no longer tolerate the administration's attitude toward students of color. We will be talking with our community and seeking a way to address these issues as well."

Karen Adkins of the Graduate Student Senate said, "Many White students practice passive racism on this campus. We can't simply assume diversity will exist. We all have to put pressure on the administration."

Coordinator of Indian Student Affairs Buddy Gwin said, "We will not be a part of this neo-colonialistic university. We are on the front of the University brochures, but on the last page of the budget."

Sophomore Cinamon Blair voiced her concerns about her own community's cultural center.

"If they shut down the Asian Cultural Center, you know the next one in line is the Afro-American Center. Third World students should come together and support each other," she said.

■ meeting

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

going to stop just because kegs aren't readily available, 21 or not we're still going to drink."

One Amherst resident complained of noise in residential areas, "that causes a lot of people to think that students aren't very pleasant, the town wants to do something to protect the people that's what this is all about."

Student Trustee Kevin Newnan told the board that keg licensing is not going to stop kegs from being bought. "Student partying is going to happen in every college town, people will travel as far as New York as I've heard."

After many students voiced their doubts about keg license policies, Select Board member Elisa Campbell said, "we're not breaking down the parties we're just making a new process of getting kegs."

■ keg rally

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

Sophomore communications major Stephen Cafferky was angry about the legality of the new law and said he believed it would not hold up in the Supreme Court.

"The town [Amherst] has no right to do this," he said.

Cafferky also said he felt town politicians should pay attention to student issues. He felt this would help a local politician.

Chris Plachta, a sophomore engineering major, thought differently. He said the student turnout at the rally was "really pathetic."

"Everyone is complaining but not doing anything," he said.

"Now the town is going to say, 'see, nobody cares,'" Plachta added.

The anti-keg law rally grew more creative as time wore on. The drum was used to imitate the Minuteman marching band cheer, "fight fight fight," with the substituted lyrics of "keg keg keg."

Members of the crowd borrowed a protest favorite singing, "All we are saying is give kegs a chance."

The crowd walked up Fearing Street and after a brief stop in front of the Alpha Theta Gamma house went toward Amherst center. Before reaching the destination, the group decided to return to Southwest Residential Area to gather more support.

The result was a drop in numbers. As the crowd headed back up Fearing Street again, there were only 40 people. They were joined later by about 15 others as they headed to the Select Board meeting.

DOMINO'S PIZZA
VISA
U-MASS
256-8911
Mt. Holyoke
535-1111
We Accept
Competetors
Coupons
30¢ PIZZA
ORDER ANY TWO TOPPING LARGE PIZZA GET MEDIUM 1 TOPPING PIZZA FOR 30¢
1.99 PIZZA
BUY ANY LARGE PIZZA GET 2ND ONE FOR $1.99
BUY ANY LARGE PIZZA
for the price of a small Pizza

WANTED:
USED MAC's
WE BUY YOUR USED MAC EQUIPMENT FOR TOP DOLLAR. CASH! WE SELL REFURBISHED MAC's AT DISCOUNT! CALL FOR QUOTE.
(800) 545-2313
RENTEX INC. (617) 423-5567

LOW, LOW PRICE
YANKEE
DISCOUNT OIL
NORTHAMPTON · HOLYOKE
584-4112 · 535-1888

ATTENTION ALL BANDS!!!!
ROCK SOUTHWEST at the ANNUAL SOUTHWEST 12TH ANNUAL BATTLE OF THE BANDS
YO!
Saturday November 2, 1991 • Southwest Horseshoe
APPLICATIONS NOW AVAILABLE
(and due 10/23 5:00pm)
At the SWAG Office
Southside Room Hampden Student Center
Or Call the SWAG Office • 545-0960 for More Information
Another Southwest Area Government Production

Octoberfest '91
Thursday
October 24th
6 pm-Close
featuring
SPATEN
OKTOBERFESTBIER
MÜNCHEN
On Draft
14 oz. Octoberfest Bierstube Mugs
German Style Pizza, Knockwurst & Bratwurst
Authentic 6 Piece German Band in Costume
ALL AGES WELCOME
Positive I.D. required for Hatch Bar Area
at the hatch

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions on this page are those of the individual writer or cartoonist, and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian or the University unless otherwise noted.

Examples illustrate the nature of the "New World Order"

Some reflections on the "New World Order."

Everyone has heard of this "New World Order" thing, but it's never exactly defined; we never know precisely what it is, who it affects, and why it exists. No thanks to the mainstream press, we are left in the political dark. Therefore I'd like to bring a small pinpoint of light to bear on the situation through two recent examples: the U.S. invasion of Iraq, and even fresher in the public mind, the nomination of Clarence Thomas to the Supreme Court.

Case 1: The U.S. invasion of Iraq, more appropriately known as "Operation Desert Storm."

Unlike past acts of U.S. imperialist aggression, Desert Storm was not cast primarily in terms of "defending democracy" or "protecting American lives." Rather, Bush made it obvious at the outset that the war was designed to prevent Iraq from controlling oil reserves that more properly, in his mind, belonged to a conglomeration of Western multinational capital and a Saudi-controlled OPEC.

Painting Saddam Hussein out to be a "neo-Hitler," even though the comparison was ridiculous, only fanned the flames of jingoistic bloodlust among certain parts of the U.S. population. Blatantly racist ditties on numerous top-40 radio stations calling Hussein, and by implication any Arab, "towel head," and "Middle East beast," are merely par for the course in today's U.S. of A.

And how accurate are those nifty little population polls, where newspapers feel perfectly legitimate in passing off the opinions of 500 "randomly selected" adults as representative of the entire nation? If we did choose to use such data, though, the majority of U.S. Americans in fact opposed the use of force in Iraq before the massacre began. (This the mainstream press conveniently forgot once the carnage that would eventually claim the lives of over 200,000 Iraqis was in full swing.)

Certain liberals in Congress felt similarly, preferring instead the soft imperialism of sanctions — themselves legally considered an act of war — to the more "uncomfortable" choice of combat. Always compromising, always playing into the hands of the conservatives: that's what our Democratic "leaders" do.

Roger Long

An anonymous Pentagon official actually revealed some truth about the slaughter (which is why he remained anonymous!). When asked why journalists weren't given free run of the combat zone like they were in Vietnam, he replied, "If we let people see that kind of thing, there would never again be any war."

Case 2: The Clarence Thomas nomination. Even though there was pretty clear evidence that she had been sexually harassed by Thomas, Anita Hill — a Republican supporter of [Robert] Bork's nomination to the Court — was dragged through the mud once again and subjected to every conceivable tactic historically used to discredit female victims of assault. After Sen. Alan Spector decried sexual harassment as "criminal" and "deplorable," he and his Republican buddies proceeded to mercilessly victimize Hill — this time, however, in front of millions of witnesses.

Despite a corroborating phone-transcribed statement by another woman, Angela Wright, who claimed to have been harassed by Thomas, along with written testimony from a man who worked with Thomas at Equal Employment Opportunity Commission and affirmed it was commonplace for young Black women to be viewed as "sexual objects" there, neither of these individuals was subpoenaed by the Judiciary Committee. The Democrats' excuse? "Lack of time" (see the New York Times, Oct. 15). With generous aid from the Democrats, Bush's "New World Order" on the Supreme Court is now complete.

In 1980, a former advisor to Jimmy Carter, Bertram Gross, wrote a book entitled Friendly Fascism. His basic theme was that the international ruling class had learned a lesson from World War II. Fascism would not again gush wildly into power as it had in Hitler's Germany, but in times of economic crisis could arise in a slicker, more subtle way: in the U.S., through the fake rhetorical mechanisms of "freedom," "democracy," and "individual liberty." In its attacks on unions, the reproductive rights of women, its barbaric aggressions against the third world governments and peoples who don't toe the U.S. political-economic line, the U.S. ruling class is steadily and methodically laying the foundations for a new type of fascism, right under our very noses. Wake up and smell the coffee, because their order — the "New World Order" — is here.

Roger Long is a UMass student

Notes from the basement

Boy the weeks are flying now! I almost didn't have enough time to think up some more gibberish. . . almost.

An acquaintance of mine asked me why I decided to be a "whining columnist that's always complaining that he doesn't get enough mail" when I was a "journalist doing real news" last semester. Well it's no secret. It's just easier to whine and complain than to come up with facts and that's that. Ask anybody.

Marc Elliott

It slices! It dices! You can cut through a tin can with it and it will still slice tomatoes with ease! It's the amazing Super-Chancellor! Budget too big? No problem! He'll have it down to size in no time! Labor troubles? No problem! Just slice and dice for a nice little bit of sauerkraut! The Super-Chancellor! For all of your recessionary needs!

Oliver North told the nation this weekend that he thinks Reagan knew everything all along. Boy, what a revelation. We all know how much North cares about this country. He cares so much that he decided to sit on this little tidbit until he could write a book. Cool. Public Service man, it pays.

I reiterate. If it weren't for UMass, the town of Amherst would be farmland.

It's Graffiti of the Week, dammit! Defacement of the Decade! Somewhere in the halls of Herter exists this little ditty: "Plan: 1. go up in balloon. 2. drop boulder on Road Runner."

Some things deserve a second chance, but why make a sequel for House Party?

Now this will probably be the only time you'll ever hear me encourage attendance at rallies. Most rallies in the Amherst area are whiny little events that will never do any good whatsoever. President Bush will never go before Congress and announce: "Well, I'm gonna pack it in now and go back to Maine to fish. Danny here'll be taking over. I don't want to do this but really, I just have to after that UMass student burned that candle in front of the Student Union the other day." Please. On the other hand, this whole keg thing is fine by me. Three cheers to everyone that participated in the keg rally at Select Board yesterday.

The mailbag brings us a little note from "Elizabeth" (she didn't leave her last name so I'm going to assume she's really important and famous 'cause important and famous people read this column. Didn't you know that?) Well, Elizabeth wanted to let me in on the message in her fortune cookie the other day because it's really peachy keen and too cool for cucumbers. (It doesn't really count as graffiti because it was written inside her food, which she ingested and digested and that's gross.) "If all of our wishes were gratified, many of our dreams would be destroyed." Whoa.

By the way Elizabeth, since I'm such a fan of Simon and Garfunkel I'm going to be a bridge over troubled water for Halloween.

The newest plan to help students strapped for cash by the recession: Adopt a College Student. Rich folks would send me cash and I would write them letters that make them feel all warm inside. We could get Sally Struthers to do the commercials.

Well, that just about wraps it up this week. So if you think I'm an ignorant little piece of rotting banana peel or if you have a neat-o Graffiti of the Week or just plain want to say something, please, whine, send me a letter. Address it to Marc Elliott, piece of garbage, Collegian, right next to the Index, Campus Center.

Until next week, remember, "It takes more than talent Dad. It takes training. . ."

Marc Elliot never ever whines except for Collegian columns

Thinking of ending it all? Don't

A friend of mine tried to kill himself Saturday night. Yeah, he really did. He took a lot of pills and went for a walk. What a waste of sleeping pills or of laxatives. He never did know what he took. What a waste!

What if an old girlfriend was knocking at his door this moment? What if he's already won $10 million? What about his dream of sailing away to Margaritaville, "with a bottle of rum and a lime?" And what about me. What about me!

Funny thing about death is that you always equate it with me. When will death come to me? How will their death affect me?

You may have known him while he attended UMass. He went to parties, crammed for exams, searched for his dreamgirl. Kind of like you and me. If you didn't meet him, I'm sorry, you would have loved him. I did.

His life got tough and he sought a solution. He called me soon after his proposal with death and told me not to tell. He told me he trusted me and loved me. He told me a lot of things, like where his poetry was in his room, that he was walking to somewhere no one would find him.

I cursed and punched the walls nearest me but on the phone was nothing but civil and calm. He could have called me before! And now I await a call. I've no idea of his condition. His friends all await an answer, and before this diatribe bores those who had a good weekend, I just want to say don't. Don't.

Dana L. Forrar
Northeast

Harassment means domination

The term has been on the tip of everyone's tongue lately. Johnny Carson is making jokes about it. It made a charming subtext on an episode of "The Simpsons" and I can't wait to see what "Saturday Night Live" comes up with. The term is "sexual harassment." We've heard about it many times this past week, but has our understanding of it been enlightened?

Elizabeth Christopher

I, too, have had my fill of debates over the Thomas hearings and have no personal desire to put yet another opinion about the injustice done to a particular individual in print. I have, however, attempted to shed some light on the injustice women have been complaining about.

What is this injustice? An awful lot of you out there have no idea. I suppose I can't blame you. The vague term seems to fall just short of "abuse" and is a bit more troubling than a scene from Benny Hill, has remained undefined. It jumped out and surprised us and by the time we finally figured out just what was the PC way to pronounce "harassment," the evening news was featuring another restaurant massacre.

"I guess you just better watch what you say around the girls," said one enlightened barfly on a certain early evening TV news broadcast. If "girls" had been referring to kindergarten children, who at a fragile age are easily impressionable, I would have whole-heartedly agreed. But women are neither fragile nor easily impressionable.

We will continue to have intelligent discussions on politics, social issues and sex. We will continue to joke around about movies, sports, and yes, sex. Sexual harassment has nothing to do with communicating about sex. Sexual harassment has everything to do with domination and control.

The sexual harasser is the one who strips a woman of every identity beyond the physical. The sexual harasser is the one that reminds a woman that she is vulnerable to rape.

Who are the sexually harassed? They are the secretaries forced to bear the breaths of their male bosses down their necks. They are every woman who has ever been gawked at in the street and taunted by unseen voices. They are the targets of truck drivers' horns. They are school girls who feel the unwelcome hand of a classmate under their shorts. They are young children forced to bear witness to a naked man in a trench coat.

The violators are countless, the victims, every female.

Why do women bear this treatment? Perhaps it's for the same reason that women continue to walk down public streets, to board public buses, to go to school and to live with their families. Sexual harassment is a part of a female's daily life so much that sometimes we fail to recognize it as just that: harassment. But our experiences as women can change, as long as the lines of communication between men and women remain open. Contrary to what the above quote indicated, we must not "watch" what we say, only listen to what we are saying.

Elizabeth Christopher is a Collegian correspondent

Arts & Living

Jorma to perform a "super" intimate show

By DAVID DEMERJIAN
Collegian Correspondent

When Jorma Kaukonen is asked what mark he thinks he has made on the music industry, he answers simply enough: "I just want to be remembered as a good performer." This straightforward, relaxed attitude is reflected in Kaukonen's music, a combination of folk and blues that has made him a favorite with audiences for over 25 years.

As one of the founders of the 1960's supergroup Jefferson Airplane, and a long time member of the folk-blues ensemble Hot Tuna, Jorma has played in almost every kind of setting, from huge arenas holding thousands of people, to small, smoky cafes and taverns. When asked which performance situation he prefers, he says: "from a strictly financial standpoint, I suppose the big arenas are better, you get the chance to make much more money. I myself have always preferred smaller situations. A small club allows you to be more intimate with your audience, you can improvise and experiment in ways that just aren't possible in a larger venue."

Experimentation is something that Kaukonen has done much of during his 25 years in the music industry. A complete collection of his work includes everything from the angry rock and roll of Jefferson Airplane to the country blues of Hot Tuna to the pure acoustic folk of his early solo albums. Despite his work in these many areas of music, Jorma does not feel that he has "evolved" musically: "I really don't think that my style has changed all that much. Of course, I am a better guitarist than I was when I started out, but that comes to be expected after 25 years of playing!"

Kaukonen has become so good at the guitar in fact, that he recently created a tape which instructs people on how to play. "The tape is something that I have wanted to do for a long time," he says, "it was a fun thing to work on and it allowed me to share what I have learned with others." Jorma also hopes to someday establish a guitar summer camp for youngsters at his 100 acre farm in Ohio.

When asked about his future plans, Kaukonen says: "If all goes well, I should be releasing both a Hot Tuna album and a solo album in the next year. I had hoped to have the solo album out by now, but things never move as quickly as you'd like them to." Kaukonen is also planning to head to California after his tour, to help out with a Jefferson Airplane box set which is due out in April.

Kaukonen is not supporting a new album on his current tour, but is performing because he "loves to play", and considers it a recreational activity.

Jorma Kaukonen will be performing at the Iron Horse on Tuesday, Oct. 22, at 7 and 10 p.m.

Inspired dance!

By OLIVIA STEWART-LIBERTY
Collegian Correspondent

The Tel Aviv based Batsheva Dance Company will perform tonight at 8 p.m. at The Concert Hall in FAC

This innovative and diverse troupe has been described by The New York Times as an "invigorating blend of the light airborne attack of ballet and the weighted, emphatic thrust of modern dance" — a blending of fine technique with vivid aesthetics.

Internationally respected, the company was formed in 1974 by Martha Graham, under whose zealous direction the company performed, developing a reputation of vitality and great energy.

Since 1974, the company has attracted many well-known choreographers and artists. An international diversity resulted from the combination of traditional Israel and innovative daring.

Today the company performs under the artistic direction of Ohad Naharin, choreographer, dancer and creator.

Born in Israel, Naharin came to the United States to join the Batsheva Dance Company as a dancer. He later experienced the diversities of other American modern dance companies, going on to found his own internationally recognized troupe.

Last year Naharin was appointed Artistic Director to the Batsheva Dance Company.

The set tonight is to open with extracts from his creation KYR, commissioned in 1990 by the Israel Festival in Jerusalem, a combination of dance and theatre, the silent symmetry of form with "alternative rock".

AMHERST CINEMA
Now Playing
PARIS IS BURNING
Showtimes:
Fri - Sun
7:30pm & 9pm
Mon-Thurs
One show at 7:30pm
Adults $4.00
Student w valid I.D. $3.00

TONIGHT, OCTOBER 22

"VASTLY ENTERTAINING, FUNNY, HARROWING AND WONDROUSLY ALIVE!"
A SPIKE LEE JOINT
JUNGLE FEVER
R
8:30PM & 11:00PM
MAHAR AUDITORIUM
SPONSORED BY SYLVAN AREA GOV'T

Discover Your Career In Natural Medicine.
ANNUAL FIVE-COLLEGE GRADUATE & PROFESSIONAL SCHOOL DAYS
WEDNESDAY 10/23
MATHER CAREER CENTER
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS
Meet Dr. John Furlong, Bastyr College N.D. alumnus. He'll be on campus with answers to your questions about becoming a naturopathic physician, acupuncturist or nutritionist. Seattle's Bastyr College offers accredited natural health science degree programs. Curricula include botanical medicine, homeopathy, nutrition, Oriental medicine, physiotherapy, counseling, and natural childbirth. Financial aid is available.
BASTYR COLLEGE
NATURAL HEALTH SCIENCES
144 NE 54th Street
Seattle WA 98105
206/523-9585

EXPERIENCE THE CHALLENGE OF THE UMASS RESIDENCE ASSISTANT!
A limited number of positions are available for next semester.
Applications are available in cluster offices now!
Applications are due November 8 by 5:00pm to either Johnson or Thoreau clusters only.
APPLY TODAY!

DELANO'S
57 North Pleasant Street
253-5141
DON'T FORGET: SUNDAY NIGHTS
IT'S SETTIE and the ACOUSTIC WAVE LIVE!
TUESDAY is TACO TUESDAY!!!
free tacos 9-???
WEDNESDAY IS WEDNESDAY WINGS!!!
free buffalo wings 9-???
Beer of the Month: Rolling Rock Bottles $1.50
Drink of the Week: Seabreeze $1.75
* Keep in mind that Delano's offers Great weekly Lunch &Dinner Specials.

Make the Grade at
Papa Gino's
PIZZA, PASTA & MORE
TUESDAY
ALL YOU CAN EAT PIZZA FEAST
ONLY $4.25 PER PERSON
• Pizza & Salad Bar
• Choice of 3 Varieties of Pizza
WEDNESDAY
ALL YOU CAN EAT PASTA FEAST
(Spaghetti or Ziti)
With Meatballs $3.69 No Refills on Meatballs
ONLY $2.55 PER PERSON
* Not good on take-out
PAPA GINO'S UNIVERSITY
Mts. Farms. Mall
Rt. 9, Russell St.
Hadley, MA
584-0220

Focus

Depression shouldn't ruin your life

By BROOKE C. WHEELER
Collegian Staff

Depression affects about one in 10 Americans at some point in their lives, according to the National Institute of Mental Health. Sometimes people call it "the blues" or "being down," but when the feelings linger for more than a few weeks, it could be more than just a "low time." It could be clinical depression.

When recognized and diagnosed, clinical depression can be successfully and effectively treated. Unfortunately, the very nature of depression — the feelings of helplessness, hopelessness and worthlessness — keep the depressed person from seeking help. Many people learn to live with depression.

They can wake up in the morning, go to classes or work, spend time with friends, and accept their depression as the way they are. They don't know that there is a better way to feel and they are not motivated to get treatment. Without any kind of treatment, people can spend a lifetime feeling miserable.

Karen, a UMass junior, remembers herself as feeling "very depressed, unstable and eventually suicidal" during her first semester at school. She lost her appetite, slept through the day and stopped going to classes. She hadn't made much effort to make friends and her roommate finally insisted she get some help.

"It took tremendous strength and energy to finally tell my parents how miserable I was," she said. "They wanted me to come home, but I felt that wasn't the right thing to do."

On her parents insistence, Karen began seeing a clinical psychotherapist three times a week. After about a month and a half of regular treatment, she said she felt markedly better.

"It started very slowly, but eventually I stopped dreading each new day," she recalls. "I gradually resumed normal activities, and I think I can actually call myself a happy person now."

A college environment can be very conducive to depression. A large, impersonal campus, many strange faces, new and sometimes unpleasant living arrangements, difficult class schedules that demand new levels of intense work — all these factors can contribute to the onset of depression.

However, these things usually do not in themselves cause clinical depression, according to Bonnie R. Strickland, a University psychology professor and former president of the American Psychological Association.

According to Strickland, they can trigger a symptomatic episode of depression rooted in emotional baggage acquired over time previous to college.

"It really depends on one's personal history. People don't usually become seriously depressed out of the blue in college," she says. "Sexual abuse, eating disorders, family problems and past traumas can set off a depressive episode when their environment changes so dramatically and they have to deal with issues of separation from their family."

Sometimes however, high levels of stress caused by the college environment can trigger chemical and biological problems that lead to feelings of depression.

"The depression can come on quite abruptly," says professor Strickland. "The person may never have experienced depression symptoms at all before."

Do you suspect that a friend, or even yourself, may be clinically depressed? These are the symptoms of depression as defined by the NIMH:

- A persistent sad, anxious or "empty" mood
- Feelings of hopelessness or pessimism
- Feelings of guilt, worthlessness or helplessness
- Loss of interest or pleasure in ordinary activities, including sex
- Insomnia, early morning waking or oversleeping
- Loss of appetite and weight or weight gain
- Decreased energy, fatigue or being "slowed down"
- Thoughts of death or suicide and/or suicide attempts
- Restlessness, irritability
- Difficulty concentrating, remembering or making decisions

If four or more of these symptoms persist for longer than two weeks or interfere with daily functioning, professional treatment is recommended, according to the NIMH. Sometimes depressive disorders can also manifest themselves as persistent physical symptoms that do not respond to treatment, such as chronic recurring headaches, digestive disorders and other similar types of pain.

The most common type of treatment for depression is psychotherapy. Psychotherapy involves an interested but objective person (the therapist) and the use of talking to define and resolve problems. Short-term therapy for clinical depression is usually six months or less, but generally improvement occurs after about one month of treatment, according to the NIMH.

Depression doesn't have to ruin a person's life. A chronic "down" mood shouldn't be accepted as a part of one's personality. Pessimism, insomnia, restlessness and fatigue might be more than just a "phase" someone is going through. Clinical depression doesn't go away by itself, and effective treatment is readily available.

Some college grads mourn identity loss

By BROOKE C. WHEELER
Collegian Staff

College graduation is typically thought of as a time of celebration, change and new horizons. But for some, graduating can turn out to be a traumatic and emotionally debilitating experience.

"I felt as though someone had shaken me and just thrown me up in the air," said Lisa, who graduated this past spring from Rutgers University in New Jersey. "I had no job, I was no longer a student, and I didn't know what I really wanted to be doing. I was out in the "real world" with no identity."

A college graduate can sometimes suffer from the same type and severity of depression as a widowed spouse, according to Anne C. Berkley, a New Jersey psychotherapist whose practice is limited to young adults.

"There is such a drastic change, such an incredible anticlimax, and many people feel after graduation that the best years of their life just ended," says Berkley.

Berkley refers to college graduation as a "life event" — one of a series of major events during a person's life that changes it dramatically, such as ending one stage or beginning another. According to Berkley, life events include such things as marriage and divorce, losing a parent, finishing a doctoral thesis, having a child and losing a job.

"Some of my patients say they feel as though they have stepped over the last boundary of childhood, that knowledge of responsibility for life has hit them smack in the chest," says Berkley.

"In addition, they are mourning a loss of identity. They spent four years of their life being part of the nurturing environment of a college community, and all of the sudden they are officially restricted from that environment. They're not a student anymore, and they don't know what to call themselves," she says.

According to Berkley, graduates with jobs lined up or concrete plans experience less depression or none at all.

"Having a job or other plans ready helps facilitate the transition period," she says. "Employment provides identity. This is key to helping alleviate this kind of depression."

Suicide in college community explored

By BROOKE C. WHEELER
Collegian Staff

Each year in the United States approximately 30,000 people commit suicide, according to the National Alliance for the Mentally Ill.

Suicide, for many, is the end of a long process, and often the final symptom of a clinical depressive disorder. However, sometimes all that precedes it is feelings of hopelessness and negative expectations about the future.

Liane, a University of Massachusetts sophomore, says she knows first hand about hopelessness and the damaging effect it has on daily life.

"I never considered myself capable of being so depressed until I came to college," she said. "But after months of stress from being behind in classes, having a job I really couldn't handle, and feeling hopeless about my future, I felt like I was out of control of my life."

Liane said she knew whe ı she began thinking about methods of suicide, even casually, that she needed to talk with someone. She called the Everywoman's Center on campus and they helped refer her to an outside analyst.

"I go just once a week, but my whole outlook has changed," she said. "Talking to someone instead of running around waiting to self-destruct is the difference between changing your life or ruining it."

Many people who kill themselves do so on the first try, officials say. The rate of successful suicides increases with age, but the number of attempted suicides is highest for both sexes in the late teens and early 20s, according to the Department of Health and Human Services — and these people are not beyond help.

Attempted suicide is more often a cry for help rather than a desire to end a life.

A live interactive teleconference called "Suicide: New Hope Through Science — A Campus Perspective" is being presented by the National Alliance for the Mentally Ill on October 29. The program is designed to inform college students, administrators and counseling staff about suicide and the particular vulnerability of a college community.

The program will be transmitted live by satellite from 6 to 8 p.m. on October 29 to colleges and universities that register for it. As of yet, the University has not registered for the conference.

get Ready for MAY now!

EXPLORE THE OPPORTUNITIES

Recent graduates who are now Executive Trainees with the May Department Stores Company will be returning to campus to discuss our Executive Training Program with interested students. Stop by...bring your résumé (if you have one) and find out more opportunities in retailing.

Wednesday, October 23, 1991
School of Management
Faculty Lounge
10:00-4:00 p.m.
All majors welcome

FILENE'S

G.FOX

The May Department Stores Company

THE FAR SIDE
By GARY LARSON

Regrettably, the Labinski brothers had selected an apartment in the heart of the Bermuda Triangle of jam sessions.

DOONESBURY
By GARRY TRUDEAU

YOU CAN'T BE SERIOUS! YOU'RE GOING TO ACCEPT THAT BOGUS AWARD?
HEY, 596 OTHER PEOPLE WEREN'T TOO GOOD FOR IT! OF COURSE I'M GOING TO GO!
I'M PROUD TO BE A POINT O' LITE! I'M PROUD OF MY ANTI-DRUG DEALER MUZAK IDEA! I WAS HOPING YOU'D BE PROUD TO STAND BY MY SIDE, TO SHARE IN THE GREDIT!
I'M UNWORTHY.
BALONEY! THEY WERE YOUR BARRY MANILOW TAPES!

CALVIN AND HOBBES
By BILL WATTERSON

FISHING IS THE MOST BORING SPORT IN THE WORLD
WE'VE BEEN SITTING HERE FOR TWENTY MINUTES AND NOT ONE THING HAS HAPPENED!
WAAUGHH!
10-22

TANGELO PIE
By TIM SNIFFEN

News Update! Today, UMass Administrative Executive abducted from Whitmore!
The missing has been identified as Cameron Fogg, Dean of Graduation Requirements & Deadlines...!
As for the captor, Police theorize "some lazy student trying to cheat their way to a diploma..."
Uh-oh.
Zzz...

CAST OF THOUSANDS
By BARRY DEUTSCH

DAMN YOU!
I'D BETTER GO AFTER HER.
FINE. DO ME A FAVOR FIRST.
WHY DO I HELP YOU?
ACTUALLY, THERE'S NOT MUCH POINT GOING AFTER HER NOW.
WELL, LEAVE ANYWAY! I REQUIRE PRIVACY.
WHAT WOULD A SWEET VEED PRIVACY FOR?
ALBERT! HOW ARE YOU?
IT'S IRONIC YOU SEE THAT, MOTHER.

UNDER 21
By KRIS K. EARLE

UNDER 21
BY THE GREAT EARLE
THE GOOD NEWS IS THAT KLARK BLACKSTONE CELEBRATED HIS BIRTHDAY ON SUNDAY...
SIX CAKE
KLARK
BLOW!
THE BAD NEWS IS THAT HE IS ONLY 20 YEARS OLD AND SPENT THE EVENING IN JAIL FOR USING A FALSIFIED I.D. AT A BAR.
...AND LET THAT BE A LESSON TO YOU!
TURN, REGGIE!
BLACK
BUST SALOON
NABBED!
ARMED'S FINEST

Quote of the Day

"Hard are the ways of truth, and rough to walk."

--John Milton

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHAEL JAFFE

ACROSS
1 Rusty hinge's sound
6 Chicken —
10 Majority
14 The Golden —
15 — — La Douce
16 Roman emperor 69 AD
17 He played 'Lou Grant'
18 Youngster
19 — the Man
20 Actress Ritter
22 In a calm manner
24 "It — necessarily so..."
26 Actress Julia
27 In a tizzy
31 Bro or sis
32 Jacks and jokers
33 Prepares potatoes
35 Banned insecticide Abbr
38 Wings
39 Whirling
40 One of twenty-four 41 Pasha
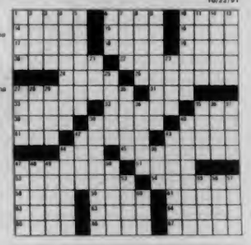
42 Beget
43 "Lorna —"
44 L.A.'s wolers
45 — Ilness" The Big Apple's police
47 Olularyn geologist's concern
51 Penguins' arena
52 — cap
54 Body powder
58 Captured
59 — -era
61 Winnie the Pooh author
62 Grafted, in heraldry
63 Fashion magazine
64 — the bombs bursting —
65 Take five
66 Sea dog
67 Hundred, in Rome

DOWN
1 Rap
2 — Hashanah
3 Seabird
4 "Guys and Dolls" role
5 Main muppet and namesakes
6 Caboodle's companion
7 Angers
8 Arabian chieftain
9 Maniac of the movies
10 Memorable Zero —
11 Aquatic mammal
12 Ten Commandments verb
13 Broadway awards
21 Soldier insect
23 Beanie and Burrows
25 Succinct
27 Part of USNA
28 Story
29 Fay of "King Kong"
30 Age
34 Apple beverage
35 Rocker Morrison was one
36 Dip a doughnut
37 — Dem
39 Chronicles
40 — and swear
42 Lash, list or log stalker
43 Forceful
44 Mail boat
46 Humorist
47 Chemical compound
48 In agreement
49 Hillary epic
50 — Gay WW II plane
53 See 3 Down
55 Family group
56 One
57 Grouper
60 Court rent

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

S	N	A	P		S	A	L	T		F	I	R	S	T
C	O	D	E		A	N	E	W		E	A	T	O	U
A	R	A	T		D	I	D	O		A	R	E	N	E
L	I	M	I	T		S	A	T	U	R	N	I	N	E
P	A	S	T	I	M	E		I	R	A	I
				F	E		A	M	I	R		O	H	O
E	S	C	O	R	T		B	E	S	O	T	T	E	D
U	L	U			O	D	O	R			I	R	K	S
S	P	I	R	I	T	E	D		G	E	O	R	S	O
A	S	P			H	O	S	E		O	R	T
			S	T	E	P		S	E	N	A	T	O	R
T	H	R	E	S	H	O	L	D		S	A	U	C	E
R	A	T	A	T	A	T		O	R	T	L	E	A	L
O	M	E	N	S		T	I	L	I	A		V	O	S
T	A	S	S	E		C	E	N	T			I	S	E

10/22/91



Menu

Sorry, no menu today.
Call 5-2626

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES(March 21-April 19): Your plans get moving in a big way. Talks, trips and letters expand your career and domestic horizons. What you do for your family will be richly rewarded. Be willing to make sacrifices.

TAURUS(April 20-May 20): The career arena provides the proper setting for you to display your competitive streak. Discussions with influential people encourage them to make their financial resources available to you.

GEMINI(May 21-June 20): You and your partners can reach a better understanding today. Share a secret goal to achieve optimum rapport. Your plans unfold beautifully. Help a relative who feels pressured tonight.

CANCER(June 21-July 22): Success in your dealings with prominent people is practically assured. Adopt a serious, sincere manner to gain favor. Keep an eye on the high costs of living. Show your mate more affection.

LEO(July 23-Aug. 22): To advance key interests, you may have to reach a wider audience. The path ahead could be difficult; delays and complications are featured. Push on - a big payoff awaits you! Romance beckons.

VIRGO(Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You are irresistible, witty and on top of your game today. A financial transaction or maneuver looks promising. Lend an ear to what an older person has to say. Take a hint.

LIBRA(Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be on the lookout for a behind-the-scenes opportunity to advance your business aims. Your personal magnetism is a big asset when convincing others to do your bidding. Be generous with praise.

SCORPIO(Oct. 23-Nov. 21): It is time to reach a compromise with your mate or another key ally. Do not try to hide your emotions. Sharing your doubts and hopes with loved one brings you closer together.

SAGITTARIUS(Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You have greater control over financial matters now. Investigate recent purchases and investments. You will benefit from making yourself more visible at work. Listen to a woman's wise advice.

CAPRICORN(Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Any promises you make today will be difficult to keep. Postpone making a serious commitment. Consider a new investment plan. Learn more about stocks, real estate and overseas investments.

AQUARIUS(Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Avoid relying on other people if there is work to be done, errands to run or messages to send. Everything will go much better if you fly solo today! Listening to music relaxes you.

PISCES(Feb. 19-March 20): Make the most of a communications network. Your words have special power today. Be careful not to offend someone who would make a good ally. Your involvement in community affairs brings rich rewards.

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Preston P. Forman
Copy Editor ..... Joanne Quimby
PhotoTechnician ..... Andrea Migliassi
Production Supervisor ..... Nicole Dumas
Production ..... Traci-Ann Disalvatore
Beth Butts

SANDRA BERNHARD
featured in
"The King of Comedy & "Truth or Dare"
& also starred in her one-woman show
"Without You I'm Nothing"
will be appearing at SMITH COLLEGE
in the
John M. Greene Hall, Northampton
on Friday, October 25, 1991
at 8:00pm (doors open at 7:00pm)

All Tickets available at:

Smith College • $5.00 for Smith students with valid I.D.
$10.00 for all non-Smith Students
Wenesday, October 16 - Thursday October 24
For the Record, Amherst • 256-5726 for $10.25
Main St. Records, Northampton • 586-5726 for $10.50
Thursday, October 17 - Thursday, October 24
Tickets purchased at the box office day of the show will be $10.50

For more information contact Angela at 585-6836

HAMPDEN SCREAMERY
HALLOWEEN WEEK SPECIAL
October 22 through 31
The SCreamsicle Shake
A blend of 3 scoops of orange sherbet
(for the price of 2) and vanilla ice cream
Also other ghoulish treats and ghosty surprises
Thank you for your patronage. Have a safe holiday!

THE HAMPDEN SNACK BAR & CREAMERY'S
HALLOWEEN CANDY CORN
COUPON COUNT CONTEST
October 22nd thru 31st
Name
Address
Telephone
Guess
No trick our treat!
Guess how many candy corns in our jar. If your guess is the closest without going over, you will win a $10.00 certificate good for anything sold in the Creamery or Snack Bar.
Employees not eligible. Certificate can be applied one time only.

Hampden Snack Bar
and Creamery in southwest

ALL STUDENTS !!
10TH ANNUAL FIVE COLLEGE
GRADUATE & PROFESSIONAL SCHOOLS
INFORMATION DAY

Over 100 schools including:

Boston College School of Social Work
Boston University School of Law
Cornell University
Emerson College
Dartmouth College
Harvard University
Georgetown University
Monterey Institute for International Studies
SUNY - Stonybrook
Northeastern University
Pace University
Simmons College
Smith College School for Social Work
Widener University School of Law
University of Vermont
Yale University

Wednesday, October 23, 1991
Campus Center Auditorium
University of Massachusetts/Amherst
10 am to 3 pm

Coordinated by the Mather Career Center, University of Massachusetts/Amherst in cooperation with Amherst, Hampshire, Mt. Holyoke and Smith Colleges

THE MATHER CAREER CENTER
Career Planning and Placement •Cooperative Education • Internships
Fraternity/Sorority Park - on the Orchard Hill bus route. (413)545-2224.
Where Careers Take Off!

Lifestyles

Lift ticket prices hit or top $40 in Vermont

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — What goes down must pay up. That's the combined law of physics and economics at Vermont ski areas, where some daily tickets are topping $40 and some season passes have climbed above $900.

The price of a single adult weekend ski lift ticket has risen from $39 to $41 at Okemo Mountain Resort in Ludlow and from $39 to $40 at Mount Snow.

Season passes range from $249 for an adult pass at Smuggler's Notch to $915 at Killington Ski Area.

Some wary ski areas pushed their prices toward, but not over, the $40 benchmark. Stratton's tickets can be had for $39, a $1 increase from last year. At northern Vermont's Jay Peak the daily ticket price went from $32 to $34.

Killington and Pico Ski Resort in Sherburne said they would hold their prices for daily tickets to last year's levels. A weekend day ticket at Killington is $39 and Pico's lift ticket is $37.

Whether the $40 threshold mattered depended on whether the person talking represented a ski area that had hit that figure yet.

"I don't see the $40 as a specific threshold," Okemo Vice President and General Manager Don MacAskill said. "I think anybody today only has a certain amount of recreation time. When they pursue recreational activities they want to get a good value.

But Laura Wittern, of Killington Ski Area, said Killington consciously kept its price below $40 because of a concern that the $40 could turn some skiers off.

"Anytime you make that jump it can have an impact on people's perceptions," Wittern said, noting that the ticket price could change. "The day ticket price is what everybody wants to know."

Wittern also sought to emphasize multi-day rates. A five-day ticket at Killington works out to $32 a day, she said.

Tom Meyers, of the Vermont Ski Area Association, said he did not think lift ticket prices drive people away.

"The fall in skier attendance has been principally due to weather," Meyers said. "Weather is what makes people decide to ski. The economy is something that effects people once they are here."

Mary Jo Torallo of the United Ski Industries Association agreed. Colorado ski areas had prices topping $40 last year. But Colorado also had good snow, and increased skier visits, she said.

Torallo said no one should look for bargains on single weekend lift tickets. Crowded slopes on weekends tempt operators to maximize their profits. "It's supply and demand," she said.

Styles By Deborah
The Spa For Hair & Skin Care
549-5610
65 University Drive Amherst

$4.00 OFF With Cheryl Only — Professional Consultation Style, Cut & Dry
Reg. $16.00 to $18.00
First time customers only • Exp. 10/31/91

$5.00 OFF Any Perm, Facial or Highlighting
First time customers only • Exp. 10/31/91

Clip & Curl
Hours: Tues. - Fri. 9:AM - 8:PM
Sat. 9:AM - 4:PM
665-2629

Haircuts	$11.50
Colors	$16 to $20
Frosting	$35
Perm (cut included)	$44 to $48
Partial Perm	$35
Waxing (eyebrows)	$5.00

we use Paul Mitchell products

Next to 7-11, Route 116 • Sunderland, MA

HEALTHY SKIN
Begins with a deep pore cleansing facial. Also lash and brow tinting, shaping, hair waxing, make-up, therapeutic massage.
AESTHETICS SKINCARE
34 Main St., Suite 1, Amherst, MA 253-9879

Now's the time to call...
North Amherst Motors
78 Old Sunderland Rd., No. Amherst
549-2880
Expert Repairs and Reconditioning
Most Major Credit Cards Accepted

hair cuts always $10!
BUCCI
a hair space
25 N PLEASANT ST. AMHERST 256 0733

Classifieds

COME TO THE COLLEGIAN OFFICE 113 CAMPUS CENTER • THURSDAY 8:30-3:30 FRIDAY 8:30-2:30 • DEADLINE IS TWO DAYS PRIOR TO PUBLICATION • 20¢/WORD/DAY FOR STUDENTS • CASH IN ADVANCE

ACTIVITIES

CONCERTS CONCERTS CONCERTS
UPC Concert Productions General Meeting Oct. 22 Tues 6:00 Student Union Ballroom New members welcome!!!

UMASS CHESS CLUB
7-11 pm in the Bluewall
All are welcome

ANNOUNCEMENTS

BAHAI FAITH
Informational gathering
7PM Oct 22
Room 802 CC
All are welcome
UMass Bahai Club

HEY MCNAMARA!
It's here!!!
Halloween candygrams
Send one to someone in the Sylvan Area
Please support your house council

HOT...SPICY...MOUTHWATERING...
BUFFALO WINGS!!!
Finally, what you've been waiting for..
Fast, free, healthy delivery!
Introducing Mama Mapes Wings -N- Things opening Thursday Oct 31st
Don't miss out!

MOSAIC MAGAZINE needs writers, editors, photographers, ad reps. All students welcome. Contact Dave- 253-7522 for info (Please leave message)

PRE-VET & ANSCI CLUB
Bnet meeting tonight
Tuesday, October 22
6pm - Paige 202
Trip & T-shirt signups

UECHI-RYU KARATE Classical Okinawan Karate. Wen. and Fri. 6:00pm Amherst Community Arts Center. Call 665-4501

WATCH OUT
November 6th is JUDGEMENT DAY!
Bob knows Racquetball
For information call him at 546-2077

AUTO FOR SALE

78 TOYOTA COROLLA Only 95000 miles! Absolutely no rust! Great shape! $1000/BO Joe 546-4917

Seized cars, trucks, boats, 4wheelers, motorhomes, by FBI, IRS, DEA. Available your area now. Call (805) 682-7555 Ext. C-1675.

TOYOTA TERCEL 4-door Great shape Cassette stereo Extremely reliable $900 253-9167

ENTERTAINMENT

RACK-A-DISC! $175.00 DJs, VJs, Karaoke for house/ Formal parties. Call 586 9900

FOR RENT

2 large roomed apt Heat inc. Center of Amherst 256-1124

FRIDGE RENTALS 253-9742 Free Delivery

Putton Village one bedroom apt. available any time before Dec. 1. Call 549-0068, 545-3454

TOWNHOUSE 2 BEDROOM 1 1/2 bath Bus route N Amherst 1-567-1352

FOR SALE

Cortley Flute with case. Excellent condition. One owner. Newly reconditioned $200.00 call 546-0096

NEW & USED COMPUTERS
Call Damin 6-2270

HELP WANTED

Earn $2500 & Free trips selling spring break packages to Bahamas, Mexico, Jamaica, Florida! Best trips & prices!

EXTERIOR PAINTERS
Experienced student painters needed to paint Amherst area homes. Full or part time America's College Painters (800) 626-6267 "Painting America's homes coast to coast"

"Know before you go," Where to work, live and ski free in Colorado's resorts. "Current guide to Aspen, Vail, Breckenridge and more! $16.95. Call 1-800-788-6174

POSTAL JOBS AVAILABLE! Many positions. Call (805) 682-7555 Ext P-3306

 INTERNSHIPS ***

SPRING 1992 INTERNSHIPS with the Legal Services Center, get hands-on experience in the legal field--work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary--training provided. Contact Legal Services today 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

PERSONALS

HAPPY 21ST BIRTHDAY, BIG GUY!
I love you,
Little Girl

Lisa-
Smile cuz someone loves you!
D.B

HEY LONELY LAURIE from Chadbourne and your friend Stephanie--if you ever get bored again, call me. Our conversation 2 Sundays ago was weird, but interesting.
-Mark

Kelly (My Nookums)
Who is this girl I'm going to marry and why isn't she here this weekend?
Bruins #1 I love you
Alex

MATT
I love you honey!
Happy one year anniversity!
Love Always
Laurie

ED,
One year ago today
You stole my heart away
Love, Kara K
Happy Anniversary, I love you!

BUNS HAPPY BIRTHDAY!
Think happy and strive for the positive
Love
MM X 2

Sweet baby-
Please tread softly on my heart
Homeslice

Nicole, Greg, Kevin, Kim & Steve, Chrissy, Sue & Chris, Myrtle & Melvin, ChrisA., Rico, Howie, George & the rest of the 10th floor of JQA. Thanks for making my 18th birthday special! Cheryl

Jules, You're the best roommate & friend that I could have. Thanks for the surprise party. It was the best birthday ever! Yeah-huh! Love, Cheryl MARNIE THE BEAUTIFUL, Here's a small but special personal for you. Love your new boyfriend - Paco -

TO MICHELLE, I needed you!
Love Your Man

RIDE WANTED

NORTHAMPTON TO AMHERST weeknights 1:30AM-? 253-2329

SERVICES

BICYCLE BROKEN?
Call Pat
546-0119

ORDER AVON!
546-1999
Call for brochure

PREGNANT?
Need a pregnancy test, information or support? Call for free and confidential services. ALTERNATIVES 245 Main Street, Northampton 586-3000 or Greenfield 774-6019

STOP SMOKING WITH the help of powerful hypnotherapist from T.I.W. Special discounts for students. Call 586-7372

FREE pregnancy testing; confidential and caring support. BIRTHRIGHT 233 No. Pleasant Street Amherst 549-1906

TRAVEL

FREE TRAVEL- Air couriers & cruiseships. Students also needed Christmas, spring, and summer for amusement park employment. Call (805) 682-7555 Ext F-1426

Killington Collegiate Ski Fest Jan 12-17 condo, hottubs, skiing, and more. Also spring break, Cancun, Jamaica and more. Call John & John 549-8101

TYPING

PAPERS TYPED: $1.50/typed page Quick, Accurate Service. Call Brian 546-3563

WORD PROCESSING, laser pnnting, papers, resumes, theses. Rosemary 259-1786

WANTED

BIKE FRAME
Steel Road Frame/Fork 58CM
Pete 253-3886

To recycle: Prescription medication bottles-containers (Nonrenewable RX only) Please call 585-8709

Sports

UConn upends women's soccer 2-0

LILLIAN K. LEGGIO
Collegian Staff

In sports, final scores can sometimes be deceiving. Take for instance yesterday evening's 2-0 victory by the University of Connecticut women's soccer team over the University of Massachusetts.

In the first half, UMass (9-4) had several golden scoring opportunities, but failed to capitalize. Forty-five seconds into the game with UMass on the attack, UConn goalie Wendy Logan prevented UMass from getting on the board early by stopping a kick by senior forward Michele Woodside.

At 32:12, Colleen Milken picked up rebound off a Woodside shot to narrowly hit the post.

"I think UConn got away lucky today," said UMass coach Jim Rudy. "We had so many chances to get on the board, but just couldn't finish off the plays."

While most of the first half was spent in UConn territory, the Huskies had a couple of close calls at the UMass goal. One of these scoring oportunities came late in the half as back Cathy Cambria booted an indirect kick that was initially bobbled by UMass goalkeeper Briana Scurry. Scurry regained control just as a UConn player was sneaking in to attack.

The tempo picked up in the second half of the game as both teams began playing more aggressively. Sixteen minutes into the half, a collision between UMass' Carrie Koeper and UConn's Jennifer Strong caused a stoppage of play as Koeper laid on her back gasping for air. After a two minute breather Koeper returned to the field.

With the prospect of overtime looming close at 78:12, UConn's Laurie Krutchkoff, on a pass from Maggie Poteau, boomed a kick to the upper right corner of the goal and out of the reach of an outstretched Scurry.

"At the half, we decided that in order to turn the game around, we need to break through to the outside," said UConn coach Len Tsantiris. "That first goal we got by doing just that."

Less than ten minutes later, Karen Ferguson kicked what appeared to be an easy save for Scurry. It didn't turn out that way as Scurry missed the shot and UConn went up 2-0.

"It looked like it was going across the goal and I thought my defender would get to it," said Scurry, who going into last night's game had a 0.41 goals per game average.

"We know we out fought them on offense and defense," said Rudy. "It's disappointing to lose, but it's encouraging to see how well we played."

In the last five minutes of play, unwilling to yield to defeat, UMass mounted several attacks that invigorated the offense. Unfortunately for the Minutewomen, the horn

Collegian photo by Josh Reynolds

University of Massachusetts' Kim Eynard fights for possession with University of Connecticut's Susan Stabach in yesterday's UMass loss to No. 2-ranked Connecticut.

Men harriers place second at Eastern's

By KEITH BENNETT
Collegian Staff

After compiling a 1-6 record in dual-meets this season, the University of Massachusetts men's cross country team needed a big performance at the Eastern Conference Championship Meet to gain momentum entering the championship season.

They got that performance Saturday, with a solid second place finish at Orono, Maine.

"I thought that was the best that we could do," UMass coach Ken O'Brien said. "In my mind, we were in a block between second place and sixth place.

"We really reached the top level of the bracket that I put us in," O'Brien said. "The team reacted very well to the championship competition."

UMass-Lowell, currently ranked no. 1 in the NCAA Div. II poll, literally ran away with the meet, sweeping the top five spots in the race to compile a perfect score of 15. Three-time Div. II All-American Dave Cremin was the overall winner, finishing the five mile race in 25:13.

The Minutemen won a close battle for second. UMass scored 78 points to edge Maine, who scored 81. Holy Cross placed fourth with 92 points. Rhode Island rounded out the top five teams with 95.

The top finisher for UMass was Kevin Greenhalgh. He placed seventh in 26:03.

Greenhalgh was followed by teammates John Raach (10th, 26:13), Pat Ryan (14th, 26:30), Richard Copley (23rd, 27:01) and Tom Walsh (24th, 27:02).

"This was Kevin's and John Raach's and Pat Ryan's best race of the year," O'Brien said. "Rich Copley, as a college freshman, played an important role; finishing 23rd in his first championship meet."

The team's performance was even more impressive given that O'Brien chose not to run the team's top five runners in order to rest them for the upcoming Atlantic 10 and New England Championship Meets. O'Brien hopes that the team's strong finish Saturday has given them confidence which will aid them in those meets.

"We're making significant progress in terms of our physical preparation, it's just taken time to put the mental and psychological aspects of it together," he said. "I think these kids did exactly what they had to do to take that first step to solve that mental aspect of it.

"Now, what we have to do is do the same thing next week [at the Atlantic 10 Meet]. Physically, I think we're very capable of running much better than we have all year."

Water polo goes 4-1 at Harvard

Loses thriller in 4 OTs to Brown

KEVIN HERLIHY
Collegian Staff

BOSTON — After watching his 15th-ranked water polo team win four of five games this past weekend, all University of Massachusetts head coach Russ Yarworth could say was "interesting." That term was probably used with one particular game in mind.

Would you believe a quadruple, sudden-death overtime 10-9 loss to Brown? Believe it.

It was the team's third game of the New England League Tourney at Harvard's Blodgett Pool. Brown had lost 12-10 to the Minutemen earlier this year, so the two were familiar with each other.

The UMass offense was non-existent in the first period, and a 2-0 deficit with no shots on goal proved it. They were starting slow, a trait that has plagued them all season.

The second period was just the opposite as the Minutemen peppered the Brown goalie with four early shots. Finally, with under three-and-a-half minutes left in the half, Tsan Engin scored twice and Adolf Oliete once.

Brown tallied three of their own during the same period, but the new found offense breathed some life into UMass.

Then it happened. One of the referees awarded Brown a penalty shot with one second left in the half. Not unusual. Goalie Todd Larson made a spectacular lunging save, and the rebound, totally playable, arched high over the shooter. A Brown player picked it up, turned completely around, cocked his arm, and scored past Larson. All in one second.

Yarworth stood on the edge of the pool, screaming at the referees and slamming his hand-held game board into the pool. Assistant coach Jon Miller was screaming at the time keeper, and not for the first time in the game.

After more than 10 minutes of conversation the goal stayed, and UMass was down 6-3 at the half.

After pulling ahead 8-7 halfway through the fourth quarter the UMass pressure defense kept the Bears at bay. The game seemed to be in hand, but with only 10 seconds left Brown scored to send the game into overtime.

The first extra session was scoreless, but in the second Engin scored on a nifty move with two-and-a-half minutes left. The game seemed over (again), but Brown scored with 30 seconds left.

The third and fourth overtimes would be sudden-death, and after a scoreless third in which both teams were obviously getting tired, Brown scored with a 1:25 left in the fourth to end the contest.

"It seemed like everything went Brown's way and it still took them two sudden-death overtimes to beat us," Yarworth said. "We're still not playing good team ball for the whole game. Just riding the roller coaster still. We aren't able to maintain a good team intensity. I can't put a finger on it. I'm at a loss for words."

Engin and Larson were immense for the Minutemen, with Engin scoring six times and Larson knocking away 16 shots. Freshman Luke Harlan scored twice and Javier Gonzalez once.

In an 18-4 blowout of M.I.T. friday, Alex Yelensky scored three times, five other players scored twice, and three scored once.

Harvard held tough Saturday before falling, 12-9. Harlan scored four times and Scott Reed recorded a hat trick.

The Minutemen beat a pesky Boston College team Sunday, 9-8, behind another three goals from Reed and two by Oliete.

The weekend's final game was a 14-6 romp over Yale. Gonzalez had five goals, and Adam Feldman had three.

Minutewomen place 5th in NE's

LILLIAN K. LEGGIO
Collegian Staff

Going into the New England Women's Tennis Championship, the University of Massachusetts was expected to finish fifth or sixth out of six. UMass did indeed finish fifth, but only two points from third place and seven from champion Hartford.

Ironically, UMass defeated Hartford earlier this season by a score of 6-3.

"Fifth doesn't sound like much and it's certainly no indication of how well we played," said UMass coach Edwin Gentzler.

UMass didn't get off on the right foot on Saturday as their first singles player, Shizuko Yamasaki suffered a first round loss to Harvard's Heather Churlock 6-1, 7-5.

Kerri Kaminski, UMass' second slotted player, also lost in the first round to the eventual No. 2 singles champion, Agata Passent of Harvard 6-1, 6-1.

In No. 3 singles, Amy Ryan lost to Vermont's Cathy Kuebler 6-2, 6-3, but captured third place in the consolation match, defeating Connecticut's Cory Robinson 4-6, 6-4, 6-4.

The last singles match-up involving UMass saw Kelly Grim lose in the first round to Harvard's Celerie Kemble, but rebound in the match for third place with a 6-2, 7-6 (7-3) over Flo Gaudet of UConn.

Doubles was a pleasant surprise for UMass, as they notched first place in No. 1 doubles and third in No. 2.

The team of Kerensa Eddy and Gail Girasella started off by defeating Hartford's Sarah McShane and Jennifer Palumbo 7-5, 6-1. In the match for first place, however, it didn't appear as if Eddy and Girasella would win anything as they lost their first set 0-6 to UConn's Katie Fuller and Nicole Gaudet. Regaining their composure, they went on to win second and third sets, winning the match 0-6, 6-1, 6-4.

In No. 2 doubles, UMass took third place as Pam Levine and Stacey Scheckner won their third place match against Lorri Fisher and Kelly O'Hearn 6-2, 6-3.

"We have improved so much over this season," said Gentzler. "It's a shame to see it all come to an end."

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THE LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND

VOLUME CI ISSUE 36 WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 23, 1991

Collegian photo by Josh Reynolds

A LITTLE MORE TO THE LEFT — Senior communications major Nick Gilbert does some filming outside the Student Union.

State considers tags on all kegs

By DANIEL BEEGAN
and Collegian Staff

BOSTON (AP) — The Town of Amherst Select Board's agreement Monday to review the suggestions of the Keg Policy Task Force to place restrictions on the purchase of kegs of beer comes at a time when the State Legislature appears likely to pass a bill making the purchase of kegs more difficult on a statewide level.

Hoping to curb raucous beer bashes, the Legislature likely will pass a bill that would force individuals buying kegs to register their names and addresses and pay a deposit when they pick up their brew, a key legislator said Tuesday.

"We are very committed to trying to get this bill through by the end of the session," Rep. Michael Walsh, D-Agawam, House chairman of the Government Regulations Committee, said Tuesday.

Walsh's committee held a hearing on a bill that would require keg buyers to pony up a $50 deposit before taking a keg from a package store.

The bill also would require the seller to keep a record of the names and addresses of keg buyers.

The keg itself also would be tagged with the name and address of the purchaser.

Amherst, Hadley, Northampton and several other area towns have already adopted this proposal, which is aimed at curbing large parties with underage drinkers in the Five College community. The law allows police to identify the purchasers of kegs, which was previously impossible, according to local police.

The bill would give city and town governing boards the right to accept or reject the law.

The bill was sponsored by Rep. J. Michael Ruane, D-Salem, at the request of Beverly Alderman Raymond Battistelli.

Ruand and Battistelli said a similar law went into effect in Maine in August.

Walsh said a similar bill already is pending before the Massachusetts House Ways and Means Committee and could be put on a fast track if it is reported to the floor from that panel.

Walsh said keg parties aren't just a problem on the North Shore.

He said local officials in Greenfield and Agawam also have expressed interest in a keg registration plan.

Battistelli said he would like to see restaurant and bar owners exempted from the deposit requirement, which he said should be aimed solely at individuals.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 2

1986 Southwest riot recalled

Sunday marks five-year anniversary of race riot

By DAVID MASSEY
Collegian Staff

Five years ago this Sunday, as the Boston Red Sox went down to defeat to the New York Mets, the Southwest Residential Area erupted in violence.

This is the first part of a three-part series examining the riot and the aftermath.

It was not an ordinary evening at the University of Massachusetts on October 27, 1986. Two days later, the headline roared across page one of the Collegian: "Violence erupts in Southwest after Sox Lose; Black man injured in brawl alleges racial motivation." After this, the University would never be the same again.

The riot that evening in Southwest left ten students injured, three of whom were Black, and a University ripped apart by a post-World Series party that evolved into an ugly, brutal affair.

It has been estimated that between 1,200 and 3,000 students gathered outside the Southwest Pyramids to celebrate the Mets World Series win over the Red Sox. Soon, fighting broke out and a carefree World Series celebration turned into a brawl.

Yancy Robinson, a 19-year-old Black male, was the most seriously injured of the ten. "I was beaten up just because I was Black," he was quoted in the initial Collegian article.

But the Director of Public Safety during this time, Gerald O'Neil, denied racism as a contributing factor to the riot. "I can not classify it as a racial riot," he said.

On October 28, the Daily Hampshire Gazette quoted a security director at the time, as saying: "I think the situation started out with some folks just hanging around with pent-up energy. . . It just escalated to throwing things and the crowd was dispersed." Students strongly decried the riot as racially-motivated.

Three days later, a letter written by Jose Tolson, program coordinator of the Student Activities Division and signed by 16 others appeared in the Collegian.

"If the loss of a baseball series can lead a mob of students to attack and injure fellow students, then we have a problem. If the mob is White and the injured person is Black, then we think we have a racial problem."

Tension ran high at the University as demonstrations and protests for stricter security and more attention to the riot were held on campus. Students, faculty and several minority groups charged the University with failing to respond quickly and efficiently to the violence.

On October 30, 1986, Black students convened on campus to plan their next move. The next day, writes the Nummo News, more than 300 students marched from the New Africa House to Whitmore and back again. "The media attended the rally in full force," the Nummo News wrote. "Black students from all over the country were looking at the TV coverage and newspaper reports and became very inspired by our actions."

The Chancellor at the time, Joseph Duffey, and the Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs, Dennis Madson, wrote in a letter handed to all residents in early November the violence was "a threat to the fabric of the entire University," but also said "safety on this campus cannot be guaranteed by police, security personnel and regulations alone."

An Associated Press story on Nov. 10 documented heightened acts of racism against Blacks and Hispanics in the Five College Area as a result of the UMass riot. A racial epithet was painted on the Smith College steps a week after the brawl, the story said. The story also interviewed a Mount Holyoke senior who said she was racially insulted and shoved at a University library.

John Grayson, an assistant professor of religion at Mount Holyoke College said, "There's a sense of vulnerability and terror, of a state of siege on the part of minorities." On Nov. 12, Duffey urged the Undergraduate Senate to assist in the investigation of the riot. The Collegian quoted him as saying the University's reputation is "somewhat in jeopardy now because of the actions of a few people."

Five days later, Duffey announced Judge Frederick A. Hurst would conduct a "fact-finding, informal investigation" on the Oct. 27 Southwest violence. Simultaneously, the campus police were investigating assault charges of several UMass students.

In a Nov. 12 letter in the Collegian, the president of the Massachusetts Society of Professors at the time, Arlyn Diamond, wrote a criticism of the University condemning its poor security organization in Southwest on the night of the riot. Diamond also wrote the University should have foreseen such an event."

CONTINUED ON PAGE 3

Inside:

Page 3:
The daughter of the 1960 Nobel Peace Prize winner speaks of the slow pace of change in South African apartheid laws.

Page 10:
Check out the review of the new Smithereens album -- oh, we meant Compact Disc.

Page 12:
Women's soccer needs wins to make NCAA Championships. They face URI today.

Weather
Come on out and enjoy a nifty fall day. Partly sunny skies with highs in the 60s.

Quebec in conflict with native Cree

By RIC OLIVEIRA
Collegian Staff

Will Nicholls, a representative of the Cree Grand Council, addressed what the Cree call the "environmental racism of Quebec" yesterday at the Campus Center.

Nicholls, a traditional Cree who grew up in the James Bay area, said "Two thirds of the children in the Chessasabe region are contaminated with toxic levels of methyl mercury as a result of the first phase of the Hydro Quebec project begun in 1973."

In 1970, newly elected Quebec Premeire Robert Bourassa, announced the construction of "the project of the Century" — the James Bay project. When fully completed, the James Bay project would flood a forest area the size of New England plus New york to produce cheap Hydro Electric power. The electricity would then be sold to the United States and Canada. Bourassa called this the "key to the economic and social progress of Quebec"

Bourassa stated that the James Bay Region was a "wasteland" inhabited by "a few thousand Indians." In 1971 construction of the Phase I began.

"At the time only 100 people out of twenty thousand of us could speak English," Nicholls said. "We have remained as our ancestors had for 5000

CONTINUED ON PAGE 2

Collegian photo by Josh Reynolds

Will Nicholls, a member of the Cree Grand Council, speaks on the Province of Quebec's environmental policy yesterday.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THE LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is a Registered Student Organization of the University of Massachusetts, published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000.

113 CAMPUS CENTER AMHERST, MA 01003
Phone (413) 545-3500 FAX (413) 545-1992

STAFF

Editor in Chief....Gayle Long
Managing Editor....Marc Elliott
Editorial Editor....Greg Sukiennik
News Editor....Preston P. Forman
Sports Editor....Tamir Lipton
Arts Editor....Paul DeGeorges
Photography Editor (interim)....Josh Reynolds
Black Affairs Editor....Sondra Sutton
Women's Issues Editor....Jessame Hannus
Jewish Affairs....Felice Cohen, Debra Kriegsman
Multicultural Affairs Editor....
Third World Affairs Editor....Madanmohan Rao
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor....Trystan Skeigh
Business Manager....Randee Pastel
Advertising Manager....Dena Haselkorn
Finance Manager....Jeff Weiner
Circulation Manager....Jim Winterbottom
Subscriptions Manager....Stacy Rogers
Promotions Manager....Scott Macey
Production Manager....Terry Starmer
Day Graphics Manager....Jenny Burns

PROFESSIONAL STAFF

Business....Brian Harrington, Lori Black, Maureen Majerowski
Graphics....Blake Phillips

■ Hydro Project

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

years. Our economy was based upon hunting and gathering, and it still is today. One day, one of the few English speaking hunters picked up a newspaper at the outpost and read about the project. That was the first time any of us had heard of it."

The Cree quickly organized, creating the Grand Council to represent all of the different villages. In November of 1973, the Cree won a land rights battle in the Quebec Superior Court which halted the construction of the Hydro highways and airports already under construction.

One week later a Quebec appeals court overturned the court ruling. Nicholls stated that at this point for the Cree, they could not win. "We had a gun to our heads, 65 percent of our people live in the bush, they took advantage of us."

In 1975, the James Bay and Northern Quebec Agreement was signed. In it the Cree signed over the land for Phase I of Hydro. They were paid 17 cents per acre. Five villages were relocated. Cree sovereignty was recognized and the education system was turned over to Cree hands. In sections 22 and 23 of the agreement the Cree reserved the right to have impact and enviromental studies prepared before further projects could be initiated.

"Many of the effects of the first phase are still being discovered" said Nicholls. "Over ten thousand caribou perished in the first year after phase I. The methyl mercury which was released when the waters covered the low land forests seeped into the ecosystem and infected everything.

"They are poisoning us to death," said Nicholls. "Methyl mercury now comprises one fourth of our diet, and now they want to dam all of our rivers!"

Phase II of the Hydro project was scheduled to begin in March of 1991 but was railroaded by Cree and enviromental groups of Quebec. Construction has been rescheduled to begin in July of 1992, awaiting enviromental studies by the province of Quebec and the Canadian Federal Government.

"This is important for everyone," Nicholls stressed. "Pollution knows no borders."

For Your Information

Wednesday, October 23

Meeting — Peer support groups for eating disorders will be meeting from 7:00 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. in John Quincy Adams Tower room 502. Confidentiality assured.

Meeting — A senate meeting sponsored by SGA ops. will be held from 7:00 p.m. to 1:00 a.m. in Campus Center room 163C.

Thursday, October 24

Lecture — "The Role of the United Germany After the Collapse of the Soviet Empire" will be given by Walter Gerhardt, General Consul of Germany. The lecture is sponsored by the Five College European Club and will be held at 7:30 p.m. in UMass Campus Center room 101. Admission is free.

Movie — "Dying Young" sponsored by Lambda Chi Alpha will be shown at 5:00, 7:00, 9:00, and 11:00 p.m. in the Campus Center Auditorium. Admission is $2.00 at 5:00 p.m. and $3.00 at all others.

Discussion — A get-together and discussion on "Growing Up In an Inter-Married Household" will be held at 3:30 p.m. at the Hillel House.

Friday, October 25

Special Event — The ISA will be hosting a Multicultural Night. It will be held from 6:30 p.m. to 11:00 p.m. in the Campus Center Auditorium. General admission is free but the cost of food will be $5.00.

Special Event — "Chassidim" - a relic of the past or the powerhouse of the present? A service and Shabbat dinner will be held at 7:00 p.m. at the Chabad House.

Film — "Retrospective: Harun Farocki, Filmaker" screening of As You See at 8:30 p.m. in UMass Thompson 102.

■ kegs

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

"People actually put themselves in business," Battistelli said.

He said individuals buy kegs and then hold parties at their homes or in isolated, wooded areas, charging those attending for beers from the keg.

"There is no responsibility," he said.

Battistelli said the problem comes when police break up a party and everyone denies responsibility for the kegs.

The bill he and Ruane proposed, Battistelli said, would allow officers to find out who bought the kegs and hold that person responsible for any damage resulting from a party.

Ruane said the measure could be called the "tag a keg" bill.

Peabody teen arrested for sale of fake ID's

PEABODY (AP) - A local teen-ager has been arrested and charged with selling phony licenses for $40 apiece to underage bar-goers.

Police said they arrested Todd Scioli, 19, on charges of forging a Massachusetts driver's license and distributing marijuana. He was arrested last Thursday after police reportedly found equipment at Scioli's home that they believe was used to produce hundreds of false licenses.

The lamination machine confiscated by police was used to produce forgeries impossible to detect, Polic Capt. J. Stephen Begley, told The Salem Evening News.

"If you were to see these licenses you wouldn't be able to tell the difference," Begley told the paper Monday. "They look very legitimate."

For more than a year, teens allegedly brought Scioli their licenses and he would alter any dates after 1970 by covering up the year's final digit with a forged zero, said Begely, head of the department's Criminal Investigation Division.

Scioli, who was arraigned in Peabody District Court Friday, netted about $400 a week in the scheme.

About a month ago police from Peabody and the Danvers office of the Registry of Motor Vehicles, acting on a tip, launched an undercover investigation during which they had teens buy allegedly forged licenses from Scioli.

Scioli faces a five-year loss of his license and a five-year jail term if convicted.

Join Us In Honoring
Joseph Langland
Saturday, October 26 at 3 p.m.

JOSEPH LANGLAND founded the MFA program in English-Fiction and Poetry at UMass, where he taught in the English department from 1959-79.

An Amherst resident, he received an A.A. from Santa Ana College, California, in 1936, a B.A. and an M.A. from the University of Iowa in 1940 and 1941, respectively.

He Will Autograph His Newest Book
Selected Poems
(Published By The Univ. of Mass. Press)

This book offers a selection of sixty-five poems from forty years of distinguished publication by Joseph Langland. Langland's work has won prizes, appeared in over eighty anthologies and texts, and been presented often in readings and on National Public Radio.

These poems of the human and public world speak to a large audience with a strong natural voice that has mastered the craft and moves confidently in it. In them one hears speech and music together in a rich world of ideas.

Jeffery Amherst Bookshop
55 South Pleasant Street Amherst
Massachusetts 01002 253-3381
Open til 8 p.m. Mon-Fri, Sat till 5:30, Sun 12-5 p.m.

OPEN 'TIL
2 A.M.
7 DAYS
A WEEK

BUFFALO BILLS
FAMOUS
ROAST BEEF
&
CHICKEN WINGS

INTERNATIONAL STUDENTS ASSOCIATION

MULTICULTURAL NIGHT
oct. 25 cca 6.30-11 pm
PERFORMANCES . ENTERTAINMENT . FOOD FROM ALL OVER THE WORLD !! food $5
General adm. FREE

Local

Collegian photo by Seth Kaye

READ THE DIRECTIONS FIRST — The porcelain of the Marshall Annex basement washroom beckons.

Apartheid laws slow to change, says speaker

By ELIZABETH CHRISTOPHER
Collegian Correspondant

The people of South Africa are frustrated because the Anti-Apartheid movement is at a standstill, said Tandi Luthuli Gcabashe. The daughter of the late Chief Albert Luthuli, 1960 Nobel Peace Prize winner, spoke to a small but captivated audience at Amherst College last night.

As a Southern African staff person for the American Friends Service Committee, Gcabashe returned to her native South Africa to report on the conditions of the newly-reformed country under DeClerk.

Her three month visit home this summer was her first since her twenty year exile and filled her with bittersweet emotions. "Despite all its problems, home is home— home sweet home," Gcabashe said.

During her visit, Gcabashe attended three anti-Apartheid conferences, including one that was held by the ANC. The fact that the conferences were held at all marked changes developing in South Africa, said Gcabashe.

But she warned against the motives behind the "cosmetic" changes, calling them "strategies designed to confuse and delay majority rule."

The ANC conference highlighted the desire to create a non-racial, non-sexist, democratic South Africa. The possibility of a constitution for a democratic system was also discussed.

Among other topics discussed was the need for a new health policy. "AIDS is prevalent in Africa and something needs to be done," cautioned Gcabashe.

The conference also addressed social issues as environmental conservation, improving public transportation and the need for public housing.

The conference expressed concern of the continuing violence between racial groups.

Gcabashe stressed that the only way to bring about these changes is to change the government. "We need to unseat these people from power or we'll be in this same position for 20 or 50 more years," she said.

Gcabashe praised the changes that were allowing her and all former exiles to return home as well as the changes freeing political prisoners and remined her audience that there are still hundreds who remain prisoners.

Describing the reaction from Black South Africans on the reforms, Gcabashe spoke of frustration. "They don't see changes in their daily lives," she said.

Before reforms, Black citizens were required to carry with them identity cards at all times. This is no longer true. But on work papers race is identified by a set of numbers, Gcabashe pointed out, thus allowing discrimination for Black citizens to continue.

"The struggle continues," echoed the words of Gcabashe as she ended with her wish to keep the anti-apartheid movement alive rather than "putting it on the back burner."

Additional speakers included members of the sponsor organizations: Mt. Holyoke College Action South Africa, the South African Azanian Student Movement and the Southern Africa Working Group, AFSC W. Mass. The lecture was also sponsored by the Black Student Union of Amherst College.

Professor addresses peace talks

Middle East military balance tipped towards Israel

By MADANMOHAN RAO
Collegian Staff

Naseer Aruri, member of the Palestine National Council, and professor of political science at UMass-Dartmouth, spoke on prospects of an Israeli-Palestinian settlement at Smith College's Stoddard Auditorium last night.

Secretary of State James Baker's efforts seem successful, Aruri said, because of "the Gulf War, the collapse of the Soviet Union, and the deliberately ambiguous nature of his diplomacy."

"The Gulf War effectively demolished the Arab consensus on Palestine and eroded their solidarity against Israel. The U.S. has recolonized the Arab world, and the Arab world is more divided now than before," Aruri said. "The destruction of Iraq has tipped the Middle East military balance overwhelmingly in favor of Israel."

"The question of Palestine has been removed from the top of the Arab agenda, and the conventional wisdom in the West that the Palestinians have done irreparable damage to their cause by allying themselves with Iraq has been adopted by some Arab countries too," Aruri explained.

"This has consecrated U.S. diplomacy as the sole agent of settlement, particularly in the light of the acquiescence of the Soviet Union," Aruri said.

"Within Israel, the Gulf War led to consolidation of the hard-line forces," Aruri said. "This has also put the peace camp within Israel on the defensive. By December of 1990, dialogue between Israeli peace activists and Palestinians broke down, because the Israelis felt they could not trust the Palestinians on account of their support for the Scud attacks on Israel."

"The Gulf War also provided the Israelis with a natural pretext to clamp down on the Intifada, at a time when nobody was giving a damn what the Israelis did to the Palestinians," Aruri said. "60,000 Palestinians were deprived of their jobs overnight. People were selling kidneys to pay taxes to the Israelis."

"As uncontested superpower, the US now has an opportunity for dealing with the destabilizing factor of the Palestinian issue," Aruri said. "Israel, however, is not prepared for these developments, which explains its rush to build settlements."

As for the ambiguity in Baker's position, Aruri said that "despite U.S. commitment to the international position with respect to East Jerusalem, Baker has acquiesced on exclusion of Palestinians from East Jersualem, as per Israeli demands."

"Security Council Resolution 681 specifically invokes the Fourth Geneva Convention, which protects Palestinians in the Occupied Territories from being coerced into illegal agreements," Aruri said, "but the U.S. is not living up to its legal obligations to enforce these provisions."

Speculating on possible outcomes of the peace conference, Aruri said, "It is possible that factions against land concessions may pull out of the Israeli cabinet, thus causing a governmental crisis. Elections may be held, and precious time will be lost as Israel continues to settle Russian immigrants."

■ Southwest riot

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

"No platitudes about civility or cliches concerning equality and racial harmony can be taken seriously when our campus police and administrators themselves become impediments to racial justice... we are all extremely fortunate that a young black member of our student community was not killed out-right by his white attackers," he wrote.

A Collegian editorial on Jan. 29, 1987 urged the University to admit the violence was spurred by racial hatred and to create an academic course to nurture respect for other's cultures and values. "They (students) are being trained to run computers and to examine the writing of poets; they can trained to accept others with an open mind."

On Feb. 5, the Hurst Report was released, which was printed in full in both the Collegian and the Campus Chronicle. Judge Frederick A. Hurst's month-and-a-half-long investigation discovered faults in the University's handling of the case and said the initial denial of racism as factor hindered the investigation and exacerbated tension throughout the University. Hurst interviewed over 100 people to reconstruct the incident.

"The events were predictable, preventable and primarily racially motivated. The baseball game and alcohol, rather than being the causes, were merely catalysts," Hurst wrote. He also said the administration's denial of racial factors worsened feelings of discontent on campus.

"Denial, one of the most subtle forms of racial intolerance, because it tolerates it, had caused the incident to grow," Hurst wrote.

The Black community endorsed the main conclusions and recommendations of the Hurst report in a Feb. 12 letter in the Campus Chronicle: "We urge all elements of the University administration to embrace the spirit of the report. . . to guarantee a community in which people of all racial and cultural origins can live, learn, teach and work in a secure environment of beneficial interchange and mutual respect."

Vice-Chancellor Madson said the critical nature of the report "bothers me a great deal," as quoted by the Collegian on Feb. 12. Six days later, Director of Public Safety O'Neil said criticisms of alleged inadequate security presence and preparation the night of the riot were unjustified. "Had we a crystal ball," O'Neil said, "we certainly would have responded differently."

Duffey said the report's recommendations of fostering a climate of diversity at UMass would be taken seriously. "There are lessons here and new reminders of responsibilities for the administration, for faculty, and for our student leaders as well as for every student on campus."

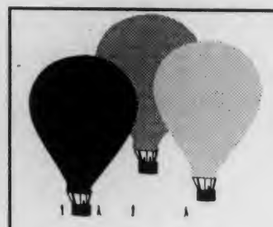
Collegian columnist Ben Brogan urged the immediate discipline of those involved and said racism played a major role in fueling the violence in a Feb. 25 piece.

"I was in Southwest that night, and it was a racial incident," Brogan writes. "Those who try to deny it should have seen the hatred, the anger in the eyes of the hundreds of White men screaming outside Crampton House, kicking in the plate glass windows, trying to get at the small group of Black students."

Nevertheless, Judge Hurst penned the final sentence in his conclusion of the investigation by saying: "Future incidents of racial intolerance and the potentially deadly violence that attach to them are inevitable unless the problems revealed by my investigation are solved."

Collegian photo by Jeff Egan

The Southwest pyramids, where racial violence began five years ago this Sunday. Tensions between Boston Red Sox and New York Mets fans boiled over into a riot following the completion of the 1986 World Series.



ALL STUDENTS !!

10TH ANNUAL FIVE COLLEGE GRADUATE & PROFESSIONAL SCHOOLS INFORMATION DAY

Over 100 schools including:

Boston College School of Social Work
Boston University School of Law
Cornell University
Emerson College
Dartmouth College
Harvard University
Georgetown University
Monterey Institute for International Studies
SUNY - Stonybrook
Northeastern University
Pace University
Simmons College
Smith College School for Social Work
Widener University School of Law
University of Vermont
Yale University

Wednesday, October 23, 1991
Campus Center Auditorium
University of Massachusetts/Amherst
10 am to 3 pm

Coordinated by the Mather Career Center, University of Massachusetts/Amherst in cooperation with Amherst, Hampshire, Mt. Holyoke and Smith Colleges

THE MATHER CAREER CENTER

Career Planning and Placement • Cooperative Education • Internships

Fraternity/Sorority Park - on the Orchard Hill bus route. (413)545-2224.

Where Careers Take Off!

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions on this page are those of the individual writer or cartoonist, and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian or the University unless otherwise noted.

Don't be shy — say hello and make a new friend

I noticed that a lot of columns have been a smidgen negative and derogatory lately. I admit that I even contributed one to the collection not so long ago. Things have been turning around in a good light for me recently, so I figured that I would share the wealth and write something non-cynical and (oh no!) even a tad encouraging for you.

As per to my previous column, I shared with all of you the joy of my bluntness. For today, I've got something completely beneficial and special for all those less than assertive people out there in our beloved UMass reading audience. It's a little entertainment with a message, if you will.

Lorrie Cozzens

I was stalking my way down the goat trail, late for a mighty boring 2:30 class this past Monday. I was seriously considering skipping it. However, I already missed that same class the Friday before.

Well, I can tell you today that for no academic reasons whatsoever, I am more than elated for having decided to attend my class that fateful day.

You see, while descending the goat trail I noticed a very attractive man hiking up. We caught each other's eye, smiled and said hello. Afterwards, we continued abut our separate ways. No big deal. Then for some reason beyond my contemplation, I had to turn around (can you see where this is leading?) and get a second glance.

I'll be damned if he wasn't doing the same thing! The funny thing was, we both caught each other looking, and turned away. Only to look again one last time before we disappeared from each other's sight. I headed off to my yawn-inducing class with a bit more spring in my step and feeling a little flirtatious.

Okay, so you may be wondering what the point of all of this stuff is. I'm getting to that. My point is that if I had not been in such a hurry, I would have turned around on a dime to go back and introduce myself; for the most part I practice what I preach (no one is perfect!). Considering I lost that opportunity due to circumstances beyond my control, I am making up for it here for 19,000 readers to behold for themselves.

So now you may be thinking, "What does any of this have to do with me in a real up close and personal manner?" Bear with me on this one. How many times have you been out, and when someone has been giving you the eye, you turn 1000 shades of magenta and book out of there faster than a bat out of hell? Probably too many!

Think of it this way (provided that there is someone you are interested in): What is the worst thing that could happen? As my dear friend Goose phrases it, "The worst thing that could happen is that I end up with a really good friend." That is a wonderful attitude to have! Besides, doesn't it kind of give you "warm fuzzies" when someone you don't know spontaneously starts a conversation with you?

It gives you an extra kick, so similar to that of caffeine to non-morning person. And, should you have enough nerve to ask he/she out after starting your conversation with Mr./Miss/Ms. X, the worst thing they could possibly say is no.

The moral of the story here is: "Don't be shy!"

Oh yeah, that reminds me! To the man wearing black pants with a green shirt and a black jacket walking up the goat trail at 2:30 this past Monday: I was the one in all black with a wide rim hat, and I didn't quite get the chance to catch your name...

Lorrie Cozzens is a UMass student

Administration and GEO are only playing a chess match

The game has begun. What should be a serious issue on this campus has been reduced to a chess match. Chancellor O'Brien said in this Monday's Collegian that the administration has no plan to deal with a possible Graduate Employees' Organization strike. A few paragraphs later, Pat Greenfield, director of the Labor Relations and Research Center, says O'Brien was smart to say what he said. If O'Brien said UMass had a great plan to deal with the strike, the GEO would get so mad they would, well, strike as soon as they could.

Rook takes knight. Do you really think the administration has no plans for a GEO strike? If they didn't I'd be storming Whitmore right now, yelling something like, "You fools, you incompetent fools!" The administration has every idea what has to happen if the GEO strikes, but if they say it out loud, it makes them look like they want a strike.

Bishop takes rook. Actually, a strike might not be such a bad idea, seeing how the current graduate employees are fighting for such moronic ideals like "job security." Gee, I wish I could walk up to any big company and demand, not even ask, that I never be let go. I'm sorry, that's not what job security means.

Pawn (that's what grads call themselves) takes bishop. Emily Isaacs, GEO/District 65/United Auto Workers member, says that most undergraduates like myself are just confused. She thinks job security means GEO members will be laid off equally compared to other unions. "We want parity — to be treated like everyone else." Then why call it "job security?" Talk about legal jargon. Why do I get the feeling we'll regret it when grads point to their job security clause a few years down the road: "You can't fire me, look!"

Peter Kasperowicz

Queen takes pawn; check. The state has no money, yet. We have Governor Weld's assurance that any budget surplus will go right back into education, but until then, I like to use the following analogy:

You have one dollar, and I demand two dollars from you. No matter how much I demand two dollars from you, you don't have it. No matter how much I deserve two dollars from you, you don't have it. It's reality mixed with economics.

Not that I wish to reduce the whole argument to a scene from Better Off Dead, but it gets the point across. People all across the state are losing their jobs, and unions on campus are complaining that they haven't received raises for over three years. Anyone with a job these days is lucky, period.

Pawn takes queen. Ah-ha. Here's the controversy. State educators have always been underpaid, but the time to complain was when the state had money, which most of them probably did. When everyone in the private sector is being laid off, they just don't feel like paying to keep other people employed, especially when they have a choice in the matter. Sounds goofy, I know, but it happens. That's why Weld got in the office in the first place.

Checkmate. Where does that leave everyone? The GEO will continue demanding what UMass can't possibly give away, never mind whether any human being "deserves" job security. The administration will continue to say I hope they don't strike, because that's all they can say. Say any more, and the GEO strikes. And all the while, the real reason we're here, education, is forgotten for the sake of politics and decorum.

Everyone can move but no one can win. Stalemate. And don't be fooled when the GEO changes the game to something like Tic-Tac-Toe; no one ever wins that game either.

Peter Kasperowicz is a Collegian staff member

The Third World Affairs page is still isolated on its 'moral high horse'

The emperor has no clothes!

Hussein Ibish's most recent article in the Third World Affairs page once again divides the world into geographical categories of "good" and "evil," preventing any critical discussion of some dominant forms of oppression prevalent in the "Third World," e.g. caste and sectarianism. Additionally, Ibish and cohorts' refusal to get off their moral high horse acts as a defense for "southern" forms of oppression — i.e. their unwillingness to accept factors such as class, gender, and race. Instead Ibish lapses into the rather pathetic argument that "Third World imperialism" is an "oxymoron" akin to the "wealthy poor."

While most of the states in the Third World do lack the wherewithal to engage in imperialism, there are some which can manage the enterprise. Or is Tibet an unworthy example in Ibish's eyes? Military conquest, the extraction of resources and Han Chinese colonization have characterized modern Tibetan history. Indonesia's policies in East Timor is another example. There are also those disquieting acts of intervention which do not fit neatly into the category of imperialism — Ethiopia's subjugation of Eritrea and India's action towards Nepal.

Ibish's defense of the Third World nation-state becomes a means to deny that the nation-state in the Third World suffers a crisis of legitimacy. Predictably such a viewpoint ties in neatly with his glorification of Third World authoritarianism and militarism. Distortions of history have been the TWA junta's forte: the issue of the Gulf War and technology is a telling case. The Third World is certainly in need of advancement but the crucial questions are what forms of technology and at what cost. Ibish, however, narrowly defines technology in terms of military paraphernalia. The TWA page coterie measures progress by the number of MiG-29s and Mirage 2000s, South African artillery pieces and T-72s in the "South" and not by changes in the quality of life of the average citizen (unless they happen to be generals and bureaucrats). In the end, Ibish's ravings reveal themselves to be the product of infantile envy.

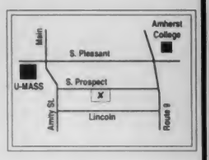
Ironically, in rethinking the Gulf War what surfaces for us are not the glories of military hardware but rather the nature of Saddam misrule. Or has Ibish forgotten Vietnam? In comparing the reaction to two acts of American aggression — fully cognizant of the different historical circumstances — one notices a marked difference. Despite the fact that Saddam Hussein, in his war with the U.S., had a technological position relatively superior to the one Vietnam had, Vietnam did not witness surrenders en masse by its armed forces, a military mutiny or an uprising by large numbers of its population. The nature of Saddam's rule (despite Ibish's glorification) and his persecution of the Kurds (a fact that Ibish is either amnesiac about or amenable to) which led to an absence of social cohesion in Iraq, is tragically the strongest condemnation of Saddam Hussein's rule.

The messianic narcissism with which Ibish, Rao and sycophants execute their "mission" serve only to dismiss most of the socio-economic and political ills that the vast majority of the peoples of the Third World grapple with. Instead, with delusions of grandeur, they declare themselves a Third World Jacobin Mountain. And this Mountain, like Robespierre, proceeds to issue decrees, condemnations, and fatwahs. But to cite a relevant observation, the first time was tragedy; this time it's nothing but farce.

Anilla Cherian, Amherst
Robin Varghese, Amherst

STEINBECK COLLISION REPAIR & AUTOBODY

53 So. Prospect -Amherst Center
256-8157 • 256-1385



- Imports & other unibody vehicles are our specialty.
- State of the art equipment for precision frame and unibody straightening (+or-1/2 mm)
- Over 90 years staff experience.
- Accepted by all insurance companies for collision repair or glass replacement.
- Advanced European Technology Painting and Refinishing Systems.

Remember it's your car and your choice of repair facilities.

Shop Registration # RS1212

NORTHAMPTON BOWL

COLLEGE SPECIAL
[illegible] of Bowling
[illegible] Rental $5.00
[illegible] I.D.

Call 584-4630 for Reservations
186 Pleasant St., Northampton

ATTENTION JUNIORS AND SENIORS:

ATTEND GRADUATE AND PROFESSIONAL SCHOOLS INFORMATION DAY AT THE UMASS CAMPUS CENTER AUDITORIUM WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 23, 10A.M. - 3P.M.

While you're there, stop at our table and register for our drawing for one free graduate exam prep course. Sign up for a free grad exam diagnostic at the same time!

THE RONKIN EDUCATIONAL GROUP

Call: 549-4010
150 Fearing Street
Amherst

The country's largest full-range educational service company is in Amherst to provide you with state-of-the-art test prep and grad school selection services!

Top of the Campus Restaurant & Lounge

11th FLOOR • LINCOLN CAMPUS CENTER
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST

Mozzarella Sticks
Buffalo Wings
Potato Skins
Nachos

$2.00

Monday-Friday 5:00pm-10:00pm
expires November 30, 1991

Winter Session 1992 Catalog Is Here!

So, what exactly is Winter Session?
- a unique "mini-semester," just three weeks long

Well, what's so unique about it?
- you can earn 3 academic credits in only 3 weeks
- over 100 credit courses, including gen. ed. designated classes

How can Winter Session help me?
You can:
- take a class you couldn't get before
- make up credits
- meet graduation requirements
- lighten your spring course load

Winter Session 1992 — January 2-23
Registration by mail only begins November 9.
(Registrations must be postmarked no earlier than November 9.)

Catalogs available on campus or at the Division of Continuing Education 6th floor Goodell

Third World Affairs

Information as a weapon: colonization of the mind

"[The Gulf War] is the most cowardly war ever fought on this planet." [Third World Resurgence, Malaysia]

"What is being practised in the [Gulf War] is pure barbarism — ironically, committed in the name of civilization." [Folha de Sao Paulo, Brazil]

"[The West's] conduct throughout [the Gulf War] has revealed the seamiest sides of Western civilization: its unrestricted appetite for dominance, its appalling jingoism." [The Times of India, India]

Sound familiar? Certainly not, especially if you followed war coverage exclusively from CNN, ABC, NBC, CBS, AP, UPI, Reuters, AFP, or any other other Western news agency.

The almost complete lack of reporting on Third World perspectives of the Gulf War genocide is symptomatic of the West's insularity, control of the international information system, and resolute desire to use it to pursue its interests.

The "information age" has ushered in the use of technology to impose psychological forms of domination, which Third World countries find most difficult to resist, at all levels.

Lacking the finances, technology, and expertise to develop communication systems that honestly reflect their own history and culture, Third World countries have to rely on the West for information sources, thereby enabling greater foreign penetration.

Five news agencies (AP, UPI, Reuters, AFP, TASS) disseminate 90 percent of all the world's information. Western countries, with 10 percent of the world's population, dominate 90 percent of the radio waves. The overwhelming majority of newspapers, journals, TV news, and TV programs on the international market are owned by the West, particularly the United States.

This makes for a markedly skewed coverage of the Third World.

First of all, the coverage of Third World issues is disproportionate — less than 20 percent of Western coverage is devoted to the Third World, even though they account for 75 percent of the world's population. What little of it exists, is largely sensationalist, dwelling more on natural disasters or violent changes, instead of gradual developments of progress.

Secondly, Western media systems attempt to change consumer patterns and lifestyles so as to create favorable climates for their own exports, investments, and cultural commodities, much to the detriment of Third World structures.

Thirdly, most of the information flow into the Third World consists of entertainment material, which is replete with racial and cultural stereotypes. And so right from "classics" like Gunga Din, with its denigrating portrayal of Indians, to the Walt Disney cartoons full of demeaning images of fanatic Arabs, primitive Africans and volatile Latinos, Third World people are inundated with inferior images of themselves, and of each other.

Madanmohan Rao

Moreover, Third World liberation movements (such as the South-West African People's Movement and the Palestine Liberation Organization), are depicted as "terrorist" organizations, and those defending the status-quo as "defenders of freedom."

More drastically, though, international communication systems have been used to destabilize political systems opposed to the West, as in the case of Mossadegh in Iran or Allende in Chile. Particularly insiduous examples include the use of radio disinformation to create confusion and disarray during the overthrow of Arbenz in Guatemala, and the subversive TV Marti and Radio Marti (part of the Voice of America broadcasting system) projects to encourage discontent and counterrevolution in Cuba.

Whatever may be the form, the end result is electronic colonialism — an assualt on the minds and hearts of people, to manipulate their attitudes, desires, beliefs, and ultimately national destinies.

Realizing that economic and political freedom are inextricably linked with freedom from cultural and informational domination, Third World countries have tried to find collective solutions. Forums like the Non-Aligned Movement led their efforts in international organizations like the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO).

Their demands are very simple — a restructuring of the world information and communication order through communication policies, licensing, right-to-consent laws, and other such regulations on the unrestricted flow of information, to defend cultural and national identities.

Predictably, the West howls with indignation. Attempts at enforcing decency were decried as censorship, and dire parallels were drawn with Western governemnts like Nazi Germany. Violation of the freedom of information, and loss of "free flow" of information was condemned, although the flow was largely one-way.

The UNESCO was condemned for "skewed and radical politics." The US was particularly displeased with UNESCO concerns over Palestinian education and culture, and support for their rights. It was particularly opposed to the democratic voting pattern in the UNESCO of one member, one vote. Since it provided 25 percent of UNESCO funding, the U.S. demanded power proportionate to contributions.

Finally, realizing the enormity of the stakes involved if UNESCO did manage to push through the Third World agenda, the United States and Britain withdrew all support from UNESCO.

This has dealt a crippling blow to attempts by Third World countries to determine their own telecommunications policies, and maintain control over their own national media identity.

The recent Gulf War and its coverage have amply proven just how vital the global network is to the West's self-serving agenda.

Some may still hope to form regional alliances and networks, and slowly build a new communication order. But the present is harsh. South Africans trapped under apartheid will hear the West trumpet the "glorious changes wrought about by de Klerk," and Iraqis will see their plight mocked by Western media. No one here will hear of New Caledonia, the NPA (no, we're not going to tell you what it is), or Sheikh Yassin.

Enjoy The Simpsons, and the Thomas hearings. We will be right back after this commercial break.

Madanmohan Rao is a Collegian staff member. The opinions in this article are not necessarily those of the Collegian.

This is democracy? An anatomy of Israeli apartheid

"We are not a tree to be uprooted and replaced by another tree," protest the anguished villagers of Ramya, "When the Israeli bulldozers come to demolish our homes, we'll...let them bury us." The village of Ramya is scheduled for imminent demolition. In spring the Israel Land Authority informed the villagers that they would be evicted to make way for a group of Russian immigrants. The order remains in full effect, yet another instance of the removal of Palestinians from their lands to make way for the European colonists. It's all part of the wonderful world of Israeli Apartheid, a subject essentially taboo in the US media.

Hussein Ibish

Most Westerners think of Israel as the "only democracy in the Middle East," although they may have some idea that all is not as it "should be" on the West Bank. Palestinian suffering in the Occupied Territories is well known, but often dismissed as an unfortunate outgrowth of a "temporary occupation pending a peaceful settlement of the conflict." In this way, the seizing of 60 percent of the occupied lands from their Arab owners, detention without trial, deportation, collective punishment, murder of civilians including hundreds of children, torture, and rank discrimination at every level are somehow not seen as disqualifying of Israel's claim to "democracy". Astonishingly, neither is the fact that people in the Occupied Territories live under two sets of laws according to race: martial law for Palestinians, Israeli civil law for Zionist settlers.

What is, however, seldom recognized is the basic apartheid structure of Israel proper (pre-1967 borders) and the way in which the Israelis systematically discriminate against their own "Arab citizens". Ramya is not on the West Bank, it is in Galilee, and the dispossessed villagers are so-called "citizens of Israel," for all the good it has done them. Even if Israel were to do what they say they never will, and end the military occupation of the territories, this would do nothing to change the apartheid structure of Israel in which rights are determined by race.

The structure of Israeli apartheid is labyrinthine and torturous. All we can attempt here is a brief thumbnail sketch.

First of all, necessary to any system of apartheid is racial registration of all residents. Under the Population Registry Law, 1965, all residents must be classified under the categories, Religion, Nationality (i.e. "Jewish" or "Arab"), and Citizenship. It is the bizarre classification of "nationality" rather than citizenship, (and race which cannot be changed, as opposed to religion, which could be), that define one's rights for life under Israeli apartheid. Paramount among them is the question of land.

In effect, although Arabs make up at least 18 percent of the population, 92-94 percent of the land is barred to them. Some 20 percent of the land in Israel is owned by the quasi-governmental Jewish National Fund, and is quiet openly off-limits to Arabs, even through sublets. The rest of the lands administered by the Israel Land Authority is covertly, but effectively, barred to Arab presence. Hence all Arabs must live somewhere in 8 percent of the land, and are banned from the rest. No need to worry about the neighbors.

Bear in mind that at the time of the "establishment" of the State of Israel, at least 88 percent of the land of that became Israel was privately owned by Palestinians, and most of it was seized by the Absentee Property Law, 1950. It was enforced only against Arabs, who were refused the right to return, not against absentee Zionist landlords. It also classified many Arabs remaining in "Israel" as "absentees." Unlike land owned by Zionists, the property rights of Arabs in Israel are all but worthless. Just ask the people of Ramya. Or the former inhabitants of any of the 385 (out of a total of 475) villages existing in 1948, destroyed so far by the Israelis. Add Ramya and make that 386. Yediot Ahronot, the leading Israeli newspaper reports that the JNF "is trying to get hold of every piece of land not owned by Jews."

Through an incredible system of institutional discrimination, the Israeli authorities deny all kinds of benefits, amenities, and basic services to its Arab "citizens." Budgeting discretion allows various ministries to serve only the Zionist sectors of society, ignoring Arabs. Arab towns receive a pittance in local aid grants, at most 25 percent per capita of what Zionists can expect. Funding discrimination in education of children, religious affairs, physical plant, telephones, and public housing and all areas of public services involve extreme preferential treatment. Indeed, hundreds of Arab towns, although they may be ancient, are "unrecognized" by Israeli authorities, and thereby, although they are taxed, receive no services at all like roads, sewers, water, electricity, and are not allowed even to repair homes. Just ask the people of Ramya, an "unrecognized village."

They have the further misfortune to live next to the Israeli city of Carmiel, whose mayor is on record as refusing to allow Arabs into his city, claiming that it is a "bad idea" for Israelis and Arabs to live together. It seems he will get his way.

AP Photo

No Admittance! Palestinian barred from home by Israeli troops.

Political and social apartheid in Israel is of the hardcore variety. The Law of Return, 1950, confers the automatic right of entry on all Jews who fit the Israeli legal definition, while Palestinians whose families have never lived elsewhere have been expelled and denied reentry, solely on the basis of race. Rural settlements and development are handled by exclusively by the Jewish Agency, resulting in no new Arab rural settlements being established, or permitted, since 1948! The Agency also withholds access to roads, water and electricity rights. Not a single development area has ever included an Arab town. The trick is to take quasi-governmental organizations with a mandate that restricts them to Zionist causes, and put them in charge of what would normally be governmental functions, resulting in outrageous discrimination. Just ask the people of Ramya.

The Israelis withhold services and benefits to individuals on several bases. Rather than have benefits available to Israelis but not Arabs, the guise of benefits to soldiers and their families is used. In effect, almost all Israelis, and almost no Palestinians qualify for these services such as supplementary children's allowances, preference in hiring, in training, education subsidies, university admissions, and housing loans, to name but a few. Tax credits for certain areas have never included the Arab towns in the area. Arab workers are banned from spending the night in Israeli settlements. Mixed marriages are not permitted in Israel.

Finally, Arabs in Israel are allowed to vote, but only for parties that accept the basic tenets of Zionism. No candidate list espousing the political views of Palestinians would be allowed in an election. Thus Palestinians have the enviable right to vote for which variety of colonialists will oppress them. Wonderful democracy. Any expression of nationalism is called support for terrorism and results in arrest.

This system of apartheid is far broader, and runs deeper, than I have space to explain. Unlike South Africa, which now seeks to hide its apartheid from the glare of publicity, the Israelis carry on their merry, U.S. taxpayer-funded way. Just ask the people of Ramya.

Hussein Ibish is a Collegian staff member. The opinions in this article are not necessarily those of the Collegian.

Arts & Living

Herschlers rock urban blues

By KLAUS GAUGER
Collegian Correspondent

The Dayna B. Kurtz Band
& The Herschler Brothers Band
Pearl Street Night Club
Oct. 18, 1991

The atmosphere at Pearl Street was relaxed last Friday night, with lamps dimmed low and blues and jazz music in the background. The Dayna B. Kurtz Band opened the evening in front of a small audience, giving proof of their ability to match the club ambience with some intelligent blues songs.

Kurtz's voice is pleasant, at times reminding one of Billie Holliday's fragile, iridescent timbre, and at other times, like Aretha Franklin's rock-oriented, hollering, growling phrasing. She was doubtlessly the main focus of the band, while her accompanists on bass and drums tried to give her full rhythmic and melodic support. They did well on the slower tunes, reflecting convincingly Kurtz's mood.

Yet on the faster tunes, the rhythms tended to melt, as the musicians, including Kurtz on guitar, seemed preoccupied with the technical difficulties of their respective instruments.

The attention of the audience was also distracted by the bands' lack of musical climaxes at the end of their songs. The songs tended to start in an understating and soulful way, but then the group usually remained in this opening phase of the piece without building up clear lines and a pushing drive.

The group was also constantly retuning their instruments, a sign of uneasiness which should be avoided by a professional band. On the whole, I was aware of their collective musical talent, although they still need a lot of work to develop their talent.

On the flip side was the Herschler Brothers Band, whose driving powerful blues show was the highlight of the evening. Matt and Mark Herschler, both singers, with Matt on bass and Mark on guitar, have potent, intense, warm and vibrant voices. In duet passages they are able to make stunningly beautiful, poignant polyharmonic melodic lines. Their music is an interesting mixture of urban blues and rock and roll, with a strong folk music influence as well.

Both brothers are good instrumentalists, giving strong rhythmic and melodic support, as well as long, well-considered solos. The other three band members played at an equally high musical level, showing a deep understanding of the blues.

Drummer David Durst was excellent, always giving a swinging beat. He has an ability to move effortlessly from rocking, pushing rhythms, down to slow, subtle tempos. He was never too loud, and always had an ear tuned to the rest of the band. The same can be said about background vocalist Amy Fairchild, as her low clear voice was an excellent tonal contrast to the brothers Herschler.

Last, but not least, is the slide guitar of Jimmy Gordon, who proved not only to be a good accompanist, but an excellent soloist as well. His lines were simple, yet captivating, radiant and evolving, with some simply enchanting solos as well.

Hopefully this band can be heard from more often in the area, as this recent concert was excellent. The night was all in all satisfying, and the audience left delighted.

Cool by Keelaghan

By JOANNE QUIMBY
Collegian Staff

Canada's James Keelaghan has often been called a national treasure — an odd reference to a contemporary musician, I thought. After his Amherst College performance Sunday night the description seemed quite appropriate, however, as Keelaghan proved himself once again much more than a songwriter.

The James Keelaghan Trio played to an eager audience of about 50 in the small but full Amherst College Campus Center Frontroom. With bassist Bill Eaglesham and Gary Bird on the dobro and steel pedal guitar, James Keelaghan's rich baritone and acoustic guitar sounded better than I thought "folk music" could.

With a masters degree in history from the University of Calgary, Keelaghan brings more to delighted audiences than his enchanting, powerful voice. He is a storyteller, a historian, and most certainly a Canadian. His lyrics are essentially disguised social commentary, and his sound unmistakably influenced by traditional Irish music. More than anything else, Keelaghan sings of Canada — the people, the history, the land itself.

Keelaghan played two nearly hour-long sets and an encore. He opened with the hopeful ballad "Somewhere Ahead" from his second album Small Rebellion (Tranquilla, 1989), a "road song," Keelaghan told the audience, "about the last stretch of road before you hit Vancouver" on the Calgary-Vancouver road. Also from Small Rebellions, "Hillcrest Mine" tells the story of Canada's largest mining disaster and "Rebecca's Lament" sings of the ill-fated love between the Shawnee chief Tecumseh and the White woman Rebecca Galloway.

Keelaghan requested that the audience sing along with "Snap the Line Tight" from his 1987 debut album Timelines (Tranquilla). "This isn't optional," he scolded the few silent members of the audience, and urged everyone to sing "lustily." Keelaghan invited audience participation throughout the evening, conducting sing-alongs to "Departure Bay" and the rollicking "Gladys Ridge."

Throughout the concert, which was part of the "Sundays at Eight" coffeehouse series sponsored by the Amherst College Campus Center, Keelaghan was almost never silent. When he wasn't singing or telling the history behind a particular song, this personable performer was sure to be making one of his band members the butt of a joke or otherwise amusing the audience.

The range of songs covered by the Trio had a very distinct sound, yet at the same time each of them was somehow different. From the maritime undertones of "Snap the Line Tight" to the hint of reggae in "Timeless Love", inspired lyrics and masterful playing were the order of the evening. Keelaghan sang from the heart, while Bird's skill on the steel pedal guitar added a bluesy, authentic country touch and Eaglesham's expert fretless bass and harmonizing vocals made the music sound complete.

Vicky Pratt Keating, a native of the Washington, D.C. area, opened the show with an acoustic set. Among the quirky Keating's songs was a tribute to Sylvia Plath, "Sylvie Country," and two memorable songs about leaving the city behind, "Women in the Country" and "Backwoods."

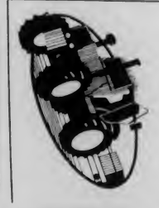
TONIGHT
KARAOKE
Video Sing-A-Long
&
DANCING
9:30 - 1:00
$1.00 Cover
First 50 People
REVERSE COVER
We Give YOU
$1.00
THE 23 PUB
CELEBRATES 23 YEARS 1968 • 1991 IN AMHERST
•15 EAST PLEASANT STREET•

家酒園南湖
HUNAN GARDEN
BEST CHINESE BUFFET
MANDARIN/ SZECHUAN CUISINE
5 PM - 9 PM SAT - THURS BUFFET
11:30 AM - 3 PM SUNDAY BRUNCH
ALL-YOU-CAN-EAT $5.99
10 BELCHERTOWN ROAD ◆ RT. 9 AMHERST
256-0251 ◆ 256-0252
WE DELIVER IN AMHERST
5 PM - 9:30 PM EVERYDAY
MINIMUM $15 PLUS $2 DELIVERY CHARGE
WE ACCEPT MASTERCARD

MIKE'S WESTVIEW CAFE
* Drink Special * Milwaukees Best $3.95 Pitcher
Wednesday Night is GUEST BARTENDER NIGHT
At Mike's
Free T-shirts & Prizes!
This week's guest bartender is: Caroline Murphy
Come have fun with Caroline and put your name in for the drawing.
Next week could be you!
PRIZES:
✗ $25.00 Gift Certificate to Mike's ✗ Mike'sOriginal T Shirt
✗ 2-Week membership to THE GYM ✗ Large Cheese Pizza from Pinocchio's
Your Picture will be Enshrined on the Walls of MIKE'S WESTVIEW
Drawing is Wednesday Night. Must be present to win but put your name in at any time! Be here for next weeks selection!!
* Drink Special * Mikes Pink s $1.50
Always something for everyone!
* Drink Special * Busch $4.50 Pitcher

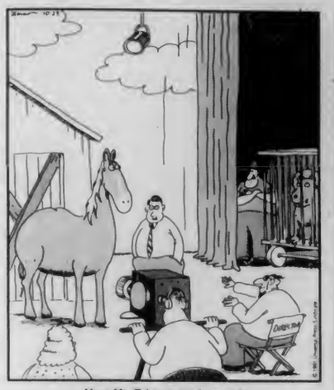
"Dedicated to Treating the Cause, Not the Symptom"
AMHERST CHIROPRACTIC
Family Health Center
DR. VIRGINIA D. HARPER
Chiropractic Physician
• NECK AND LOW BACK PAIN
• ATHLETIC INJURIES
• FATIGUE & STRESS RELATED DISORDERS
• MOST MAJOR PRIVATE HEALTH INSURANCES • WORKMAN'S COMPENSATION & AUTO ACCIDENT
8 University Drive at Hawthorne Center (Corner of Amity & University Dr.) Amherst, Mass 01002
549-0335 OFFICE HOURS BY APPOINTMENT

Rent One of Ours
Weekend Auto Rental Special
Weekend rate applies noon Friday to Monday morning
Rates start as low as $49.95
Must be 21 years of age or older with major credit card.
Trucks and cargo vans also available
Don't be disappointed - reserve TODAY!
North Amherst Motors Auto & Truck Rental
78 Old Sunderland Rd., North Amherst, MA
549-RENT (549-7368)
On Bus Route



Some of the biggest, some of the best presents come in the smallest boxes!
silverscape designs

THE FAR SIDE
By GARY LARSON



How Mr. Ed was made to talk

DOONESBURY
By GARRY TRUDEAU

CALVIN AND HOBBES
By BILL WATTERSON

TANGELO PIE
By TIM SNIFFEN

CAST OF THOUSANDS
By BARRY DEUTSCH

UNDER 21
By KRIS K. EARLE

Quote of the Day

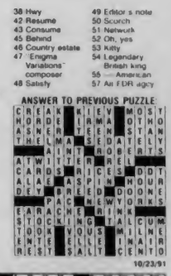
"I got hellhounds on my trail."
--Robert Johnson

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
By TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

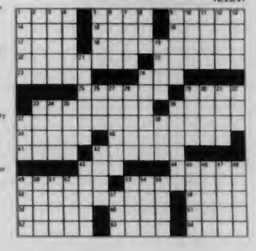
ACROSS
1 Sign of healing
5 Meadow youngster
9 Great bargain
14 Heavy reading
15 Samoan port
16 From now
17 Conner's partner
18 Kingsley novel
20 Snaps back
22 Ascended
23 — 'tout (quell)
24 French article
25 Leapt
29 Coffee, to some
33 Three Rivers prov.
36 Cut
37 Conrad novel
39 Desert green spot
40 Most elevated
41 Wapiti
42 Actor dancer Ben
43 —-pack
44 Where congregations gather
49 Scenario
53 Intermission reading
56 London novel
58 Seaweed
59 Devoured
60 Stream
61 Criticism, in a way
62 Trapped
63 Hollywood Ray
64 Welch

DOWN
1 Excites
2 Hanker after
3 Protozoan Var.
4 Broom
5 Cotton fabric
6 Mimicked
7 — Obs Regrets
8 Hit a homer
9 Divide
10 Garr of "Tootsie"
11 Objectives
12 Anguish
13 City in NW Spain
19 Thai river
21 Topples
24 Risky
26 Near East org.
27 Automatic response
28 Weakly
29 — Eyre
30 Astounds
31 Part of a 3 piece suit
32 Personals
33 Secure
34 Something to do
35 Goddess of discord
36 Lark
37 Gardener's need
38 Hwy.
42 Resume
43 Consume
45 Behind
46 Country estate
47 "Enigma Variations" composer
48 Satisfy
49 Editor's note
50 Scorch
51 Network
52 Oh, yes
53 Kitty
54 Legendary British king
55 — American
57 An FDR agcy.

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE



10/23/91



Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
BLT	Chicken Stir Fry
Duchess Meat Pie	Eggplant Parm
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Falafel Pocket	Eggplant Parm

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Put on the brakes in terms of having your say. Pushing too hard will backfire. Stick to familiar territory. Returning to conservative values when the going gets rough will see you through.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Diplomacy serves you well. Save your big moves for later in the day when everything will be running smoothly. Do not slam the door on someone. Be open to new ideas and techniques.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): An alliance with a member of the opposite sex could be strained now. Lie low and see how things go. Staying busy is your best bet; be more industrious at place of employment.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your powers of persuasion are at a peak. With telling impact, you get your point across. Comparison shoppers can find some fine bargains this afternoon. Your intuition rings true tonight.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Communications are worth their weight in gold. Pick up the phone or knock on doors. The welcome mat is out. Face a difficult situation with courage and a down-to-earth manner.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A favorable time to negotiate agreements and launch long-term ventures. Request favors through talks and letter; you can get exactly what you want now. Romance takes on a rosy glow. Show tenderness.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Others find you very convincing today; you will have no problem getting you way. Face-to-face meetings are a source of excitement and prosperity. Studying astrology can give you rare insights.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 22): The future looks bright! Pursue your long-range goals with zeal. Thanks to talks and travel, everything will fall into place. Keep your spending within reasonable limits. Build a nest egg.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21): An old acquaintance brings news that assists you in making a financial decision. Everything should on the up and up. Romance sizzles. Influential people are receptive to your ideas.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your associates may be wrapped up in their own concerns now. Keep mostly to yourself. Secret financial dealings could bring you luck. Be very discreet. Look both ways before crossing the street.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your reputation may be damaged if you act too hastily today. Make certain your moves are well thought out. Sharing a secret with a dear friend is a good idea. Avoid going into details.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Although work may have you feeling hemmed in, it pays to keep your nose to the grindstone. Team efforts are favored. Heed mate's wishes. A romantic interlude will brighten your evening.

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Greg Sukiennik
Copy Editor.....Beth Butts
PhotoTechnician.....Josh Reynolds
Production Supervisor.....Mike Carvalho
Production.....Lisa Jezowski, Oliver Raskin

New Smithereens inconsistent

By ERIC POULIN
Collegian Correspondent

The Smithereens
Blow Up
Capitol Records

When I first got the word that the Smithereens were making an attempt to provide variations on their basic riff-rockin' music, I thought to myself,

"Golly gee, this might be pretty nifty."

After all, their Smithereens 11 album probably established the band as the best three chord, basic rock and roll unit in the world. So with much anticipation, I gave their latest release a spin.

My emotions were mixed. "Top of the Pops", the first single, kicks off the album. It's a classic Smithereens guitar-cruncher, with one of those can't-get-this-damn-song-out-of-my-head type choruses. It's already logged a lot of airplay, and it's full of the power that we've all come to expect from New Jersey's finest.

From there, the album gets a little spotty. "Too Much Passion" is guitarist/vocalist/songwriter Pat Dinizio's attempt to write "the type of song Smokey Robinson would have written in 1966." Unfortunately, it doesn't work. Dinizio ends up sounding more like Huey Lewis than Smokey Robinson, while he utters through an achingly miserable tune.

"Tell Me When Did Things Go Wrong" is the angriest tune the Smithereens have ever penned, and is one of the highlights of the album. Dinizio explains that it is about "what I feel society has turned into," and seems to capture the frustration and pain that is everyday life.

"Evening Dress" is called a beautiful ballad in the press notes, but really sound like a blatant rip-off of Elvis Costello. I suppose that if you're going to attempt to sound like a famous preformer, Elvis is as good as any to imitate. But come on guys, let's try to sound like ourselves here.

Steve Berlin of Los Lobos makes a guest appearance as a one-man saxophone section on "Indigo Blues", which is one of my favorites on the album. It's a paired down R & B song which features the vocal debut of guitarist Jim Bajak's 2 1/2 year old son, Max.

But for the album's real centerpiece, you have to wait until the end. "If You Want The Sun To Shine" is the powerful highlight of the album, which Dinizio describes as "I Am The Walrus" meets "Kashmir." Dinizio collaborated with Julian Lennon to write this song, and the two definitely brought out the best in each other.

But overall, Blow Up seems inconsistent and a little uninspired. Give the Smithereens an "A" for effort; they did try to alter their style somewhat. This album is quite different from their last three releases but it's slightly below average for them.

LONDON
ROUND TRIP FROM $350

From NEW YORK
round trips starting at
LONDON $350
LENINGRAD $610
CARACAS $410
GUTEMALA C. $390
BANGKOK $939
LOS ANGELES-
AUCKLAND $699
Taxes & surcharges not included.
Fares subject to change.

Council Travel
79 So. Pleasant Street,
Amherst, MA 01002
(413)256-1261

CONTACT LENS CARE
AT THE UNIVERSITY HEALTH SERVICES

We take great pride in being able to fit many people who have had difficulty in the past wearing contact lenses.
•••
Offering a broad array of contact lenses with a large in house inventory.
•••
The new daily wear disposable and frequent replacement contact lenses are now available.
•••
All fittings are done by our eye doctors with experience in contact lens care and solving contact lens problems.
•••
Emphasis is placed on your ocular health and professional service.

uhs
EYE CARE PROGRAM
Convenient hours and convenient on campus location.
For questions or appointments, call 549-2671

EXPERIENCE THE CHALLENGE OF THE UMASS RESIDENCE ASSISTANT!
A limited number of positions are available for next semester.
Applications are available in cluster offices now!
Applications are due November 8 by 5:00pm to either Johnson or Thoreau clusters only.
APPLY TODAY!

Legal Problems?
Call UMass Student Legal Services!
Housing • Family • Student Rights
Civil Rights • Workers Rights
Criminal • Consumer Law
Military and Draft Law
922 Campus Center 545-1995

50% OFF ALL HALLOWEEN GOODIES!
Ghostly, Ghoulish, Funny & Freaky!
THURSDAY NIGHTS & SUN. AFT.
MC Visa Amex
Compliments
71 N. Pleasant St. (Above Cafe DiCarlo)
Amherst / 256-1551 • Mon.-Sat. 10-5:30

"THE LOVE STORY OF THE YEAR."
Another Oscar-calibre performance from Julia Roberts in her best role yet. As memorable as "Terms of Endearment."
"Julia Roberts goes beyond 'Pretty Woman': The best performance of her career."
"Remember the name: Campbell Scott. If you don't hear it on Oscar night, assume the Academy Awards are fixed."
"'Dying Young' is the 'Love Story' of the '90s."
Julia Roberts Campbell Scott
Dying Young
NOW SHOWING
THURSDAY • Oct 24 • 5, 7, 9, 11pm • Campus Center Auditorium
Sponsored by: LCA • $2.00 - 5:00pm showing • $3.00 - all others
DISTRIBUTED BY FILMS INCORPORATED © 1991 Films Incorporated. All rights reserved.

Halloween Headquarters
GREASE PAINTS • HANDS • FEET • WITCHES' HATS & BROOMS • WIGS • MOUSTACHES • BEARDS • NOSES • FANGS • TEETH • TOOTH BLACK-OUT
NORTHAMPTON HALLOWEEN CENTER
25 State Street • 584-5006
10 Minutes From UMass
LARGE ASSORTMENT OF MASKS TO CHOOSE FROM
Call for extended Haloween hours H.L. CHILDS & SON
Open Daily and Saturday 9:00am-5:15pm, Thursdays 'til 8:00pm
Check Our LOW Prices

STUDENTS WITH DIABETES
(And Their Guests)
.Meet with others
.Share ideas and strategies
.Learn about new developments
Information and Social Group begins Wed. November 6
Call 549-2671 x181 before Nov. 6 for information

Tyson-Holyfield to be held in January?

By ED SCHUYLER
AP Boxing Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Interest in the Evander Holyfield-Mike Tyson heavyweight title fight hasn't cooled, but it looks like the weather will have by the time it's held.

If Tyson's trial on a charge of rape and related charges goes ahead as scheduled Jan. 27 at Indianapolis, his heavyweight title challenge to Holyfield probably will be held in January in Las Vegas, a time of year when temperatures there can be in the 30s. The fight was scheduled for Nov. 8 outdoors at Caesars Palace, but was postponed Friday because of a rib injury to Tyson.

Promoter Dan Duva said if the fight is held outdoors at Caesars early in 1992, it would be on Friday, Jan. 10 or Friday, Jan. 17.

"We have to be concerned about how the weather will affect performances," Duva said.

Cold or not, however, the fight figures to be the most lucrative in history, with the bulk of the money coming from pay-per-view television, whose viewers will be comfortable. Also, the match ouside at Caesars Palace is assured a live gate of $13 million, and to move it indoors would greatly reduce the number of seats.

Duva said the fight could be scheduled for January, or moved back to February or March. Last Friday at Indianapolis, Judge Patricia J. Gifford of Marion County Superior Court denied a request for a trial postponement.

"This is not a typical (fight) postponement situation because Indianapolis has to be reckoned with," said Seth Abraham, president of Time-Warner Sports, the parent company of TVKO, which is to handle the closed-circuit telecast of the fight.

Study shows NHL is not too popular

NEW YORK (AP) — Tractor pulls more popular than NHL hockey? Roller Derby preferred over World Cup soccer?

It's true, according to the Sports Marketing Group of Dallas, which has released its complete list of what it says are the 114 most popular sports in America.

The NFL (No. 1), major league baseball (No. 5) and the NBA (No. 7) all made the top 10. But the NHL, considered the fourth major professional sport, was 40th in the survey, three spots ahead of PGA golf.

The World Cup, which will be played in the United States for the first time in 1994, came in 75th. That was 45 spots behind professional wrestling and 17 spots behind Roller Derby -but well ahead of another TV sport, American Gladiators, which came in No. 102.

The top 20 were the NFL, college football, Winter Olympics, Summer Olympics, major league baseball, high school football, the NBA, ladies figure skating, professional boxing, swimming, college basketball, Alpine ski racing, thoroughbred horse racing, women's gymnastics, college baseball, minor league baseball and high school basketball.

A private research company, hired by SMG, conducted more than 2,060 in-home interviews in more than 175 areas of the United States to get a representable sample of the total population, not just sports fans, the firm said. Participants in the survey were asked to give positive, negative or neutral opinions to 114 specific sports.

AMHERST CINEMA
Now Playing
PARIS IS BURNING
Showtimes:
Fri. - Sun.
7:30pm & 9pm
Mon-Thurs.
One show at 7:30pm
Adults $4.00
Student w/valid I.D. $3.00

Baldwin YAMAHA SAMICK
SALE IN PROGRESS
FALCETTI MUSIC
Hampshire Mall
586-9633

DOMINO'S PIZZA
U-MASS 256-8911
Mt. Holyoke 535-1111
We Accept Competetors Coupons
30¢ PIZZA
ORDER ANY TWO TOPPING LARGE PIZZA GET MEDIUM 1 TOPPING PIZZA FOR 30¢
1.99 PIZZA
BUY ANY LARGE PIZZA GET 2ND ONE FOR $1.99
BUY ANY LARGE PIZZA
for the price of a small Pizza

Classifieds

COME TO THE COLLEGIAN OFFICE 113 CAMPUS CENTER • THURSDAY 8:30-3:30 FRIDAY 8:30-2:30 • DEADLINE IS TWO DAYS PRIOR TO PUBLICATION • 20¢/WORD/DAY FOR STUDENTS • CASH IN ADVANCE

ACTIVITIES

SCREW YOUR ROOMMATE DANCE
Tickets $3
Wed-Fri dinner
Franklin, Berkshire

ANNOUNCEMENTS

STOP BY CAMPUS POND today for the Delta Zeta Seesaw-a-thon. Help suupport us in raising money for our national philanthropy!

HOT...SPICY...MOUTHWATERING...
BUFFALO WINGS!!
Finally, what you've been waiting for.
Fast, free, healthy delivery!
Introducing Mama Mapes Wings -N- Things opening Thursday Oct 31st
Don't miss out!

Wanna play LIVE on WMUA?
We're looking for bands
to play for the
Live Music Project.
Call 545-2892
Ask for Dave Demerjian or Ami Bennit.

AUTO FOR SALE

79 TOYOTA COROLLA Only 95000 miles! Absolutely no rust! Great shape! $1000/BO Joe 546-4917

ENTERTAINMENT

HAVING A PARTY? Forget the stereo, hire a band! Call Brendan at 586-2533

RACK-A-DISC! $175.00 DJs, VJs, Karaoke for house/ Formal parties. Call 586-9900

FOR RENT

2 large roomed apt Heat inc. Center of Amherst 256-1124

FRIDGE RENTALS 253-9742 Free Delivery

LARGE BEDROOM IN 4bdrm house 2full bath Hardwood floors 8 min from campus of 170 month Call Jeff 548-9781

Montague - 20 minutes to Amherst, close to I91, charming, spacious one bedroom apartment in country farmhouse. Ideal for single or couple. Lease for 9 or 12 months. Storage, furnishings available. $350/month plus utilities. 527-7222

Puffton Village one bedroom apt. available any time before Dec. 1. Call 549-0068

TOWNHOUSE 2 BEDROOM 1 1/2 bath Bus route N Amherst 1-567-1352

FOR SALE

FOR SALE
Electric guitar and amp
Good beginner's set
Loud and fun
$280 Call 586-7353

NEW & USED COMPUTERS
Call Damn 6-2270

HELP WANTED

Earn $2500 & Free trips selling spring break packages to Bahamas, Mexico, Jamaica, Florida! Best trips & prices!

EXTERIOR PAINTERS
Experienced student painters needed to paint Amherst area homes. Full or part time America's College Painters (800) 626-8267 "Painting America's homes coast to coast"

"Know before you go," Where to work, live and ski free in Colorado's resorts. "Current guide to Aspen, Vail, Breckenridge and more! $16.95. Call 1-800-788-6174

TUTOR NEEDED FOR Mezio. Call ASAP 546-6404 will pay cash

LOST

Reward for the return of 60 CD's stolen from Main St. Fri. night
Call Mike 253-0666

MOTORCYCLES

Suzuki 450 1980 Runs well
$200 Call 256-3466 Ask for Bryant

MUSICIANS

EXPERIENCED GUITAR PLAYER looking to join or start a serious club/party band. Must be hard working and willing to have a good time! I have equipment and transportation! Please Call Adam at 546-4270

PERSONALS

ALISON LEWENBERG
I'm excited your my little sister
Love your big sis

KIM YOHALEM
Here is to good times together
Love your big sis

BROOKLYN
It's those vibes.
With each day they grow stronger, closer and louder

ROCKY HORROR HUNCHBACK
All it took was just one look. I find you captivating.
XVirgen

MICHELLE KEARNS!
¡Al entendu que tu as rencontre un vrai "ACE" de week-end?!
LML et GROS BISES
-Love "40"
Your Big Sis.

PRESENTING:
"Julia Roberts in"
DYING YOUNG
Tomorrow night in
The Campus Center Auditorium
$2-5:00, $3-7 & 11pm
Sponsored by LCA

HEY NUTS- You can cream my coffee any time at People's Market. Just say when...
-Wicked Buns

KATHI REINSTEIN
Love
My Little Sis
Maybe?
Love,
Your Big Sis

ROBIN (PH)ABIANO
M-L (ourflower) = Clue #1
Love Your Big Sis

HAPPY BIRTHDAY DAWN
Here is a little little little little little birthday wish! And as always your health comes first!
Love L.D.

Michelle Rondeau
I am psyched to be your big sister!
Guess who?
LML, Your Big Sis

THE OTHER JOSH G -
Maybe if you get a haircut you'll get a real personal also!
Tame the mane!!
An old friend!

LORRAINE
How's your fever?
Cheer up!!!
Luv, Roni

MARION
Who needs notes
when were already in unison!
LML
Your Big Sis

JESS-
Looking forward to having an awesome semester with the best little sister! Hope you're as excited as I am.
See you soon,
LML-Your Big Sis

ALISON BAKER:
Here is a clue, for you to see who I might be-
Our interview was fun! SPLASH!
I couldn't be happier that you are my little sister.
PHI LOVE YOU,
YOUR BIG SIS

TO THE BEST AEPHI Little Sister!!
<<<<Stephanie R >>>>
You're Phi Nominal & You're all mine!
Phi Love, LML Your Big Sis!?!

CLARK MILLIKEN
Happy 21st Birthday
Love, Nancy

BARB- I'm always here for you.
Even if I'm in another country
at 6a.m.!
With Phi Love,
Your Big Sis

GANGSTER,
First you stole the light.
Now you're stealing something else
I don't have any roses or clam cakes
LOVE YOU, your Buddy

Snutsalugus-
FOOTBALL--HOCKEY!!
Now I have your attention
Just a note to say
I LOVE YOU!
Love Oscar

¡JERUSHA!
What do you think you are?
A super star?
Well right you are!!!
Shine on for your 20th, and remember you are loved.
Phi

ERIC- Happy 20th birthday!! Don't celebrate too hard. I love you. Love Angie hi! Good luck on your interview today! We know you'll do great!!

Lissa (Dirt)
We love you!!
Andie, JenVP, Katie, & Jason

HI LESLIE
Frsh Gebuttsling
on the 22nd!
We miss you at
UMASS

Maureen-
Pledge? Sister?
Crack the code!
LML-
Your Big Sis

TO MY LITTLE SIS BETSY HOVEL
Get ready to have some fun
Phi Love - Mel!

KRISTIN KEEFE
Welcome to MY Phi Family
Love your big sis

JELLO TWISTER

BRIAN
Thank you for the best birthday ever!
Everything was perfect
I love you
Marlene

MIKE HICKEY OF PIKE
We are so super psyched
you are finally 21
Happy Birthday
Love,
Sorority Sisters of 12

ABSOLUTE ZERO
Thanks the crew on
118 for having us
Play and all our friends who came to cheer us on

Tina D.
You're PHI-nominal! We'll have a blast!
Get psyched!
PHI LOVE
Your Big Sis

Audrey
Happy 19th Birthday!!
Sorry its late hope it was fun
Love Stephen

WARNING
All American Reedy is 21
Alt 160-LBS watchout

Carl, Happy 21st!! From your lovesleaves on third floor Brooks

RIDE WANTED

NORTHAMPTON TO AMHERST week nights 1:30AM-7 253-2329

RIDE WANTED
To VanHalen / Worcester, 10/31. Pay gas.
Chris 546-1712

SERVICES

BICYCLE BROKEN?
Call Pat
546-0119

ORDER AYON!
546-1999
Call for brochure.

PREGNANT?
Need a pregnancy test, information or support? Call for free and confidential services. ALTERNATIVES 245 Main Street, Northampton 586-3000 or Greenfield 774-6019

SENIORS AND JUNIORS
Time to think about resumes.
Let me help you design your resume
I offer professional results at college prices
Call Andy at 549-4002

STOP SMOKING WITH the help of powerful hypnotherapist from T I W. Special discounts for students. Call 586-7372

FREE pregnancy testing; confidential and caring support. BIRTHRIGHT 233 No. Pleasant Street Amherst 549-1906

TRAVEL

BAHAMA CRUISE $99 Per person
5 day /4 night hotel Plan now for your break. Very limited offer. Call now 1-800-621-0572

Earn FABULOUS FREE Spring break vacation while meeting new people and earning cash. Work at your own pace. Energetic, highly motivated, outgoing individuals needed. Call Campus Holidays at 800-627-4791

Killington Collegiate Ski Fest Jan 12-17 condo, hottubs, skiing, and more. Also spring break, Cancun, Jamaica and more. Call John & John 549-8101

TYPING

PAPERS TYPED. $1.50/typed page Quick, Accurate Service. Call Brian 546-3563

WORD PROCESSING, laser printing, papers, resumes, theses. Rosemary 259-1786

WANTED

BIKE FRAME
Steel Road Frame/Fork 58CM
Pete 253-3886

To recycle: Prescription medication bottles/containers (Nonrenewable RX only) Please call 585-8709

Sports

Stretch run key to women's NCAA bid

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

After Monday's tough 2-0 loss to the University of Connecticut, the University of Massachusetts women's soccer team will have to play near perfect soccer the rest of the season in order to make the NCAA Championships.

That task begins today as the Minutewomen (9-4) square off with the University of Rhode Island (6-7-2) at 3 p.m. on Lower Boyden Field.

Massachusetts is currently ranked No. 10 in the nation and third in the North. The top two teams in each region of the country, the North, South, Mid-West and West receive automatic bids to the tournament. Also invited will be four at large teams.

UMass has already lost to the two teams ahead of them in the regional race, Hartford and Connecticut. Hartford, No. 2 in the region and ninth in the country defeated the Minutewomen 2-1, and UConn, top ranked in the North and second nationally, beat UMass 2-0 on Monday. Thus an automatic bid will be difficult to capture unless Hartford stumbles.

With five games remaining UMass needs to win them all to assure themselves of an at large bid. A loss leaves them at the mercy of the selection committee. UMass faces No. 14 Cornell this Sunday and No. 17 Rutgers in the season finale on November 3, so the road won't be an easy one.

"I'd say [winning them all] is necessary," UMass coach Jim Rudy said. "If we do that we will put ourselves in the best possible position. We are in a group of about six teams battling for three playoff spots."

Those teams seem to be No. 11 California (9-4-0), No. 12 George Mason (9-4-1), No. 13 Southern Methodist (7-6-0), Cornell (9-1-1) and No. 16 Central Florida (8-4-1). UMass has already defeated each team except SMU and Cornell, whom they play Sunday.

"It is going to be very tight," Rudy said. "I felt we got squeezed last year so I don't take anything for granted."

As for the URI game, Massachusetts may have to do without the services of midfielder Paula Wilkens. Wilkens wasn't supposed to play against UConn due to back spasms but she received treatment and played.

"I don't know if she'll play or not," Rudy said. "I wasn't expecting her Monday and she made it in and did a good job."

Rhode Island is lead by senior midfielder Tracie Yrigoyen who has six goals on the season while forward Susi Mang has four goals and one assist.

Collegian photo by Josh Reynolds

Massachusetts Paula Wilkens lies motionless on the field during Mondays game with UConn. Wilkens is suffering from back spasms and is questionable for todays game against URI.

A fun look at the just-begun NHL season

Would you please rise for the singing of the Canadian and American National Anthems. . .

Well, how else should I begin a piece on the start of the hockey season? Don't tell me you don't sing along, because I know you do. Come now, admit it. You get chills when you see and hear 15,000 fans singing "Oh Canada, we stand on guard for thee." If you don't, you've got problems.

Ahhh, hockey. Organs that play "DUNNH dunnh dunnh dunnh DUNHH dunnh dunnh dunnh." Fred Cusick screaming "Scorrrrrre!" Fans who actually try to catch pucks flying into the stands (ouch!). When you've got a hot dog, a watered-down beer and two guys with just 30 teeth between them trying to pull each other's sweaters over their heads, what more could you want?

It's the new-look National Hockey League — instant replay and expansion. A lot of controversy arises when goals are called back or not called, and a TV camera can only help the situation. I hope they don't overuse it like they do in football, though.

There's blood in the water. Here come the Sharks. The San Jose Sharks, that is, the NHL's newest team. Sports marketing types are all abuzz over the Sharks' snazzy turquoise and black duds, which according to recent figures are accounting for 40 percent of all NHL goodies sold this year. Not bad for an expansion team that might win 20 games if they're lucky.

Here, then, is a look at this year's NHL regular season. This time around, though, I won't try to pick division winners or anything profound like that. Two reasons: first, I'm lousy at hockey picks. I took the Buffalo Sabres to win it all last season — is that enough evidence for you?

Reason number two: As the great Bill Murray said in the cinematic classic Meatballs, "It just doesn't matter." It doesn't matter if you finish fourth in your division. It doesn't matter if you rack up 100 points on the year. You make the playoffs anyway! It just doesn't matter! It just doesn't matter! It just. . .

You get the idea.

Instead, then, let's check out a few of the better teams. Let's laugh at those six inept teams that won't make the playoffs. Let's admire the grace and skill of Brett Hull, the greed of Eric Lindross, the left hook of Jay Miller, the wonder and awe of the Zamboni, man's greatest invention.

It's the NHL's 75th anniversary. Did you send the Boston Bruins a card? "Happy anniversary, guys. Dig those funky replica uniforms they dug out of the closet for you. Win a Stanley Cup before they tear the old Garden down."

Greg Sukiennik

The quest for a Cup continues for the B's. Will Ray Bourque ever wear the championship ring he so richly deserves? One wonders as the Bruins play out the same scenario every year. They play great hockey all season long, get past the land mines (Hartford and Montreal) in the divisional playoffs, then run out of steam somewhere between Pittsburgh and Edmonton. One can only hope it's somehow different this time around.

Montreal continues to be a thorn in Boston's side. There is growing maturity among Les Habitants' younger members, particularly defenseman Mathieu Schnieder. The Canadians looked better last year than they had in some time, and continued improvement would mean wailing and grinding of teeth in Beantown.

The Pittsburgh Penguins were just like so many teams in the NHL until last spring. Lots of potential, no title. But with the right coach — Bob Johnson — the Pens left their competition in the dust. What they did to the Bruins was downright amazing, and they had enough left over to stop Minnesota.

Johnson's battle with cancer throws question marks onto the ice at the Igloo. If they falter, look out for the New York Rangers. Rather, look out for Mark Messier. The former league M.V.P. is a formidable aquisiton for an already potent offense. Some say this is the year for the Rangers. I say "not." They'll find a way to choke just like they always do.

It didn't take long for the Norris Division's teams to get to know one another again. Opening night in Minnesota, and look — there's a Chicago Black Hawk swinging his stick at a fan behind the Chicago bench! How quaint. It's just par for the course in the Norris, the WWF of the NHL.

Is Minnesota for real? I'm not sure, but I liked their old uniforms better than the new black and green sweaters that say "stars." I thought that N with the star on it was cool.

Anyone could win the Norris, except maybe for Toronto. With that in mind, I'll put my two cents in for the Maple Leafs. Why? No one else is, and tickets at Maple Leaf Gardens should be cheap and plentiful. I'm a Red Sox fan. I can deal with pain.

Is this finally the year for the Los Angeles Kings? Jari Kurri and Wayne Gretzky are reunited on the same team again and the Kings are, in my opinion, loaded.

Here's the important prediction for this year: Toronto, Quebec, Philadelphia, the Islanders, Vancouver and San Jose will all miss the playoffs. Besides them, it just doesn't matter.

Greg Sukiennik is a Collegian columnist

Men's soccer at UConn

By TED KOTTLER
Collegian Staff

This afternoon, the University of Massachusetts men's soccer team (7-3-3, No. 8 in New England) squares off against the University of Connecticut (8-5-2, No. 3 in N.E.) in Storrs, Connecticut.

The Huskies are unquestionably a formidable opponent as they have been receiving votes in the NCAA Division I Top 20 Poll.

"There are no real surprises when you play UConn, they're just very consistent," UMass coach Sam Koch said, "[They're] always a well-disciplined, fit team."

UMass goalie and co-captain Jon Gruber said, "UMass and UConn have such a big rivalry, it'd be nice to knock them off."

The large crowd that the Huskies will likely draw today is not something the Minutemen are accustomed to facing, and it may be a tough obstacle. UConn's average home attendance is 2,718.

"We have to play well down there because they get good fan support," Gruber said.

UConn and UMass have faced no common opponents to this date. (The Minutemen were scheduled to face Dartmouth on September 28, but the game was canceled due to excessive rain. UConn and Dartmouth played to a scoreless tie earlier this season.)

It appears on paper that UMass has a defensive advantage that may prove to be another key to the game. UMass has only allowed an average 0.77 goals per game, compared to UConn's average allowance of 1.27.

Both teams should be grateful that this game will be played on natural grass. UMass barely squeezed past Holy Cross last Wednesday on artificial turf, 1-0, and in its last game, UMass fell to St. Joseph's, 1-0, also on the turf.

"It's good to be back on grass," Koch said.

The Huskies are 0-4-0 on artificial turf this season.

UMass fans are eagerly awaiting Sunday's matchup with No. 1 in the nation Rutgers (if UMass pulls off an upset, it will clinch a berth in the Atlantic-10 Tournament), but Koch does not want to look ahead that far.

Yankee Conference standings

	Conf.	Pts.	Opp.	Overall	Pts.	Opp.	Streak
UNH	4-0	138	64	5-1	209	116	W5
Delaware	4-1	167	108	6-1	223	129	W2
Villanova	4-1	202	67	5-1	242	67	L1
URI	2-2	86	105	4-2	169	166	W4
Richmond	2-3	69	116	2-4	96	154	W1
UMass	2-3	67	77	2-5	94	123	L3
UConn	1-2	55	77	2-4	132	167	W2
Maine	1-4	79	163	1-6	110	218	L2
Boston U	0-4	52	138	1-6	107	221	L5

YanCon stats

RUSHING	G	ATT.	YDS.	AVG.	TD	LONG	YDS/GM
Jerome Bledsoe, UMass	7	153	835	5.5	3	42	119.3
Barry Bourassa, UMass	6	125	678	5.4	10	44	113.0
Ed Long, UConn	3	58	257	4.4	2	25	85.7
Darlo Highsmith, URI	6	83	503	6.1	6	35	83.8
Paul Capriotti, ME	7	132	549	4.2	7	56	78.4
Pat Kennedy, VU	6	89	468	5.3	10	53	78.0
Bill Vergantino, UD	7	96	485	5.1	7	32	69.3

PASSING	G	COMP-ATT	PCT.	YDS.	INT.-TD	EFF.	YDS/GM
Tom Colombo, VU	9	129-198	.652	1,623	6-13	149.6	270.5
Matt Griffin, UNH	6	106-188	.564	1,552	7-14	142.84	272.2
Paul Tornatore, UMass	5	30-52	.577	387	2-3	131.60	77.4
Steve Holland, URI	6	62-113	.549	1,038	8-5	131.1	173.0
Cornelius Benton, Conn	6	128-227	.564	1,692	7-10	117.22	282.0
Bill Vergantino, UD	7	57-113	.505	778	7-7	116.30	111.1
Greg Lilly, UR	6	71-145	.490	1,000	4-3	108.20	166.7
Emilio Colon, ME	6	86-162	.531	1,022	10-2	92.80	170.3

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THE LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND

VOLUME CI ISSUE 37 THURSDAY, OCTOBER 24, 1991

Efforts get mixed reviews

Response to 1986 riot said inadequate

Five years ago this Sunday, as the Boston Red Sox went down to defeat at the hands of the New York Mets, the Southwest Residential Area erupted in violence. This is the second in a three-part series examining the riot and its aftermath.

By JASON GEORGE
Collegian Staff

While the Southwest riots of 1986 have produced a heightened sense of awareness of the issues of racism and racial tension on the University of Massachusetts campus, administrators and staff say dwindling University resources and resistance from various sectors of the campus community have left the response to these problems inadequate.

In the wake of a racially-motivated brawl on Oct. 27, 1986 following the final game of the World Series between the Boston Red Sox and New York Mets, then-Chancellor Joseph Duffey commissioned Judge Frederick A. Hurst to conduct an outside investigation of the incident.

Hurst's 11-page "Report on University of Massachusetts Investigation," was issued in February 1987.

The Hurst report was both wide and narrow in focus, containing 15 recommendations for the University. These included calls for improved security and public relations, educational programs for both White and Black students, revisions in the alcohol policy and strengthening the University's Civility Commission.

One of Hurst's recommendations called for "more courses which deal with racial issues be developed, widely advertised and offered" to "maximize student awareness of racial issues in America."

The University responded by implementing two required Social and Cultural Diversity Courses. This requirement has suffered from inadequate funding for teaching assistants and a lack of courses, while plans for a required course taught in the residence halls has been forced to wait for lack for funding.

Associate Dean of Academic Affairs M. Ricardo Townes said the University's response in certain areas indicates that more widespread improvements are possible.

Townes noted that while he "would have hoped that the response of the University would have been better," the University's writing program has worked toward a better understanding of racial issues. Townes said the program added more people and attempted to look at reading material dealing with racism and other issues.

"We can be proud of what the writing program does," Townes said. "We're not talking about a resource thing, but about an

CONTINUED ON PAGE 2

Campus boasts on-call system for incidents

One of Judge Frederick Hurst's recommendations in the wake of the Southwest incident of 1986 involved the development of more effective reporting procedures for incidents involving students and other parts of the University community..

The recommendation was put in motion in the fall of 1987 with the implementation of an on-call system for the Student Affairs staff.

Interim Dean of Students Sharon Kipitz called the system a "way to provide information to different offices at the University."

"It allows us to provide services in a better way," Kipitz said. "Things have a tendency not to happen between 8:30 a.m. and 5 p.m."

The procedure basically works through a chain, with an incident first being reported to a front line staff member, then to a supervisor, a unit chief, and eventually reaching the Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs.

Kipetz said the Dean of Students office has developed an "on-duty" roster, with a beeper that rotates between staff members who serve as contact points when potential

CONTINUED ON PAGE 2

GEO rallies against 'unacceptable' fees

By JASON GEORGE
Collegian Staff

Approximately 75 members of the Graduate Employee Organization rallied yesterday to protest what they called "unacceptable" health and curriculum fees.

The rally, which organizers described as a "collective fee non-payment," began on the Student Union steps and moved to the Whitmore Administration Building, where protesters presented letters of protest to the Bursar's office and Chancellor Richard O'Brien.

Patricia Hanrahan, a doctoral student in the sociology department, called the health care fees graduate students pay a "forced choice."

"Today is a day of financial reckoning for most of us," Hanrahan said. "People are giving up other things to pay for health insurance — that's wrong."

After rallying on the Student Union steps, GEO members marched to Whitmore, chanting "workers/students united will never be defeated."

Approximately 50 graduate students gathered outside the Bursar's Office and circulated a letter explaining why they were unable to pay their fees.

Protesters then marched to O'Brien's office, demanding to see him. When told by a secretary that he was not in his office, many made individual appointments to meet with him.

Graduate students taking nine or more credits currently pay fees of $729.25 per semester, not including a $785 cur-

CONTINUED ON PAGE 2

Collegian photo by Josh Reynolds

GEO demonstrators enter Whitmore on their way to the Chancellor's office.

Collegian photo by Josh Reynolds

YOU MEAN THEY'RE FREE? I'LL TAKE TEN! — Ulrich Toll of the Gideons distributes free bibles on campus Tuesday.

UM student charges false arrest

By MICHAEL LEVY
Collegian Staff

A Black University of Massachusetts student who says that she was wrongly arrested last October for trespassing in the Campus Center, has filed a lawsuit against the arresting officer and the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

After being arrested on Oct. 3 1990, Loyda Guzman, a senior political science major from Worcester, was released from the campus police station after being detained for 45 minutes, according to the written complaint. Guzman was told upon her release that she was mistaken for another woman named Charlene Kerr.

Kerr, who is also Black, does not share any other common physical traits with Guzman, said Guzman's attorney Howard Friedman of Boston.

Guzman's arrest came after a series of run-ins with the University police.

Guzman said she was "a very active protester" when University buildings were taken over during the spring of 1989 in protest of Department of Defense funding at the University. She said she "spoke at a lot of rallies," was involved in every building takeover and arrested twice.

"My face was the one that one of two officers really remembered," she said. "But they had no right to come up to me after that point."

Guzman said on three separate occasions between her 1989 arrests and the October incident, UMass police officials stopped her — once while driving through campus and twice at the Campus Center.

She said after the third time she spoke with the Director of the Department of Public Safety Arthur Hilson.

"Art Hilson did not take me seriously," she said. "He could have prevented this."

Guzman said that after listening to her in an uninterested manner Hilson "gave me his personal guarantee that the men would not bother me."

Upon arrest, Guzman said she asked officer Kevin Antonovitch why campus police had detained her.

He gave no answer, she said. "He seems to have something personal against me."

Antonovitch was unavailable for comment.

In all three Campus Center incidents, it was Antonovitch who approached her, Guzman said. She added that he often mentioned having arrested her at the building takeovers.

After being released with the explanation of mistaken identity, Guzman said she wondered, "If I was that woman [Charlene Kerr] and I was trespassing, would they have had to arrest me anyway?... Has Antonovitch arrested her before?"

University attorney Sidney Myers had no comment saying, "In accordance with University policy we don't discuss pending cases."

Guzman has filed three counts, two against Antonovitch and one against the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

The first count is for violation of a Guzman's 14th

CONTINUED ON PAGE 6

Inside:

Page 3:
The Student Senate decides to reopen an old research and advocacy center.

Page 4:
Greg Sukiennik is tired of being screwed over by those Housing dudes and he'll tell you why.

This Weekend:
Shakespeare never played in a way cool band or anything, but we've got a band you should see that would have made him say "party on!"

Weather
Supposedly it's going to be mild today with highs around 70.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THE LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is a Registered Student Organization of the University of Massachusetts, published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000.

113 CAMPUS CENTER AMHERST, MA 01003
Phone (413) 545-3500 FAX (413) 545-1592

STAFF

Editor in Chief ..... Gayle Long
Managing Editor ..... Marc Elliott
Editorial Editor ..... Greg Sukiennik
News Editor ..... Preston P. Forman
Sports Editor ..... Tamir Lipton
Arts Editor ..... Paul DeGeorges
Photography Editor (interim) ..... Josh Reynolds
Black Affairs Editor ..... Sondra Sutton
Women's Issues Editor ..... Jessame Hannus
Jewish Affairs ..... Felice Cohen, Debra Kriegsman
Multicultural Affairs Editor .....
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Madanmohan Rao
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Trystan Skeigh
Business Manager ..... Randee Pastel
Advertising Manager ..... Dena Haselkorn
Finance Manager ..... Jeff Weiner
Circulation Manager ..... Jim Winterbottom
Subscriptions Manager ..... Stacy Rogers
Promotions Manager ..... Scott Macey
Production Manager ..... Terry Starmer
Day Graphics Manager ..... Jenn Burns

PROFESSIONAL STAFF

Business ..... Brian Harrington, Lori Black, Maureen Majerowski
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

■ response system

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

problems occur.

Kipetz pointed to a recent phone shutdown as an example of the system's success. Students reported to campus police late one evening that their phone calls were not being connected.

The desk sergeant on duty found that there were problems in the line between Springfield and Amherst and called Kipetz to alert her to the situation.

Kipetz said that once it was decided there was "no health and safety problem for students," she decided to wait to notify other members of the administration at 8:30 the next morning.

"It feels like people need to know about things," Kipetz said. "The system could be used for anything."

—JASON GEORGE

Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Forum

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 24

Film — "Desert Hearts" will be shown in CC 803 at 7 p.m.

Men's Group — The LBGA Men's group will meet in the LBGA Office at 8 p.m.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 25

Coffee Social — The LBGA Coffee Social will be held in CC 903 from 3 p.m - 6 p.m.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 26

Names Quilt — The Names Project AIDS Memorial Quilt will be on display at Springfield Technical Community College from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. For information about the University of Massachusetts caravan to the memorial, please call 545-0154.

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 27

Names Quilt — The Names Project AIDS Memorial Quilt will be on display at STCC from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. For more information call 545-0154.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 28

Graduate reception — There will be a reception for graduate students at 5 p.m. in the Program Office in Crampton House.

Lecture — "Lesbian and Gay Politics in the 90s" will be at 8 p.m. in CC 165-169

Meeting — The Amherst LBGA will meet in the Amherst Campus Center room 201 at 9 p.m.

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 29

Lecture — "Legal Issues for Lesbians and Gays" wil be from 4 p.m. - 6 p.m. in CC 917.

Meeting — PFLAG Workshop will meet in CC 917 at 7 p.m.

Meeting — The LBWU will meet in the LBGA office at 7:30 p.m.

Coffeehouse — Smith College LBA Space, women only at 8 p.m. to 10 p.m.

Concert — The Flirtations will be in the Campus Center Auditorium at 7:30 p.m.

■ rally

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

riculum fee. Basic health fees are $185.25 per semester, with students who don't have other health insurance paying a supplemental health fee of $325 covering two semesters.

While graduate employees enjoy a curriculum fee waiver, an estimated 3,800 graduate students are not University employees and must pay the fee, according to GEO spokesperson Jill Havens.

"Money worries are not new to us at graduate school," Hanrahan said. "This poverty is self-inflicted and time-limited, but it doesn't mean we should put up with added stress."

GEO co-speaker Emily Isaacs, a fourth-year doctoral student in English, said that non-payment of fees was "not a protest but a financial reality."

Isaacs said she knew of other graduate students who paid their fees by taking out cash withdrawal on credit cards, taking out loans, or drawing on reserve credit from banks.

"Frankly, one of our issues is that administrators don't even know what graduate students are paying in fees," Isaacs said.

Sara Lyon, secretary of the Graduate Student Senate and a self-described rank-and-file GEO member, said the GSS voted recently to support the organizations "right to negotiate a fair contract."

"Is 30 percent of a graduate student's salary for health fees acceptable?" Lyon asked.

GEO, which represents all graduate employees who are research and teaching assistants, fellows and interns, has been trying to negotiate a contract with administration for the past 10 months. According to GEO estimates, out of aproximately 6,000 graduate students, about 2,200 graduate employees are represented by the GEO, while about 1,200 pay dues.

■ Southwest riot

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

attitude — if [writing] can take this on, why can't other departments."

Townes, however, added that "no one can look at a response or set of responses in a budget crisis . . . that's a large part of why the University hasn't done better — part of what these things require is resources."

Sara Stelzner, the writing program's assistant director for teacher training, said the program's biggest changes have occurred through faculty discussion of the issues involved.

"The most important effect of what we did as a program was to become more aware of the problem," Stelzner said. "Rather than changing the cirriculum, we've worked at talking about the issues among the faculty."

Stelzner added that graduate students who teach in the writing program have "a great deal of autonomy" about what they do in their classes, and that many of the issues dealt with are those brought up by students in writing classes.

"[Awareness] has now become so much a part of our teacher training that it's taken for granted," Stelzner said.

"[The incident] made the whole campus more aware of these issues," Stelzner said. "The influence of these issues is still pervasive."

English professor John Hunt agreed the University's response could have been stronger but also said that the writing program and training program for resident assistants have the potential to provide the necessary education given the committment.

Hunt, chairperson of the Chancellor's Commission on Civility, said that while the writing program has been able to steer students toward writing about racism and other issues, there is a difficulty in providing enough trained people to educate students.

"We don't have the trained people to teach students [about racial issues]," Hunt said. "To make people understand themselves in these ways is different than simply writing about them."

"It's asking a lot [to provide social issues courses] to the whole University — we can't swing that," Hunt said. "However, we can swing it for a few very influential undergraduates, who are going to become resident assistants.

"The [current requirement] is not adequate — we need a statement of a particular kind," Hunt said.

QUALITY SILK SCREENED SPORTSWEAR
Free screen $20.00 value (over 50 shirts)
T-SHIRTS • SWEATS
BUMPER STICKERS
MUGS
KENNEDY SCREEN GRAPHICS
16 ARMORY STREET
NORTHAMPTON, MA 01060
(413)584-2124
1-800-287-2124

ZANNA
Women's Shoes, Clothing & Accessories
Zanna • 187 N. Pleasant Street • Amherst
Monday/Saturday 10-6 Sunday 12-5
413.253.2563

AMHERST CINEMA
Now Playing
PARIS IS BURNING
Showtimes:
Fri. - Sun.
7:30pm & 9pm
Mon-Thurs.
One show at 7:30pm
Adults $4.00
Student w/valid I.D. $3.00

OOPS!
Now's the time to call...
North Amherst Motors
78 Old Sunderland Rd., No. Amherst
549-2880
Expert Repairs and Reconditioning
Most Major Credit Cards Accepted

Some of the biggest, some of the best presents come in the smallest boxes!
silverscape designs

Main St RECORDS
SON OF Main St RECORDS
RECORDS • CASSETTES • COMPACT DISCS
IMPORTED, INDEPENDENT & DOMESTIC
MON - WED 9:30 - 6 SUN 12 - 5
THURS - SAT 9:30 - 9
213 MAIN ST. NORTHAMPTON
586-5726
COLLECTABLES • USED MANUFACTURER'S OVER-STOCKS
MONDAY - SATURDAY 10 - 5:30
THURSDAYS 10 - 9 SUNDAY 12 - 5
21 STATE ST. NORTHAMPTON
586-1707

Local

Advocacy center to be revitalized

By MICHAEL R. LINSKEY
Collegian Staff

The Undergraduate Student Senate last night agreed to initiate a search for a student coordinator for the now defunct Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy (SCERA), a body established to do research and advocacy work for the campus community.

Speaker Bob Monaghan described the rise of the center and its subsequent fall when, under the leadership of Ellen Olmstead in the mid-1980s, the center began promoting its own agenda over the expressed interests of the student community.

"At this time, there were many conservatives in the Senate who took exception to what Ellen was doing. We felt that instead of doing the work the Senate wanted her to do, she was putting forth her own political agenda," Monaghan said. "We spent a couple of years working to eliminate this organization, and in the end, we did."

Although Monaghan said the idea to reassemble the center was proposed a few years after its dissolution, he only recently has expressed support for offering the student center new leadership.

"We need a professional staff," he said. "We're dealing with hundreds of administrators who all get paid over $50,000 a year, whose job it is to do all the bureaucratic work that a couple of us making $4.25 an hour are trying to do. It's important that we have a professional staff not only to do some research for us, but also to do some advocacy for us."

Senator Ken Parker (Commuters) moved to replace the acronym SCERA with "Professionally-Staffed, Student-Run Agency." He said this change would allow professionals to do the research and students to do their own advocacy.

"By having students do the advocacy portion of it, our tremendous advantage is that if they research something and we don't want to use student resources to advocate it, we don't have to," Parker said.

The Senate rejected Parker's proposal, but passed the original motion.

The Senate also agreed to donate $500 to a scholarship for David A. Booth, a political science professor who died Sunday night. They also supported the naming of a building or wing after Booth, and they agreed to dedicate their teacher evaluation guide to his memory.

Finally, the Senate approved a motion to co-sponsor an open house in the Campus Center at the beginning of each semester.

"The spirit behind this motion was to have a huge open house," said Commuter Area Government Senator David Anderson. "We want to really get students to come down and enjoy all the services we have here."

Collegian photo by Josh Reynolds

ON THE SEE-SAW ALL DAY LONG — Delta Zeta sisters Lauren Goodman, Brenda DiLugi and Allyson Krieger go up and down to raise money for the deaf.

Hate graffitti plagues dorm

Compiled by DAVID MASSEY
Collegian Staff

Anti-Semitic, homophobic and racial graffitti was found written on the first floor bulletin board of the Chadbourne Residence Hall on Tuesday, police said.

Graffitti of a sexual nature was also found written on an elevator panel in the lobby of Brown on Tuesday morning, police said.

- Police were called on Tuesday afternoon to assist University Health Services with two males who had been involved in a fight earlier in the day at Kennedy.

Police conducted an investigation and will be seeking a show-cause hearing against both individuals on assault and battery charges.

- A woman reported to police on Monday afternoon a large rock thrown threw her Crampton window and screen. The estimated value of the damaged window and screen is $50, police said.

Speaker discusses coming out

A 'lifelong process' says GLB Concerns founder

By MICHELLE BAYLISS
Collegian Correspondent

Coordinator and founder of the Program for Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Concerns Felice Yeskel spoke on "Coming out as a Lesbian" at Wednesday's Brown Bag Lunch Series.

A Brown Bag guest speaker for the fourth time, Yeskel described coming out as a lesbian as something that happens many times a day, a process of "being out."

Yeskel shared her experience coming out, and "being out" as a lesbian, going 20 years back into her college career. She described coming out as "a daily choice, a lifelong process that is never-ending."

She said that the social norm teaches society that homosexuality "is gross." She said society must "unlearn" this long term process, and how gays, lesbians and bisexuals need allies, heterosexual allies.

Yeskel encouraged and emphasized the importance for heterosexuals as well as homosexuals to "come out and claim their identity."

She compared heterosexism and homophobia to "diseases that we must fight" and described the social pressure as a powerful form of social control that subordinates women.

Yeskel said the intense power of homophobia and the power that keeps society ignorant is a fear which prevents many from learning the truth.

She emphasized the importance of coming out, existing visibly for other people to see, "lifting the burden of making the world honest," and why it is important for heterosexuals to function as allies.

She advocates thinking in terms of "how" we as a society could change social acceptance, rather than "if" we could change heterosexist and homophobic ideas.

Yeskel recommended the book Homophobia: A Weapon of Sexism by Suzanne Far.

The women's studies department is in its sixth semester sponsoring the Brown Bag Lunch Series. The women's studies department welcomes all to attend the informal dialogues among feminists.

The next Brown Bag Lunch will be held next Wednesday. The forum will feature a discussion on "Women and STD's and AIDS: Attitudes and Realities," with Ada Sanchez, director of the Public Service and Social Change Program for Hampshire College guest lecturer.

Bike parking hindering handicapped

By JEANINE MCLEAN
Collegian Correspondent

You are late for class and the bike rack is full. So you lock your mountain bike on one of those "conveniently" located hand rails, handicapped ramps and, of course, stair wells.

But Environmental Health and Safety, the University's fire and safety officers, say the increasing number of bicycles on the UMass campus has created a nightmare for the mobility impaired and could be hazardous.

"The top problem areas are the Campus Center at the concourse level and the handicap ramp at Tobin Hall," said David Beaudin, associate fire prevention officer.

"I've seen bikes flipped up so that half of the bike is inside the handicap ramp — right at the level of the head of a person in a wheelchair," said Beaudin.

EHS has received many complaints from the mobility-impaired community about bikes blocking access ramps to buildings. The bikes also pose a danger in emergency evacuation situations by blocking stairwells, according to officials.

Beaudin said EHS would rather educate students than penalize them so they leave reminder notices on bicycles found parked in an unsafe manner.

The last resort is removing the bikes

CONTINUED ON PAGE 6

Collegian photo by Josh Reynolds

Bicycles chained on the wheelchair access ramp at the School of Business Administration building.

UM student to announce candidacy

By DAVID MASSEY
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts student Paul McGonnigal is to launch his campaign for a representative seat in the Statehouse today at 3 p.m on the South Lawn next to the Campus Pond.

A moderate to liberal Republican who has been active in Massachusetts politics for the past seven years, McGonnigal is expected to announce his candidacy for the Third Hampshire District's state representative seat, previously filled by Stanley Rosenberg of Amherst.

Rosenberg is now state senator for Amherst.

Although he is interested in major state fiscal, social and environmental issues such as child care and welfare restructuring, McGonnigal is concerned with streamlining the waste and inefficiency that he says plagues this University.

"I consider the University to be the

CONTINUED ON PAGE 6

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions on this page are those of the individual writer or cartoonist, and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian or the University unless otherwise noted.

Editorial Policy

The Editorial/Opinion page welcomes and encourages columns, letters and cartoons from UMass and the entire Five College area. The following are some important guidelines to consider when submitting material to the page:

The Editorial staff reserves the right to edit letters and columns for grammar, clarity and length.

Submissions must bear the writer's name, local address and phone number. This information is subject to verification.

Anonymous submissions will be printed at the editor's discretion. Letters or columns written under a psuedonym will not be accepted.

All submissions must be typed and double spaced to be considered for publication. Untyped material will not be considered for publication.

Letters should not exceed 50 typed, double spaced lines. Columns should not exceed 70 typed, double spaced lines. Letters and columns of unreasonable length will not be considered for publication.

Letters and columns written in response to a previously published letter will not be printed. Responses to or criticisms of columns or other Collegian articles are restricted to letter form. Any exceptions to this guideline will be determined solely by the editors.

The Editorial staff is not required to print all submitted material. All submissions become property of the Collegian and will not be returned.

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual artist or writer and do not necessarily reflect the views of the Collegian, it's staff or the Editorial staff.

* * * * *

The Editorial page wants you. Yes, you, the reader of these smudgy pages. We are looking for good writers and good artists to fill this page every day with their ideas and opinions.

If you're interested, stop by the Editorial desk at the Collegian office, 113 Campus Center (the basement level). Your opinions count — but no one will know what you're thinking unless you tell them. 19,000 people want to hear what you think.

Deposit means I'm gone

I want out. OUT.

Yes, after two and a quarter years of living happily with my friends and neighbors under the watchful eye of Housing and Res Ed., I think the time has come to bid on-campus housing a fond farewell, find a quiet house somewhere in, let's say, Conway or Sunderland, and be on my way.

Greg Sukiennik

Well gee, Greg, whatever brought you to that conclusion?

I don't know. Could it be the smell of stale beer, urine and vomit? Could it be rules that restrict my personal freedom? Could it be fire alarms at four in the bloody a.m.?

Actually, I don't mind those things so much. You can always find a clean bathroom, or if you can't, a little Lysol and some imagination go a long way. I don't mind drinking with the door closed — I'm 21 and can go uptown to spend as much of my measly Collegian salary as I want on as many gin and tonics as they'll serve me. (Reader hint — I like Tanqueray. Plenty of lime, too.)

Okay, fire alarms at four on a weeknight are a pain, I agree. But what a great social opportunity, huh?

What's the rush, then? Why would I want to leave D.C. food, laundry machines which eat my socks and my all those other neat things about campus life we grow to know and tolerate?

Often times, one finds one's self taking action not for some great moral stand, nor for love or hate.

One does things because of money. Or lack thereof.

Housing is proposing, and some area governments are agreeing to, a new $200 "security deposit" on student rooms. This way, if you decide to leave school or move off campus before the year is out, you lose that $200 bucks.

Just another money-making idea from your pals at Housing.

Other schools do this sort of thing. They have the right to protect themselves from losing money, after all, and I can't really argue with that.

But look at the reason Housing gave. "Oh, well it's this or we're jacking the rent up another couple hundred."

Or words to that effect.

That's what goes down when you're at the mercy of a monopoly, and that's what Housing is. There's no other game in town, unless you camp out, so they get away with whatever suits them.

Your roommate moved out? "Ha ha, either you cough up the $150 or we move you mid-semester. And if you don't pay, we administratively withdraw you. Have a nice day." Don't laugh; they nearly withdrew me. I paid — I had no choice.

Well I'll be damned if I'm going to let them screw me out of my hard-earned money. I'm moving off, to where there's no four a.m. fire alarms, where the bathroom is clean and where they don't force $200 dollar surcharges down your throat.

Greg Sukiennik is a Collegian columnist

Noxious bus fumes endanger both health and environment

Gasp. Cough. Sputter.

Whenever I am behind a PVTA bus, I am smouldered by hideous gases emerging from within its bowels. When this happens I cannot help but think about our ozone layer, our environment and our lives. How healthy can this be, inhaling all the black gunk these buses spew out?

Excuse me. Ahem. Whenever I am walking (or riding my bike or driving in my car) behind a PVTA bus, I cringe. Minding my own business, from out of nowhere I am suddenly blanketed by dark clouds of smoke.

I am not suggesting shutting down the bus company, for a lot of people in this community rely on the buses. But what we have here is a very serious issue. One that cannot, and should not, for the sake of our lives and more importantly our children's lives (I hate to think about a child of mine having three heads and six arms), be ignored.

Groping for air, my feet come to a halt. Others around me also freeze in their tracks. Blinking my eyes, I manage to keep from collapsing to the ground.

Tucking my face into my shirt, while breathing lint up my nose, is not going to keep the disgusting particles from zooming into my respiratory system, via every open pore on my body. What we need is a solution to this problem. Pronto.

Thrusting my hands out, I reach for something to maintain my unsteady balance, as the world around me grows dim.

UMass, a haven for environmentally aware students, would appear to be the last place to pose a question like this. Unfortunately it appears to be the setting for this atrocious reality. With majors such as environmental engineering, transportational engineering and the dozens in public health, I would think this bus dilemma would have been addressed and solved by now.

Felice Cohen

Coating my lungs and filling my chest, the filthy air just laughs as my face turns blue.

I cannot count how many classes I have attended where someone from MassPirg has spoken about saving the earth, moon and stars. How often we are reminded about the awful state our environment is in. And what about Earth Day? One time last year, I distinctly remember reading a flyer about the upcoming Earth Day activities, when suddenly a bus came by and blew smoke in my face.

My backpack, having fallen from my clutches, lay slumped beside my Nikes. Instinctively my hands rubbed my eyes. Gagging, I reach for my neck which seems to be closing in on my throat.

I am almost to the point of calling up the Israeli embassy and saying "Hi, my name is Felice and I was wondering if you guys are not using those gas masks anymore, would you mind mailing them to us in Amherst? And like could you send the pretty colored ones?"

I am not saying we should shut down the bus system, but I just want to address this issue which cannot be ignored any longer. If my own car expelled such noxious gases, I do not think I would be out on the road driving it, let alone would it probably pass inspection.

Crying out for help, the words do not escape from my lips. Others around me are in the same boat. Unable to move, breathe or speak, we stand helpless. Struggling to exhale, the oxygen waits patiently, locked in my trachea.

I tried speaking to some one at the PVTA, but no one could be reached for comment. UMass has such a beautiful campus. I would hate for it to become the next Los Angeles, covered under a dome of smog.

Miraculously, as the bus sped ahead, the smoke cleared and I was once again revived with clean, fresh air.

Now if only we could do something about the bubbling mud geyser near the bridge by Southwest.

Felice Cohen is a Collegian columnist

Angered student suggests a response

They are after me and I have proof. At first I simply attributed it to the town of Amherst. Now I am sure. Statewide legislation discriminating against the keg-buying public — in most other civilized countries, this act itself would incite revolution amongst the people.

Have we been beaten down for so long that we no longer care that our basic human rights are being taken from us? What of the Constitution and our inalienable rights? I guess I was born too late. It seems that when it finally becomes my turn to enjoy, they deem me unworthy. I'm not talkin' 'bout no revolution, just some action by the apathetic masses. Don't let them dictate how you have fun.

In the meantime, I urge you to drink and drink much. I'm talking about dancing naked in the streets. I'm talking about listening to the Rolling Stones at oppressively high decibel levels. I'm talkin' about standing up on your bar stool and and belching out Doors lyrics. I'm talkin' about making an ass out of yourself in front of your friends and then later regretting it.

I'm advocating passing out in the nearest car. I'm talking about drinking and throwing up to make more room. But by all means drink. It seems that every time I reach the legal age for something, they take it away from me. I think they are afraid of me. And well they should be.

Let's face it, people need an outlet from this world that continuously tries to suffocate and crush us. For some, alcohol is a release mechanism. Prohibition has been tried and failed. Learn from the past. I got hellhounds after me and they're nipping at my heels. Live long, drink hard, and be merry.

Michael Shina
Amherst

THE INESCAPABLE LOGIC of POLITICAL CORRECTNESS.
I'll tell You WHAT the PROBLEM IS! STEREOTYPES! AND YA KNOW WHOS SPREADIN EM? THOSE GOD DAMNED NARROW MINDED JIM RACIST RIGHT-WING MILITANT CONSERVATIVE LAWYER MONEY-GRUBBIN OPPRESSIVE ASSHOLES WHO CAN'T PAST HIRE NOSES! THATS WHO. THEY HAVE TO LABEL EVERYBODY! NO ONE'S AN INDIVIDUAL TO THOSE RALPH LAUREN WEARING, REPUBLICAN BASTA...
KC '91

Television portrays the worst in quality entertainment

The new TV season leaves much to be desired. Every night when I come home from a long day at classes, the last thing I want to do is begin my homework.

The TV is a perfect tool for avoiding that pesky reading assignment or paper. However, there are only a few shows on TV worth watching these days.

First of all, "Jeopardy" is a must-see every night at 7:30. My roommates and I will not be disturbed during this sacred time. The show is the only means in which I can show off anything I have learned in my college career. It's a pathetic thing when I realize that this is the only use I have for my major in the real world. "I'll take Oscar Wilde for $200, Alex."

Of course, there are some sitcoms worth watching. It is unfortunate that none of the good shows are on the big three networks. If you want to be remotely amused, you have to turn it to FOX-TV.

It sounds so cliche, but Thursday nights on FOX are the best thing that has happened to TV since they cancelled "My Two Dads." First off, we have "The Simpsons" at 8 p.m. This show remains, in my opinion, one of the most thoroughly entertaining shows on TV.

After "The Simpsons", you'll have to sit through the utterly mediocre "Drexell's Class." You might get a few sputters of laughter, but most of the time you will wonder why you aren't reading.

Then, (drum roll please) you must plant yourself in your favorite chair and watch the 90s version of "The Brady Bunch." I know it sounds stupid, but the best show on television is "Beverly Hills 90210."

Every Thursday night at nine o'clock, you can bet your buns that my roommate Kathy and I are embedded in the couch repeating in a drunken stupor, "This is the best show!" We sit down with a bottle of tequila and revert back to high school. These rich brats possess the ability to actually make me feel sorry for their miniscule problems.

Todd Kane

Perhaps this is the show's most endearing quality. By dealing with the dilemmas of high school kids, I am able to escape from my compost heap of problems into this dream world. I love the way the characters on the show are only faced with a major problem for one episode.

For those of you who follow the show, remember when Brandon became an alcoholic, got in a drunk driving accident, went to jail, quit drinking, and enrolled in AA all in one episode? Or how about the time Dylan's elusive mother came back from Hawaii to live in Beverly Hills, causing Dylan to go into a fit of drinking and gambling at a local pool hall?

I could go on and on...

However, for those of you who do not watch the show, I will refrain from further digression. Watch the show, it's so cheesy you will quickly get addicted. On to Saturday night.

Besides "Jeopardy," the only other show worth watching on the big three networks is that old standby, "Saturday Night Live." What other show on TV has the 'nads' to do what this one does?

While "90210" is addressing the strength of AA, "SNL" is poking fun at the whole "one day at a time" philosophy in their Stuart Smalley skits.

One suggestion for this show: can the "Weekend Update." Without Dennis Miller it's, well, without humor which is an important ingredient in comedy and satire.

Sunday night is the last night where one can spot any kind of entertainment. Once again, FOX-TV takes the cake. "In Living Color" will keep you in stitches for the full half-hour.

But, like Thursday night after the first good show, you will have to sit through "Roc." You better pound a bottle of Vivarin before exposing yourself to this baby. Better yet, read a few chapters and tune in again at nine.

Ahhh yes, "Married With Children." I still watch this show out of habit. Every episode thus far this season is built around Peg's pregnancy. I can't help yelling at the TV because she is intolerable with all her whining and moaning. I have faith in this show and believe that the writers will realize that Peg's pregnancy isn't funny.

Hint to the writers: focus more on Al and his misadventures. Bud is getting to be pretty humorous, as well.

Mercy, mercy, I certainly have lots to say about TV. The fact that 90% of the shows on TV this season suck doesn't seem to keep me from tuning in. Bad TV is better than scholastic diligence any day of the week.

This is Todd Kane, signing off....

Todd Kane is a Collegian columnist

Confidence overcomes

Lesbian and gay teenagers have the highest suicide rate in this country. Lesbian alcoholism is about three times the national average. When 54-year-old gay female impersonator Robin Rogers said in a recent interview that he's the only male survivor of a 25-member gay troupe because of "drugs, suicide, and all that crap," he dramatically illustrated gay men's struggle to survive.

Why is this?

Trystan Skeigh

When I came out in Kansas in 1985, I met some other young lesbians who were struggling with coming out issues. All but one or two told me they had attempted to commit suicide at least once. I remember one woman showed me 5 scars running up her forearm. She said she had tried to kill herself because her family disowned her and told her she was going to hell because she was lesbian.

That summer I realized in order for me to be happy, I needed to find a healthy community of self-loving lesbians. Some friends told me the "happy" Pioneer Valley was a safe place for lesbians, so I withdrew from school, packed up my bags and left my midwestern bible belt state for Massachusetts.

I believe the reason there is so much self-destruction among gays and lesbians is because when our sexuality becomes known, society acts to take away every level of support previously available to us. We are made to feel like outcasts, with nowhere to turn for affirmation.

Many of us lose the support and love of our families. We learn the hard way that our parents' love isn't really "unconditional" after all. Sometimes our local communities turn on us and we are forced to move.

Many of us have been repeatedly told that our "lifestyle" is sinful and rejected by God. It's highly ironic that although most historically oppressed people have found sanctuary within their churches, the doors of most traditional churches are closed to gays and lesbians.

Thanks to the courageous hard work of committed lesbians and gays across this country, the picture is beginning to change in some areas, like here in the Pioneer Valley.

But things have not changed for gays and lesbians in the 46 oppressive states that still do not extend civil rights guarantees to people who are homosexual.

The high level of self-destruction observed among gays and lesbians is the most visible manifestation of society's death wish for us. It is the direct result of the toxic poisoning of a gay individual's heart and mind from overexposure to unrelenting hatred.

I believe with all my heart that self-loving gays and lesbians have a sacred duty to be openly positive about our sexuality. We need to act as survival beacons for those who are still quietly self-destructing in the closet and offer support to the young ones coming out. They are part of us, and we must act to save ourselves. The formation of strong, supportive gay and lesbian communities and networks is crucial.

Like the brave souls at the LBGA dance last Friday night who marched on the Hatch to denounce the homophobic band playing there, we must never allow homophobic bigotry to go unchallenged.

For those gays and lesbians who identify as Christians, they need to connect with the few churches that welcome us, or we need to form our own. If heterosexuals are made in God's image, so are homosexuals. He made us both.

For other spiritual gays and lesbians, we need to be unafraid to step out of traditional religions and explore relatively uncharted sacred waters. We need to find new ways to celebrate our spiritual connection with the divine.

But most of all, lesbians and gays must not allow our self-love to be destroyed by social hatred.

Being lesbian or gay is beautiful and wonderful. It's important that we remember this fact — it's our key to survival.

Trystan Skeigh is a Collegian columnist

WE'RE HOLDING JUDGE THOMAS UP TO AN UNFAIR STANDARD.
I WONDER, IF THE SAME TEST OF SEXUAL HARASSMENT WERE APPLIED TO THE SENATORS HERE, HOW MANY WOULD PASS. .
OR HAVE I JUST PUT MY FINGER ON THE REAL PROBLEM?
YOU KEEP THOSE FINGERS TO YOURSELF
TOLES

Pro-life groups are not fanatical

When someone is pregnant it is customary to say that she is going to have a baby. If this is true, then what happens to a baby when a pregnancy is terminated unnaturally?

It is the sincere belief that abortion is a grave injustice that motivates people involved in Operation Rescue. These people are willing to risk and/or endure serious financial, bodily and social injury to themselves in order to save those who have been judged to be non-persons.

If I did not personally know people who have been involved in Operation Rescue and if I had not seen how courageous these people have been in the face of often brutal arrest procedures I may also think they are fanatics. However, they are anything but fanatics. They are ordinary women and men who believe, like other users of civil disobedience like Thoreau, Gandhi, Martin Luther King, the students killed in Tiananmen Square, and the current recipient of the Nobel Peace Prize, Aung San Suu Kyi, a woman who has stood up to the military government in Burma, that when a law is unjust, it cannot be obeyed.

Groups like Women Exploited By Abortion (WEBA) and Feminists for Life know how abortion exploits women who obtain abortions. It is not to discriminate against women that people oppose abortion. It is to save the yet to be born girls and boys who cannot survive without help.

Jim Monaghan
Springfield

Fireman warns

I am concerned about a photograph the appeared on page one of the Monday (October 21) Collegian. The photograph depicted a student pouring charcoal lighter fluid onto an already burning fire. Even more troubling was the caption beneath the picture: "Come On Baby Light My Fire." Pouring lighter fluid onto an already burning fire is extremely dangerous. Last year over twelve thousand (12,100) people in this country were injured in accidents involving outdoor cooking grills.

Fortunately the event depicted in this photograph resulted in no injury to the student involved or to bystanders, this is not always the case.

Each member of the community needs to be aware of the constant threat of fire and the toll it takes on human life and property, and to do their part in preventing it.

David J. Beaudin
Associate Fire Prevention Officer

Jewish Alliance forms to provide alternative voice

With the so-called Middle East "peace" conference right around the corner, the time is right to organize. We, as a group of Jewish students, protest the continued funding by the U.S. of the Israeli occupied territories. We feel that a Jewish voice that is critical of Israeli policy has been absent in much of the dialogue surrounding the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. Neither the mainstream Jewish community nor the various groups of the U.S. "left" speaks to our concerns.

We believe:

1. Palestinian self-determination is a basic right that cannot be denied.

2. Jewish liberation can not occur as long as Palestinians are under Israeli occupation.

3. The Israeli occupation and its heightened militarism is not in the Israeli/Jewish people's best interest because it has increased violence of all forms in Israeli society at large. In addition, the Israeli economy has been collapsing and money has been funnelled away from social services.

4. The threat of Arab invasion of Israel, utilized to justify the policies of the Israeli government, is a poor argument in light of the recent report on Israel's immense nuclear capability. In fact, we believe that Israel's security depends on Palestinian self-determination.

5. As North American Jews, we are accountable to the policies of both the Israeli and U.S. governments.

We are interested in working on the following:

1. protesting new settlements on the West Bank and the loan guarantee;

2. meeting, talking, and organizing with other Jewish groups and groups working for Palestinian rights;

3. distributing and presenting alternative information;

4. critiquing the power dynamics behind the "peace" conference;

5. working against anti-semitism with an awareness that recognizes how the label of anti-semitism is often used as a tool to discredit people of color.

The group that is forming is called Jewish Alliance for Democratic Land. There will be an open meeting on Monday, Oct. 28, at 8 p.m. in the UMass Campus Center, room 903.

Shira Katz, Northampton
Tamara Kupfer, Monatague
Three other UMass students signed this letter

■ lawsuit

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

amendment rights including unreasonable seizure, arrest without probable cause and intimidation and humiliation, according to the complaint.

"I cannot convey how humiliated I was," said Guzman. "There was no reason for the officer to just say, 'I.D.' on demand."

The second count is for the violation of the Massachusetts Civil Rights Act.

Guzman said it was her race which led Antonovitch to question her so often.

"They do not do that to every student. ...I do not understand their reasoning," she said.

The third count has been filed against the state under the Massachusetts Tort Claims Act.

Even if Antonovitch's supervisors say they had not known about his actions, a claim can still be made, said Friedman. "They certainly should have known," he said.

"It would be great if this case caused UMass/Amherst police to improve their procedures," Friedman added.

Guzman said she knows others who have been in similar situations.

"I feel very good that I am doing what I am doing," she said.

Collegian photo by Jeff Egan
UM student Loyda Guzman.

■ bikes

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

which usually results in damage to the lock, Beaudin said. This semester three bikes have been removed. Students must reclaim their bikes from the University Police, he said.

"There is a renewed interest in biking which we recognize must be accommodated," said Ed Mientka of EHS. "Having bike racks all over the campus is aesthetically unsightly."

The Physical Plant obtained a number of bike racks a few years ago. Whether it will be possible to acquire funding to purchase more racks has been brought before a number of committees involving both EHS and the Physical Plant.

Little progress has been made, however, officials said.

■ candidacy

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3

flagship university in Massachusetts," McGonnigal said. "It's starting to come apart at the seams."

He cited top administrators' excessive salaries while services for students are being slashed as examples UMass' problems. McGonnigal said 13 top UMass administrators earn from $90,000 to $140,000 a year.

"I am appalled. That is excess," he said. "We really can't afford to continue along that path."

McGonnigal also said he supports graduate students who are fighting to acquire health fee waivers since "graduate students perform a vital service on this campus."

McGonnigal has also held a position on the University Board of Governors, a student organization that oversees both the Student Union and the Campus Center.

State divided on beer ads

Anti-underage drinking campaign debated

By DANIEL BEEGAN
Associated Press

BOSTON — A beer industry campaign to help curb underage drinking by distributing posters to package stores won praise Wednesday from one key legislator, but was called "a total joke" by another.

The presidents of the Beer Institute, a national association of brewers, and the National Beer Wholesalers Association described the campaign at a news conference Wednesday.

Rep. Michael Walsh, D-Agawam, House chairman of the Legislature's Government Regulations Committee, attended the news conference to applaud the effort.

But in a telephone interview afterwards, Rep. Suzanne Bump, D-Braintree, House chairman of the Commerce and Labor Committee, said the industry was trying to avoid restrictions on its promotional advertising.

Ron Sarasin, president of the Wholesalers Association, and Beer Institute President James Sanders, said their groups would distribute nearly two million posters and flyers to retail liquor outlets nationwide aimed at discouraging young people from buying beer.

The posters stress the need to be 21 or more to buy beer and that identifications will be checked by package store clerks.

"Our industry doesn't want underage business. Period," Sarasin said.

Walsh said the industry has been accused of encouraging underage drinking.

"I think this campaign will go a long way to dissuade that," Walsh said.

"I don't know any industry that talks more against abuse of our product than our industry," Sanders said.

Sanders said the latest campaign is in addition to other efforts by the beer industry to discourage underage drinking and to combat drunken driving.

Sanders said the beer industry, while using amusing and attention-grabbing ads to sell its product, also advertises heavily to promote responsible drinking.

But Bump said the industry needs to do more to prevent irresponsible and illegal use of beer.

"I think their efforts here are very transparent. They are spending a nominal amount of money in the promotion of safe drinking, while the rest of their national advertising budget is devoted to eroding or overriding the messages in this responsible drinking campaign," Bump said.

BRUNCH BUFFET
$6.95 It's the Student's Favorite
All You Can Eat — Saturday & Sunday
Belgian Waffles
Eggs & Omelets made to order
Bacon & Sausage
Virginia Baked Ham
Home Style Potatoes
Freshly Baked Bagels
Danish
Muffins
Breads
and lots of fruit
Café Ashley
Rte. 9, HADLEY
Next to Howard Johnson Motor Lodge
ASK FOR INFORMATION ABOUT BANQUET FACILITIES
ALL MENU ITEMS ARE AVAILABLE FOR TAKE OUT

DISTINGUISHED TEACHERS AWARD NOMINATIONS

DEADLINE: NOVEMBER 4, 1991

IF YOU KNOW A FACULTY MEMBER OR TEACHING ASSISTANT/ASSOCIATE WHO IS TRULY OUTSTANDING AND DESERVES RECOGNITION, SUBMIT A NOMINATION IN WRITING WITH A BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF WHY YOUR NOMINEE DESERVES THE AWARD.

FACULTY, ALUMNI AND CURRENT GRADUATE/UNDERGRADUATE STUDENTS MAY NOMINATE.

SUBMIT NOMINATIONS BY MONDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1991

TO: DISTINGUISHED TEACHING AWARD COMMITTEE
GRADUATE DEAN'S OFFICE
514 GOODELL BUILDING
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS

By LUU COVE
Collegian Correspondent

Look out music adventurers - as Friday cometh, so cometh Trip Shakespeare. The Minneapolis outfit is headed for the valley and they're bound to do a number on your work-weary student minds.

Who are Trip Shakespeare anyway? With a name like that they've got to have something going for them. "Yeah, so what is it?" You're bound to ask. Well, it's hard to explain. It's complicated. "Hard?" You say. "You're the writer, give us a description." O.K., o.k! I've listened again and again and every time I pull out a pen and try to spell it out I think: "Wait! What the hell did I just hear?!" So I listen again, and then I say, "Oh, yeah, it's homegrown, psychedelic, middle-American neo-romantic garage opera. Yeah, that's it."

"Hold on!" you say. What does that mean? That doesn't mean anything! You're just incapable of making a coherent statement!"

"No!" I cry. "It's not me, it's them! They're crazy! I can't pin them down!" I've tried and tried and tried!" And really, that's the truth. Critics have thrown around names like Neil Young and Syd Barrett, The Byrds and The Band. I've even read comparisons to (gasp!) Peter, Paul, and Mary. But that just doesn't cut it for me. There's more than a Rickenbacker revival; this is no re-fried sixties cult band - this is Trip Shakespeare, the mercurial, witty, inventive quartet from Minnesota that has plagued my brain and sent me ripping through my thesaurus to no avail.

安城中國飯店
AMHERST CHINESE FOOD
WE DO NOT USE "MSG"
• MANDARIN & SZECHUAN CUISINE
• HOME STYLE COOKING
• FRESH VEGETABLES FROM OUR FARM
• EAT IN OR TAKE OUT
• FULL LIQUOR LICENSE
• OPEN 7 DAYS
• NEWLY REMODELED
MASTERCARD & VISA ACCEPTED
253-7835 253-2813
62 Main Street, Amherst

WHO'S OPEN LATE?
Sun.- Thurs. 'till 3 a.m.
Fri. & Sat. Open 24 hours
James H. McManus eating place
Route 9, Hadley
256-6889
next to Stop & Shop

Trip Shakespeare

CONTINUED FROM THIS WEEKEND PAGE 1

All of this is to their credit, I should point out. Eluding the proverbial pigeon hole is quite a feat in this day and age, and Trip Shakespeare has definitely carved out a niche of its own. Their latest album, Lulu on A&M, was recorded live in the studio with all four band members jamming in one room in an effort to capture the raw energy of their shows, and they've done a mighty fine job. In addition, they've written some nifty, pleasantly obscure lyrics and have dared to sing a smorgasbord of truly original melodies. The result prompted the folks at the Iron Horse to christen Trip Shakespeare "the best band in the universe." That's a hell of a compliment in it's own right, and coming from those in the know over there at that little hot spot on Center Street in NoHo, how can you risk passing them up?

"I don't think it's a coincidence that we have a literary genius in the name of our band," says singer/guitarist/lyricist Matt Wilson. "It's good to have it hanging over our heads—it keeps us shooting higher." And that's just the kind of bold attitude we need in our music these days. You've never heard anyhting like Trip before. You'll think you know what you're hearing one minute ("hey, this sounds kinda fifties!"), and then they'll whack you upside the head ("where did the Judy Collins playing fuzz guitar on acid come from?") with something totally out of the blue.

So don't make me spew any more musical sophistry at you, just show up at the Iron Horse Friday night. I guarantee it'll be a trip.

Frightening Great Deals at Liquors 44!
BEER WINE LIQUORS
MICHELOB, MICHELOB LIGHT MICHELOB DRY $12.99 + DEP case of 2 12 pk. cans
KOCH'S GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY $7.79 + DEP case of 24-12 oz. cans
CUTTER (NON-ALCOHOLIC) FROM COORS $11.99 + DEP case of 24-12 oz. cans
HEINEKEN $17.99 + DEP case of 24 12 oz. bottles
SPATEN OCTOBERFEST $5.69 DEP 6 pk. bottles
FRANZIA BAG-IN-BOX $6.49 5 Liter SALE 7.49 MAIL-IN REBATE -1.00
COLUMBIA CREST CHARDONNAY $5.49 750ML
GALLO WHITE ZINFANDEL $4.99 1.5L
EDEN ROC CHAMPAGNE EXTRA DRY & BRUT $3.49 750ML
BARTLES & JAYMES ALL FLAVORS $2.99 4 PK.
FLEISCHMANN'S GIN $11.99 1.75L
POLAND SPRING VODKA $8.49 1.75L
JIM BEAM $13.99 1.75L
KAPALA COFFEE LIQUOR IMPORTED FROM MEXICO $6.49 750ML SALE 8.49 MAIL-IN REBATE -2.00
DEWAR'S White Label SCOTCH WHISKY $23.99 1.75L
Full Redemption Center not responsible for typographical errors
LIQUORS 44
HADLEY Campus Plaza/Route 9 253-9344
TWO LOCATIONS
HOLYOKE 30 Lincoln St. 534-4555
9am to 11pm Monday thru Saturday
SALE PRICES THURS. 10-24-91 THRU WED. 10-30-91
TeleCheck

Smith Hadley's TOWER THEATRES
THE VILLAGE COMMONS • SOUTH HADLEY 533-2663
DOC HOLLYWOOD
"TWO BIG THUMBS UP" - Siskel & Ebert
WEEKDAYS @ 3, 7& 9:05 • FRIDAYS, SAT, SUN @ 2:45, 4:50, 7 & 9:05 pm
THE COMMITMENTS
WEEKDAYS @ 3, 7 & 9:15 •
FRIDAY, SAT, SUN @ 2:45, 5, 7:10 & 9:25 & MIDNIGHT FRIDAY
THE ROCKY HORROR PICTURE SHOW With Cast Midnight Friday

Octoberfest '91
Thursday
October 24th
6 pm-Close featuring
SPATEN
OKTOBERFESTBIER
MÜNCHEN
On Draft
14 oz. Octoberfest Bierstube Mugs
German Style Pizza, Knockwurst & Bratwurst
Authentic 6 Piece German Band in Costume
ALL AGES WELCOME
Positive I.D. required for Hatch Bar Area
at the hatch

THE TEXTBOOK ANNEX IS OPEN YEAR ROUND BUT TO MAKE SURE YOU GET THE BOOKS YOU NEED FOR THIS SEMESTER
BUY THEM NOW
We are beginning to return unsold books to the publisher on Friday, October 25th.
University Store's
TEXTBOOK ANNEX
Monday-Friday
9:00 am-4:00 pm
545-3570
WE NOW ACCEPT VISA AND MASTERCARD

WEEKEND HAPPENINGS

THURSDAY

Lunch & Learn - The Messianic Era will be held at Chabad House at Amherst, 30 N. Hadley Road at 12 p.m. There is a $3 fee. For information call 549-4094.

The Female in the Irish Imagination is a symposium conducted by two distinguished women from Ireland: Nuala Ni Dhomhnaill, the foremost contemporary poet in Irish, and Angela Burke, a respected feminist scholar of Irish folklore and poetry. The symposium schedule, from October 22 through October 24, features two late afternoon seminars, an evening poetry reading, and an evening lecture. For schedule information call Jill Roberts 548-9126.

The Big Tune-Concert Music in the Belle Epoch is a lecture lead by Henry Mishkin of the Amherst College Music Department. This event will be held in the Amherst College Music Center room 3 p.m. at 12:15 p.m. (Listening at Noon).

Growing Up in an Inter-Married Household (Jewish and non-Jewish) is an informal get-together and discussion. This will be held at Hillel House, 388 N. Pleasant St., Amherst and will begin at 3:30 p.m. The discussion is free.

German Film Series: Affare Blum - The Blum Affair is a film released in 1948 which is directed by Erich Engel. The film will be shown at Amherst College Merrill II at 4 p.m. and 7:30 p.m.

The Prospects for Peace and Democracy in South Africa is a lecture lead by Pauline Baker of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. This will be held at Mount Holyoke College Mary Wooley Hall, New York Room from 4-5:30 p.m. The lecture will also be held at Hampshire College at 8 p.m.

The Innocence Mission performs with opening band, Toad the Wet Sprocket at Pearl Street Night Club. For information call 584-7771.

Walter Gerhardt, General Consul of Germany will speak on The Role of the United Germany After the Collapse of the Soviet Empire. This event takes place at UMass Campus Center room 101 and will begin at 7:30 p.m. The event is wheelchair accessible. For information call 546-3567.

Five College Coastal and Marine Sciences Program Informational Meeting will teach about on and off-campus research and educational opportunities. This takes place at Smith College McConnell Hall room B05 and will begin at 7:30 p.m.

Vajrakila Mask Dance will be performed by monks of the Tibetan Buddhist Sakya order from Rajpur, India. This performance will take place at the Amherst College Buckley Recital Hall and will begin at 8 p.m. For information call 542-2181.

Runaways is a montage of songs, scenes and monologues about the struggles of young people who have left home. The book, lyrics, and music are by Elizabeth Swados. The event takes place at Smith College Mendenhall Center for Performing Arts, Hallie Flanagan Studio Theatre beginning at 8 p.m. Tickets are $4 for students and $2 for elders. For group sales call 585-3222. The Box Office opens Monday through Friday from 1-4 p.m.

New World Theater presents Walls by Jeannie Barroga. This powerful play tells the story of the creation of Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington D.C. and the tenacity of its 20-year-old architect, Maya Lin. This takes place at UMass Bowker Auditorium at 8 p.m. Tickets are $5 for students and $3 for elders. For information call UMass Fine Arts Center Box Office, 545-2511.

Volpone; Or the Fox is a Classic Elizabethan farce by Ben Jonson. Volpone and his servant Mosca plot against fortune-seeking scoundrels. Be prepared to see Mosca played by a woman and Volpone's three fools appear as a rock band in this Professor Virginia Scott translation. This play will be held at UMass Curtain Theater beginning at 8 p.m. Tickets are $5 for students and $3 for elders. For information call the Fine Arts Center Box Office, 545-2511.

WFCR Airs 1990-91 Springfield Symphony Orchestra Concerts on Thursday nights at nine. This program will feature a performance of Elgar's Enigma Variations on WFCR, 88.5 FM.

Desert Hearts is a film about a recently divorced woman who finds passion and romance with a young woman in Reno. The film will be shown at UMass Campus Center room 803 and will begin at 7 p.m. For information call 545-4824.

FRIDAY

Franco Modigliani of the M.I.T. economics department and Nobel Laureate speaks on a topic TBA. This event takes place at the Amherst College Converse Assembly Room at 4 p.m. This event is free.

Guys and Dolls is a musical brought to film with Frank Sinatra, Marlon Brando, Jean Simmons and Vivian Blaine. There will be two showings at Mount Holyoke College Gamble Auditorium at 7 and 9 p.m. Admission is $2.50. Chassidim - a relic of the past or a powerhouse of the present? is the topic of the service and Shabbat dinner to be held at Chabad House at Amherst, 30 N. Hadley Road at 7 p.m.

Retrospective: Harun Farocki, Filmaker, is a member of the faculty of the German Film and Television Academy in Berlin (DFFB). He also was a founding editor of the journal FILMKRITIK. His "essay films" produce a unique juxtaposition of technological routine and passion, machines for visual recording and observation and warfare. There will be a screening of Farocki's Images of the World and the Inscription of War released in 1989. The screening will take place at UMass Thompson Building room 102 at 7 p.m.

Retrospective: Harun Farocki, Film maker is the subject of the screening of As You See released in 1986. The screening will take place in UMass Thompson Building room 102 at 8:30 p.m.

Jon Stetson, magician, will perform at Amherst College Campus Center Frontroom at 9 p.m. Tickets are $5 and $1 with Amherst College ID.

Michelle Shocked

Michelle Shocked will be performing at the Academy of Music in Northampton. The show begins at 8:30 p.m. For information call the Northampton Box Office 586-8686.

Trip Shakespeare will perform at the Iron Horse Music Hall. For information call 584-0610.

Choose Me is an American 1984 film comedy. Five people look for romantic fulfillment from a phone-in radio talk show. There are terrific performances by Genevieve Bujold, Keith Carradine and Lesley Ann Warren. The film will be shown at Smith College Wright Hall Auditorium at 7 and 9 p.m. The showings are free.

Volpone; Or the Fox will be presented at 8 p.m. (see Thursday)

The (Female) Odd Couple, directed by Jim Cavanaugh, is a re-written classic comedy by Neil Simon that focuses on two divorced women. This play takes place at Mount Holyoke College Lab Theatre beginning at 8 p.m. Tickets are $4 for students and $2 for elders.

Boris Berman, Pianist will perform an all Prokoviev program at Amherst College Buckley Recital Hall beginning at 8 pm.

Runaways continues its performance at 8 p.m. (see THURSDAY)

Walls continues its performance at 8 p.m. (see THURSDAY)

John Stetson, magician, will be performing at Amherst College Campus Center Frontroom at 9 p.m. Tickets are $5 and $1 with Amherst College ID.

Minibus, original roots-rock-reggae-blues extravaganza, will be performing along with opening band, Borderland at Pearl Street Night Club. The performance begins at 9 p.m. For information call 584-7771.

An American Werewolf in London is a film directed by John Landis which is about American students who are attacked by a werewolf while backpacking on the English moors. The movie will be shown at Amherst College Campus Center Theater at 7:30 and 10 p.m.

SATURDAY

Bongos to Circus will perform at Twister's Tavern in Amherst Show starts at 9 p.m.

Blood Oranges, a sister duo, perform a hometown show at the Iron Horse Music Hall. The performance begins at 7 p.m.

Homegrown Local Music Series features Rippopotamus and the Mal Thursday Experience at Pearl Street Night CLub in Northampton. For information call 584-7771.

Health Professions Fair will be held at Smith College McConnell Hall from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. This event is free. For registration information call June Delaney, 585-2583.

Service and Shabbat Meal will be held at Chabad House at Amherst, 30 N. Hadley Road beginning at 10 a.m. For information call 549-4094.

Southeast Asian People and the Aftermath: Cambodia, the Missing Link is a panel with Boreth Sun and others TBA. Issues include how Cambodia became a strategic aspect of the US war in Vietnam, the consequences for the people, and what lies ahead. This event will take place at UMass New Africa House, Augusta SAvage Gallery beginning at 1 p.m. For information call 545-1972.

Southeast Asian People and the Aftermath: The AmerAsian Generation is a symposium with AmerAsian high school and college students. A historical perspective on the people and their experiences in Vietnam and in the U.S. will be discussed. This event takes place at the UMass New Africa House, Augusta Savage Gallery beginning at 1 p.m. For information call 545-1972.

On the Waterfront is the 1954 film that has won eight Academy Awards. The film features Marlon Brando, Karl Malden and Eva Marie Saint. Two showings will take place at Mount Holyoke College Gamble Auditorium at 7 and 9 p.m. Admission is $2.50.

An American Werewolf in London continues its screening at 7:30 and 10 p.m. (see FRIDAY)

1991-92 Performing Arts Series of the Fine Arts Center presents the Original 5th Dimension, who will be performing together again for the first time since 1975. This performance will be held at the UMass Fine Arts Center Concert Hall. Tickets are $25, $23, and $21; five college students half price.
For information call the Fine Arts Center Box Office, 545-2511.

Amherst College Gospel Choir Concert will perform at Amherst College Buckley Recital Hall beginning at 8 p.m. Admission is free.

Runaways continues its performance at 8 p.m. (see THURSDAY)

The (Female) Odd Couple continues its performance at 8 p.m. (see THURDAY)

Volpone;Or the Fox continues its performance at 8 p.m. (see THURSDAY)

Walls continues its performance at 8 p.m. (see THURSDAY)

Melava Malka is a celebration with live music, stories, and refreshments which will take place at Chabad House at Amherst, 30 N. Hadley Road beginning at 8:30 p.m. This event is free. For information call 549-4094.

SUNDAY

Southeast Asian People and the Aftermath: Southeast Asian Resettlement in the United States is a panel with Boreth Sun, Alexander Nguyen and others TBA. Discussion topics include the economic and political problems of refugees and issues of bilangual education and tracking in the schools. This symposium will take place at the UMass New Africa House, Augusta Savage Gallery beginning at 12:30 p.m. For information call 545-1972.

Balls of Fire is an American 1941 film directed by Howard Hawks; with Barbara Stanwick and Gary Cooper. The screenings take place at Amith College Wright Hall Auditorium at 2 and 4 p.m.

Walls continues its performance at 2:30 p.m. (see THURSDAY)

New Guitar Music from the Northeast features Michal Nix, contemporary classical guitarist. The performance takes place at UMass Fine Arts Center Bezanson Recital Hall beginning at 3 p.m. A $5 donation is suggested. For information call 545-0519.

An American Werewolf continues its screenings at 7:30 and 10 p.m. (see FRIDAY)

The Flirtations are a five-member, multi-racial, a capella singing group that performs an eclectic blend of musical styles-rock n roll, doo-wop, salsa, gospel, and barbershop. The performance takes place at UMass Campus Center Auditorium beginning at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are $10 and $7 for UMass students with valid ID. For information call 545-4824.

Brooks Williams, acoustic singer and songwriter; with opening by Catie Curtis, finalist in the Greatwoods song-writing contest will perform at Amherst College Campus Center Frontroom beginning at 8 pm. Tickets are $6 and $1 with Amherst College ID.

The Female Odd Couple continues its performance at 8 p.m. (see FRIDAY)

RUSSELL'S
Discount LIQUORS Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441

Koch's Golden Anniversary
$7.99 case Everyday!

Captain Morgan $15.49 1.75L

Sutter Home White Zinfandel & Cabernet Sauvignon $3.99 750ml

Labatts $7.99 12/pk bots

"Lite" & Genuine Draft $6.99 12/pk bottles

Foster's $8.99 12/PK bots.

Smirnoff 80° $7.99 750ml

Visa/Mastercard accepted on keg deposits
Many More In-Store Specials
All Beers plus Deposit (especially on wines) 'Delivery Available'

PRINCIPLES of SOUND RETIREMENT INVESTING

BEFORE TRUSTING YOUR FUTURE TO ANY COMPANY, ASK FOR SOME LETTERS OF REFERENCE.

You put more than just your savings into a retirement company. You put in your trust and hopes for the future, too. So before you choose one, ask some questions. How stable is the company? How solid are its investments? How sound is its overall financial health?

A good place to start looking for answers is in the ratings of independent analysts. Three companies, all widely recognized resources for finding out how strong a financial services company really is, gave TIAA their top grade.

IN THE FINAL ANALYSIS, TIAA IS LETTER-PERFECT.

TIAA received A+ from A.M. Best Co., AAA from Standard & Poor's and Aaa from Moody's Investors Service. These ratings reflect TIAA's reliable claims-paying ability, exceptional financial strength, superior investment performance, and low expenses. With its guaranteed rate of return and opportunity for dividends, TIAA is one of less than ten companies, out of 2,200 nationwide, that received these highest marks.

CREF. FOUR MORE LETTERS EVERYONE SHOULD KNOW.

For further growth potential and diversification, there's the CREF variable annuity with four different investment accounts to give you the flexibility you want as you save for the future.

Together, TIAA and CREF form the nation's largest private retirement system, with over $95 billion in assets and more than 70 years of experience serving the education community. For over one million people nationwide, the only letters to remember are TIAA-CREF.

TIAA CREF Ensuring the future for those who shape it.℠

SEND NOW FOR A FREE RETIREMENT INVESTMENT KIT, including a Special Report on TIAA investments. Mail this coupon to: TIAA CREF, Dept. OC, 730 Third Avenue, New York, NY 10017. Or call 1 800-842-2733, Ext. 8016.

Name (Please print)
Address
City State Zip Code
Institution (Full name)
Title Daytime Phone ( )
TIAA-CREF Participant If yes, Social Security #
☐ Yes ☐ No

CN

For the Ultimate in hair care & designs see the professionals at

HAIR BY HARLOW

Introducing Cami and Joanne, new stylists to the area.

20% off all haircuts and perms.

239 Triangle St., Amherst, MA
549-4412

ROLL UPS
SANDWICH SHOP
331 Russell St., Rt. 9 Hadley
(next to Darden Donuts)
586-8255

COUPON
FREE! FREE!
SANDWICH
Buy One Sandwich, Get One FREE
(Lower Priced Sandwich is Free)
Not Valid In Conjunction With Other Offers
CALL AHEAD FOR FAST SERVICE
One Coupon Per Person Per Order Please Expires 10/31/91

WALT DISNEY WORLD COLLEGE PROGRAM

Walt Disney World Co. representatives will present an information session on the Walt Disney World College Program on Wednesday, October 30, 7:00 pm, room 109 SOM Building. Attendance at this presentation is required to interview for the SPRING '92 COLLEGE PROGRAM. Interviews will be held, for spring interns only (Jan.-May), Thursday, October 31, at Mather Career Center, time to be announced. The following majors are encouraged to attend: Communications, Hotel/Restaurant Management, Leisure Studies and Fashion Marketing.

Contact: Field Marketing Office
Phone: 545-6265
Walt Disney World Co.
© The Walt Disney Company An Equal Opportunity Employer

PEKING GARDEN
BEST OF CHINESE FOOD
SPECIALIZING IN MANDARIN AND SZECHUAN DISHES

5 - 8 PM MON - THURS BUFFET $5.99
11 - 3 PM SUNDAY BRUNCH $6.99

FRIDAY AND SATURDAY COMEDY SHOW
20% OFF DINNER
BANQUET PARTY ROOM UP TO 200 PERSONS
FULL COCKTAIL MENU
48 RUSSELL ST. • HADLEY, MA 01035 • (413) 586-1202
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK
VISA & MASTERCARD

Hip, fresh and free at Pearl St.

By ERIC POULIN
Collegian Correspondent

With the only exception perhaps being the words "free beers," he expression "free admission" is probably the one least-often heard on today's club scene, particularly when two internationally-known acts are involved. Those are the two key words tonight at Pearl Street, however, as Santa Barbara's toad the wet sprocket hook up with The Innocence Mission of Lancaster, Pennsylvania to perform a free show tonight. Tickets for the 18-plus show must be picked up in advance, however, at For The Record (Amherst), Strawberries, Dynamite Records (Northampton), or at the Pearl Street box office.

Photo by Pam Springsteen
The Innocence Mission

"We've been billed as being kind of alternative, but I don't know if that's really accurate," says Todd Nichols of toad the wet spocket. "Our music is an alternative to normal Top 40, but other than that...I'd just say that the way we've recorded has maybe been alternative."

The band's blend of folk and rock, fused with some pretty heavy lyrics could best be described as Darden Smith meets R.E.M. meets the Don't Tell a Soul / All Shook Down Replacements. Needless to say, their music is pretty straightforward and natural, without an ounce of compromise prevalent on any of their songs.

Toad is touring in support of their latest effort, fear, which is the band's third album. Following their 1989 critically-acclaimed debut, Bread and Circus, and the 1990 follow-up album, Fear, the band took a slightly different approach when recording the new album.

"We just want to have something different going on with each album," says vocalist/guitarist/ songwriter Glen Phillips. For this one, we didn't want to use the studio like a nightclub—we wanted to do a lot of pre-production and really think about the arrangements."

Toad the wet sprocket (the name lifted from a Monty Python skit) was formed in 1986 as four friends who used their music for their own personal enjoyment and a way to avoid boredom. They quickly gained a zealous local following, and would record a cassette on a shoestring budget from a garage studio. This tape sold well in the Santa Barbara area, and eventually caught the eye of many major labels in Los Angeles. They signed with Columbia in 1989, but held true to their desire to write songs for themselves.

Phillips admits, "We make our music to make ourselves happy, that's the core of it. That some of our songs have special meaning to some people...well, that takes care of whatever guilt any of us feel about making a living writing songs and playing music. We'd be doing this if we didn't touch anybody. The fact that it does make it more worthwhile. It's like we're really creating something. We're giving something back."

The Innocence Mission is another band that's relatively new to the international scene, although their local area has given them full support for some time. Formed in 1982 while all four members attended Pennsylvania's Lancaster Catholic High, the band first carved their name onto the music scene by becoming favorites on the nearby Philadelphia scene.

Steven Rea, of the Philadelphia Inquirer, in December of 1987 wrote of vocalist Karen Peris' "strong, supple voice...the quartet's economical, inventive instrumentation, and...the sheer originality and emotional power of the songs themselves."

Their debut album, The Innocence Mission, was released in the summer of 1989, and gave the world such college radio hits as "Black Sheep Wall," "Wonder of Birds" and "I Remember Me." Their first U.S. tour followed during the autumn of that year.

"The audiences were very kind," says drummer Steve Brown. "The most thrilling thing about the tour was to go into cities we had never been to before and find people there to whom our music meant something."

The Innocence Mission graces Western Massachusetts to promote their follow-up album, Umbrella, which is already receiving a pretty good deal of critical acclaim. They promise to put on a decent show, as does toad the wet sprocket, and hell, you sure can't beat the price.

Generation gap!?

By LISA CURTIS
Collegian Staff

This weekend at UMass, is Parents' Weekend. Students are feeling a little apprehensive. How to bridge that generation gap for a day? You could bring your parent to the Fine Arts Center Saturday night to see The Original Fifth Dimension Tour!

"Who are they?" you might be asking. In 1967, this group recorded "Up, up and Away" which brought the band five Grammy awards.

They have received 14 gold records with classics like "Aquarius/Let the Sun Shine In," "One Less Bell to Answer," "The Worst That Could Happen," and "Stoned Soul Picnic."

In 1975, Marilyn McCoo and husband Billy Davis Jr., left the group to record their only number one hit as a duo, "You Don't Have to be a Star." McCoo went on to host television's enormously popular Solid Gold. (Recognition is dawning on you now.) The other members of the Original Fifth Dimension, Florence LaRue, Lamonte McLemore and Ron Townson, all continued to perform concerts and became the first vocal group to star in a Broadway musical, Ain't Misbehavin'.

The band had not played together in concert since 1975 until last December at the Trump Plaza Hotel.

Their repertoire includes virtually all the hits that made the band one of the most popular vocal groups in the world in the late sixties and early seventies with their own special blend of "Champagne soul."

Movies — you picked 'em

By JAMIE GORNSTEIN
Collegian Correspondent

This week on HSCN, there is an incredible list of movies being shown. You might ask yourself, "Who picks these movies?!"

Well, simply put, you pick them. Yes, you the students, not Housing Services. All you have to do if you are not satisfied with the movie selection thus far is to tell the Student Government. And now for the movies beginning Wednesday, October 23.

1984 — John Hurt, Richard Burton, Suzanna Hamilton. Remake of the 1956 film. Bleak and austere, but with an overall masterful effect. ***

Black Rain — Michael Douglas, Andy Garcia, Kate Capshaw. Two tough New York cops track down an escaped Japanese criminal in Osaka. A wonderfully sleek Garcia. 1/2

Cinema Paradiso — Philippe Noiret, Jacques Perrin, Salvatore Cascio. With subtitles. A young boy is dazzled by a movie theatre and its projectionist in a small post-WWII Italian town. Cannes Film Festival winner of 1989. This week's top choice. ****

Ghost — Patrick Swayze, Demi Moore, Whoopi Goldberg. Fantasy, romance and mystery combine to make a fantastic movie. Goldberg won Best Supporting Actress Oscar. ****

Brother Sun Sister Moon — Graham Faulkner, Judi Bowker, Leigh Lawson. Directed by Franco Zeffirelli. Story of Francis of Assisi from a youthful perspective. **

Harlem Nights — Eddie Murphy, Richard Pryor, Redd Foxx. Murphy's writer-directorial debut which flopped. Pryor is magnetic and is hysterical as ever, but even the star-studded cast can't save this one. *1/2

Boys From Brasil — Gregory Peck, Laurence Olivier, James Mason. A Jewish Nazi-hunter (Olivier) is stunningly believable, and Peck is wonderfully conniving as the former Nazi who desires to make a new breed of Hitlers. Based on the Ira Levin novel. Worth watching. 1/2

Hope and Glory — Sarah Miles, David Hayman, Derrick O'Connor. Autobiographical of director John Boorman, the film lovingly and cleverly looks at British during WWII through the eyes of a young curious boy. A rare treat. ****

Steel Magnolias — Sally Field, Julia Roberts, Shirley MacLaine. Heartwarming, tender yet funny story of a group of friends who congregate weekly at a local beauty parlor. Goes from wildly funny to solid tear jerking. ***

Terms of Endearment — Shirley MacLaine, Jack Nicholson, Debra Winger. If you didn't get enough tears from Steel Magnolias, wait until you get a load of this. Follows a mother and daughter through their trials and tribulations throughout the years. Jam-packed with Oscar winners, including Screenplay, Director, Best Picture and Oscars for MacLaine and Nicholson. ****

Scanners — Jennifer O'Neill, Stephen Lack, Patrick McGoohan. A novel idea....a "scanner" is a genius mindreader. In the movie, a "good" scanner helps some doctors find "bad" scanners, and can make their heads explode. Whoa. Intense blood and guts, not for the weak of stomach. 1/2

Torch Song Trilogy — Anne Bancroft, Matthew Broderick, Harvey Fierstein. Fierstein rewrote and condensed his Broadway play about a drag queen. Fierstein is reamarkable in his performance. ***

U2 Rattle and Hum — The band takes a road trip and shows performances all over the country, and for no apparent reason the first half is grainy and in black and white, and the second half is in color. Still, if you like these talented Irish guys, you'll appreciate the music even more. The band's rendition of "Helter Skelter" is intense. ***

Ice Castles — Lynn-Holly Johnson, Robby Benson, Colleen Dewhurst. Uh-oh, tearjerker alert again. Yes, I cried, and you will, too. An Iowa farm girl/professional ice skater has her dreams violently interrupted when she is blinded in a horrible freak accident. 1/2

Jagged Edge —Jeff Bridges, Glenn Close, Robert Loggia. Close is a lawyer who will defend her client only if she believes he is innocent of murdering his wife. Well, she believes him as well as falls in love with him. Too many loopholes in the plot, ruining some of its credibility, but generally a good movie. ***

Working Girl — Melanie Griffith, Harrison Ford, Sigourney Weaver. Cute film about a smart, ambitious secretary who can't get a break into the "big time" jobs until she manages to outwit her sly, villainous boss, played superbly by Weaver. The ending is predictable but, hey, you'll smile despite yourself. Griffith is just so, well, cutesie, that you can't help but love her character. ***

Movies not reviewed but are on HSCN this week are Miller's Crossing, Pacific Heights, Seven Year Itch, and Scenes From a Mall.

FRANK SANTOS
Rated R
Hynotist-Humorist
Nov. 16th
1st Show 5:30
General Audience
2nd Show 9:30
Adults Only
HuKeLau
705 Memorial Dr. Chicopee • 593-5222 Tickets on Sale Now!

Don't take a chance with your food dollars!
BOLTWOOD MARKET
offers top quality meats, fish and poultry cut to order.
We also have a fine selection of fresh produce.
Top Quality • Competitive Prices
This Week's Specials:
• Fresh made Italian Pork Sausage $1.99 lb.
• Coke 6/pk $1.89
Hours: Mon-Sat 9am - 7pm • Sun 9am - 2pm
Located behind Bart's

CHINA GARDEN
The Collegian's Choice for Delightful Dining
$2 OFF with purchase of $15 or more with this coupon
Enjoy A Taste of Real Chinese Food
Sunday-Thursday, 11:30am-10:00pm
Friday-Saturday, 11:30am-11:00pm
Lunch Hour: 11:30am-3:30pm 7 days a week
MSG
Free Delivery Service Fri., Sat., Sun. 5:00pm-10:00pm
Visa/Master Card/ American Exp
•New Remodeling
•7 Days a week
•Take-out
•Luncheon Specials $3.75-$4.55
The Valley's only Dim Sum Brunch
•Dim Sum (Chinese Brunch - Mandarin and Cantonese Styles) Every Day 11:30-3:30
•Weekly Vegetarian Sepecials (Wednesday and Thursday)
New Vegetarian Menu Coming Soon!
13 N. Pleasant Street Amherst, MA • 253-4280/4281

Revolting Music and an Irish Wake in Noho

By BRIAN HARRINGTON
Collegian Staff

Theater and music abound this weekend for local Celticjigabilly rockers The Big Bad Bollocks as they sing, act, and imbibe their way through two local productions in Northampton. Both presentations are quite unusual and come highly recommended for those of you tired of the "same old, same old" in the local scene.

Louie Lou I is a theater production at the Academy of Music in Northampton that is being billed as a "A Revolting Musical". The show features the combined talents of the Young at Heart Chorus and the Big Bad Bollocks and is being directed by Roy Faldry of the No Theater. The Young At Heart Chorus are a group of senior citizens who put plenty of fun and pizzazz into their performances. This past August they were featured on an MTV Music News segment for their participation in a widely attended local Woodstock Revival in which they covered none other than Country Joe and the Fish. Some say they stole the show with their tye-died choir robes and 60s chanting. Understand that some of those in the Young at Heart Chorus are in their nineties and bless them if they aren't the spunkiest and most exhilarating singing group you'll ever see. In Louie Lou I they done curled pompadour wigs and powder their faces to portray the aristocrats of French king Louis the XIV's court.

But this is no ordinary court, as the Las Vegas style show tunes and contemporary references to the S&L bailout indicate. As John Allen of the Big Bad Bollocks explained, "It's about a revolt of the oppressed against the conspicuous spending of the privileged". The Bollocks naturally portray the rabble rousing revolutionists and I am told they lead the aristocrats to the guillotine while singing Frank Sinatra. In the tradition of the No Theater, the show relies heavily on improvisation so I predict there will also be some unexpected hijinks. Curtain times are tonight at 8:00 p.m. and Sunday at 2:00 p.m.

Extremos, the mysterious floating nightclub, presents "An Irish Wake" on Monday, October 28th at the Baystate Hotel on 41 Strong Avenue in downtown Northampton. This show will feature the expanded acoustic Big Bad Bollocks, including the Thousand Drunken Bastards Choir direct from their Too Drunk to Duck tour. Also featured will be readings of "poems about ordinary madness, Hollywood, and the exclusion of the mediocre" by Mark Cook, Woody Woodbridge and Niama Rodrigues. Evil lounge DJ Hit & Run will be spinning "all the tunes he can remember from riding in blue cars". These Extremos gigs are quite intriguing and always feature a bit of the bizzare, in a David Lynch type of way. I am told there will actually be a casket present. Those of you fond of Guinness, Joyce, and the Pogues should well make a point of attending "An Irish Wake".

On the subject of Pearl Street, local funksters Rippopotamus and the Mal Thursday Experience check in on Saturday. This is a show being featured on WRSI's Homegrown series by DJ Johnny Memphis. Rippopotamus is about the closest thing you'll find in this area to acts such as the Red Hot Chili Peppers and Fishbone.

BLAH, BLAH, BLAH. . . I blabbered away in my last column about the growing popularity of karaoke. Recently The Pub in Amherst and the Hadley Pub added karaoke. . . The Big Bad Bollocks tell me that their long held up CD will DEFINATELY be out in stores by the middle of November. . . "New Music Circus", an all ages multiple band show, will be this Saturday at the Majestic Ballroom in Easthampton. Included are folk/punkster darlings Flower-Thief. . . .Slav to the rhythm Baba Yaga at the Montague Book Mill tomorrow night.

湘 PANDA EAST 園
Advocate "Best in the Valley" 1989 &1990
CHINESE RESTAURANT
We bring Chinatown to you
* Lunch Specials *
from $3.95 including soup & rice
Hours:
Mon. - Thurs. 11³⁰ am - 9³⁰ pm
Fri. & Sat. 11³⁰ am - 10³⁰ pm
Sunday 12 noon - 9³⁰ pm
103 N.Pleasant St. Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 256-8923 (413) 256-8924

Styles By Deborah
The Spa For Hair & Skin Care
549-5610
65 University Drive Amherst
$4.00 OFF With Cheryl Only — Professional Consultation incl. Style, Cut & Dry. Reg. $18.00 to $14.00. First time customers only • Exp. 10/31/91
$5.00 OFF Any Perm, Facial or Highlighting. First time customers only • Exp. 10/31/91

Halloween Headquarters
GREASE PAINTS • HANDS • FEET • WITCHES' HATS & BROOMS • WIGS • MOUSTACHES • BEARDS • NOSES • FANGS • TEETH • TOOTH BLACK-OUT
NORTHAMPTON HALLOWEEN CENTER
25 State Street • 584-5006
10 Minutes From UMass
LARGE ASSORTMENT OF MASKS TO CHOOSE FROM
Call for extended Haloween hours
H.L. CHILDS & SON
Open Daily and Saturday 9:00am-5:15pm, Thursdays 'til 8:00pm
Check Our LOW Prices

SMITH CORONA
SAVE UP TO 60%*
on Smith Corona's POWER TOOLS FOR THE MIND
BUY FROM YOUR CAMPUS REP AND GET THE BEST VALUE FOR LESS!
Off Suggested Retail Prices
Personal Word Processors
Built-in Word Processing Software; Spreadsheet Capability; Graphical User Interfaces; 3.5" Disk Drives; MS-DOS® File Format Compatibility.
Prices ranging from $299-$499.
Typewriters
Complete Correction Systems; Electronic Dictionaries; Easy-to-read Displays; Full Word Processing Capabilities.
Prices ranging from $89-$189.
Personal Computers
80286 and 80386SX Processors; 40 and 80MB Hard Drives; 640K to 2MB RAM; Microsoft® MS-DOS® 4.01 and 5.0; Microsoft® Works.
Prices ranging from $699-$1399. (includes VGA* color monitor)
Call your Campus Rep TODAY
Philip Corcell • 413-549-7474

SPECIALS THIS WEEK
Get the best of all worlds, low prices and selection, combind with a warm, personable store
BUDWEISER.....$12.99cs*
ROLLING ROCK.....$12.49cs*
KEYSTONE LIGHT..... $9.99cs.
SAM ADAMS Octoberfest.....$4.696pk.*
HARPOON Octoberfest.. $4.99 6pk. *
CAPTAIN MORGAN RUM..... $7.49 .750ml
FLEISCHMANNS WHISKEY..... $11.99 1.75 ml
ALMADEN WINES..... $11.99 1.75 ml
Golden Chablis, Mtn. Red Burgendy, Mtn. Rhine, ect.
The price of Popov Vodka in last week's advertisement in the Collegian was incorrect due to a typographical error. The Collegian accepts responsibility for this error and regrets any inconvenience this may have caused to customers of Four Seasons.
"A New Family Owned Business"
Four Seasons WINES & LIQUORS
ROUTE 9, HADLEY, Between Burger King & Dunkin Donuts • 584-8174

Pearl Street NIGHTCLUB
Thur., Oct. 24 - 8:30pm /18+/
THE INOCENCE MISSION

TOAD THE WET SPROCKET
Eighteen & Over
Dancing Upstairs with DJ Dennis
Fri., Oct. 25 - 8:30 pm
MINIBUS Borderland
Dancing With DJ Job
Sat., Oct. 26 - 8:30pm
WRSI Homegrown Series
RIPPOPOTAMUS
Mal Thursday Experience
Dancing with DJ Job
Sun., Oct. 27 - 7:00pm /18+/
"House Imports"
Eighteen & Over
Dancing with DJ Job
Mon., Oct. 28 - 8:00pm /18+/
THE BODEANS

Will T. Massey
THREE NIGHTS OF HALLOWEEN!
Tues., Oct. 29 - 8:00 pm /18+/
DREAD ZEPPELIN

Bop Harvey
The Northern Pikes
Come in Costume for $1 off admission, $2 off if you come as Elvis of Bob Marley
Wed., Oct. 30 - 9:00pm
Halloween Gayla with DJ Job
$200 Cash Prize for Best Costume
Thurs., Oct. 31- 8:00pm /18+/
The Area's Ultimate HALLOWEEN Dance Party
$200 Cash Prize for Best Costume
Gift Certificate from Eastside Grille, Spoletto's & La Verancruzana
Up - DJ Dennis
Down - Who's Kiddin' Who
Fri., Nov. 8 - 8:30pm
ROOMFUL OF BLUES

featuring Sugar Ray
Tues., Nov. 10 -8:00pm /18+/
New Date!
All Tickets Honored
DE LA SOUL

Resident Alien
Tues., Nov. 19 - 8:30pm
BURNING SPEAR

The Equalities
Thurs., Nov. 21 - 8:30pm /18+/
KING MISSILE
Tickets for all shows available at Pearl Street, Strawberries, Dynamite Records, For the Record in Amherst; Ticket Pro (800) 828-7666, 10 Pearl Street, Northampton (413) 584-7751

Grind, grind, grind!

By TODD BOURRET
Collegian Corespondent

First things first. If you haven't heard the new album by Nirvana, Never Mind, you are seriously missing out on one of the best releases this year.

Since then their excellent debut LP Bleach was released by Sub Pop in 1989, Nirvana has kept a low profile, releasing a few singles and covers here and there. Then by some freak of nature, the band got picked up by Geffen Records and now they're the next big thing, with reason.

Nevermind is quite different from Bleach. Kurdt Kobain has abandoned the throbbing, e-minor type grunge in favor of resounding power chords and a garage-folk sensibility. There are even a couple acoustic tunes on Nevermind!

Don't worry. Nirvana hasn't sold out. At least I don't think so. They are still capable of rocking out with scary intensity; it's just that the intensity is balanced out by some calmer, catchier, melodic songs.

Kobain's grainy, cigarette and beer ravaged voice is one of the best in the business, and is central to Nirvana's sound. That voice, coupled with big fuzzy guitars, a hard driving 4/4 rhythm section, and slightly demented lyrics make for one hell of an album. In fact, the only bad song is "Come as You Are."

Let me warn you that Nevermind is quite addictive and may remain on your stereo for weeks on end. It's nice to know that a band can really get popular and avoid producing mediocre material (take the new Pixies and Fugazi albums, for instance). Let's hope Nirvana will enjoy a long and fruitful career along with their new-found success.

I was pleasantly surprised by the Venus Beads' new ep Black Asprin. For some reason, their name and what I had heard about them screamed, "Manchester," but, gladly, that's not the case.

The seven cuts on Balck Asprin are all basically layered, drowning, grungy, guitar-based alternative rock songs. Although they do sound very "U.K." (particularly with Rob Jones' low-mixed lilting vocals), the Venus Beads manage to transcend the new wave/hip-hop/60's rut that so many of their fellow countrymen have fallen into.

Once again, no one bothered to send a lyric sheet with this tape, and I couldn't catch much of what Rob Jones was singing, but let me assure you that it was sung with conviction.

The Venus Beads, along with bands like Ride and Ned's Atonic Dustbin seem to be the forerunners in a resurgence of vital, energetic, emotional music that's been absent from the "alternative" U.K. music scene for a while.

Meanwhile, former Controlled Bleeding members Paul Lenos and Chris Moriarity have shunned their techno-geek past and turned satanic - in the guise of Skin Chamber.

When I first got the tape I thought, "Oh, just what that world needs. Another industrial grindcore band."

The truth is, Skin Chamber blows away a lot of the Combat/Earache bands that have been popping up recently.

With just about every song on their LP, Wound, Skin Chamber manages to avoid redundancy, keeping the listener anxious and interested. This is a feat that Godflesh and Napalm Death failed to achieve with their recent albums.

Let me remind those weak-of-heart listeners that this is a very heavy album. It makes Ministry sound like Depeche Mode. But if you're into slow dirges, Hell-sent vocals, riffing, primal drum machines, and song titles like "Fat Hacks" and "Slice of God," I suggest you dig yourself out of that slimy dark pit and slither your way to the nearest record store for Wound.

That's all for now. Next week I'll have a few more releases that will need reviewing, so stay tuned.

Batsheva Bedazzles

By OLIVIA STEWART-LIBERTY
Collegian Correspondent

Batsheva Dance Co.
FAC
Tuesday, Oct. 22

The performance of the Batsheva Dance Company Tuesday night in the Concert Hall of the FAC was anything but predictable.

Beginning fifteen minutes later than was scheduled, the Tel Aviv based troupe performed an innovative variety of brief, vigorous and dramatic sets, intertwining violence with sensuality, force with fluidity.

The aesthetic diversity was accentuated by the variety of sounds accompanying each performance. The hypnotic throb of a drum accompanied by the rhythmic sound of bare-feet slapping lent an urgent insistency to one dance, while the power of another lay in its silence.

The performance opened with "Excerpts from KYR", created and choreographed by the Artisitic Director of the group, Ohad Naharin, commissioned by the 1990 Israel Festival in Jerusalem.

Brief extracts followed one another in rapid succession, contrasting with each other dramatically.

Two androgynous figures stood entwined in the center of the stage, the liquid sensuality of their movements: a direct contrast to the vigor of the previous set; their harmonic symmetry boldly lighted against the black stage.

Suddenly this mood of lazy sensuality was shattered: twelve people sat in a semi-circle, movement was sudden and violent, even militaristic. As the ominous tempo increased, the figures discarded their grey clothing piece-by-piece. It ended as suddenly as it had begun, the curtain dragging over a pile of wreckage.

Instantly noticeable about all of the sets was the markedly androgynous nature of the dancers, accentuated by their nondescript costumes.

Mood was attained through movement, sound and lighting, the contained violence of one scene was dispelled, and rapidly replaced by the comic clowning of another.

The innovative nature of this troop is said to have sprung from the influence of its founder, Martha Graham. Since its formation in 1974, the troupe has built on the ideas of Graham, using these as a firm foundation from which to search for novel means of expression.

The 'dances' performed last night, under the artistic direction of Ohad Naharin (who also created two of the pieces), were certainly in keeping with Graham's traditional and international reputation: that of combining ceaseless vigor with great innovation.

ALL YOU CAN EAT!
$2.99
Time Out Homemade Spaghetti
w/ salad & bread
the BEST you'll have!
Thurs. night 6 - 9

WANTED: USED MAC's
WE BUY YOUR USED MAC EQUIPMENT FOR TOP DOLLAR. CASH! WE SELL REFURBISHED MAC's AT DISCOUNT! CALL FOR QUOTE.
RENTEX INC. (800) 545-2313, (617) 423-5567

The UMass Theatre Guild Presents
WORKING
* Tickets available at Tix Unlimited or at the door!
Playing October 29,30, and 31 1991 at 8:00 pm
UMass AMHERST Student Union Ballroom 545-0415
A Musical About a Steelworker, a Car Hiker, an Editor, a Secretary, a Corporate Executive, a Newsboy, a Teacher, a Checker, a Migrant Worker, a Boxboy, a Gas Meter Reader, a Housewife, a Hooker, a Mill worker, a Stonemason, a Waitress, a Trucker, a Seaman, a Receptionist, an Operator, a Retired Worker, a Fireman a Cleaning Woman, a Hotel Operator, a Salesman, a Copyboy, a Piano Bar Player.....

Home of the 99¢ ~ Long ~ HOT DOG
1/4 lb.Hamburgers
Fries
Onion Rings
Grinders
Fish & Chips
PETE'S DRIVE-IN
11am-7pm • 7 Days
Route 9, Hadley
585-0241

HELP YOURSELF BY HELPING OTHERS
Earn good part-time or full-time income at home representing The Micro Diet program. Call or write Amherst Chiropractic, Independent Micro Diet Advisor, 1-800-659-8135.

R & P Liquors
Convenient to Brittany & Riverglade
253-9742
505 West St.
So. Amherst

Jazz — are you listening to the music?

By JAMES MOLESWORTH
Collegian Staff

Why aren't young African-Americans listening to "jazz" and blues?

This question has been emerging steadily over the past few years, and leads to several interesting answers. Yet before one can answer, the question needs to be looked at more closely. First off, who says young blacks aren't listening to "jazz" and blues? Such a sweeping generalization needs to be backed up by some evidence, and I've yet to see it. I think that part of the reason the question is being asked is because there are now more whites, particularly young whites, who are listening to the music. The recently released 2 CD set of the complete Robert Johnson recordings by Columbia sold more than 350,000 copies, mostly to young white males who are slowly realizing that the Rolling Stones and Led Zeppelin didn't just emerge out of thin air (the next step is for people to realize that Gun N' Roses should evaporate into thin air).

Jazz Scene

In addition, most young white males do not listen to other forms of black music, notably rap and hip-hop. The politically charged lyrics simply do not relate to the white experience of America. That of being a dominant culture which has historically subverted and marginalized black culture by imposing insipid sociological binary oppositions such as good vs. bad, white vs. black, Christian vs. heathen, etc.

This lack of understanding by whites regarding rap music bears a strong resemblance to the music that was made by Max Roach, Dizzy Gillespie and Charlie Parker in the 1940s, commonly called "bebop". That music was again a response to a white domination of the music industry. What Max, Bird and Dizzy did was to make a music that could not be corrupted by white musicians and audiences, simply because only Max, Bird and Dizzy were the only ones who could play it. Yes, there were a few white "bebop" musicians, such as Bunny Berigan, who hung out at Minton's playhouse. And today there are a few white rap groups that are of some importance, Third Bass perhaps the best known.

There is a bit of truth to the question, for to some extent, young blacks are not listening to the music. Cornel West, director of the African-American studies program at Princeton University links it to a generational gap between 1- the lyrics of blues which use double-entendre's that no longer are contemporaneous with today's society, and 2- the emphasis on the visual arts, i.e. dancing and MTV, of which neither "jazz" nor blues has any artistic stake in, but groups such as Public Enemy most certainly do.

So to the question of "Why aren't young blacks listening to "jazz" and blues?", I say that it is a racially driven inversion of what is actually reality. The reality is young whites aren't listening to rap, and that therefore leads to a lack of overlap between the two audiences. This lack of overlap then manifests itself in this question, which in the end, is unfair to the music.

KATINA'S
ROCK HOUSE
LIVE ONE LOVE BAND EVERY WEDS.
SELECTROCUTION OCT 24
• BRITESIDE • MONA LISA • MORIAH • INSIDE CHARLOTTE OCT 25
SELECTROCUTION 99.3 OCT 26
HALLOWEEN THRASH BASH! Featuring PRONG, WARGASM, & WRECKING CREW! with Special Appearances by IMPAKT and LACHRYMATOR! SPONSORED BY WCHS "The Pit", Plattsburgh, (Westfield), Music Outlet (Eastfield). All Ages OCT 27
EVERY WEDS. ONE LOVE
FRI. 11/1 JOHN VALBY
SUN. 11/3 HARD CORPS + HARD SILENCE
FRI. 11/8 MAX CREEK
SUN. 11/10 THE THROBS
ADVANCE TIX: Katina's, Platnopus, Strawberries, & Music Outlet
ROUTE 9, HADLEY • 586-4463

Scott's LIQUORS
OPEN MON-SAT 8 AM-11 PM Tel: 549-2692
Hurry Down to Scott's and Save!!!
PEACHTREE SCHNAPPS w/ FREE CAN OF O.J. $6.99 750 ml
COORS & COORS EXTRA GOLD 12-12 oz. cans $6.99 + Dep.
KAHLUA LIQUOUR $12.49 750 ML
RUBINOFF VODKA $8.99 1.75L
ANHEUSER-BUSCH'S NATURAL LIGHT 24-12 oz. cans $8.99 + Dep.
GLEN ELLEN WHITE ZINFANDEL 2 FOR $7.99 750 ml
HARDY'S AUSTRALIAN CHARDONNAY $4.99 750 ml
KEYSTONE & KEYSTONE LIGHT 12-pk. cans $4.99 Plus Deposit
Not responsible for typographical errors
VISA, MC OR CHECKS ACCEPTED FOR KEG DEPOSITS
Tele-check for your personal check.
WE WANT TO BE YOUR FAVORITE LIQUOR STORE!
6 University Drive
at Newmarket Center, Amherst
We now have all Mass Lottery games!
MASSMILLIONS THE NUMBERS MEGABUCKS

SANDRA BERNHARD
featured in
"The King of Comedy & "Truth or Dare"
& also starred in her one-woman show
"Without You I'm Nothing"
will be appearing at SMITH COLLEGE
in the
John M. Greene Hall, Northampton
on Friday, October 25, 1991
at 8:00pm (doors open at 7:00pm)
All Tickets available at:
Smith College • $5.00 for Smith students with valid I.D.
$10.00 for all non-Smith Students
Wenesday, October 16 - Thursday October 24
For the Record, Amherst • 256-5726 for $10.25
Main St. Records, Northampton • 586-5726 for $10.50
Thursday, October 17 - Thursday, October 24
Tickets purchased at the box office day of the show will be $10.50
For more information contact Angela at 585-6836

Pinocchio's
Ristorante Italiano
1177 N. Pleasant St., Amherst ● 549-3669
Free Delivery

Menu includes:
-Pizza
-Salads
-Subs
-Dinners (lasagna, egg-veal-chicken parmigana, and manicotti)
-And new item - Calzoni!
White Pizza!
Spinach Pizza!
Hours:
Monday -Thursday 4pm-2am
Friday-Saturday 4pm-3am
Sunday 4pm-1am
CALZONES Any three only $9.95 valid for p/u or del. only One coupon per order-expires 1/31/92
FREE TOPPING on any medium pizza valid for p/u or del. only One coupon per order-expires 1/31/92
$1.50 OFF any Large Pizza with 2 toppings valid for p/u or del. only One coupon per order-expires 1/31/92 any two Calzones $7.00 valid for p/u or del. only One coupon per order-expires 1/31/92
TWIN SPECIAL 2 Large Cheese pizzas $12.50 Any Topping $1.25 more valid for p/u or del. only One coupon per order-expires 1/31/92

NOW RENTING FOR THE SECOND SEMESTER
Don't live in the dorms paying 1800.00 room and board for the second semester
You can live in beautiful
SQUIRE VILLAGE
at an average of $235/Month
(room, board, utilities)
We have large 1 to 4 bedroom apartments fully applianced with:
• Kitchen with dishwasher •
• Wall-to-wall carpeting •
• Air Conditioning •
• Laundry facilities •
• Swimming pool •
• On U-Mass bus route •
Don't Delay! Call
SQUIRE VILLAGE APARTMENTS
ROUTE 116 • 665-2203

BOSTON BARTENDERS SCHOOL OF AMERICA
IF YOU ARE OVER 18 BE A BARTENDER!
LOCAL/NATIONAL PLACEMENT ASSISTANCE
DAY/EVENING ONE WEEK
NOVEMBER AND DECEMBER CLASSES NOW FORMING. CALL TODAY
747-9888
1655 MAIN ST. SUITE 202 • SPRINGFIELD

Spirit Haus
Liquor Store
Simpatico Amber Beer ..... $4.69 6-pk / $17.99 cs.
New Amsterdam Amber and Ale $4.99 6-pk
Samuel Adams Lager And Boston Ale $4.99 6-pk
Boston Ale Kegs $74.99
Golden Anniversary Beer ..... $8.99 16 oz returnables
Strongbow English Cider ..... 1.0 Liter 2 for $5.99
Jagermeister Liquer ..... $8.49 375 ml
KEGS STARTING AT $33.00 • CHECKS/ MASTERCARD/ VISA ACCEPTED FOR KEG DEPOSITS.
MEGABUCKS, WE HAVE IT!
338 College St.
One mile East of Amherst center on Route 9
Open 9 am - 11 pm Rain or Shine • Always Open
VISA & MASTERCARD ACCEPTED

NOBODY'S PERFECT
50% to 80% Off Their Prices
NEW LOCATION RT. 9 AMHERST/HADLEY BETWEEN SUPER STOP 'N' SHOP & LIQUORS 44 AT THE CAMPUS PLAZA
Merchandise From the Top 2 Specialty Stores in the United States
Blazers $19.99 Reg. $80-$175.00
Sweaters $14.99 Reg $30-$60.00
Pants $14.99 Reg $30-$42.00
Skirts $9.99 Reg. $29-$45.00
Congratulations to Barbara River of Leverett!! The winner in our leather coat drawing!
Watch for more contests in the future!
FIRST QUALITY AND SLIGHT IRREGULARS
NOBODY'S PERFECT
Not even the best known specialty & department stores in the U.S. They make mistakes, too...That's when our buyers take advantage and pass the savings onto you!
NEW LOCATION
CAMPUS PLAZA RT. 9 AMHERST/HADLEY
Phone 256-8686
Hours:
Sun. 12pm-6pm • Mon., Tues., Wed. 10am-6pm
Thurs., Fri. 10am-9pm • Sat. 10am-6pm

One Way From $12

Round Trip From $24

THE ONLY NON-STOP SERVICE
AMHERST TO BOSTON

Leaves Amherst		Arrives Boston
5:40 AM		8:30 AM
7:00 AM		9:50 AM
Δ 7:30 AM	Express	9:50 AM
8:00 AM		11:00 AM
9:00 AM		12:30 PM
11:00 AM		2:00 PM
* 12:00 PM	Express	2:30 PM
12:01 PM		3:15 PM
* 12:45 PM	Non-Stop Express	2:40 PM
1:00 PM		3:50 PM
* 1:45 PM	Non Stop Express	3:40 PM
2:00 PM		5:00 PM
* 2:45 PM	Non-Stop Express	4:40 PM
3:00 PM		6:30 PM
* 3:45 PM	Non-Stop Express	5:40 PM
4:00 PM		6:50 PM
* 4:45 PM	Non-Stop Express	6:40 PM
5:00 PM		8:00 PM
* 6:10 PM	Express	8:45 PM
6:10 PM		9:20 PM
8:20 PM		11:35 PM
10:20 PM		1:35 AM
1:20 AM		4:35 AM

Departure times are from Amherst U Mass campus (Haigus Mall). Bus departs Amherst Center Terminal 5 Minutes later
* Friday Only Δ Monday Through Friday Only

Peter Pan Buses Depart from
Haigus Mall - U-MASS
Peter Pan Bus Terminal
79 S. Pleasant St.
Amherst Center

Peter Pan
For schedules and fares call:
U-MASS Hotel 545-2006
Peter Pan Term 256-0431

Mudslides next threat for fire-ravaged Oakland

BY LAURA MYERS
Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — Firefighters on Wednesday controlled the blaze that turned the wooded hills above Oakland into a smoldering moonscape, while dogs helped hundreds of volunteers search for more victims of the fire.

Authorities said matters could get worse. With the start of the rainy season expected soon, the weekend fire has left the vegetation-stripped hills prone to yet another disaster: mudslides.

The death toll rose to 19, with 44 people listed as missing.

Many residents were allowed to return to the area for the first time.

Jack Rogers found where his three-story home had been, but the house was just a pile of ashes.

Rogers lost his daughter Kim to a fire 15 years ago.

"Yep, it's just gone," he said. "It's amazing to me that nothing is left. I guess it's called 'starting over time."

Linda Cristofaro, who lost her house, was standing in line waiting for an escort to the scene. A nephew had already told her the home was gone, but she insisted on returning.

"I just want to go up and see something, anything," she said.

City officials estimate fire damage at $5 billion, making it one of the costliest blazes in U.S. history.

"It's really hard to say specifically... it's an educated guess at best," said Alameda County Sheriff's Lt. Robert Jarrett.

The fire roared out of control Sunday after a small blaze that firefighters thought was out on Saturday flared up.

Fanned by 25 mph wind across brush that had been dried by five years of drought, the blaze destroyed almost 2,9000 houses and apartments, officials with the state Office of Emergency Services said.

In addition to the dead, 148 people were injured and 5,000 evacuated, Jarrett said. Authorities hoped some of those reported missing were out of town or simply unable to contact friends or relatives.

As firefighters battled the last of the hot spots Wednesday, Fire Chief Phillip Lamont Ewell defended his department's decision not to keep the original blaze under constant watch.

He and other Oakland fire officials also dismissed allegations that help from other departments wasn't called soon enough.

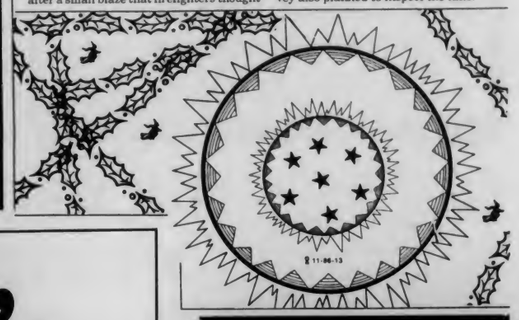
Homeowners also questioned why fire hoses went dry after millions of gallons of water were drained from 10 reservoirs and a power failure made it impossible to refill them.

East Bay Municipal Utility District spokesman Gayle Montgomery said the district has portable backup generators, but couldn't get them into the area because of the fire.

"It was not designed for a holocaust like happened Sunday," he said.

Some official warned that too much water from fall storms could further damage the charred hills overlooking the flatlands of Oakland and Berkley and San Francisco and beyond.

Public works crews hoped to put up a series of dams that would hold back a deluge and prevent mudslides and flooding. Landslide experts with the U.S. Geological Survey also planned to inspect the hills.



C'mon, You Must Know Somebody With $3.50.

One Large Cheese Pizza
$6.99
Toppings Extra.
Offer valid on delivery only. Please mention coupon when ordering. One coupon per party per visit at participating Pizza Hut delivery units or restaurants. Not valid with any other offer. Limited Delivery Area. Hurry, offer ends soon. Code: 16 DM.
© 1991 Pizza Hut, Inc. 1/204 cash redemption value.
Pizza Hut DELIVERY

Or try our Collegiate Pizza – A large Pepperoni Pizza for $6.00 with your Student I.D.
For free delivery call: 253-3443.
© 1991 Pizza Hut, Inc

LOW, LOW PRICE
YANKEE
DISCOUNT OIL
NORTHAMPTON · HOLYOKE
584-4112 · 535-1888

TONIGHT
WIN $100.00 CASH
-Money Vault-
Dancing • No Cover
THE 23 PUB
CELEBRATES 1968 • 1991 IN AMHERST
•15 EAST PLEASANT STREET•

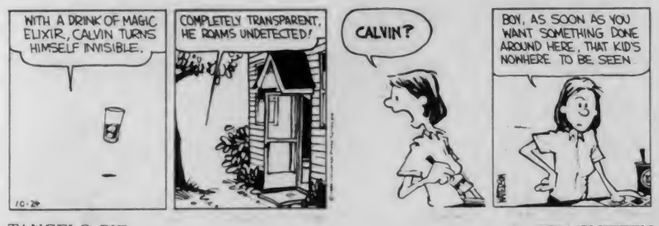
THE FAR SIDE
By GARY LARSON

Where we get calamari blanc

DOONESBURY
By GARRY TRUDEAU

AND NOW IT'S MY GREAT PRIVILEGE TO PRESENT TO YOU TODAY'S POINT O' LITE — MICHAEL J. DONESBURY OF NEW YORK CITY!
MICHAEL IS CREDITED WITH DRIVING DRUG GUYS OUT OF HIS NEIGHBORHOOD BY PLAYING LOUD MUZAK VERSIONS OF SONGS BY JOHN DENVER, BARRY MANILOW, DEBBY BOONE, DONNY AND MARIE, THE CAPTAIN AND TENNILLE...
...AND... AND...
I DON'T GET IT. THESE ARE GREAT ACTS.
DRUG GUYS DON'T HAVE ANY TASTE, SIR.

CALVIN AND HOBBES
By BILL WATTERSON



WITH A DRINK OF MAGIC ELIXIR, CALVIN TURNS HIMSELF INVISIBLE.
COMPLETELY TRANSPARENT, HE ROAMS UNDETECTED!
CALVIN?
BOY, AS SOON AS YOU WANT SOMETHING DONE AROUND HERE, THAT KID'S NOWHERE TO BE SEEN.

TANGELO PIE
By TIM SNIFFEN

Having reduced Dean Fogg to a "Maxie"-like state with "Old "Get Smart" re-runs, Gabe begins the brainwashing.
I'm going to show you a few things now...
And just remember, the correct answer to everything is "Get Gabriel out of College".
—Get Gabriel out of College.
Ok. Here's an enlarged list of my last three years' classes. What do you want to say?
Get Gabriel out of College and into a correctional facility.
Now, now, you've jumping ahead!

CAST OF THOUSANDS
By BARRY DEUTSCH

ZACK, AM I CRAZY?
OH, NO. TO OF COURSE NOT.
IT'S JUST THAT MY ROOMMATE ALBERT WAS TRAMPLED TO DEATH AT REGISTRATION AND NOW HE'S DOOMED TO HAUNT THE UNIVERSITY UNTIL HE GETS HIS B.A.
BOY, DO I FEEL REASSURED.
ALSO, HE'S KINDA A JERK, SO WE'D BETTER MAKE OUT IN YOUR ROOM FROM NOW ON.

UNDER 21
By KRIS K. EARLE

ONCE UPON A TIME...
I'm Back!
MIKEY DRANK A CASE OF M.D.
DAMN, MISSED MY MOUTH AGAIN!
CASE O MAD DOG 20/20
THEN HE MET WINNIE...
SHE DRANK A CASE OF GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY.
I LOVE THIS SHIT!
FROM THE MIND OF KRIS K. EARLE

Quote of the Day

"I hate the idea of causes, and if I had to choose between betraying my country and betraying my friend, I hope I should have the guts to betray my country."

-- E.M. Forster

DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
Edited by TRUDE MICHAEL JAFFE

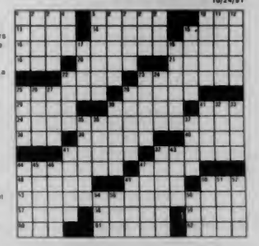
ACROSS
1 Fluent
5 Underworld
10 Plan
13 Pro —
14 Balbo, Italian aviator
15 Get the lay of the land
16 1934 Donaldson/Kahn song
19 Clan cap
20 Fusses
21 Map enlargement
22 War god
23 Summer tops
25 "The — Idol" R. Richardson film
28 Noggins
29 Does —
30 More tender
31 Energy
34 1946 Calvin/Styne song
38 Dutch city
39 Like a wet hen
40 Dismounted
41 Shores up
42 —-Lorraine
44 Ape and monkey
47 Spanish cheers
48 "Dallas" name
49 — boy!
50 Meadow
53 Ballet from "La Gioconda"
57 Baltic land, for short
58 Less colorful
59 Above
60 Musician Charles
61 Moves
62 Hardy girl

DOWN
1 Nerve
2 Volcano flow
3 Gossip's tidbit
4 — said Scrooge "bumbug"
5 Veiled
6 Kind of self-winding clock
7 Time segments
8 Shade tree
9 U.S.-Canada Canal
10 Pastor's home
11 Fall bloomer
12 Nuisances
15 Coppers
17 Bernie's river
18 Cartain runners
22 Toward shelter
23 Author Bret
24 Suit to —
25 Instrument to tootle
26 Saharan
27 Wash
28 Makes a mouë
30 Breaks
31 Negri of the silents
32 Author Ambler
33 "Honest to —!"
35 Delusion
36 Tuesday chore, of yore
37 Church rite
41 Tight spot
42 Changes
43 Jacob's first wife
44 Passover dinner
45 "— Male War Bride" C. Grant film
46 Like a julep
47 Different
48 King of the Huns
50 Elizabethan instrument
51 God of love
52 Nile viper
54 Goddess of plenty
55 Suet
56 Kind of bran

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

S	C	A	B		L	A	M	B		S	T	E	A	L
T	O	M	E		A	P	I	A		M	E	N	C	E
I	V	E	S		W	E	S	T	W	A	R	D	N	O
R	E	R	O	U	N	D	S		A	R	I	S	I	N
S	T	A	M	P				U	R	E
				S	P	R	A	N	G		J	A	V	A
S	T	E	E	L	E	R	S		S	A	W	E	D
H	E	A	R	T	O	F	D	A	R	K	N	E	S	S
O	A	S	I	S		L	O	D	E		I	S	L	E
E	L	K	S		V	E	N	O	M		S	I	S	T
			S	I	T	S			N	A	V	E	S
S	C	R	I	P	T		P	L	A	Y	B	I	L	L
T	H	E	S	A	W	O	F	F	A	L	G	A
E	A	T	E	N		P	O	U	R		F	L	A	K
T	R	E	E	D		A	L	D	O		T	A	I	R	E

10/24/91



Quote of the Day

"In the meantime, I urge you to drink and drink much."

-- Michael Shina
Amherst

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES(March 21-April 19): Share your new ideas with someone you trust. Artistic people should receive special encouragement today. Speculative ventures are fine so long as they involve only small sums of money.

TAURUS(April 20-May 20): Devote more time to those projects that will produce the largest profits. A business associate may feel threatened by pending technological changes. Offer reassurance.

GEMINI(May 21-June 20): Someone you have admired for a long time expresses new interest in you. Business negotiations should not be postponed. Stop sitting on the fence. It is time to move forward. Be bold!

CANCER(June 21-July 22): Someone influential gives full backing to a project that already has your stamp of approval. Show your appreciation. Your personal appearance can be an important asset at a business meeting.

LEO(July 23-Aug. 22): The outlook for a new business venture suddenly brightens. Your muse or partner tells you something that gives you fresh hope for the future. Romance soars to new heights. Speak from the heart.

VIRGO(Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Contact someone who is far away. Patience is the key to winning a job competition. There is no way to rush things. Invest your money wisely. Get-rich-quick schemes will surely fail.

LIBRA(Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Those in fashion or sales should have a particularly good day. Be realistic. If you take advantage of someone's ignorance, you will pay for it later on. Protect your reputation for honesty.

SCORPIO(Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Try to be more decisive. Take the initiative in career and financial matters instead of simply waiting for things to happen. Do not mistake an infatuation for the real thing. Search your heart.

SAGITTARIUS(Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Do not neglect important personal relationships while pursuing your professional goals. Consult experts before making any new financial investments.

CAPRICORN(Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Travel and research are in the spotlight. Go after the big money! Conferences and interviews enjoy highly favorable influences. A last-minute change of plans will work out.

AQUARIUS(Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Seek strong support for your business and financial plans. Others will back your ideas. Do not jump to conclusions about an interest a loved one shows. Evening is the ideal time for entertaining.

PISCES(Feb. 19-March 20): Work may not go according to plan. A request for a bank loan will probably be approved. Figure out a better way to make presentations. Romance will be very much on your mind tonight.

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Marc Elliot
Copy Editor.....David Massey
PhotoTechnician.....Jeff Egan
Production Supervisor(s).....Terry Starmer
Production.....Lisa Jezowski, Kim Frisino

■ pool

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 12

likes of a Big Lou or a Sheldon, but Pretty Sue was surely intriguing.

So now I'm in Big Lou's stable and it's amazing to hear some of the names who have been and still are under his guidance.

Bill Buckner's infamous ground ball through his legs? Big Lou was seen having dinner with Billy Buck just before that fateful game in the 1986 World Series.

Mike Tyson losing to Buster Douglas? Big Lou and Don King share the same accountant, barber (Lou's hair is less dramatic) and personal trainer.

I approached Sheldon one night after having banked the eightball cross-side and deftly allowing the cue ball to follow it in the pocket, and asked if all the Big Lou rumors were true.

"What's it to you punk? You writing a book or something?" Sheldon asked.

"No, actually a column, but I'm just curious as to how corrupt sports actually are," it was clear that Sheldon and I were forging an everlasting friendship.

"Put it this way Scoop — two professional teams don't go from last place to the World Series in the same year unless a guy like Big Lou is involved," Sheldon was nothing if not logical.

A running back as talented as the Miami Dolphin's Sammie Smith doesn't fumble on the goal-line two weeks in a row unless someone is greasing his palm.

Finally, I got up enough courage to get the definitive answer straight from the horse's mouth. Of course when I approached Big Lou, his mouth was full of pasta fazool.

"Big Lou, — I've gotta know is the corruption in sports as widespread as I think?"

"Kid," Big Lou said, cheeks full of pasta, lips covered with sauce. "It's even worse than you think."

With that Big Lou handed me another business card and told me to go and "lose one for the Gipper."

David Scott is a Collegian Staff member

■ field hockey

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 12

penalty corners. The team passes the ball in from the end line to a player who traps the ball so that a teammate can step up and shoot it. Old Dominion is almost unbeatable with this penalty corner, as their slapshots rival those of some National Hockey Leaguers.

This type of penalty corner is more suited for artificial surfaces because the ball isn't prone to take a bad hop over the trappers stick. On UMass' Totman Field, the grass surface allows for bad bounces.

The team is very sucessful in their offense at even strength, which is another reason that they don't always need a penalty corner. Jenn Salisbury is having a great year, surpassing most people's expectations with her 13 goals and four assists from the forward spot. Tara Jelley has seven goals and Dawn Trumbauer has amassed six.

THE FIVE COLLEGE PROGRAM
IN PEACE & WORLD SECURITY STUDIES
presents:

"PROSPECTS FOR PEACE AND DEMOCRACY IN SOUTH AFRICA"

PAWSS

A lecture by:
PAULINE BAKER
Carnegie Endowment for International Peace
Thursday, October 24th
4:00 PM, The New York Room, Mt. Holyoke College
8:00 PM, The Main Lecture Hall
Franklin Patterson Building, Hampshire College

This event is free, open to the public, and wheelchair accessible.
For more information call PAWSS at 549-4600, ext. 519.

Some of our CLOTHING
is almost 8 weeks old,
and we have to make room for new merchandise.
Make it yours.
30% to 50% off
Fall's finest natural fiber fashions.
Faces
northampton
main st. • 7 days

THREE DAYS ONLY!

Owning your own high-performance computer has never been this easy and affordable! For Parents' Weekend, ACI is announcing the new 25 MHz 386SX system. Imagine: 25 MHz SX power at a 286 price! And for three days, receive a free Math Co-Processor or 24-pin letter-quality printer with the purchase of a 25 MHz SX system!

25 MHz Power, 286 Price!

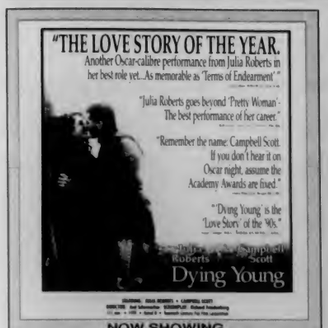
25 MHz 80386SX Processor, up to 50% faster than 16 MHz SX's
2 Megabytes of RAM, Expandable to 16 Mb
40 Megabyte 28-millisecond IDE Hard Drive
512K Super-VGA Graphics Adaptor
14" Paper-White monochrome VGA monitor
TEAC 3.5" High-Density Floppy Drive (add a 5.25" drive for only $65)
Microsoft DOS 5.0
FREE Star NX-2410 24-pin printer or Cyrix FasMath Coprocessor
Fully upgradeable design

(Students & Faculty only, please.)

FREE Math Coprocessor or 24-pin Printer!

WHERE AND WHEN:
Thursday through Saturday, October 24th-26th, 9:00am-4:00pm
on the Umass Campus Center Concourse UNIVERSITY STORE

(C)1991 American Computer Innovators, Inc. All names are trademarks of their respective owners. HOURS: M-F 9-5 • Sat. 11-3 • 545-2619



"THE LOVE STORY OF THE YEAR.
Another Oscar-calibre performance from Julia Roberts in her best role yet...As memorable as "Terms of Endearment"
"Julia Roberts goes beyond 'Pretty Woman' - The best performance of her career."
"Remember the name: Campbell Scott. If you don't hear it on Oscar night, assume the Academy Awards are fixed."
"'Dying Young' is the 'Love Story' of the '90s."
Julia Roberts Campbell Scott
Dying Young

NOW SHOWING
TONIGHT • Oct 24 • 5, 7, 9, 11pm • Campus Center Auditorium
Sponsored by: LCA • $2.00 - 5:00pm showing • $3.00 - all others
DISTRIBUTED BY FILMS INCORPORATED © 1991 Films Incorporated All rights reserved

DOMINO'S PIZZA
U-MASS
256-8911
Mt. Holyoke
535-1111
We Accept
Competetors
Coupons
30¢ PIZZA
ORDER ANY TWO TOPPING LARGE PIZZA GET MEDIUM 1 TOPPING PIZZA FOR 30¢
1.99 PIZZA
BUY ANY LARGE PIZZA GET 2ND ONE FOR $1.99
BUY ANY LARGE PIZZA
for the price of a small Pizza

SOMETHING IS ALWAYS HAPPENING AT THE HADLEY PUB
EVERY TUESDAY
STARTING AT 7:30 - All You Can Eat Pasta $1.00
8:30 - Karaoke
Weekly Drink Specials Starting 10/21
$3.00Miller Genuine Draft Pitchers
Live Bands Every Thursday, Friday, and Saturday
COME WATCH
Thursday Oct. 24 Free Press
Friday Oct. 25 Thick and Thin
Monday Night Football on the Big Screen
with a Free Pizza Buffet at Halftime
2 Pool Tables
Rt. 9 Hadley next to CAMPUS PIZZA • 586-4444

INTERNATIONAL STUDENTS ASSOCIATION
MULTICULTURAL NIGHT
oct. 25 cca 6.30 - 11 pm
PERFORMANCES . ENTERTAINMENT . FOOD FROM ALL OVER THE WORLD !! food $5
General adm. FREE

Classifieds

COME TO THE COLLEGIAN OFFICE 113 CAMPUS CENTER • THURSDAY 8:30-3:30 FRIDAY 8:30-2:30 • DEADLINE IS TWO DAYS PRIOR TO PUBLICATION • 20¢/WORD/DAY FOR STUDENTS • CASH IN ADVANCE

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Congratulations to APO's
Pledge class officers
Jana Sorge
Rick Silva
Kara Martinsons
Mike Stella
Matt Jordan
Shannon Landis
Jean Mui

GENERAL ELECTRIC PRESENTATION
Plenty of refreshments
Campus Center 1101 at 7:30 tonight
Recommended for Accounting Association Members
All majors welcome

HAPPY FOUNDER'S DAY
Alpha Epsilon Phi sisters & pledges!!
We've come a long way,
so let's celebrate...LML

HOT...SPICY... MOUTHWATERING...
BUFFALO WINGS!!
Finally, what you've been waiting for...
Fast, free, healthy delivery!
Introducing Mama Mapes Wings -N- Things opening Thursday Oct 31st
Don't miss out!

Is there a silent killer in your house
Radon kills 20000 people e year
MassPIRG Forum Thurs Oct. 24 6pm CC 169

UECHI-RYU KARATE Classical Okinawan Karate. Wen. and Fri. 6:00pm Amherst Community Arts Center. Call 665-4501

Wanna play LIVE on WMUA?
We're looking for bands
to play for the
Live Music Project.
Call 545-2892
Ask for Dave Demerjian or Ami Bennit.

WORKING
Oct 29, 30, and 31 8:00 PM
Student Union Ballroom
UMTG 545-0415 Go see it!

AUTO FOR SALE

Seized car, trucks, boats, 4wheelers, motorhomes, by FBI, IRS, DEA. Available your area now. Call (805) 682-7555 Ext. C-1675.

COLLEGE PIZZA

COLLEGE PIZZA
Fall Special
Small cheese $3.50
Large cheese $6.00
Free soda with purchase of a large sub, salad, or spaghetti
549-8098 549-8073
Must mention this ad

ENTERTAINMENT

HAVING A PARTY? Forget the stereo, hire a band! Call Brendan at 586-2533

RACK-A-DISC! $175.00 DJs, VJs, Karaoke for house/ Formal parties, Call 586-9900

FOR RENT

FRIDGE RENTALS 253-9742 Free Delivery

LARGE BEDROOM IN 4bdrm house 2full bath Hardwood floors 6 min from campus oil 170 month Call Jeff 548-9781

Puffton Village one bedroom apt. available any time before Dec. 1. Call 549-0068

TOWNHOUSE 2 BEDROOM 1 1/2 bath Bus route N Amherst 1-567-1352

FOR SALE

BROTHER AX22 TYPEWRITER
Mint Condition
Must sell
Best offer
Call 546-2585

FOR SALE
Electric guitar and amp
Good beginner's set
Loud and fun
$280 Call 586-7353

Four George Michael Tickets
Will sell together or in pairs
$30 each or B.O.
Mon Oct. 28th show
Call 549-5340 after 4

FUJI... $100
12 speed racing bike in good shape!
Call 546-7347

IBM PC/XT Computer System with amber monitor, 5 1/4 drive & some software. $165/ BO. 665-2215 Cris

VAN HALEN Tickets for sale!
Centrum Oct. 30
Call 6-1794

Yamaha Guitar $175
Call 546-5561

FOUND

FOUND: Set of keys at Unique Auto Sales Call Brenda at 253-4282

HELP WANTED

Earn $2500 & Free trips selling spring break packages to Bahamas, Mexico, Jamaica, Florida! Best trips & prices!

EXTERIOR PAINTERS
Experienced student painters needed to paint Amherst area homes. Full or part time America's College Painters (800) 526-5267 "Painting America's homes coast to coast"

FREE SCHOLARSHIP INFORMATION for students. Please call for free brochure. Results guaranteed. 1-800-937-1797 Ext. 15

"Know before you go," Where to work, live and ski free in Colorado's resorts. Current guide to Aspen, Vail, Breckenridge and more! $16.95 Call 1-800-788-6174

POSTAL JOBS AVAILABLE! Many positions Call (805) 682-7555 Ext P-3306

TUTOR NEEDED FOR ME210. Call ASAP 546-6404 will pay cash

INTERNSHIPS

ON/CAMPUS INTERNSHIPS/SPRING 1992
Earn credit with the Residential Recycling Program. Gain valuable experience by promoting recycling on campus. We encourage all majors to join us! Introduce new ideas to the program. Contact the Residential Recycling Program/545-1153/Berkshire House.

LOST

Lost a gold colored anchor 10-21 in Campus Center. Please call Juan at 6-2719. Great sentimental value.

Reward for the return of 60 CD's stolen from Main St. Fri. night
Call Mike 253-0666

MOTORCYCLES

Suzuki 450 1980 Runs well
$200 Call 256-3466 Ask for Bryant

MUSICIANS

EXPERIENCED GUITAR PLAYER looking to join or start a serious club/party band. Must be hard working and willing to have a good time! I have equipment and transportation! Please Call Adam at 546-4270

SAMANTHA EUSTACE

HELP! Our R.A. is in bed and she can't get up! Sam this one is for you-best wishes for a speedy recovery from your floor.

PERSONALS

Who is that SEXY man working in the Alumni Office?
You look great Matt! We noticed.
Debbie and Suzanne

X-COUNTRY WOMEN
Get psyched!
We want new watches!
Love "Depend"

JELLO TWISTER
VARSITY WOMEN'S CREW
Let's show Phili what two strong boats look like. Row our last head race with pride. No regrets!!

ST. JUDE Thank you very much MCL

KELLY GRIM
Bon Anniversaire
Tu me manques
Marianne

TO SENIOR AIRMAN PETERSON
Yeah you're almost ok too
Great job with the folks
Happy birthday and
Happy case briefs
Love your fireman

KRISTAWOMAN!
Good luck tonight!
You are great!
Love, Deborah

To my Little Sis Allison,
Sorry, late again!
Get ready for a great sememster.
Phi love, ?

TO MY FRIENDS,
You dear lovely and evil creatures in Mackimmie. One of these days I will get my revenge for what you did to me. You evil, you evil, you evil, you evil and silly inhabitants. Yes you 332&335 Just remember, I will get you when you are- least expected. You evil-meisters.
Love, The Other Evil-meister

HAPPY 21ST B-DAY VICKERY!!
We love you!
Sarah, Sabby, Jessica

LORI
Let's get wasted!
Love,
Grandma

KRISTA SIMM
Best of luck at your recital
with Scott!
Big Fans, Mika & Lisa

CAROLINE
Happy 18th Birthday!
You're the cutest little stinker I know!!
Love, Rudolph
P.S. Rudolph is beautiful

SAVE SQUIGGY
He is a great guy who made one huge, huge, huge mistake!
The Eta Pledges are behind you
Good Luck!

SUZANNE
Thank God for the size of your feet.
Happy birthday Roomie!
Love, Michele

Amy,
Better late than never
Get ready to be spoiled rotten
Phi love
Your Big Sister

AT MIDNIGHT TONIGHT Magic Mushroom becomes an adult not! Happy B-day. Watch our for that hungry bar scene.

RIDE WANTED

NORTHAMPTON TO AMHERST weeknights 1:30AM-? 253-2329

RIDE WANTED
To VanHalen / Worcester, 10/30. Pay gas. Chris 546-1712

SERVICES

BICYCLE BROKEN?
Call Pat
546-0119

Have you been ripped-off by a retailer? Contact the Legal Services Center regarding your rights as a consumer. 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

ORDER AVON!
546-1999
Call for brochure.

PREGNANT?
Need a pregnancy test, information or support? Call for free and confidential services. ALTERNATIVES 245 Main Street, Northampton 586-3000 or Greenfield 774-6019

SENIORS AND JUNIORS
Time to think about resumes.
Let me help you design your resume.
I offer professional results at college prices
Call Andy at 549-4002

STOP SMOKING WITH the help of powerful hypnotherapist from T.I.W. Special discounts for students. Call 586-7372.

FREE pregnancy testing; confidential and caring support. BIRTHRIGHT 233 No. Pleasant Street Amherst 549-1906

TRAVEL

BAHAMA CRUISE $99 Pe person
5 day / 4 night hotel. Plan now for your break. Very limited offer. Call now 1-800-821-0572

Earn FABULOUS FREE Spring break vacation while meeting new people and earning cash. Work at your own pace. Energetic, highly motivated, outgoing individuals needed. Call Campus Holidays at 800-627-4791

FREE TRAVEL- Aircouriers and cruiseships. Students also needed Christmas, spring, and summer for amusement park employment. Call (805) 682-7555 Ext F-1428

Killington Collegiate Ski Fest Jan 12-17 condo, hottubs, skiing, and more. Also spring break, Cancun, Jamaica and more. Call John & John 549-8101

TYPING

PAPERS TYPED: $1.50/typed page Quick, Accurate Service. Call Brian 546-3563

WORD PROCESSING, laser printing, papers, resumes, theses. Rosemary 259-1786

WANTED

BIKE FRAME
Steel Road Frame-Fork 58CM
Pete 253-3886

To recycle: Prescription medication bottles/containers (Nonrenewable RX only) Please call 585-8709

WANTED TO RENT

We need to take over your house for next semester! If interested please call Marc 549-7547

Sports

Women's soccer dominates URI, 3-0

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

Yesterday, the University of Massachusetts women's soccer team started its stretch run on a positive note by defeating the University of Rhode Island, 3-0.

The Minutewomen (10-4) couldn't have dominated a game more thoroughly than yesterdays match-up. The score could have just as easily been 10-0. Rhode Island did little at either end of the field and basically were outclassed from the opening introductions until they got on their bus to go home.

Let the statistics speak for themselves. Massachusetts outshot the Rams 15-1 and outcornered them 7-1. UMass goal keeper Briana Scurry needed to make only one save in registering her ninth shut out of the season. For stretches of the second half she could have taken a nap for lack of anything better to do.

"It was nice to win," UMass coach Jim Rudy said. "URI was missing a few players and just didn't have it today, but give them credit, they kept battling."

The outcome of the match was no longer in doubt after two minutes of play as Polly Hackathorn collected a Michele Woodside pass in the penalty area. She carried the ball a few yards before crossing it to Colleen Milliken, who drove the ball into the net.

"It was good to see Colleen get one," Rudy said. "She worked hard from start to finish and she was rewarded for it. I don't care if she scores again this season as long as she works that hard. If she, or any other player, plays that hard they will be on the field. All I'm looking for is effort."

The Minutewomen were somehow kept off the score board for the rest of the half although they had numerous opportunities to blow the game wide open.

"We just weren't focused at finishing today," Rudy said. "We had the opportunity to score 15 goals but we didn't do it, it's been a problem all season. I think after two grueling games it's tough to get the kids up for this one. We were pushing too hard instead of being patient."

In the second half UMass did manage to get two more goals. In the 52nd minute UMass scored on a corner kick, something they did regularly earlier in the season. Lisa Mickelson served up the corner and Holly Hellmuth headed in her eighth goal of the season.

In the 86th minute there was a loose ball about 30 yards in front of the URI net. Leah Stack collected it as she tapped the ball over to Woodside, who boomed it into the right top corner with a fine shot.

"Woodside getting one was nice," Rudy said. "She played a marvelous game today. We rested Paula Wilkins and Michele played Wilkins' position and did a fantastic job."

The defense was able to stuff any URI attacks throughout the game. Carrie Koeper, Hellmuth and Mickelson all played particularly strong games.

"The defense did a nice job making sure nothing could have happened," Rudy said.

Collegian photo by Josh Reynolds

The University of Massachusetts women's soccer team improved its record to 10-4 as it defeated the University of Rhode Island yesterday by a score of 3-0.

Pool hustlers, Big Lou and sports corruption

I've finally joined the ranks of such pool legends as Willie Mosconi, Minnesota Fats and Steve Mizerak, sort of.

I was in the right place at the right time, losing a game of pool in my traditional fashion - scratching on the eight ball, when my professional career began. My opponents may think I'm a terrible pool player, but Big Lou knows better.

I work for Big Lou, as do various other sports figures, and now I'm throwing the games that I lose. Big Lou employs all types of sports competitors, individuals and teams alike, if there's money to be made you can bet Big Lou has his fingers in the pie.

Big Lou approached me in one of the local bars at the beginning of the semester, he said he needed a player, someone who could sink a few balls but throw the match when it counted.

David Scott

"Do you have a business card?" I asked, knowing that all legitimate business men carried a card.

Big Lou slipped me a thin piece of green paper with Ben Franklin's face on it.

"Nice card, who designed it?" I placed the "card" in my wallet and sat down with Big Lou and his friend, Pretty Sue.

"Kid, you're my man," Big Lou began, taking a toke from his baseball bat-size cigar. "You go to the bars I tell you, on the nights I tell you and look for this guy."

Big Lou called over a short, stubby guy who closely resembled Danny Devito except for his abundance of thick, curly black hair. This guy was straight out of a Three Stooges flick.

"I'd like you to meet Sheldon," Big Lou said as I reached to shake Sheldon's hand. "He doesn't shake hands."

Big Lou explained that Sheldon would be making bets against me and every time I came through with a loss, Sheldon would come through with another business card.

"That's totally immoral and unethical," I said, knowing my mother would have been proud.

"So what?" Big Lou asked as Sheldon cracked his knuckles.

"Good point," I answered apologizing silently to my mother.

I wasn't too sure if I wanted to get involved with the

CONTINUED ON PAGE 10

Field hockey travels to face BU

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

Bright lights, big city.

The country folk of western Massachusetts, a.k.a. the University of Massachusetts field hockey team, travels to big, bad, Boston tonight at 7 p.m. to take on Boston University. It could almost be a plot to a bad movie.

The Minutewomen (11-3) are starting to gel right before the end of the season. They moved up to fourth in the country in the recent NCAA field hockey poll, and their one glaring weakness, a strong penalty corner, is improving.

The Boston University team will provide a tough challenge, though. While hovering near the .500 mark all year, the Lady Terriers are turning it up a notch, going undefeated in their last four games. Their most impressive victory of that stretch was the 3-0 triumph over No. 19 ranked Providence.

Lisa Barone and Leslie Ambinder have provided offense for BU, as they share the team lead with five goals each. Chris LaPointe leads the team with 10 points on 3 goals and 7 assists.

Lori Haywood has been the Terriers starting goaltender this year, averaging 1.31 goals against her per game. Her backup, Kerri Wingardner, has seen scant action this year.

The NCAA poll came out Tuesday, and the top three teams held their previous positions in the rankings. Old Dominion (16-0), Penn State (13-1-1), and Maryland (11-3-1), are ahead of the Minutewomen.

Iowa (11-1-1) had a rough week, as they lost and tied for the first time all year. Their drop in the poll to No. 5 helped out the Minutewomen, who moved up.

The improvement in UMass' penalty corners recently gives the team a potent weapon going into the postseason. The team has changed their strategy on the penalty corner to better suit the artificial turf that they will play on tonight and through most of the postseason.

UMass has gone to a trap-shoot mode of attack on the

CONTINUED ON PAGE 10

LATE SCORE

MEN'S SOCCER: UMass 1, UConn 1 (2 OT)

UMass' Brett Anthony netted a goal, assisted by Dan Lawrence, with 36 seconds remaining in regulation to tie UConn 1-1 yesterday in Storrs, CT. Minuteman goalkeeper Jonathan Gruber saved a penalty shot in the first overtime to preserve the tie.

Ex-water polo star now coach

By KEVIN HERLIHY
Collegian Staff

Jon Miller paces up and down the Boyden Pool deck, blowing a whistle and waving a referee's flag. His voice echoes through the pool as he yells at the 13th-ranked University of Massachusets water polo team players, not-so-gently correcting their mistakes. As the assistant coach, he seems very much at home.

He should — he was the team's M.V.P for the previous three seasons.

A native of Stamford, Connecticut, Miller spent his freshman year at the Naval Academy, but no more. After a year off he took head coach Russ Yarworth's invitation to play at UMass.

In his three playing years, he racked some impressive statistics and honors including: 1988—second in scoring, leader in assists, points, and steals; 1989—leader in goals, assists, points, and steals, All-New England 1st Team; 1990-exact same as '89.

While Miller is a bit modest to assess his own capabilities as a player, Yarworth didn't hesitate. "He was our go-to guy," Yarworth said. "Jonny was the type of player who would never really give up. He would never ask to come out of a game. He could play both ends of the pool and he was smart. Maybe he was a bit too emotional at times but he usually chanelled that in the right direction. He really made the most of what he had for talent."

A player of average height with a stocky build, Miller wasn't recruited by Yarworth as a big scorer, but that is exactly what he became. Miller's strength enabled him to blossom into a aggressive, physical driver who was a smart and sneaky scorer.

During the 1990 season Miller knew that he would need another semester to finish his Forestry degree, but he never gave much thought to becoming an assistant coach. When the season, and his eligibility, ended, "it seemed like the natural thing to do," he said.

Yarworth had other ideas. "I was psyched when I found out Jon needed another semester to finish school," he said. "I knew he would be around to help out."

"I have him work with individual players or groups of players on one thing, while I'm working with another group on something else," Yarworth said.

Senior goalie Todd Larson agrees with that assesment. "Inside the pool, Jon is our coach," he said. "We listen to him and respect him as much as we do Russ. He gives us that added dimension that we didn't have last year. We have that other set of eyes in the pool with great water polo experience and knowlege."

While he is only one season out of his playing days Miller has no problems accepting his new role. "The players are the ones in the water working hard, not me. They shouldn't think about last year [6th in East] because it was too disappointing. They can go a lot further this year. It just depends on how bad they want it."

Miller has a firery disposition that he wasted no time in displaying. Larson tells it laughingly; "His first game, at Villanova, first quarter, he got kicked off the deck. The first bad call of his coaching career. It was a spring game that didn't mean a thing."

Successful and excitable. Like player, like coach.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THE LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND

VOLUME CI ISSUE 31 FRIDAY, OCTOBER 26, 1991

Bush assails Congress

Calls for special counsel in wake of Thomas hearings

By RITA BEAMISH
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush yesterday portrayed Congress as a "privileged class of rulers" and called on lawmakers to revoke their special exemptions to laws they write for everyone else.

Bush, in a broad speech attacking the practices of the Congress, also called for appointment of a special counsel to find out who leaked information on sexual harrassment accusations against his Supreme Court nominee, Clarence Thomas.

Even as Bush spoke, members on Capitol Hill were preparing for an afternoon vote on appointment of such a special counsel.

Bush vented the pique he displayed sporadically throughout the Senate confirmation hearings on Thomas. He said the televised hearings on sexual harrassment, with their "X-rated statements" had made the Senate "more like a burlesque show than a civics class."

Shortly after Bush spoke, Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., a member of the Judiciary Committee, said "the only thing that really needs reforming is the administration's cynical approach to the Supreme Court."

In the wake of the Thomas controversy, Bush said he will restrict future congressional access to FBI reports on nominees.

He said that such reports — which in the Thomas case contained the allegations by Thomas' former aide Anita Hill — will be carried directly to the committee chairmen only, will be available to other members at the chairman's discretion and will not be available to congressional staff members.

The special counsel in the Thomas case should get "unfettered access to all witnesses," along with subpoena power to finish the probe by Jan. 3, he said.

"Frankly, the American people will just not understand it if the Senate fails to bring the leaker or leakers to justice," Bush said in a speech at the Smithsonian Museum of American History.

"The Senate must determine who leaked the information and turned what should have been a confidential investigation . . . into a circus and a travesty," he added.

The Senate moved toward passage yesterday of a Democratic resolution that would trigger the hiring of a special counsel to look into the Thomas leak and unauthorized disclosure of material from the Ethics Committee investigation of five senators implicated in the Savings and Loan scandal.

The resolution sponsored by Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, would make the counsel accountable to him and Republican Leader Bob Dole of Kansas, with 120 days to conduct the probe.

A separate proposal by sen. John Seymour, R-Calif., would authorize a 30-day FBI investigation of the Thomas leak only.

Bush played off the anti-Congress sentiment that followed the Thomas hearings to call on Congress to "submit to the laws it imposes on others," instead of exempting itself as it does in many cases.

The laws from which Congress is exempt range from worker wage and safety standards to discrimination statutes and Privacy Act requirements.

Collegian photo by Josh Reynolds

RIDERS ON THE STORM -- Rob Marriott, junior civil engineering major, peers out from under his helmet near Cashin House.

Students say racism lingers on after 1986 riot

Collegian photo by Matt Kahn

Grant Ingle

By GREG SUKIENNIK
Collegian Staff

Last in a series on the aftermath of the October 1986 Southwest Riot.

"Future incidents of racial intolerance and the potentially deadly violence that attach to them are inevitable unless the problems revealed by my investigation are solved.

"Toward that end I make the following recommendations."

—Conclusion, Report of Frederick A. Hurst, Feb. 5, 1987

Frederick A. Hurst made 15 multi-part recommendations to the University of Massachusetts in the conclusion to his report on the Oct. 27, 1986 Southwest race riot.

Five years later, while many of Hurst's directives have been put into practice, some have been left aside while others were never implemented, for reasons ranging from shrinking budgets to impracticality.

"My recommendations were not supposed to be taken as gospel," Hurst said recently when asked about his reaction to the fact suggestions he made have not been followed. "I made recommendations in good faith."

Hurst added that it was not his responsibility to follow up on the points he suggested or to continue analyzing the problems.

As a result, while some of the conditions which led to what many consider to be the ugliest moment in the University's history have been alleviated or lessened, others persist.

Hurst called for the University to appoint someone to a position of authority to work at solving the problems which caused the riot. This was never done. Although former chancellor Randolph W. Bromery was appointed as a special counsel, it was not the position Hurst requested.

Hurst suggested a mandatory racial awareness class, as well as social and cultural diversity classes to be written into the General Education requirements.

Although the writing program currently stresses issues of race and culture, there is no set "Civility 101" for new students.

The University did, for three years, hold a "Civility Week" and a "Civility Day" to bring racial issues to the student consciousness. When the state budget crisis

CONTINUED ON PAGE 4

Rumors worry James residents

Astrologer prophesied murders 400 years ago

By MICHAEL LEVY
Collegian Staff

Rumors concerning a prediction from the French astrologer Nostradamus centering around the possibility of the murder of students of James Residence Hall caused a meeting between residents and the residence hall director last night.

Residence Director Theresa Frecker asked the 70 people in attendance about the rumors they had heard.

The people there, mostly residents of the all-women's dorm, pieced together the different stories they've heard in the past few days.

Concerning the reported prediction, people at different times heard the murders were to happen in New England, in an L-shaped building, near a construction sight, on a hill, near a building named Kennedy, by a pond, facing a graveyard sometime between October 26 and November 3 of a year which has the same first and last digit and the same second and third digit, such as 2002 or 1991.

"My biggest fear is that everyone knows this everywhere and it is Halloween," said one James resident.

The rumor description has been scrutinized by students at colleges throughout New England. Students at the James meeting heard it was to happen at Boston College, Holy Cross or a variety of other colleges.

One student claimed Holy Cross was to be closed during the coming week.

UMass Police LT. John Luippold, who attended the meeting, said police officials called the Oprah Winfrey headquarters in Chicago to check on the rumors, which were thought to have stemmed from a show she aired about two months ago.

Luippold said many other New England colleges had placed calls to Chicago in search of the same information.

The television show did not air a program closely related with these rumors, he added.

James residents were fearful of the upcoming week which includes Halloween, when pranks and drunkenness are the norm.

After reviewing the rumors the group went on to discuss possible safety precautions.

Students had the opportunity to explain to their residence director and Southwest-North area coordinator various conditions which bothered them.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 6

Inside:

Page 3:
The Board of Governors allocates table space on the Campus Center concourse to the Cannibis Reform Coalition.

Page 5:
Michael Morrissey claims the keg law is a clear example of age discrimination.

Page 12:
Both the men's and women's soccer teams are in for a busy weekend.

Weather
You will have a sunshiny day today and tomorrow morning's grey skies are gonna clear up.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THE LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is a Registered Student Organization of the University of Massachusetts, published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000.

113 CAMPUS CENTER AMHERST, MA 01003
Phone (413) 545-3500 FAX (413) 545-1592

STAFF

Editor in Chief ..... Gayle Long
Managing Editor ..... Marc Elliott
Editorial Editor ..... Greg Sukiennik
News Editor ..... Preston P. Forman
Sports Editor ..... Tamir Lipton
Arts Editor ..... Paul DeGeorges
Photography Editor (interim) ..... Josh Reynolds
Black Affairs Editor ..... Sondra Sutton
Women's Issues Editor ..... Jessame Hannus
Jewish Affairs ..... Felice Cohen, Debra Kriegsman
Multicultural Affairs Editor .....
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Madanmohan Rao
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Trystan Skeigh
Business Manager ..... Randee Pastel
Advertising Manager ..... Dena Haselkorn
Finance Manager ..... Jeff Weiner
Circulation Manager ..... Jim Winterbottom
Subscriptions Manager ..... Stacy Rogers
Promotions Manager ..... Scott Macey
Production Manager ..... Terry Starmer
Day Graphics Manager ..... Jenn Burns

PROFESSIONAL STAFF

Business ..... Brian Harrington, Lori Black, Maureen Majerowski
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

For Your Information

Friday, October 25

Volunteers Needed — The Physical Plant is supplying the materials to clean up the campus pond, and volunteers are needed this afternoon and tomorrow afternoon to help with the clean-up. Please contact David at 546-6960.

Announcement — The Fall 1991 Examination Schedule will be available to off-campus students in the Registrar's Office (213 Whitmore) and will be delivered to all residence halls today.

Workshops — Personal Computing Support Services (PCSS) is offering a series of workshops and seminars to faculty, staff and students during the Fall semester. There is a registration fee of $10. To register, call 545-9730 or stop by PCSS in 203 Goodell.

Speaker — David Crosby, pastor of First Baptist Church, will be speaking at the InterVarsity Christian Fellowship large group meeting at 7:30 p.m. in Campus Center room 811.

Bible Study — There will be a Bible study at 7:00 p.m. in 307 MacNamara, sponsored by InterVarsity Christian Fellowship.

Special Event — The International Students Association (ISA) will be hosting a Multicultural Night in the Campus Center Auditorium from 6:30 p.m. to 11:00 p.m. Admission is free but the cost of food will be $5.00.

Saturday, October 26

Symposium — "Southeast Asian People and the Aftermath: Cambodia, the Missing Link" with Boreth Sun and others TBA. The event will be held at 1:00 p.m. in the Augusta Savage Gallery of the New Africa House.

Display — The AIDS Memorial Quilt will be on display at the Springfield Technical Community College at Scibelli Hall on One Armory St. in Springfield, Mass. The quilt will be on display both tomorrow and Sunday.

Sunday, October 27

Announcement — Daylight Savings Time Ends!!!

Symposium — "Southeast Asian People and the Aftermath: Southeast Asian Resettlement in the United States" panel with Boreth Sun, Alexander Nguyen and others TBA will be held at 12:30 p.m. in the Augusta Savage Gallery at the New Africa House.

Meeting — There will be a P.O.W.E.R. meeting at 7:30 p.m. in 306 Student Union.

家酒園南湖
HUNAN GARDEN
BEST CHINESE BUFFET
MANDARIN/ SZECHUAN CUISINE
5 PM - 9 PM SAT - THURS
11:30 AM - 3 PM SUNDAY
BUFFET BRUNCH
ALL-YOU-CAN-EAT
$5.99
10 BELCHERTOWN ROAD ◆ RT. 9 AMHERST
256-0251 ◆ 256-0252
WE DELIVER IN AMHERST
5 PM - 9:30 PM EVERYDAY
MINIMUM $15 PLUS $2 DELIVERY CHARGE
WE ACCEPT MASTERCARD

AMHERST CINEMA
Now Playing
PARIS IS BURNING
Showtimes:
Fri. - Sun.
7:30pm & 9pm
Mon-Thurs.
One show at 7:30pm
Adults $4.00
Student w/valid I.D. $3.00

HOME STYLE LAUNDRY
Squire Village Shopping Center
Amherst Rd. (Rte. 9), Sunderland (Next to 7-11)
665-2641
14th Anniversary Celebration
(October 14 through 31, 1991)
❖ Top Loaders ($1.00) ..... 75¢
❖ Double Loaders ($1.50) $1.00
❖ Triple Loaders ($2.00) $1.50
❖ Drawing 100 FREE WASHES
(No purchase necessary to win)
ONE FREE WASH
Home Style Laundry
Rt. 116, Sunderland
(Top Loader)
with one paid wash

LONDON
ROUND TRIP FROM $350
From NEW YORK
round trips starting at
LONDON $350
LENINGRAD $610
CARACAS $410
GUTEMALA C. $390
BANGKOK $939
LOS ANGELES-
AUCKLAND $699
Taxes & surcharges not included.
Fares subject to change.
Council Travel
79 So. Pleasant Street,
Amherst, MA 01002
(413)256-1261

BP
PRESENTS
THE GOLDEN NOZZLE
Haunted Car Wash!
Oct. 25 to Oct. 31, Starting at 5PM Each Day
1315 Boston Road, Springfield
Route 9 at the Amherst/Hadley Line
WIN Unlimited Free Car Washes For A Year! A Golden Nozzle GOLD CARD will be given away at each location! Pick up your entry form at any Golden Nozzle Car Wash.
FREE Haunted Car Wash! Tuesday Only, October 29, with a BP fill-up at the Boston Rd. and Route 9 BP's, any grade (8 gal. minimum).
The Collegiate Special!
$1.00 OFF!
Present this coupon at the Golden Nozzle on Route 9, Hadley for a $1.00 Discount on an Express Wash. Valid only Oct. 25 through Oct. 31, 1991 during Haunted Car Wash hours. Not valid with any other offers.
Golden Nozzle Car Wash
An F.L. Roberts Service

ZANNA
Women's Shoes, Clothing & Accessories
Zanna • 187 N. Pleasant Street • Amherst
Monday/Saturday 10-6 Sunday 12-5
413.253.2563

Local

Collegian photo by Josh Reynolds
NOW, THIS WON'T HURT A BIT -- Mark Muniz trims branches outside the Campus Center.

BOG allows Coalition

By KIM DIETEL
Collegian Staff

The Board of Governors overturned a recent decision denying in the Campus Center concourse to the Cannabis Reform Coalition in a 5-2 vote last night.

"We're trying to get rights, the same as any other RSO," said Kai Price, the president of the Cannabis Reform Coalition. "We hope to continue to be successful."

Earlier this week, the Cannabis Reform Coalition was denied access to a table on the Campus Center concourse, said Aaron Wilson, the vice-president of the group. They were referred to the Board of Governors by the administration.

Andy Wong, the Vending Coordinator, refused the request of the Cannabis Reform Coalition to set up a table in the concourse.

"I don't feel it appropriate for the Cannabis Reform Coalition to be on the concourse," Wong stated. "I do not believe the legalization of marijuana is conducive to the education institution which we serve."

The policy regulating vending and table space in the Campus Center states that the Center's purpose is one which "benefits the University community."

"This policy is used to deny groups that clearly do not benefit the educational institution," said Wong. "It is in my discretion to decide if their services will be a benefit to the community."

Ben Preston, vice chairperson of the Board of Governors, stated, "We need conclusive evidence to overturn Andy's decision. It is my personal opinion that this evidence exists."

Wilson said the Cannabis Reform Coalition, a new registered student organization this fall, aims to "mobilize students and educate them on the issue to promote political change. To make marijuana legal.

"We advocate the changing of laws, not the breaking of them," Wilson added.

Many individuals and groups came to the meeting to offer their suggestions on the issue of allowing the Cannabis Reform Coalition a table.

"It's a gray area when one is promoting an issue that is against federal law," stated Steve Herbert, a faculty member at UMass. "We must maintain a drug-free campus to gain access to federal money in grants."

Steve Levine, of the Massachusetts Civil Liberties Union, said the issue was one constitutional rights.

"This was presented to us as a freedom of speech issue," Levine stated. "It's a great deal of what we exist for."

The Board of Governors is responsible for allocating space and overseeing activities within the Campus Center and Student Union Building.

State vehicles collide

Compiled by DAVID MASSEY
Collegian Staff

A car driven by Scott Sherman of Sharon collided with the rear of a car driven by Doris Clemmons of Amherst on University Drive on Wednesday night. Clemmons complained of neck injuries and was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton by ambulance, police said.

Sherman was cited for failure to use care in stopping. The estimated value of damage is $2,000.

A state van backing into the loading area of Goodell Library struck another state vehicle in the front quarter panel Wednesday at about noon, police said. The estimated value of damage is $500.

LARCENY:

● A woman reported to the police on Wednesday evening that she fell asleep on a couch in the lower level of the Campus Center and awoke to find her purse stolen. The stolen item has an estimated value of $300.

VANDALISM:

● Three male subjects will be summoned to Court for allegedly tearing down a stop sign Thursday morning at the Fearing Street intersection.

Diplomat urges Germany to look toward Europe

By CLAUDIUS GEHR
Collegian Correspondent

A high German government official said last night that Germany should take up more responsibility in armed conflicts outside of Europe.

German General Consul Dr. Walter Gerhardt, speaking at lecture organized by the European Club, said that "the [German] constitution would permit the sending of German troops in peace-keeping and peace-making missions beyond NATO borders."

Gerhardt said that "Germany will not be a threat to a neighbor again," after giving up part of its sovereignty to the European Community and becoming an exporting nation, largely dependent on a friendly and stable political environment.

Gerhardt, who was appointed Consul of the Federal Republic of Germany for the New England States in Boston in 1989, said that both the integration of the five new federal states and the integration of the whole Federal Republic into the European Community has first priority on the German policy agenda.

"Our heart in Germany is in Western-Europe," Gerhardt said. "But we also consider to look to Central and Eastern Europe and give a helping hand to the countries there."

Collegian photo by Jeff Egan
General Consul Dr. Walter Gerhardt

Gerhardt added that "it is important not to drive them into a corner of isolation," so that they are not isolated like Germany was after the treaty of Versailles in the aftermath of World War I. This isolation led to the rise of fascism and Hitler's "Third Reich" and eventually World War II.

To underline the German efforts in creating a secure Europe Gerhardt said that "Germany is in the forefront of paying [aid to other countries]."

In 1990, "Germany paid about $33 billion to the Soviet Union," Foreign Officer Gerhardt said in what he "his short German commercial."

This is added to other figures such as the $11.6 billion Germany paid the allies for the war against Iraq or the tremendously high costs for the integration of the five new states that used to comprise East Germany.

With a forecasted 3.5 percent growth rate in Germany and an estimate of over 10 percent growth in the five new "Bundeslaender" in 1992, united Germany is still having rising unemployment and raised income and other taxes due to the "Wiedervereinigung" (reunification) that happened over one year ago.

We found out so many things afterwards," Gerhardt said, "the CIA didn't know it either."

UM student volunteers clean campus pond

By JENNIFER D. HAWKINS
Collegian Correspondent

Volunteers armed with rakes, shovels, and saws gathered on the campus Pond yesterday to clean up the area.

The project was initiated by a group of psychology students who were assigned to do a project that would help improve the community. They contacted physical plant and organized a crew that began weeding out and clearing most of the growth around the perimeter of the pond.

"We wanted to clean up UMass," said Heidi Halasz, a junior psychology major.

"The beauty of the pond is getting diminished by the plants that are overgrown," said Peter Wozniak, director of the Physical Plant. "Here's a great opportunity to beautify the Campus Pond with volunteer labor."

Although William Manning, a professor of plant pathology, has not seen the cleanup work, he questioned the prudence of clearing brush around the periphery.

"In theory, if it is not interfering with water quality, why remove it?" He added that those cleaning the pond have opted to give it a clean "tidy" look rather than sustain it as a "natural ecosystem."

"It's the campus showpiece," Manning said.

Besides filling in the crevices in the shore around the pond and reinforcing a wall that helps one of the trees to grow, Robert Daughdrill, Grounds Foreman, explained that the crew is also eliminating the "unwanted stuff" such as the Japanese Bamboo and wild roses, and preserving the "good material", such as the plants in which the ducks nest.

In this case, beauty seems to be in the eye of the beholder.

Faculty Senate remembers late professor David Booth

By AMY PRENDERGAST
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts political science Professor David Booth, who died last Sunday night, was remembered by his colleagues yesterday as the "heart, spirit and conscience" of the Faculty Senate.

Booth was an active member of the Faculty Senate for over 20 years, and served on several of their committees.

"There will be little this body does without the imprint of Booth's memory," said Ronald Story, UMass history professor and secretary of the senate.

Political science Professor Eric Einhorn said, "Professor Booth was a remarkable teacher and known for his energy, ideas and his love for the University."

In other Faculty Senate business, Chancellor Richard O'Brien told the Senate he received a letter on Monday from a group of Asian students concerning the United Asia Cultural Center, which the students claim to have shut down.

O'Brien said, "Many of their concerns are legitimate. I will be speaking with them personally about their concerns with the appointments of Asian faculty."

The Asian students feel the center is a product of "token funding." Along with the shutdown, they are demanding Asian and Asian-American studies be added to the curriculum, and an increase in recruitment of Asian faculty, professors and students.

Speaking as head of the task force to increase student enrollment, O'Brien said, "We will have to do a great deal just to maintain the present enrollment. The freshman enrollment has to start increasing."

Acting Provost Glen Gordon said, "After we convince the freshmen to come, we have to keep them here. It's a matter of retention. At the moment, there is an 18 percent drop-off rate."

■ racism

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

began in 1988, however, funds for both the Civility program and the "Civility 101" class, whose logistics were still being worked out, decreased dramatically.

Black students see some progress in the University's racial climate, although they still feel the threat of racism and violence persists.

"I don't think [the University is] committed," said Trina Willis, a sophomore marketing major of UMass' response to racial problems which led to riot.

"I think there is still [racial] tension on campus," she said. "There is some progress, but we need a lot more . . . it needs to improve."

Martin Jones is a freshman who works for Nummo News. He thinks that the University faced then, and faces now an impossible task in combating racism on campus, regardless of which of Hurst's proposals were followed.

"Nothing the University can do will prevent racism — it's going to come in," Jones says. "The courses are good, but the responsibility lies with the students. They're best equipped — they live it."

One recommendation made by Hurst was shot down when a 1987 district attorney's investigation cleared all but one football player of wrongdoing in the riot.

Hurst's report held the football team was largely responsible for the riot, and recommended sensitivity training for the team. Football coach Jim Reid sent an open letter to his team to the media including the Collegian in which he asked his players to "stop focusing on inaccuracies in the Hurst Report."

Reid said in the letter that it was incomprehensible that an entire team be held responsible for the alleged actions of three to five players.

While Reid is quick to point out that Hurst's diagnosis of the University's racial problem is valuable, he said the report was "without a doubt" unfair to his team.

Hurst's report held that a White football player had struck the first blow that evening. It was later found not to be the case by an investigation headed by then-assistant District Attorney William J. Larkin.

"The Hurst Report misidentified a key individual," Larkin recalls. "The investigation found [the individual] was not a football player."

According to Larkin, who now practices law in Northampton, an extensive 38-day investigation resulted in the prosecution of five people acting as individuals. One football player was among the five; however, he had come forward earlier and was not the instigator Hurst's report described.

"The team was not involved," Larkin said.

While the football team's involvement was questioned at the time of the investigation and was later cleared, there was no doubt that 1,200-3,000 students certainly were involved. No matter how it started, in the end the riot certainly was a racial affair, according to officials.

Black students are aware of the riot's racial implications, even though most current undergraduates weren't at UMass when it happened.

Jones was considering attending Massachusetts in 1986 when the riot story broke. The more he became familiar with UMass' racial problems, the less he wanted to come here.

"I received a letter with my admissions packet stating that 'We know we've had racial problems,'" Jones recalled. "When I saw that, I thought to myself 'I don't know if I want to go there.'"

Kenley Obas, a junior communications major and music director at the Black Mass Communications Project, said "[Other students] told you about the riot." He first heard of it his freshman year.

Willis' sister was a UMass student when the riot broke out. She recalls being told by her sister about the riot, as well as some words of advice.

"She said to be aware of racial problems," Willis said, "and never walk alone if you're a person of color."

"It's more a P.R. thing," Obas says of the University's response to the riot. "I don't see it as sincere." Both Willis and Obas suggested instead the University bring in a greater enrollment of Black students.

"Maybe [racism] wasn't how it started but it turned into that," Obas explained. "It could've happened anywhere, but it happened here."

MIKE'S WESTVIEW CAFE
FRIDAY NIGHT is
Ladies Night
At Mike's – Prizes include gift certificates to –
Zanna ◆ Fancy Fingers ◆ Mike's ◆ Hairworks Plus
1st 30 girls through the door receive a flower.
Drawings will begin at 9pm and only girls are eligible!
* Drink Special *
Malibu Wave
$1.50
Always something for everyone!
* Drink Special *
99¢ glass of Champagne

FREE MOVIE POSTER with all
COLLEGIAN
CLASSIFIEDS

Monday, October 28
Only at our table on the Campus Center Concourse!

Get Out Of Town. Fast!

Ask for U.S. Express at the ticket window!

Our U.S.EXPRESS Marshals want to run you out of town . . . and then bring you back!

Are you going to Boston pardner? Our coaches give you the fastest service between the Amherst/Northampton area and Boston.

Tickets are only $12 one-way. Get them at the UMASS campus center ticket window. Coaches depart UMASS at the Whitmore Horseshoe and arrive in Boston at Essex St. (across from South Station).

UMASS Friday & Sunday Schedule			Boston Friday & Sunday Schedule
Leaves UMASS	Leaves Northampton	Arrives Boston	Leaves Boston	Arrives Northampton	Arrives UMASS
1:30 p.m.	1:55 p.m.	3:45 p.m.	4:00 p.m.	6:00 p.m.	6:30 p.m.
2:30 p.m.	2:55 p.m.	4:45 p.m.	5:00 p.m.	7:00 p.m.	7:30 p.m.
3:30 p.m.	3:55 p.m.	5:45 p.m.	6:00 p.m.	8:00 p.m.	8:30 p.m.
4:30 p.m.	4:55 p.m.	6:45 p.m.	7:00 p.m.	9:00 p.m.	9:30 p.m.

For more info call 582-1313 Schedule valid through 12/31/91

U.S.EXPRESS

Winter Session 1992 Catalog Is Here!

So, what exactly is Winter Session?
- a unique "mini-semester," just three weeks long

Well, what's so unique about it?
- you can earn 3 academic credits in only 3 weeks
- over 100 credit courses, including gen. ed. designated classes

How can Winter Session help me?
You can:
- take a class you couldn't get before
- make up credits
- meet graduation requirements
- lighten your spring course load

Winter Session 1992 — January 2-23
Registration by mail only begins November 9. (Registrations must be postmarked no earlier than November 9.)
Catalogs available on campus or at the Division of Continuing Education 6th floor Goodell

Editorial/Opinion

The opinions on this page are those of the individual writer or cartoonist, and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian or the University unless otherwise noted.

Racial problems persist

Five years ago this Sunday, one of the ugliest events in University of Massachusetts history occurred in the Southwest Residential Area. After the conclusion of the 1986 World Series, tensions between jubilant Mets fans and angry Red Sox fans deteriorated into racial violence. Ten students were injured, some very seriously.

It may seem useless for the Collegian to present a series on an event that happened five years ago. Few students remain to tell the tale first-hand. They have graduated or left. So has much of the administration which dealt with the crisis.

We feel, however, it is precisely because so few remember the riot that we look at it five years later. So that students and faculty are aware that racial violence isn't something that happens to someone else. Those who forget the lessons of history are condemned to repeat them.

Many students do know the story, though. They've heard it from friends and relatives who were here that night.

Their stories often conflict. Some say it was racial violence. Some say it was just drunken baseball fans. We hear both and are confused. It is hard for us to imagine what it was really like Oct. 27, 1986 in Southwest, who really threw the first punch, how many people were really there.

Ben Brogan was there, and wrote about it in a Feb. 25, 1987 Collegian column.

"I was in Southwest that night, and it was a racial incident," he said. "Those who try to deny it should have seen the hatred, the anger in the eyes of the hundreds of White men screaming outside Crampton House, kicking in the plate glass windows, trying to get at the small group of Black students."

Ask Director of Human Relations Grant Ingle if it was a racial incident.

"When a White man screams racial epithets before kicking a Black in the head and ribs, it most certainly is racial," he said.

Another reason to focus in on the Southwest riot is to see what the University has done about the problems that Frederick Hurst documented in his report. The sad truth is although many changes were made, much has never been done.

Part of the problem is the University never committed itself to a binding report, or even to a recommendation in Hurst's report which called for "someone with sufficient authority — other than the Chancellor — be assigned specific responsibility for resolving problems described in this report."

This position was never created. Indeed, because Hurst's recommendations were not binding, the University could pick and choose which points it wanted to implement and which it would ignore. Hurst's report was not supposed to be the last word in campus racism, however, the commitment of the University is questionable when it will not allow itself to be held accountable.

The social and cultural diversity and civility classes Hurst recommended are one example. It is true budget cuts have hindered the effort to implement these. But when you consider the severity of the problem we face on this campus, you realize these are the kinds of things for which money should be found.

If the University is truly committed to promoting civility and preventing racism on campus — as its mission statement suggests — then it needs to rethink the way it has dealt with the problems Hurst found five years ago. Letting Civility Week fade away is tantamount to saying "We don't need it anymore." Denial of a problem is as bad as the problem itself.

In short, five years later we all should look at ourselves and ask "Could it happen again? Has there been improvement in the campus racial climate? Could it happen to me tonight?"

If the answer is yes, it could happen and things have not improved, we still have a long way to go. It may be true that the problem of race is one that we, just one university community, cannot solve ourselves. But to deny the problem and hope it goes away is not acceptable. Whether you think either the most or the least we can do is try, we must continue to try.

Unsigned editorials reflect a majority opinion of the Collegian board of editors.

Keg law discriminates

Today's topic is something we've all been victims of, and it has recently made the front pages of the local tabloids. Our parents and teachers may tell us it doesn't exist, and the government may not admit to it, but it's as plain as day. What I'm talking about is age discrimination.

The recent furor over the keg tagging in this great state stinks of age discrimination. College students have long been the victims of the only specifically legal type of discrimination that exists in the United States.

It doesn't matter what sex, race, religion, or sexual preference a person is, but if they ain't 21, they can't drink, and if they want to have a party, they can't buy a keg without Big Brother looming over them.

Michael Morrissey

To recap events, the Town of Amherst Select Board said Tuesday that they will review a suggestion of the Task Force to license potential keg buyers with the town's finest, the Amherst Police Department.

We all know how this goes, people. The licensed buyer gets the keg on some random weekend night. He holds a little get-together with his close, personal friends. And as soon as you know it, the police (randomly driving through the neighborhood, of course) knock on his door and arrest him. Why? Because someone underaged was drinking, or someone made too much noise for the local farts.

College students are as reliable as the rest of the "outside" world, and we are more dependable. Yet, our government makes laws prohibiting us from drinking until we are 21, and then we cannot buy a keg unless we have an extra $50 for a "deposit fee" (deterrent) and we acquiesce to having the government know that there's a keg at our house. Screw that!

Maybe 25 years ago, the composition of an 18-year-old differed considerably from a 21-year-old. But today, with family values eroding and kids having to grow up their own, there are few if any significant differences between the average 18-year-old and the average 21-year-old.

However, we are discriminated against. The truth of the matter is that our "elders" will never accept us as their equals, especially in the town of Amherst. They are condescending even in simple everyday interaction with us.

Now they are trying to tell us that our parties, which they have never been to, will be safer if there are no kegs. Better yet, let's screen keg buyers much in the way a potential gun buyer is screened.

This is not the answer. Parties will become more dangerous if kegs are outlawed, in two different ways. First, more partygoers will bring their own beer to parties, thereby driving with alcohol in their cars. The potential for danger will increase, not decrease.

Secondly, more dorm parties will result if keg buying becomes next to impossible. The increase in dorm parties means the increase in dorm students drinking, due to the accessibility of alcohol. Underaged students who normally wouldn't go off campus to a "kegger" will be entertained on their own floor. Drinking will therefore go up.

The big reason all comes down to this: while we are on our way to becoming something, these poor, miserable, over-the-hill malcontents are doing their best to stop us from having our fun. Don't have fun, just crawl into a corner and be quiet. I wouldn't want us to enjoy our lives. Besides, a dead student doesn't make much noise.

Michael Morrissey is a Collegian columnist

Lighten up on the beer — alcoholism isn't a party

There was a time, not too long ago, in fact, when my idea of having a good time consisted of going out with my friends and having some beers. We'd stagger home at two in the morning, reeking of Guinness Stout, and pretend to be alert for the next day's 9:05 macroeconomics discussion.

But as the years went on and some of my drinking buddies graduated from college and beer, I graduated into the higher echelons of alcohol abuse. What started out as a mere six-pack of Guinness went on to be a six-pack of cheaper beer. And when cheaper beer failed to bring a sufficient buzz, I started to "hit the bottle."

Saad Hopkins

Around my 19th birthday, I started to eschew the pleasures of marijuana, and the responsibilities of casual, social drinking, for the life of alcoholism. I could drink a half pint of vodka each day. At 20, I could down a half pint within the span of an hour then proceed to nurse a second. After that I would drink a beer and shut myself off.

"Big deal!" some may say, "Drinking a bit everyday ain't gonna kill anyone." Well, that depends on who you are. Drinking three quarters of a pint of Popov vodka as a reward for having finished your homework at the end of the night may be your experience with alcohol on a daily basis, but in my case it was different.

At the time, I was homeless, bopping around from couch to couch, with a dozen ideas in my head, and a strong desire to achieve something. It's hard to be creative when you don't have a roof over your head. So, to escape, I drank. I drank so much that as of early October, I could put away a whole liter of vodka in three hours' time.

Not only was I bringing about the obligatory half pint "wake-up bottle" that was essential before going to class, work, or anything I had to do, I was drinking myself silly, and for no damn good reason other than because it was there.

Sure I wanted to quit, but after a while it became impossible to do. First, because of the physical addiction of booze, and second, I was hard-pressed for an incentive. Some told me that if I didn't quit I would die, but I didn't think that wasn't much of an incentive at the time.

Thus during the second week of this month, after a heavy drinking binge brought on by two close deaths and a world collapsing around me, I had to go to the hospital to get treated for a pancreas infection. Four years of heavy drinking finally caught up with me.

I had a drying out spell there that was horrible: the shakes, spaciness, and an attitude that was fouler than the odor of decaying meat. My pancreas was in such bad shape that the pains in my stomach were unbearable. I had to have an IV of nutrients pumped into me at all times. I couldn't drink water without throwing up. And all sorts of nasty side effects to medicine. That was a week of hell.

However, instead of being 80 percent drunk, I'm now 80 sober. I haven't touched anything hard since the sixth of the month. It's not a long time, but it's some progress. Personally, I love drinking, out of all the times when I would drink to escape, there were plenty of occasions where I would simply drink for pleasure, the pleasure of the buzz. But it had to stop.

I'm not writing this to preach to anyone (I would never deny someone the right to a Heineken), I haven't gone to AA, I haven't found Jesus through my refound sobriety, but somehow I do feel better. I think clearer, smell fresher, and all those other corny cliches.

Alcohol is great! I love the stuff. But there comes a time when you gotta say no. Not just because it could screw you up severely, but, as was my case, that vodka and orange could very well be liquid death.

Saad Hopkins is a Collegian columnist

rumors

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

One asked for additional lights to be placed in front of the dorm, which she claimed grew too dark at night. Others asked for extra security, some hoping for a police officer stationed outside the building all Halloween day.

Frecker informed the group that James and Emerson stickers had just arrived at her office that day, making the task of identifying residents easier.

Students contributed more ideas to the brainstorm, including locking outside doors for the week and sleeping elsewhere.

"I feel that we are not going to be safe here no matter what happens," said one student.

"We are reviewing the staffing in light of these rumors," said Luippold.

"This is a problem that we should not just look at during Halloween," said the police chief.

Area coordinator Gay Douglas concluded saying, "It is reasonable to be afraid, but you have to try to get a hold of your fear.

"Your biggest enemy could be your fear," she said.

THE AMHERST DELICATESSEN
Sandwiches, Foot Long Subs, Bagles & Lox, Soups & Salads, Outrageous Brownies, Ben & Jerry's
Delivery until 2 a.m. Th-Sat 549-6314

amc THEATRES
$2.50 TWILITE SHOW
NT FARMS 584-9153
THE FISHER KING
DEAD AGAIN
PARADISE TOUCHING.
Frankie & Johnny
HAMPSHIRE 8 584-7550
NECESSARY ROUGHNESS
DECEIVED
DANNY DeVITO Other People's Money
The Butcher's Wife
Ernest SCARED STUPID
SOUTHERN Movies 6
CURLY SUE

PINOCCHIO'S
RISTORANTE ITALIONO
of Amherst
ADVOCATE BEST OF THE VALLEY READERS POLL 1991
"Parents, enjoy your weekend with Pinocchio's."
Sample Some Specials:
• Osso Buco Milanese
• Bistecca Di Bue Rosmarino
• Pollo Fradiavolo
• Fettuccine Paglia e Fieno
Also serving: Duck, Venison
Catch of the Day (Tuna, Salmon, Lobster...)
"TO WARM YOUR SOUL and FEED YOUR PASSION"
Open 7 Days - Dinner 5-10
VISA/MC
Gift Certificates Available
1177 N. Pleasant St., Amherst 549-3669

HUNAN GOURMET
京 CHINESE RESTAURANT 湘
ADVOCATE ★ BEST ★ OF THE VALLEY READERS POLL 1991 1st Place
The aroma, sound & taste of authentic Chinese cuisine prepared Hunan, Szechuan, Mandarin or Cantonese style — especially for you!
FULL LIQUOR LICENSE
261 King St., Northampton • 585-0202 • Ample Parking
Open 7 Days a Week • NO MSG
TAKE OUT SERVICE AVAILABLE

RÉSUMÉS
Copy Cat Print Shop
• Great Service • Great Prices •
228 Triangle St. • Amherst • 549-3840

Cooking at your table
SPECIAL
Tues.-Wed.-Thurs.-Fri. & all day Sunday
Two Dinners for $15
Steak & Chicken Combo
Two Dinners for $18.00
Shrimp & Scallop Combo
Both include soup, salad, vegetables, noodles, steamed rice, tea, & ice cream
Full Bar • Exotic Specialties
Gift Certificates Available
Goten OF JAPAN
Rt. 116, Sunderland 413-665-3628
Open Tues.-Sat. at 5pm, Sun at 2
Reservations welcomed

Rent One of Ours
• Cars • Trucks • Cargo Vans
Rent by Day, Week or Month
Special Weekly and Weekend Rates
North Amherst Motors Auto & Truck Rental
79 Old Sunderland Rd. North Amherst, MA
549-RENT (549-7368)
Major Credit Cards Accepted
On Bus Route

Atkins Fruit Bowl
A NEW ENGLAND APPLE ORCHARD COUNTRY FOOD STORE
Student Special Care Packages
Snack Pak
Three to Four Fruits (apple, pear, banana and grapes), 1/4 lb. Cabot Cheddar Cheese and Crackers, Trail Mix, Chocolate Chip or Oatmeal Cookies (6), Atkins popular Cider Donuts, Ghiradelli Candy Bar and two individual paks of Cocoa Amore (flavored cocoa) arranged in gift box $14.95
Lunch Tote Bags for Two or Four
White Turkey Breast and Roast Beef Sliced, American Cheese, Swiss Cheese, Rye Bread or Sandwich Rolls, Mustard, Mayonnaise, Pickles, Sliced Tomato and Lettuce, Potato Salad, and Chewy Brownies or Double Chocolate Chip Cake all in a Canvas Tote Bag
For Four ..... $21.50 For Two $12.95
Other Packs
Get Well Pak • Nacho Pak • Birthday Cakes • Boxed lunch for Individuals
Mix & Match Snacks • CALL TO ORDER
Atkins Own Sweet Cider
Home Grown Apples, Peaches (in season) & Pears
Complete Line of Produce
Home Made Pies, Cakes, Donuts, Cookies and Assorted Pastries
Specialty Foods
ATKINS
1150 West Street Amherst, MA 01002
413/253-9528 or 413/256-6038
Fax 413/256-3117

KATINA'S
LIVE ONE LOVE BAND
SELECTROCUTION
• BRITESIDE • MONA LISA • MORIAH • INSIDE CHARLOTTE
SELECTROCUTION 99.3
HALLOWEEN THRASH BASH! featuring PRONG, WARGASM, & WRECKING CREW! with Special Appearances by IMPAKT and LACHRYMATORI SPONSORED BY WCUF'S "The Pit", Platterpus (Westfield), Mystic Outlet (Enfield). All Ages
EVERY WEDS: ONE LOVE
FRI., 11/1: JOHN VALBY
SUN., 11/3: HARD CORPS + HARD SILENCE
FRI., 11/8: MAX CREEK
SUN., 11/10: THE THROBS
ADVANCE TIX: Katina's, Platerpus, Strawberries & Music Outlet
ROUTE 9, HADLEY • 586-4463

Smith Hadley's TOWER THEATRES
THE VILLAGE COMMONS • SOUTH HADLEY 533-2663
DOC HOLLYWOOD
"TWO BIG THUMBS UP" - Siskal & Ebert
WEEKDAYS @ 3, 7& 9:05 • FRIDAYS, SAT, SUN @ 2:45, 4:50, 7 & 9:05 pm
"TALKING ENTERTAINMENT JUST A GREAT TIME AT THE MOVIES"
"THE COMMITMENTS IS A LOUD, ROARING, COMIC EXTRAVAGANZA"
THE COMMITMENTS
WEEKDAYS @ 3, 7 & 9:15 •
FRIDAY, SAT, SUN @ 2:45, 5, 7:10 & 9:25 & MIDNIGHT FRIDAY
THE ROCKY HORROR PICTURE SHOW
With Cast Midnight Friday

Arts & Living

Skip Shattered

By JON LUPO
Collegian Correspondent

What happens when a movie spends the entire running time trying to outwit the audience? What happens when a director chooses to direct the plot instead of the actors? What happens when good performers are squeezed into a film where the story is obviously the star? Then you've got Shattered, a convoluted and worthless waste of time and talent.

The film opens up with a car careening off the road. Out flies Greta Scacchi (The Coca-Cola Kid) and wedged in the car lies Tom Berenger (Someone to Watch Over Me), scarred beyond recognition. Guess what — he also has a bad case of amnesia, forgetting everything about his personal life. Wife Scacchi is more than willing to help him reclaim his memory, perhaps too willing, and avoids questions about the "accident." He finds out that Scacchi was having an affair and that his friends, played by Corbin Bernsen (television's LA Law) and Joanne Whaley-Kilmer (Scandal) know more than they're saying. Berenger has plenty of foggy-screen flashbacks and finds out he hired a private detective played by Bob Hoskins (Who Framed Roger Rabbit?) to trail his wife. Everybody knows more than he does and no one is talking. They keep muttering "If only you knew," and "Watch out for him/her . . . he/she's dangerous." Just spit it out already!

What can ultimately save this kind of film is the acting. No luck here, either. It's disappointing because we've got fine actors stuck in one-dimensional, stock characters.

First off is Tom Berenger, looking very worn and tired, even well after the accident. He has a confused, bewildered expression on his face for the entire film . . . a real stretch.

Greta Scacchi does her worst femme-fatale as Berenger's possibly evil wife. It's odd because she's done these type of roles in such films as White Mischief and Presumed Innocent. She's one of those actresses who seems to have a stipulation in her contracts that she must have at least three nude scenes in every movie (Mickey Rourke and Ellen Barkin, et al). This role is a definite waste of her talents.

Bob Hoskins, a British actor who donned a Jewish accent for his role in Mermaids, this time lays a heavy New York-ordinary Joe one. Every mannerism is cliche. That could be blamed on the script, but one would think a noted character actor would have come up with something remotely original.

The only member of the cast, in fact, that comes away unscathed is Corbin Bernsen. The reason is because he's playing a toned-down version of his Arnie Becker character from LA Law. He's not even around enough to make an impact, though.

However confounding in the acting department, it's the ever-twisting plot that emerges as the most disappointing element. Shattered certainly keeps the viewer guessing. It unravels to a conclusion that comes way out of left field, cheating even the most faithful viewer — it's not even worth going to try to figure out the mystery. Shattered is an oddity: usually credible stars and a well-known director (Wolfgang Peterson — Das Boot) in a genuinely terrible movie.

Grade: D+

SCUM-con!

By NICOLE GONZALES
Collegian Staff

SCUM, the Science Fiction Convention of UMass, has successfully managed to put on its 7th annual convention by providing every type of science fiction and fantasy fan with an amazing amount of anti-mundane activities.

"A 'mundane' is a person with no imagination," said Mike Phipps, chairman of the committee, a.k.a., Our Glorious Leader. Phipps explained why their conventions seem so odd to the mundane. "To conventiongoers, it's all one big in-joke," said Phipps. "We've all read the books, so all someone has to do is make a reference and everybody will burst out laughing."

Several panels were held throughout the weekend, ranging from creating your own alien at the Hatch to listening to storytelling by Jane Yolen. Sci-fi films were shown continuously during the convention while in the "Star Trek room," episodes of the new and original Star Trek were shown. Outside the panels, there was always something going on, such as the conga line started by SCUM member, Julie Page. A more structured form of dancing, the Regency Dance of medieval times, was also being taught by Lisa Steele and Heather Abbott.

To the average person, it all looked like one big Halloween party with swashbuckling swordsmen, medieval princesses, sheiks, and harems. For most who attended, however, the "con" served as a place for intelligent people to get together and exchange ideas.

Guest of honor Steven Brust said what he liked best about the conventions: "I like being treated like a God . . . to be honest,

CONTINUED ON PAGE 10

RED HOT CHILI PEPPERS
With Special Guest
SMASHING PUMPKINS
plus PEARL JAM
SUNDAY NOV 3 - 7:30 PM
SPRINGFIELD CIVIC CENTER
TICKETS ON SALE NOW AT TICKETMASTER, TICKETMASTER CHARGE AND VENUE BOX OFFICE
ALL TICKETS $18.50
TICKETMASTER
G. FOX: HOLYOKE, MA & ENFIELD, CT
GRAPE STREET RECORDS: AMHERST
MOVIES & MORE: CHICOPEE PLUS MORE
CALL FOR TIX
(800) 382-8080

LIVE IN SPRINGFIELD
PARAMOUNT
1700 MAIN STREET, SPRINGFIELD, MA.
.38 SPECIAL with HENRY LEE SUMMER OCTOBER 27TH
PATTI LaBELLE OCTOBER 29TH
VIOLENT FEMMES NOVEMBER 1ST
GEORGE CARLIN NOVEMBER 2ND
TEMPTATIONS WITH DOWN FIVE NOVEMBER 8TH
FISHBONE PRIMUS NOVEMBER 20TH
FOREIGNER with XYZ NOVEMBER 29TH
TICKETS ON SALE PARAMOUNT BOX OFFICE (413) 734-5874; TICKETPRO PHONE CHARGE 1-800-828-7080; NORTHAMPTON TICKET OFFICE (413) 586-8686; RECORD EXPRESS; STRAWBERRIES

THE MA
RIDAY, C
ILY COL
NVIGET
ILY COL
TTS DAI
Y COLLE
NY COMEDY SHOP
Gilbert Gottfried
This Sunday!

SALADS SUBMARINES SYRIANS

SALADS SUBMARINES SYRIANS
11 A.M. TO 2 A.M. / 7 DAYS
33 E. PLEASANT ST., AMHERST / 549-5160

THE SUB

Halloween Headquarters
GREASE PAINTS • HANDS •
FEET • WITCHES' HATS & BROOMS • WIGS •
MOUSTACHES • BEARDS • NOSES • FANGS •
TEETH • TOOTH BLACK-OUT
NORTHAMPTON HALLOWEEN CENTER
25 State Street • 584-5006
10 Minutes From UMass
LARGE ASSORTMENT OF MASKS TO CHOOSE FROM
Call for extended Haloween hours
H.L. CHILDS & SON
Open Daily and Saturday 9:00am-5:15pm, Thursdays 'til 8:00pm
Check Our LOW Prices

BABY BLOOMERS • THOMAS JB WEEKERS • PRIMROSE LANE • ODYSSEY BOOKSHOP
BERKSHIRE LEATHER • BOMBAY COMPANY • TARLAZZI DRYCLEANERS • TARLAZZI DRYCLEANERS & MARKET
BROWSE, PUTTER, MEANDER AND EVEN SHOP. ENJOY THE VILLAGE COMMONS, A UNIQUE RETAIL COMPLEX REMINISCENT OF THE TRADITIONAL NEW ENGLAND VILLAGE. A PLACE FILLED WITH ELEGANT FASHIONS, HIGH QUALITY CRAFTS, WHIMSICAL GIFTS AND FINE DINING. OPEN DAILY AND SUNDAYS, TOO.
MONDAY-SATURDAY 10 A.M. TO 6 P.M.
THURSDAY TIL 8 P.M.
SUNDAY NOON TO 5 P.M.
STEP OUT OF THE ORDINARY AND INTO THE UNCOMMON
THE VILLAGE COMMONS
SHOPS RESTAURANTS THEATERS
ACROSS FROM MOUNT HOLYOKE COLLEGE ON ROUTE 116, SOUTH HADLEY, MA
ONE HOUR PHOTO • OCHOA FOR HAIR • THE PERFECT FIT • BEAUX VISAGES
THOMAS J. PETERS • J. FRANCIS KINNEY GALLERY • EAST FRIEDA'S PIZZA • PACIFIC GREENERY • ORIEL GALLERY • WOMAN'S LACE PLACE • NUTCRACKER CHOCOLATES • TARLAZZI DRYCLEANERS & MARKET
RECYCLE YOUR BOUZHIE

$500.00
Discount For College Students
UNIQUE AUTO SALES
Rte 9, 389 College St, Amherst
'85 Ford Ranger 4x4
'89 Geo Spectrum, AT, AC
'86 Nissan Stanza, loaded
'88 Hyundai Excel GL, AT, Sunroof
'88 Honda Civic DX, 55pd, Clean
'89 Hyundai Excel GL, AT, 22K
'86 Volkswgn Jetta GLI, AC, CASS
253-4282

Some of the biggest, some of the best presents come in the smallest boxes!
silverscape designs

WHO'S OPEN LATE?
Sun.-Thurs. Open 'till 3:00am
Fri. & Sat. Open 24 Hours
James H. McManus eating place
Route 9, Hadley
256-6889
next to Stop & Shop

THREE DAYS ONLY!

Owning your own high-performance computer has never been this easy and affordable! For Parents' Weekend, ACI is announcing the new 25 MHz 386SX system. Imagine: 25 MHz SX power at a 286 price! And for three days, receive a free Math Co-Processor or 24-pin letter-quality printer with the purchase of a 25 MHz SX system!

25 MHz Power, 286 Price!
25 MHz 80386SX Processor, up to 50% faster than 16 MHz SX's
2 Megabytes of RAM, Expandable to 16 Mb
40 Megabyte 28-millisecond IDE Hard Drive
512K Super-VGA Graphics Adaptor
14" Paper-White monochrome VGA monitor
TEAC 3.5" High-Density Floppy Drive (add a 5.25" drive for only $65)
Microsoft DOS 5.0
FREE Star NX-2410 24-pin printer or Cyrix FasMath Coprocessor
Fully upgradeable design
(Students & Faculty only, please.)

FREE Math Coprocessor or 24-pin Printer!

WHERE AND WHEN:
Thursday through Saturday, October 24th-26th, 9:00am-4:00pm
on the Umass Campus Center Concourse
UNIVERSITY STORE
(C)1991 American Computer Innovators, Inc. All names are trademarks of their respective owners.
HOURS: M-F 9-5 • Sat. 11-3 • 545-2619

THE FAR SIDE
By GARY LARSON

Unknown to most historians, William Tell had an older and less fortunate son named Warren.

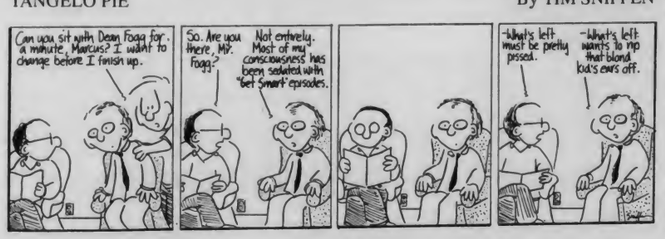
DOONESBURY
By GARRY TRUDEAU

MICHAEL, ON BEHALF OF THE POINTS O' LITE FOUNDATION, I WANT TO CONGRATULATE YOU ON BECOMING POINT O' LITE NO. 597!
THE WORK YOU DID GETTING RID OF THOSE DRUG GUYS WAS MARVELOUS, JUST MARVELOUS!
SO WHY DON'T WE PROCEED WITH OUR PHOTO-OP HERE... DON'T CROWD, PLEASE--ONE AT A TIME! LET'S NOT TURN THIS INTO A MEDIA CIRCUS!
AHEM! UH... JUST A SECOND, SIR.

CALVIN AND HOBBES
By BILL WATTERSON

HA HA! I HAVE TURNED MYSELF INVISIBLE!
BY REMOVING MY CLOTHING, I CAN PERPETRATE ANY CRIME UNDETECTED!
I HAVE COMPLETE FREEDOM! I CAN GET AWAY WITH ANYTHING!
CALVIN! WHAT ON EARTH ARE YOU DOING IN THE COOKIE JAR WITHOUT YOUR CLOTHES ON?!?
10-25

TANGELO PIE
By TIM SNIFFEN



Can you sit with Dean Fogg for a minute, Marcus? I want to change before I finish up.
So. Are you there, Mr. Fogg?
Not entirely. Most of my consciousness has been seduced with "Get Smart" episodes.
-What's left must be pretty pissed.
-What's left wants to rip that blond kid's ears off.

CAST OF THOUSANDS
By BARRY DEUTSCH

SO YOUR ROOMMATE IS A GHOST... THIS IS PRETTY WEIRD
BELIEVE ME, I'D LOVE TO BE RID OF HIM.
I MEAN, I DON'T MIND HIS BEING UNDEAD, BUT HE'S ALSO A TOTAL SLOB! I'D LIKE TO GET HIM OUT. I'D NEED AN EXORCIST.
AND WHERE WOULD I FIND SOMEONE LIKE...
DON'T TELL ME YOU'RE AN EXORCIST, RIGHT?
YOUR DOING MY GRADUATE STUDIES IN EXORCISM, ACTUALLY.
UMM.

UNDER 21
By KRIS K. EARLE

MIKEY AND WINNIE DANCED EVEN THOUGH NO MUSIC WAS BEING PLAYED WITHIN A 2-MILE RADIUS
WINNIE TRIED SOME OF MIKEY'S MAD DOG 20/20
AND MIKEY SAMPLED WINNIE'S GARDEN ANNIVERSARY AND THEY LIVED HAPPILY EVER AFTER...
THAT'S FOR NOW.

Quote of the Day

"And now," Max cried, "let the wild rumpus begin!"

-- Where the Wild Things Are
Maurice Sendak

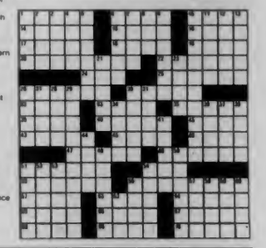
DAILY CROSSWORD PUZZLE
By TRUDE MICHEL JAFFE

ACROSS
1 Perplexed
6 Weiner schnitzel ingredient
10 Scrape
14 Solzhenitsyn's "The — Archipelago"
15 Jason a ship
16 Combining form meaning "vision"
17 Humble
18 Escalate
19 River flowing to the Caspian Sea
20 Famished
22 Limited
24 Comeuppance
25 Bewildered
26 Lubricant container
30 Observe
32 Coward of note
33 August event in Russia
35 Important artery
39 Volcano in Sicily
40 Show host
42 False god
43 Horse/man of myth
45 Made do, with "out"
46 Lodges
47 — lobster
49 Tree of eastern China
51 Sight in 44 Down
54 Ineffective
55 Site of Mount Hood
56 Repeated
61 Learn by —
62 Unsolved question
64 Martini ingredient
65 Concerning
66 Percolate
67 Worn out
68 Explorer Ponce de —
69 Temper
70 Flirt

DOWN
1 Gelatin substitute
2 Part of a brass band
3 A Moravian, for one
4 Facilitate
5 Program
6 Obscura
7 Strays
8 Pest
9 Like skim milk
10 Kind of tournament
11 Taxing time
12 Express
13 Propelled a punt
21 Modicum
23 Impression
26 Bucks
27 Fragment
28 Furnished
29 Target
30 Too cute
31 Fencer's weapon
34 Foretoken
36 Status
37 Strong flavor
38 As well
41 Father of Candice
44 Nevada resort
48 Sarge
50 Foray
51 Sea near Australia
52 Stood up
53 Pitch in
54 Made the floor shine
56 "Fools Die" author
57 — podrida: Spanish stew
58 Place for money
59 Pernicious
60 Gainsay
63 Certain marsupial, for short

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

G	L	I	B		H	A	D	E	S		M	A	P
R	A	J	A		I	D	A	D	O	G	A	S	E
I	V	E	H	A	D	M	Y	M	O	M	E	N	T	S
F	A	M		A	D	O	S		I	N	S	E	T
		A	R	E	S		H	A	I	L	E	R	S
F	A	L	L	E	N		P	A	T	E	S
I	R	A	E		S	O	B	E	R		P	E	P
F	I	V	E	M	I	N	U	T	E	S	M	O	R	E
E	D	I	T	H	P	I	A	F		A	L	I	A	S
		P	R	O	P	S		A	L	S	A	C	C
S	I	M	I	A	N		D	O	L	E	S
E	W	I	N	G		A	N	G	E	L	I	A
D	A	N	C	E	O	F	T	H	E	H	O	U	R	S
E	S	T	H		P	A	I	E		A	T	O	P
R	A	T			S	T	I	R	S		T	E	S	S



Quote of the Day

"The philosophers hitherto have only interpreted the world in various ways; the thing, however, is to change it."

-- Karl Marx

YOUR DAILY HOROSCOPE
By JEANE DIXON

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You may be thinking about expanding your business or taking on a new partner. A lawyer or accountant can give you excellent advice. Take a chance on love — you have nothing to lose.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The tempo of business picks up today. You enjoy meeting new people. Display your special talents. Branch out in a different direction, but guard against acting overconfident.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Relatives and friends play an increasingly important role in your personal affairs. Take time to learn skills that will increase your earning power. Maze is supportive.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Good luck continues to favor your efforts. If extra money comes your way, set some aside for later on. Postpone a romantic interlude while you pursue several platonic relationships.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Consolidate recent gains this morning. Fortuitous developements are featured this afternoon. Strengthening a business alliance will help you achieve lasting financial security. Good humor will offset rising tension over an emotional involvement.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Someone makes a big effort to appeal to your charitable side. As long as the cause is worthy, respond generously. If engaged in confidential work, heed a warning that certain revelations will be made.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Entertaining demanding business clients can be costly. You may have to ask yourself whether this is really worthwhile. Avoid throwing good money after bad. Romance is chancy. Lie low.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Clever maneuvers behind the scenes should bring in extra cash. You could get that special job opportunity that you have been waiting for. Romance is sweet the second time around.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You could be more sensitive than usual today. Guard against flying off the handle. Everyone will be in a much better mood by this evening. Do not let the past haunt you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Seize the initiative at work and try to stay in the saddle until you have achieved a principal goal. The competition is not at full strength today. Keep your savings in the bank.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Trying to decide whether you can believe in someone close to you could tear you apart. Keep your own behavior above reproach. You are a lower of strength for someone in trouble.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): What you do with your money is your own business. But what your mate does with it concerns you both. An open discussion is vital. Lost possessions mysteriously reappear.

Today's Staff
Night Editor.....Kim Frisino
Copy Editor.....Jason George
PhotoTechnician.....Matt Kahn
Production Supervisor.....Seth Kaye
Production.....Joanne Quimby, Jason Torla

■ SCUM

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 7

what I like are the arguments . . . anything that gets your brain into overdrive, where you're challenged, and where you've got to keep up . . . it's a very particular kind of high."

Brust, well-known for his fantasy novel, Jhereg, which was called a "witty, biting adventure," pointed out a single theme that many of the convention attenders have in common.

"Referring to the authors standing around him including, Neil Gaiman, English author of the comic series, The Sandman, and Theresa Neilson Hayden, editor-in-chief of Masquerade Books which publishes Erotica, Brust said this shared theme is "to assert beauty, prove beauty, and create beauty. You cannot have beauty without the flip side and you've got to transcend it. Wait 'til you read Brair Rose by Jane Yolen."

Gaiman gave an example of this theme from one of his comic book historical series: "It's a story about madness and the imagination as a liberating thing; about belief as a liberating thing. It's frightening, the story of Norton. He believed he was the emperor of the U.S. in San Francisco in the 1860s to 1880s and the people treated him as he was. He was sustained and enriched by his belief and his life was actually a wonderful thing."

Many of the guests of the convention proved to be professional eclectics, including T.J. Glenn, professional fighter in stage combat, stuntman, fanzine publisher, and comic book artist. During his studies at Parson School of Design, Glenn found one book in particular that fascinated him — a novel called Swashbuckling 101. "The day I held a sword in my hand," said Glenn, "I said this is what I want to do." Although Glenn has mastered many of the sword techniques throughout Europe, his future goal is to learn Korean swordfighting, which requires a knowledge of the martial arts. He is currently learning under martial arts teacher, C.M. Griffin, who also attended the convention.

Griffin's specialty is pursuing the art of Hwa Rang Do. "Hwa Rang Do is better than a fraternity because we can kick your butt," joked Griffin. He described the more serious aspects of the art. "I'm opening my mind to meditation," said Griffin. "I'm learning to listen to my body."

Griffin's knowledge of martial arts, and directing, as well as the Korean language, got him a contract with Fuji TV, an Asian television and film company. Compared with his work with Western filmmakers, Griffin said that there was a "better group effort" among the Asian filmmaking team. "The Asians respect everything you do," said Griffin.

Female award-winning fantasy author Jane Yolen has been almost an annual guest, including being guest of honor in 1989. In a conversation about typical trends in fantasy, such as unicorns and dragons, Yolen commented on her own work: "I don't pay attention to trends. Sometimes it gets published and sometimes not." As a critic described her, Yolen said, "I'm either ten years ahead or behind." In addition to fantasy, Yolen writes children's books and adult novels, such as her latest on the Holocaust, Briar Rose.

Parent's Weekend

BRUNCH BUFFET

Bring Your Parents... $6.95 ...or Make Them Bring You.

All You Can Eat — Saturday & Sunday

Belgian Waffles
Eggs & Omelets (made to order)
Bacon & Sausage

Virginia Baked Ham
Home Style Potatoes
Freshly Baked Bagels

Danish
Muffins
Breads
and lots of fruit

Café Ashley
Rte. 9, HADLEY
Next to Howard Johnson Motor Lodge
ASK FOR INFORMATION ABOUT BANQUET FACILITIES
ALL MENU ITEMS ARE AVAILABLE FOR TAKE OUT

NOW RENTING FOR THE SECOND SEMESTER

Don't live in the dorms paying 1800[00] room and board for the second semester

You can live in beautiful
SQUIRE VILLAGE
at an average of $235/Month
(room, board, utilities)

We have large 1 to 4 bedroom apartments fully applianced with:

• Kitchen with dishwasher •
• Wall-to-wall carpeting •
• Air Conditioning •
• Laundry facilities •
• Swimming pool •
• On U-Mass bus route •

Don't Delay! Call
SQUIRE VILLAGE
APARTMENTS
ROUTE 116 • 665-2203

THIS FRIDAY 2-6 PM

THE TOC SEAFOOD BAR

PEEL 'N' EAT SHRIMP
$ 4.25/HALF DOZ

FRESH STEAMERS
$ 4.50/'BUCKET'

Introducing Pitchers of Miller Genuine Draft for $4.25

ONLY AT THE TOC LOUNGE
11th FLOOR CAMPUS CENTER

Men harriers at Atlantic 10s

By KEITH BENNETT
Collegian Staff

The Atlantic 10 Championship Meet beckons the University of Massachusetts men's cross country team this weekend. The Minutemen travel to Van Cortland Park in New York City for tomorrow's 10 a.m. meet.

UMass coach Ken O'Brien expects his team to be among the top four teams there.

"Historically, we've been fighting for one of the top three or four spots in this meet," O'Brien said. "I see ourselves in a relatively similar position this year."

The Minutemen were third at the A-10s last year and have finished between second and fourth place in each of the past 13 years.

UMass is coming off of a second place finish in the Eastern Conference Championship Meet last weekend. The team was led by Kevin Greenhalgh, who finished seventh overall in the race. Greenhalgh was named the A-10 runner of the week for his performance.

Greenhalgh is one of just five UMass runners competing this weekend who ran in last year's meet. The Minutemen lost their top four finishers from last year to graduation.

UMass will also be without Craig Cormier, its fifth finisher from last season. Cormier, who finished 19th last year, is out with a virus.

The returning runners from last year's A-10 squad are Pat Reed, who placed 20th, Greenhalgh (27th), Mike Davis (29th), Matt Simon (31st) and Tom Walsh (53rd).

John Raach also will not compete due to an abdominal muscle pull. Raach was the team's second finisher at the Easterns last weekend, 10th overall, and placed 35th at the A-10s last year.

"We'll suffer a bit without John and Craig," O'Brien said. "But I think we have some depth and we should have some runners who can overcome their absence."

O'Brien expects UMass to be in a battle for second place. "West Virginia should be the favorite in the meet," he said. "St. Joseph's (who beat UMass by one point to take second last year), Rhode Island and ourselves have been fairly even this season and should be competing for the next spots. St. Joe's returns five of their top six runners from last year, so I would have to give them the edge over Rhode Island and ourselves."

HFR
hanging fish recording
1/2 inch eight track recording ... DAT sequencing ... production assistance tracking ... 10 dollars per hour mixdown ... 15 dollars per hour
for information call 413 665 0666

D.P. Dough
256-1616
Delivers Calzones
$1.00 OFF ANY 2 CALZONES
exp. 1/25/92 ● one coupon per 2 Calzones ● Delivery Only
$1.00 OFF ANY 2 CALZONES
exp. 1/25/92 ● one coupon per 2 Calzones ● Delivery Only
OPEN at 11:30 A.M. DAILY

DOMINO'S PIZZA
U-MASS 256-8911
Mt. Holyoke 535-1111
We Accept Competetors Coupons
30¢ PIZZA
ORDER ANY TWO TOPPING LARGE PIZZA GET MEDIUM 1 TOPPING PIZZA FOR 30¢
1.99 PIZZA
BUY ANY LARGE PIZZA GET 2ND ONE FOR $1.99
BUY ANY LARGE PIZZA
for the price of a small Pizza

Classifieds

COME TO THE COLLEGIAN OFFICE 113 CAMPUS CENTER • THURSDAY 8:30-3:30 FRIDAY 8:30-2:30 • DEADLINE IS TWO DAYS PRIOR TO PUBLICATION • 20¢/WORD/DAY FOR STUDENTS • CASH IN ADVANCE

ACTIVITIES

HAUNTED HOUSE AT LAMBDA CHI Sponsored by the brothers and Halloween headquarters 29-31 6:30-9:00 $2 To benefit D.A.R.E.

InterVarsity Christian Fellowship meeting Rm811, 7:30pm. L'Abri trip 5:45 outside Bluewall. To know HIM is to love Him. We do!

TAROT AND RUNE readings today, campus center concourse $2 donation. Sponsored by Pagan Student Organization

TIME WARP DANCE Sponsored by HSA & Field House Council Friday 10/25 9pm Field Lounge Music from '50s to '90s

ANNOUNCEMENTS

HOT...SPICY...MOUTHWATERING... BUFFALO WINGS!! Finally, what you've been waiting for... Fast, free, healthy delivery! Introducing Mama Mapes Wings -N- Things opening Thursday Oct 31st Don't miss out!

POWER WILL BE holding a meeting on Sunday Oct 27th at 7:30pm in 306SV (Power Office)

PUT YOUR TUNES ON T.V.! UNION VIDEO CENTER Wants your original music. We're by the Hatch. Come by. Peace.

PVOC OIL CO-OP Purchase home heating oil at reduced cost. COD or automatic delivery. Register at OCHO 428 Student Union

STUDENT LOCKERS AVAILABLE in Student Union. For storage of books and other personal belongings. Register at OCHO 428 Student Union.

Wanna play LIVE on WMUA? We're looking for bands to play for the Live Music Project. Call 545-2892 Ask for Dave Demerjian or Ami Bennit.

COLLEGE PIZZA

COLLEGE PIZZA Fall Special Small cheese $3.50 Large cheese $6.00 Free soda with purchase of a large sub, salad, or spaghetti 549-6098 549-6073 Must mention this ad

ENTERTAINMENT

HAVING A PARTY? Forget the stereo, hire a band! Call Brendan at 586-2533

RACK-A-DISC! 5175.00 DJs, V.Ins. Karaoke for house/ Formal parties, Call 586-9900

FOR RENT

Townhouse 2 Bedroom 1 1/2bath BusRoute N. Amherst 1-567-1352

FOR SALE

2 LENNY KRAVITZ TICKETS Nov. 1 Boston Cheap 546-4085

BEST OFFER: Halloween Dark Vador costume Small B/W TV w/ cable for dormitory, Coffee machine 549-0142

FOR SALE Electric guitar and amp Good beginner's set Loud and fun $280 Call 586-7353

Four George Michael Tickets Will sell together or in pairs $30 each or B.O. Mon Oct. 28th show. Call 549-5340 after 4

FUJI... $100 12 speed racing bike in good shape! Call 546-7347

HEAD OF CHARLES T-shirts-Discount price. -For head call 256-8614

IBM PC/XT Computer System with amber monitor, 5 1/4 drive & some software. $165/ BO. 665-2215 Cris

FOUND

ALEX COISMAN you lost your planner outside of Lederle Come pick it up at the Collegian

FOUND: Set of keys at Unique Auto Sales Call Brenda at 253-4282

HELP WANTED

EXTERIOR PAINTERS Experienced student painters needed to paint Amherst area homes. Full or part time America's College Painters (800) 626-6267 "Painting America's homes coast to coast".

SIGNATURE AGENCY SEEKING female models Requirements: Ages 16-24 $10 application fee Minimum Height 5'7" Please Dress in black Minority candidates urged to apply Tues. Oct.29 7-10pm at Holiday Inn Holyoke Exit 15 off I91 NORS Near Ingleside Mall

INTERNSHIPS

ON-CAMPUS INTERNSHIPS/SPRING 1992 Earn credit with the Residential Recycling Program. Gain valuable experience by promoting recycling on campus. We encourage all majors to join us! Introduce new ideas to the program. Contact the Residential Recycling Program/545-1153/Berkshire House.

* KNOW YOUR RIGHTS *

Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact The Legal Services Center, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

LOST

Lost a gold colored anchor 10-21 in Campus Center. Please call Juan at 6-2719. Great sentimental value.

Reward for the return of 60 CD's stolen from Main St. Fri. night Call Mike 253-0666

MOTORCYCLES

Suzuki 450 1980 Runs well $200 Call 256-3466 Ask for Bryant

PERSONALS

Who is that SEXY man working in the Alumni Office? You look great Matt! We noticed. Debbie and Suzanne

JELLO TWISTER

HAPPY BIRTHDAY TRINITY! FEELS LIKE FOREVER WAIT FOR CHAPTER 3 ???

SIGMA DELTA TAU SDT sisters + pledges--prepare yourselves for an unforgettable hayride! See everyone Saturday! Love, Michell + Karen

ANDREW These past two years have been the best days of my life. I love you very much. Happy Anniversary, Jenny

CARPE DIEM! Womans Novice Crew Sunday Our wake, Their funers!

WATCH OUT UMASS- Laurence Pohrer is turning 18 at midnight tonight. Happy birthday Larry!!! I hope all your wishes come true 'cuz you deserve everything you want! It's Me- Evil(You better know who it is)

CHICKEN FAJITA - Happy 21st birthday! Maybe we can go celebrate on Sunday and take care of my bar study. Behave on Saturday night Love, Gayle

JOANNE HAPPY 18TH Let's celebrate roomie We'll bring the ice cream- MOOOOO Kim and Kristen

JEN AND ANDY Hope you have a great time on Friday Happy two year Anniversary!!!

CARRIE Happy 1 year 5 month Anniversary You little shunker I love you Richie

Amanda 6 days down! Stick to it and good luck! Love Molly

TORI Just thought you'd like to see your name in the personals! Love Mo

RICK--I saw you buy that vaseline at CVS yesterday. --Kathleen

Kathleen--I think Todd is a dog. --Nic

Christine--Can't you and Brian give it up. -- Astro

Nic --Let's spend the night together. --Rick

HAPPY BELATED BIRTHDAY ROBIN!! You are finally as old as the rest of us- I can't believe. Love Foo-Foo, Hobbit, and Your Big Brother Jason.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY TRINITY Have a nice day-smile Your Shiny Happy Friends

Greg, This past year has been incredible! You have become such a big part of my life. Thank you for always listening and showing me you care--You're my best friend! I LOVE YOU SO MUCH! Love, Beth HEY UMASS Kristie Tincher is finally 21! Psyche Psyche Psyche! (Pasantes!) Love, your roomies.

To the theives in #2 Gilreath: Your football days are over! What's on T.V. now? Beware of retaliation... CLICK. #12

SUZY- Happy 21st birthday! Get psyched for Rudolf & Frosty season Love, Monster

MARY'S NOVICE WOMENS CREW We made our mark on the Connecticut It's time to make it in Connecticut Let the boats run this Sunday

DARRIN Your tutor has a new lesson Bring your own supplies

HIDE YOUR VODKA!!! Chris M. (The Warrior) is off the wagon!

HAPPY BDA DAY! How old are you now? Hugs and Kisses -CP

HAPPY 21ST SUSAN BARRY Have a Guiness & celebrate like they do in Cork! Love, The other Sue from UMass

MARK S CAMPBELL In 20 years we'll go back to Twisters and celebrate our Aday, but leave out the bee and I'll stop biting my nails Happy 22nd birthday! I love U more! Pam

Mark Campbell I LOVE U ALSO Buffet!

ELISE You can go anywhere now, but don't forget about the boathouse! (I'll be there until May) Happy birthday Killer -go get rocked! Love, Shan

My Little Indian (Pal) I can't even express how happy you've made the past year It's been the best! Happy Anniversary I Love You -Fat's Son (Buddy)

Attention SEXY SINGLE SIGMAS, it looks like we're no longer just "the married house," which means a lot more fun for us! (UMass beware)

EDDY...IT'S BETTY! Just a reminder that Hell Day is approaching Nine months...UGH! Let's celebrate! PSEE-YA

BRIAN D. Wear Me! Besos, Your Mink

RIDE WANTED

Are you going to DC or VIRGINIA over Thanksgiving break? Please take me along! I'll pay ALL EXPENSES! Call Pat at 549-0961

NORTHAMPTON TO AMHERST weeknights 1:30AM-7 253-2329

RIDE WANTED To VanHalen / Worcester, 10/30. Pay gas. Chris 546-1712

ROOMMATE WANTED

1 BEDROOM IN 2 bedroom Colonial Village Bus route 273+ Night Call Lu 235-2435

SERVICES

BICYCLE BROKEN? Call Pat 546-0119

ORDER AVON! 546-1999 Call for brochure.

PREGNANT? Need a pregnancy test, information or support? Call for free and confidential services. ALTERNATIVES 245 Main Street, Northampton 586-3000 or Greenfield 774-6019

STOP SMOKING WITH the help of powerful hypnotherapist from T.I.W. Special discounts for students. Call 586-7372

FREE pregnancy testing; confidential and caring support. BIRTHRIGHT 233 No. Pleasant Street Amherst 549-1906

TRAVEL

BAHAMA CRUISE $99 Per person 5 day / 4 night hotel. Plan now for your break. Very limited offer. Call now 1-800-821-0572

Killington Collegiate Ski Fest Jan 12-17 condo, hottubs, skiing, and more. Also spring break, Cancun, Jamaica and more. Call John & John 549-8101

TYPING

PAPERS TYPED: $1.50/typed page Quick, Accurate Service. Call Brian 546-3563

WORD PROCESSING, laser printing, papers, resumes, theses. Rosemary 259-1786

WANTED

To recycle: Prescription medication bottles/ containers (Nonrenewable RX only) Please call 585-8709

WANTED TO RENT

We need to take over your house for next semester! If interested please call Marc 549-7547

Sports

Men's soccer hosts top-ranked Rutgers

Collegian file photo

Darren Stone and the men's soccer team host Rutgers, the No. 1 team in the nation, at noon on Sunday at the Lower Boyden fields. A Minuteman win would clinch them a spot in the A-10 Tournament.

Editor's note: This is the first of a four-part series depicting the University of Massachusetts men's soccer team.

By BRETT MORRIS
Collegian Staff

It is ironic that the members of the University of Massachusetts' Athletic Administration have their respective offices on the west side of Boyden Gymnasium.

As they consider what to do about the future of the men's soccer team, they can look out the windows, to the Lower Boyden fields, and see the team they excluded from this year's budget practicing for the opportunity to play in the Atlantic 10 Tournament.

The Minutemen, 7-3-4 overall and No. 8 in New England, raised enough money to play this year, designated their "terminal season" by the administration.

And now, with a 3-2-1 conference record, they can clinch a spot in the post-season tournament if they beat Rutgers at noon on Sunday at the Lower Boyden fields.

"Right now, this team feels great about themselves and the team they're on," said first-year coach Sam Koch. "They're proud to be the University of Massachusetts soccer team."

All this from a team that had only three wins overall and only one in the conference all of last season.

"It has been one big team effort," leading scorer Todd Kylish said. "We're really a close-knit group and I think that's why we're where we are."

The Minutemen have been battling back from adversity since they were cut from the athletic budget in the Spring, but once the season started, they didn't think about their misfortune.

"After we won the first few games, we realized we were for real," said goalkeeper Jonathan Gruber. "Since then, it has been really fun."

The Minutemen won their first game of the season against A-10 rival St. Bonaventure and didn't lose until the fourth game of the season against Hartford, the No. 4 team in New England.

"Once you win a couple, it gives you great confidence of who you are and what you do," Koch said.

The Minutemen are coming off a game in which they tied the University of Connecticut, No. 3 in New England and a team that has been receiving votes in the national Top 20, on a last second goal.

"[The UConn game] got us back on track," said Koch after the team had lost two of its last three games before the tie. "The guys really played well and that means a lot."

However, the Minutemen now have the task of facing the No. 1 team in the nation, Rutgers. The Scarlet Knights have won 13 straight and haven't lost since the second contest of the season against No. 2 Virginia.

"We can't let that intimidate us," Gruber said. "Anything can happen on any given day. If everyone comes to play, I know we can beat them.

"There's no doubt we're underdogs," Koch said. "It's going to take a special effort for us to win, but I think the special effort will be there."

The Minutemen are behind Rutgers and Rhode Island in the A-10, respectively, and their 10 conference points put them one point ahead of fourth-place George Washington and four points ahead of West Virginia.

The top four teams advance to the tournament.

A loss to Rutgers wouldn't necessarily mean UMass is out of a playoff spot, but it is their last conference game and it would greatly reduce their chances as George Washington has two conference meetings remaining and West Virginia has three. Each victory is worth three points.

"Our goal at the beginning of the season was to go to the A-10s, and we just might make it," Kylish said.

Women's XC the favorites

By CHRIS CUDDY
Collegian Staff

Playing the favorite is never easy.

Just ask coach Julie LaFreniere, as she prepares to take her University of Massachusetts women's cross country team to Van Cortland Park, N.Y. tomorrow for the Atlantic 10 Championships.

The Minutewomen, favored since preseason to take home the A-10 crown, ran through their dual meet season with a 4-3 record, and will be looking for their first A-10 championship in school history.

"I think it's going to be a real good meet," LaFreniere said, "I really think we have a legitimate chance to win, even though we're not as strong as we'd like to be."

Challenging UMass for the top spot will be Rhode Island, Rutgers, St. Joseph's, and West Virginia. Other teams vying for the crown include Duquesne, George Washington and St. Bonaventure, although none of the three pose a serious threat to crack the top five.

As for the Minutewomen, the two-week layoff between meets has been spent healing their wounds and preparing for their championship season.

Michelle St. Laurent is all but recovered from last meet's illness, and should help to close the gap between Minutewomen runners.

"I think if we can run in as tight a pack as we did last time, except with Michelle healthy, we'll be okay," LaFreniere said. "Getting all runners within 15 seconds of each other would really give us a good shot."

The team will be looking for strong performances from Becky Johnson and Kelly Liljeblad, and expect Kim Liljeblad and Tricia Mathiesen to bolster the Minutewomen's quest for the championship.

"Becky really hasn't been running all that great lately, but I think she's been really impressive in workouts, and I think she'll run her best race yet," LaFreniere said.

"I was concerned last meet with how tired the team looked, but I think the layoff really helped," LaFreniere said. "The girls know they want it, but they have to believe they can have it. I think if we go down there and run the way we're capable of, we can come away with it."

Women face weekend tests

By DAN WETZEL
Collegian Staff

This weekend is a big one for the University of Massachusetts women's soccer team. The 10th-ranked Minutewomen travel to Hamilton, N.Y. tomorrow to face Colgate (6-6-2) and then return to Amherst for a top 20 match with No. 16 Cornell (9-1-1).

In order to assure themselves of an NCAA Tournament bid, Jim Rudy's team needs to win both games.

The Big Red pose the greatest threat. Cornell's only loss this season is Stanford, No. 6 in the nation, and they are currently ranked fourth in the North, one behind UMass.

Cornell is led by their defense, specifically goalkeeper Sue Delong. Delong has played all but 11 minutes in net this season allowing only four goals on the season, while compiling a goals against average of 0.36. She has six shutouts this year.

This type of goaltending can be worrisome for an offense like UMass' that hasn't had a lot of success finishing the play lately. Although they scored three goals against Rhode Island they failed on a dozen other opportunities.

On the offensive end of the field the Big Red look to senior forward Cindy Spear. Spear leads the team in scoring with seven goals and she also has one assist for a total of 15 points. Midfielder Amy Snow has five goals, six assists for 16 points, Dina Grossman (4-3-11) rounds out the scoring attack.

The teams will square off on Lower Boyden Field at 2:15 p.m. on Sunday.

The Minutewomen will be trying not to stumble against an underdog Colgate squad. The Red Raiders are in the midst of a three-game losing streak, with losses against Holy Cross, Army and Vermont.

Leading scorers for Colgate are Carrie Webster (7-1-15), Christy Ficker (3-5-11 and Leigh Schaffler (5-0-10). The Colgate goalkeeper, Caroline Chambers, has allowed 17 goals for a GAA of 1.12, with four shutouts.

Collegian file photo

Dawn Trumbauer has been a starter on the UMass field hockey team for four years and is hoping her final season will end with a National Championship.

Trumbauer leads field hockey

By MICHAEL MORRISSEY
Collegian Staff

When the University of Massachusetts field hockey team hosts its next-to-last regular season game against the University of Connecticut at 1 p.m. Saturday, senior Dawn Trumbauer will take the field at the forward position like she has for the past four years.

Trumbauer has been a consistent, reliable performer ever since she came to UMass from Quakertown High School in Pennsylvania. She was a three-sport athlete at Quakertown, and she was a high school All-American in field hockey her senior year.

But that's not enough. Trumbauer was also a Junior Olympian, and she was selected to try out for the 1988 United States Junior National team. But the Minutewomen almost lost her to their arch rival: Old Dominion.

"I think what it came down to was the academics. [Old Dominion] didn't really compare academically in the field that I was looking for, which is accounting," Trumbauer said.

When Trumbauer joined the UMass team, she made a splash immediately. She started every single game her freshman year.

"When she came in she was a top recruit, there's no doubt about it," assistant coach Kathy DeAngelis said.

Trumbauer has worked on her weaknesses throughout her career, and it has paid off, as she is one of the team's top scorers.

"I think my strengths out of high school were that I was quick and I had good ball control," she said. "I think my biggest weakness was in the area of team play, because in high school you aren't oriented to pass the ball as much."

Judging by her four-assists-sophomore year and six last year, Trumbauer has picked up on how to play a more team-oriented style of field hockey.

In her past two seasons, she has tallied 14 goals and her 1991 totals read like this: eight points on six goals and two assists.

But Trumbauer has made more of an impact in her four years than just statistics. She has assumed an important role on the team: that of leader.

"She definitely has a role in leadership, and that's shown on and off the field," DeAngelis said.

Trumbauer has her goals set on keeping the team together, like a close-knit family, as the Minutewomen surge towards the playoffs.

"The main goal is to keep the team working together, and maintaining the same composure on the field as well, besides just having fun," Trumbauer said.

In Trumbauer's career, UMass hasn't won a national championship, and this will be her last shot as a player. The Minutewomen are certainly in the upper echelon of field hockey teams, but winning it all means going through undefeated Old Dominion.

"To win [a National Championship] would mean a tremendous amount. It's something you look forward to. I've been on three teams in my past three years that have had the opportunity to get that far and we just haven't been there. I want it to happen."

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THE LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND

VOLUME CI ISSUE 39 MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 29, 1991

Contract details revealed

By DAVID MASSEY
Collegian Staff

The hazy fog enveloping the Graduate Employee Organization and University of Massachusetts administration 10-month contract settlement dispute has lifted, at least for the moment.

The formerly tight-lipped administration went public on Thursday with details concerning the usually private but complicated matters of the contract conflict. Consequently, the graduate organization held a brief press conference the next day to explain recent developments in negotiations.

At Friday's press conference in the Campus Center, co-speaker of the GEO Emily Isaacs said the organization has agreed to compromise on some issues even though the administration appears unwilling at this point to accept three of the four major GEO demands.

"It is our position that we have compromised," Isaacs said.

The administration has offered to GEO an increase in graduate employees annual minimum stipend – from $4,400 to $6,000, said Susan Pearson, chief negotiator for the administration. TAs on average earn $7,000 a year, she said.

Pearson said the administration has filed a $1.2 million budget request for next year to raise all graduate employee salaries by $1,000 and $1 million to hire an additional 150 TAs.

The GEO, which represents all graduate employees who are research and teaching assistants, fellows and interns, authorized a strike vote last week if the organization continues to fail in finalizing their first union contract.

According to GEO estimates, out of approximately 6,000 graduate students, about 2,200 graduate employees are represented by the organization.

A major rallying cry for GEO members is the health fee which members have previously labeled as "unacceptable." Initially, GEO wanted their contract to include a health fee waiver — meaning graduate employees would not have to pay for health coverage. At Friday's meeting, GEO offered a compromise.

Isaacs said members are willing to pay 10 percent of the health coverage. An individual graduate employee pays $870 for a year of University health benefits.

Pearson said such a concession would cost the University $1.8 million per year, money she said the University does not apparently have.

"I see that as an unreasonable demand given the budget problem," Pearson said.

The GEO also compromised on the subject of agency fees, which are "standard" service fees for non-members to help pay for services provided by the union, benefits which the five other unions on campus enjoy, Isaacs said.

The organization said they want all graduate students, although they may not be a dues-paying member of GEO, to still pay a fee. However, the option of diverting the money to a "family-care fund" would be offered, Isaacs said.

"Dues should be voluntary," Pearson said.

Pearson said the administration has consulted attorneys who have decided such an agency fee would be "illegal" since GEO is not officially recognized as a union by both the administration and the Massachusetts Labor Relations Commission.

CONTINUED ON PAGE 2

Collegian photo by Jeff Egan

WINDOW PAINTER — Arron Poritz, 7, of Amherst pauses in the midst of creating a storefront Holloween masterpiece.

Students: Beware of trucks on sidewalks

Collegian photo by Josh Reynolds

A view from the inside of a Physical Plant truck.

Professor Dario Politella, Director of Internships in the journalism department, had never given much thought to trucks before. A Physical Plant pick-up truck changed that the other day. Recently, Politella was walking from Herter Hall to the bus stop on North Pleasant Street near the Fine Arts Center. Wearing a visor and walking with his head down, he looked up just in time to dodge a Physical Plant pick-up truck carrying a number of men in its bed.

Looking back at the incident he chuckled and said, "I thought first it was a disgruntled student."

Arthur Hilson, Director of Public Safety, says that there has never been an incident of injury on campus involving a UMass vehicle. However, he is very concerned with the potential threat they pose to pedestrians. He says that most of the vehicle traffic on the UMass campus is caused by vendors, repair personel and Physical Plant trucks which pick up and drop off workers.

Hilson says that his ideal is to have "no vehicles, short of emergency, on campus." He mentioned that a possible solution to the situation is to have "set hours" for vehicles to use the intercampus roadways.

Politella is not the only person who has noticed trucks driving on the sidewalks of the mostly pedestrian UMass campus. Second year math graduate student Shannon Gibbons notices the trucks when she is in her computer class on the third floor of the Lederle Graduate Research Center. She says the trucks are very loud and distracting.

Jennifer Berneche, a senior education major, adds not only do the trucks bother her, but also the other vehicles that drive on campus such as cars.

Philip Garrow, currently concentrating in mechanical engineering, considers vehicles on sidewalks to be hazardous to pedestrians and bicyclists. He points out that most accidents involving vehicles and pedestrians occur in parking lots where there are no designated lanes for drivers to adhere to.

Garrow considers the UMass campus to be almost like a "perpetual parking lot." He suggests that areas with high pedestrian traffic should be identified as such and vehicles should have designated access routes on which to travel.

Reffe Nicolas, a foreign student doing research at UMass, is not bothered by the trucks. He considers the drivers careful.

A Physical Plant driver who chose to remain anonymous called driving vehicles on the sidewalks a "necessary evil." Most of the vehicles driving on campus sidewalks are Physical Plant trucks and vendors transporting building materials and supplies to loading areas.

O'Brien makes pledge to talk to students

Hiring of Asian faculty at issue

By AMY PRENDERGAST
Collegian Staff

Chancellor Richard O'Brien agreed to discuss recruitment of Asian faculty with a group of Asian students who claim to have shut down the United Asia Cultural Center, due to a set of demands they presented to him last Monday.

O'Brien steered them in the direction of the Faculty Senate and Vice Chancellor Jo-Anne T. Vanin to discuss their curriculum and funding concerns.

The group of Asian students presented O'Brien with a list of demands last Monday, and claimed they had shut down the center as a message to the administration they will no longer tolerate what they term "racist behavior toward minorities."

The list of the students' demands included: the transfer of funds from the United Asia Cultural Center to the Learning Resource Center, an introduction of an Asian and Asian American Studies program to the curriculum, and the aggressive recruitment of Asian faculty, administrators and students.

O'Brien said he was "dismayed that the students would state 'demands' and attempt to impose deadlines on him," according to the letter.

He recommended the students "seek the involvement of concerned Asian faculty to put your concerns to the Academic Matters Council of the Faculty Senate, the one group that is empowered to review such curriculum matters."

The students also demanded the radical restructuring of the curriculum to emphasize multicultural concerns, and the re-evaluation of existing "cultural diversity" programs, according to group organizer Alexander Nguyen.

The letter urged the group of Asian students to meet with Vice Chancellor of Student Affairs, Jo-Anne T. Vanin, to discuss their concerns with the funding of the Cultural Center.

The group hopes to transfer the Cultural Center's budget of around $11,000 into the Learning Resource Center.

Nguyen called the Cultural Center a product of "token funding" and said it was being used as a "multicultural advertisement.

Quynh Dang, another group organizer, said because of insufficient funding, the Learning Resource Center cannot adequately serve Asian students in need of academic support.

"I remind you that the Student Affairs Vice Chancellorate, in common with the whole campus, has suffered huge budget cuts over three years and consequently has not been able to achieve many of the objectives which it had set for itself," the letter from O'Brien said.

O'Brien said he "would be happy to meet with the students on the subject of Asian faculty recruitment," but added, "We have recruited no new faculty in the last one and a half years, because of the huge budget cuts.

O'Brien ended saying, "Let us see, together, whether the campus has neglected Asian concerns during these troublesome years."

Inside:

Page 3:
Parents invade UMass 3,000 strong, sit in classes, listen to Chancellor O'Brien.
Page 7:
A restaurant review of the China Garden in Amherst, where the atmosphere - and the food - is nothing like the D. C.'s
Page 12:
Women's soccer takes giant strides toward the NCAA tournament by defeating Cornell, Colgate in New York.
Weather:
Fall returns with cooler temps. Sunny, highs 50-55 degrees. Did you turn your clock back?

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THE LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY IN NEW ENGLAND

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is a Registered Student Organization of the University of Massachusetts, published each weekday during the calendar semester with a circulation of 19,000.

113 CAMPUS CENTER AMHERST, MA 01003
Phone (413) 545-3500 FAX (413) 545-1592

STAFF

Editor in Chief ..... Gayle Long
Managing Editor ..... Marc Elliott
Editorial Editor ..... Greg Sukiennik
News Editor ..... Preston P. Forman
Sports Editor ..... Tamir Lipton
Arts Editor ..... Paul DeGeorges
Photography Editor (intrim) ..... Josh Reynolds
Black Affairs Editor ..... Sondra Sutton
Women's Issues Editor ..... Jessame Hannus
Jewish Affairs Editor ..... Felice Cohen, Debra Kriegsman
Multicultural Affairs Editor .....
Third World Affairs Editor ..... Madanmohan Rao
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Issues Editor ..... Trystan Skeigh
Business Manager ..... Randee Pastel
Advertising Manager ..... Dena Haselkorn
Finance Manager ..... Jeff Weiner
Circulation Manager ..... Jim Winterbottom
Subscriptions Manager ..... Stacy Rogers
Promotions Manager ..... Scott Macey
Production Manager ..... Terry Starmer
Day Graphics Manager ..... Jenny Burns

PROFESSIONAL STAFF

Business ..... Brian Harrington, Lori Black, Maureen Majerowski
Graphics ..... Blake Phillips

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements that run on a space-available basis on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday for campus and local non-profit organizations. Because of space constraints, the Collegian cannot print all FYIs submitted and no announcements can be repeated.

To submit an FYI, please send a TYPED press release with all pertinent information to the Collegian office in 113 Campus Center c/o News Editor. FYIs cannot be taken over the phone.

Monday, October 28

Open Meeting — The Provost Search Committe will be holding a series of open meeting to meet the candidates for Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs and Provost. The candidates will hold brief presentations followed by a question and answer session. The schedule of presentations will be as follows: Glen Gordon, 2 p.m., Norman Aitken, 3 p.m., and Stephen Gehlbach, 4 p.m. The presentations will be held in Campus Center room 904-08.

Folk Dancing — For beginners, intermediate, and advanced folk Dancers at 7:30 p.m. in the Hillel House. This event is sponsored by UMass Hillel.

Meeting — The Jewish Alliance for a Democratic Land, a group organizing against Israeli occupation, will be holding its first general meeting at 8 p.m. in Campus Center room 903.

Tuesday, October 29

Musical — "Working" sponsored by the UMTG will be held at 8 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom. Admission is $3.00 for students, children, and senior citizens and $5.00 for the general public.

Lecture — Jeanne Butterfield, the national director of the Palestine Solidarity Committee will speak at 7 p.m. in New Africa House room 311. A reception will follow.

Wednesday, October 30

Blood Drive — A blood drive will be held in Campus Center Room 101 from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Meeting — The Study in Israel at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem information meeting will be held at 6:30 p.m. in the Hillel House Lounge. All are welcome.

Meeting — The Five College European Club will be meeting at 7:30 p.m. in Campus Center room 168C.

Movie — "Boyz 'N' the Hood" will be shown at 5, 7, 9, and 11 p.m. in the Campus Center Auditorium. Admission is $2 at 5 p.m. and $3 at all others.

Meeting — A Senate meeting will be held at 7 p.m. in Campus Center Room 163C.

■ geo

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1

In 1979, the state commission, which certifies all unions throughout the state, decided that graduate students at the University couldn't form a union "because of the potential conflict in academic freedom."

The graduate organization also has demanded job security, which Isaacs said means "parity" in terms of laying off teaching assistants. Isaacs wants the layoffs to be "linked on this campus financially with undergraduate enrollment.

"The administration is still trying to maintain control on how those cuts are implemented," Isaacs said.

She said the TAs have recently absorbed a 14.5 percent cut while there has only been a 3 percent drop in undergraduate enrollment.

Pearson said this demand has "poor timing" since GEO is aiming to finalize negotiations by May 1 even though the University budget for fiscal year 1992 has not been calculated. The fiscal year '92 starts July 1, 1992.

Isaacs did say both sides tentatively agreed to a conditional accord which would give GEO binding arbitration, meaning an unbiased mediator to solve future disputes, if the organization agrees not to strike.

Both sides will meet again at the negotiating table on Wednesday. GEO officials have called recent meetings "frustrating."

Correction

Due to an error, the wrong photograph appeared next to Friday's third part of the series on the 1986 Southwest riot. A photograph of the Southwest Residence Area was planned.

Due to a reporting error, the speakers planned for the Oct. 30 Brown Bag lunch sponsored by the Women's Studies Department were incorrect. Gretchen Krull and Deb Edelman of the University Health Services Health Education are the scheduled speakers.

The Collegian regrets the errors.

Winter Session 1992 Catalog Is Here!

So, what exactly is Winter Session?
- a unique "mini-semester," just three weeks long

Well, what's so unique about it?
- you can earn 3 academic credits in only 3 weeks
- over 100 credit courses, including gen. ed. designated classes

How can Winter Session help me?
You can:
- take a class you couldn't get before
- make up credits
- meet graduation requirements
- lighten your spring course load

Winter Session 1992 — January 2-23
Registration by mail only begins November 9.
(Registrations must be postmarked no earlier than November 9.)
Catalogs available on campus or at the Division of Continuing Education 6th floor Goodell

COMEDY NIGHT
featuring ...
JACKIE FLYNN
and
TOM CLARK
Tuesday
Oct. 29th
9:00 p.m.

JAZZ WITH
Jazz Society
October 30th
Wednesday Afternoon
1:00-4:00 pm

The Diversions
ROCK & ROLL
Friday, Nov. 1st, 9 pm

JAZZ
OCT. 28
MONDAY
Jeff Holmes
Jazz on a Monday Evening

Rippopotamus
ROCK & ROLL
Thursday, Oct. 31st • 9:00 pm

the hatch
GROUND FLOOR/STUDENT UNION

Local

UMass undergrad enters House race

By JASON GEORGE
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts student Paul McGonnigal says the current Massachusetts fiscal crisis needs to be addressed by "an individual who owes nothing to anyone."

That's why McGonnigal, 26, announced last week that he's throwing his hat into the ring in the race for the Third Hampshire District state representative seat vacated by Stanley Rosenberg of Amherst.

The seat became open when Rosenberg was elected to the state Senate on September 23.

McGonnigal, a moderate to liberal Republican, said change won't necessarily come from a Democrat or a Republican, but from "someone who knows the issues."

"Fiscally, it's clear we're in a crisis," McGonnigal said. "The same-old, same-old isn't going to do it anymore."

Some of the issues McGonnigal said he hopes to focus on include reestablishing the role of UMass-Amherst as the flagship school in the University of Massachusetts system, revamping the Commonwealth's allocation of local aid and reforming auto insurance.

McGonnigal noted that 13 top administrators at the University draw salaries of between $90,000 and $140,000 a year while the students are forced to pay increasing tuition and fees.

"[UMass-Amherst] is the state's flagship university, yet we're just bleeding it dry," McGonnigal said. "Are we educating people or are we providing executives with a place to go?"

Collegian photo by Matt Kahn

Paul McGonnigal

McGonnigal said he believes this summer's reorganization of the Massachusetts higher education system, which incorporated the former University of Lowell and Southern Massachusetts University into the UMass system, needs to be reexamined.

"[Reorganization] is a shoddy attempt at making resources more equitable," McGonnigal said. "Just because you change the name of one organization doesn't make it a top-notch organization."

McGonnigal said the Commonwealth's system of distributing local aid is "amusing." The state will tend to issue mandates and then force towns to depend on property taxes to gain the money to carry them out, according to McGonnigal.

"When the state issues mandates, it should provide the money, rather than strapping homeowners," McGonnigal said.

McGonnigal added that high property taxes in the Amherst area have fallen heavily on the elderly, causing them to relocate.

"Just because someone owns a house doesn't mean they are able to pay property taxes," McGonnigal said. "These people have provided us with the resources we have now, and now we're kicking the elderly out of Amherst."

McGonnigal is currently a member of the University's Board of Governors, which oversees the allocation of space in the Campus Center and Student Union. He has served as the co-chairperson of the Massachusetts Federation of College Republicans.

McGonnigal has worked as a consultant with American Comnet in Washington, D.C. McGonnigal said his work at American Comnet involved marketing for political books and directing opinion surveys on college campuses across the country.

He is the second Republican candidate to declare his candidacy for the seat. Georgia Parks of Amherst announced her candidacy late last month.

Parents flock to weekend activities

O'Brien's speach addresses UMass' financial concerns

By JASON GEORGE
Collegian Staff

Approximately 3,000 parents and students took advantage of the Indian Summer-like weather and gathered Saturday at the University for Parent's Day, an event filled with workshops, tours and other activities.

Vice Chancellor for University Relations and Development Daniel Melley noted that the day was an important opportunity for parents to become involved in their children's experiences at the University.

"Parents who come and participate in the lives of their children are the ones who will have successful sons and daughters," Melley said. "Just to see the growth these students attain is tremendous."

Chancellor Richard O'Brien addressed parents and students during the welcoming ceremony in the Fine Arts Center and attempted to answer the concerns about the University stemming from three years of budget cuts.

O'Brien said the two most important messages he had for parents were that "the [University] will continue to provide an outstanding undergraduate education" and that UMass is a "multicultural university."

"We've had terrible times," O'Brien said. "But we've tried to cut costs everywhere except in the classroom . . . we've been able to continue to provide an education that has been paramount to your standards."

O'Brien said while the University has lost one-third of its state funding in the past three years, one-half of the losses have been made up for by increased tuition and fees.

O'Brien added that 70 percent of the classes at the University are smaller than they were three years ago, due to improved faculty-student ratios.

"[Tuition and fees] have increased by two and one-half times over the last three years, but that is very like what is going on in the rest of the country," O'Brien said.

O'Brien pointed to the recent construction of a new equestrian center, the Polymer Science Research Center and the Mullins Aren as examples that UMass is not a "place in decline, but a place that will get better."

After the welcoming, parents were able to attend any one of five classes taught by University faculty. English professor Arthur Kinney, who gave a lecture on Hamlet and one on The Merchant of Venice, called the lectures an opportunity for parents to sample "a typical undergraduate experience for a period."

The rest of the day was filled with workshops on such topics as "Surviving the First Year," "Choosing a Major" and interships and Co-ops, as well as campus tours.

Michelle O'Neill, an assistant to Parent's Day coordinator Virginia Rees, called the turnout for the day "phenomenal.

"Parents are interested in what their students are doing," Rees said. "It's an opportunity to see what's going on on campus."

Collegian photo by Jeff Egan

Steven Radzik, senior lesiure studies resources major, feeds the ducks while family members look on.

Wheeler mail room is one big mess

By JOSH REYNOLDS
Collegian Staff

Phil Bordeaux has been a University employee for 20 years. He has spent the past 13 working for the University's central mail office, responsible for the entire campus.

Bordeaux goes to work at 6 a.m., and while he is allowed to leave at 2 p.m., he rarely does.

As mail clerk, Bordeaux sorts incoming and out going mail and handles UPS as well as distributing the mail to each of the residence halls.

"We work for the post office, but those guys are "just specialist," he said jokingly. They only perform one job, while University mail clerks do them all, "and those guys get paid more."

Collegian photo by Josh Reynolds

Phil Bordeaux

